4586. When is the account which is made up to the 31st of March, transmitted to the home authorities?—According to the station we receive those accounts sooner or later. But perhaps I may say, that the last account received will generally be late in the autumn, say in October. Of course circumstances may occur which lead to the accounts being received later; but as a general rule, I should say that we have pretty nearly all our accounts in from the stations abroad in or about October.

4587. Is that in pursuance of custom or in pursuance of any general order, or regulation of your office?—The regulations very strictly require that the accounts should be promptly made up and rendered, and the paymaster being allowed the specific period of a month for that purpose, is supposed to forward his account as soon after the termination of that period as he may have an opportunity of doing so; for the rest, the distance from home in connexion with the facility or otherwise of communication, must be taken into account.

4588. In practice, the result is that the accounts from the several out-stations are returned to the War-office within the month of October following the 31st of March?—As a rule, I should say so; seldom later.

4589. That being the rule, what is the latest period at which they generally come in; take the last two or three years that any account has come in?—The period of the war, I may say, has been rather an exceptional period. Some accounts have been much later during the period of the war, even from the home stations, so much so, that some of our heavy accounts have not been received until a very much later period than from the stations abroad. I rather refer to our district recruiting stations and the invalid establishment at Chatham, where the work has been exceedingly heavy, consequent upon the war.

J. Hollings, Esq.

17 July 1856.

4590. Taking the period before the war, the war, according to you, having created an exceptional state of things, what may have been the latest period, for the two or three years preceding, at which any account has come in from distant or other stations?—I should say that the latest period would be about the time I have mentioned. There might be a very limited number of accounts that came in after, but I think I am right in saying that they will all have come in about the month of October.

4591. The accounts being all in at a time of peace within the month of October, what is the time at which you transmit them to the Audit-office?—The time at which we have transmitted the account of receipt and expenditure for army and militia services to the Audit-office, as required by the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, is the 30th of April, being 13 months after date. Twelve months are allowed for receiving all the accounts, examining, and finally auditing them, and completing the record in the books, and an additional month for making up the trial balance, and the annual account for Parliament; so that the account is to be delivered in at the Audit-office on or before the 30th of April.

4592. Then the case stands thus: that the accounts from the various stations of the army are received at the War-office within seven months from the 31st of March?—Generally, they are.

4593. And the remaining six months, within which the law requires the account to be transmitted to the Audit-office, are occupied at the War-office in the examination of the accounts?—Yes.

4594. In your judgment would it be attended with any great difficulty if those accounts were transmitted to the Audit-office in less than six months after they are received from the various stations?—The experience of many years, during which period the authorities of the War-office have, I know, been anxious, and have done all in their power to secure the examination of the accounts at the earliest period, does not justify me in expressing the opinion that the work could be done within an earlier date; the account could not, I think, be delivered in at an earlier date.

4595. What is there in the nature of the accounts to prevent their being examined in a less period than six months?—May I be permitted to read a few lines from a statement made by Mr. Anderson on that subject, in 1841, when he had under consideration the question of an improvement in the mode of keeping the accounts of the War-office. Mr. Anderson says*, "The only point remaining to be noticed is the period which shall be allowed after the close of the year for bringing in all arrears belonging to the year, so as to establish a fixed date for closing every year's account. The last account of the army votes in the Paymaster-general's books which can be considered as finally closed is that for the year 1829, there being still on the books a balance retained for the year 1830. Sums upon account have been given up for subsequent years as saving on the grants, but a balance has been in each case retained to defray arrears. The time fixed for closing the Navy accounts, by the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, is eight months after the close of the year; and making due allowance for the greater details of the imprest accounts of the Army, which require more time for their examination, it does not appear necessary to allow more than twelve months for the final winding up of the preceding year's account; so that there will never be more than two years' accounts open at the same time. This arrangement will very much simplify both the accounts of the War-office and those of the Paymaster-general's Office." I may add, that Mr. Anderson was writing in a time of profound peace and quiet, and he formed his opinion with reference to the then existing state of things, which I need scarcely say was not so onerous as the present. Apart from the question of peace or war, our accounts are heavier and more numerous, and our accountants are greater in number; so that, if, in 1841, that judgment was formed by Mr. Anderson, who was very anxious to fix a minimum period, I leave it to the judgment of the Committee whether a different opinion could be formed now.

* See page 33 of Parl. Paper, No. 160, present Session.

4596. Will you confine your attention to a time of peace, and not to an exceptional state of things in war; I ask you for your opinion as to what is the reason that that accounts received from the various stations at the end of seven months are not capable of being audited in the War-office, and transmitted to the auditors, in less than six months from the time that they are received?—The reason is that, taking the whole of the accounts received in the department, not alone those from foreign stations, but all our accounts in the aggregate, the time does not admit (it has not hitherto admitted) of an earlier examination and completion of the accounts of the preceding year.

4597. Is it the fact that there are not hands enough, or that the hands that you have to perform this branch of the work cannot get through the work that they have to do in the time, on account of the amount of the work?—The department has in all my experience been kept at the minimum strength, and doubtless it has always had difficulty enough in carrying on the business; at the same time it has probably not been the wish of the authorities of the War-office that there should be any more clerks appointed than would be just sufficient to carry on the public business. It has never, I believe, been found, although much effort has been made and pressure directed towards that object, that the completion of the examination could be effected at an earlier period.

4598. Is there anything in the nature of the accounts themselves to make that length of time necessary, or is it solely on account of the number of the accounts with reference to the parties who have to examine them?—Something must be referred to the nature of some of the accounts themselves, which are exceedingly heavy.

4599. We want to know what it is in the nature of the accounts themselves that requires that length of time for examination?—Some of the accounts are very bulky and voluminous, with masses of vouchers, which occupy a very long time in their examination. I can show the Committee one or two accounts if the Committee wish it; I have one account here of the London recruiting district, which was accompanied by about 6,000 vouchers; it is an account that would perhaps take about two months to examine; more than 500 pages of figures and statement are contained in it, and it is only reckoned as one account.

4600. That merely refers to the extent of the account; is there anything special in the nature of those accounts, or any reference back to the parties?—No, not anything special in the nature of the account; it is a question of quantity and bulk. There is nothing so peculiar in the nature of these accounts as to be in itself the cause of delay.

4601. Do those accounts, with the vouchers, go to the Audit-office, or are they submitted to the auditors at all?—They do not go to the Audit-office, but the audit of the account takes place, nevertheless, by an independent officer belonging to the Audit-office; he is under the direction of the Commissioners of Audit, and it is his duty carefully to inspect every account which is entered into the books. Though he himself does not attend to the detailed examination, he does see that there is full evidence of a complete examination by the officers of the department. The Act of Parliament requires that he should have access to all the accounts and vouchers of every description. He can, if he please, call for vouchers, and inspect as many or as few as he may choose, and having given his attention to the account to satisfy himself that it has been examined, and bears all the evidence of examination in the usual form of official checks, and having seen also that it has been duly submitted to the proper authorities for approval, before being sent to the book-keeping branch for record, he then is called upon in the discharge of his duty to see that every sum is carried to its proper account and head of service, with reference not only to the terms of the Appropriation Act, he is further required to trace every receipt and every payment, whether applicable to the personal account, as distinguished from the vote account, or not, so that he takes in, as Mr. Anderson stated in his evidence, the whole range of receipts and payments in all the accounts.

4602. Does the independent officer of the Audit Board of whom you have spoken as examining those accounts, examine the vouchers or not?—He does not as a rule examine the vouchers; he could not.

4603. Those accounts are transmitted, as you have stated, from quarter to quarter?—Yes.

4604. So that, in point of fact, the last quarter is what remains to be examined at the end of six months entirely; others may have been in process of examination, I suppose, during the preceding quarters?—It would be so very often; but I could

J. Hollings, Esq.

17 July 1856.

I could not say that it would always be so; it would depend upon the state of the department and the amount of the work.

4605. Is it not the case, that as those accounts are transmitted at the end of the quarter, the examination commences and goes on, in some degree getting rid of the work as it comes in?—That is the point aimed at continually; but circumstances will not always allow of that point being reached.

4606. Is there any reason why, if the staff was sufficient, the accounts could not be audited after three months, so as to make matters clear as you go on?—In order to attain that object, it would be necessary that the staff should be very ample, and it does not altogether depend upon the number. At this time we are at some disadvantage in regard to the examination of our accounts, inasmuch as we have not the same number of experienced examiners as we had a few years ago. The changes which have taken place, the great expansion of the department consequent upon the war, and the necessity of increasing the number of our branches, also the retirements which have necessarily taken place, all these circumstances have combined to reduce the number of our experienced examiners; and although we have had a body of gentlemen employed as quarterly clerks, some of them on the examination, who have acquitted themselves exceedingly well, and, I think I may venture to add, have done their duty to the satisfaction of the authorities; allowance must be made, without disparagement to them, for their comparative inexperience.

4607. All that has reference to any arrears that may now exist in consequence of the exceptional state and the change in the office consequent on the war?—Yes.

4608. But, if I understand you rightly, there is no difficulty in those accounts being audited in a shorter time, provided the strength of the examiners is equal to the amount of work to be done?—I should hesitate to give any decided opinion upon that point. I feel it to be so dependent upon circumstances which may not be foreseen; it may this year be war, and next year there may be some other circumstances which may prevent the carrying out of any such intention as that of having the accounts examined at an earlier period. I know for a fact that the heads of our department have constantly directed their attention to that object for many years, and that they have not succeeded, as a general rule, in procuring the examination of the accounts at a much earlier period.

4609. Can you point out any reason, either in the nature of the accounts themselves or otherwise, excepting the want of the proper strength in the department proportionate to the amount of work done, why those accounts should not be audited in less time than they are now, unless some exceptional circumstances, such as a state of war would produce, might interfere?—No doubt, it would be practicable, with a larger number of examiners, to do more work; but whether that number which is required to accomplish a given object in any one year should necessarily be maintained permanently, I can hardly say. It seems to me, that in order to attain the object for one year by placing a larger number of examiners upon the accounts, that object being gained, there might not be employment for them for a continuance.

4610. Are not those accounts pretty much the same from quarter to quarter?—Yes, they are.

4611. If there was a proper number of examiners to clear off each quarter, as the accounts came in, the employment would be equal and regular throughout the year?—It would seem so, certainly.

4612. If it seems so, can you state any reason why it would not be so?—I can only repeat that great efforts have been made to bring it about every year; that such a number of examiners have, I conclude, been appointed from time to time as were thought to be necessary; but the particular object has not been attained.

4613. Then, in point of fact, the Committee are to understand that the business has got six months behind, instead of three months, and that you have never been able to overtake that arrear; and so it always remains six months behind; is that the state of things?—I can hardly say that. We were in a very good state previously to the war. Of course there is a certain arrear of examination at this time, though it is not perhaps very formidable; but, as I said before, our experienced examiners are not numerous.

4614. You

4614. You are referring now to an exceptional state of things during war. This examination refers to a state of things not exceptional. Take the six or seven years before the war; your account was then made up six months after the end of the year?—Yes.*

4615. After the end of the seven months, when you got the accounts home? —Yes.

4616. And that went on from year to year; and the state of things was this, that the account took always six months to make up, beyond the quarter when it was received, instead of three months?—Just so. But I must add, that some of the accounts of the following year would have been examined at the time that the account for the preceding year was sent in to the Audit-office; and many of the accounts, at a certain period of the year, run on together.

4617. How many examiners are there?—In the examiner's branch at the Horse Guards, to which I am attached, about 140 clerks are at present employed in the several account sub-divisions. Some are occupied on the correspondence, and some on the examination; others partly on the one and partly on the other division of the business; but it will be near the mark to say that about half the total number are engaged upon the correspondence, &c., and the other half upon the examination, including the book-keeping. Several other clerks are employed in the branches at Pall Mall on the business of examination.

4618. Chairman.] You have pointed out a large account with regard to the London recruiting district; when does that account come to your office?—This particular account (producing the same) came many months after date.

4619. For what time is that account?—It is for the quarter ended the 31st of December 1854, and it was accompanied by about 6,000 vouchers.

4620. When did that document come to the office?—It came into the office in December 1855, just the beginning of the month, about 11 months after date.

4621. What was the regular time when it ought to have come into the office? —Nominally two months; that is the time allowed for this particular class of accounts.

4622. What occasioned that great delay?—The mass of work in the district owing to the large number of recruits raised, and the great consequent pressure of business; of course they were not able to make up their accounts in the usual period. There are over 500 pages of figures and statement in that account.

4623. Are you an examiner of accounts?—No.

4624. What office do you hold?—I am a clerk of the first class in the department.

4625. You have been an examiner, have you not?—No, I have not.

4626. You can speak as to the practice of examination?—Yes, partially.

4627. Supposing an item comes under the regulation, which regulation is one which has been framed at the War-office, and has been sanctioned by the Treasury, would the examiner examine to see whether the payment was consistent with the regulation?—Decidedly; that is an important part of his duty.

4628. Supposing it appeared to him that a payment was inconsistent with the regulation; if he were to receive an order from the Secretary-at-War to pass it, what would be the result then?—In that case he would act according to the direction received.

4629. Whether the payment was in his opinion consistent with the regulation sanctioned by the Treasury or not?—His duty would have been discharged in calling attention to the discrepancy, and submitting the point for instruction.

4630. To your knowledge, is there any mode by which the Treasury would become acquainted with the circumstance, that in that case the Secretary-at-War had sanctioned payments inconsistent with what upon examination would appear to have been the intention of the regulations sanctioned by the Treasury? —The Royal Warrants which are submitted to the Sovereign having reference to the Army, I believe generally place the interpretation of any point in those regulations which may at any time appear doubtful, in the hands of the Minister for

* The answers of the Witness to the Questions 4614, 4615, and 4616, apply, strictly, to the annual account for the Audit-office which is rendered 13 months after the termination of the year to which it has reference.

J. Hollings, Esq.

17 July 1856.

for War. He therefore, in case of doubt, being referred to, is competent to place his interpretation upon them, and to decide.

4631. And his interpretation is final; it does not in any shape come before the Treasury?—I speak of the resolving of the doubt, rather, of course, than implying any positive departure from the regulation.

4632. Supposing the Secretary-at-War, in a case where there was any doubt, and that was brought before him, as to a payment that was inconsistent with the regulation, were to give directions that that payment should be made; that, as I understand you, the examiner would consider sufficient authority to him to pass that payment?—Certainly.

4633. In what shape would that come before the Treasury, or is there any check upon such a proceeding?—The only check that I can see on such a proceeding is the honour of the Minister, who would not be supposed to desire to break through the regulations.

4634. There is nothing, then, but such a check as may exist in the mind of the Minister himself?—I would add, that it is competent to the auditor to point out to his Board any charge in the books, against the vote, which he conceives to be an improper charge; that is, in my mind, an important check upon any such irregularity as that to which reference has been made.

4635. Does the clerk of the appropriation audit exercise that authority?—Undoubtedly; inasmuch as, being required to see that every charge is properly made against the vote, his duty would not be completed if he allowed that which he felt to be an improper charge against the vote to pass unnoticed.

4636. Do you mean to say that if, under the regulation, the Secretary-at-War were to direct a payment to a particular person, and the audit clerk, in his judgment, thought that was not the right person under the warrant, he would report that to his Board?—I wish not to be misunderstood. The auditor is bound to notice any departure from the terms of the Appropriation Act; but if it be a question of whether more or less is charged to a given vote, or head of service, and whether that charge is correct, he may not be in a position to know that there is an overcharge. I will illustrate what I have said by simply referring to such a case as that of the amount of good-conduct pay. There is an investigation entered into to determine whether a soldier is entitled to a particular rate of good-conduct pay; and the officers of the department make this investigation, which results in a particular rate being assigned to that soldier; it may be said that the only proper charge is what the man is strictly entitled to; but if the department fix upon the rate of 5 d. instead of 4 d., or 3 d. instead of 2 d., it is impossible that the auditor can detect that. It would involve a double examination, an entire second examination, to detect that. He would see that the 4 d. or the 5 d. was charged to the head of good-conduct pay, and then he would have discharged his duty; but he could not undertake to declare that the rate was correct.

4637. Mr. Wilson.] The rule in your department is this, is it not, that you have within the department an officer of the Audit Board whose duty it is to see that every charge that is passed to the account is regular and correct, and if any doubt arises in his mind as to the propriety of any charge that is made, he takes a note of it, and waits until the next visit of the inspector; those cases are then submitted to the inspector, and if the inspector agrees with the officer of the Audit Board that those charges are irregular, it is his duty then to report them to the Audit Board?—My understanding in the early days of the audit (and I believe that has been the understanding up to the present time), with Mr. Hoffay, who was the first auditor appointed, was this, that to save trouble and correspondence it was very desirable to dispose of as many questions within the walls of the building as possible, and it was considered right that in any case in which the auditor did not feel that a particular record was correct, he should call the attention, in the first instance, of the book-keeper to it, and it might be that he would at once see that it was wrong, and it would be set right, and there would be an end of the auditor's duty in that particular case. But if the book-keeper felt that he was not competent to agree with the auditor, he would then submit the question to his superiors; and if the decision were that the entry should be made to correspond with the auditor's conclusion, then again there was an end to the business, and only in those cases in which the department could not agree with the auditor was it supposed that reference would be made to the Commissioners of Audit, inasmuch as there could be no necessity for such reference in the other cases.

to

4368. In every case in which there was a disagreement between the Department and the inspector of the Audit-office, the matter would be reported to the Audit Board, would it not?—Yes; I wish to add that I believe that no two separate departments could have worked more harmoniously together than the War-office and the Audit Board have, and I believe that the cases of difference have been exceedingly rare; indeed, at this moment I cannot call to mind any. I apprehend that there have not been any, but I should not wish to declare that.

4639. Is it not the case that long practice has so well defined what should be done in every case, that there exists very little range or opportunity for difference of opinion?—Very little; indeed, scarcely any. I may say, that the principal of the auditor's queries arise from accidents in the posting by the clerk who may be posting from the accounts into the abstract books, and the auditor, coming across them in his criticism, points them out, and of course they are corrected.

4640. If there were any attempt whatever to misappropriate any payment, the auditor would necessarily discover it?—Yes, I think I may say positively that he would. As an illustration of the course of proceeding in placing sums on record, I would request the attention of the Committee to this little account, a contingent account of Sir Harry Smith's (handing in the same), which, having been examined, is submitted for allowance to the proper authority, as is shown outside the account, and the auditor, after the record, has it in his hands, vouchers and all. In that particular case there are but few; and if he choose to look at every voucher, he is at liberty to do so; he has them before him; and he sees, on inspection of the account, that there is every proper check and evidence of examination, to which I would suggest much importance should be attached, as indicating that the check of the auditor is really valuable; he then sees that it has passed the proper authority; for it is not competent to the book-keeper to place on record any expenditure against the vote that is not authorised to be so placed by one of the constituted authorities of the department, who is allowed by the Minister of War to declare that that expenditure may be charged against the vote.

4641. Has this account reference to the expenditure at the Cape?—No, it has reference to the contingent expenses of Sir Harry Smith as commanding officer in a home district. There are one or two errors in that account; there is a difference in the rate, and a difference in the computation. Now it is not the auditor's duty to discover these errors; if they had not been discovered by the examiner, the auditor would not have discovered them. That is the examiner's duty; and nothing but a second examination could detect such errors as those.

4642. Mr. Wilson.] This account has reference to the examination of the auditor of the department?—Yes.

4643. I see that this account bears very minute evidence of examination, by being ticked off in every respect; first, as to the date; next, as to the year; next, as to each particular name of the officers; next, as to the rate and the small allowances for servants; also as to the computation of those sums in the aggregate; and throughout each item, the date, the name, the rate, and the sum?—Yes.

4644. And the result of that is, that at the close of the account, after all those apparent minute examinations, there are discovered errors, in an account of 379 l. 14 s. 1 d., to the amount of 12 l. 3 s. 6 d. All that, however, has been the work of the officer of the department, the examiner of accounts?—It has.

4645. Is it not the duty of the auditor in the department to see that every account bears upon it evidence of all this minute examination before he adopts it as a document that is allowed to be posted?—It is. Mr. Macaulay correctly stated the duty of the auditor in this respect.

4646. Chairman.] How many audit clerks have you in your office?—One; one assistant to the inspector, who pays an occasional visit.

4647. And the auditor would not accept of any account which did not bear such evidence upon its face?—He would not.

LIST OF APPENDIX.

Appendix, No. 1.

Papers relating to the Exchequer and Pay Office:

First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts (on the Exchequer), dated 8 October 1831 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 455

Copy of Treasury Minute, dated 26th September 1834, for the Regulation of the Office of the Receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer - - - - - - - - - - p. 471

Minute of the Lords of the Treasury, prescribing Regulations and Orders for the Government of the Exchequer in Dublin, issued under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 83.—9 May 1837 - p. 485

Treasury Minute of 19 August 1836, regulating the Office of the Paymaster-General, p. 491

Treasury Minute of 19th November 1836, containing further Regulations for the Government of the Office of His Majesty's Paymaster-General - - - - - - - - p. 499

Treasury Minute, dated 27th March 1838, regulating the Paymaster-General's Drawing Accounts at the Bank; and Sir Henry Parnell's Letter, dated 18th November 1837, on which the Minute was founded - - - - - - - - - - - p. 505

Paper prepared in 1848 for the Select Committee on the Miscellaneous Estimates, on the Office of Paymaster of Civil Services and the Exchequer - - - - - - p. 507

Treasury Minute, dated the 22d December 1848, for the Government of the Office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-General - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 511

Letter from Lord Monteagle to the Lords of the Treasury on the subject of the preceding Minute, 16 January 1849 - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 532

Paper showing the Alterations made in the Treasury Minute, dated 22 December 1848, in consequence of the preceding Letter - - - - - - - - - - - p. 534

Memorandum, by Lord Monteagle, on the Exchequer. 1854 - - - - p. 536

Remarks, by Mr. Anderson, on Lord Monteagle's Memorandum on the Exchequer. 1854, p. 553

Memorandum, by Mr. Edward Romilly, Chairman of the Audit Board. 1850 - - p. 561

Paragraphs proposed to form part of the Pay Office Minute of 22d December 1848, relative to the Appropriation of the Grants for Miscellaneous Services, but not adopted - p. 563

Appendix, No. 2.

Papers relating to the Re-arrangement of the Services Charged on the Gross Revenue, Consolidated Fund, and Annual Votes in Supply:

Memorandum by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, dated 1st February 1853, on the mode of providing for the Expenses of the Collection of the Revenue - - - p. 565

The Bill "to alter the mode of providing for certain Expenses now charged upon certain Branches of the Public and Hereditary Revenues, and upon the Consolidated Fund," with the original Schedules; and the alterations made in the Bill and Schedules previously to the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, which was founded upon it, being passed - - - p. 571

Treasury Minutes, dated 22 Aug. 1854 and 24 Nov. 1854 } for carrying into effect the provisions of the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94 - - } - p. 578 - p. 582

Treasury Minute, dated 2d March 1855, for paying the Revenue to the Exchequer Account daily - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 583

Treasury Minute, dated 25th September 1855, relating to Exchequer Specifications and Acquittances - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 587

Appendix, No. 3.

Commissariat Chest Account:

Memorandum by Mr. Anderson, dated in 1840 - - - - - - - - p. 589

Gross Payments and Receipts of Army Extraordinaries, from 1 April 1833, when the Annual Vote was discontinued, in 1838 - - - - - - - - - - - p. 590

Estimate of the probable state of the Commissariat Chest Account at Home and Abroad, on 31 March 1841 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 591

Appendix, No. 3—continued.

Treasury Minute, dated 3 October 1845, directing the preparation of an Account, showing all the Sums paid into or out of the Commissariat Chest in 1846–7, and of the Assets and Liabilities of the Chest at the close of the year - - - - - - - p. 592

Report from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 15 December 1848, transmitting the Account in question - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 594

Treasury Minute, 29 December 1848, approving of the Account - - - - p. 595

Extract from the Treasury Minute, dated 22 December 1848, for the Government of the Office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general, prescribing an arrangement for the more speedy Repayment of the Advances made out of the Commissariat Chests - - p. 595

An Account showing all the Sums which have been received into the Commissariat Chest, and which have been paid out of the same, between 1 April 1846 and 31 March 1847 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 596

An Account showing the Liabilities and Assets of the Commissariat Chest on 31 March 1847 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 604

Explanatory Statement of the Cash Balance on 31 March 1847 - - - - p. 606

Memorandum on the Commissariat Chest Fund, from Sir C. Trevelyan's Evidence before the Select Committee on Army and Ordnance Expenditure, 1850 - - - - p. 607

Royal Warrant, dated 27 June 1837, to apply Sums applicable to Extraordinary Expenses of the Army, pursuant to Treasury Warrants - - - - - - - - p. 608

Royal Warrant, dated 16 June 1849, for the Regulation of the Commissariat Chest Account - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 609

Memorandum by Sir C. Trevelyan, dated 5 February 1851, with Remarks upon it, dated 14 June 1854 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 609

Note and Memorandum by Mr. Anderson, respecting the Balance of the Commissariat Chest Account - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 612

Draft of Commissariat Chest Fund Bill, 1851 (14 Vict.) - - - - - p. 613

Appendix, No. 4.

Repayment of Loans:

Extract from a Letter from the Commissioners of Audit to the Treasury, 5 May 1848, p. 614

Treasury Minute on the above Letter, 15 May 1848 - - - - - - - p. 614

Extract from Letter of Messrs. Anderson and Kirby, Special Commissioners for the Audit of the Expenditure connected with the Irish Famine, 24 May 1848 - - p. 614

Treasury Minute on the preceding Letter, 26 May 1848 - - - - - p. 615

The Commissioners of Audit to the Treasury, 28 September 1849 - - - - p. 615

With Copy of Minute of the Commissioners of 19 September 1849, referred to in the above Report - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 615

And Form of Statement of Sums due to the Public - - - - - p. 616

Treasury Minute on the preceding Letters and Papers, 13 November 1849 - - p. 617

Treasury Minute - - - ditto - - - 16 October 1849 - - p. 617

Statement of Sums due, paid and outstanding in respect of—

Landed Property Improvement, Ireland - - - - - - - p. 620

Labouchere Drainage - - - - - - - - - - - p. 621

Arterial Drainage - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 622

Appendix, No. 5.

Return showing the Gross Income of the Customs, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sums Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purpose for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum paid into the Exchequer, for the Years 1854–5 and 1855–6 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 623

Return showing the Gross Income of the Excise, Stamps, Land and Assessed Taxes, and Income and Property Tax, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sum Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purpose for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum Paid into the Exchequer, for the Years 1854–5 and 1855–6 - - - p. 624

Return showing the Gross Income of the Post Office, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sums Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purposes for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum Paid into the Exchequer for the Year 1854–5, and for the Year 1855–6 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 626

Return showing the Gross Income of the Crown Lands, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sum Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purpose for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum Paid into the Exchequer, for the Years 1854–5, and 1855–6 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 628

Appendix, No. 6.

Statement, showing the Sums received on Account of Extra Receipts (Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat), for each Year since 1848, with the Payments made on such Account to the Exchequer, or Pay Office, during the same Period - - - - - - - - p. 630

Appendix, No. 7.

Return showing the Sums received for Old Naval Stores, &c., for each Year since 1848, with the Payments made on such Account to the Exchequer, or to the Paymaster-General's Office, during the same Period - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 630

Appendix, No. 8.

Votes for Revenue Departments, showing the Amount of each Vote, the Date and Amount of each Issue from the Exchequer, and the Date when drawn by the Accountants from the Exchequer Account; showing also the Payment of certain consequent Amounts into the Exchequer Account under the same Heads of Revenue - - - - - - - - - - p. 631

Appendix, No. 9.

List of Cases of Control exercised at the Exchequer, with References to the original Correspondence - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 633

Drafts of Warrants, Minutes, and other Instruments, submitted by Treasury for Comptroller-General's consideration - - - - - - - - - - - p. 642

Index of Copies of Correspondence appended to Cases of Control exercised at the Exchequer, p. 664

Appendix, No. 10.

Discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the Finance Accounts, between those Accounts and the Exchequer Books:

No. 26.—An Account of "Miscellaneous Receipts" paid into the Exchequer in the Year ended the 31st March 1855, under the Heads after mentioned - - - - - p. 760

No. 27.—Repayment of Advances made out of the Consolidated Fund for Purchase of Bullion, and for Local Works and Improvements in Great Britain and Ireland, during the Year ended 31st March 1855 - - - - - - - - - - - p. 765

An Account of all Imprest Monies repaid by Public Accountants, and other Public Monies paid into the Exchequer in the Year ended 31st March 1855, made out at Exchequer as Accounts of Receipts at Exchequer (Great Britain) - - - - - - - p. 766

An Account of the Sums of Money received into the Exchequer in the Year ended 31st March 1855, on account of Surplus Fees of Public Offices, &c., made out at Exchequer as Accounts of Receipts (Great Britain) - - - - - - - - - - p. 768

Appendix, No. 11.

Papers delivered in by the Right Honourable Lord Monteagle of Brandon, 26 June 1856:

Explanation.—Civil Contingency Vote.—Evidence, Question 2734 - - - p. 770

Case and Opinion as to the Legality of further Issues from the Exchequer for Payments of Dividends on the Russian Loan, by virtue of the Act 55 Geo. 3, c. 115 - - p. 771

Minute, 22 December 1848, and Amendments made thereon, in consequence of the Letters from the Exchequer - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 773

Appendix, No. 12.

Papers relating to the Establishment of the Exchequer, and the Business transacted:

Extract from Sixth Report of Commissioners of Public Accounts, 9 February 1782 p. 774

Extract from Report of Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, 1848 (Exchequer), and Lord Monteagle's Evidence - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 774

17 March 1848.—Comptroller to Treasury, with revised Estimate for Exchequer, referring to Sess. Paper, 658/1847, on Exchequer Business (appended) - - - - - p. 775

1 January 1850.—Comptroller to Treasury, on economical Reductions in Exchequer, - p. 776

17 September 1850.—Comptroller to Treasury, recommending Reduction of one Clerk (Extract) - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 781

1 October 1850.—Treasury, in reply, approve of arrangement - - - - - p. 781

Appendix, No. 12—continued.

14 February 1854.—Comptroller to Treasury, as to sparing a Junior Clerk to Treasury p. 782
14 February 1854.—Mr. Ottey to Comptroller, enclosed in the preceding Letter - p. 782
26 June 1856.—Establishment of Exchequer in 1832, 1847, and 1856 - - - p. 782
5 March 1856.—Copy of Petition of Exchequer Clerks to House of Commons on Superannuation Bill, showing Salaries, &c., and contrasted with other Public Departments p. 783
Copy of Return to House of Lords; Exchequer Business transacted in the Year 1841 p. 786
Account of Exchequer Business transacted, 1842 to 1856 - - - - - p. 787

Appendix, No. 13.

Papers delivered in by the Right Honourable the Lord Monteagle of Brandon, 3 July 1856:

List of Books—Exchequer - - - - - - - - - - - p. 788
Mr. Masterman's Suggestions on altering system of exchanging Exchequer Bills, Mr. Anderson's Observations, and Comptroller-general's Report - - - - - p. 792
Letter from the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone to Lord Monteagle, dated 21 May 1853 p. 794
Letter from Lord Monteagle to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, dated 23 May 1853 p. 794
Delays in Payments made through Paymaster-general - - - - - - p. 795

Appendix, No. 14.

Return, from the 1st April 1854 to the 1st April 1856, of Advances made for any Services not voted by Parliament or sanctioned by Statute, stating Date of such Advances, Purpose, from what Funds Advanced, and when Repaid - - - - - - - - - p. 802
Advances for Services for which no Ways and Means have been provided, stating Date of such Advance, Purpose, from what Funds advanced, and when Repaid - - - - p. 802
Advances for Services for which no Royal Order or Treasury Warrant has been issued, stating Date of such Advance, Purpose, from what Funds Advanced, and when Repaid - - p. 802

Appendix, No. 15.

Account of the Cash Balances at the Credit of the several Votes of Parliament, and other Accounts in the Paymaster-general's Books, on the 31 March 1856 - - - - - p. 803

Appendix, No. 16.

An Account of Balances of Votes unissued from the Exchequer on the 31st March 1856 - p. 807

Appendix, No. 17.

Return of the Votes under the Head of Miscellaneous Estimates, specifying each on which there is a Surplus of Money Voted, and setting forth the different Years in which the Accumulation of unexpended but appropriated Money has arisen - - - - - p. 810

Appendix, No. 18.

Account of the Sum remaining in the Exchequer, &c., on the 31 March 1856, on Account of Civil Contingencies - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 815

Appendix, No. 19.

Paper delivered in by the Assistant Paymaster-general, 4 July 1856:

Balances on the Miscellaneous Deposit Funds in the hands of the Paymaster-general on 31 March 1856 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 815

Appendix, No. 20.

Account of all Monies received by the Paymaster-general, except such as were drawn from the Exchequer, or were Repayments of Monies issued for Services from the Exchequer; Date of such Receipts, and Dates of Payment into the Exchequer, when so paid, for the Year 1855-56 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 816

Appendix, No. 21.

Paymaster-general's Balances at the Close of each Day on all his Bank Accounts, in the Three Months ended 30 June 1838; also Balances on the Accounts of the Paymaster-general of the Forces and of the Treasurer of the Navy on each Day of the corresponding Three Months of the Year 1836 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 829

Appendix, No. 22.

Paper delivered in by Ernest Albert Hoffay, Esq., 23 June 1856:

Letter from M. Marshall, Esq. to Sir C. E. Trevelyan, K. C. B., dated 8 February 1849, p. 830

Appendix, No. 23.

Paper delivered in by W. G. Anderson, Esq., 7 July 1856:

Mr. Brooksbank, Chief Clerk of the Financial Division of the Treasury, to Mr. Litchfield, Senior Clerk - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 832

Appendix, No. 24.

Copy of a Letter from Monsieur de Marescalchi to Viscount Palmerston, the original Copy of which was returned to the Treasury, in Audit Board's Report of 28th March 1851, No. 225, p. 833

Appendix, No. 25.

Report from Commissioners of Audit, with Documents referred to - - - - - p. 834

Appendix, No. 26.

Report from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 29 January 1807 - - - - - p. 839

Appendix, No. 27.

Papers delivered in by Edward Romilly, Esq., and Charles Macaulay, Esq., 14 July 1856:

Services included in the Estimates for Miscellaneous Civil Services for 1855–56, which are not examined in the Audit Office - - - - - - - - - - - - p. 843

APPENDIX.

Appendix, No. 1.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE EXCHEQUER AND PAY OFFICE.

FIRST REPORT of the COMMISSIONERS of PUBLIC ACCOUNTS, dated 8 October 1831.

REPORT ON THE EXCHEQUER.

Object of the Commission.

1.—His Majesty, having been graciously pleased, by his Royal Warrant of the 8th of July 1831, to appoint us Commissioners, in order "to make such inquiries as we may judge necessary, and to examine into the manner in which the Public Money is received and paid, in the several Departments of Receipt and Payment, and into the System of keeping the Accounts in the same; and to report from time to time our Observations to the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, and to suggest such improvements as may appear to us to be practicable and desirable;" we beg leave to lay before your Lordships the following Report on the Exchequer, to which we have deemed it right to direct our earliest attention, as the department of the State in which the public money is deposited, and whence it is re-issued for the public service.

Proceedings of a previous Commission.

2.—In preparing this Report, we beg to acknowledge the assistance we have derived from the proceedings of the Commissioners appointed by his Majesty's Warrant, bearing date the 21st of June 1830, for inquiry into the management and charges of collecting the Public Revenue. The documents and evidence which this commission collected, and which are to be found in the Appendix to this Report, have greatly aided us in acquiring a complete acquaintance with the business of the Exchequer; and so many obvious and important improvements are suggested by a due consideration of the valuable materials which have been thus gathered together, that we feel ourselves able to proceed with confidence in recommending changes, which, while they bring with them considerable economy, will greatly strengthen the efficiency of this department.

Functions of the Exchequer.

3.—The Exchequer is the great conservator of the revenues of the nation; it does not exercise any authority over the administrative departments of receipt, nor over the departments of payment, any further than to guard against the illegal application of any portion of the public income. The constitutional functions of its officers, who hold their situations for life, are to provide for the safe keeping and proper appropriation of the public money. For this purpose it is charged with the receipt of the revenues, which are vested in its name and deposited in its care, until issued under the authority of Parliament for the services of the State, and it is armed with the power of denying its sanction to any demands upon it, from whatever minister or department they may be made, unless those demands are found in accordance with the determinations of the Legislature. "To examine in detail," says Mr. Ellis, the Clerk of the Pells, "the ancient authorities upon which the constitution of the Exchequer of Receipt and Issue in its regulations and practice rests, would answer no useful purpose; it is sufficient to observe that the Exchequer is at least coeval with the Norman Conquest, and that it has been from its earliest institution looked to as a check upon the Lord High Treasurer, and a protection for the King as well as for the subject, in the custody, payment and issue of the public money. The business of the Exchequer, in its simplest form, is the receipt of the public money, and the issue of the same under orders from the proper authority; the second branch, that of issue, farther involves the most important duty of control; while both require, in a matter of such national and historical importance, the duty of record."*

4.—On directing our attention to the consideration of the regulations by which the safe custody, legal appropriation of the public money, and due record of all receipts and credits, may be attained with the greatest simplicity and efficiency, we commenced by carefully examining the history and operations of the Exchequer.

The ancient forms of the Exchequer open to much improvement.

5.—We have observed that nearly all the forms and practices now in force may be traced to very remote periods; and that notwithstanding the extensive changes and improvements which experience and civilization have so generally introduced into pecuniary transactions, the forms of the Exchequer have undergone little or no amendment or alteration. On considering, therefore, on the one hand, what are or ought to be the legitimate functions of this department,

* See Mr. Ellis's Letter to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, dated March 2, 1828. Appendix, p. 48.

Exchequer Report.

department, and, on the other, the variety and perplexity of forms and checks now in use, and the number of individuals employed under the existing establishment, we have come, without hesitation, to the conclusion, that a much more efficient and economical system than that now employed may be safely and advantageously introduced.

All monies should be paid in full into the Exchequer.

6.—To accomplish, with perfect security and efficiency, these objects of safe custody, legal appropriation and record, it is obviously necessary that all public monies whatever should in the first instance be paid into the Exchequer. But it appears from the Accounts laid before Parliament, that the whole amount of the public income is not so paid, but that amounts derived from divers sources of revenue are received and disbursed without the intervention of this institution, or being in any way submitted to its control. It is also certain that considerable sums arising from taxes and other matters are deducted from the gross receipts, and retained and expended by several departments, which only account to the Exchequer for the net amount, after such deductions. We think this practice should be discontinued, and we recommend that the gross receipts of public money, whether arising from taxes in each part of the United Kingdom;* from the income or sale of Crown property under the administration of the Woods and Forests; from the sale of old naval, ordnance or other stores; from unclaimed dividends; unclaimed prize money; deductions from pensions; loans on Exchequer Bills, or from any other sources, should be placed, without deduction, in the custody of the Exchequer, and be accounted for to Parliament, whose authority should be necessary for the appropriation of the whole.

No public money should be applied without previous Parliamentary sanction.

7.—We feel this principle to be one of paramount importance for the security of the public money, in the two great branches of receipt and expenditure. We think that no portion of the public treasure should be arrested on any plea or pretence whatever, on its way to the Exchequer, and that no portion of it should be issued from the Exchequer without previous Parliamentary sanction. Your Lordships will perceive that a really efficient and complete control can be introduced into the different departments of the public service only by the adoption and establishment of the principle we recommend—a principle which we believe to be the necessary preliminary to all satisfactory financial reform; by which means, not only will the whole of the public treasures be made available for the public service, but the expense of collection will appear as a part of the public expenditure, and be consequently placed immediately under legislative and official control.

This principle has been carried out in France.

8.—We may refer to the satisfactory effects which have been produced by the introduction of such a regulation into the administration of the public finances of France, in justification and support of our opinion on this essential point. If difficulties should occur, or objections be stated, from peculiar circumstances, to the immediate application of this rule in all cases, it appears essential to recognise the important principle on which it is founded, and to urge upon your Lordships the policy of admitting the smallest possible number of exceptions to its application, and of allowing those exceptions to continue for the shortest possible period. We feel confident that a short experience of this improvement will soon remove the impediments which may at first be opposed to its adoption.†

Present regulations as to Exchequer Receipts.

9.—As descriptive of the manner and regulations under which the public monies are received at the Exchequer, we copy the following statement of one of the Deputy Tellers, which will give to your Lordships a correct view of the present system:

10.—"The regulations under which the public monies are received at the Exchequer have been established by immemorial usage, and are more particularly fixed by the statute 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 28. Some partial modifications have however been introduced by subsequent Acts of Parliament, which direct the payment of certain branches of revenue through the Bank of England, and by the general substitution of Bank notes for specie in all large money transactions.

11.—"By the first section of the abovementioned Act of Will. 3, the Teller is bound to receive and make entry of all sums by weight and tale, when tendered at his office; and, according to the ancient course of the Exchequer, to throw down immediately a bill of the sum written upon parchment, and signed by the Teller, or his Deputy, into the Tally Court, where the person making the payment receives his acquittance."

12.—"The only deviation in practice, from these regulations, consists in the discontinuance of the custom of taking an account of the money by weight and tale. For nearly a century past,

* The duties of the Barons of the Exchequer in Scotland, as far as relates to the management of the property of the Crown and the public in Scotland, as a Board of Treasury, are described in the Appendix (Y.) p. 173. The duties of the Vice-Treasurer of Ireland are described in the Appendix (Z.) p. 181.

† A regulation of this character was introduced in France by an ordinance of the 14th September 1822, and appears to have been eminently beneficial in its operation. It provides that under no circumstances can any branch of administration receive or dispose of any other funds than those which have been voted for its service by legislative authority. That in case of any sale of public property, the proceeds of such sale shall be paid into the Treasury, and shall not be at the disposal of the department to which the property belonged. In order to accomplish this object, it decrees that the presence and sanction of an officer of the Treasury shall be necessary for effecting any such sale; and it prescribes the form under which the sale must be conducted. It declares, as a general principle, that all money received from the public shall go to the Treasury, and be accounted for as a portion of the public revenue. The circulars of the different administrations also direct that the amount of no sale of stores or other public property, in a word, no payments of any description, shall be received by any department, to be disposed of by that or any other department, unless it form part of the credit granted by the Legislature. See Mr. Bowring's First Report, p. 8, 9.

Exchequer Report.

Present regulations as to Exchequer Receipts—continued.

past, the Bank of England has sent down to the Exchequer persons duly authorized to examine and receive its own notes. And by order of the statute 46 Geo. 3, ss. 75, 76, 83, and 150, the Bank clerks so attending at the Exchequer are bound to receive cancelled Bank Notes from the Receivers-general of Customs, Excise, Stamps, and the Post-office (all which departments keep their money at the Bank of England), and to give each Receiver-general credit for them with the Teller as for so much cash. The practice, also, has for many years prevailed, of receiving through the medium of the Bank Clerks, not only those branches of the revenue, but all monies whatever paid to the Teller on the public accounts; the general use of paper money having made it necessary to adopt this course, in order to verify the notes presented at the Exchequer, and to enable the Teller, consistently with his own responsibility, to accept them in payment of the revenue."

13.—"The ordinary mode in which payments are now made into the Exchequer is as follows: The person who brings the money deposits, by direction of the Teller, his notes and cash with one of the Bank Clerks, from whom he receives a ticket, addressed to the Deputy Teller, expressing the amount of the sum so received on behalf of the Teller. Having delivered this ticket in the Teller's Office, he then enters in a book kept for the purpose, and called the Receipt or Waste Book, the amount paid in, the date of the payment, the heads of the revenue upon which it is paid, and the name of the party paying it. This entry is then transcribed in Latin upon a piece of parchment, called a Bill. The Bill is signed by the Deputy Tellers, and is transmitted through the pipe into the Tally Court. A slight variation, as to the manner of making the entries, occurs in the case of money paid in, which has been levied by judicial process. In this case the party by whom the payment is made, does not enter the particulars in any book, but the memoranda of the proceedings are left at the office, and are transcribed in the Teller's Bill, and the names of the delinquent persons, together with the sums paid in, are entered in the Teller's Receipt or Waste Book."

14.—"All entries made in the Receipt or Waste Book are noted in various other books, which are preserved in the Teller's Office. These books become his official records of what monies are received by him on behalf of the Crown, and are kept for the purpose of the several audits and examinations of his accounts, which from time to time are made by the Auditor of the Exchequer and the Clerks of the Pells respectively."

"Deposits.

Daily settlement with the Bank.

15.—"At the close of each day's business the payments made by the Bank on the Teller's account are balanced against the receipts, and the difference, if in favour of the Teller, is received by him from the Bank Clerks. This balance is by them made up in separate parcels of Bank notes. Each parcel is ticketed with its amount and the date of its deposit. It is then examined by the Teller's Clerk, by an officer from the Auditor, and by an officer from the Pell's Office; and the whole sum, with the exception of the fractional parts under 100 l. is deposited in an iron chest, in the Cash Room of the Teller.

16.—"To each of the Teller's chests there are three different locks, the keys of which are kept, one in the Teller's Office, one in the Office of the Auditor (to whom it was transferred, upon the resignation of the late Chamberlain of the Exchequer, pursuant to the statute 23 Geo. 3, c. 82), and one in the Office of the Pells, or the care of the superior officer of each department; and the public money is thus placed in deposit, under their joint custody and responsibility."*

Present system unfit to be continued.

17.—The perusal of this testimony, coming from one of the most experienced officers of the present establishment, bears with it the conviction, that however well such a system may have been adapted to former times, it is wholly unsuited to existing circumstances, and therefore unfit to be continued. As, with few exceptions, according to the Evidence given to the Commission of 1830 by Mr. Honey, all payments nominally made into the Exchequer are received by the Bank, and all monies nominally issued from the Exchequer are also paid by the Bank,† it is only by a "species of fiction"‡ that money appears to be received and paid by the Exchequer.

Fiction by which payment of taxes to the Exchequer is sustained.

18.—The following Evidence of Mr. Beaumont explains the fiction by which the payment of taxes into the Exchequer is sustained, and exhibits in detail the manner in which the business is carried on under the present arrangements:

"Edward Beaumont, Esq., was called in; and Examined.

Mr. Beaumont's Evidence.

19.—"WHAT situation do you hold at the Customs?—Assistant to the Receiver-general.

20.—"Will you state generally to the Commissioners in what way the money received at the Office of the Receiver-general is paid into the Bank, and to what extent and in what way that money is afterwards paid into the Exchequer?—We have two accounts at the Bank; the account which is applicable to the Exchequer is the surplus of the receipts in London, and the remittances from the out-ports, which is carried into the Bank every day, and entered into the Bank-book. The Bills of Exchange are carried into the Bank as soon as they are accepted, and as the bills fall due the account is drawn from the Bank, and paid into the Exchequer, with the receipts in London; the payments into the Exchequer are drawn from the Bank by a cancelled Bank note.

21.—"In what way are the payments made from the Bank into the Exchequer?—By a cancelled Bank note; a Clerk attends at the Exchequer to make the proper entries.

"What

* Appendix, p. 66.

† See Mr. Andrew Honey's Examination before the Commission of 1830. Appendix, p. 103.

‡ Mr. Ellis's Evidence. Appendix, p. 149.

Exchequer Report.

Mr. Beaumont's Evidence as to fiction by which the payments to the Exchequer are sustained.

22.—"Are you the person who does that?—I occasionally do it, but it is generally done by the first Clerk or the second Clerk; we are rather pressed for hands, and we are obliged to do it as it is convenient; but it is either performed by the assistant, or by the first or second Clerk.

23.—"What is the process, when you arrive at the Exchequer, of paying that money into the Exchequer?—On making up our accounts twice a week, I transmit to the Exchequer a paper, called the 'Appropriation Paper,' which is the amount applicable to the appropriated heads of duty. The Clerk makes an entry in the Teller's books from a copy of that paper, which is transmitted to the Exchequer; he enters it in the Teller's books, and hands over a cancelled Bank note to the Bank Clerk who is in attendance.

24.—"Has the Clerk of the Customs anything more to do after that?—He has only to pay the fees.

25.—"Is the entry made in the Teller's book any receipt or proof of the money having been paid in the Exchequer?—We consider that as a sufficient discharge.

26.—"Have you any other discharge subsequently?—None, but the counterfoils, which follow in due course; they are now counterfoils instead of tallies.

27.—"And those are the vouchers upon which the Receiver-general's accounts are audited?—Yes.

28.—"Is there no document given to the Clerk after he has handed in the spoiled Bank note?—None, till he receives the counterfoils.

29.—"There is no note from the Teller to the Bank Clerk, stating that such and such sums have been received?—The Bank Clerk, upon receiving the cancelled Bank note, hands over a slip of paper, stating so much to Perceval, and so much to Camden, for we only pay to those two officers; and it is upon those tickets that the Teller's Clerks receive fees.

30.—"Are those tickets only for the purpose of receiving fees?—For nothing more; it may be taken as a proof that they have received so much, but the entries in the books show that.

31.—"What check would there be upon a wrong entry in the books, as between you and the Teller's Clerk?—Whenever an entry is made, the book is always cast by the person making it; and I apprehend that the Teller's Clerks also cast the entries in their books.

32.—"You pay first of all to the Bank of England, every day, whatever money you do not want for the current expenses of the office?—Yes.

33.—"And twice a week you pay into the Exchequer?—Yes; we have two accounts at the Bank; one is rather in the light of a private account, which is an account in the names of the Receiver and Comptroller-generals for the purpose of paying the salaries; upon that account we draw from time to time for the purpose of paying the salaries.

34.—"Then you carry the money into the Exchequer only twice a week?—Only twice a week; on Wednesdays and Saturdays, supposing holidays do not intervene.

35.—"Supposing the end of a quarter should happen to fall on a Friday?—We should pay it on the Friday.

36.—"Then the days are Wednesdays and Saturdays, unless there are peculiar circumstances?—Exactly so.

37.—"Have you ever found any difficulty arising from the present construction of the Exchequer?—We have certainly found no difficulties in conducting our business at the Exchequer under the present system; but certainly it does appear to me that an arrangement might be made at the Bank by which the Receiver-general's clerks, I apprehend, might be saved the trouble of going up to the Exchequer to make those entries, for I consider it merely as a matter of form.

38.—"In short, instead of carrying money to the Exchequer, you would take it to the Bank?—I think the Bank might transfer the money to the Exchequer account, without our going up there to pay in a cancelled Bank note; and I think that might be arranged by the Receiver-general of the Customs transmitting the Appropriation Paper, officially signed, to the Exchequer; and I think the gentlemen of the Exchequer might be authorised to make entries in their own books from that paper.

39.—"Does the Appropriation Paper state precisely the sum that is to be paid?—Yes.

40.—"How long before is that sent?—Upon making up our account on Friday, the paper is sent in on Saturday.

41.—"By whom is the Appropriation Paper signed?—It is not signed at all; it is merely sent up as a document for the counterfoils.

42.—"Under whose responsibility is that sent?—Under mine.

43.—"How do they know that it is correct, unless it is verified by some signature?—Our Comptroller-general checks that; he sees by the counterfoils that the money applicable to the Exchequer has been carried in.

44.—"Do you make any payments to the Exchequer?—None, with the exception of the fees.

45.—"So that your whole business with the Exchequer is confined to the paying in your money at the Exchequer?—Yes.

46.—"And you conceive that that might be done more conveniently by transferring the money simply to the account of the Exchequer, a sufficient document passing to authenticate that transfer of account, without going through the forms of making the entry at the Exchequer?—That is my idea upon the subject; and I should draw a write-off upon the Bank, which would be an authority to the Bank to transfer the money." *

Complex arrangements of the English Exchequer dispensed with in Ireland.

47.—The following description, by the Deputy Vice-Treasurer of Ireland, of the manner in which the revenue of Ireland is received by the Irish Exchequer, in its reformed and reduced state state of establishment, will show that the complex arrangements which are still in existence at the English Exchequer are wholly dispensed with in Ireland, and as, we believe, with considerable advantage to the public service, by making all payments simply into the Bank.

* Appendix, p. 165.

48.—"The Public Income or Revenues (of Ireland) may be classed under the following heads; viz. Revenues of Ireland paid to the Bank of Ireland.

"Customs.
"Excise.
"Stamps.
"Postage.
"Poundage Fee, Pells Fee, and Treasury Fee.
"Imprest and other monies.

"Customs and Excise.

49.—"The net revenues of Customs and Excise are daily lodged in the Bank of Ireland by the respective collectors of Customs and Excise, and placed by the Bank to the credit of the Teller of the Exchequer.

50.—"The Customs and Excise Departments transmit weekly, to the Teller of the Exchequer, and the Vice-Treasurer, certificates of the appropriation of these Revenues so paid into the Bank.

"Stamps.

51.—"The Stamp Revenue received in Dublin is lodged daily in the Bank by the Receiver-general, and weekly by the country distributors, and is, in like manner as the Customs and Excise, placed to the credit of the Teller of the Exchequer. A certificate is furnished by the Bank, weekly, to the Receiver-general of Stamps, stating the amount of the lodgments made in the course of the week, as well by him as by the respective distributors; this certificate is transmitted to the Teller of the Exchequer, and to the Vice-Treasurer, by the Receiver-general of Stamps.

"Postage.

52.—"There does not appear to be any fixed period for lodging the Post-office revenue to the credit of the Teller's account in the Bank of Ireland; the lodgments seldom exceed two or three in the quarter, and their amount in the year 1830 averaged about £. 27,000 per quarter; at the close of each quarter, the Post-office transmits to the Vice-Treasurer a certificate of the amount lodged within the quarter.

"Poundage, Pells, and Treasury Fees.

53.—"These fees are deducted (at the time of payment) by the Teller, from the amount of such warrants as are subject to them; which deductions he charges himself with, and the amount is placed to the credit of the Consolidated Fund, weekly.

"Imprest and other Monies.

54.—"These monies are paid into the Bank of Ireland, to the credit of the Teller of the Exchequer; the Bank gives a receipt to the party lodging the money, which he delivers to the Teller, who prepares an Exchequer acquittance, stating on what account the money was lodged, and which is examined and countersigned by the Vice-Treasurer.

55.—"The Bank transmits to the Teller and to the Vice-Treasurer a weekly abstract, in detail, of the lodgments made during the week, and which is compared with the certificates received from the respective departments of Customs, Excise, Stamps and Post-office. On the authority of these documents, the Teller prepares Exchequer receipts for the respective revenues so placed to his credit in the Bank, which receipts are checked by the Vice-Treasurer, and countersigned by him; and on being charged in his books against the Teller, they are returned to the Teller, who transmits them to the respective departments."*

56.—Taking therefore into consideration the many inconveniences of the existing practice under which the Exchequer is nominally, but not really, the receiver of the public money,—and the fact that experience has shown they have been beneficially superseded in Ireland by the intervention of the Bank, for the purpose of effecting all receipts of the same,—we recommend that in future all payments of the public income to the credit of the Exchequer be made wholly and directly into the Bank of England. All Revenues should be paid directly to the Bank of England.

57.—We consider this change as indispensable for the removal of many complications and anomalies, as essentially promoting the great ends of simplicity and security, and as one which will enable the Government to carry on its pecuniary transactions in accordance with those usages which commercial experience on the largest scale has adopted as the wisest and the best.

58.—We propose to remove all difficulties with respect to the legal admissibility of payments made into the Bank of England on the public account (a subject which appears to have been attended with some trouble and perplexity, and to have given rise to various official and Specification Papers should be used.

* Appendix (Z.), p. 181.

Exchequer Report.

Course to be pursued in paying in Money, and legal Discharge for such Payment.

and technical embarrassments) by providing, that all payments into the Bank be classified under two heads: First, the payments of the Receivers-general and other receivers of taxes who are known and recognized public officers, which payments the Bank should be authorized to receive directly from these officers: and Secondly, all other payments of money due to the public, which latter the Bank of England may be directed to receive on account of the Exchequer, on special authority from the Treasury, given by documents according to prescribed forms. Every receiver of taxes, or other person, making a payment to the Bank for the account of the Exchequer, should be required to draw up a Revenue Specification Paper,* showing the particulars of the sum paid, with reference to the taxes or other sources whence it has been derived. This document should be sent to the Exchequer, on the same day in which the payment is made. At the close of every day the Bank should send to the Exchequer a statement of all sums received for Exchequer account,† and these having been found in accordance with the Specification Papers, each party paying should have a legal right to demand from the Exchequer a receipt, in common language and figures, and according to a prescribed form,‡ which should be admitted by the auditors of public accounts, and by all other persons, as a legal discharge for the payment so made to the Bank.

Various complex Arrangements may be dispensed with.

59.—By having all public monies paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the Exchequer in the way proposed, the operose mode now practised, of vouching payments made into the receipt of the Exchequer by public accountants would be superseded,§ while the indented Check Receipts (expressed in Exchequer Latin, bearing the amount paid in the ancient but now obsolete Exchequer figures), the counterfoil, and the various complex arrangements of check and recordation, might be safely and beneficially dispensed with.‖

Unemployed Balances would become available.

60.—Other useless and complicated operations, and the keeping the Teller's Chests at the Exchequer, would be abolished by the same regulation, and the whole of the public balances which at present remain unemployed would become immediately available to the public service.¶

In

* A model of the proposed formula will be found in the Appendix (A.), p. 29.

† See Appendix (B.), p. 30.

‡ See Appendix (C.), p. 31.

§ The system now in use for checking the payments made to the Tellers of the Exchequer is thus described by Mr. Ellis: "A clerk from the auditor's office attends in the tally court or receipt room to take a note of the Teller's bills, for the purpose of entering the same in the books of the auditors, and comparing the daily and weekly statements in the Pell Office with those sent from the department; another clerk of the auditor prepares the checked receipts, which are afterwards examined and countersigned by the clerk of the Pell Office." Mr. Ellis adds, "The attention of the Chancellor of the Exchequer is specially called to these facts, as instances of business being similarly executed by the two departments." Report of Mr. Ellis, Appendix, p. 47.

‖ Among the documents laid before the Commission of 1830, is a long letter from the Audit Office, dated 2d April 1828, recommending the substitution of "a plain and perspicuous official document for the antiquated form of acquittance" given as a receipt by the Exchequer; but the plan now proposed will be a great improvement on the suggestion of the Audit Office, inasmuch as it will relieve the Exchequer from receiving any money at its office. The following is the specimen inserted by the Audit Office in their letter, of an acquittance produced by Lord Wallace, with his account as Master of the Mint, as the voucher for a payment made into the Receipt of the Exchequer to the account of the Consolidated Fund.

Exchequer P. Act 23 Geo. 3. C. 82. Sec. 2.

Mag Brit N° 100. 3 die Feb. 1827.

Prehon Thom Wallace Praefect et Opific Offic ad numm Cudend sup Compm pecun solut ℔ Aerarium Angliae et al ℔ monet argent eis deliberat ex Offic praedict ℔ usu Consol Fund.

£ 9,634 : 5 : 2

W. Charsley, Cler: in Offic: Auditor:

R.F.G.Cumberland, Cler: in Offic: Cler: Pell:

E. J. Longley, Cler: in Offic: Auditor:

Examd. with the Counterfoil 7 *Dec*r 1827.

Appendix, p. 44–46.

¶ Mr. Penwarne says, "By the present method of deducting the amounts of orders, &c. from the different branches of revenue, when they have passed the Auditors and Pells Offices, many sums of money

Exchequer Report.

61.—In addition to the other inconveniences of the system described by Mr. Beaumont, it is stated by Mr. Penwarne, the Clerk of the Debentures at the Exchequer, that considerable delays often arise before those individuals who pay the proceeds of the taxes into the Court of Exchequer obtain vouchers which prove the payments have been really effected. "Receipts," he says, "are not given to the parties at the time of paying monies into the Tellers' offices, but are generally delivered to them from the Tally Court several days after the payments have been made, and in many cases a much longer period elapses."* These delays would be wholly got rid of by the adoption of the plans we have suggested for your Lordships' consideration.

Delays would be avoided.

Control over the Crown and its Ministers in the application of the Public Money.

62.—Having recommended what appears to us a more intelligible and efficient system for placing the public money under the custody of the Exchequer, we proceed to examine another main object of that institution—the control to be exercised over the Crown and its ministers in the application of that money. The information contained in the documents and evidence already so often referred to, enables us to state with confidence, that a revision of, and alteration in, the provisions and arrangements under which the orders of the Crown and Treasury are now conveyed to the Exchequer, for the purpose of obtaining such appropriation according to the directions of Parliament, are equally indispensable with the improvement which we have suggested in the mode of receiving the public money.† It appears to us essential that one simple and efficient, but, above all, uniform plan should be adopted in this respect on every occasion.

Present practice.

63.—The mode now employed of exercising control over the appropriation of the funds in the Exchequer is to require, previously to the issue of money for a public object, the examination of the order or other authority from the Crown, or the Treasury, or both, by the Auditor of the Exchequer and by the Clerk of the Pells, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such order or authority be in conformity with the sanction of Parliament.

Full Security for legal Appropriation should exist.

64.—It is scarcely necessary to inquire how far such control has hitherto been effectual, though it was clearly intended to be provided for by the constitution of the Exchequer. But we are decidedly of opinion that the most efficient restraint upon the Crown and its ministers should be preserved and maintained in any plan for reforming the existing system. We have recommended, as the first measure for this purpose, the introduction of a regulation requiring the payment of all public monies, without exception, into the Exchequer; and it now becomes our duty to suggest measures for obtaining full security, that no appropriation of the funds so received shall take place, under any circumstances, however urgent, without such sanction as shall be a real guarantee to the public for the legality of the appropriation.

Authorities and Forms require revision.

65.—The various authorities and forms by which money is now issued call for revision and improvement in this branch. The documents now employed are as perplexing, from their variety and dissimilarity, as they are tardy, laborious and expensive in their preparation; and they occasion, according to the concurrent testimony of different officers of the Exchequer, great and unnecessary trouble and embarrassment.

66.—By the evidence given before the Commissioners of Inquiry into the charges and management of the revenue, it appears that, in order to enable the Solicitor of the Treasury, Mr. Maule, money remain unavoidably in the Tellers' chests for years, until, under the authority of an Act of Parliament passed a few years ago, they are issued to a person appointed to receive them, and are by him repaid into the Exchequer, when they again become available for the public service." See Appendix, p. 40. The official Exchequer term for these unclaimed accounts is "Out-Cash." A statement, showing the weekly amount of the out-cash in the different Tellers' chests, for the two weeks preceding the several quarters in the years 1829 and 1830, being the weeks in which that amount, from the frequency of issues, i. e. authorities to pay, is greatest, is given by Mr. Ellis, Appendix, p. 139–140.

---

* Appendix, p. 40.

† Mr. Ellis says, "I think, in regard to the number of persons employed, and to the forms of issue, there is an unnecessary expenditure of money and loss of time." Appendix, p. 151.

Mr. Penwarne says, "If the orders for issues of monies to the Paymasters of the Forces, the Treasurers of the Navy and Ordnance, and those for occasional payments, could be passed through the different offices of the Exchequer by Treasury Warrants only, instead of two authorities, viz. Sign Manual and Treasury Warrants, or Letters of Privy Seal and Treasury Warrants; and if one kind of instrument, and of a more simple form than those at present in use, viz. orders and debentures, could be adopted, the business would be much simplified, particularly if the necessity could be obviated of sending the orders forward and backward from the Treasury to the Exchequer." Appendix, p. 42. Again, "The variety of instruments authorizing the making out and passing orders and debentures at the Exchequer appears to occasion much unnecessary trouble and delay. It is probable that the number of documents required in some cases for making one payment arose at the time when fees were taken by the officers of the Exchequer for their own use. The annual number of warrants amounts, at present, to above a thousand, some of them containing in one warrant payments to be made to many different persons. For instance, for the pensions paid out of the Civil List by Sign Manual, each warrant contains the names of nearly four hundred pensioners. The number of Patents and Sign Manual Warrants granting salaries, allowances and pensions seldom exceeds fifty or sixty in a year; and the number of Letters of Privy Seal entered at the Exchequer is inconsiderable.

"When a demise of the Crown takes place, the increase of the business connected with the authorities is very great, it being necessary to re-grant many of the pensions, salaries and allowances, for which between eight and nine hundred instruments have to be entered and recorded in the Exchequer, besides a great increase of Treasury Warrants." Appendix, p. 41.

Exchequer Report.

Maule, to obtain a final order to receive 500 l., the following documents were prepared and signed :

1. A Royal Sign Manual Warrant to the Treasury.
2. A Treasury Warrant to Auditor of Exchequer.
3. A Treasury Issuing Letter; and,
4. A Treasury Order to the Auditor and Teller of the Exchequer.*

67.—All of which are founded on the general Privy Seal to the Exchequer, issued at the commencement of every reign.†

Forms by which Issues are regulated.

68.—Mr. Penwarne gives the following description of the mode in which certain issues are made from the Exchequer :—

69.—" For the issues to the Bank of England for the management and payment of dividends, and to the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, Treasury Warrants only are required.

70.—" Occasional payments, under the authority of a special Act of Parliament, are made by Treasury Warrants, unless under the authority of the annual Appropriation Act, or out of the Civil List, when they require both Sign Manual and Treasury Warrants.

71.—" Many salaries, pensions and allowances, after the instruments granting them and the document warrants have been entered and recorded in the Exchequer, require no farther authority, but are paid on the production of certificates of the lives of the parties at the Auditor's Office ; others, however, granted during pleasure, require a Treasury Warrant for each payment.

72.—" Ancient salaries to officers of the Treasury and Exchequer, perpetuities, &c. &c. are for the greater part under the authority of general Letters of Patent Dormant, and most of them require quarterly warrants, though a few of them are issued without any warrant whatever."‡ Issues for Army, Navy and Ordnance Services.

73.—The following is the description given by Messrs. Brooksbank & Beltz, in their Report on the Public Accounts, of the manner in which money is issued from the Exchequer for the Army, Ordnance and Navy Services :—

74.—" In describing the course of the issue and payment of the sums of money for the Army, Navy and Ordnance Services, it is necessary to trace them back to the high source from which they proceed, after Parliament has granted the ' Supplies' or Services, and the ' Ways and Means' for defraying them.

75.—" In reference to the Ways and Means, or money, either flowing into the Exchequer upon the grants, or raised by Exchequer Bills, the only authority by which the issue of the funds from the coffers of the Exchequer can be effected, must emanate directly from the Crown. §

76.—" Before this money can be issued from the Exchequer, or applied by any Board or individual under the Crown in payment for the services for which it is granted, the authority of the King must be given for the purpose.

77.—" The delegated power thus conferred by the Crown may be considered, first, as to the issue of the money; and secondly, as to the payment of it when issued.

78.—" We shall describe, therefore, under each of the three heads of the public service which will be the subject of our present report, the several authorities, as well as we have been able to collect them, vested by the Crown in the high public officers to whom the trust of the issue and payment in detail of the Army, Navy and Ordnance expenditure is, under certain restrictions, confided.

79.—" But in this place we shall confine our remarks to those variations which, on a close examination of each service, will be seen to exist (some without much apparent reason, but owing probably to the original constitution of the offices, which it is now difficult to trace), both in the nature of the authorities given for the issue, and for the payment of each of the services.

80.—" In noticing these variations, it will be seen that the credits given by the Crown to the Treasurers of the Navy and the Ordnance are always by Letters of Privy Seal; but that the credits given to the Paymaster-general are by the more simple instrument of a warrant under the King's signature, countersigned by the Treasury, until the last issue, which is also by a Privy Seal."

Army Issues.

81.—Messrs. Brooksbank & Beltz describe the authority under which the issues are made by the Exchequer to the Army Department, in the following words :—

82.—" When a grant has been voted upon the Estimates, a Warrant under the King's Sign Manual is obtained, and countersigned by the Treasury, for authorizing the issue of a portion

---

* For copies of the different documents on which monies are issued from the Exchequer, see Appendix, p. 112–119.

† For a copy of a general Privy Seal, see Appendix (F.), p. 34; of a Privy Seal to a particular department, see Appendix (G.), ibid.

‡ Appendix, p. 41.

§ Messrs. Brooksbank & Beltz state, that there are grants from the Consolidated Fund, and occasionally for specific objects, for the issue of which full power is vested in the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, independent of the Crown.

portion of such grant from the Exchequer to be placed to the account of the Paymaster-general of the Forces at the Bank of England. Exchequer Report.

83.—" The King's Warrant, in respect to the Army grants, answering, until the last issue, the same purpose as the Letters of Privy Seal for the issue of the Navy and the Ordnance grants.

84.—" The King's Warrant gives the Paymaster-general a credit at the Exchequer for the amount specified in it; but further directions from the Treasury are necessary before he can receive any actual issue upon it: These directions are given by letters to the Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, upon memorials being presented to the Treasury from time to time by the Paymaster-general, stating always the head of service for which the money is required.

85.—" When nearly the whole grant for the year has been issued under the authority of these Sign Manual Warrants, the final issue, called ' The Winder,' as winding up and completing the grant for the year, is made by a Letter of Privy Seal."*

86.—And with respect to issues to the Ordnance Department, they say:—" When Parliament has voted a grant for the Ordnance Service, the Treasury procure (in the same manner as we have described in our Report on the Navy) a Letter of Privy Seal, as the authority of the Crown for the issue of a portion or the whole of the grant; and under this sanction, the issues by Treasury Letters or Orders to the Exchequer are given as sums are wanted, for which the Treasurer, under the direction and authority of the Board of Ordnance, and after a formal memorial from that Board to the Treasury, applies."† Ordnance Issues.

87.—Messrs. Brooksbank & Beltz state in their Report, " that as soon as a Navy grant has been voted, the King's Warrant is obtained by the Treasury for a Letter of Privy Seal to be prepared as an authority to the Exchequer for the issue of a large sum, generally a million or more, in part of the grant. Navy Issues.

88.—" This sum is not issued at once from the Exchequer, but the Privy Seal gives the Treasurer of the Navy credit at the Exchequer for the sum specified in it; and as often as money is required for the Navy, Transport or Victualling Service, the Treasurer of the Navy applies, by the direction of the Navy or Victualling Board, to the Treasury for the sum wanted.

89.—" In consequence of such application to the Treasury, a letter is sent from that office, under the sanction of the before-mentioned Privy Seal, to the Exchequer, to direct the sum applied for to be issued to the account of the Treasurer of the Navy at the Bank of England; and the issues are continued in this manner from time to time by Treasury Letters, till the amount of the credit given by the King's Privy Seal is nearly exhausted, when a new Privy Seal is prepared for a farther sum; and this process continues till the completion of the grant of Parliament for the year."‡

90.—After directing the attention of your Lordships to this detailed account of the various authorities under which the public money is issued by the Exchequer, we have to request your consideration of the plan by which we propose to simplify this operation. Suggestions for simplifying the issue.

91.—As we do not desire or intend to propose to your Lordships any greater innovation on what we find established than is absolutely necessary for carrying into effect the objects of our Commission, we select the course of practice just described as adopted with regard to Exchequer issues for the Navy Service as a guide to our suggestions; and adopting the principles which we thus find to be sanctioned by present usage, we recommend that a general credit be given in the first instance at the Exchequer, by the Crown, to each department or office concerned in the management of the public expenditure, for such amount as Parliament shall have voted to such department or office; and that a special credit be given, subsequently, by Warrants of the Treasury, to make use of this credit.

92.—We propose, as the mode of giving these credits, the following regulations, which we submit for your Lordships' consideration:

1. The document by which the Crown conveys its authority to the Exchequer to give a credit, to be called, what it really will be, an Order on the Exchequer, so as to avoid any ambiguity which might be the result of continuing to use the term Privy Seal.§ Royal Order.

2. This document, or Royal Order, to be drawn up in the same form for every department or office of expenditure.

3. The credit given by it to the Treasury, to be for the whole sum appropriated annually by Parliament to each such department or office. Treasury Warrant.

4. This credit to be made use of by the Treasury from time to time by special warrants to be issued in favour of the department or service for the use of which the money has been appropriated by Parliament.

5. Each Royal Order to have annexed to it a copy of the Estimates on which Parliament has granted the money for which credit is to be given.

6. Each Royal Order to be countersigned by three Lords of the Treasury.

7. An abstract of each Royal Order to be registered in a book to be kept for this purpose at the Treasury.

93.—With

* Messrs. Brooksbank & Beltz' Report, pp. 36, 37.
† Ibid. p. 68. ‡ Ibid. p. 14. § See Appendix (D.) p. 32.

Exchequer Report.

93.—With respect to the Warrants to be issued by the Treasury, directing the Exchequer to give credits, we propose the following regulations:

1. The Warrant to refer to the Royal Order, under the sanction of which the credit is to be given.

Monthly Estimate.

2. Each department, or office of expenditure, to transmit to the Treasury, before a fixed day of each month, an estimate, showing how much money will be required for payments in the ensuing month. The estimate to specify the heads of service for which money is required, and also the items of the estimates voted by Parliament by which the payment of the money is authorized; an application for the credit demanded is to accompany the estimate.

Supplemental Estimates.

94.—If any unforeseen pressure or emergency shall arise after the monthly estimate has been sent into the Treasury by a department, a special estimate to be sent to the Treasury, on which a Warrant may be issued for an additional credit.

3. After each application has been examined in the proper division of the Treasury, the same to be signed by the chief clerk, and submitted by him, for signature, to a Board of Treasury.

Warrant on the Exchequer.

4. The Board, after further examination of the same, and approval of it, to direct a Warrant to be issued to the chief officer of the Exchequer.

5. A separate division to be established at the Treasury, for the issue and record of all Warrants granted upon the Exchequer.

6. After the Warrant is prepared in such division, the same to be signed by the chief clerk, and submitted by him, for signature, to a Board of Treasury.

7. The Warrant to direct the Exchequer to order the Bank of England to open a credit in its books for the sum specified in the Warrant, to be at the disposal of the Paymaster, whose duty it is to make payments for the department or office on whose estimate the sum has been issued.

8. Each Warrant to be drawn in the same form, for every department or office of expenditure.

9. All Warrants to be sent to the Exchequer before a fixed day in each month.

10. An abstract of each Warrant to be registered in the Warrant division at the Treasury, in a book to be kept for that purpose.

Regulations suggested for the Exchequer.

95.—The following are the regulations we recommend to be established at the Exchequer with respect to the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants:

1. An abstract of each Royal Order to be registered in a book to be kept for that purpose.

2. An abstract also of each Treasury Warrant to be registered.

3. The Exchequer to examine each Warrant, and the estimate annexed to it, with reference to the grants made by Parliament.

4. The Exchequer, having ascertained the legality of the Warrant, to order, before the last day of each month, the Bank of England to open the credit directed by the Warrant.*

Treasury to ascertain monthly the state of each Grant.

96.—If these regulations be established, the Treasury will be able to ascertain from month to month how much of each grant of Parliament is exhausted, and how much remains to be expended. It will know whether each department or office of expenditure disposes of the public money according to legal authority; and the Exchequer will also be able to prevent any appropriation of the public money, except according to the directions of Parliament.

97.—We have, as yet, only taken into consideration those functions of the Exchequer which relate to the receipt and issue of the public money.

The Exchequer is at present a Pay office.

98.—But, in addition to these duties, the Exchequer is itself a paymaster to a considerable amount. It appears by an account contained in the documents of the Commission of 1830, that payments were made in 1829, at the Exchequer, of salaries, pensions and annuities to 3,530 persons.†

There were paid in Salaries and Allowances - - -	£. 588,785. 13. 3¾.
Pensions - - - - - -	283,707. 10. 6.
And it appears by a Return from the Exchequer, that the amount of annuities and tontines paid in the same year at the Exchequer, was‡ - - - - -	24,161. 10. 10.

All payments should be made in one office.

99.—In order to secure the benefits of a complete and uniform system of administration and of accounts, it is essential that payments to individual claimants for civil purposes should be conducted in one office, and on the same plan. It will therefore be expedient to remove from the Exchequer the payment of salaries, pensions and annuities with which it is now charged, directing them in future to be paid at the Treasury, where payments to a large amount, of the same description, are now made. The sum at present granted for Civil Contingencies is issued by the Exchequer on account to an agent. This agent belongs to the Treasury Department, and pays each individual who has a claim under this grant. Up to the year 1826, the Exchequer was charged with making these payments to individuals, as

* See Appendix (E.) p. 33.

† Appendix (U.) p. 146. ‡ Appendix (N.) p. 42.

Exchequer Report.

as it is now charged with the payment of certain salaries, pensions and annuities; but the new practice was introduced as one much more convenient to the parties entitled to receive the money voted for Civil Contingencies, and as affording equal securities for the public interest. The experiment has proved successful; and it is one which, in our opinion, should be extended to the transfer from the Exchequer to the Treasury of all payments of this description to individual creditors of the public; and in this way the functions of the Exchequer will be confined, as we think they ought to be confined, with respect to the application of the public money in its custody, to giving credits only, under the authority of the Crown, in pursuance of the directions of the Treasury.

Payments should be transferred to the Treasury.

100.—At present, all persons who have monies to receive at the Exchequer, and who are unacquainted with its usages, experience great difficulty in obtaining the necessary instruments from the Treasury; and on application at the Exchequer, a delay of three or four days is frequently experienced in passing the instruments through the offices.*

101.—In recommending to your Lordships that the salaries, pensions and annuities which are paid at the Exchequer, should be transferred in future for payment to the Treasury, we do not mean to propose that this business should be placed under the management of an individual in the Treasury Department, as was the case when in 1826 the payments of the Civil Contingencies were so transferred; but we are of opinion a very important principle in managing the expenditure of the public money (which we shall on a future occasion more fully develope) should be applied in this case, viz., that the business of examining a claim to payment, and of making that payment, should be in distinct and separate hands. We propose, therefore, that on the removal of the payment of salaries, &c. from the Exchequer to the Treasury, a chief clerk, with assistants, should be appointed to receive and examine all claims for payment, and to issue an order for each payment on a paymaster to be appointed for making these payments, each such order to be drawn according to a prescribed and uniform model, and when countersigned by the Paymaster, to be made payable at the Bank of England; the funds to be provided at the Bank of England for these purposes by estimates and credits, in the same way as we have already proposed for all offices of expenditure.

Treasury should prepare and issue Exchequer Bills.

102.—To reduce and simplify the business of the Exchequer still further, we recommend that the management of Exchequer bills be also transferred to the Treasury. As in the case of salaries, &c., the business of preparing and of issuing Exchequer bills should be separated from that of paying them. The Paymaster should have credits given to him at the Bank of England by the Exchequer, under Treasury warrants, for their discharge. To prevent the issue of any Exchequer bills beyond the amount authorized by Parliament, it should be provided that every such bill be countersigned at the Exchequer before it can obtain a legal currency.

Exchequer Fees should be abolished.

103.—We recommend, as an additional means of disembarrassing the Exchequer of useless and complicated duties, the immediate abolition of fees. Not only the Exchequer, but every department of the public service would be greatly benefited by their total suppression. Mr. Barton, one of the principal clerks of the Exchequer, very correctly observes, "The impropriety, if not absurdity, of issuing at any time a larger portion of the public money than is requisite for the public service, with the view of its being paid back to the public purse after a given interval (and after being exposed in the meantime to the risks of accidents in the hands of individuals) might strongly be urged in support of this proposition."† Independently of this obvious objection, much time and labour must be wasted in calculating and receiving the amounts.

Imprest Rolls, &c. should be abolished.

104.—The preparation of the half-yearly Imprest Rolls should also be abolished. "It would farther seem," says Mr. Ellis, "that the preparation of half-yearly Imprest Rolls for the King's Remembrancer is unnecessary, as the entire business of the audit of Public Accountants might be left with the Auditors of Public Accounts."‡ And on similar grounds, "the examination and certification of the accounts of Receivers," and other "Accountants," preparatory to passing the same before the Auditors of Public Accounts, should be discontinued at the Exchequer.

Exchequer moneys should form one fund.

105.—We can see no sufficient reason for continuing the practice of making particular taxes and portions of taxes subject to particular charges or payments. A change in this respect will still further relieve the Exchequer from part of the unnecessary complication which at present embarrasses its operations. Whatever grounds may have formerly existed for this usage, they must have long ceased, and all distinctions of this description should cease with them. We feel no hesitation in proposing that the whole proceeds of the taxes, and of the other sources of the public revenue, when in the custody of the Exchequer, should form one fund, liable to the whole charge of the public expenditure. No person can seriously entertain the opinion that the public creditor derives the least additional security from the declaration that part of the revenue is peculiarly applicable to the payment of his dividends; and, on the other hand, of all classes in the community, he is most interested in the introduction of any improvement that can effect simplicity, accuracy and security in the administration and application of the public revenue.

Functions of the new Exchequer.

106.—If, then, the several measures which we have thus recommended to your Lordships for the simplification and improvement of this system be adopted, the functions of the Exchequer, which will remain in all their integrity, will be, 1st, That of the receipt and safe custody custody of the public treasure; 2dly, That of control over the Crown and its Ministers; and 3dly, That of record; for the efficient discharge of all which attributes it has been our primary object to provide complete security.

* See Evidence of Mr. Vernon, Appendix, p. 159.

† Appendix, p. 132. ‡ Appendix, p. 46.

Exchequer Report.

System of Record and Account.

107.—We now proceed, in the further discharge of our duty, to the consideration of what books it will be necessary to introduce in order to establish an intelligible, plain and correct system of record and account at the Exchequer. We recommend that these books should be under the management of two departments, one of Record, and the other of Accounts. In the department of Record, all the Royal Orders for directing credits to be given for the service of the several public departments should be entered in an abstract form, and in the same way all the monthly and other Treasury Warrants for giving credits at the Bank of England. It should also record all Parliamentary grants and Acts of Parliament connected with the expenditure of the public money. The business of record should have connected with it, the duty of examining the legality of every order which is sent to the Exchequer, and of comparing all the special warrants of the Treasury with the authority given by the Royal Order; and it should have the power of stopping credits if not legal.

Record.

Accounts to be kept by Double Entry.

108.—The Department of Accounts would have to register, in a business-like form, on the double-entry plan, all the facts of receipt and credit as they occur. A cash-book should be kept, in which all the revenue specification papers, or other analogous documents, of payments made into the Bank of England for account of the Exchequer, should be chronologically and daily entered, such specification papers or other documents having been duly compared with the daily statement of receipts sent by the Bank to the Exchequer.

Cash Warrants.

109.—This department will also be required to enter, in regular order, an abstract of cash warrants sent by the Treasury to the Exchequer, showing the date, service and amount, and the particulars of the credits given in conformity thereto.

Periodical Accounts to be sent to the Treasury,

110.—Accounts of the same kind as those which are now sent weekly, quarterly and annually, by the Exchequer to the Treasury, should be made up and sent there, with such improvements as the proposed alterations in the Exchequer system may suggest.* The weekly certificate now employed may perhaps be made hereafter applicable to the purpose of enabling the Treasury to keep its journal and ledger account of the revenue concurrently with the Exchequer.

and to the Audit Office.

111.—Quarterly accounts of all credits given by the Exchequer, in pursuance of Treasury Warrants, should be sent to the Audit Office.

Journal and Ledger.

112.—The books which we have proposed to be kept, will contain the elementary matter out of which the transfers to the journal and ledger are to be made. The journal should contain the entries, extracted from these books, of all receipts of revenue, the amounts of royal annual orders, and the monthly or other credits given to the several paymasters on the Treasury Warrants, arranged in the manner adopted by merchants, preparatory to their entry in the ledger, where the facts should be collected, under a prescribed series of heads, from the journal by the double-entry system, and be posted from day to day according to the mercantile usage. The ledger would constantly show, in their most concentrated form, the balances at the disposal of the Exchequer at the Bank of England, the gross receipts from the different sources of public revenue under their particular heads, the credits ordered to be given by the Treasury, and the balances remaining to be disposed of by the different departments. The ledger should be balanced monthly; and, at the end of the year, it will afford the means of making up an accurate account: 1st. Of all the public revenue of the year, showing from what sources it has been derived; and, 2dly. Of all the money for which credits have been given by the Exchequer at the Bank of England towards the payment of the public expenses of the year, showing to what services it has been applied.

Ledger should be balanced monthly.

Annual Accounts.

Credits for different years to be kept distinct.

113.—With the view of accomplishing a complete settlement of the annual accounts, and of preventing all obscurity or mistake, arising from the mixing of the amount of credits for the service of one year, with the amount of credits for the service of another year, we propose that the Exchequer shall cease to give credits on the 1st of October of each year, for money voted in the year ending with the preceding 31st of December, and that all credits not made use of by a day to be fixed, shall be cancelled, and that the funds not applied shall revert again to the disposal of Parliament.

Credits not applied to be cancelled after nine months.

Reasons for recommending the Commercial system of Book-keeping.

114.—As we have not the slightest hesitation in advising the employment of the commercial system of book-keeping, in its purest and most simple form, in all the public departments, and as we consider its application as forming the necessary groundwork of any really important improvement, we shall refer, somewhat in detail, to the reasons which have induced us to recommend it so decidedly and urgently to the approbation of your Lordships.

Merits of the Double Entry system.

115.—The peculiar excellency of what is denominated the mercantile system of book-keeping by double entry, consists in the facility with which it embraces accounts, however complex, various and extensive; giving to all their differences of detail a unity of result, and concentrating them at last in the most condensed shape, while it enables the examiner to trace them without difficulty to their remotest ramifications. In the initiatory or auxiliary books of account, a correct system will admit of all the modifications suited to the particular service; but as soon as the principal or double-entry books take possession of the facts of an account, however intricate and varied, they become subjected to its general and harmonious law.

---

* For a description of these Accounts, see Appendix, p. 80.

Exchequer Report.

law. Its machinery is employed to obtain an ultimate balance sheet, which will present, in a concise, correct and intelligible form, all the centralized facts of receipt on the one side, and of expenditure on the other, under their special heads. Of the efficiency of this system, the trading world, in its infinite variety of commerce and concerns, gives unanimous evidence. Into every well-regulated manufactory, into every extensive mercantile establishment in every part of the civilized world, it has gradually but peremptorily forced its way. The revenues of no Government have been safely administered, the accounts of no Government have been intelligibly kept, the business of no Government has been promptly and satisfactorily despatched until the commercial system has been introduced, with its order and uniformity, into the different departments. Several of the Governments of Europe have adopted this method after repeated and vain attempts to accommodate by other means the dissimilar usages of their various public offices to one general system; and there is no instance of any Government having abandoned the mercantile practice after having once employed it; on the contrary, every Government that has introduced it has borne testimony to its adaptation to national concerns, and its complete efficiency for all fiscal and financial operations and records; it is the system adopted by the East India Company, both at home and in their dependencies abroad, and we need only refer to Mr. Bowring's Report on the Public Accounts of France for irresistible proofs of its value, practicability, comprehensiveness, clearness and efficiency. Indeed it appears from his statement, that a succession of Ministers of Finance have borne unanimous and cordial testimony to the excellent workings of the commercial system of accounts in all the departments of Government; that the objections originally suggested against it, by persons who have not attentively considered its bearings, on the grounds of its not being adapted to public official accounts, have all given way before the evidence of its efficiency and superiority. In the words of Count Chabrol (the late Minister of Finance), "Simplicity and rapidity in the progress of the public accounts have been accompanied with clearness and regularity of result; incompleteness and delay have been succeeded by publicity and promptitude."*

Merits of the Double Entry system of accounts.

Excellent working of the system in France.

Its security.

116.—The system of accounts as adopted in France has afforded perfect security against default and dilapidation; it has brought with it savings of expense to the amount of several millions sterling per annum; it has diminished the labours and anxieties of the public servants, and has again and again been eulogised, after elaborate and detailed examination by statesmen of all parties in both Houses of the French legislature. Opposed to such facts, and to the admitted experience of the whole commercial world, we do not conceive the opinions hostile to this system of accounts have any considerable weight.

Treasury Minute of 14 July 1829, recognizes the plan of Double Entry.

117.—The late Board of Treasury, in their Minute of the 14th July 1829, recognize the plan of double entry, as the principle proper to be adopted, and state the propriety of substituting, for the numerous account books now in use, a regular cash-book, journal and ledger, as the foundation of a system of book-keeping upon the plan of double entry; and again they declare "that a thorough knowledge of book-keeping by double entry is, above all, indispensable to the success of the new measures." †

Particulars should be recorded in auxiliary books; results in the ledger.

118.—This is indeed the great principle of the best commercial accounts. And though in the auxiliary books of merchants, there are many varieties suited to their different concerns, there is no essential difference in the way in which all intelligent merchants keep their double-entry journal and ledger. The ledger invariably represents concentrated and not diffuse accounts; it is, in a word, the amalgamation of similar facts under their different heads; it is the volume of results, and not of particulars; it is, in fact, the tabular centralization of all the various auxiliary books, and the final instrument of the balance sheet. The plan of double entry is but the means of collecting in the ledger the particular facts scattered through the elementary books in which they are recorded. A proper system of accounts will arrange all details in its progress; but while it arranges, it condenses at every step till it brings all its topics under their principal and primary heads in the pages of the ledger; and when a reference is made from it to the journal and auxiliary books, it will readily supply all details with the greatest facility and accuracy.

The system of Double Entry is the foundation of all improvement.

119.—We have said thus much in recommendation of this system, from the strong conviction we entertain that its general adoption in the public departments is the great, prominent, all-important improvement, without which, every other will be necessarily and essentially imperfect. This system, properly understood, leaves nothing to the caprice of the accountant; it subjects all the elements of an account to an undeviating, self-corrective operation, the result of which is, as we have said, their centralization under their appropriate heads. It provides against all confusion between contingent and positive claims—between payments ordered and payments made; in a word, compels the grouping together of all facts which are of a similar or homogeneous character.

The present system.

120.—In proposing to your Lordships these extensive changes, we beg to refer to the following observations of the Clerk of the Pells, who says, that "although the accuracy attained by the ancient regulations and practice of the Exchequer be indisputable, and although the primâ facie argument in favour of a system thus effecting its objects has, on former occasions of inquiry, prevailed so far as to prevent the adoption of any material alteration, yet, as

---

* Rapport au Roi sur l'Administration des Finances. Mai 1830. p. 5.

† Parl. Papers, 1831. No. 50. p. 18.

Exchequer Report.

Increase in business and expense.

as the perfection of the system rests upon the multiplication of checks, and the consequent diminution of individual responsibility, it is not without objections sufficiently apparent, and has an obvious tendency to increase the amount of business, together with the expenditure incurred in its discharge;"* and although it may appear that the existing system has provided for the safe custody of the public money, the security against fraud, according to the evidence given before the Commission of 1830, will be found to depend, not only on its ancient forms and usages, but to a great degree on the respectability and good conduct of the individuals who are employed to fill the situations of clerks in the Tellers' offices.

Mr. Wilde's evidence as to checks upon receipt of money.

121.—The following is the evidence of Mr. Wilde, who has been a clerk in Lord Bathurst's office for nearly thirty years:

122.—" Has the Teller's clerk no means of falsifying the entry of the payment in his books, so as at the close of the day to make it apparently agree with the improper payment made by the Bank clerk?—It is difficult to prevent a man, who is placed in an office of trust, from committing a fraud, if he is disposed to do so; but if a Teller's clerk were to commit a fraud, it must be discovered in the course of a very short period of time.

123.—" In point of fact, how many clerks are usually in attendance during the time of making payments?—Four.

124.—" Have they such a check upon each other's proceedings, that if any thing were done incorrectly by one, it must be discovered by the other?—The check I have alluded to, would certainly discover in a very short period of time any fraud that had been committed by any one of the clerks.

125.—" That check to which you alluded is the general system described in the return made to the Commissioners?—It is. The great security, however, against the commission of fraud, is the respectability of the individuals who are appointed to fill the situation of clerks in the Tellers' offices, because the temptation is certainly greater in those offices than in almost any other, the money being more at the command of the clerks.

126.—" In what respect?—The money is in the first instance frequently paid into his hands; it is always supposed to be so, though, for the convenience of business, it is generally received by the Bank clerk.

127.—" If it is actually received by the Bank clerk, in what way is it at the disposal of the Teller's clerk?—At the close of the day the Bank clerk sends in, to be locked up in the Teller's chest, the money which he has received in the course of the day; that money is for a time in the custody of the Teller's clerk.

128.—" Is it not in the chest?—Not until it is locked up.

129.—" What interval takes place between the handing it over to him, and the locking up?—Sometimes a very considerable one, an hour or two, and sometimes a very few minutes.

130.—" What is the reason for that interval?—The chest cannot be opened without the Clerk of the Pells and the Auditor attend, they having the custody of two of the keys; till they come the money remains in the possession of the Teller's clerks.

131.—" Does it remain in the possession of one, or of the clerks jointly?—Of the clerks jointly, in the office.

132.—" Where do they deposit it; have they any chest?—No; it is merely placed upon their desks.

133.—" Is it frequently left in the custody of a single clerk?—It may so happen.

134.—" So that it may frequently happen that a single clerk remains in the possession of a considerable treasure during the interval between the departure of the Bank clerk and the arrival of the proper officers to open the public chest?—It may so.

135—" And you consider that it is a proof of the respectability and integrity of the clerks of the Tellers, that that great temptation has not led to depredation?—I have never heard of any instance having occurred in the Teller's office of any public money having been misappropriated by any of the clerks. There are other sums of money which the senior clerk has the sole custody of; for instance, the fees which have been detained from persons receiving money at the Exchequer; these fees sometimes amount to a very considerable sum, which is entirely in his possession till paid over by him at the close of the quarter.

136.—" In what sense may that be said to be in his possession; is it in his possession by rule and regulation, with directions to him in what way to dispose of it, or is it only incidentally in his possession till the proper person takes charge of it?—It is in his possession from the moment it has been detained by him, until paid over at the close of the quarter.

137.—" To what amount may that occasionally go?—I have known it as high as 20,000 l.

138.—" Remaining in the hands of one of the clerks of the Tellers from some period in a quarter, until the close of it?—Yes.

139.—" Has no regulation been adopted with respect to that money, to give security to the custody of it?—Each clerk is under security to his deputy Teller.

140.—" To what amount may the clerks be under such security, to whom you have now alluded?—Not to the extent of the sum which they have sometimes had in their custody.

141.—" It is a case, then, of entire confidence on the part of the Teller towards his clerk?—Certainly it is. The money to which I have alluded is not public money; it consisted of fees which had been paid by individuals, and belonged to the Tellers. At the time when this large sum was in the custody of the Tellers' clerks, there were two unregulated Tellers, and the amount of fees was much greater then than it is at present.

142.—" That

* Appendix, p. 48.

142.—" That is no longer the case with respect to any fees which exist, upon the part of the public, and which are paid over to the Receiver of Fees?—No.

143.—" It only exists, then, with respect to the office of Lord Camden, if at all?—Exactly so; it has reference to what formerly existed.

144.—" Upon the whole, you conceive that it is due to the gentlemen of the Exchequer to state, that it is a proof of their integrity and correctness, that no depredations have ever been committed?—I do; for I am not aware of any depredation ever having taken place in the Teller's office.

145.—" What amount of money do you suppose may remain in the hands of the clerks, in the manner you have described, between the close of the business of the Exchequer and the depositing in the chest?—That depends upon the amount of the sum which has been received that day, the whole of which may be in his custody.

146.—" Is it not sometimes a large amount?—I have known it exceed 1,000,000 l.

147.—" In what shape does that money exist?—At present it exists in Bank notes.

148.—" Is it usually in Bank notes, such as would be easily available, or in cancelled notes, or in other descriptions of paper representing money?—Sums exceeding 10,000 l. are in what are called special notes.

149.—" Which special notes would not be available to any party committing the crime of purloining them?—Certainly not.

150.—" To that extent, therefore, with respect to the monies existing in that form, the temptation to the clerk is diminished?—It is.

151.—" That temptation only applies to that portion of the amount which is in sums under 10,000 l.?—It does; all sums below 10,000 l. are in common negotiable Bank of England notes.

152.—" So that a large sum would be available in the case of a clerk disposed to commit a depredation?—Certainly it would."*

153.—And Mr. Penwarne says, " By having but one Teller, or by the officers of the Bank of England attending at the Exchequer, receiving and paying the monies, as in fact they now do, the business would be transacted with equal if not greater security than it is at present, rendering unnecessary the whole of the accounts now kept by the Tellers, and many of those in the offices of the Auditor and the Clerk of the Pells.†

The payment of the public monies to the Bank more secure.

154.—The proposed simplification of the manner of receipt, by requiring the payment of all public monies into the Bank of England to the account of the Exchequer, will remove no one real security, while it will get rid of many unnecessary and cumbrous, if not dangerous transfers. So again with respect to the due security for the appropriation of any sum to the public service, that security will not be diminished, but be very considerably increased by the discontinuance of the practice of making issues to be placed under the custody of accountants, as it also will by the adoption of the plan proposed of giving credits at the Bank of England, instead of making such issues.

The Exchequer has retained ancient practices no longer applicable.

155.—The present system of the Exchequer had its origin in, and has retained many of the characteristics of, a period when the existing facilities and securities for the transfer of money were wholly or almost wholly unknown; when banks, bank credits, bank cheques and bank notes, had no existence, and when the whole system of pecuniary intercourse was rude and imperfect. Multiplied checks were needful at a time when all payments were made in coin by weight and tale; but these very checks become embarrassing, as well as useless, when the operations have changed their character. In its earlier history, the Exchequer sometimes received coin by weight, and at other times by counting (tale); and it had its departments both for melting and assaying, when the coin delivered was believed to be alloyed beneath the legal standard. The Roman numerals, uncouth, obscure and inconvenient as they are, and inapplicable to the commonest purposes of arithmetical calculation, were the usual formulas of abbreviation in the Norman period, and were consequently employed at the Exchequer, though the Exchequer is probably the only establishment in the civilized world that still retains them in preference to the simple and intelligible Arabic numerals, into which, in fact, every document is now translated in the Exchequer books.‡ In the same way much of the phraseology which is still retained shows how little suited to the present period are many of its ancient forms. The imprests, for example, were loans to individuals, for which they were accountable to the King, being in the Latin warrants

---

* See Appendix, p. 173, et seq. † See Appendix, p. 41.

‡ The Commissioners of Accounts of 1782 thus express themselves as to the Forms then and still in use at the Exchequer:

" As to the Forms employed:

" An account in the Exchequer form is in English, but contains some Latin terms. The Imprest Roll is all written in an abridgment of the Latin language. The sums in both are expressed in characters that are in general corruptions of the old text, and are in use nowhere that we can find but in the Exchequer; characters very liable to mistakes, inconvenient and troublesome, even to the officers themselves. The sums so expressed cannot be cast up. Most of the accounts in the Exchequer are made up twice; first in common figures, that they may be added together; and then turned into Latin, and the sums entered in the Exchequer figures; and that the high numbers in a detailed account may be understood, they are written in common figures under the characters. They are defective, having no characters to express high numbers, as millions; they are unintelligible to the persons either receiving or having other money transactions at the Exchequer."—Journals, 1782. 456.

Appendix, No. 1.

Exchequer Report.

warrants called sums de præstito, or, in the Norman French, in prest (whence imprest), that is, in loan, or, as they are sometimes called, an accommodatum, to the parties. Again, the ancient judicial functions of the Court of Exchequer gave to the terms which it employed a meaning which they no longer convey, while the changes in the character of all pecuniary transactions have made other terms obsolete and inapplicable. As respects the forms of receipt and issue, every process remains now nearly the same as when coin alone was current; the transactions, as at present conducted between the Bank and the Exchequer, the Tellers' chests, the mode of entering and vouching payments, the authorities for issues, are complexities which the facilities offered by banking may completely and advantageously supersede. In a quotation repeated by Mr. Barton, from the Report of Commissioners of Accounts in 1782, it was well remarked, "that if the alterations of the terms have taken away the necessity of the ancient formularies upon which the present mode of transacting business is founded, it is reasonable the superstructure should fall with it."

New establishment proposed.

156.—If the proposed arrangements be adopted, the business of the new Exchequer will be so much simplified and diminished, that it would be able to exercise all its functions with a very small establishment. It appears to us that an office consisting of the following persons would be quite competent to the discharge of every requisite duty:

	£.	Per Annum. £.
One Comptroller-general of the Exchequer - -	- -	2,000
One Deputy Comptroller-general - - -	1,000
One Chief Clerk - - - - £. 800
Two Sub-Clerks, at £. 200 - - - 400
Two Auxiliary Clerks, at £. 120 - - 240
Two Sub-Auxiliary Clerks, at £. 80 - 160
	1,600
		2,600
	£.	4,600*

Present establishment.

157.—The number of persons now employed in the Exchequer in the three departments of the Auditors, the Clerk of the Pells, and the Tellers, is 68, and the expense of the whole is - - - - - - - - - - - - - - £. 44,489. 9. 4.

The details are as follow:

Persons.	Offices.	Salaries.
28 - -	Auditors' Office - - - -	£. 14,407 - -
16 - -	Pells Office - - - - -	7,157 10 -
18 - -	Three Tellers' Offices - - -	17,124 19 4
		38,689 9 4
6 - -	Lord Camden's Office - - -	5,800 - -
68		£. 44,489 9 4

Considerable saving.

158.—The economy to the public, therefore, when the new system is in operation, will be very considerable. But in proposing these changes in the establishment of the Exchequer, we trust it will not be supposed we mean to recommend that so many officers should be reduced, without due consideration of their past services and present claims. We hope that none will suffer in their pecuniary circumstances, for we believe that the most certain as well as the most satisfactory means of introducing great changes in the public establishments with a view to economy, will be found to consist in as little interference as possible with the just claims of individuals. We are of opinion that the chief officer of the Exchequer should hold his office for life, and to secure a more effectual control than has hitherto existed over the application of the public money, we suggest that this officer should be required to prepare for Parliament, before the 15th day of January in each year, an annual account of all monies received, and of all credits ordered by the Exchequer during the previous year: and we further recommend that a law be passed constituting a Commission of persons independent of the Crown, and to be chosen annually by the House of Commons, to examine this account, and to report their opinion upon it before the annual budget is voted.

An annual Commission to examine accounts recommended.

A good system of accounts the best security.

159.—At the same time that we propose this new security for the faithful appropriation of the public money, we beg to repeat that the best security will be obtained in such a system of public accounts as is founded on the principles we have suggested.

We think that no holidays should be allowed at the Exchequer, except such as are kept at at other public offices, and that the hours of attendance should be subject to regulations similar to those adopted by other departments. Exchequer Report.

* The duties of the different officers of the new Exchequer will be found detailed in Appendix (O.) p. 42.

160.—We have not hesitated in recommending to your Lordships changes so important as those we have suggested, believing, as we do, that they are demanded by the exigencies of the case, and being aware how little the ancient practices of the Exchequer have been modified by, or moulded to, the great improvements which have been introduced by experience into all financial concerns. But while we are strongly persuaded that very essential alterations are required, we have proceeded at every step of our progress with the utmost caution, and the strongest desire and determination to strengthen every real and constitutional security for the public treasure. Of the gravity and responsibility of the duties we have had to discharge, we are most sensible, and our anxiety has been increased by the consideration, that in this our first Report we have had to lay down some of those important principles which must be applied, as we proceed, to all the branches of the public service. While we have had to follow up many of the views of Commissioners who have preceded us in this part of the field of inquiry, we have also derived encouragement from the sanction of their recorded opinions, feeling with them the necessity of "recommending the abolition of ancient practices, which were thought by our ancestors absolutely necessary for the protection of the King's Revenue," and of "suggesting alterations opposed to the opinion of past ages,"* when those practices are become no longer applicable to the present state of things, and those alterations are peremptorily demanded by a due regard to the public interest and to the charge entrusted to us. Ancient practices of the Exchequer have not yielded to modern improvements.

In another Report we shall suggest to your Lordships such plans for the payment of the public expenses as appear to us necessary to be adopted, in consequence of the alterations we have brought under your consideration respecting the receipts and issues of the public money. Future Report as to payment of public expenses.

We have, &c.

(signed) H. Parnell.
J. Russell.
J. R. G. Graham.
James Kempt.
C. Poulett Thomson.
F. T. Baring.
Edward Ellice.

War Office, 8 October 1831.

COPY of Treasury Minute, dated 26th September 1834, for the Regulation of the Office of the Receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer.

1.—My Lords have under their consideration the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, intituled, "An Act to regulate the Office of the Receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster," in order that my Lords may issue such direction to the several Departments and Public Offices, and promulgate such regulations for their government in the management of the business conducted by them respectively, as will be necessary to enable them to carry on the Public Service after the 10th October next, when the provisions of the Act will come into operation. Exchequer Regulation Minute.

2.—My Lords have already by their Minute of the 19th instant fixed the establishment of the office of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and will immediately proceed to determine upon the establishment which will be necessary to enable the Paymaster, who will be appointed, under the authority of the Act, to discharge the important duties which will be confided to him.

3.—The 8th section of the Act requires that all monies, whether cash or otherwise, which may be in the chests or keeping of the Tellers of the Exchequer, shall be paid on the morning of the 11th October next into the Bank of England, to an account to be opened in the books of the Bank, to be called "The Account of His Majesty's Exchequer."

4.—According to the existing law, the monies for which each Teller is responsible are deposited in a chest in his office under three locks, the keys of one of which are in the possession of the Auditor, of one in that of the Clerk of the Pells, and of the other in that of the Teller. It appears therefore to my Lords, that the most convenient mode of making the payment on the morning of the 11th October will be, that some person should be deputed by the Bank to receive such monies at the Exchequer on account of the Bank, in the presence of the Auditor, the Clerk of the Pells and the Teller, or of the proper officers of their respective departments.

5.—Write to the Governor and Deputy-governor of the Bank, and communicate to them the request of my Lords, that they will receive payment of the monies which may be in the chests

* Report of the Commissioners appointed in 1824 to inquire into certain offices of the Exchequer. Papers of Committee of Finance of 1828, No. 27.

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

chests of the four Tellers of the Exchequer on the morning of the 11th October, in the manner herein suggested, and state that my Lords will issue the necessary directions to the Auditor, the Clerk of the Pells, and the four Tellers of the Exchequer.

6.—Let a letter be written accordingly to each of those departments, conveying to them the desire of my Lords that the payment to the Bank to the account of His Majesty's Exchequer on the 11th October of the monies which may then be in the chests of the Tellers, may be made in the manner pointed out in this minute, and at the same time state to the Tellers that when such payments shall have been made, and the statements of the particulars of such payments shall be delivered to the Comptroller-general, and transmitted to my Lords, as prescribed by the Act, it appears to this Board that their books should be closed and delivered, together with any public documents and any public property that may be in their custody, to the Comptroller of the Exchequer, and that the duties of the four Tellers will then be at an end, and that their functions as officers of the public will have ceased.

7.—My Lords will, on the receipt of the statements of the particulars of the monies paid by the Tellers to the Bank, issue the necessary authority and directions to the Comptroller of the Exchequer to apply to the services to which they are applicable such portions of the monies so paid over to the Bank as shall appear to have been specifically appropriated.

8.—Write to the Auditor of the Exchequer and to the Clerk of the Pells, and acquaint them respectively, that as His Majesty has appointed the Right Honourable Sir John Newport, Baronet, to be the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and as the Letters Patent will be in force on the 11th October next, it appears to my Lords that the functions and duties of the Auditor and of the Clerk of the Pells will cease on that day immediately after the payment of the monies in the Tellers' chests shall have been made to the Bank in the manner prescribed in this minute, and the Auditor and Clerk of the Pells shall respectively have delivered over to the Comptroller the whole of the books, records, deeds, papers, documents and vouchers whatsoever relating to the receipt of the Exchequer, and all standard weights and measures, and standard pieces of gold, silver, and copper, and all other articles of public property, except monies and securities for money which shall be in their custody, power or control, or in that of any of their officers, according to the directions of the Act, and that my Lords request they will govern themselves accordingly.

9.—Write to the Comptroller of the Exchequer to apprize him of the directions given to the Auditor of the Exchequer, to the Clerk of the Pells, and to the four Tellers, for his information and government.

10.—My Lords now proceed to consider what instructions it is necessary to issue to the several great departments of receipt with respect to the mode in which their accounts shall be kept with the Bank, and the revenue be transferred from the accounts of the several Receivers-general to the account of the Exchequer.

11.—In these several departments the public service is now conducted with regularity and despatch, under the existing arrangements; but it appears to my Lords to be advisable to introduce some further regulations for the sake of procuring as much uniformity of system throughout the whole as the nature of the service will admit, and for the purpose of affording additional facilities for the transaction of the public business, at the same time that the security of the public will be increased.

12.—From the manner in which the payments are now made for the public service in each of the departments of the Customs, Excise, Stamps and Taxes out of the revenue in its progress to the Bank, and from the manner in which the accounts are kept with the Bank, the Bank account is not a record, as my Lords conceive that it should be, of the whole of the receipts and payments of the several Receivers-general, the books of the Bank showing, of course, that part of the receipt only which has passed through the Bank. The practice in the department of the Post-office is different; the whole of the receipts and payments of the Receiver-general of that revenue are passed through his account with the Bank, and the account with the Bank is therefore in this case such a record as my Lords are desirous that it should be in the case of all the departments of the Revenue. My Lords are aware that considerable public inconvenience would arise in each of these departments if they were prohibited from making payments due to parties, under the authority of Acts of Parliament and of existing regulations, out of the revenue as it comes into their hands from day to day; that a very large number of such payments are necessarily made in very small sums, for which checks could not be drawn on the Bank, and that if they were enjoined to pay into the Bank the whole receipt, and were empowered to draw for such sums from time to time as might on estimate be necessary for the payments of the day, to be deposited in the Receivers' chests, that risk of loss would be incurred which does not now exist; and also that it would probably be necessary in each department to keep a larger balance in the hands of the Receiver-general to meet possible demands than would perhaps be usually required; my Lords do not, therefore, propose to interfere with the existing regulations in that respect, but will introduce such further regulations as they consider will attain the object they have in view, viz., that the Bank-book of each Receiver-general shall be such a complete record of his pecuniary transactions of receipt and expenditure as will afford additional facilities in the check and examination of his accounts when submitted to the Auditors.

13.—In

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

13.—In the department of the Customs, the receipt of the revenue closes at three o'clock in the afternoon, and between that hour and five o'clock, the balance of the receipts of the day, beyond the payments, having been correctly ascertained and checked, the whole of that balance, except a small fixed amount (retained to meet the early payments of the following day), together with any accepted bills ready for payment to the Bank, are deposited in the Bank, and written in to the account of the proper officers of the Customs.

14.—The receipt at the Excise Office continues to a later hour, and frequently until five o'clock, or occasionally later. It is for the convenience of the public that the office is so kept open, and it is not possible therefore in this department to follow the same rule as that which governs the Customs. Under the Acts of Parliament by which the office of the Receiver-general of the Excise has hitherto been controlled, no power was vested in the Receiver-general to draw from his account at the Bank any monies whatever for any service except for payment to the Exchequer. The necessary consequence has been, that in order to meet possible charges, the Receiver-general has been compelled to retain in his chest larger sums than would have been wanted, had a power been given to him to draw, under proper regulation and control, for such sums as the public service might require. It seems to my Lords to be highly expedient, and for the advantage of the public service, that such a power should be vested in the Receiver-general of Excise, to be exercised under such check and control, and subject to such regulations, as ensure in the other departments that nothing whatever is drawn for beyond what the public service absolutely requires. Under such an arrangement the whole of the Excise receipts at the chief office, beyond the sums paid from day to day out of such receipts, may always be paid over to the Bank without keeping any reserve in the chest of the Receiver-general. The late hour, however, to which the Excise receipt is kept open, as before stated, for the convenience of the public, will prevent the possibility of the entire receipt of the day from being paid over on that same day, and provision must be made, therefore, for the payment to the Bank of the receipts of the day up to a given hour, as near the close of business as practicable, so that the amount left in the Receiver-general's chest for payment to the Bank on the following morning may be as small as possible. At present the Receiver-general of Excise pays to his account at the Bank from time to time during the day such sums as are ready for payment, but is under the necessity, as already explained, of making always a considerable reserve under the authority of the Acts by which the office has heretofore been conducted. The Receiver-general was empowered to carry that reserve to the amount of 30,000*l.*: it might be extended by the authority of the Commissioners of Excise to 50,000*l.*; and with the authority of this Board to any larger amount that might be deemed necessary. It is true that in actual practice no such sums were reserved in the Receiver-general's chest, and under the regulations now proposed no reservation whatever will be necessary beyond some small sum to make incidental payments.

15.—In the Post Office, as in the Excise, the receipts continue to a late hour; and it is obvious that in that department the receipt must continue long after the Bank is closed. They commence also of necessity at a much earlier hour than in any other department of the Revenue. The payments to the Bank from the Post Office are made twice in the day; the balance of the receipts of the previous day being paid over early in the morning of the following day, together with any of the receipts of the day ready for payment; and the second payment being made before the Bank closes, in order that all available money received subsequently to the firs tpayment should be placed in the Bank without delay.

16.—The only mode in which the payment of the whole daily receipt, less the amount of the payments thereout, could be made to the Bank on the same day, would be by an alteration in the hours of business of the Bank, or by such a change in the hours of business in the Excise and Post Office departments as would be prejudicial to the public service. Some part of their daily receipts must always, therefore, remain unpaid to the Bank until the following morning; and provision must therefore be made for keeping that amount as small as possible, and for ensuring the payment of it to the Bank early on the following morning, in the department of the Excise, in the same manner as such balance is now paid in the department of the Post Office. The deposit for the night being made in both departments into the Receiver's chests, after the exact balance of the receipts and payments of the day shall have been ascertained and settled by the Receiver-general and the proper check officers.

17.—According to the regulations now in force in the department of the Stamps and Taxes, the actual surplus receipts of the day beyond the payments, is ascertained and checked by the proper officers before the business of the day is closed, and the amount is paid at the office of the Stamps and Taxes to clerks of the Bank, who attend there to receive it. In this case, therefore, the check officers of the department are not only satisfied as to the accuracy of the account, but they are also furnished at the same time with the proof of the actual deposit of the money at the Bank of England. As however the additional security obtained in this department is attended with some expense to the public, from a payment to the Bank for discharging the duty of receiving the money at the Stamp Office, my Lords have the arrangement under their consideration with the view of ascertaining whether the like security may not be attained with respect to the payment of the money to the Bank in the other departments without incurring such expense, and will hereafter give their directions upon the subject. Having thus taken a view of the practice followed in the different departments, my Lords proceed to consider the regulations which it will be proper for them to lay down, and they are of opinion that the following regulations may safely and properly be issued for the government of the several Receivers-general in their transactions with the Bank:

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

18.—That the practice which now exists in the departments of the Customs, Excise, Stamps and Taxes, and Post Office, of making payments out of the daily receipts upon proper and sufficient authority, and subject to the checks now in force, shall continue:

19.—That the Receivers-general of each department shall be authorised to issue drafts, payable from their account at the Bank, for the payment of such services as cannot properly be discharged out of the cash receipts of the day:

20.—That no draft drawn by any Receiver-general shall be payable by the Bank, unless countersigned by the proper check officer in each department, the name of such officer being certified to the Bank by the Commissioners of Customs, Excise, Stamps and Taxes, and Postmaster-general, and his signature duly recorded in the Bank books:

21.—That the whole of the public monies of each department in the books of the Bank shall be treated as one fund, and no transfers made therefrom to any separate account for the payment of salaries or charges of management; the effect of raising such a separate fund necessarily being, that a balance which might be paid into the Exchequer account might frequently remain upon the separate account:

22.—That in the departments of the Customs and Stamps and Taxes, the account of receipts shall be made up to the close of the hours of business every day; the balance of cash and of bills ready for payment to the Bank carefully ascertained and checked, and the whole amount paid over to the Bank, together with a draft or drafts, for the amount of the payments made in each department during the day out of the receipts, such drafts being posted in the books of the Bank to the credit as well as to the debit side of the account. By this means the amount of the whole receipt will be exhibited in the Bank books, and specific additional means afforded to those who audit the accounts of the several Receivers-general to check the sums for which they are accountable.

23.—In the departments of the Post Office and Excise, for the reasons above stated, the arrangement must be somewhat different. In those departments it appears to my Lords that payments to the account of the Receiver-general at the Bank may be made, from time to time, in the course of the day as at present, the last payment being made as near to the hour of closing business at the Bank as possible, and consisting of the whole of the balance at that time applicable to such payment.

24.—That when the receipt at each office is closed, the account for the whole day should be made up, and the balance accurately checked and settled; that such balance should be deposited, under proper security, as at present, in the chests of the Receiver-general, and be paid over to the account of the Receiver-general at the Bank the first thing on the following morning, together with a draft or drafts, as in the case of the Customs, and Stamps and Taxes, for the amount of the payments of the preceding day out of the receipts.

25.—By these arrangements it appears to my Lords that every facility will be afforded to the several Revenue departments which can be required, while the whole of the cash transactions of all the Receivers-general will be made to pass regularly through the books of the Bank; and as all the Receivers-general will now have the power of drawing from their general account for such sums as the public service may require, my Lords apprehend that there will no longer be any necessity for retaining constantly in any of their chests any sum beyond the small amount which may be required to discharge petty incidental disbursements. My Lords desire to be informed, by each department, what amount they consider necessary for that purpose.

26.—It remains for my Lords to provide in what manner transfers shall be made from the several Receivers' accounts to the account of the Exchequer. Such payments are now made by the several departments on two days in the week, but it appears to my Lords to be highly expedient the days of payment should be more frequent, in order that the revenue may become available for the public service with as little delay as possible, and they are therefore pleased to direct that such transfer shall, from and after the 11th of October next, and until further orders from this Board, be made on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday in every week, and that when the Bank shall not be open on any one of those days, that such payment shall then be made on the first following day on which it shall be open; and further, that on the four quarterly days, viz., 5th January, 5th April, 5th July, and 10th October, on whatever day of the week such day may fall, except Sunday, the transfers to the account of the Exchequer shall be made on those days also, and until five o'clock of the day as at present. My Lords desire to remind the different departments that it will be necessary that due care is taken to prepare, previously to each transfer being made, the specification papers required by the Act, and to procure the signature of the proper officers of the Exchequer thereto. Those specification papers, when signed by the Comptroller, or Assistant-Comptroller of the Exchequer, and accompanied by a write-off from the Receiver-general, and the proper check officer of the department, will be the authority to the Bank to transfer from the Receiver-general's account to the Exchequer account the sum total mentioned and set forth therein.

27.—My Lords will require that the Commissioners of Customs, Excise, Stamps and Taxes, and Postmaster-general, or in the absence of the latter, his Secretary, shall ascertain on the mornings of the day on which transfers are to be made to the Exchequer account, the actual balance at the account of each of their Receivers-general at the Bank of England; and that they shall then direct the largest amount to be transferred in each case, which can be transferred without inconvenience to the public service of their respective departments, allowing of no reservation of any funds at the account of any Receiver-general, beyond beyond what may be absolutely necessary; and my Lords further desire, that all such transfers may be made on the appointed days (except in the case of the quarter-days as above specified) by one o'clock of the day.

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

28.—It must further be clearly understood in each department, that my Lords do not mean by any of the directions of this Minute to authorise any payment to be made out of the gross revenue which is not authorised by existing regulations, nor to dispense with any control in making the orders and payments to which the several parties are at present subjected.

29.—Communicate to the Bank the regulations prescribed with respect to the mode in which the Receivers-general of these departments are required to keep their accounts at the Bank, and make payments therefrom, and transfers to the Exchequer account, for the information and government of that establishment; and state at the same time that it will be a great convenience to the public service if the Governor and Deputy Governor will give directions that the Comptroller of the Exchequer may be apprised as soon after one o'clock of the day as possible of the amounts which may, from time to time, be transferred by the several and respective Receivers-general from their accounts to the account of the Exchequer.

30.—In order to afford to my Lords full and ample information as to the receipt and application of the public monies passing through the hands of the several Receivers-general, my Lords desire that from each department there shall be transmitted to my Lords, instead of the certificate now furnished, a weekly certificate, to be prepared according to the form now before my Lords, such certificate being forwarded to my Lords every Monday, and being made to embrace the transactions of the previous week.

31.—My Lords have before them the forms of the several warrants, specification papers, instruments, and other documents which have been submitted for their consideration, as proper to be adopted for the better carrying of the purposes of the Act into effect.

32.—These forms are as follow:

1. Royal Order authorising the Board of Treasury to direct the Comptroller of the Exchequer to grant credits for the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Miscellaneous Services of the year.

2 & 3. Treasury Warrant and Letter founded on the Royal Order.

4. Warrant of the Comptroller of the Exchequer to the Bank.

5. Treasury Warrant, authorising the Comptroller to grant credits to defray the charges on the Consolidated Fund.

6. Statement to be furnished by the Bank to the Exchequer, and to the Treasury, of payments made from day to day to the Exchequer Account at the Bank.

7. Statement to be furnished daily by the Bank to the Exchequer of payments made on the preceding day on the drafts or accepted bills of Public Accountants, on account of credits granted to them.

8. Specification Paper to be prepared by parties having payments to make to the Exchequer Account at the Bank, for the signature of the Comptroller or Assistant Comptroller, and of the Bank Cashier.

9. Weekly Certificate to be furnished by the Bank to the Treasury of the monies paid during the preceding week to the drafts or orders of public accountants on their Exchequer credits; and of the balance of money at the Exchequer account at the close of the week.

10. Weekly Certificate from the Bank to the Treasury of the cash balance of the several public accountants.

11. Certificate to be furnished weekly by the Exchequer to the Treasury, showing the amount during the week at the account of the Exchequer, and the several credits granted thereout.

12. Certificate to be furnished weekly by the Paymaster of Civil Services, showing the amount of credits on each head of service placed at his account at the Bank during the week; the amount of his payments on each head of service; and the balances remaining.

13. Estimate to be furnished monthly by the Paymaster-general, Treasurer of the Navy, and Treasurer of the Ordnance, showing the amount for which they will severally require that credits should be granted to them for services during the month, and the days on which credits will probably be required.

14. Weekly Return from the Paymaster-general, Treasurer of the Navy, Treasurer of the Ordnance, and Paymaster of Civil Services, of the receipts and payments on their respective cash accounts during the previous week.

15. The form of Acquittance to be given by the Comptroller of the Exchequer to such parties as shall make payments to the Exchequer Account at the Bank of England.

33.—My Lords approve of these several forms, and desire that copies thereof may be transmitted to the Comptroller of the Exchequer for his information, so far as they relate to his department, and that copies may also be sent forthwith to the Bank, and to the several departments to which they respectively apply, with instructions to adopt such forms on and after the 11th October next, in their communications with this office, Exchequer, and the Bank. My Lords further desire that they may be strictly attended to in this office.

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

34.—With respect to the books which shall be kept in this office, in the Exchequer, and in the office of the Paymaster, for the purpose of recording the pecuniary transactions in the several departments as matters of account, my Lords desire that they may be such as are required in the system of book-keeping by double entry.

35.—My Lords proceed to consider what public officers will keep their accounts at the Bank of England, subject to the provisions of the Act now under consideration, in order that my Lords may transmit a list of such public accountants to the Bank, according to the provisions of the 18th section of the Act.

36.—It appears to my Lords that, for the present, and until further consideration, the following will be the public accountants to whom credits will be given by the Comptroller of the Exchequer:

The Paymaster-general.
The Master of the Mint.
The Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt.
The Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

37.—Transmit a list of these accountants to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England, for their information and guidance, and state at the same time that in addition to the credit accounts, which will have to be opened with all of them in the books of the Bank, my Lords apprehend that payments of cash will, from time to time, be made by other parties to the account of most, if not of all of them; and that for the purpose of preventing confusion in the returns to the Exchequer, and to this office, it will be expedient that whenever such payment shall be made in cash to the Bank, they should be carried to a separate account, to be opened with each of them, and to be called, "The Cash Account," in contradistinction to the other, which should be called "The Exchequer Credit Account;" and that for the purpose of facilitating the business of the Bank, in posting the drafts and bills payable out of these separate accounts, my Lords will prescribe to each department that all accepted bills should be made payable out of the Exchequer Credit Account, and that all drafts drawn on the Credit Account shall be printed with ink of green colour, and those drawn on the Cash Account, with ink of red colour; all such bills and drafts having distinctly marked on the face thereof that they are not payable at the Bank after three o'clock of the day.

38.—State at the same time to the Bank that it would be a great convenience to the King's service if, when payments are made to the cash account of any of the beforementioned accountants, the cashiers of the Bank were directed to furnish a statement of the amount so paid to each account in each week, and of the amount paid to the drafts of the accountant on account thereof, to this Board at the close of the week.

39.—State at the same time to the Bank that some of the accountants, as, for instance, the Commissioners of Woods and Works, &c., and the Paymaster for Civil Services, will receive credit on more heads of service than one, and that in the case of the latter, the number of credits on which he would have to make payments would probably extend to 20 or 30, and that my Lords think it right to afford this information to the Bank, as it may facilitate their arrangements in opening the accounts in question.

40.—State at the same time to the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank, that the following accounts now opened at the Bank are considered by my Lords to be public accounts, within the intent and meaning of the 18th section of the Act, viz.:

The Agent-general for the Colonies.
The Agent for Chelsea Hospital.
The Receiver-general of the Customs.
The Receiver-general of the Excise.
The Receiver-general of the Stamps and Taxes.
The Commissioners of Taxes.
The Receiver-general of the Post-Office.
The Chief Clerk of the Insolvent Debtors' Court.

41.—My Lords have now under consideration the letters which had been addressed to them by the Paymaster-general, the Lords of the Admiralty, the Treasurer of the Navy, and the Master-general and Board of Ordnance upon the subject of the various arrangements which will be necessary in their respective departments, in consequence of the enactments of the Act for regulating the Exchequer.

42.—My Lords have also before them the Report of the Commissioners of Audit upon this subject.

43.—In considering the reports from the three great departments of public expenditure, the Army, the Navy, and the Ordnance, my Lords have much satisfaction in finding, in the several regulations submitted by those departments for the approval of the Treasury, such a concurrence as will render it easy to establish a general uniformity of practice for them, and for the other pay departments of the Government similarly circumstanced in relation to their accounts with the Treasury, the Exchequer, and the Bank of England.

44.—My Lords have in the previous part of this Minute expressed their approval of the form of the monthly estimates to be submitted by each of these departments, and they have therefore only to desire in that respect that they may be instructed, when that form is transmitted transmitted to them, to furnish my Lords with such monthly estimate at least six days before the commencement of the month to which such estimate applies; and to apply thereafter from time to time for the grant of such credits upon account of those estimates as the public service may require. If it shall happen in the course of the month that from unforeseen causes a larger sum may be wanted for any branch of service than the amount of the monthly estimate, the department requiring such larger credit will be expected to explain in their application the cause of the excess.

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

45.—In the communication directed to be made to the Bank, my Lords have adverted to the necessity that there should be, in the case of many of the Public Accountants, two accounts opened in the books of that establishment; one to be called the Exchequer Credit Account, and the other the Cash Account; this arrangement is necessary, because it is of essential importance to keep the accounts of the credits given by the Exchequer, and the sums paid on those credits, separate and distinct from all other receipts and payments; and my Lords perceive that in these three departments the necessity of such a course is clearly foreseen and duly provided for.

46.—My Lords are pleased to direct letters to be written to the Paymaster-general, to the Lords of the Admiralty, the Treasurer of the Navy, and the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, conveying to them the sanction of this Board to their several proposed arrangements, subject to the directions contained in this Minute as to the monthly estimate.

47.—State to them at the same time, that it appears to my Lords that when any balances may be at the respective cash accounts at the Bank of England, it will be expedient to exhaust those cash balances in making payments before any drafts are drawn on the Exchequer account; and that my Lords are of opinion, that it will be proper on the 11th October to transfer whatever balances they may have in the Bank to the cash account then to be opened.

48.—My Lords are quite aware that the more simple process would have been, to throw the amount of these cash receipts for old stores, rents, repayments, &c. into the Exchequer, and to issue them by credits from that account to the several departments; but such an arrangement cannot be effected without a special provision afforded by Parliament, and it would moreover be inconsistent with the financial arrangements for the current year, in which the estimated produce of such cash receipts are deducted from the estimates of the Navy and Ordnance expenditure.

49.—State to these several departments, that my Lords will require to be furnished weekly with an account showing the amount of such cash receipts in each department in the preceding week, and for the payments thereout, prepared according to the form now before my Lords, and let a copy of such proposed form be transmitted to them for their information.

50.—In communicating to the Paymaster-general upon this subject, acquaint his Lordship, that for the purpose of enabling him to make provision at the Bank for the payment of such bills as shall be drawn upon and accepted by this Board, my Lords propose that lists should be furnished to him from week to week during the month, of the bills becoming due in the course of the month, and that he should upon such lists give authority to the Bank to pay such bills out of the credits which may have been granted to him for Army Services. The previous warrants of my Lords, directing the Paymaster-general to apply such monies to such payments, will be furnished to that department from time to time, at such times as the public service may require.

51.—In the letter from the Secretary of the Ordnance, he communicates to my Lords the opinion of the Master-general and Board, that it is very desirable that the number of votes upon the Ordnance Estimates should be considerably reduced, by consolidating many of the items thereof, the adoption of which arrangement, the Master-general and Board state, will be attended with many advantages, and materially facilitate the making up of the accounts which will be required under the new Act in their department.

52.—If this suggested consolidation of the votes, now taken separately in the Ordnance Estimates, would tend in the slightest degree to weaken the check and control of the House of Commons over such expenditure, or to deprive Parliament of the fullest and most ample information upon every part of the estimate, my Lords would feel it to be their duty at once to object to it; but as no such consequences will follow, because the whole of the proposed expenditure will continue to be set out and explained in the estimates in as ample a manner as at present, and as my Lords are aware that by reducing the heads of service in the actual vote by a consolidation of such as are analogous to each other, public convenience will be experienced in the department, their Lordships are pleased to sanction the proposed alteration in the mode of preparing the Ordnance Estimates for future years.

53.—With respect to that part of the communication from the Ordnance which relates to the necessity of making provision hereafter for placing funds at the disposal of that Board, to enable them to pay for such services as they may be required to perform for other departments of the Government, my Lords desire that it may be pointed out to the Master-general and Board, that there is nothing in the Act to deprive that department of the means they now possess of making such payments, and that my Lords consider that it would occasion great complexity in the accounts of the Ordnance, and in the accounts of the other departments, if advances for all such services should be made hereafter on the estimate of a sum that may probably be required, instead of repaying, as at present, the amount actually disbursed, seeing that the exact amount that will be required cannot be known until the service has been performed. My Lords are of opinion, therefore, that the existing arrangements in that respect should be continued, and will take care that all such services shall be paid for by each department, as soon as the Ordnance shall be able to state what the amount of the expenditure has actually been.

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

54.—Under the directions of the Act of Parliament, and of this Minute, all payments now made in detail at the Exchequer, whether from the Consolidated Fund or out of grants in supply, many of which are issues to accountants upon imprest, will be made through the Paymaster of Civil Services, to whom credits for such purposes will be granted by order of this Board; and in order therefore to furnish to the Commissioners of Audit the means of placing such accountants in charge, my Lords are pleased to desire that the accounts of the Paymaster of Civil Services shall be made up quarterly, and transmitted immediately after the conclusion of each quarter to the Commissioners of Audit.

55.—Write to the Commissioners of Woods and Works, &c., the Comptroller of the Stationery Office, the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, and to the several other public accountants referred to in this Minute, calling their attention to the Act for regulating the Exchequer, and communicate to them the directions of this Minute, so far as relates to each of them respectively.

56.—Transmit copy also to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, for their information.

The following are the Forms referred to in the aforegoing Minute:—

No. 1.

ROYAL ORDER.

PUBLIC SUPPLY SERVICE, 1834–5.

OUR Will and Pleasure is, That you do place to the credit of for the time being the sum of granted to Us by for at such times and in such proportions and out of such funds granted by Parliament for this service as shall be specified in the warrants and directions which you will receive for your guidance from the Commissioners of Our Treasury.

Given at Our Court at , this day of

BY HIS MAJESTY'S COMMAND.

Amount of or Grants for } Credits already authorised thereon by Royal Order }

Remains - - £.

To the Comptroller-general of Our Exchequer.

No. 2.

SUPPLY SERVICES OF 1834–5.

BY Virtue of His Majesty's Royal Order of Credit to dated for the sum of
These are to authorise and require you to transfer from the general fund of the Exchequer at the Bank of England to the credit of or to the account of for the time being, the sum of at such times and according to such proportions as We shall from time to time direct; and place the same in your accounts to the grants of money applicable to this service, which will be specified in Our directions.

Whitehall, Treasury Chambers,
this day of 183 .

Amount of Royal Order of - - - - £ Treasury Warrants in part thereof - - - £.

Remains - - £.

To the Comptroller-general of His Majesty's Exchequer.

No. 3.

PUBLIC SUPPLIES.

Sir, Treasury Chambers.

The Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury desire that you will authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to grant out of the general fund of the Exchequer at the Bank, a credit of to on account of the sum of set forth in the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, bearing date respectively and that you will charge the same in the accounts of your department as an issue out of [here state the Fund.]

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

To the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

No. 4.

To the Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

I hereby authorise you to grant a credit to to the amount of chargeable upon the funds of His Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England.

Exchequer
183 . } Comptroller-general.

Examined and Entered.

Chief Clerk in the Office of the Comptroller-general.

No. 5.

TREASURY WARRANT.

Consolidated Fund.

By Virtue of an Act
These are to authorise and require you to transfer from the General Fund of the Exchequer at the Bank of England to the credit of and place the same in your accounts as a charge on the Revenues composing the Consolidated Fund for the Quarter ended

Whitehall, Treasury Chambers,
this day of 18 .

To the Comptroller-general of His Majesty's Exchequer.

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

No. 6.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

Cashier's Office,
day of 183 .

To the Comptroller-General of His Majesty's Exchequer.

A STATEMENT of the PARTICULARS of all SUMS paid into the BANK of ENGLAND to the Account of the Exchequer this Day.

	£.	s.	d.
CUSTOMS - - - - - - £. .
——— Sugar Duties - - - - £.
Excise - - - - - - - - - -
Stamps - - - - - - - - - -
Taxes - - - - - - - - - -
Post Office - - - - - - - - -
Pensions, Offices, &c. - - - - - - - -
TOTAL - - - £.

Certified by ———, Cashier.

No. 7.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

Cashier's Office,
day of 183 .

AN ACCOUNT of the several Payments actually made by the GOVERNOR and COMPANY of the BANK of ENGLAND, in the course of the day of , 183 , on account of Credits granted by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

PAYMENTS:	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Paymaster-general of the Forces - - - -
Treasurer of the Navy - - - - - -
Treasurer of the Ordnance - - - - - -
Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt
Paymasters of Exchequer Bills - - - -
Paymaster of Civil Services, under the several heads of Credit granted to him, as - - - - Salaries - - - - - - -
Pensions - - - - - - -
Civil Contingencies - - - - -
Windsor Castle - - - - -
Civil List; 1st Class - - - -
,, 2d Class - - - -
,, 3d Class - - - -
,, 4th Class - - - -
,, 5th Class - - - -
TOTAL - - - £.

Certified
———, Cashier.

No. 8.

[Excise] Office,
day of 183 .

SERVICE of 183 .

[EXCISE.]

To the Cashiers of the Bank of England.

YOU are requested to receive and pass to the Credit of the Account of His Majesty's Exchequer, the Sum of on account of [Excise Duties] according to the Specification at foot.

Receiver-General.

Specification.

£.	s.	d.

Countersiged,

Comptroller-General
of the Exchequer.

Bank of England,
day of 183 .

RECEIVED from Receiver-General of the [Duties of Excise] the Sum of to the Credit of the Account of His Majesty's Exchequer.

Ent^d.

——— Cashier.

Clerk.

No. 9.

EXCHEQUER MONIES in the BANK of ENGLAND,
Week ended

	£.	s.	d.
Balance remaining on the Account of His Majesty's Exchequer, on - - - - - -
Monies received in the Week ended
Total of Payments in the Week ended as per Appendix annexed - - - - - -
Balance remaining on the day of

EXCHEQUER BILLS issued to make good the DEFICIENCY of the CONSOLIDATED FUND. Quarter ended

	£.	s.	d.
Advanced on the credit of the Consolidated Fund - -
Paid off - - - - - - - - - - -
Balance outstanding, on

Exchequer Regulation Minute.

Appendix to No. 9.

BANK RETURN of EXCHEQUER CREDITS and PAYMENTS thereout, in the Week ended

Folio.		Balance of Credits remaining on day of	Credits given in the Week ended	TOTAL CREDITS.	Payments thereon, in the Week ended	Balance of Credits, remaining on
	Paymaster-General of the Forces
	Treasurer of the Navy - - -
	Treasurer of the Ordnance -
	Paymasters of Exchequer Bills -
	Paymaster of Civil Services, &c. -

No. 10.

CASH BALANCES of PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS in the BANK of ENGLAND, in the Week ended

	£.	s.	d.
Balance remaining on - - - - -
Monies received in the Week ended - -
£.
Total of Payments in the Week ended as per Appendix annexed - - - - - -
Balance remaining on the day of £.

Appendix to No. 10.

BANK RETURN of CASH BALANCES and PAYMENTS thereout, Week ended

Folio.		Balance of Cash remaining on day of	Cash received in the Week ended	TOTAL CASH.	Payments thereon, in the Week ended	Balance of Cash remaining on
	Paymaster-General of the Forces
	Treasurer of the Navy - -
	Treasurer of the Ordnance -
	Paymasters of Exchequer Bills -
	Paymaster of Civil Services -
	„ &c. „ - -
	„ &c. „ - -

No. 11.

AN ACCOUNT of the Balance of PUBLIC MONEY remaining in the Exchequer on the day of 183 ; and the AMOUNT of MONEY received in the Week ending the day of 183 .

RECEIPTS.
BALANCE on former Abstract.		Applicable to the Consolidated Fund
		" " Supplies - -
		" " Appropriated Funds
Consolidated Fund.
Supplies.
Appropriated Funds.

AN ACCOUNT of the CREDITS issued from the EXCHEQUER in the Week ending the day of 183 ; and the BALANCE of PUBLIC MONEY in the Exchequer on the day of 183 .

CREDITS.
	To Edward Henry Nevinson, Henry Jadis, and John Henry Latham, Esqrs., Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, to pay off Exchequer Bills issued to make good Consolidated Fund, per Act 57 Geo. III. c. 48
	To Governor and Company of the Bank of England - - -

ABSTRACT.

EXCHEQUER, day of

No. 12.

PAYMASTER CIVIL SERVICES.

RETURN of EXCHEQUER CREDITS, and PAYMENTS thereout.
Week ended

HEADS OF SERVICE.	Balance of Credits remaining on the	Credits granted in the Week ended	TOTAL CREDITS.	Amount of Cheques drawn and Bills due.	Balance of Credits remaining on the Exchequer Regulation Minute.

No. 13.

An ESTIMATE of the CREDITS which will be required in the Month of 183 on the Grants for { Army / Navy / Ordnance } Services for the year 183

HEADS OF SERVICE	Grants for the Year.	Credits already given.	Present Estimate.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
TOTALS - - -

The Amount of the present Estimate will be probably required at the following periods:—

On the _____

_____

_____

_____

The Amount of the Balance on the Cash Account at the Bank of England on the day of 183 £.

No. 14.

WEEKLY STATEMENT of the CASH ACCOUNT of the PAYMASTER-GENERAL of the FORCES, TREASURER of the NAVY, or TREASURER of the ORDNANCE, at the Bank of England.

Balance on the 183 .			Receipts at the Bank in the Week ended 183 .			TOTAL.			Orders for Payment in the Week ended 183 .			Balance on the 183 .
£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.

Army Pay-Office
183 .

No. 15.

Exchequer Receipt.

Exchequer Office, (P. Act 4 Will. 4, C. 15.) of Comptroller-General.

Acquittance _____ day of _____ 183

It is hereby certified that _____ _____ has paid into the Bank of England

_____

_____

_____

to the Credit of the Exchequer Account.

£. _____

Exam^d _____
Clerk in the Office of Comptroller-General.

_____
Comptroller.

MINUTE of the Lords of the Treasury prescribing Regulations and Orders for the Government of the Exchequer in Dublin, issued under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 83.—9 May 1837.

Exchequer, Ireland.

T. M., 9 May 1837.

1.—MY Lords read the Act 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 83, intituled, "An Act for the better Regulation of the Offices of Vice-Treasurer and Teller of the Exchequer in Ireland," and proceed to consider what regulations and orders it will be proper to issue under the authority vested in this Board by that Act, in order to give effect to the intentions of the Legislature, "that "with a view to the advantage of the public service, it is expedient that the receipt and "issue of all monies forming the public revenues of the United Kingdom should be placed "under the control and superintendence of this Board; and that further and more effectual "regulations should be made in respect of the public monies in Ireland, and also in respect "of the offices of Vice-Treasurer and Teller of the Exchequer."

2.—After the fullest and most mature consideration of this very important subject, it appears to my Lords that the course which will be most conducive to the interests of the public will be, to place the control and management of the receipt of the public monies into, and the issue of such monies out of the Exchequer in Ireland, under the direction of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer (appointed by the Act 4 & 6 Will. 4, c. 15, intituled, "An Act to regulate the Office of the Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster") in the same manner as the receipt and issues of public monies into and out of the Exchequer at Westminster are placed under the control and management of that officer; so that the public service in all parts of the empire may in that respect be subject as nearly as possible to the same regulations, and placed upon the same footing, such rules and orders being issued by this Board, under the authority vested in them, as may be necessary for the government of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, in so far as regards the duties proposed to be transferred to his office. By this arrangement, the control of the Board over the issues of public monies from the Exchequer in Ireland will be fully provided for, since no issue can then take place except under specific directions from the Lords of the Treasury to the Comptroller-general; while at the same time the most entire security will be attained that no issues will be made except in strict accordance with the votes or Acts of Parliament, because it will be the duty of the Comptroller-general to take care that no orders for the issue of money from the Exchequer in Ireland are obeyed, unless founded upon due authority, in the same manner as he now exercises the like control with respect to the issues of money out of the Exchequer at Westminster.

3.—It will also have this further advantage, that it will tend to simplify the accounts of the Treasury and Exchequer by bringing the whole of the receipts and payments of the United Kingdom into one account, as well as under one management, and will besides enable my Lords to make a more economical arrangement for carrying on this branch of the public service, by the entire abolition of the present establishments of the Vice-Treasurer and Teller of the Exchequer in Ireland, and the appointment of a reduced establishment to discharge the duties to be performed in Dublin.

4.—The establishments of the Vice-Treasurer and the Teller of the Exchequer in Ireland being abolished, and the duties proposed to be transferred to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer having been placed under his management, provision must be made for the following duties in Dublin, viz., the payment of salaries, allowances, and other charges in detail to the parties entitled to receive them, and the charge and custody of the records of the abolished office of Auditor-general of the Exchequer in Ireland. And to make such provision for the execution of the first-named duties in the manner most nearly analogous to that which was sanctioned by Parliament with respect to the Exchequer in London, it will be necessary to create an office of Paymaster, with such an establishment of clerks and messengers as may be required for the purpose.

5.—The Acts relating to public works in Ireland, under which Exchequer Bills are issued for such services, require the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer at Westminster to deliver such bills to the Teller of the Exchequer in Ireland, or to some person appointed by him; and my Lords are not at present empowered by any Act to authorise the Comptroller-general to deliver the Exchequer bills to any other officer. It is therefore necessary to continue the appointment of Teller for this specific duty, and as this will be the only duty he will have to discharge, their Lordships are of opinion that the Paymaster should be appointed Teller of the Exchequer for this specific duty, but without any salary as such.

6.—In the Bill now before the House of Commons relating to public works, Ireland, a clause has been introduced, to give power to this Board to appoint such person as their Lordships may think proper to receive the Bills issued for public works, Ireland, for the Exchequer. If that Bill shall pass the two Houses of Parliament, and receive the Royal assent, my Lords, by appointing the Paymaster of Civil Services to perform the duty, will be enabled entirely to abolish the office of Teller of the Exchequer in Ireland.

7.—The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland having stated that he sees no objection to the measures proposed by this Board, and the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer having signified his consent to undertake the discharge of the duties intended to be transferred to him, my Lords desire that the proper warrants may be accordingly prepared for transferring such duties to his office; for altogether reducing the office of Vice-Treasurer; for reducing the office

Exchequer, Ireland.

T. M., 9 May 1837.

office of Teller of the Exchequer (except in so far as such office must be continued as above stated for the receipt, safe custody, and issue of Exchequer Bills, under the Acts 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33, and 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 108, relating to the public works in Ireland); and for constituting an office of Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin, to discharge the duties of paying in detail the salaries, incidents, allowances, and charges heretofore payable in detail at the Exchequer in Dublin, and to take charge of the records of the ancient and abolished office of Auditor-General of the Exchequer of Ireland, now in the custody of the Vice-Treasurer, which must, for the advantage of the public service, remain deposited in Dublin.

8.—My Lords now proceed to prescribe the regulations which, in their judgment, should be issued for carrying on these services in future.

9.—It appears to their Lordships that the course pursued with respect to the Exchequer in this country should be adopted as nearly as possible.

10.—That a new account should be opened in the books of the Bank of Ireland, to be styled the "Account of His Majesty's Exchequer."

11.—That the whole of the payments made by the several revenue departments should be carried to that account, and that no transfer should be at any time made from it by the Bank, either to the account of the Paymaster of Civil Services about to be appointed, or to any other account whatever, except upon an order to that effect proceeding from the Comptroller-general.

12.—That all such monies, whether paid into the Bank by the officers of the revenue, or remitted to the Bank on account of the revenue, either through its own branches or the branches of the Provincial Bank of Ireland, should be placed at once to the credit of that account; and that a certificate should be transmitted from day to day by the cashiers of the Bank, under their signature, to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, showing the amount lodged at the credit of the account of His Majesty's Exchequer from day to day; the returns now rendered by the Bank to the several revenue departments continuing to be made in the same form and manner as at present, with this exception only, that they should be transmitted daily as the lodgments are made.

13.—It will be the duty of the proper officers of the Customs, Excise, Stamps, and Post Office in London to render daily to the Comptroller-general a statement of the lodgments so made in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of the Exchequer Account on account of these respective revenues, prepared from the documents remitted to the revenue departments by the Bank of Ireland; and they will receive from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer a discharge for the amount so paid in, as soon as he has ascertained that the amount stated by them corresponds with that certified to have been received by the Bank.

14.—The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer will upon these documents raise the charge in his books, as to the amount of revenue so paid in by the several revenue departments in Ireland.

15.—My Lords prescribe this course because it would obviously not be possible to adopt, with respect to the Exchequer at Dublin, that regulation of the English Exchequer which directs that no money shall be paid to the Bank without the production of a specification paper previously prepared at the Exchequer.

16.—No inconvenience attends the English practice, because the revenue offices and the Exchequer being situated at no great distance from each other, the specification paper can always be prepared, and the transfer made at the Bank, from the account of the revenue to that of the Exchequer on the same day; whereas if it were required that such specification paper should be prepared, in every case, before a payment could be made to the Exchequer account in Dublin, a very considerable delay would unavoidably occur; while the accuracy of the payments, and the knowledge of the proper heads of revenue to which the amounts are to be carried, will be entirely secured by the course proposed by my Lords.

17.—In addition, however, to the payments which will be made to the account of the Exchequer at the Bank of Ireland by officers and departments of the revenue, other monies will probably be payable to the public by individuals, on account of balances of declared accounts, repayments on account of advances for tithe, &c., in sums of small amount.

18.—In cases of this description, it appears to my Lords that the course most convenient to the parties, and that which will afford the greatest facility for ascertaining the accounts to which such payments should be carried by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, will be, that they should in the first instance all be made to the account of the Paymaster of the Civil Services in the Bank of Ireland; and that a notification should be given to him in each case by the party desiring to make the payment, stating the grounds upon which such payment is to be made; that he should thereupon furnish to the party an order to the Bank, in the same manner as in England, to receive the amount to the credit of his account (the Bank being at the same time instructed to receive no such payments except on production of such order), and deliver an acquittance for the amount to the party having made the payment, in exchange for the receipt of the cashier of the Bank of Ireland. It is the intention of my Lords, that the acquittance so given by the Paymaster shall be of the like force and validity as the acquittances now given by the Teller of the Exchequer.

19.—It will, of course, in all such cases be necessary that the Paymaster should charge himself in his books with the amount so paid in; and my Lords are of opinion that the amount of all the payments of this description which he may receive in the course of each week, should be transferred by him on the Wednesday and Saturday of every week from his account account to the account of the Exchequer, transmitting at the same time to the Comptroller-general a statement in detail of the several sums making up the aggregate amount transferred, and taking the necessary credit in his accounts. The Comptroller of the Exchequer, on receiving this statement and comparing it with the certificate, which will have been forwarded at the same time from the Bank of Ireland, will carry the several amounts to the proper heads in his books, and transmit to the Paymaster his acknowledgment, which will form the Paymaster's acquittance with the Commissioners of Audit.

20.—Under the authority of the Act 56 Geo. 3, c. 98, the whole of the issues from the Exchequer in Ireland have been heretofore made by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant or the Vice-Treasurer, with the exception of the issues for the constabulary, which, since the passing of the Act 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 113, have been made by warrant from this Board; but my Lords being of opinion, as already stated, that no issue should be made from the Exchequer for services in Ireland, except in the same manner as for services in Great Britain, that is, under the direct and immediate authority of this Board, it is their Lordships' intention that the Comptroller of the Exchequer shall not, from the day when the control and management of the Exchequer in Dublin is transferred to him, make any issue, except upon warrants which my Lords will grant, from time to time, as may be required for the public service.

21.—These issues from the Exchequer in Dublin may be divided under the following heads:

1. The dividends upon the public funded debt.

2. The fixed and periodical charges for salaries, allowances, annuities, and allowances to county infirmaries, &c., chargeable on the Consolidated Fund.

3. All other charges on the Consolidated Fund, and not repaid to the public.

4. The advances to county treasurers and others, repayable, either wholly or in part, by grand jury presentments or otherwise.

5. The payment for miscellaneous services, voted upon estimates in supply.

6. The remittances from the Exchequer account in the Bank of Ireland to the Exchequer account in the Bank of England.

22.—With respect to the dividends payable at the Bank of Ireland on account of the National Debt, it will be necessary that the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on the one hand, and the Bank of Ireland on the other, shall, before the termination of every quarter, furnish to this Board the certificates of the sums falling due at the commencement of the succeeding quarter, in the same manner as that information is now furnished by them to the Vice-Treasurer. My Lords will thereupon direct the Comptroller-general to make the necessary imprest to the Bank of Ireland, in the same manner as is now practised with respect to such payments at the Bank of England.

23.—The fixed charges on the Consolidated Fund for salaries, allowances, annuities, county infirmaries, &c., which are now paid in detail by the Vice-Treasurer and Teller, at stated periods, will be paid hereafter by the Paymaster to be appointed for the discharge of that and other duties. It will be necessary that schedules of all such charges, specifying in detail Parliamentary or other authority under which they are paid, shall be forthwith prepared by the Vice-Treasurer and transmitted to this Board—such schedules being so made out as to show the condition, if any, which may apply under the original grants to any of these charges, in order that due care may be taken that such conditions are strictly enforced.

24.—Wherever any of these payments have been heretofore charged with fees carried to the public account, it appears to my Lords that the same course should be taken as was followed in this country, viz., that the salaries or allowances, pensions or annuities, should be reduced to the net sums which have been received by the parties, and that the fees should be no longer collected. By this arrangement the account will be simplified, while the parties will be placed in precisely the same situation as at present.

25.—The Paymaster must transmit to this Board, not less than 10 days before the end of every quarter, a schedule showing in detail the several payments under the above class of services then falling due, accompanied by a statement of the differences, if any, whether from death or otherwise, between such schedule and the schedule of the previous quarter, and my Lords, after a comparison of the quarterly schedules with the original establishment, will direct the issue of the money, and return the schedule to the Paymaster, in order that he may pay the several parties.

26.—To enable my Lords to provide for the payments on account of post roads, and other services charged on the Consolidated Fund, the amount of which fluctuates from quarter to quarter, their Lordships are of opinion that an estimate of the amount which will probably be required under each head of service, setting forth the Parliamentary authority under which the issue will be called for, should be transmitted to them not less than 10 days before the expiration of every quarter; and as such information can only be furnished by direction of the Lord Lieutenant, my Lords request his Excellency will issue such instructions to the proper persons acting under his authority, as will enable the Chief Secretary to prepare and transmit such an estimate to this Board.

27.—The amount of that estimate will be charged by my Lords on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter, and imprests made thereafter by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin, or to the Commissioners of Public Works, or to Exchequer, Ireland.

T. M., 9 May 1837

to any other public officer, as the case may be, to enable them to pay such services from time to time, on application from the Lord Lieutenant to my Lords for that purpose.

28.—In like manner my Lords are of opinion, that before the termination of every quarter, an estimate should be furnished to them in the same manner as such an estimate is now transmitted with respect to the constabulary, of the several advances which may probably be required during the ensuing quarter on account of advances to county treasurers and others, repayable by grand jury presentments or otherwise; and my Lords will, on subsequent application of the Lord Lieutenant, direct that the necessary imprests be made to the proper public accountant to defray such services. In order to enable my Lords to judge of the propriety of the imprests to the Paymaster or other public accountant when the imprests are applied for, it will be necessary that each requisition from the Lord Lieutenant should be accompanied by a statement of the grounds upon which it is proposed that the payments should be made; of the terms and conditions as to repayment upon which advances are recommended; and by a reference to the Act or Acts by which the issue from the Exchequer is authorised.

29.—My Lords are aware that cases of an unforeseen nature may arise in the course of a quarter requiring the immediate issue of the public money, and will provide for that necessity; but they think that, as a general rule, the same regulation which prevails at the Exchequer in England should be adopted with respect to the issues for Irish services, and that they should be furnished before the termination of each quarter with the estimates above referred to.

30.—The payments for services voted annually in supply will be made by the Paymaster of Civil Services, either in detail where they are now made in detail by the Vice-Treasurer and Teller, or by making imprests to those public accountants to whom imprests are now made.

31.—That my Lords may be enabled to give directions to the Comptroller-general for placing the necessary funds at the account of the Paymaster, they must receive from time to time from the Lord Lieutenant a statement of the issues required to meet the services voted by Parliament for Miscellaneous Services in Ireland; and my Lords request that His Excellency will give orders to all those parties who receive monies from the Exchequer upon account, to be disbursed in detail, to frame their requisition as to show—

1st. The balance in hand when the last issue was made to them.
2d. The amount of the last issue.
3d. The actual expenditure up to the period when the application is made.
4th. The balance then in hand, and
5th. The anticipated expenditure, for which an issue is required.

32.—My Lords will in like manner require from the Paymaster a weekly account, to be made up to, and including the last day of every week, showing the balance upon the first day of the week upon every head of service, paid by him at his account with the Bank of Ireland; the amount transferred to his account by the Bank on each head of service during the week; the amount received on his account during the week; the amount paid in the week; and the balance at the close.

33.—My Lords will also request the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of Ireland to furnish them from week to week with a statement of the total balance on the last day of every week at the account of the Paymaster, whereby my Lords will have the means of checking the accounts rendered by the Paymaster; and further, it will be necessary that the Bank should transmit daily to the Comptroller-general a statement in detail of the several amounts transferred upon orders received from him from the account of the Exchequer, to the account of the several parties in whose favour such orders have been made.

34.—When imprests have been made to the Paymaster, on account of the miscellaneous services voted annually in supply, to be disbursed by him in small amounts, my Lords are of opinion that the payments in detail should be made, not on the direction of this Board, but on that of the Lord Lieutenant, signified by the Chief or Under Secretary; but that no payment be made on account of any particular service, which will occasion an exceeding beyond the imprest made from the Exchequer applicable to that service, unless the Lord Lieutenant shall signify that the case is of an urgent and pressing nature.

35.—My Lords do not anticipate that any such pressing necessity can ever arise, except under such extraordinary and peculiar circumstances as would occasion injury to the public service, by delaying to make the issue until the case is submitted to, and an order obtained from this Board. But in order to provide for the possible consequences of any such pressing necessity, if any such should ever arise, my Lords are of opinion, that, upon a specific authority from the Lord Lieutenant, under the hand of the Chief or Under Secretary, setting forth that public injury will be sustained by delay, the Paymaster should be authorised to make the payment for any service which may be ordered out of any money in his hands, reporting the circumstances forthwith to this Board, and that a statement of the facts of the case should be at the same time forwarded to my Lords by the Irish Government, in order that they may at once replace the monies in the hands of the Paymaster for other public services.

36.—The interest and principal of the Exchequer bills, issued for carrying on public works in Ireland, is now paid by the Teller of the Exchequer, out of monies remitted to him from the the Exchequer at Westminster for that purpose. Under the existing arrangements the Commissioners of Public Works recover from parties the sums due on account of loans made to them, and pay such sums to the account of the Exchequer in Dublin. It is at present required, that such monies shall be first of all remitted from the Exchequer in Ireland to the Exchequer in London, in order to place them at the disposal of this Board, and of the Comptroller of the Exchequer, by whom alone arrangements can be made for paying off these bills. The amount so remitted to this country is then returned to Dublin, to be applied by the Teller in paying the interest or redeeming the bills. As soon as both Exchequers are placed under the same management, this course of proceeding will be entirely unnecessary, since by order of this Board and of the Comptroller-general, the money can be applied to its proper purpose at once out of the Exchequer in Dublin, and the balance only which is required transferred from the Exchequer account in one bank to the same account with the other.

37.—In like manner all other remittances from one Exchequer Account to the other will be made upon the warrants of the Board by orders of the Comptroller-general.

38.—It is the intention of my Lords, that the accounts of all advances to county treasurers and others repayable by grand jury presentments or otherwise, and of all repayments on such advances, except those made through the Commissioners of Public Works, shall be kept by the Paymaster; and he will take care to open the necessary books for that purpose. All advances, except those through the Commissioners of Public Works, and except for the constabulary, will be made through him; and he will have the means thereby of charging all such payments against the proper parties. The sums repayable to the public on account of the advances for the constabulary, will be reported to him by the Inspector-general, and he will thereupon raise in that respect the necessary charges against the counties.

39.—On the other hand, all repayments by county treasurers on account of such advances, except those made through the Commissioners of Public Works, must be carried by the Bank of Ireland to the account of the Paymaster, in order that he may have the means of ascertaining that the repayments due have been correctly and properly made; and he will, on the Wednesday and Saturday in each week, transfer the amount to the Exchequer Account, apprising the Comptroller-general of the amount so transferred.

40.—My Lords will immediately give orders to the county treasurers to make the repayments accordingly through the banks or branch banks, to the account of the Paymaster in the Bank of Ireland, and will furnish them with the necessary instructions for that purpose.

41.—The account of the Paymaster must be kept at the Bank of Ireland as a public account, and he will be considered as a Public Accountant upon imprest. His accounts, supported by all the proper vouchers, and by the book of his accounts kept at the Bank of Ireland, showing the receipts and payments as exhibited by the books of that establishment, must be transmitted immediately after the termination of every month to the Commissioners of Audit.

42.—The books of account of the Paymaster must be kept upon the principle of double entry; and he will take care that all monies paid to his account by individuals, all transfers to his account from the Exchequer, and all payments made by him, are duly and properly carried in those books to the several heads of service to which they respectively belong; taking care not to blend his accounts of the grants of the year with those of another for the same service.

43.—He will make all his payments by checks upon his account in the Bank of Ireland, in favour of those parties to whom payment is ordered to be made, but no check will be payable by the bank unless such checks are countersigned. My Lords are of opinion, for the protection of the public on the one hand, and of the Paymaster on the other, that such counter-signature should be given by the Accountant of his office, or in his occasional absence by the Assistant Accountant. It will be the duty of the Accountant or of the Assistant Accountant to ascertain, by an examination of the proper papers, that the check has been properly prepared, and the payment supported by proper authority.

44.—In the event of the occasional temporary absence from sickness or otherwise of the Paymaster himself, the checks on the Bank must be signed by the principal clerk acting as cashier, upon a power of attorney to be given by the Paymaster for that purpose.

45.—It remains for my Lords to provide for Ordnance and Army services in Ireland, the monies to defray which are now issued through the Exchequer in London and Bank of England by remittances to the Bank of Ireland.

46.—In all future applications from the Paymaster-general for the issue to him of public money for Army or Ordnance services, it will be necessary to specify in his applications to this Board, whether the monies are to be expended in this country or in Ireland, in order that my Lords may have the means of giving the proper orders to the Comptroller-general; since such issues for services in Great Britain will be made as at present, by a credit given to him on the Exchequer Account at the Bank of England—while those for services in Ireland will be hereafter made by a transfer from the Exchequer Account in the Bank of Ireland, to the credit of his account with that bank, and all such remittances rendered thereby unnecessary.

47.—My Lords having determined that the whole of these arrangements shall commence and take effect on Monday 15th May instant, they desire that instructions may be given to the Vice-Treasurer and Teller of the Exchequer to close their accounts with the Bank of Ireland on the 13th May, in the evening; to reserve out of the balance then in the Bank at the account of the Exchequer, the amount which may be required to pay any outstanding checks which may not have been presented at the Bank, and all orders then deposited with them, upon which no checks on the Bank shall have been issued, except all warrants for advances to be repaid, and all other warrants dated prior to the 1st January 1836; and to transfer the whole of the remainder of the balance to the new account to be opened for His Majesty's Exchequer. The amount so reserved must be at the same time transferred to another account, to be opened in the name of the Paymaster of Civil Services, and a list of the outstanding checks must be furnished to him, together with the whole of the orders for payment which have not been acted upon, with the exceptions above stated. The Paymaster must give an authority to the Bank to pay the outstanding checks on his account, and will make the necessary payments upon the outstanding orders delivered to him upon application to this Board by the proper parties.

Exchequer, Ireland.

T. M., 9 May 1837.

48.—My Lords desire that the warrants bearing date prior to 1st January 1836 may be cancelled, and that a list thereof may be transmitted to this Board. They also desire that a statement may be furnished to them of the sums unsatisfied on the warrants for advances, and the warrants may at the same time be transmitted, in order that the proper directions may be given to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer for the issue of such sums thereafter.

49.—The Vice-Treasurer and Teller must at the same time prepare and transmit to this Board, and to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, a statement of the sums so transferred to the accounts of His Majesty's Exchequer in the Bank of Ireland, showing to what heads of account the several component parts thereof should be carried, together with an account of the amounts remaining unissued on the several grants of Parliament, in order that my Lords may direct the preparation of the Royal orders, under the authority of which, issues will be made on account thereof.

50.—An account must also be furnished to my Lords of the amount transferred to the account of the Paymaster and of the heads of service to meet which such transfer has been made, when my Lords will instruct the Commissioners of Audit to charge the said amounts against the Paymaster.

51.—For the payment of such services as are defrayed out of the Consolidated Fund, and on account of which claims may arise between the 15th of May and the commencement of the ensuing quarter, my Lords will provide by granting imprests to the proper parties to defray such charges, upon receiving in each case the necessary information from the Lord Lieutenant, without having for this period the previous estimate which will in future be required.

52.—My Lords now proceed to consider what will be a proper establishment for discharging the several duties which will have to be executed by the Paymaster.

53.—The existing establishment of the Vice-Treasurer and Teller of the Exchequer, exclusively of the Record branch of the former office which is paid out of the Consolidated Fund, consists of fourteen officers and clerks, and four messengers, &c.

54.—The charge, including incidents, is, the minimum 5,473 l., and the maximum 6,873 l.

55.—Upon full consideration my Lords are of opinion that in addition to the Paymaster, an establishment of eight clerks, two messengers, and one housekeeper will be found fully sufficient to discharge in a satisfactory manner the whole of the duties, and that this establishment should be fixed in the following manner; viz.—

One principal clerk and cashier, with a salary of 600 l., increasing 20 l. a year to 700 l.
One accountant at 500 l., increasing 20 l. a year to 600 l.
One assistant-accountant at 350 l., increasing 20 l. a year to 450 l.
Two assistant clerks at 200 l., increasing 15 l. a year to 350 l.
Three junior clerks at 90 l., increasing 10 l. a year to 180 l.
One housekeeper at 92 l., with an allowance of 73 l. for servants.
Two messengers at 74 l. each.

56.—The salary of the Paymaster himself should be fixed, my Lords think, at 1,000 l. per annum, which, although 200 l. per annum less than the salary of the Vice-Treasurer, will, it appears to my Lords, afford a fair remuneration for the duties he will have to discharge, and the pecuniary responsibility he will have to undertake.

57.—The charge upon the public for this establishment will be at the minimum 3,433 l. per annum, and at the maximum 4,303 l. per annum; being a reduction of six persons, and, as compared with the existing establishment, of 2,040 l. per annum at the minimum, and 2,540 l. per annum at the maximum.

58.—The immediate diminution of charge will be 2,334 l., subject to the superannuation allowances, to be granted to the parties whose services will not be required upon the new establishment.

59.—My Lords do not now propose to make any alteration in the establishment of the Record Office, which will therefore remain as at present.

60.—My Lords, in conclusion, desire that attendance shall be given at the Pay-office in Dublin every day in the year, except Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas Day, or any other day of public feast or thanksgiving, when other public offices are closed. That such attendance may be given from ten in the morning until four in the afternoon; the hour of payment closing however at three o'clock, to afford time for making up and balancing the accounts of the day, which my Lords desire may be done invariably before the business of the day is considered as finished. The hours of payment on Saturday to close at one o'clock, to afford the means to the Paymaster of preparing the weekly accounts, which must be despatched to this Board by the mail of that day; and finally, that to secure a due and regular attendance, the several gentlemen employed under the Paymaster shall record their actual attendance daily, in a book to be kept for that purpose. Exchequer, Ireland. T. M., 9 May 1837.

and

61.—Write to the several Revenue departments, so far as they are respectively concerned, and desire they will instruct their officers to act in conformity with this Minute.

62.—Write in like manner to the Governor and Deputy-governor of the Bank of Ireland, and request that they will take such steps as are necessary, so far as relates to the Bank, for giving effect to their arrangements.

63.—Transmit copy of this Minute to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer for his information, and in order that he may act in conformity with the regulations therein laid down, for the government of his office, so far as relates to the Exchequer in Ireland.

64.—Write to the Chief Secretary for Ireland, and transmit to him, for the information of the Lord Lieutenant, copy of this Minute, and at the same time request he will move his Excellency to give such directions as may be required for carrying on the public service hereafter under these regulations.

65.—Let the proper orders be given to the Vice-Treasurer and Teller of the Exchequer of Ireland.

66.—My Lords having, by their Minute of this day, directed that a warrant may be prepared for appointing Thomas Francis Kennedy, Esq., to be Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, they desire that a copy of this Minute may be forwarded to him, with directions to act in strict conformity with the instructions issued by their Lordships for carrying on the duties of that office.

67.—Transmit copy to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, for their information.

Treasury Minute of 19 August 1836, regulating the Office of the Paymaster-General.

Pay Office. T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

1.—My Lords have again under their consideration the Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35, by which His Majesty is empowered to consolidate into one office the several and separate offices of Paymaster of the Forces, Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, Treasurer of the Navy, and Treasurer of the Ordnance, together with the letters which have been addressed to this Board by the Lords of the Admiralty, the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, the Secretary at War, the Paymaster of the Forces, and the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, upon this subject, in reply to the communications addressed to those departments thereupon.

Concurrence of the Executive Departments in the principle of the arrangement.

2.—My Lords perceive with much satisfaction from these Reports, that the leading principles upon which it appeared to this Board that the proposed consolidation should take place, have met the general concurrence of the executive departments, and that the arrangements submitted by them for the consideration of my Lords are such as to enable their Lordships now to proceed in establishing the regulations by which, in their opinion, the transactions of the Pay Office should be governed in its relations not only to this Board and the Exchequer, but also to the great departments of the Navy, Army, and Ordnance, and the community at large.

Locality.

3.—There can be no doubt that the business of the consolidated offices should be carried on under one and the same roof; and as the building in which the existing Army Pay Office is established, is, from its proximity to the Treasury, to the Exchequer, the Admiralty, and Ordnance and War Offices, the most conveniently situated for the public, and as by reason of the official residence of the Paymaster of the Forces having been given up, there will be ample accommodation for the purpose, my Lords are of opinion, that as soon as the Sign Manual Warrant is issued, consolidating the separate offices into one, the buildings now occupied by the Navy Pay Office, the Ordnance Treasurer's Office, and the establishment of the Deputy Treasurer of Chelsea, should be given up, and the whole of the books, papers, and documents of those offices removed to Whitehall.

New office to be divided into four branches.

4.—To secure the ready execution of all orders addressed to the Paymaster-general by the Admiralty, the Ordnance, the Secretary at War, the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, and by this Board, and in order that the whole business of the office may be conducted with convenience, simplicity, and regularity, it appears to my Lords that the establishment should consist of four separate branches, of which two would be employed in making payments, one in examining the accounts and vouchers and keeping the necessary books of account, and the fourth in superintending the whole of the department, and in conducting the correspondence, so as to ensure that all the regulations and orders which may be issued with respect to it are duly and carefully attended to.

Responsibility of the heads of the four branches.

5.—The persons placed at the head of these several branches will be assisted by such a number of clerks as is necessary for the discharge of the duties of the office, and they will be severally responsible that the whole of those duties are performed in a satisfactory manner.

Payment of effective and non-effective charges in separate branches.

Vouchers to be first examined and noted in the Accountant's branch.

6.—It is the intention of my Lords that the two branches into which the paying department of the office will be divided, shall each pay separate and distinct classes of service; that one branch shall pay the whole of the effective charges of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance; the other, the whole of the non-effective charges: but that no payment whatever shall be made by either until the document upon which such payment is claimed has been first examined and noted in the Accountant's branch, with whom will be deposited all authorities for making payments.

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

Imprests.

Pay clerks at the ports.

7.—In the case of the effective services, some of the payments will necessarily be made by way of imprest to other parties, having to account in detail for the application of such imprests to the Admiralty, the Secretary at War, and the Ordnance.

8.—Of this class will be advances to regimental agents, to the pay clerks of the yards for payment of ships' wages, and other disbursements of wages and charges relating to the yards; to the Ordnance regimental agents for the pay of the artillery and engineers, besides others at various different stations, to whom advances of small sums are made upon account to be afterwards rendered.

9.—All other payments by the Paymaster-general to individuals will be in the nature of final payments, as they will be the specific sums due to the individuals, in whose favour the orders have been issued.

Imprest bills to be admitted as vouchers to the Paymaster-general's accounts.

10.—The accounts of the former class of payments will be rendered, as they now are, by the several sub-accountants, to the Secretary-at-War, Admiralty and Ordnance, for examination, and the amounts issued to them respectively will be admitted to the credit of the Paymaster-general, upon production to the Auditors of Public Accounts of the receipts of the parties, accompanied by the authorities upon which the imprests were made, without requiring any further or other account from him; but in issuing such orders for payment, it will be proper that the Secretary-at-War, the Lords of the Admiralty, and the Master-general and Board of Ordnance should, as far as may be practicable, specify on the face of the warrant or other instrument addressed to the Paymaster-general the particular head of service, as voted by Parliament, and the year for which voted, to which such imprests are to be applied. In the case of such imprests made for Army and Ordnance services to be defrayed in this country, my Lords apprehend that there will be little difficulty in complying with this regulation; but in the naval departments they are aware that this would not be practicable beforehand, on account of the great variety of services which are paid by the pay clerks at the ports out of the same imprest; and unless the pay clerks at the ports be authorised to apply the moneys imprested to them for naval services generally, it would be absolutely necessary to grant imprests on account of every head of service for which they are required to make payments, whereby the balances in their hands might be unnecessarily augmented beyond the wants of the service.

Orders to contain on the face of them the service and year to which they are chargeable.

Bills for final payments to specify services.

11.—In the case of all final payments, however, that is, to parties to whom the amount paid is actually due to them for service rendered or supplies furnished, and who therefore are not liable to render any further account to the public, my Lords apprehend there will be less of difficulty, and they are desirous that, in every possible case, the particular head of service to which the payment ought to be carried should be specified on the order for payment.

Monthly abstracts of application of imprests to be furnished.

12.—In those cases in which this information cannot be furnished beforehand, my Lords desire, according to the proposition of the Accountant-general of the Navy, that abstract accounts of the application in detail of such imprests and payments, under the several heads to which the money has been applied, shall be furnished as soon as possible after the termination of each month by the Admiralty to the Paymaster-general, to be posted in his books. With respect to payments made at the stations abroad, it will be necessary that the expenditure for naval and for ordnance services should continue to be made as at present by advances from the Military Chests to the naval and ordnance officers at those stations, under the regulations now existing. Those advances will be accounted for as at present, and the amount set off in the books of the Paymaster-general, upon statements from the proper officers of the Admiralty and Ordnance, of the separate heads of disbursement to which such advances have been applied. By these arrangements the books of the Paymaster-general will eventually be made to show, in the case of all the three great departments of expenditure, the actual charge, during each year, for each head of service voted by Parliament, an object which my Lords conceive of great importance.

Application of advances abroad to be furnished for the Paymaster-general's books.

Accounts to be kept by double entry.

13.—The Paymaster-general will, therefore, take care that in the books of account in his office, which my Lords desire may be kept throughout on the principle of double entry, the several payments made by him are duly and regularly carried to their several proper heads of service, so as to enable him to show to Parliament, and to this Board, when required, the progress of the expenditure, not only in aggregate sums for Army, Navy and Ordnance Services, effective and non-effective, but likewise, so far as the orders received by him will do so in the first instance, and accurately in all their parts after he has received the monthly abstracts, and certificates adverted to, the detail of such general expenditure under the separate classes into which the Estimates are divided, and the money voted. Until he shall receive the monthly abstracts above stated from the Accountant-general of the Navy, he will carry all imprests made by order of the Admiralty to the general head of Navy Services, Effective. In like manner all drafts upon this Board drawn by commissaries for the supply of the Military Chests abroad should be carried to an account to be specially opened as the Military Chest account.

Imprests to be posted as Navy services, effective, till abstracts are furnished.

Sign-manual warrant for army services.

14.—The orders which will be addressed to him for the payment of the effective services will, so far as relates to the Army, be Sign Manual Warrants of His Majesty, countersigned by this Board; upon which will be set forth the total amount granted by Parliament for each head of Effective Army Service for the year; and upon this Warrant will be founded the orders or warrants of the Secretary-at-War, issued from time to time from that department. The warrants of the Secretary-at-War will be so prepared that all the several sums which may be to be received by one and the same agent at the same time, though for different regiments, shall be set forth in one and the same warrant, instead of the separate warrants now in use; but care must be taken not to include in the same warrant issues to be made for different classes of services; and the Paymaster-general will be held responsible to this Board not to issue a larger sum for any head of service for any year, upon the order of the Paymaster-general not to issue more than voted under any head for Army.

Secretary-

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

Secretary-at-War, than that stated in the Sign Manual Warrant, without first obtaining the special sanction of this Board.

15.—In the case of the Navy and Ordnance, warrants will in like manner be issued from this Board to the Paymaster-general, setting forth the sums granted by Parliament for each head of effective service, and the Paymaster-general will take care that no larger amount is issued upon any orders received by him for Ordnance services than the amount of the specific grant for each head of service until after special report to this Board, nor, in the case of the Navy, than the aggregate amount of the several Votes for effective services taken together.

Paymaster-general not to issue more than voted under any head for Ordnance.

16.—It will be a subject for future consideration, whether an arrangement may not satisfactorily be made for enabling the Paymaster-general to record at once, in the case of the payments made in this country for Naval services, in the same manner as in that of the Army and Ordnance, the particular head of service to which every payment shall be carried.

Practicability of applying naval payments at once to heads of service to be considered hereafter.

17.—No payment for any Naval service, either by way of imprest or of final payment, will be made, except upon an order signed by one of the Lords of the Admiralty, and by the Accountant-general of the Navy; nor any payment for any Ordnance service, except upon the signature of the Master-general, or of Two of the Members of the Board of Ordnance. It will rest with the Secretary-at-War, the Lords of the Admiralty, and the Board of Ordnance, to prescribe such forms of warrants or orders as shall appear to them respectively to be the best calculated for the particular case of each department.

Bills to be signed by the Accountant-general and a Lord of the Admiralty.

18.—All such warrants or orders must be delivered either by the parties in whose favour they are issued, or be transmitted by the department itself, to the Paymaster-general, and be noted in the accountant's branch of his office, and be there deposited, to accompany the accounts of the Paymaster-general for the examination of the Commissioners of Audit. The parties applying for payment upon such warrants or orders, must address themselves, in the first instance, to that branch of the office, and will there be furnished with an authority to the Paymaster, by whom the service is paid, and who will make the payment either by a check on the Bank of England for the amount payable at the Bank, or by an order upon a Bank Clerk sitting at the Pay-office, who will be appointed by the Bank for that purpose, and who will upon such order pay the party in cash. My Lords will, in a future part of this Minute, point out those classes of services which will be payable in the manner last mentioned.

Process of paying Bills.

19.—All subsisting general warrants of authority must therefore be delivered at the Pay-office as soon as the consolidation takes place, in order that they may be there recorded, deposited and acted upon.

All existing General Orders for payment to be communicated.

20.—The practice now in force at the Navy Pay-office with respect to allotment tickets and other orders for the payment of certain small sums on account of wages, will continue in force at the Consolidated Office. The parties will be paid the sums allotted to each at the prescribed periods, their receipts taken for such payments, and the amount be carefully set forth on the original orders under which they are paid, (which they retain), and upon the duplicates which remain with the Paymaster-general. The receipts must, however, be transmitted to the Accountant-general of the Navy, in order that he may be enabled, not only to charge the amount in his books against the several persons on whose account such advances have been made to their relatives, but also have the means of proving that fact in every case when the ships' books are made up, and the wages are paid to the seamen.

Allotments to continue in force.

Allotment receipts to be sent to Admiralty after payment, to be set off.

21.—The Accountant-general, on the other hand, will furnish to the Paymaster-general a monthly abstract prepared from such receipts, to be signed by one of the Lords of the Admiralty, which will show the amount paid during the month upon such accounts, and that certificate will be admitted by the Commissioners of Audit as a voucher for such payments in the Paymaster-general's accounts.

Certificate of allotments paid to be furnished by Accountant-general.

22.—The Navy and Ordnance Effective Services are frequently paid by means of bills drawn by the parties who are to receive such monies on their own behalf or are to account for them thereafter.

Bills of Exchange.

23.—In the Ordnance such bills are never drawn, except upon a distinct direction given in each case; and my Lords are therefore of opinion that for the future all such bills should be drawn upon the Paymaster-general, and be accepted, payable at the Bank of England, due authority being given to him by the Board of Ordnance to accept, and by him to the Bank to pay, all such bills.

Ordnance Bills of Exchange to be drawn on the Paymaster-general.

24.—In the Navy, however, such bills are more generally drawn under the authority of general regulations; and as the Paymaster-general could not be apprised beforehand that the parties were duly authorised to draw the bills which might be presented to him, delay and inconvenience would be sustained by the public if such bills were drawn upon him, because, before they could be accepted, he would have to refer in almost every case to the Admiralty.

Navy Bills of Exchange;

25.—The better course, therefore, with respect to these bills will be, that they should still be drawn, as at present, upon the Accountant-general of the Navy, and be accepted by him under the authority of the Admiralty, payable at the Bank of England, on the account of the Paymaster-general, due notice of all such acceptances being given to the Bank on the one hand, and to the Paymaster-general on the other. The bills would be vouchers to the Paymaster-general's accounts, and would be admitted as such by the Commissioners of Audit.

to be drawn on the Accountant-general, and accepted payable at the Bank.

26.—Payments for Army services in Ireland have been heretofore made upon the warrants of the Secretary-at-War, issued from time to time upon the Vice-treasurer, who acts as Paymaster-general in that part of the United Kingdom.

Army services, Ireland.

27.—Upon the receipt of such warrants, the Vice-treasurer submits to the Lord Lieutenant a recommendation for the issue to himself, as Paymaster-general, of the exact sum set forth in

Ditto.

Pay Office.
T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

in the order of the Secretary-at-War, and upon his receipt of the Lord Lieutenant's warrant, he countersigns and transmits it to the Teller of the Exchequer, by whom the amount is transferred from the Exchequer account in the books of the Bank of Ireland to the separate account of the Vice-treasurer, as Paymaster-general. The Vice-treasurer then grants his check on the bank in favour of the party named in the warrant of the Secretary-at-War.

Army services, Ireland. 28.—Instead of this complicated course of proceeding, my Lords desire that the warrants of the Secretary-at-War for payments in Ireland shall be addressed to the Paymaster-general, in the same manner as for services in England, and that the sum thereby ordered to be issued shall be transferred by the Paymaster-general from his account with the Bank of England to that of the Bank of Ireland, a direction being at the same time transmitted to the Bank of Ireland to place the amount to the credit of the party named in the Secretary-at-War's warrant. The party in whose favour such account is raised in the books of the Bank of Ireland must be required by the Paymaster-general to deposit with the Bank of Ireland an acknowledgment that the amount has been placed to his credit in the books of that bank, and the bank must be requested to receive that acknowledgment, and to transmit it to the Paymaster-general before they honour any of the drafts of the party on account of the credit so raised in his favour.

Ditto. 29.—My Lords will communicate with the Bank of Ireland, in order that their consent may be obtained to this arrangement.

Ordnance services, Ireland. 30.—The Master-general and Board of Ordnance having under consideration a general measure with respect to all Ordnance services in that part of the empire, my Lords think it will not be advisable to alter in the meantime the arrangements under which the payments are there made for such services.

Ditto. 31.—The Paymaster-general will therefore continue to transfer money, from time to time, from his account with the Bank of England to the credit of the Bank of Ireland, upon the order of the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, on account of the deputy treasurer in Dublin, and the receipts of that officer, and the order of the Board of Ordnance for making such transfer, will be his vouchers.

Ditto. 32.—The deputy treasurer must, however, render his accounts, supported by all the vouchers, monthly to the Paymaster-general, to be by him transmitted for examination to the Auditors of Public Acounts.

Naval payments at the ports. 33.—Payments for Naval services are made in this country at the ports of Sheerness, Chatham, Portsmouth and Devonport, by pay clerks, borne on the establishments of the Treasurer of the Navy, and by the storekeepers at Pembroke, Woolwich, and Deptford dockyards, as well as by other sub-accountants, for sums of smaller amount, at the marine stations and naval hospitals. At Woolwich and Deptford yards, other payments, besides those by the storekeepers, are made at certain fixed intervals, and also when ships' wages are paid, by a clerk despatched expressly for that purpose from the office in London.

Ditto. 34.—My Lords are of opinion that the pay clerks at Sheerness, Chatham, Portsmouth and Devonport, should be hereafter upon the establishment of the Paymaster-general, as they now are upon that of the Treasurer of the Navy, and should make the whole of these payments, except those for the non-effective charges of the Navy, in the same manner and under like authorities as at present, and that they should be furnished with funds to make such payments under the same regulations as now exist, through the Bank of England, upon orders from the Admiralty. My Lords will prescribe the course to be taken with respect to the non-effective charges in the future part of this Minute; but as these pay clerks will be on the establishment of the Paymaster-general, my Lords are of opinion, that they should transmit weekly to him an abstract, certified by the check clerks of the port, and by the captain or admiral superintendent, showing the amount paid by them during the week, and the balance in hand at its close.

Pay clerks to be on the establishment of the new office.

Weekly accounts of port payments, and balance to be transmitted.

Payments at Woolwich. 35.—The payments at Woolwich are, as already stated, partly for services connected with the yard itself, and partly for wages to ships' crews, or allotments on account of wages. It appears, from the statement of the Accountant-general of the Navy, that the whole of these payments cannot be made by the storekeeper without an undue interference with the other duties of his office; and although my Lords are desirous of avoiding what they think a very inconvenient practice, viz., that of despatching a clerk from London to make such payments, it will nevertheless be necessary that that practice should be continued for the present with respect to all payments not immediately connected with the service of the yard. But my Lords request the Lords of the Admiralty will consider whether an arrangement might not be made under which every payment at Woolwich might hereafter be made through the storekeeper. In any case the whole of the payments for the yard should at once be transferred to him, and imprests made to him of the sums required to defray such charges by order of the Lords of the Admiralty. It will be his duty, however, to attend, or to depute some one on his behalf, and for whom he will be accountable, to attend at the Pay-office, with his receipt, for the purpose of receiving such imprests from time to time.

Payments at Deptford. 36.—With respect to payments at Deptford yard, it appears that the payments for services not connected with the yard are so few, and of such trifling amount, that there will be no difficulty in effecting them through the storekeeper of victualling, to whom imprests will be made in the same manner as to the storekeeper at Woolwich.

Payments at Pembroke. 37.—The system now in force at Pembroke will be continued, and the imprests to the storekeeper there will be made, as at present, through the Bank of England.

Ordnance imprest. Accountants to draw on the Paymaster-general. 38.—The Ordnance sub-accountants in Great Britain, in every case, except at the Tower, and at any other station in the immediate vicinity of London, where the personal attendance of the party will not be inconvenient to the service, will be furnished with the funds for making the payments ordered by the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, by means of bills on the Paymaster-general, which they will be authorised to draw by the Board of Ordnance, the authority to accept such bills being at the same time given to the Paymaster-general. The payments for wages and small disbursements at the Tower should be made by an officer of the storekeeper's establishment, as at the other stations, and imprests made to him, and to any other storekeeper not drawing bills in person at the Pay-office from time to time for such purposes.

the

Commissariat advances; present practice.

39.—The whole of the monies raised for the public service abroad, except the small sums drawn from time to time by captains or pursers of His Majesty's ships, are procured by means of the bills of the commissariat officers upon this Board, which are paid in the first instance out of Army grants; and the wants of the Naval and Ordnance services are supplied, as already adverted to, by imprests made by the different commissaries from the military chests to the officers of those two branches of the public service, re-payment from the grants of Parliament for those services being made in this country, upon certificates from the Commissioners of Audit that such advances have been received abroad by the Naval and Ordnance officers.

Commissariat advances to be paid as soon as possible.

40.—In order that the Paymaster-general may be enabled as soon as possible to make the proper transfer in his books from the Naval and Ordnance grants, in repayment of such advances, to the credit of the account out of which the bills of the commissaries upon this Board have been paid, it will be proper that he should be authorised by the Lords of the Admiralty, and the Board of Ordnance, to make such transfers as soon as they are satisfied that the monies have been actually advanced to their officers abroad; and further, that he should thereafter be furnished with statements, both by the Admiralty and Ordnance, showing the precise heads of expense as voted by Parliament, to which such advances have been applied in detail; and he will take care immediately to call the attention of this Board to the fact, if it shall at any time appear that the amounts so directed to be charged on the Naval or Ordnance grants, in repayment of such advances, shall, together with the payments he may himself have made in this country, occasion any exceeding upon any of the Votes of Parliament.

Excess of Navy and Ordnance Votes by transfers to be reported to Treasury.

Ditto Army.

41.—In like manner he will report to this Board if any directions given to him by the Secretary at War to make charges on the army grant, in repayment of advances for military services abroad, shall occasion any exceeding on amount of those grants as voted by Parliament.

Non-effective payments.

42.—In the case of the non-effective charges for the three services, My Lords are of opinion, that the same course should be taken as in that of the grants for effective services; and that as soon as such grants shall have been made by the House of Commons, the amount thereof should be set forth in warrants to be issued by this Board, authorising the Paymaster-general to pay such sums as shall be ordered by the Secretary-at-War, the Lords of the Admiralty, the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, and the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, for such services within the limits of the several grants. But my Lords do not think that the order for making such payments to individuals should be given in every individual case, as is now the practice in the Naval Department.

Special orders for payment of Naval half-pay to cease.

Army practice to be adopted by Navy and Ordnance.

43.—My Lords are of opinion, on the other hand, that the practice now followed with respect to the non-effective charges of the army is more simple, and should be adopted with respect to all Naval and Ordnance non-effective services.

Lists of half-pay and pensions to be prepared by the Admiralty and Ordnance, not renewable every year.

44.—For this purpose, therefore, the best course will be, that in the departments of the Navy and Ordnance, lists should be prepared and delivered to the Pay-office, signed by the proper authorities in each department, showing the names, rates, whether daily, quarterly or annual, and all other particulars affecting the case of every individual to whom an allowance of half-pay, pension or other gratuity, in whatever form, has been granted, and that the Paymaster-general should, when those lists are once deposited with him, pay the several parties from time to time, as the several allowances become due, without any further or other authority from the Admiralty or Ordnance.

Original lists to be copied by Paymaster-general, and transmitted to Audit Board with his accounts.

45.—These lists will accompany his accounts to the Commissioners of Audit, and will be the authority to that Board to admit the several payments when supported by the receipts of the parties, copies of the lists being first taken by the Paymaster-general to remain for his future guidance in his own office.

All additions or removals to be reported,

46.—All grants of non-effective allowances made hereafter, and all changes from full to half-pay, or from half to full pay, and all removals from the lists for any other cause, must be certified by the proper departments to the Paymaster-general, who will thereupon correct the copy of the lists in his possession, and from time to time transmit such orders as his authority to the Commissioners of Audit, by whom the proper entries will be made in the original lists.

Lists to be renewed every second or third year.

47.—It will, therefore, under this regulation, be unnecessary to make annual or quarterly copies of these lists, either in the War-office, Admiralty or Ordnance, and that labour will be for the future avoided; My Lords, being of opinion, that it will be sufficient for the public service if the lists are renewed and transmitted to the Pay-office at the termination of every second or third year, as may be necessary.

Deaths to be reported.

48.—On the other hand, all deaths certified to the Paymaster-general must be reported before the close of the year to the Secretary-at-War, the Lords of the Admiralty, and the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, as the case may be, and their authority received for striking the names off the list, that authority being likewise transmitted to the Commissioners of Audit. This arrangement would leave those departments, as they should be, judges of all the circumstances prior to the grant of the half-pay or pension, and would devolve upon the Paymaster-general, with respect to the Naval and Ordnance non-effective services, the same duty which the Army Pay-office now performs in the case of the army non-effective payments, Identity of party and correctness of sum claimed to be ascertained by the Paymaster-general.

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

ments, that of ascertaining that the applicant is the party entitled to the payment, and that the amount which he claims is in conformity with the order for payment.

Existing regulations respecting remittances to continue in force.

49.—The whole of the existing regulations by which such payments are made in the case of the Army and Navy services by means of remittance bills upon the collectors of the revenue, and upon the Pay-office clerks at the ports, and by means of bills of exchange, which the parties are authorised, upon their application to that effect, to draw for the amount of their allowances, will continue in force, and will be extended to the Ordnance department, so as to give the same facilities to all the three branches of the service.

Remittance Bills to be prepared by the Paymaster-general.

The remittance bills must, however, in future be all prepared by the Paymaster-general, be transmitted by him to the parties to whom, and to the officers by whom, payment is to be made, and must be returned to him by the revenue departments, and by the pay clerks at the yards, as his vouchers with the Commissioners of Audit.

All bills of exchange for non-effective charges to be drawn on him.

In like manner all bills of exchange for this description of service must be drawn upon him, and be accepted, payable at the Bank of England, lists of all such acceptances being furnished to the Bank for the guidance of that establishment in making the payment.

Naval practice of permanent remittance bills to be extended.

50.—The practice which for some years has been in force in the Naval department, of making these payments in the country by means of permanent remittance bills, and which has lately been introduced into the Army Pay-office, has been found to diminish labour to a great extent, while the security of the public and of the individuals has certainly not been decreased thereby; and My Lords are, therefore, of opinion, that that practice should be extended as much as possible.

List of existing permanant remittance bills to be furnished by Accountant-general.

In order to enable the Paymaster-general to check the claims which will be made on him for repayment of advances made on the existing permanent remittance bills issued by the Admiralty, it will be necessary that a list of all such bills should be furnished to him by the Accountant-general of the Navy.

Revenue claims for non-effective payments to be settled every fortnight.

51.—With a view also to the rapid settlement of the accounts of such payments, My Lords are of opinion, that the Revenue Boards should be directed to instruct all their collectors to transmit to them their claims for advances made on account of half-pay and other non-effective charges, once in every fortnight, accompanied by the vouchers in support thereof, distinguishing the payments made for Army, Navy, and Ordnance, in order that they may apply at the end of every fortnight to the Paymaster-general for repayment of all such advances.

Non-effective charges paid by pay clerks at the ports.

In like manner, the Paymaster-general must himself instruct the pay clerks at the ports to transmit to him once a fortnight an account, supported by the receipts of the parties, of the payments made by them for non-effective naval services, and he will certify to the Lords of the Admiralty the amount which appears by such accounts to have been so applied out of the imprest for naval services, in order that he may receive the directions of that Board as to the period when such amounts should be replaced to the accounts of the pay clerks from the grant for non-effective navy services.

Replacing amount paid for non-effective services.

Non-effective charges paid by Commissaries abroad, to be furnished to the Paymaster-general by the Audit Board.

52.—In the case of such payments as are made in detail to individual parties from the military chests abroad for non-effective Navy and Ordnance services, it will be proper that in future the Commissioners of Audit should transmit to the Paymaster-general detailed abstracts of the accounts of such payments, together with the vouchers taken by the commissaries, in order, if the payments have been properly made by the commissaries, that he may transfer the amounts in his books to the debit of the proper grant of Parliament, and credit the account out of which the payments have been made in the colonies.

Mode of paying Chelsea out-pensions not to be disturbed.

53.—My Lords are not prepared at the present moment to direct that any alteration should be made with respect to the payment of the Chelsea out-pensions, which are effected under the direction of a separate office constituted for that sole purpose.

Greenwich out-pensions.

The Greenwich out-pensions being paid, however, by one of the cashiers of the Navy Pay-office, as a part of the duty of the Treasurer of the Navy, it is necessary that some alteration should be made with respect to those pensions, in order to place the future arrangements under which such payments will be accounted for upon the same footing as all other disbursements which will be made by the Paymaster-general.

Payment of Greenwich out-pensions.

54.—My Lords are of opinion, that the payments which are now made in London should be effected in the same manner as at present, upon lists framed upon the orders issued from time to time by the Lords of the Admiralty, by whom the pensions are granted; and that the remittance bills transmitted to those pensioners who reside in the country should be likewise prepared and forwarded to those individuals under the regulations now existing, such payments in London being made in the presence of the check clerks, whose certificate as to the fact of the payment will be admitted by the auditors as the Paymaster-general's voucher. The remittance bills will in like manner be signed by one of the check clerks.

Check clerks to be transferred to the Audit-office.

But those check clerks, instead of forming a branch of the Admiralty, will for the future be under the authority and direction of the Commissioners of Audit. The remittance bills paid by the revenue collectors must be returned to their respective Boards once in every fortnight, in the same manner as all other remittance bills for non-effective services; and the claim made by the revenue department must, with respect to these bills, be examined by the party who has issued the bills, and by one of the check clerks. On their joint certificate the Paymaster-general will transfer the amount from his account at the Bank to the account of the Receiver-general of the Revenue, instead of placing the money, as at present, to the separate account of the cashier of out-pensions, to be by him paid to the Receiver-general.

The question of consolidating Chelsea and Greenwich out-pensions to be hereafter considered.

55.—It does not appear necessary at the present moment to issue any further directions with respect to the Greenwich out-pension payments; but my Lords will hereafter have the whole subject of the regulations under which these pensions and those for the out-pensioners of Chelsea are paid under their consideration, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the two separate offices may not be consolidated, and a more simple arrangement made for the payment of both; and with a view to that object, they are of opinion that the establishment

Greenwich out-pensions to be a separate branch in the new office.

for

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

for paying the Greenwich out-pensioners should be considered as a separate and distinct branch of the Paymaster-general's Office.

56.—By the regulations issued under the authority of the Exchequer Regulation Act, monthly estimates are now furnished to my Lords of the sums which will probably be demanded in the course of the month for Army, Navy, and Ordnance services. Those monthly estimates will still be delivered, prepared in the same detail as at present; but they should be furnished by the Paymaster-general for the Navy and Ordnance as well as for the Army, and be prepared by him on information supplied to him by the other departments. My Lords propose this course, because it seems to them to be proper that the Paymaster-general should have in his own office the means of knowing at any period what will be the probable amount of his demands upon this Board.

Monthly estimate of Exchequer credits to be sent by the Paymaster-general.

57.—In like manner it appears to be proper, that the grant of credits upon the Exchequer out of the monies voted by Parliament, should take place upon a certificate from the Paymaster-general that such credit is required, it being at the same time stated on the face of the certificate what sum is still unexpended at the Exchequer account in the Bank, on account of the last credit granted for such service.

Exchequer credits to be granted on a certificate from the Paymaster-general.

58.—The weekly accounts now delivered to this Board, showing the monies received on repayments and other voluntary charges, payments made from the cash account, and balances remaining at the close of the week, will be furnished in the same manner as at present.

Weekly accounts now furnished to the Treasury to be continued.

59.—The monies which are received upon the voluntary account of the existing pay offices of the Army, Navy and Ordnance are of considerable amount in the aggregate in the course of the year, are very numerous, and many of them are for very small sums. Under the system about to be adopted, all the larger payments, which are for repayments at home on account of advances abroad, will be discontinued, and such advances will be settled as matter of account in the books of the Paymaster-general, and of the Bank, by transfer from one account to the credit of another; but there will remain a very considerable number of cash payments to be made by parties to the Paymaster-general on account of each of the three services. No such payments are ever made by the parties from whom the money is due, except upon an order issued to them to that effect. In order to consult the convenience of all such parties, and at the same time to ensure that no confusion takes place in carrying such payments to the proper accounts in the books of the Paymaster-general, it appears to my Lords that parties having payments to make should apply at the Pay-office, and receive an authority from the accountant of that office to make the payment to the Bank cashier sitting there, who will receive the money on account of the Bank of England, by whom it will be placed to the credit of the Paymaster-general. The person paying the money must produce at the Pay-office the direction received by him to make such payment, so that it may be there examined, that the sum he proposes to pay is that which is due. The Bank of England will be furnished from day to day by the Paymaster-general with a statement of all sums paid at the Pay-office to the Bank cashier attending at that office.

Extra receipts through the cash accounts.

Transfers.

60.—The Secretary-at-War, the Lords of the Admiralty, and the Board of Ordnance, will have to furnish lists to the Paymaster-general from time to time of the sums so directed to be paid to him, specifying the particular heads of account to which such payments are to be carried; and the Paymaster-general, on the other hand, must furnish weekly, on the first day of each week, an account to each department of the several sums received from parties at his office, and carried to his account at the Bank.

Lists to the Paymaster-general authorizing the receipt of money to be continued.

Paymaster-general to furnish a weekly account of sums received to each department.

61.—It is provided by the regulations now in force, that the cash accounts of the several paymasters shall be always exhausted before any drafts are made on the Exchequer credit accounts; and in order to ensure that this shall at no time be lost sight of, my Lords think it will be expedient now to provide that the Paymaster for effective services shall alone draw upon the cash account, and that the sums necessary to answer his drafts beyond the amount of that account shall be transferred thereto from time to time as they are absolutely required to be issued for the public service, upon accounts to be prepared by the accountant, by means of orders issued by the Paymaster-general or Assistant Paymaster-general. It will, of course, be necessary that accounts shall be separately kept in the books of the Bank and in those of the Pay-office for Army, Navy and Ordnance services, and that there should be distinctly marked, on the bills accepted, or drafts drawn, the particular account on which they are to be paid by the Bank.

Paymaster for effective services alone to draw on cash account.

Bills and drafts to be marked chargeable to different accounts at the Bank.

62.—The same course will be taken with respect to the payments for non-effective services, with this difference, however, that checks drawn and bills accepted for such services will only be payable out of the Exchequer credit granted to defray them.

Bills, &c., for non-effective services payable out of Exchequer credits.

63.—In order to afford to the Admiralty on the one hand, and to the Ordnance on the other, the fullest information as to the payments which have been made for those services, so as to enable them to prepare the accounts of expenditure which are required to be kept by the Accountant-general of the Navy, and the Clerk of the Ordnance, the Paymaster-general must transmit to each of those departments, on the first day of every week, an abstract, showing the total amount of the several payments which have been made in the preceding week, under the separate heads of service into which his accounts for Naval and Ordnance services are divided. And in addition to these regular weekly returns, he will, of course, afford all such further information as shall be required by either department. If it shall appear hereafter to be indispensable that daily accounts of payments made for naval services should be rendered to the Admiralty, my Lords will direct such accounts to be transmitted to that Board, but they entertain the hope that the weekly accounts now ordered will be found sufficient for the purpose for which the information is required.

Weekly accounts of payments by the Paymaster-general to be sent to the Admiralty.

If daily accounts are indispensable to be furnished.

64.—No payment whatever is now made by the Army Pay-office, be the amount ever so small, except by means of a cheque on the Bank of England. In the Navy and Ordnance Pay-offices, on Payments in office, cash and by cheque on the Bank.

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

on the other hand, the cashiers draw from the Bank sums of money in cash from time to time, and such monies being deposited in chests under lock, are applied by the cashiers in making payments, except for the larger sums, in cash, to those individuals who may be desirous of being paid in that manner rather than by a cheque upon the Bank. The system of making payments in this manner exists in both those departments, but in a greater degree in the Navy Pay-office. In the Ordnance it is principally confined to the payment of salaries, half-pay, pensions, and other non-effective charges. In the Navy Pay-office, where payments are made in cash for any other service than salaries, wages, or non-effective charges, the amount is generally limited to sums not exceeding 25 l. It is no doubt true, that in some classes of payments the individuals receiving the money would be exposed to great inconvenience if paid by cheque upon the Bank, and in some to the danger of fraud. The cases to which my Lords particularly allude are those of seamen receiving wages or prize, the relations of seamen receiving, on allotment tickets, portions of the wages of the men, and those widows and others to whom the sum paid is of very trifling amount; and to meet these cases it appeared to be expedient that some provision should be made under which the parties might be paid at once, in cash, at the Pay-office, the sum due to each.

A Bank cashier to attend at Pay-office.

65.—My Lords, objecting to the system heretofore in force in this respect, under which several different parties have each had sums of money under their own separate locks deposited in the office; and considering that a better and safer course would be, that an arrangement should be made with the Bank of England for the daily attendance of a clerk from that establishment, to be authorised by the Bank to meet such payments in cash as may be ordered by the proper officer of the Paymaster-general, and to receive payments tendered at the Pay-office by parties having to make such payments, have made an arrangement to that effect with the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. A cashier will therefore attend daily at the Pay-office on and after the day on which the consolidation shall take place; and the Paymaster-general will instruct the paymasters of effective and non-effective services to make all payments for or on account of ships' wages, and all payments for or on account of the pensions and allowances of the widows and children of petty officers and seamen, or on account of prize to soldiers or seamen, or their legal representatives, by means of orders on the Bank cashier sitting in his office. All other payments must be made by cheque on the Bank of England, unless upon further authority from this Board.

Description of payments to be made in office cash.

Chelsea Hospital payments and Naval prize.

66.—It remains for my Lords to prescribe in what manner they think the arrangements should be carried on in future with respect to the payments made by direction of the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, and for naval prize.

Naval prize.

67.—Under the existing arrangement as to naval prize, all claims on that account are submitted to the Lords of the Admiralty; a separate account of prize funds is kept by the Treasurer of the Navy, and payments are made by him out of that fund upon the order of the Lords of the Admiralty, signed by one Lord and the Accountant-general of the Navy. My Lords are of opinion that no better course can be taken in this matter.

Chelsea payments.

68.—In the case of Chelsea payments, however, my Lords think the following course should be adopted; viz., that no payment should be made at Chelsea except the weekly payments in small sums to the in-pensioners, wages to nurses and other attendants; that to make such payments, an imprest upon account should be made from time to time by the Paymaster-general to the Agent for Chelsea out-pensioners, upon an order to be issued for that purpose by the Commissioners of the Hospital, and that all other payments, whether for the salaries of the establishment, or the supplies furnished by contractors and others, should be made at the Pay-office by means of cheques upon the Bank of England, certified statements of the sums due to the different parties being transmitted periodically from the Commissioners of the Hospital to the Paymaster-general.

Army prize.

69.—The claims of parties to military prize should be examined, my Lords conceive, by the Commissioners of the Hospital, under the existing regulations; and such claims being certified by them, or by some person appointed by them for the purpose, to the Paymaster-general, should be paid by him out of the prize fund at his account at the Bank of England, to which account such fund should be transferred as soon as the consolidation takes place.

Commencement of the new system.

70.—My Lords desire that the necessary communications may be made to the Lords of the Admiralty, Master-general and Board of Ordnance, Secretary-at-War, Paymaster-general, and Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, and that they may be informed that my Lords propose that the consolidation shall take effect on and from the 1st of December next, whereby time will be afforded for making all the arrangements of detail which may be necessary in their respective offices.

71.—Transmit copies to the Paymaster-general, the Treasurer of the Navy, and the Treasurer of the Ordnance, and desire that they will respectively close their accounts on 30th November next, and transfer their balances to new accounts to be opened in the books of the Bank, to be styled, "The Account of His Majesty's Paymaster-general for Army Services,"—"The Account of His Majesty's Paymaster-general for Naval Services,"—"The Account of His Majesty's Paymaster-general for Ordnance Services,"—"The Account of His Majesty's Paymaster-general for Naval Prize."

72.—Transmit copy also to the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, and desire they will instruct the Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital to close his accounts on that day, and transfer the balance and stock to new accounts to be opened in the name of His Majesty's Paymaster-general.

73.—Acquaint the Governor and Deputy-Governor of the Bank with the directions given, so far as they relate to that establishment, and request that they will consider the accounts now ordered to be opened as public accounts within the operation of the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, cap. 15.

74.—Transmit

74.—Transmit copy of this Minute to the Commissioners of Audit, for their information. Pay Office.

75.—Transmit copy also to the Vice-Treasurer for Ireland, and desire him to submit to my Lords what further directions should be given for carrying this arrangement into effect, as far as relates to his office. T. M., 19 Aug. 1836.

Treasury Minute of 19th November 1836, containing further Regulations for the Government of the Office of His Majesty's Paymaster-General.

T. M., 19 Nov. 1836.

1.—My Lords advert to their Minute of 19th August last, in which they expressed their opinion that the consolidation of the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Chelsea Pay Offices should take effect on 1st December next; and they now proceed to consider what further directions it is necessary for their Lordships to issue for carrying into full effect the arrangements for making that consolidation, and what establishment of clerks and messengers, and at what salaries, it will be proper to sanction for carrying on the duties of the Consolidated Office after that day.

2.—As it is their Lordships' intention that the power of drawing cheques upon the Bank of England to make such payments as may be ordered by this Board, the Lords of the Admiralty, the Secretary at War, the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, and the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, shall be confined to the paymasters of effective and non-effective services, and the cashier of Greenwich out-pensions, or to such persons as shall be specially appointed and deputed by the Paymaster-general to assist those paymasters, if occasion require, or to supply their places during temporary absence, from illness or otherwise; it appears to my Lords that, for the security of the public, and in order to ensure simplicity and avoid confusion in carrying such cheques to the proper accounts at the Bank, and to give effect to the principles laid down in that respect in the Minute of 19th August, there should be only three drawing accounts at the Bank; one to be styled the Effective Service Account; the second, the Non-effective Service Account; and the third, the Greenwich Out-Pension Account. That such accounts should be supplied from time to time with the funds absolutely required to enable the paymasters and cashiers to make their payments by means of "Writes off," or transfers, first from the general cash account, until that is exhausted, and then from the Exchequer credits, which will be placed by the Exchequer, upon the orders of this Board, from time to time at the disposal of the Paymaster-general for Army, Navy, and Ordnance Services, at the Bank of England. It further appears to my Lords that such "Writes off" or transfers should only be issued upon the certificate of the accountant of the office, that the money is required to enable the paymasters and cashiers to make their payments; that they should be signed by the Paymaster-general himself, or the person appointed by him for that purpose, to provide for the case of his own absence; and that the Bank of England should be required not to pay any cheques drawn or bills accepted out of any accounts whatever but the three drawing accounts. Three drawing accounts to be opened at the Bank.

3.—The Bills drawn upon this Board by Commissaries abroad, those drawn for naval services upon the Accountant-general of the Navy, and those drawn upon the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, all of which will be accepted, payable at the Bank, should be made payable out of the account raised for effective services. Those drawn upon the Paymaster-general should be accepted by an officer specially appointed for that purpose, and to be responsible that all such acceptances have been duly authorised. As these bills will be drawn, some for effective and some for non-effective services, they should be accepted, payable upon the particular account to which they are properly chargeable. Bills to be payable on effective and non-effective service accounts.

4.—My Lords are of opinion that no cheque whatever should be payable by the Bank of England, unless countersigned by some person properly authorised by the Paymaster-general, the names and signatures of such persons being previously communicated by the Paymaster-general to the Bank; and that no bill whatever, by whomsoever accepted, should be paid by the Bank, unless there shall have been previously delivered at that establishment a list of the particulars of all such acceptances, signed by the paymaster or cashier, drawing upon the account out of which such bills have been made payable. As the paymasters and cashiers will not themselves accept bills, they will satisfy themselves, before signing such lists, that they have been examined by the accountant of the office, and that he has ascertained that the bills have been accepted under competent authority. Cheques to be countersigned. Bill lists.

5.—These lists will therefore afford to the public the same security with respect to the bills as the counter-signature with respect to the cheques.

6.—All bills accepted payable at the Bank, prior to 1st December, and falling due after that day, and all such bills and cheques outstanding on that day, whether originally made payable out of any of the Exchequer Credits for Army or Ordnance, or out of the Cash Accounts for Army or Ordnance, the existing Account for Naval Services, the Naval Prize Account, the general Account of the Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, the Poundage Account, the Unclaimed Prize Account, or out of any other account at present raised in the books of the Bank for the public service of any of the offices about to be abolished, should, my Lords are of opinion, be paid on and after 1st December out of the accounts to be on that day raised in the Bank, in the name of His Majesty's Paymaster-general for Non-effective Services, for Effective Services, and for Greenwich Hospital Out-Pensions, as the case may be; such information as is necessary being furnished to the Bank for that purpose; and the several payments charged thereafter to the proper heads of service in the books of the Paymaster-general. Outstanding bills and cheques payable out of effective and non-effective accounts.

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Nov. 1836.

Port Accounts.

Monthly certificate.

7.—With respect to the pay clerks at the ports, it appears to my Lords that as all their payments for all effective services will continue to be made under the Lords of the Admiralty, either upon general regulation or specific direction, the accounts rendered by them for such payments, accompanied by the several vouchers in support thereof, should be rendered, as at present, to the Accountant-general of the Navy, by whom an abstract of such payments, duly certified by one of the Lords of the Admiralty, should be transmitted to the Paymaster-general immediately after the termination of each month, showing the several heads of service for which the payments have been made, and the amount paid; and that such abstract, when so certified, should, as in the case of the allotment tickets, upon which payments will take place at the office in London, be the vouchers upon which such payments should be admitted by the Commissioners of Audit to the credit of the Paymaster-general. The vouchers taken by the pay-clerks for payments made for non-effective services, will be transmitted direct to the Paymaster-general, and will, for those payments, be his vouchers with the auditors.

Non-effective vouchers.

Pensions, &c., payable at Deptford and Woolwich.

8.—It appears that arrangements cannot at present be made for paying at Woolwich and Deptford Dockyards, by means of the storekeepers at those yards, the pensions, and other non-effective charges now paid there by clerks despatched for that purpose from the Navy Pay-office. My Lords are therefore of opinion, that clerks must be despatched from the Paymaster-general's Office, at the periods at which the payments become due at Woolwich and Deptford, furnished with the necessary funds for paying to the several individuals the sum due to each respectively, in the same manner as clerks will be despatched for payment of ships' wages. My Lords are however very desirous that the Lords of the Admiralty should consider whether a more simple and more economical arrangement might not be made for the payment of all the non-effective charges and allotment tickets at Woolwich and Deptford, by means of some person under their authority resident at each yard. It appears to my Lords that such an arrangement would be more advantageous to the individuals, as well as to the public, because in the one case a resident officer would have better means of checking attempts of personation and other modes of fraud, than a clerk merely proceeding thither at intervals; and in the other, because it may happen that, from illness, absence, or other cause, parties may be unable to attend on the usual day of payment, in which case they will either be obliged to wait, probably at considerable personal inconvenience, until the next period of payment, or be forced to attend in the interval at the office in London.

Naval storekeepers, &c., to pay non-effective services.

9.—The payments of the non-effective charges at all other stations at home and abroad, where there are naval agents, will be made by those agents, and the amount so paid by them set off to the proper account, upon the necessary vouchers being transmitted by the Accountant-general to the Paymaster-general.

Arrears prior to 1 October 1836, payable on orders from the Admiralty.

10.—In order to avoid the difficulties which might otherwise take place with respect to the payment of the several non-effective naval charges incurred and due up to the termination of the last quarter, ended 30th September, my Lords are of opinion that all such payments should be made by the Paymaster-general, upon specific orders, to be issued in each case by the Lords of the Admiralty, under the regulations in force with respect to such payments at present, and that the regulations which are to commence and take effect on and after 1st December, should apply, so far as they relate to non-effective naval charges, to such charges only as will arise upon account of the quarter commencing on 1st October 1836, and coming in course of payment after 1st January 1837.

Payments through the Revenue Boards to be claimed from the Admiralty to 30 September 1836.

11.—It will be necessary therefore that all remittance bills issued by the Lords of the Admiralty for the payment of half-pay due previously to 1st October, should, when paid, be returned as heretofore by the Revenue Boards and pay clerks at the ports to the Accountant-general of the Navy for examination, in order that a direction may issue through that office for repaying the amount to the Revenue Department, or for charging the amount to the proper head of service in the books of the Paymaster-general. With respect to any bills of exchange for half-pay due previously to 1st October, and which may be outstanding unaccepted on 1st December, such bills, when accepted by the Accountant-general of the Navy, will be payable at the Bank of England upon the Paymaster-general's Account for Non-effective Services; a list in duplicate of such acceptances being furnished by the Accountant-general to the Paymaster-general; the original being retained by the latter, to accompany his accounts to the auditors; the duplicate being transmitted to the Bank, with an authority for the payment of the bills.

Advice lists of bills due to be sent to the Pay-office.

12.—It appears to my Lords that this mode of communicating to the Bank an authority for paying bills on the account of the Paymaster-general, viz., by lists of such bills, signed by one of his own officers, is preferable to that proposed by the Minute of 19th August. My Lords have already adverted to the nature of the additional security which they think will thereby be afforded to the public, and they are desirous that such duplicate lists should be therefore transmitted to the Pay-office by the Accountant-general, and also from the Ordnance, with respect to a class of bills which will still be accepted by that department, and to which my Lords will advert hereafter.

Non-effective D. D. claims to be examined at the Admiralty.

13.—In the case of claims for naval half-pay or pensions due to deceased parties, my Lords desire that no payment may be made by the Paymaster-general until such claims shall have been referred to and examined by the Accountant-general of the Navy.

Payments at the Tower.

14.—It appears upon communication with the Master-general and Board of Ordnance, that although there will be no objection to payment of all small disbursements, which ought to be immediately discharged at the Tower by means of an imprest to be made to some person upon their establishment, yet that the weekly payments of wages, &c., cannot be so made at present, there being no person in the department at the Tower who could properly be made a pecuniary accountant for that purpose. My Lords will therefore instruct the Paymaster-general,

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Nov. 1836.

general, until a better arrangement can be made for the purpose, to despatch a clerk once a week to the Tower, on the usual day for making such payments (Friday), charged with funds for that purpose, and will request the Master-general and Board to give orders that the Paymaster-general may be furnished on the previous day, or on the morning of Friday, with a list of the payments to be made to the several parties.

Bills of Exchange upon the Board of Ordnance.

15.—The only bills which, under the new arrangement, will be drawn on the Master-general and Board, will be by officers on the march in Great Britain, for bread, meat, and forage for the troops. The accounts for the amounts to be so drawn will be rendered to the Surveyor-general, and the Paymaster-general will have no means, without reference to the Ordnance, which would occasion delay and inconvenience, of knowing whether the bills should be accepted or not. My Lords think that these bills, like those drawn upon the Accountant-general of the Navy, should be accepted, payable out of the Effective Service Account of the Paymaster-general at the Bank of England, and that, as in the case of the Navy, duplicate lists of such acceptances, and the orders of the Board of Ordnance, authorising the acceptances, should be transmitted to the Paymaster-general; the order of the Board, and the original list to accompany his accounts to the auditors; the duplicate to be forwarded to the Bank to sanction the payment of the bills.

Ordnance payments for other departments.

16.—There is one class of services conducted by the Board of Ordnance for which it appears to be doubtful that sufficient provision has been made in the Minute of 19th August last; that Board is frequently employed, because the service is performed more economically and in a manner advantageous to the public service, in procuring supplies of various kinds for other departments of the Government, and for service in the colonies. Payments for such supplies are made in the first instance out of monies at the disposal of the Ordnance, and when repayment is subsequently made, the amount is carried to the credit of the proper account. As it is necessary, for the advantage of the public service, that this system should continue in force, and that the Ordnance be employed for this purpose, my Lords desire that the Paymaster-general will continue to act upon the existing regulations in that respect, taking care, as at present, to charge the payments and repayments to the proper accounts in his books.

Repayments.

Bank clerks.

17.—Adverting to the arrangement under which the Bank of England will depute clerks to attend at the Pay-office for the purpose of receiving all monies payable to the Paymaster-general, and of paying in cash certain classes of service in which such payments could not be advantageously made by means of cheques payable at the Bank, and to the recommendation of the Lords of the Admiralty that such payments should not be strictly confined to the classes named in the Minute of 19th August last, but that a discretion should be granted in that respect to the Paymaster-general in the same manner as such discretion has heretofore been exercised by the Treasurer of the Navy, my Lords, desirous of affording to all parties attending at the Pay-office to receive monies due to them by the public, whether for effective or non-effective services, every facility to receive such monies which may be consistent with the proper discharge of the duties of that office, and particularly in cases in which from age or infirmity it would be inconvenient for the parties to proceed to the Bank to be paid, are pleased, in accordance with the recommendation of the Lords of the Admiralty in that respect, to authorise the Paymaster-general to extend the payments by the Bank clerks at his office beyond the several classes and services to which such payments were confined by the Minute of 19th August, to such other cases as in his judgment it may be proper to extend such facility, due care being at the same time taken that no undue or unnecessary extension of that mode of payment be permitted. The payments should be made upon orders issued to the Bank clerks in each case, such orders being exchanged at the close of the hours of business each day, for cheques to be drawn for the amount so paid during the course of the day by the paymasters of non-effective and of effective services, each to the extent of the sum paid on their respective accounts.

Paymaster-general may extend payments in cash.

Bank clerks to receive monies on cash account.

18.—With respect to the payments which the Bank clerks will receive for the Paymaster-general, it will be necessary that an account of the amount of all such sums so paid to them, and for which the Bank will be responsible, should be transmitted from the Pay-office to the Governor and Company of the Bank immediately after the close of business every day.

Accounts to be balanced daily.

19.—The books of the office must be closed as soon as the payments of the day are over, and the accounts of payments and receipts carefully examined and balanced by the respective paymasters and the Accountant-general, as the business of the day is not to be considered as terminated until the whole of the accounts of receipts and payments are carefully and accurately balanced and settled.

Pass books to be examined daily.

20.—The books of the drawing accounts should be procured from the Bank as early as possible every morning, and the account of receipts and payments entered therein should be forthwith compared and examined with the transactions of the previous day, as exhibited in the books of the office.

Balances of Royal orders and Exchequer credits.

21.—As the Royal Orders which have been issued for the grant of credits for Army, Navy, and Ordnance Services, to the Paymaster of the Forces, Treasurer of the Navy, and Treasurer of the Ordnance, will not have been exhausted by the grant of credits to the full amount thereof, my Lords are of opinion that the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer should, upon orders from time to time from this Board, continue to grant credits upon such Royal Orders, until they are exhausted, such credits being granted in the name of His Majesty's Paymaster-general, and that the Bank should place at the disposal of His Majesty's Paymaster-general the balance of all credits already granted upon such Royal Orders, in the same manner as if they had been originally granted to him.

Letters to be sent free of postage.

22.—In order to enable the Paymaster-general to communicate with his officers at the ports and at Dublin, and with the several individuals throughout the empire entitled to receive payments

Pay Office.

T. M., 19 Nov. 1836.

ments and allowances from his office, it will be necessary that, in addition to his own privilege of sending and receiving letters free of postage, he should be empowered to name three persons upon his establishment to frank all such letters as it shall be necessary to despatch by the post upon the official business of his department; such correspondence to be confined exclusively to such official business. My Lords therefore desire that the necessary directions may be issued to the Postmaster-general, authorising and instructing him, under the powers, privileges, and authority vested in the Paymaster-general, and in this Board, by the Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35, to permit all letters to pass free of postage which shall be addressed to His Majesty's Paymaster-general, or to the individual holding that office; and in like manner to permit all letters to pass free of postage which shall be franked in the usual manner by the person holding the office, and also all letters franked on the official business of the office by the signature of any of the three persons upon the Pay-office establishment, who will be named to him by the Paymaster-general for that purpose; provided that in the case of these last-mentioned letters the outer covers have written upon them the words "Office of His Majesty's Paymaster-general," and "On His Majesty's Service."

23.—Write to the Lords of the Admiralty, the Master-general, and Board of Ordnance, the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England, respectively, communicating to each the several directions and regulations of this Minute, so far as such directions and regulations severally apply to them.

Existing establishments.

24.—My Lords, in considering what establishment will be necessary for carrying on the various duties to be performed in this department at Whitehall, in the Greenwich Hospital Out-Pension Office, at the ports of Sheerness, Chatham, Portsmouth, and Devonport, and at Dublin, have before them the existing establishment now engaged in the discharge of those duties.

Navy Pay-office.

25.—The establishment of the Navy Pay Office, including that for the ports, and for the Greenwich Out-Pension Office, consists of—

47 Officers and Clerks, and 21 inferior persons, as Housekeeper, Messengers, &c.

The actual annual charge for this establishment is 16,552 l. The charge at its minimum would be 13,980 l., and at its maximum 22,910 l.

Army Pay-office.

26.—In the Army Pay-office there are employed—

44 Officers and Clerks, and 6 inferior persons.

The actual charge being 15,803 l.; the minimum 13,613 l., and the maximum 16,663 l.

Ordnance Pay-office.

27.—In the Ordnance Pay-office, including therein the establishment at Dublin, there are—

11 Officers and Clerks, and 2 Messengers.

The actual charge is 4,123 l.; the minimum 3,255 l., and the maximum 4,385 l.

Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital.

28.—The establishment of the office of Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital consists of—

9 Officers and Clerks, and 1 Messenger.

The charge for this office is 2,274 l. per annum; but by an arrangement already made for transferring, under the directions of the Minute of 19 August, the examination of all questions relating to army prize from the office of Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital to that of the Secretary, and by the consequent increase of that office, which has been made by transfer from the office of Treasurer, the numbers after this transfer are reduced to six, and the annual charge to 1,886 l.

Half-pay and pension branch, Admiralty.

29.—In addition to these numbers, a diminution of four clerks will take place in the establishment of the Accountant-general of the Navy, in consequence of the transfer from that office to the office of Paymaster-general of certain duties now performed in the former relating to the half-pay and pensions.

30.—The actual annual charge for these four persons is 912 l.; the minimum charge is 772 l., and the maximum 1,382 l.

31.—The total number of persons who are now engaged, therefore, in the discharge of the duties which will hereafter be performed under the superintendence of the Paymaster-general is—

112 Officers and Clerks, and 30 inferior persons.

32.—The actual annual charge of these establishments is 44,476 l., including therein the salaries of the Paymaster of the Forces, the Treasurer of the Navy, and the Treasurer of the Ordnance. The charge, at its minimum, would be 38,706 l., and at its maximum 52,426 l.

Future establishment.

33.—After the fullest and most mature consideration which my Lords have been able to give to the subject, they are of opinion that the whole of those duties may, for the future, be correctly and properly discharged by an establishment consisting of—

93 Officers and Clerks, and 19 Messengers, &c.

34.—Such establishment to be distributed as follows:

Whitehall.

At WHITEHALL:

62 Officers and Clerks, 1 Housekeeper, and 7 Messengers.

At

Pay-office.

T. M., 19 Nov. 1836.

At the Ports of Sheerness, Chatham, Portsmouth, and Devonport:—

12 Clerks and 1 Assistant Clerk, and 7 Messengers.

Ports: Dublin.

At Dublin:

3 Clerks, and 1 Messenger.

35.—In the Greenwich Out-pension Office, which my Lords propose on the ground stated in the Minute of 19 August, as a separate branch of the office,— Greenwich out-pension branch.

15 Officers and Clerks, and 3 Messengers.

36.—The total number to be employed being therefore—

93 Officers and Clerks, and 19 inferior persons.

37.—The reduction, as compared with the existing establishments, will be—

19 Officers and Clerks, and 11 inferior persons.

38.—My Lords are of opinion, that this establishment, exclusive of the Greenwich Out-pension Office, should be divided, for the discharge of the duties, into the following classes; viz.: Whitehall branch.

1 Assistant Paymaster-general.
1 Accountant-general.
1 Assistant Accountant.
1 Paymaster of Non-effective Services.
1 Paymaster of Effective Services.
8 Principal Clerks.
17 Senior Clerks, the Chief Clerks making payments at the ports being selected from this class.
22 Assistant Clerks.
25 Junior Clerks.

39.—And that such classes should be again distributed into branches, for the discharge of the duties, in such manner as shall from time to time appear to the Paymaster-general the best calculated to ensure the prompt and correct execution of those duties. Separate divisions.

40.—In considering what rates of salaries should be assigned to the different individuals to be employed upon this establishment, my Lords have reference, not to the existing establishments, in which, in addition to other officers having salaries from 600 l. to 1,200 l. per annum, there are eight cashiers or paymasters, having salaries from 600 l. to 1,000 l. per annum, but solely to what in their judgment is really necessary to secure for the public the services of persons properly qualified to discharge the duties and incur the pecuniary responsibilities of such an office, affording to them, on the one hand, a fair remuneration for their labour, and for the trusts they undertake, and on the other, taking care that no charge is imposed upon the public unnecessarily. Existing salaries.

41.—Upon a full view of all these circumstances, my Lords think that the following salaries should be fixed for this office:— Future salaries, Whitehall.

Assistant Paymaster-general, 1,000 l. per annum, to be increased to 1,100 l. after five years' service as such.

Accountant-general, 800 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 950 l.

Assistant Accountant, 750 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 850 l.

Paymaster of Non-effective Services, 750 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 850 l.

Paymaster of Effective Services, 600 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 700 l.

Principal Clerks, 450 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 550 l.

Senior Clerks, 350 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 450 l.

Assistant Clerks, 200 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 350 l.

Junior Clerks, 80 l. per annum, to be increased 10 l. per annum to 180 l.

The Assistant Clerk at Sheerness, the same salary as at present, 150 l. per annum.

The Housekeeper, 100 l. per annum, with an allowance of 26 l. per annum to be paid to two housemaids, and also board wages at the rate of 12 s. per week, for the two housemaids, and for five charwomen; such allowances not to be a source of profit to the housekeeper, but to be paid to the persons employed.

To the Head Messenger and Office-keeper, 100 l. per annum.
3 Messengers, each at 90 l. per annum.
9 - - ditto - - 85 l.
1 - - ditto - - 80 l.
1 - - ditto - - 50 l.

 42.—With

Pay-office.

T. M., 19 Nov. 1836.

Greenwich out-pension branch.

42.—With respect to the Greenwich Hospital Out-pension Office, my Lords are of opinion that the following should be the scale of salaries:—

Cashier, 500 l., increasing 10 l. a year to 650 l.
7 Assistant Clerks, 200 l. per annum, increasing 10 l. per annum to 350 l.
7 Junior Clerks, 80 l. per annum, increasing 10 l. per annum to 180 l.
1 Messenger, at 90 l. per annum.
2 Messengers, at 80 l. per annum.

Total charge of new establishment.

43.—The charge upon the public for this establishment, including therein the salary of the Paymaster-general of 2,400 l. per annum, and the allowance to the Bank of England to defray the expense which will be incurred by that establishment in the employment of two cashiers at the office in Whitehall, viz., 700 l. per annum, will be at its minimum 27,409 l., and at its maximum 38,159 l.

Prospective saving.

44.—The minimum of the establishment now existing, being, as already stated, 38,706 l., and the maximum 52,426 l., the eventual reduction of expense arising from the arrangements for consolidating these offices, will be 11,297 l. in the one case, and 14,267 l. in the other.

Immediate saving.

45.—The charge as it actually exists at present, as already stated, is 44,476 l.; that on 1st December next will be 33,539 l.; the immediate reduction, subject to the grant of superannuation allowances, is 10,937 l.

Establishment to be revised in 12 months.

46.—My Lords desire it, however, to be understood, that in fixing the establishment of this office at the numbers and salaries here stated, it is their intention that the whole should be subject to revision after the expiration of 12 months, being of opinion that in the meantime experience will have been gained in the discharge of the duties of the office, so far as to enable them to decide whether any further reductions can be effected without detriment to the public service.

Clerks to be on probation for 12 months.

47.—My Lords further desire it to be understood, that no appointment to be hereafter made by their Lordships to the junior class of this office, shall be confirmed until after a period of probation of 12 months, and a report to their Lordships by the Paymaster-general, that the person appointed on probation deserves to be confirmed in the situation.

Promotion to depend on good conduct and diligence.

48.—It is likewise their Lordships' intention that promotion shall not be made by succession from one class to another, except upon testimonials of good conduct and diligence from the heads of the several branches in which the individual next in succession shall have served in the office.

Certain offices to be filled up by selection in or out of the office.

49.—To the offices of Paymaster of Effective Services, of Paymaster of Non-effective Services, of Assistant Accountant, of Accountant-general, and of Assistant Paymaster-general, my Lords reserve to themselves the right of appointing by selection, and with respect to the three last-named officers by selection in or out of the office, as they shall think most for the advantage of the public service.

Hours of attendance.

Extra attendance.

Attendance book.

50.—My Lords desire that the hours of business shall be from 10 o'clock in the forenoon until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, unless a longer attendance shall be at any time required for the public service, in which case the Paymaster-general will of course take care that such additional attendance is given; and in order to ensure a due and regular attendance on the part of every individual employed, and to afford to this Board hereafter an additional test of the regularity and diligence with which the several individuals have attended to the discharge of their official duties during the course of their employment, when their cases shall be brought forward for superannuation, my Lords desire that an attendance-book shall be kept, in which each gentleman shall inscribe his name as he arrives at the office, and the time of his arrival, such book to be closed and delivered to the Assistant Paymaster-general at 12 o'clock each day.

51.—Let the necessary warrants be prepared and submitted for His Majesty's Royal Signature, directing the abolition of these existing offices, and the constitution of the office of His Majesty's Paymaster-general from and after 30th November instant, and for appointing the Right Honourable Sir Henry Parnell, Bart., to be His Majesty's Paymaster-general.

52.—Transmit copy of this Minute to the Paymaster-general for his information and guidance, and let him be directed to furnish the accounts required for the Admiralty and Ordnance, in the manner pointed out by those Boards.

53.—Transmit also copy of this Minute to the Commissioners of Audit for their information and guidance, so far as the directions thereof relate to their department.

Treasury Minute, dated 27 March 1838, regulating the Paymaster-General's Drawing Accounts at the Bank.

My Lords read the letter from the Paymaster-General, dated 2d February,* referring to that which had been previously addressed by him to this Board, on the 18th November 1837, on the subject of the regulations in force for the government of his office, so far as relates to the accounts opened at the Bank of England.

Reference to Paymaster-General's letter, dated the 18 Nov. 1837.

In addition to the Greenwich Out-pension Account, there are now two other drawing accounts, that of the Paymaster of Effective and that of the Paymaster of Non-effective Services; and it is recommended by the Paymaster-General that these two accounts should be consolidated into one, with a view to render the business of the Paymaster's branch of his office more equal and steady, while it would, at the same time, afford a better security to the public, and effect a reduction in the number of persons employed.

The three drawing accounts to be consolidated.

He suggests at the same time that the third account should be only a bill account, on which no drafts should be drawn, but on which should be paid all bills accepted for Army, Navy, and Ordnance Services.

The third account to be only a bill account.

My Lords having by their Minute of this day sanctioned the various reductions and alterations of the Establishment suggested by Sir H. Parnell, some of which have arisen out of the change and simplification here recommended, their Lordships are pleased to give their sanction to this alteration of the regulations adopted upon the consolidation of the several offices in December 1836, and desire that the necessary communications may be made to the Bank and to the Paymaster-General.

These alterations sanctioned.

Let a copy of this Minute be laid before Parliament.

Letter from the Paymaster-General, dated 18 November 1837, referred to in the preceding Minute.

I have the honour, with reference to the practice that has been established for conducting the drawing accounts of this office at the Bank of England, to recommend to your Lordships that an account be opened at the Bank for all bills payable there, and that in future one drawing account only be kept at the Bank; by the adoption of which arrangement I consider that the business of the Paymasters, in my office, will be rendered more equal and steady, a reduction effected in the number of persons employed in that department, and a better security afforded to the public.

Alteration of Drawing Accounts at the Bank.

In compliance with your Lordships' Minutes of 19th August and November 1836, two drawing accounts (the Greenwich Out-pension Account making the third) have hitherto been kept at the Bank of England, one for the payments of effective, and the other for the payments of non-effective services, through which the whole payments for those respective services have regularly passed, consisting partly of bills accepted, payable at the Bank, and partly of the drafts of the Paymasters for ready money payments.

Three Drawing Accounts now open.

No distinction of effective and non-effective is, however, made in the funds or supplies from the Exchequer Credit Account, out of which "write-offs" are made to the credit of the drawing accounts, both of which accounts are supplied from one common source; and when the payments are passed into the general ledger of the Pay-office, the whole are indiscriminately carried to General Accounts of Army, Navy, and Ordnance Cash, no distinction being preserved of effective or non-effective services, beyond that of the detail payments being carried to the several Votes of Parliament for the one and the other respectively.

No distinction in Exchequer credits for effective and non-effective services.

The amount which passes through the Paymasters' hands in the course of the year is about 11,174,378 l., in which sum is included 3,258,750 l., for bills payable at the Bank, the payment of which is wholly managed by the Bank, excepting that the Paymasters sign the lists of bills as an authority for placing them to their respective accounts. This proceeding adds greater responsibility to the Paymasters than there seems to be any necessity or real occasion for; for if a bill account were opened at the Bank of England, for all bills accepted, payable there, to be carried to, there would be no occasion whatever to pass the above sum of 3,258,750 l. through the Paymasters' accounts, because the "write-offs" from the Exchequer Account, to meet the payment of these Bills, might be just as easily and effectually made to the Bill Account at the Bank, as to the accounts of the Paymasters for that purpose, and a greater security afforded thereby to the public; as it would only be necessary

A Bill Account would afford greater security.

* This letter merely calls attention to the preceding one, dated 18 November 1837.

necessary to keep comparatively small balances to the credit of the Paymasters, because, all their payments being made by check, the credit required could at all times be regulated by their payments, which the Accountant-general could have completely under his control, by returns made to him from time to time in the course of the day, of the amount of checks issued; and in the event of any unlooked-for or heavy demand, it could always be provided for by a "write-off" being forwarded to the Bank before, or as soon as the check for the demand was granted; besides which, having an account kept of the bills independent altogether of the payments by check, would very much facilitate the daily examination of the Bank book with the Paymasters' accounts.

The two Drawing Accounts should be consolidated.

Presuming that the advantage of having a Bill Account at the Bank has been made sufficiently apparent, I would now submit to your Lordships how far it would be advisable to do away with the distinction of the Drawing Accounts for Effective and Non-Effective Services, and to have only one Drawing Account for cash or ready-money payments. It has already been shown that no real advantage is gained by having two Drawing Accounts, seeing that no such distinction exists in the funds from whence the accounts are supplied, and that the distinction is completely sunk in the books of the Paymaster-general, the whole payments for effective as well as non-effective services for each of the services of Army, Navy, and Ordnance, being indiscriminately mingled in the accounts of cash applicable to each.

Advantages of one Drawing Account.

But if only one Drawing Account were kept at the Bank several advantages would accrue from it.

In the first place, instead of having two pay-rooms in different parts of the office, there would be only one large room or office for the payment of all claims, exclusive of the Navy Allotments, which are paid in cash in an entirely separate branch of the office, so that the claimants after getting their claims passed would only have to inquire for the pay-room, and be saved the trouble of finding out the meaning of the official terms Effective and Non-effective.

In the second place, under the present arrangement of having two Drawing Accounts, it is frequently the case, that while there is a pressure of claims upon the Effective Paymaster, there is comparatively little upon the Non-Effective, or vice versâ, according to the fixed periods of payment of the several services; but by having only one paying office, and all the payments being made indiscriminately from one Drawing Account, the business of the Paymasters would be rendered more equal and easily managed, and being thrown together might very well be conducted by the two Paymasters, the two Assistant Paymasters, and one junior clerk only.

If your Lordships should approve of the proposed alterations, I request the necessary directions may be given to the Bank of England, so that the change in the accounts may take place from the 1st December next, in order that the new system may have been in operation previously to the commencement of the next quarter's payment.

I have, &c.

(signed) H. Parnell.

PAPER prepared in 1848 for the SELECT COMMITTEE on the MISCELLANEOUS ESTIMATES, on the Office of Paymaster of Civil Services and the Exchequer.

Paper on Civil Service Pay Office and Exchequer. 1848.

PAYMASTER OF CIVIL SERVICES.

The Paymaster of Civil Services Office should be consolidated with that of the Paymaster-general.

1.—THE office of the Paymaster of Civil Services might with great advantage be consolidated with that of the Paymaster-general. A pay-office is an elaborate piece of official mechanism, which, when it has once been properly organised, is capable of throwing off almost any quantity of work. Pay clerks cannot be engaged during the whole of every day in handing money over the counter. There are 66 clerks belonging to the Paymaster-general's office, and only 13 in the Paymaster of Civil Services'. The Paymaster-general makes, every year, several hundred thousand payments, and the Paymaster of Civil Services only from 10,000 to 12,000. A great deal of work, consisting principally of transfers, and the correspondence connected with them, which is occasioned solely by the fact of there being two pay-offices instead of one, would be saved by their union. The two offices are in the immediate neighbourhood of each other, and a considerable number of persons connected with the banking and agency houses, who at present have to go the round of both offices, will be saved time and trouble if all the payments are made at one place. It may be necessary at first to make an addition of two or three clerks to the Paymaster-general's establishment, by a transfer of that number from the establishment of the Paymaster of Civil Services; but the rest of this last mentioned establishment, including the highly-paid officers at the head of it, may be immediately reduced, and the rooms which they occupy in the Treasury may be made available for other branches of the public service, for which they are much required. The office of Paymaster of Exchequer Bills has been already united with that of Paymaster-general; and when the Paymaster of Civil Services' office shall be similarly consolidated, the proper division of labour will be fully established between the department which is charged with the custody and appropriation of the public money, and that which is charged with its payment in detail.

Saving of establishment which would result, and saving by reduction of Bank balances.

2.—Another considerable saving will at the same time be effected by a reduction of the large balances kept at the Bank of England by the Paymaster of Civil Services. It will be seen from the accompanying documents that the Exchequer account of that office on the 4th March showed a balance of 230,537 l., and his cash account, 64,983 l., making altogether 295,520 l.; while on the same date the entire balance of the Paymaster-general, whose annual payments are four times as large as those of the Paymaster of Civil Services, was only 27,030 l. This remarkable difference is owing to these two offices keeping their accounts on different principles.

Unnecessary balances of the Paymaster of Civil Services occasioned by his numerous separate accounts.

3.—The Paymaster of Civil Services has a separate account at the Bank for every one of the numerous heads of service on the Consolidated Fund and the Miscellaneous Estimates which are paid by him; and according to the theory of his system, every payment is made out of that particular account at the Bank of England to which the service belongs. This theory is not fully carried out, because the payments which have to be made under some heads of service are so frequent and uncertain, that if they were to be made out of the accounts at the Bank to which they properly belong, much trouble and delay would be occasioned by an incessant application to the Treasury and Exchequer for new credits; and therefore these services, and others also, as the occasion may require, are paid out of the Paymaster of Civil Services' cash balance, which is replenished at convenient intervals by credits from the grants on account of which the advances have been made. But the attempt, however ineffectual, to keep a separate account at the Bank for every one of the numerous heads of service, has necessarily led to the large aggregate balance above adverted to, which cannot be much diminished while the present system is persevered in.

The Paymaster-general has only one account.

4.—The plan adopted by the Paymaster-general, on the other hand, is to have only a single account at the Bank of England, out of which all his payments are made for every description of service, and to trust to the books of his own office for recording the transactions of the different services in the distinct and exact manner required to render a just account of the appropriation of the sums imprested to him, by which means his balance at the Bank is maintained at the lowest point required to meet the payments actually falling due in each day.

This account systematically subdivided.

5.—The Paymaster-general's banking account is divided under two heads, one for receipt and the other for payment; the receipt side is again subdivided into two heads, one of which is his Exchequer credit account, representing the credits which he daily receives from the Treasury, under the several heads of service for carrying on the payments entrusted to him, and the other his cash account, representing the miscellaneous sums received by him on account of sale of old stores, transfers, &c. The payment side is also subdivided into two heads, one of which is called his drawing account, for making ordinary cash payments, and the other his bill account, for paying the numerous Commissariat, Navy, and other bills. No payments whatever are made from the receipt side of his account, (that is, his "Exchequer Credit," and "Cash" accounts,) which is used merely as a channel for replenishing the payment side. This arrangement conduces as much to the security as to the Paper on Civil Service Pay Office and Exchequer, 1848.

the economy of the public money, inasmuch as the amount from which disbursements can under any circumstances, be made, is always, by means of it, kept at the lowest possible point.

The Paymaster-general's system is accordant with mercantile practice;

6.—I am persuaded that, of these two systems, the one adopted in the Paymaster-general' office is most consistent with the true principles for the conduct of business. Merchants, manufacturers, and railroad companies, however large their concerns may be, do not have a separate account at their bankers for every head under which their expenditure is conducted; but, as a general rule, they have a single banking account for every purpose, which they keep as low as possible, and depend upon a proper system of bookkeeping in their own office for preserving the distinctness and regularity of their various transactions.

and is much more convenient for the public business.

7.—The discontinuance of this large number of separate accounts at the Bank of England will save much time and labour both in the Paymaster's office and at the Bank, and will much facilitate business. The difficulty of always keeping so large a number of balances at a level to meet the current demands upon them, is very great, and it has sometimes happened that the Paymaster of Civil Services' cheques have been refused, owing to an insufficiency of funds on the particular accounts on which they were drawn, although there were large Government balances on other accounts. On one occasion a cheque was refused because the credit which had been given was short of the amount drawn for by one penny. On another occasion a cheque was refused owing to the Bank having posted a former cheque to a wrong head of service, by which the credit was exhausted.

On a consolidation, the whole of the Paymaster of Civil Services' balances would be unnecessary.

8.—If the office of Paymaster of Civil Services shall be consolidated with that of Paymaster-general, and the payments for the united services shall be made by the Paymaster-general according to his present practice, it will not be necessary for the last mentioned officer to increase his present average balance, and the entire balance now standing to the credit of the Paymaster of Civil Services (with the exception of certain deposits in his cash account, which may be considerably reduced), will be rendered unnecessary; in other words, a sum equal to the average amount of those balances will be rendered available for paying off deficiency bills or any other part of the National Debt, whereby a saving of about 9,000 l. a year will be effected, or this sum might be added to the general balance standing to the credit of the Government, whereby the necessity of borrowing from the Bank would be diminished to that extent.

Exchequer.

Separation of the Exchequer from the Treasury after the Restoration.

9.—The Exchequer is the ancient Treasury of England, and the Lord High Treasurer was the chief officer of it, who was installed in the Exchequer offices, and regularly transacted business there. After the Restoration, the Lord High Treasurer and the Commissioners who were at first occasionally and afterwards permanently appointed to execute his office, had apartments assigned to them in what have since been called the "Treasury Chambers at Whitehall." The separation of the two offices of Treasury and Exchequer which commenced at that time became gradually developed, and while the general superintendence of the revenue and expenditure, and the appropriation of the public money according to the grants of Parliament and the orders of the Sovereign, remained with the Treasury, the officers of the Exchequer exercised an official check to the extent of seeing that the grants of Parliament were not exceeded; and they also continued to make such payments as had not been transferred to the Bank of England. In 1831 the "Commissioners of Public Accounts" made their First, and only, Report, in which they recommended that the remaining payments should be transferred to the Bank of England, and that the Exchequer should be retained for the purpose of preserving the check over the appropriation of the grants, and of preparing the Exchequer bills; and this arrangement was afterwards carried into effect by the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, and the Treasury Minute dated 26 September 1834.

General practical result of the change.

10.—The practical result of these changes is that the Paymaster-general and the Bank of England are the actual Treasurers for the receipt, custody, and payment of the public money, and that there are two superior offices, one of which (the Treasury) is charged with the superintendence of the public revenue at every stage of its progress, from the proposal of taxes to Parliament to the final payment of the money, and the accounting for it to Parliament, and the other (the Exchequer) is charged with the limited and specific function of seeing that the grants of Parliament are not exceeded.

Office of Comptroller-general of the Exchequer by no means increases the security for the due appropriation of the public money.

11.—I am satisfied, from the experience I have had of this important branch of the public business, that the office of Comptroller-general of the Exchequer rather diminishes than increases the security for the due appropriation of the public money according to the grants of Parliament.

12.—The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer does not in reality prevent the grants of Parliament from being either temporarily or permanently exceeded, nor has he any power of preventing it according to the present constitution of his office. All he is able to do is to see that the sums drawn from the Exchequer in reference to each particular head of service, do not exceed the sums which have been granted by Parliament for that head of service; but he cannot prevent sums granted for one service from being drawn out of the Exchequer and applied to other services, nor can he prevent sums from being expended abroad according to the various exigencies of the naval and military, convict or colonial services, in excess of the grants of Parliament.

13.—The Paymaster-general and the Paymaster of Civil Services habitually use money belonging to one head of service in making advances for other services in the ordinary transaction of the daily business of their respective departments.

14.—It

Paper on Civil Service Pay Office and Exchequer, 1848.

Control of the Exchequer nugatory as regards payments at home:

14.—It is impossible that the Paymaster-general could estimate the credit daily required by him from the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat grants, with such accuracy as not temporarily to apply money drawn for one service to the payments for another, unless he were to draw a much larger sum than is required to make the united payments; and the Paymaster of Civil Services constantly makes the payments for certain heads of voted services from his cash balance, which is replenished from time to time, as occasion may require, from the grants on account of which the advances have been made. This practice is necessary for the proper and economical transaction of the public business, and it is effectually controlled in the case of the Paymaster-general by the audited accounts rendered to Parliament; but the continued and unquestioned existence of the practice proves that the control supposed to be exercised by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer over the appropriation of the grants of Parliament, is merely a nominal one.

and still more so as regards payments abroad.

15.—When the foreign expenditure is taken into view, the control of the Exchequer is still more obviously nugatory. The aggregate grants for the Navy have been repeatedly exceeded of late years, without any interference on the part of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and this has also taken place in respect to the grants for colonial, convict, emigration, and other services. The control of the Exchequer only extends to sums issued at home through the Exchequer, and it does not embrace the large disbursements continually made from the commissariat chests abroad for carrying on the expenditure of this country under all the different heads of service in all the four quarters of the globe.

A control has been otherwise provided by a recent Act.

16.—On this point Parliament has established another system of control, the foundation of which was laid by Sir James Graham's reforms in the Admiralty in 1831; and since 1840, uninterrupted efforts have been made to extend this system on an uniform and effective footing to the other great departments of expenditure, which has at last been accomplished by the introduction of a restrictive clause into the annual Appropriation Act, by the Act 9 & 10 Vict., c. 92, and by the Treasury Minutes of 13th January and 8th September 1846.

An account of the appropriation of money for Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat Services annually laid before the House of Commons.

17.—According to this system, the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat Departments are not permitted, without the express written consent of the Treasury, to apply any surplus which may exist under one head of their estimate to supplying a deficiency under any other head; and in order that Parliament may be kept constantly informed of what is done in this respect, an account, certified by the Commissioners of Audit, is required by law to be laid before the House of Commons at a fixed date, being the earliest at which it can be rendered, showing in parallel columns the vote for each service, the sum actually expended, and the causes of any considerable difference between the sum voted and the sum expended. This is a real control, and is felt to be so by all the parties concerned.

This might, with advantage, be extended to Miscellaneous Expenditure:

18.—There remain the heads of service voted in the Miscellaneous Estimates, which are of much smaller amount than the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat Services, to which the above-mentioned system of control has been already applied; and what I would suggest is that that system should be extended to the expenditure of the grants on the Miscellaneous Estimates, and that a similar account should be periodically furnished to Parliament at the earliest practicable date, showing the sum granted, and the sum expended under each head of the Miscellaneous Estimates, and the reasons for any considerable difference that may appear between those sums. This is not, at present, anywhere done in a distinct and satisfactory manner. At page 97 of the Finance Accounts for 1847 will be found an account of the sums issued from the Exchequer under the several heads of the Miscellaneous Estimates; at page 111, an account of the sums which remained unissued under the same heads; and at 118, and the following pages, an account of the sums voted, paid, and remaining to be paid; but there is nowhere a clear and distinct statement of the whole actual expenditure, as compared with the grants, such as is furnished for the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat Departments, and which is so eminently calculated to enforce the responsibility of the Treasury in respect to the due appropriation of the grants of Parliament, and the preventing of any unnecessary exceeding of them.

and there would be no difficulty in effecting it.

19.—With the exception of the Estimate for the Treasury establishment, and one or two others, the Miscellaneous Estimates are submitted to the Treasury by other departments; they are revised by the Treasury in a closer and more detailed manner than the Estimates for the Army, Navy, and Ordnance Services; and the Treasury exercises a more effective control over the miscellaneous expenditure than can be the case in regard to the naval and military expenditure. All that is required, therefore, to complete the system of check is that the Treasury should render the same account to Parliament of this part of the financial superintendence exercised by it over the executive departments which it already renders in respect to the Army and Navy grants; and for effecting this no other change is required than that Parliament should vote some portion of the Miscellaneous Estimates before the close of each financial year, and that the grants on the Miscellaneous Estimates should be for payments to be actually made within the year, as is now the case in the Naval and Military Departments, instead of for sums due for the year, in order that the accounts may be closed, and the balance struck on each grant at the end of the year.

Instances of the exercise of control on the part of the Exchequer.

20.—When Her Majesty graciously determined that her income should be subjected to the Income Tax, the Comptroller-general objected to issue money from the Exchequer on this account, and the amount has therefore been drawn in full, and the Income Tax has been made good partly by payments from the Privy Purse and partly by deductions made at the Treasury. I mention this as being the only instance in which, as far as I am aware, the Comptroller-general has exercised a practical check over the Treasury. His predecessor, the Auditor of the Exchequer, demurred to the Treasury issuing the interest on the Russian-

Paper on Civil Service Pay Office and Exchequer, 1848.

Russian-Dutch Loan after Belgium had been separated from Holland, but he withdrew his objection upon Lord Grey directing him to make the issue on the responsibility of the Executive Government, which, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, was the course which the affair ought at any rate to have taken.

A correct system of accounts, and not a multiplicity of checks, is the real security.

21.—There is no institution similar to that of this double Treasury in any other country of the world. I have shown that the check supposed to be exercised by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer is merely a nominal and ideal one; but even if the case were otherwise, I contend that if the Treasury is to be trusted with superintending the larger amount and less manageable expenditure of the naval and military departments, it is still more to be trusted with checking the smaller amount and better understood expenditure connected with the Miscellaneous Estimates. The Committee of Public Accounts of 1831, justly remarked that the best security for the faithful appropriation of the public money is to be obtained in a correct system of public accounts, and what I have proposed is that this security should be fully applied to the whole of the voted expenditure. It is a great mistake to suppose that security is to be obtained by a multiplicity of checks. On the contrary, mistakes and frauds are more likely to occur in proportion as accounts are more complex and difficult to be understood. The checks should be effective, few, and simple, and great care should be taken not to overlay the really important points by a mass of extraneous matter.

Opinion of Commissioners of Public Accounts.

22.—The Commissioners of Public Accounts of 1831 notice with approbation the recorded opinion of preceding Commissioners, as to "the necessity of 'recommending the abolition of ancient practices, which were thought by our ancestors absolutely necessary for the protection of the King's revenue,' and of 'suggesting alterations opposed to the opinion of past ages,' when those practices are become no longer applicable to the present state of things; and those alterations are peremptorily demanded by a due regard to the public interest"

Saving of public time by the abolition of the Office of Exchequer.

23.—If the change I have recommended be adopted, the saving will be much greater than the mere salaries of the officers of the Exchequer. The quantity of unnecessary business created by this double machinery is very painful to those who feel that there is more to be done in order that the public interests may be properly looked after, than it is possible for the servants of the public to get through, even supposing their time not to be unnecessarily occupied. For instance, before any payment can be made by the Paymaster-general from a grant of Parliament, all the following forms have to be gone through:—

1. A Royal Order addressed to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, countersigned by the Commissioners of the Treasury.

2. A Treasury Warrant, founded on the Royal Order, and also addressed to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

3. Monthly Estimate of the Paymaster-general.

4. Special application from the Paymaster-general for the particular sums required by him from day to day.

5. A letter from the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, authorising him to grant a credit to the Paymaster-general.

6. A letter from the Assistant Secretary to the Treasury to the Paymaster-general, advising him of a credit having been given.

7. A letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to the Bank of England, founded on the letter from the Assistant Secretary, directing the Bank to give a credit to the Paymaster-general.

8. A certificate from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, advising the Paymaster-general of the actual issue of the credit; and

9. An order from the Treasury, or from some one of the naval or military departments, directing the Paymaster-general to make specific payments out of the sum so received by him from the Bank.

24.—Supposing the remaining establishment of the Exchequer to be reduced, the constitutional form of the Royal Order would be addressed to the Treasury; but much time and labour might be saved by preparing one Royal Order for the whole or a considerable number of the grants on the Miscellaneous Estimates, instead of one for each grant, as is the case at present.

25.—The Treasury Warrants at present addressed to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer might, in the case supposed, be entirely dispensed with, inasmuch as they do not now go beyond the Exchequer, nor do they contain any information which is not contained in the Royal Order.

26.—And the daily letters now addressed by the Assistant Secretary to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, would be addressed by him direct to the Bank of England.

27.—The documents numbered 6, 7, and 8 would also be dispensed with, for, as regards the first of these three, daily orders on the Bank would be delivered to the Assistant Paymaster-general and a separate advice would therefore be unnecessary.

28.—The Exchequer Bills may be prepared by the officers, and within the walls of the Treasury, with the same security, and according to precisely the same system as they are now prepared at the Exchequer.

C. E. Trevelyan.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Treasury Minute, dated the 22d December 1848, for the Government of the Office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general.

Consolidation Act of 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 55).

1. My Lords have under consideration the Regulations which it is necessary to issue, to give effect to the provisions of the Act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 55, under which they are empowered to abolish the offices of the Paymaster of Civil Services and of the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, and to transfer the duties thereof to Her Majesty's Paymaster general.

Consolidation Act of 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35).

2. My Lords have also before them their Minutes of the 19th August and 19th November 1836, containing the instructions issued by them for carrying into effect the provisions of the Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35, for the consolidation of the offices of Paymaster-general of the Forces, Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, Treasurer of the Navy, and Treasurer of the Ordnance. My Lords proceed to define the modifications which appear to be necessary in the rules laid down in the said Minutes, and to prescribe the additional instructions which are required in reference to the new branches of business to be added to the office of Paymaster-general under the provisions of the Act above quoted.

Services to be paid by the Paymaster-general.

3. The services to be paid by the Paymaster-general will consist of all army services, voted on the Army and Militia Estimates, which are under the control of the Secretary-at-War and of the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital; all commissariat services voted on the Commissariat Estimates, and which are under the control of this Board; all naval services voted on the Navy Estimates, and naval prize services, which are under the control of the Lords of the Admiralty; all ordnance services voted on the Ordnance Estimates, and which are under the control of the Master-general and Board of Ordnance; all the services formerly called "Army Extraordinaries," and which are now included under the denomination of "Commissariat Chest Services," all the civil services voted on the several Miscellaneous Estimates, and the services charged on the Consolidated Fund, hitherto paid by the Paymaster of Civil Services, also the payment of the principal and interest of Exchequer Bills, all of which are under the control of this Board.

Course to be followed preparatory to the issue of Exchequer credits.

4. The course to be followed preparatory to the issue of credits on the Exchequer in favour of the Paymaster-general is pointed out by the 4 Will. 4, c. 15, for the regulation of the Exchequer, and in their Lordships' Minute of the 26th September 1834, issued in pursuance thereof.

Monthly estimates of credits required.

5. The Paymaster-general will transmit to this Board, according to the directions of that Minute, monthly estimates, at least six days before the commencement of the month to which such estimates may apply, showing the probable sums required during the ensuing month, in weekly proportions, for army, navy and ordnance services. He will receive from the War Office, Admiralty, and Ordnance Departments the necessary returns to enable him to prepare the monthly estimates for those departments.

Special applications for the issue of credits.

6. The directions for Exchequer credits to the Paymaster-general will be founded on special applications, to be made by him to their Lordships.

Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants.

7. By the 11th section of the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, Royal Orders are required to empower the Lords of the Treasury to direct the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to grant credits for the various services voted by Parliament, upon which Treasury Warrants and Letters are founded, as required by the 12th section of the same Act. Issues charged on the Consolidated Fund are made by credits given upon Treasury Warrants, but without Royal Orders, as authorised by the 13th section of the Act.

Existing regulations continue in force.

8. These Regulations will continue to be strictly observed, and the only alteration which appears to their Lordships to be necessary in the orders heretofore in force is that the credits which have hitherto been granted to the Paymaster of Civil Services and to the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, shall for the future be granted to the Paymaster-general.

Extra receipts through the cash account.

9. Numerous sums of money, and of considerable amount in the aggregate, are placed, from time to time, to the Paymaster-general's cash account at the Bank of England, in pursuance of orders issued by this Board, by the Secretary-at-War, the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, the Board of Admiralty, and the Master-general and Board of Ordnance. These sums consist in part of the produce of old stores, rents, and other sources of income, which will be transferred periodically from the Paymaster-general's account at the Bank to the credit of the Exchequer, as directed by their Lordships' Minute of the 2d May 1848, and will become ways and means subject to appropriation by Parliament; but they will also include repayments of advances, recoveries, and other receipts of a like nature, which, being merely adjustments of account, will not be payable to the Exchequer. To secure a perfect agreement between the books of the Paymaster-general and those of the Bank of England, in respect of these numerous receipts, and to guard against their being credited to wrong accounts, it will be necessary that the parties from whom money may be due, should in all cases obtain from the Paymaster-general orders authorising the Bank to receive such sums, previously to their being placed to his account.

Transfers between departments.

10. In all cases, however, in which advances and repayments are to be made between services, whether those to which the Paymaster-general's accounts have heretofore been confined, or those the management of which is now transferred to him, there will be no necessity for passing such transactions through the Paymaster-general's accounts at the Bank of England, as they can more conveniently be adjusted by transfers in his own books. It

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

It is their Lordships' desire, therefore, that no such adjustments of account shall be effected by actual transfers of cash at the Bank of England, but that the respective services shall be debited and credited in the Paymaster-general's own books, in pursuance of orders to be issued to him by the departments concerned in such transfers. These transfers are of considerable amount, and they arise chiefly out of the settlements between the Commissariat Chest Account and the several departments, for advances out of the Commissariat chests abroad for naval and military services, and between the grant for civil contingencies and those services which have been temporarily provided for by advances from that grant. My Lords attach great importance to a strict adherence to the regulations now laid down for the adjustment of these transfers, as it will not only provide for the utmost clearness of account, but it will prevent at the same time an undue accumulation of the Paymaster-general's balances at the Bank, and afford the safest guarantee against any kind of irregularity in the settlement of transactions of such magnitude.

Regulation of the balances at the Bank.

11. My Lords proceed to consider what instructions it is necessary to issue to the Paymaster-general on the subject of his transactions with the Bank of England. It appears to be necessary, in the first instance, that the principle upon which he should regulate his balances should be clearly understood.

Mode hitherto adopted by the Paymaster-general.

12. The balances at the Bank have hitherto been considered as a general fund applicable to the payment of all current services; the demands for Exchequer credits, to replenish the balances, have been made with reference to the known or expected wants of the respective departments having authority to draw upon the Paymaster-general, and the appropriation of the issues to the various services to which they relate, has been made daily in the Paymaster-general's own books, upon the actual vouchers presented for payment. By this arrangement, the necessity of keeping a larger balance at his credit at the Bank, than was actually required for carrying on his payments, and the complication of his accounts at the Bank, caused by multiplying and subdividing balances, which in accounts so extensive would have entailed great labour and risk of error, without any useful practical result, has been avoided.

Balances should be kept as low as possible.

13. It is an object of great importance that the public money should not be drawn from the Exchequer either before it is wanted, or in larger sums than the services for which it is issued requires, or, in other words, that the balances should be confined to the lowest sum necessary for carrying on the payments for the public service in a punctual and regular manner; and as this object, so essential both to security and economy, is greatly facilitated by the arrangement and practice above referred to, my Lords desire that the system of account and payment which has been pursued in the Paymaster-general's department since the last consolidation of the pay offices in 1836, be applied to the services lately transferred to his charge.

No payments to be made in excess of grants of Parliament.

14. My Lords will, in all cases, communicate to the Paymaster-general the amounts of the several grants made by Parliament for the public service, in respect to all those departments the payments for which are made in his office, as soon as the votes shall have been granted in supply, and ways and means shall have been appropriated by Parliament to satisfy them; while at the same time the Royal Orders and the Warrants will be duly completed by this Board and by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, to enable my Lords to direct the grant of the necessary credits, from time to time, to meet the expenditure. The Paymaster-general, from the manner in which the books of account are to be prepared and made up in his office, will be able at once to satisfy my Lords of the necessity of directing the grant of such credits from time to time, and will have the most ready means of calling their Lordships' attention to the fact, if any order shall have been given to him by any department, a compliance with which would lead to an exceeding upon any one of the heads of service for which separate sums have been granted by Parliament. While by these arrangements the constitutional check exercised by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer upon the issue of the public money, under the provisions of the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, will in all respects be maintained, the regulations which their Lordships prescribe for the government of the Paymaster-general's Office, will afford to this Board a further control and check over the expenditure in detail, which will enable their Lordships to ensure that no payment is made upon the order of any department under any head of service beyond the amount of the specific grant of Parliament legally applicable thereto. In this manner my Lords will have the means of satisfactorily exercising that control and authority which is vested in them by the Appropriation Act, whereby, while, on the one hand, the departments of expenditure are restrained from applying any part of one specific grant in aid of another specific grant, this Board, on the other hand, in relation to Navy, Army or Ordnance Services, is authorised, on being satisfied of its being indispensably necessary, to convey Her Majesty's sanction to the application of the surplus on one grant to supply the deficiency on any other, provided the total of all the grants for the particular department as aforesaid, which applies for such sanction, be not thereby exceeded.

Cash Account to be exhausted before drawing upon Exchequer Credits.

15. The order contained in their Lordships' Minute of the 26th September 1834, for the regulation of the office of the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer, by which the Paymaster-general is required to exhaust the balance of monies on his cash account for Army, Navy, and Ordnance Services, in making payment for those services before any drafts are drawn by him on the Exchequer Account, is consistent with the directions of this Minute, and should be strictly observed.

Weekly and monthly returns of balances to be sent to the Treasury.

16. To enable my Lords to judge of the regularity of the demands for credits from the Exchequer which the Paymaster-general will address, from time to time, to this Board, it is

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

is their desire that he will transmit to this Board, in addition to the weekly statement now sent to them, showing the actual balances on his accounts at the Bank, a monthly return of the service balances of cash on every head of account opened in his books.

Exchequer Credit and Cash Accounts at the Bank.

17. The existing regulations for the accounts kept at the Bank of England for the transactions of the Paymaster-general, as revised and settled by their Lordships' instructions to the Bank, dated the 28th March 1838, are as follows: two Supply Accounts are opened at the Bank to receive all the sums which may be placed to the Paymaster-general's credit. The first is called "The Exchequer Credit Account," and represents all the credits granted to the Paymaster-general on the account of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. The second is called "The Cash Account," to which are placed all other sums received by the Bank on account of the Paymaster-general. These two accounts are strictly Supply Accounts. No cheque or bill can be drawn upon them; but from them the two working accounts, hereafter described, are fed daily, or more frequently if necessary, with the sums required to meet the daily payments. For this purpose the Paymaster-general grants authority to the Assistant Paymaster-general, and in his absence to a chief clerk, to sign writes off or transfer orders in favour of the two working accounts.

Drawing and Bill Accounts at the Bank.

18. These two working accounts are—

1st. The Drawing Account;

2d. The Bill Account.

No funds can be placed to these accounts except by writes off or transfers from the Exchequer Credit Account and the Cash Account; and they are never supplied with a larger fund than is necessary to meet the payments of each day. The Paymaster-general authorises certain persons in his office, by deputation, to sign cheques and accept bills of exchange; but these persons have no knowledge of the state of the funds on the accounts upon which they have authority to draw. Thus, there are two sets of officers employed in connexion with the Bank accounts; the one having power over the supply accounts, and whose duty it is to exercise a constant supervision and control over the balances of the working accounts, and over those who have the power to draw upon them; the other having authority to draw upon the working accounts, but having no power to place funds to those accounts to meet their drafts.

Cheques and Bills-Advice Lists.

19. From the funds placed to the Drawing Account all cheques are paid. No cheque is payable at the Bank unless countersigned by a person duly authorised by the Paymaster-general. All bills of exchange, whether accepted at the Treasury, at the Admiralty, or at the Pay-office itself, are made payable on the Paymaster-general's Bill Account. Advice lists of all bills accepted are sent to the Bank before such bills become due; and these lists being countersigned by a person appointed to that duty by the Paymaster-general, afford the same security for the bills paid from the Bill Account as the countersignature to the cheques does in regard to payments from the Drawing Account.

Security afforded by the existing arrangements.

20. These last-mentioned regulations, which have now been in practical operation more than ten years, appear to my Lords to provide every possible security and facility for the proper transaction of that part of the Paymaster-general's duties to which they relate. They provide complete security for the balances, by placing all monies, in the first instance, to accounts upon which no drafts can be paid, and by not permitting any transfer of monies from those accounts until the same are actually required to be paid away for public services through the working accounts. By this arrangement, the balances on the working accounts are rarely more than sufficient to pay the demands issued upon them from day to day. Thus, however large the Paymaster-general's balance may be, it is not exposed to any risk, inasmuch as so long as it remains on the Exchequer Credit Account or the Cash Account, it cannot be made available for the payment of any draft whatever.

Bank pass-books.

21. Under the regulations now in force, the Bank pass-books, together with the paid cheques and bills, are sent daily to the Pay-office, where the cheques and bills are immediately compared with the entries in the pass-books, and with the office cheque-book, and the balances are duly examined. It is important that this comparison should never be postponed, as it is essentially necessary in order promptly to detect the payment of any irregular draft.

Cheques never to be signed or countersigned in blank.

22. My Lords desire that the Paymaster-general will not, under any circumstances, permit cheques to be signed or countersigned in blank, and that signatures shall never be attached to cheques as a matter of form, but only after they shall have been examined and compared with the vouchers on which they may be founded, by each person affixing his signature thereto.

Rules for transactions with the Bank to be strictly enforced.

23. My Lords have reviewed at length the regulations under which the Paymaster-general's transactions with the Bank are conducted, because they consider it a matter of great importance that in an office of such extensive pecuniary trust, every step in the business of payment should be defined by settled authority, and that as little as possible should be left to the discretion of the executive officers employed; and they strictly enjoin the Paymaster-general not to permit any deviation from the course of proceeding described in this Minute, in relation to his transactions with the Bank of England, unless the same shall have been previouly submitted to and sanctioned by this Board.

Payments in office cash.

24. Under existing authorities the Paymaster-general is empowered to make certain payments at his office in cash. These payments are chiefly made to the following classes of claimants: seamen paid off from their ships at the outports, who remit a portion of their wages payable in London; wives, children, and other relatives of seamen employed afloat, and who allot a monthly portion of their wages, while so employed, for the support of such wives and relatives; superannuated navy warrant officers, ships' cooks, artificers and labourers in the dockyards, the poorer classes of widows of officers of the army, navy, and ordnance, children in receipt of compassionate allowances, superannuated artificers and labourers of the Ordnance Department; and various other claimants in receipt of small annuities.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Control and examination of the balance.

25. The advantages of this mode of payment to poor claimants, many of whom are aged and infirm, and who would be exposed to unnecessary risk and inconvenience, were they compelled to proceed through the crowded thoroughfares of the City to get their cheques cashed at the Bank of England, are so obvious, that my Lords are pleased to sanction the continuance of the facilities now afforded, leaving it to the Paymaster-general to exercise a proper discretion as to the claimants to whom they should be extended. Their Lordships desire, however, that the Paymaster-general will limit the amount of cash kept in his office to the lowest sum necessary for properly carrying on the public service, and that he will cause the balance to be placed under proper control, and submitted to frequent examination.

Payment of ships at Woolwich.

26. Under the present regulations for paying the wages of the crews of Her Majesty's ships at Woolwich, the Paymaster-general has occasionally to despatch one or more clerks to Woolwich with the necessary funds for that purpose. The amount of cash sent down in such cases is regulated by the Admiralty, and clerks attend from that department to witness and check the payments to the seamen, which are made under the superintendence and control of the superintendent of the dockyard. As it appears doubtful whether, under the requirements of the Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, this mode of payment can be altered, the Paymaster-general will continue to provide for the payment of seamen's wages in the manner described, whenever he may be required to do so by the Board of Admiralty.

Weekly payments at Chelsea Hospital.

27. It has also been the practice of the Paymaster-general, since the abolition of the office of agent of Chelsea Pensioners in 1845, to send a clerk every Saturday to Chelsea Hospital to pay the in-pensioners, the infirmary servants, and others. As it appears that there is no money accountant on the spot who could conveniently undertake the duty of making such payments, my Lords sanction the continuance of the present practice.

Out-Stations—Branch banks at Portsmouth and Plymouth.

28. In addition to his payments made through the chief office at Whitehall, the Paymaster-general is charged with the duty of paying numerous services, principally naval, through the branches of his office at Chatham, Sheerness, Portsmouth, Devonport, and Hanover. At all these stations, except Sheerness, where the balance is small, the public money is under the joint charge of two clerks, who act as a check upon each other. At Portsmouth and Devonport there are branches of the Bank of England, and the monies required at those ports will continue to be placed to the Paymaster-general's credit at those branches, and the clerks who may be appointed to conduct the payments will be authorised to draw upon his account at the branch bank, by virtue of deputations to be granted to them by the Paymaster-general. The cheques drawn on the branches of the Bank of England are to be signed by both pay clerks, and are to be countersigned by the superintendents of the dockyards.

Chatham balance wholly in notes and specie.

29. There being no branch bank at Chatham, the whole amount of the balance in notes and specie is kept in the office under two separate locks, each pay clerk having one key, so that neither can have access to the chest without the presence of his colleague.

Similar arrangement at Hanover.

30. At Hanover a similar arrangement has existed since the appointment of joint paymasters in 1842.

Supplies of money for the ports regulated by the Admiralty.

31. The pay branches at Chatham, Sheerness, Portsmouth, and Devonport being established exclusively for payments connected with the naval service, the supplies of cash required from time to time will be regulated by the Admiralty, and the Paymaster-general will make the necessary remittances to his pay clerks, on receiving the usual authority from that department.

Control and examination of the balances at the ports vested in the Admiralty.

32. The control of the balances kept at the ports rests, by virtue of long established regulations, with the Admiralty Department, and check clerks belonging to that department are attached to each of the pay offices at Chatham, Portsmouth, and Devonport, who check the daily payments. Under the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, the superintendents of the dockyards are required to inspect and take an account of the balances in the hands of the pay clerks on the last day of the financial year, and also on every change in the office of Paymaster-general. In addition to these inspections, the superintendents are required by the instructions issued for their guidance by the Admiralty, to make a similar examination of the balances on the last day of every month, and to certify the same on the monthly accounts sent to the Paymaster-general and to the Admiralty by the pay clerks. They are required, moreover, to examine the balances at least once in every month at irregular and uncertain periods, without previous notice; and they require the Admiralty check clerk attached to the Pay-office to furnish a certificate of the charge against the Paymaster-general, to enable them to verify the correctness of the balance which may be exhibited to them by the pay clerks. Certificates of such examinations are forwarded to the Admiralty and Paymaster-general.

33. These regulations appear to my Lords to provide such ample security for the proper application of the balances in the hands of the Paymaster-general's deputies at the respective ports, that they do not think it necessary to direct any alteration in them.

Payments through the Bank of Ireland.

34. Large sums are paid by the Paymaster-general through his account at the Bank of Ireland. Credits are placed to that account by transfers from the account of the Exchequer in

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

in Ireland, under the authority of their Lordships, or transfers are made by the Paymaster-general from his account at the Bank of England. Special authorities for the payments are sent to the Bank of Ireland by the Paymaster-general, and a monthly account of receipts and payments is furnished by the Bank. My Lords see no occasion for altering the present mode of conducting these payments.

Authorities for Paymaster-general's payments.

35. My Lords proceed to define the authorities under which the Paymaster-general will be required to make the payments for the various services referred to in this Minute.

Warrants for Army Effective Services and Chelsea Out-pensions.

36. He will require a warrant (or order for payment), signed by the Secretary-at-War, for every payment to be made by him for Army Effective Services, and for payments to be made out of the Vote for Chelsea Out-Pensions. He will also require the annual Sign Manual Warrant, under which the Secretary-at-War is authorised to sign such warrants, to be transmitted to him after the annual Appropriation Act shall have been passed. The Paymaster-general will also take care that the direction contained in the Royal Warrant, restricting the authority of the Secretary-at-War to issues within the limits of the respective Votes, is complied with. The only cases in which the Secretary-at-War's signature to Warrants can be dispensed with are those specially sanctioned by Statute: thus Warrants for payments on account of the Volunteer and Militia Services may be signed by the Deputy Secretary-at-War, under the authority contained in the Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 6. These warrants, accompanied by the drafts or receipts of the persons in whose favour they may have been issued, will be admitted as sufficient vouchers for the payments made by the Paymaster-general for the services before mentioned.

Sign Manual Warrants for Army Non-Effective Services.

37. Sign Manual Warrants will be required for all payments on account of the Non-effective Services included in the Army and Militia Estimates. Until lately, these warrants were renewed annually, and general lists or establishments were furnished by the Secretary-at-War to the Paymaster-general, who, after the necessary comparison had been made with the entries in his books, forwarded the same to the Audit Office as authorities for the payments made by him for such services. As, however, all these Royal Warrants now authorise the Paymaster-general to pay "until further orders," it does not appear to their Lordships that it is necessary to renew the authority or lists from time to time, as directed by their Minute of the 19th August 1836. They, therefore, desire that the Paymaster-general and the Commissioners of Audit will consider whether arrangements may not be conveniently made in their respective departments for dispensing with the periodical renewal of such authorities.

Certified payments for Chelsea In-pension charges.

38. Since the abolition of the office of agent for Chelsea Pensioners, the Paymaster-general has been required to make various small payments for services included in the vote for Chelsea In-pensions, which were formerly defrayed by the agent. A clerk is sent to Chelsea Hospital every Saturday, as already explained, to pay such charges on the spot. These payments are to be made on a general list or pay bill, which is to be prepared and certified by the adjutant, steward, storekeeper, or other proper officer of the establishment, and is to be countersigned by the person who performs the office of Comptroller. The parties named in such lists are to be paid in the presence of a clerk belonging to the secretary's branch of the hospital and of the officer of the day. After the close of the payment, a certificate of the total amount paid, stating that such payments were duly authorised according to the rules of the establishment, and that they were made to the several parties entitled, in the presence of the above officers, is to be given to the pay clerk as his voucher for the payments made by him. This certificate is to be signed by the clerk from the secretary's branch appointed to attend the payment, and is to be countersigned by the officer of the day; it should also bear the approval of the secretary of the hospital.

Other payments authorized by Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital.

39. All other payments included in the In-pension Vote, and all payments for trusses, &c., included in the Vote for Out-pensions, are to be made on orders signed by the Secretary, and approved by one of the Commissioners of the hospital; but in these, as well as in the cases before described, the covering warrant of three Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital must be produced to the Commissioners of Audit in support of the payments charged in the Paymaster-general's accounts.

Payments for Kilmainham Hospital.

40. The payments made out of that portion of the In-pension Vote which relates to Kilmainham Hospital are authorised by warrants of this Board, and the accounts of the Governors of the hospital are rendered to the Commissioners of Audit.

Authorities for payment of Commissariat Effective Services.

41. The payments for Commissariat Effective Services will, in the first instance, be made principally by the officers in charge of the Commissariat abroad out of the funds raised for the supply of the Commissariat Chests; and the charge against the Commissariat Vote, in the Paymaster-general's accounts, will be made on authorities issued to him by this Board, founded on claims prepared by the Commissioners of Audit. There will, however, be some direct payments by the Paymaster-general out of the Vote for Commissariat Effective Services; these will be made in pursuance of specific directions communicated to the Paymaster-general, through the medium of letters from this Board, in the ordinary course.

Authorities for Payment of Commissariat Non-effective Services.

42. The Non-effective Services provided for in the Commissariat Estimates will also be paid on orders from this Board, to be communicated to the Paymaster-general by letters. These orders will be permanent, as at present, and will remain in force until revoked by their Lordships.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Correspondence with the Audit Board in 1841, 1842, and 1843, on the subject of authorizing payments for Commissariat Services.

43. My Lords take this opportunity of adverting to the correspondence which passed between them and the Commissioners of Audit in the years 1841, 1842, and 1843, on the subject of the form of authority under which payments for Commissariat Services should be made by the Paymaster-general, and should be allowed by the Audit Board. The Commissioners, by letters dated 28th April 1841, 1st July 1842, and 21st December 1843, acting under the advice of their solicitor, informed their Lordships that, under the Act 48 Geo. 3, c. 49, s. 3, the Paymaster-general was precluded from making any payments, save under the authorities mentioned in that Act, namely, under or in pursuance of any Act of Parliament, or by virtue or in pursuance of any warrant under Her Majesty's Royal Sign Manual, or of any warrant granted by the Lords of the Treasury or the Secretary-at-War; and that the Commissioners of Audit were consequently precluded, in the examination and audit of the Paymaster-general's accounts, from allowing him credit for any sums paid under any other authorities.

An annual covering warrant agreed upon.

44. In consequence of these representations from the Commissioners of Audit, my Lords directed, by their letters of the 16th July 1842 and 10th June 1844, that an annual statement of all payments made by the Paymaster-general, in pursuance of Treasury letters, should be submitted to them by the Audit Board, with a view to their being authorised by a general covering warrant signed by three members of this Board.

A re-consideration of this arrangement necessary.

45. The transfer to the Paymaster-general of a new class of payments, hitherto made by the Paymaster of Civil Services, in pursuance of Treasury letters, and allowed on such authorities in his accounts, renders it necessary to reconsider the decision come to upon the representations of the Commissioners of Audit before adverted to.

An annual Sign Manual Warrant will be obtained.

46. Although the provisions of the Act 48 Geo. 3, c. 49, passed in the year 1808, for the regulation of the accounts of the Paymaster-general of the Forces, do not appear to their Lordships to apply to the payments for Commissariat Services which were not made by the Paymaster-general till 1834, and although the office of Paymaster-general of the Forces has been abolished by a subsequent Act, which empowers this Board to prescribe rules and regulations for the new office created in 1836, my Lords are nevertheless of opinion that it is desirable to assimilate the authorities for payments made out of the Votes for Commissariat Services, to those under which other payments for Army Services are made by the Paymaster-general. With this view, my Lords will submit annually to Her Majesty a a warrant to empower the Paymaster-general to issue and apply the sums voted by Parliament for Commissariat Services, under the directions of this Board.

Payments for Commissariat Services to be authorized by Treasury Letters.

47. My Lords consider that the most convenient and expeditious mode of communicating their directions to the Paymaster-general, to make issues on account of the services included in the Commissariat Votes, will be by letters signed in the ordinary course; and as this practice has been adopted for many years with perfect safety and success, in regard to the more extensive services paid by the Paymaster of Civil Services, the annual warrant to be submitted to Her Majesty will provide, that payments made by the Paymaster-general in conformity with such authorities, shall be allowed and passed in his accounts by the Commissioners of Audit.

Commissariat Chest Payments (late Army Extraordinaries).

48. The payments made upon bills drawn by Commissariat officers for the supply of the Commissariat Chests, the payments to the Mint for the supply of specie, advances to colonial agents to be repaid to the Commissariat Chests in the colonies, and other payments, now included under the title of "Commissariat Chest Account," but which up to the year 1840 were called "Extraordinaries of the Army," appear to require special notice.

Nature of Commissariat Chest Account.

49. None of the payments now included in the Commissariat Chest Account are of the nature of expenditure finally chargeable against the account. Although large sums pass annually through the Commissariat Chest Account, it has neither income nor final expenditure of its own. Formerly various final payments were included in the Account of Extraordinaries, and an annual Vote of Parliament was taken "to defray the Extraordinary Expenses of the Army." Since 1832, however, no such vote has been taken, and the various expenses which the vote was intended to provide for, have been transferred to the estimates of the several departments of the public service to which they properly belonged. The Commissariat Chest Account, therefore, is not open to any of the objections which have been advanced against the Account of the Extraordinary Expenses of the Army. It is a simple banking account, from which the various departments abroad draw the supplies necessary for carrying on the public services in the colonies, such advances being replaced out of the Votes of Parliament, or other credits in this country, applicable by law to defray the charge of such services.

Advances by Revenue Departments similar in principle.

50. The arrangement which takes place in the settlement of the advances out of the Commissariat Chests abroad, is similar to that which is followed in regard to advances made by the revenue departments at home. The various public departments in London issue orders upon the several collectors of the revenue in the United Kingdom. These orders are cashed by the collectors out of the revenue collected by them, and they are remitted periodically to the Revenue Boards in London, as bills recoverable from the respective departments. The Revenue Boards, on delivering to the several departments the orders issued on their collectors, are reimbursed the amount of the advances made upon such orders, by transfers at the Bank of England, out of the Votes of Parliament applicable thereto. The principle is, in both cases, the same, and these banking arrangements not only promote promote economy, but they afford valuable facilities in the transaction of the public business.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Moneys for the supply of the Chests advanced by the Paymaster-general.

51. The moneys required by the several commissariat officers abroad, to enable them to meet the demands made upon them, from time to time, by the various departments of the public service at the respective stations, are, in the first instance, supplied by the Paymaster-general providing the funds required either for the payment of the bills drawn by the commissariat officers upon the Lords of the Treasury, or for providing specie to be remitted to the foreign stations; it is therefore necessary to define the authorities under which the Paymaster-general is to act in making such advances.

Royal Sign Manual Warrant for the application of Commissariat Chest funds.

52. According to the practice established during the existence of the late fund for "Army Extraordinaries," a Sign Manual Warrant has been obtained at the commencement of every reign, giving authority to the Paymaster-general to apply such sums as he might receive applicable to the "Extraordinary Services in the Army," in pursuance of such warrants as might be issued to him, by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, by virtue of such Sign Manual Warrant. These services are now reduced to the simple banking transactions of the Commissariat Chests, and the authority referred to would be complete if the Paymaster-general always held a balance in his hands available for payments chargeable, in the first instance, to the account of the Commissariat Chest; but this has rarely been the case, owing to the delay which takes place in repaying to the Commissariat Chest Account the advances made for the service of the several departments.

Treasury Warrants for the payment of Treasury Bills out of the Votes for Land Forces.

53. To meet the difficulty arising from a deficient balance in the hands of the Paymaster-general, at the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account, the Paymaster-general has been authorised by Treasury Warrants, since the year 1832, when the votes for the extraordinary services of the army ceased to be taken, to pay the bills drawn by the commissariat officers abroad out of monies received "for the services of Her Majesty's land forces;" and these warrants have been issued under the authority supposed to be contained in the Royal Warrant before referred to.

These Warrants are not in conformity with the terms of the Royal Warrant.

54. The Commissioners of Audit have, however, by their letters of the 26th February 1847, and the 1st May 1848, very properly called the attention of their Lordships to the terms of the sign manual warrant, and have pointed out that it only gives the Treasury power to direct the application of moneys which may come into the hands of the Paymaster-general for the extraordinaries of the army; but that it does not empower the Treasury to apply sums voted for the service of Her Majesty's land forces, to the payment of Treasury Bills drawn by the commissariat officers abroad, for the supply of their chests.

Treasury Bills to be made payable out of the funds of the Commissariat Chest.

55. My Lords find, on inquiry, that during many years up to the year 1832, Commissariat Bills were uniformly made payable, by Treasury Warrants, out of the moneys in the hands of the Paymaster-general, applicable to the extraordinaries of the army; and nothing appears to be on record to show the grounds upon which the change made in the terms of the Treasury Warrant, in 1832, was directed. My Lords are therefore of opinion, that all Treasury Bills should, in future, be made payable out of moneys applicable to the service of the Commissariat Chest.

A more speedy recovery of advances necessary.

56. It will be necessary, when this arrangement shall be brought into operation, to issue such directions, in regard to the more speedy recovery of the advances made out of the Commissariat Chests, as will tend to place the Paymaster-general sufficiently in funds for Commissariat Chest purposes, to enable him to comply with the provisions of the amended Warrant, as it is proposed to frame it in future.

Available fund at the credit of the Commissariat Chest.

57. My Lords are aware that the service for which the greater part of the bills in question are drawn, is for the payment of the troops abroad, and that the votes for army services ultimately become charged with a large proportion of the monies raised by such bills. They are also aware that there is a considerable sum at the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account, upon a general balance of all its assets and liabilities. This balance is the result of a running account of the receipts and payments, under the head of "Army Extraordinaries," from a very remote date, and it does not exceed the sum indispensably necessary for making the advances for carrying on the various branches of the public service abroad. By an account recently completed by the Commissioners of Audit, in pursuance of directions issued by their Lordships on the 3d October 1845, it appears that, on the 31st March 1847, there remained available for carrying on the banking operations of the Commissariat Chest, a surplus balance amounting to 1,245,375*l.* My Lords are satisfied that if proper arrangements are made for regulating the periodical repayments to the Commissariat Chest Account, in the Paymaster-general's books, for advances made abroad, there ought to be no difficulty in carrying on the service with the available balance referred to, without borrowing from the grants for any other service, to meet the current payments. My Lords are strengthened in this opinion by an examination of the account before referred to, by which it is shown that there remained due on the 31st March 1847, to the Commissariat Chest Account by the Naval and Military Departments, beyond the quarterly repayments made by them on account of advances in the year 1846-7, a sum exceeding 1,160,000*l.* In addition to this sum, there was a further balance due to the Commissariat Chest, at the same date, from various services voted on the Miscellaneous Estimates, exceeding 200,000*l.*; making a total sum exceeding 1,360,000*l.* due from voted services. It is clear, therefore, that so far from the Commissariat Chest Account being in debt to the army and other services

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

vices for the amount apparently advanced out of the votes for those services, to meet the current payments on account of the Commissariat Chest, those services were, in fact, at that date, considerably in debt to the Commissariat Chest on a balance of the accounts between them.

Monthly repayments to be made by the several departments upon account.

58. With the view of preventing so large an arrear of debt to the Commissariat Chest Account at the close of the year, and of avoiding the consequent necessity of apparently borrowing from other funds to meet the current payments for that account, my Lords are pleased to direct that the several departments, whose agents abroad receive advances from the Commissariat Chest, will authorise the Paymaster-general to transfer monthly, from their respective votes, to the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account in his books, a sum nearly equal to the estimated advances on account of each. This estimate should be regulated by the amount of advances made in the last year for which the accounts may be complete, except in cases where a change of circumstances may render it advisable to add to or to diminish that amount. A reserve of 10 per cent. to be paid as a balance on the final adjustment of the account with each department, will be sufficient to meet the ordinary fluctuations of the service.

Commissioners of Audit to report quarterly the sums to be repaid upon account, out of Miscellaneous Votes.

59. Similar transfers should be made on account of advances from the Commissariat Chests abroad for services provided for in the Miscellaneous Estimates; and my Lords desire that the Commissioners of Audit will report to them every quarter the sums which it may be proper to transfer to the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account in the Paymaster-general's books, according to the principle laid down above. These transfers may be confined to the principal services in the Miscellaneous Estimates for which such advances are made.

Acceptance of Treasury Bills.

60. The bills drawn by the officers in charge of the Commissariat at the several stations abroad, for the supply of the Commissariat Chests, have hitherto been accepted by the Assistant Secretary of this Board, payable on the account of the Paymaster-general at the Bank of England, and advice lists of such bills have been sent to the Paymaster-general and to the Commissioners of Audit. My Lords are of opinion that such bills should continue to be drawn upon them; but as all other bills of exchange payable on the Paymaster-general's account at the Bank, with the exception of a particular class of navy bills, are accepted in his office, they consider that the Commissaries' bills should also be accepted by him, on a general authority to be given to him by this Board. My Lords are therefore pleased to direct that from and after the commencement of the ensuing financial year all Treasury bills shall be examined and accepted by the Paymaster-general. The letters of advice to be transmitted to this Board by the Commissaries will be forwarded to the Paymaster-general, who will be held responsible for seeing that the bills have been drawn in conformity with the directions of their Lordships, as laid down in the Commissariat Regulations, articles Nos. 199 to 209; and he will accept and pay the same, returning the several drawers as imprest accountants to the Audit Board. All such payments will be allowed in his accounts, on his producing to the Commissioners of Audit regular bills paid by the Bank of England, and lists of accepted bills confirmed by this Board.

Authorities for payment of other Commissariat Chest Services.

61. All other payments out of the moneys applicable to the service of the Commissariat Chests will be made in pursuance of special orders communicated to the Paymaster-general by letters from this Board; some of these payments will be of the nature of advances, and others will be merely repayments on account of sums deposited in the chests abroad.

An amended Royal Warrant will be obtained.

62. As the Royal Warrant under which my Lords are empowered to authorise the application of the funds of the Commissariat Chest Account was originally framed with reference to the fund created by the annual Votes for the extraordinaries of the army, which have been discontinued since 1832, and as it is not properly applicable to the Commissariat Chest Account, which consists entirely of temporary transactions involving no final appropriation of public money, my Lords will cause an amended warrant to be submitted to Her Majesty to authorise the Paymaster-general to apply the sums which may come into his hands for the service of the Commissariat Chests, in pursuance of orders to be issued to him, from time to time, under the directions of this Board. My Lords consider that this warrant should expressly direct that the moneys so received by the Paymaster-general shall be applied only to payments of the nature of temporary advances and repayments connected with the service of the Commissariat Chests, and that such payments shall in no case be finally charged upon the funds of the Commissariat Chest Account.

Navy Effective Services —Authorities for payments.

63. The authorities for payment on account of effective naval services are mostly settled by statute. The Act for consolidating the civil departments of the navy (2 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 8) enacts, that all bills for the payment of money, all allotment bills, and all remittance bills, shall be made out and signed by the Accountant-general of the Navy, or by an officer to be for that purpose appointed by the Lords of the Admiralty, and shall be in such form, and countersigned and approved in such manner, as the said Commissioners shall from time to time order or establish. The same clause directs, moreover, that all bills of exchange shall be drawn upon the Accountant-general at three days' sight, and that they shall be accepted by him or by such officer as aforesaid; and that such acceptances shall be countersigned and approved in the manner above described; and that all such bills so countersigned and approved shall, when paid by the Paymaster-general, be deemed good and sufficient vouchers for such payments on the passing of his accounts.

64. The

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

64. The Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, contains various provisions relating to the payment of seamen's wages, half-pay, and pensions, which affect the business of payment conducted at the branch pay offices at the outports. The Paymaster-general will be careful to instruct his pay clerks at the ports to observe all the provisions of that or any other Act of Parliament, as well as all regulations established by Orders in Council, or other competent authority, in relation to the payment of the navy, or any other service jointly conducted by the Pay and Admiralty establishments at the ports.

Acts of Parliament, Orders in Council, &c. relating to Naval payments to be duly attended to.

65. Some effective services of the navy (the salaries of the establishments in London and those of the dockyards) are paid upon collective orders or lists, and the claimants give receipts in discharge of the sums paid to them. All such authorities are to be signed, approved, and countersigned in the manner prescribed by the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, in the case of bills.

Navy Effective Services—Payments on collective orders.

66. The authorities for the payment of the non-effective services of the navy will be communicated to the Paymaster-general by warrants under the signatures of two Lords of the Admiralty. It has hitherto been the practice, under the authority of their Lordships' minute of the 19th August 1836, to renew the authorities for all navy non-effective services paid by the Paymaster-general every third year. The Paymaster-general having reported to my Lords that he does not require a renewal of the authorities once given to him for the payment of such services, they desire that the Commissioners of Audit will consider whether arrangements may not be made, in their department, to relieve the Admiralty from the labour of periodically renewing these voluminous lists.

Navy Non-effective Services—Authorities for payments.

67. The payment of the Greenwich out-pensions having been transferred from the department of the Paymaster-general to that of the Secretary-at-War, in accordance with the provisions of the Act 9 Vict. c. 10, the advances to the staff officers of pensioners, through whom the pensions are paid in detail, will be made under orders to be issued by the Secretary-at-War; but the Admiralty will authorise the Paymaster-general to transfer, from the Vote in the Navy Estimates applicable to this service to the credit of the Secretary-at-War, such sums as will enable the latter to meet all demands to be made upon him from time to time for this service, without drawing upon the votes for army services.

Transfers from the sums voted for Greenwich out-pensions.

68. The payments to commissioned officers on the Greenwich out-pension list will, however, continue to be made by the Paymaster-general, who will receive from time to time from the Secretary-at-War the requisite authorities for that purpose. These payments will be made out of the funds transferred from the Naval Vote to the credit of the Secretary-at-War, as already explained.

Pensions of Commissioned Officers on the Greenwich out-pension list to be paid by the Paymaster-general.

69. The payments for naval prize services will be made under authorities similar to those prescribed by the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 8, for navy effective services; and the Paymaster-general will be careful to keep a separate and distinct account in his books of all moneys received and paid for this service, as required by the Act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 55.

Naval Prize—Authorities for payments.

70. The authorities for the payment of Ordnance effective services, called, in the technical language of the Ordnance department, debentures, imprests, and quarter books, are similar in form to those adopted for naval payments; the debentures and imprests being bills, and the quarter books salary lists. The navy bills being exempt from stamp duty, are delivered or sent to the claimants, who pay them to their bankers, or negotiate them in the ordinary course of business. The Ordnance orders cannot, however, be used as negotiable documents, as they are simply orders for payment, and as a stamped receipt is required from the party in whose favour they are made out; thus contractors and other claimants are under the necessity of attending personally at the pay-office in those cases in which bills of exchange are not used. The orders for payment emanating from the Board of Ordnance are to be signed, approved, and countersigned, as directed by the letter of this Board, dated the 20th August 1838; that is to say, by one Board officer, the secretary, and one chief clerk. The clerk of the Ordnance, or his chief clerk, is to be always one of the signing parties; but the chief clerk of a branch is never to sign when his principal the Board officer signs.

Ordnance Effective Services—Authorities for payments.

71. The Paymaster-general has called the attention of their Lordships to a variation of practice, in regard to a numerous class of payments for Ordnance services, as compared with the payment of similar services in the naval department. It appears that it is the practice of the Ordnance department to require the persons belonging to their different establishments at home and abroad to draw separate bills on the Paymaster-general for their salaries and allowances; whilst in the naval service such charges are paid on the spot by the local imprest accountants of the department. As the practice pursued by the Ordnance department creates much additional labour in both offices, and is by no means so desirable or convenient to the claimants themselves, particularly to the claimants belonging to establishments abroad, who, my Lords are given to understand, are by this practice placed under the necessity of employing agents in this country, my Lords request that steps may be taken for paying all such parties through the local accountants of the establishments to which they belong.

Salaries of Ordnance Establishments at Home and Abroad to be paid by local accountants.

72. The non-effective services of the Ordnance are to be paid on warrants signed, approved, and countersigned in the manner prescribed for Ordnance effective services. My Lords are of opinion that the general lists of claimants on the several Ordnance non-effective establishments, which have hitherto been renewed every three years, should be considered

Ordnance Non-effective Services—Authorities for payments.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

considered permanent authorities, as already suggested, with respect to similar documents prepared in the War Office and Admiralty.

Ordnance payments for other departments.

73. There is one class of payments made by the Paymaster-general on account of the Ordnance Department, which appears to require special authority. That department is frequently employed in procuring supplies, or in executing works for other departments of Government, the East India Company, and the colonies. Payment for such supplies and works has hitherto been made, in the first instance, by the Paymaster-general, out of the general funds at the disposal of the Board of Ordnance, and the amount of such advances has been subsequently recovered from the proper department. The delay which takes place in the recovery of advances of this description, leaves constantly a large outstanding debt due to the Ordnance Grants, the amount of which reduces, for the time, the balance of grants available for the current service of the Ordnance Department.

Inconvenience of employing Ordnance Funds for the purpose.

74. So long as the Board of Ordnance was enabled to provide surplus funds, by including in their votes various services not payable till after the termination of the year, no inconvenience was likely to be felt from the temporary use of a portion of the Ordnance Grants in payment of such advances. As, however, the tendency of all the regulations established of late years, both by Parliament and by this Board, has been to restrict the amount of funds at the disposal of the executive departments, the temporary employment of any considerable amount of the Ordnance Grants, in payment of supplies for other departments, may be productive of great inconvenience to the Ordnance Service towards the close of the financial year, when there may not be a surplus of grants beyond the current demands sufficient to cover the amount of such advances.

Opinion of Commissioners of Inquiry in 1844.

75. The attention of their Lordships was called to this subject, in 1844, by the Committee of Inquiry into the system of Account and Audit in the Ordnance Department. The Commissioners pointed out, in their Fourth Report, that if their recommendation respecting the principle of voting the Estimates "for Services to be paid within the year," should be adopted, it would deprive the Ordnance Department of those means of making advances for other departments which the existing arrangements afforded them. The principle of preparing the annual Estimates on a calculation of the sums necessary to defray the charges to be paid during the year, was adopted by the Naval and Military Departments, commencing with the Estimates for the year 1846–7, in pursuance of the directions contained in the Minute of this Board, dated the 13th January 1846.

Expenses incurred by the Board of Ordnance for other departments to be defrayed out of funds supplied by such departments.

76. My Lords are sensible that it is for the advantage of the public service that the Board of Ordnance should continue to be employed in executing such services for other departments of Government as can be more economically conducted by that Board; but as every department is understood not to incur expenses which have not been previously provided for by Parliament, there can be no difficulty, when any department requires the aid of the Board of Ordnance in executing a service, the expense of which is to be charged against such department, in placing at the disposal of the Board of Ordnance a sufficient sum to defray the cost of the work or supply intrusted to that Board. My Lords desire, therefore, that this arrangement may, as far as practicable, be acted upon in future, as my Lords consider it important that advances out of the grants of Parliament for services not finally chargeable on such grants, should be limited to cases of indispensable necessity, and to which the previous sanction of this Board shall have been obtained.

77. My Lords proceed now to consider the further instructions which it is necessary to issue to the Paymaster-general, in reference to the duties to be transferred to his superintendence, on the abolition of the offices of the Paymaster of Civil Services and the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills.

Payments transferred from the Office of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

78. The payments transferred from the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services being of a more varied character than those which are made by the Paymaster-general for Naval and Military Services, and not being subject to the same authorities and rules, my Lords deem it right to accompany their instructions with such remarks as may serve to explain the nature of the services to which these payments relate.

79. The Civil Service payments may be divided into two heads; the first embracing expenses charged, in pursuance of various Acts of Parliament, upon the Consolidated Fund; the second embracing those charges which are the subject of annual votes in Supply, founded on the various Estimates for Miscellaneous Services.

Charges on the Consolidated Fund.

80. The charges on the Consolidated Fund, heretofore paid by the Paymaster of Civil Services, consist of—

1st. The Civil List.
2d. Annuities and Pensions.
3d. Salaries and Allowances.
4th. Diplomatic Services.
5th. Courts of Justice.
6th. Miscellaneous Charges on Consolidated Fund.
7th. Advances charged on the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund.

For all these Services the credits will, in future, be granted by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer upon Treasury Warrants, in the manner prescribed in the preceding part of this Minute.

81. The

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

81. The various payments for the Civil List will be made by the Paymaster-general, under authorities similar to those which have hitherto been acted upon in the Office of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Civil List payments.

82. Under Annuities and Pensions are comprised the grants to the several members of the Royal Family, pensions for naval and military, civil and judicial services, charged on the Consolidated Fund by various Acts of Parliament; also pensions to the servants of their late Majesties King Geo. 3 (per Act 1 Geo. 4, c. 108), and Queen Charlotte (per Act 59 Geo. 3, c. 22), and Queen Caroline (per Act 3 Geo. 4, c. 90); also to officers of the late Levant Company (per Act 6 Geo. 4, c. 33), to officers of the late African Company (per Act 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 28), to late lottery officers (per Act 4 Geo. 4, c. 60), Exchequer compensations (per Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15), and pensions formerly paid out of the Civil List, Hereditary Revenues of Scotland, and Four-and-a-half per cent. Duties, granted by Royal Warrant of 10th November 1838, and charged upon the Consolidated Fund, per Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 116.

Annuities and pensions.

83. The pensions granted to the great officers of State, under the Acts 57 Geo. 3, c. 65, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24, are payable under the special restrictions imposed by those Acts; but nearly all the others are payable without conditions, proof of life only being required.

Conditions on which payable.

84. The books or lists upon which these annuities and pensions have hitherto been paid in the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services, will be transferred to the Paymaster-general, that he may henceforth pay the parties the sums which may become due to them from time to time. In these books and lists information is afforded as to the tenure of the several grants, and the terms and conditions on which they have respectively been made; also whether the same are payable to the grantees, their assigns, or attorneys duly authorised to give legal acquittances for them.

Pension Books of Paymaster of Civil Services to be transferred to Paymaster-general.

85. The payment of these annuities and pensions will be duly authorised by their Lordships, either by permanent or special orders, to be communicated to the Paymaster-general by letters from this Board.

The payment of annuities, &c. will be authorised by Treasury Letters.

86. The head of "Salaries and Allowances" includes various charges for salaries and contingencies; also the salary of the Speaker of the House of Commons, that of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and various other individual salaries. It embraces, moreover, the salaries of the ecclesiastical establishments in the West Indies, and a few compensation allowances and other payments.

Salaries and allowances.

87. The sums payable in detail in this country to the several parties entitled to such salaries, and the advances to be made by way of imprest, will be authorised by special authorities from this Board, in the usual form. The amount payable on account of each diocese of the ecclesiastical establishment in the West Indies will be communicated to the Paymaster-general, and bills of exchange will be drawn by the several parties for their quarterly salaries, which are to be countersigned by the bishop of the diocese, or in his absence by his vicar-general. The archdeacon at the Bahamas is to be paid quarterly, on the production of a certificate from the governor of the Bahamas, that he has resided and duly performed the duties of archdeacon during the quarter. The Paymaster-general will be careful not to pay the salaries of any of the claimants referred to, during their absence from their diocese, without special authority from this Board. The salaries of the Commissioners of Lunacy will only be payable on production of a declaration embracing the conditions pointed out in the 3d section of the Act 8 & 9 Vict., c. 100.

Payments to be made on special authorities.

88. Under Diplomatic Services are included both the salaries of ministers at Foreign courts, and the pensions of persons who have filled diplomatic situations abroad. The payment of the salaries will be authorised by a quarterly letter from this Board, founded on a statement furnished by the Foreign Office to their Lordships, showing the separate salaries payable to the several ministers and other persons composing the diplomatic corps. Such payments, however, are not to be made by the Paymaster-general, until certificates from the Foreign Office shall have been produced to him, showing that the parties whose names are set forth in such quarterly statement were in the performance of their duties, or absent on leave, during the period to which the statement refers. Quarterly authorities will be sent to the Paymaster-general, sanctioning the payment of the amounts due to the several parties entitled to pensions, according to the particulars in the list transferred to him by the Paymaster of Civil Services. They will be required to "declare that they are entitled to a pension of l. per annum as late minister abroad, under the authority of the Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 116, and that they have not been appointed to any office of profit under the Crown during the quarter."

Diplomatic Services.

89. The class of payments included under "Courts of Justice," embraces the salaries of the judges, officers, and others belonging to the several courts, and the pensions or compensations for offices abolished by Act of Parliament. The greater part of these charges will be payable on proof of life only; in other cases, the claimants will be required to produce declarations to entitle them to payment. The late pipe officers, whose offices were abolished by Act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 99, will be required to declare, quarterly, that they have not been appointed to any office under the Crown, in the United Kingdom or the colonies, during the period for which the allowance may be claimed. The officers of the Welsh Judicature, whose offices were abolished by Act 1 Will. 4, c. 70, will also be required to declare quarterly

Courts of Justice.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

terly that, during the period for which the allowance may be claimed by them as compensation for the loss of their office, as abolished by the above Act, they have not been appointed to any other public office of emolument. My Lords will transmit to the Paymaster-general, quarterly lists or authorities, verified in the usual form, to enable him to make the various payments included under this head.

Miscellaneous charges on the Consolidated Fund.

90. The head of "Miscellaneous Charges" embraces the charge for the interest and sinking fund of the Russian Dutch, and Greek loans, bounties for the capture of slavers by Her Majesty's ships, secret service, compensation for loss of duties on coinage of tin, compensation to parties for loss of office on the abolition of the duties on tin, and other payments of a miscellaneous character. For these services the Paymaster-general will receive authorities for payment, by letters addressed to him by directions of this Board.

Advances out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund.

91. Payments will also be made by the Paymaster-general under the head of "Advances out of the growing Produce of the Consolidated Fund." Every issue of this description will be specially authorised by their Lordships, and will be communicated to the Paymaster-general, by letters in which the conditions to be observed by the parties who may receive such issues will be described.

Entries of assignments, powers of attorney, &c. in the books of the Paymaster of Civil Services to be recognised by the Paymaster-general.

92. With respect to the foregoing salaries, pensions, and allowances, heretofore paid by the Paymaster of Civil Services, and to be issued in future to the several claimants by the Paymaster-general, which have been received under deeds of assignment, powers of attorney, or other legal instrument, my Lords desire that such payments may continue to be made on the same authorities; and the Paymaster-general will receive as evidence of the existence of such assignments, powers of attorney, or other legal document, where the originals may not be transferred to him, the usual record of such instruments in the books of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Quarterly Returns of deaths, &c. to be transmitted to Treasury.

93. My Lords desire that the Paymaster-general will transmit to them, 10 days before the termination of every quarter, a statement of the deaths of persons entitled to pensions on any of the lists paid by him out of the Consolidated Fund, which may have been certified to him during the quarter; also a certificate of the sum required in the ensuing quarter, to pay the pensions continued by Her Majesty's warrant, dated the 10th November 1838.

Payments under the several heads of the Miscellaneous Estimates.

94. The payments heretofore made in the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services, for services included in the Miscellaneous Estimates, will now be made by the Paymaster-general. Where the authorities given to the Paymaster of Civil Services were of a permanent nature they are to be considered as of force and validity in the Paymaster-general's office. In those cases in which it has been customary to issue special orders, my Lords will continue to sanction payments by distinct authorities in each case. There are, however, cases in which payments for salaries, pensions, and other services are made in detail, in some departments out of imprests granted in gross by the Paymaster-general, which it may be found for the advantage of the public service to transfer to the Paymaster-general. They, therefore, desire that the Paymaster-general will, after due inquiry into each particular case, submit to this Board a plan, for transferring to his office the duty of making the detailed payments referred to, commencing with the Superannuations and Retired Allowances included in Class 6 of the Miscellaneous Estimates. For the payment of these non-effective services my Lords will issue permanent orders, directing the allowances to be paid quarterly, until further notice from this Board, on production of the proper documents by the claimants.

Payments out of special funds on the Cash Account.

95. In addition to the services already noticed, various payments have been made by the Paymaster of Civil Services out of funds placed to his cash account for specific purposes. The Paymaster-general will continue to act upon the instructions applicable to each service, which my Lords have, from time to time, issued to the Paymaster of Civil Services; but they desire that he will inquire into each fund embraced in his cash account, and report to them how far the balance remaining at the credit of each is now required to be retained by him, and whether the sums which are not likely to be called for may not be paid over to the Consolidated Fund. He will also report to my Lords such balances of credits created by the Comptroller-general's warrants out of grants of Parliament or charges upon the Consolidated Fund which are not required for the public service, in order that the amount may be repaid to the account of the Exchequer.

Exchequer Bills.

96. The Act 11 & 12 Vict., c. 55, also provides for the transfer to the Paymaster-general of the duties hitherto conducted by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills. My Lords proceed to furnish detailed explanations and instructions for the guidance of the Paymaster-general, in the performance of these duties.

97. Exchequer bills will be paid off by the Paymaster-general, either by an exchange of new bills for old ones, or by a payment in money.

Exchange of Exchequer Bills to be advertised.

98. The steps to be taken on an exchange of Exchequer Bills are as follows:—The bills due in March and June of each year are to be advertised to be paid off, after the sanction of the Chancellor of the Exchequer shall have been obtained to the rate of interest which the new bills are to bear. The day on which the bills, with the interest due thereon, are to be paid off, and the last day on which such bills will be received for exchange, are to be stated in the advertisement. The advertisement, after having been submitted to and approved by this this Board, is to be inserted in the "London Gazette," the "Edinburgh Gazette," and the daily London papers, and the first publication of the advertisement should be about 16 days before the last day for receiving bills for exchange. Copies of the advertisement, according to the Minute of this Board, dated the 18th February 1840, addressed to the late Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, are to be prepared and sent to this Board by the Paymaster-general, that they may be forwarded to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin, with authority to publish the same.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Interest of bills advertised to be reported to Treasury.

99. When the advertisement shall have appeared in the public papers, the Paymaster-general will report to this Board the amount of interest which may be payable on the bills advertised to be exchanged, in order that a Treasury Warrant for the necessary credit to defray the same may be prepared.

Holders may claim to be paid in money.

100. If any holder of Exchequer Bills, after the same shall be advertised to be paid off, should demand to be paid in money, such bills are to be paid accordingly; and the interest saved by prompt payment is to be deducted from the credit to be given under the warrant before referred to.

Bills not presented for exchange may either be paid in money or in new bills at the next exchange.

101. The interest of Exchequer Bills will cease from the date on which they may be advertised to be paid off, and holders neglecting to exchange their bills on the day fixed, may either be paid subsequently in money, or they may have new bills at the next exchange, bearing interest from the date when they may be issued.

Instructions for holders of Exchequer Bills.

102. Lists containing instructions for the guidance of the holders of Exchequer Bills in arranging bills left for payment or exchange, are to be delivered to holders who may apply for them. Parties presenting bills are to comply strictly with the instructions for making out the lists, memoranda, &c. especially with the directions requiring that bills granted under different Acts should be kept in separate lists, and that the bills last advertised should not be mixed with overdue bills. Care is to be taken also that every bill is endorsed by the party in whose name it is presented, and by any party to whom it may have been specially endorsed.

Holders leaving bills for exchange or payment to receive an acknowledgment.

103. Every person leaving Exchequer Bills for payment or exchange is to receive an acknowledgment of the bills left by him, signed by one of the chief clerks in the Paymaster-general's Department, who will see that the list left by the claimant has been duly examined and compared with the bills.

Bills to be counterfoiled and cancelled.

104. Exchequer Bills left for examination are to be compared with the counterfoils, and a pen is to be drawn through the Comptroller-general's signature; this examination having been carefully completed, the bills are to be cancelled by punching a hole through the centre of them.

Statement of new bills required to be sent to the Exchequer.

105. After the examination of the bills, and of the lists, shall have been completed, a statement of the new bills required from the Exchequer is to be prepared, and information is to be sent to the Issue Department of the Exchequer as early as possible after the number of new bills of each description shall have been correctly ascertained, and the amount thereof shall have been proved by the amount of old bills delivered in for exchange.

New bills to be prepared for delivery to claimants.

106. On receipt of the new bills from the Exchequer, they are to be sorted and prepared for delivery to the respective claimants, in accordance with the lists applicable to each.

Entries in books of record and account.

107. All the necessary entries in the Books of Record and Account are to be then completed. My Lords do not think it necessary to prescribe the number or form of the books in which the Paymaster-general is to record the exchange or payment of Exchequer Bills, as they ought to be framed in such a manner as to conform to the plan upon which his general accounts will be kept; but they desire that he will keep in view the necessity of establishing an easy and certain reference to every bill received or given out, so as to ascertain, if necessary, the party from whom any bill may have been received, or the party to whom any bill may have been delivered.

Payment of Exchequer Bills in money.

108. When Exchequer Bills are to be paid in money, they are to be left at the Paymaster-general's office for examination, and payment of principal and interest is to be made on the following day. Such payments will be made out of Exchequer Credits granted for the purpose. In other respects, the rules to be observed will be similar to those laid down for the regulation of the exchange of bills.

Payment of West India relief bills.

109. With respect to West India Relief Bills, it will be necessary that the Paymaster-general should apply to this Board about 10 days before the quarter-day on which the principal may become due, for an Exchequer Credit for the amount required to pay the same, together with the interest due thereon. All bills of this description which are at present outstanding are held by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on account of savings banks, and they will be finally cleared off by the payments to be made on the 5th January and 5th April 1849.

Principal of Exchequer Bills paid off in the year not to exceed the Exchequer credit.

110. The Paymaster-general will take care that the amount applied in the payment of the principal of Exchequer Bills in each year ending 5th January, shall not exceed the amount of the Exchequer Credits granted for the purpose.

111. When

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Course pursued in paying of deficiency bills.

111. When any sum of money shall have been set apart in the Exchequer, out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, for paying off the Deficiency Bills which may have been issued under the authority of the Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 48, notice of the amount will be communicated to the Paymaster-general by the Exchequer. Upon receipt of this notice, the Paymaster-general will cause a statement to be sent to the Bank, describing the bills to be paid off, and the amount thereof. On the following day, the Bank will send the bills to the Paymaster-general to be counterfoiled, cancelled and paid. Such bills are, in all instances, to be endorsed by one of the Cashiers of the Bank of England.

Deficiency bills purchased on account of the Sinking Fund to be cancelled.

112. Whenever the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt shall purchase Exchequer Bills, the bills will be endorsed by one of the cashiers of the Bank of England, and by the Comptroller-general of the National Debt Office, and sent to the Paymaster-general to be cancelled. A certificate of the amount cancelled is to be prepared in triplicate, one copy of which is to be sent to this Board, a second to the Bank or Comptroller-general of the National Debt Office, and the third to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

Weekly return of bills paid off to be sent to the Exchequer.

113. The Paymaster-general is to transmit to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, on every Saturday, a statement of the Exchequer Bills of each description paid off and cancelled in the week. He will also transmit, in like manner, a similar statement or certificate on the several quarter-days, 5th January, 5th April, 5th July and 10th October, for any broken portion of a week up to such quarter-days.

Annual return of "over-due" bills.

114. The Paymaster-general will also prepare on the 5th January of every year an account of over-due bills at that date, one copy of which is to be transmitted to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and the other to this Board.

Instructions as to receipt and return of counterfoils.

115. The following rules are to be observed in regard to the receipt and return of the counterfoils.

116. The counterfoils will be sent by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to the Paymaster-general within one week after the issue of the bills.

117. After the annual account of the Paymaster-general shall have been declared by the Commissioners of Audit, the counterfoils of the bills cancelled and discharged within the period of the account, are to be returned to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, to be destroyed, under the authority of a Treasury Warrant. Care should be taken, however, to retain the counterfoils of those bills, included in the series, which may not have been discharged within the period of the account. The counterfoils of any lost Exchequer Bills should also be preserved by the Paymaster-general, to afford the means of verifying such bills in the event of their subsequent appearance.

118. If the counterfoil of an outstanding Exchequer Bill should be inadvertently destroyed, the bills, on being presented for payment, are to be sent to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer for such verification as may be practicable; every such case being reported by the Paymaster-general to this Board.

119. The counterfoils are to be compared with the list of outstanding bills before the counterfoil books are returned to the Exchequer.

Bills to be compared with counterfoils at the request of holders.

120. If the holder of any Exchequer Bill should desire to ascertain the genuineness of the bill, by a comparison thereof with the counterfoil, the Paymaster-general will cause the comparison to be made, on application being made to him, in accordance with the directions given in the Minute of this Board of the 14th December 1842, and a record of such comparison is to be kept; but no mark or notation is to be made on the bill.

Proceedings relative to lost Exchequer Bills.

121. The proceedings relative to lost Exchequer Bills are regulated by the Act 48 Geo. 3, c. 1, s. 18. This Act requires that a person who may have lost an Exchequer Bill shall make affidavit of his loss before a Baron of the Court of Exchequer, who, if satisfied of the truth of the circumstances attested, is to grant a certificate to that effect. The Act further provides that in every such case the Commissioners of the Treasury are thereby authorised to cause the money due upon such bill or bills so lost, burnt, or destroyed, to be satisfied by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, as if the original bill or bills were brought in to be paid off. Immediate notice of the loss of an Exchequer Bill should be given to the Paymaster-general, that the proper notations may be made in the register of bills in his office, and upon the counterfoil of the bill. An application, supported by the affidavit, is then to be made to this Board, to authorise the Paymaster-general to pay the amount of the lost bill to the party, on his providing proper security. The necessary proceedings will then be directed by their Lordships.

122. When the half of an Exchequer Bill may be lost, similar steps are to be taken for the recovery of the amount. The 8th section of the Act above referred to also makes provision for cases of defaced Exchequer Bills.

To be paid in money in certain cases.

123. When the loss of an Exchequer Bill occurs immediately before a payment, when it becomes due, and there is not time to execute the bond before the exchange takes place, it is not desirable to provide for the payment of the lost bill by the issue of a new one, as in the event of the party failing to procure the required security, a superfluous Exchequer Bill would be provided. It is therefore the desire of their Lordships that in all such cases, and as far as practicable, practicable, in all other instances of lost bills, the payment may be made in money, after the sanction of this Board shall have been given for the payment of the amount of the lost bill.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Authorities under which payment of lost bills can be stopped.

124. Payment of a lost bill can only be stopped by an injunction of the Court of Chancery, or by the authority of this Board upon special indemnity being given.

Instructions relative to Supply Bills sent from Ireland.

125. The course to be followed in regard to Supply Bills sent from Ireland is as follows:—

Each bank presenting bills to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland for exchange is to make out and deliver to him a list thereof, in strict conformity with the minutes of this Board, dated the 18th and 28th of February 1840, regulating the exchange of bills in Ireland. Each bank is also to deliver to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland a memorandum or abstract of the amount of the bills left for exchange, and of the interest due thereon; this abstract is to be retained by the Paymaster of Civil Services. It is also to be accompanied by sub-memoranda for smaller amounts, but representing in the aggregate the general amount of each claim. These memoranda are to be be signed by the Paymaster of Civil Services and delivered to the depositors.

Bills to be forwarded to the Paymaster-general to be exchanged for new bills.

126. The Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin will then forward these bills, &c., to the Paymaster-general for examination and exchange in the usual course. After the bills shall have been examined, and new bills obtained, the Paymaster-general will send the new bills to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin, taking care to fill in the name of the latter as payee. He will also place to the account of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland the amount of interest due upon the bills exchanged.

Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland to deliver the new bills and pay the interest.

127. When the day for the delivery of new bills shall have arrived, each bank must return the sub-memoranda making together the amount of their respective claims, to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin, who, after completing the examination of their respective claims, will deliver to each bank the new bills and the interest due upon those exchanged.

The arrangement only applicable to Exchequer Bills held by bankers in Ireland.

128. This arrangement is to be considered applicable only to bills held by bankers in Ireland, for the purpose of effecting their mutual banking operations. With regard to any other bills not held by bankers, and with regard to any part of the routine of exchange not affected by these directions, the Paymaster-general will be governed by the regulations contained in their Lordships' Minutes of the 18th and 28th of February 1840.

Paymaster-general to establish checks upon the accuracy of demands for new bills.

129. Before my Lords conclude the instructions applicable to the duty of paying off Exchequer Bills, they are desirous of calling the attention of the Paymaster-general to two points, in regard to which it will be his duty to provide the most ample security for the due execution of the trust confided to his department. The first relates to the periodical applications to be made to the Exchequer for new bills to pay off those left for exchange. These applications will generally be for a supply of bills amounting to nine or ten millions sterling, and the most effectual checks are to be established to guard against the possibility of a demand being made on the Exchequer for a larger amount of new bills than may be required to pay off the old bills left for exchange.

Custody of new bills.

130. The second point relates to the safe custody of so large an amount of bills, during the interval of their being received from the Exchequer and of their being delivered to the depositors. My Lords desire that they may be kept in an iron chest with three distinct locks, the keys of which are to be given to three principal officers of the department, one of whom shall be the Paymaster-general, or Assistant Paymaster-general, so that access to the chest on such occasions may not be permitted to less than three authorised persons at once.

Modes of payment to be adopted by the Paymaster-general.

131. My Lords have now completed the detailed directions which they consider that it is necessary to issue to the Paymaster-general on the subject of the authorities under which he will be required to issue the public money for the various services placed under his care of payment. It appears desirable to add a few brief instructions in regard to the modes of payment to be adopted by him.

132. These are in some cases settled by the departments from which the authorities for payment emanate; in others they are prescribed by statute; and in many the Paymaster-general determines the mode of payment with reference to the convenience of the claimant and the security of the public.

Modes of paying Effective Services.

133. For the Effective Services of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance, and for many of the services authorised by this Board, the mode of payment is determined by the form of the authority, which either requires the issue to be made to the claimant or his attorney, or to the order of the party, upon a negotiable bill of exchange. In the Naval Department, the orders for payment issued upon the Paymaster-general by the Accountant-general of the Navy, being transferable, are payable to the last holder.

134. Payments to claimants or their assigns, and the payment of bills at sight, are to be made either by cheques to bearer, payable on the drawing account of the Paymaster-general at the Bank, or in office cash, according to the regulations prescribed in a preceding part of this Minute. Negotiable bills of exchange will be accepted, payable on the bill account of the Paymaster-general at the Bank. But where claimants have accounts opened at the Bank of England, the payments are, in all practicable cases, to be made by a write-off or transfer order, in preference to a cheque payable to bearer. My Lords have already directed, directed, in a former part of this Minute, that in cases where a payment is to be made by the Paymaster-general to the account of any department for which he holds a balance, the transaction is not to be passed through his accounts at the Bank, but that it is to be settled by a transfer in his own books.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

Modes of paying Naval Non-effective Services.

135. The modes of payment to be adopted for non-effective services are, in many cases, regulated by special provisions contained in Acts of Parliament. The Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, s. 42 (1830), provides that any officer of the navy or marines entitled to half-pay or pension, or any person entitled to a compassionate allowance, bounty, or pension, shall be at liberty, whenever he or she shall think fit, to receive the same by a remittance bill, drawn on any collector of the revenue in the United Kingdom. The 46th section of the same Act provides that commissioned and warrant officers of the navy shall be entitled to draw their half-pay and pensions by bills of exchange, and that the widows of such officers shall be entitled to receive their pensions in like manner; and that if they shall be residing near any of the dock-yards where there shall be a clerk of the Paymaster-general authorised to pay wages, they shall be entitled to be paid upon lists or extracts to be prepared and transmitted to such clerk for that purpose. The same clause provides that no person residing out of Her Majesty's dominions shall be entitled to the benefit of payment of half-pay or pension, either by bill of exchange, extract, or remittance.

Naval non-effective allowances not to be paid upon assignments.

136. The 47th clause of the same Act provides that payment of growing half-pay and pensions of the navy shall not be made upon any assignment, sale or contract, which are declared to be null and void. By the 54th clause of that Act, wages, pay, and other allowances actually due may be assigned and paid under the restrictions imposed by the clause.

137. Under the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 16 (1832), the payment of half-pay and pensions by the mode called "Extract," was extended to officers of the Royal Marines and their widows.

Modes of payment for Army Non-effective Services.

138. The modes of payment by remittance bill and by bill of exchange as regards the half pay pensions and allowances of the army, are regulated by the Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 106 (1832). This Act contains a special clause, directing that persons residing out of Her Majesty's dominions shall not be entitled to the privilege and benefit of being so paid.

The regulations prescribed by Acts of Parliament incomplete.

139. The regulations prescribed by the Acts before quoted are far from being complete. It appears that in both the navy and army departments there are classes to which the provisions of the Acts in question do not extend, while there is no Act applicable to similar payments for the Ordnance Department. My Lords are of opinion, however, that it is proper that the Paymaster-general should be guided by the spirit of the enactments referred to, in his payments for all non-effective services under his control, and that uniformity of practice should, as far as possible, be applied to all services of a similar nature.

The appearance of the claimant before the paying officer is preferable.

140. However convenient the mode of payment by bill of exchange may be under certain circumstances, my Lords are nevertheless of opinion that, as a general rule, in the payment of non-effective services, that mode of payment is to be preferred which requires the claimant to appear personally before the officer who pays him. The Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, s. 44, requires that claimants paid by remittance bills through the collectors of the revenue, or by the Paymaster-general's clerks at the ports, shall appear personally before such officers, except in cases of bodily infirmity, which are to be certified as required by the Act. The clause provides, moreover, that in case the officer of the revenue, the clerk of the Paymaster-general, or other person whose duty it shall be to make the payment on any remittance bill, shall entertain any doubt as to the identity of the party, the authenticity of the vouchers produced, or his or her title to receive payment, such officer, clerk, or other person, shall inquire into the same by the declaration of the party so applying, which declaration such paying officer is authorised to administer for that purpose. The mode of payment by bill of exchange does not appear to afford the same security as where the party is compelled to appear before a Government officer to be paid, and, if necessary, to be examined as to his identity. It is, therefore, desirable that it should not be unduly extended, and that it should be avoided, as far as possible, in the payment of those classes of pensioners who can be more easily personated.

Payment of non-effective allowances by Admiralty storekeepers.

Payment to non-effective claimants resident in the colonies and Germany.

141. Naval non-effective services are paid by the Imprest Accountants of the Admiralty stationed at Deptford, Woolwich, and Pembroke, upon lists prepared by the Paymaster-general, and transmitted by him to the Admiralty every quarter. Such payments are subsequently examined and recorded in the office of the Paymaster-general. Non-effective services for the army, navy, and ordnance, are also paid in the colonies by the officers in charge of the Commissariat, upon instructions prepared by the Paymaster-general and transmitted to them through this Board. These payments are repaid by the Paymaster-general to the Commissariat Chest on claims sent to him by the Audit Board. Officers belonging to foreign corps formerly in the pay of Great Britain, who are resident in Germany, are paid through the Paymaster-general's branch establishment at Hanover, in accordance with the instructions of this Board, dated the 28th April, 23d May, and 20th September, 1837. In all cases in which non-effective services are paid through the medium of officers not on the establishment of the Paymaster-general, such as payments by Imprest Accountants of the Admiralty, collectors of customs, excise, and cess, and by commissariat officers in the colonies, the responsibility for the accuracy of the sums payable is to rest with the Paymaster-general.

142. In

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

142. In the Minute of this Board, dated the 19th August 1836, regulating the duties of the office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general, my Lords recorded their opinion that the Revenue Boards should be directed to instruct all their collectors to transmit to them their claims for advances made on account of half-pay, and other non-effective charges, once in every fortnight, in order that they might apply at the end of every fortnight to the Paymaster general for repayment of such advances. As it appears that this direction would be very inconvenient to the collectors, and as the 39th section of the Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, and the 21st section of the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 20, expressly direct that the repayments to the Revenue Boards for advances on account of naval services, shall be made "at the expiration of every three calendar months, but not oftener," my Lords desire that the repayments for all services may follow the rule laid down in the Acts quoted.

Repayments to the Revenue Boards.

143. Numerous payments are made by the Paymaster-general on powers of attorney. These authorities, whether executed at sea or otherwise, are to be duly stamped before they are acted upon by the Paymaster-general.

Payments on powers of attorney.

144. By the 48th section of the Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, very detailed provisions are enacted with respect to the conditions and execution of letters of attorney to be granted by a petty officer or seaman, by a non-commissioned officer of marines, or by a marine, or by the widow, next of kin, executors or administrators of any such person, and such documents are required to be examined by the Inspector of Wills at the Admiralty before they can be acted upon. The Paymaster-general will accept, in lieu of such letters of attorney, a cheque signed by the Inspector of Seamen's Wills, &c., prepared in accordance with the provisions of the 51st clause of the same Act, which cheque will be a sufficient authority to the Paymaster-general to pay the attorney.

Provisions of the Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, as to the Naval Letters of Attorney.

145. Before the Paymaster-general acts upon any letter of attorney, he requires the party presenting it to have it examined and entered at the Audit Office. My Lords doubt if this form be strictly necessary. The best guarantee against the Paymaster-general paying a wrong party, consists in his liability to indemnify the right claimant. Moreover, the vouchers upon which the payments, in most cases, are made to attorneys, consist of declarations or certificates executed by the claimants themselves, who send them to their agents or attorneys, to be presented for payment. My Lords, therefore, request that the Commissioners of Audit will consider how far the regulation under which all powers of attorney are examined and entered in their office, before they are acted upon by the Paymaster-general, is a necessary check upon that officer, and whether the discontinuance of it would, in any degree, lessen the security of the public.

Necessity for the entry of powers of attorney at the Audit Office to be considered.

146. The Paymaster-general's accounts are to be rendered to the Audit Board monthly, but the results under every head of service are to be carried on, from month to month, to the close of the financial year, so that the account for the month of March shall show the sums received and paid during the whole year, as well as those received and paid during the month. The Assistant Paymaster-general will make the usual declaration to the annual account of the Paymaster-general.

The Paymaster-general's Accounts to be sent to Audit Office monthly.

To be declared to by the Assistant Paymaster-general annually.

147. My Lords desire that the monthly account and vouchers of the Paymaster-general may be delivered to the Commissioners of Audit within six weeks after the expiration of the month for which it may be prepared.

The Accounts to be delivered for Audit within six weeks after every month.

148. The Paymaster-general is required by the Minute of this Board of the 19th August 1836, to take care that the books of account of his office are kept throughout on the principle of double entry; and their Lordships desire that the additional accounts required by this Minute may also be kept according to the same principle. The experience of the past 12 years in the Paymaster-general's office has fully shown the efficiency of the double entry system, and has satisfied my Lords that no better or safer principle of keeping the accounts of this department could be devised than that which is sanctioned by the experience and universal practice of the mercantile community.

The whole of the Accounts to be kept by double entry.

149. My Lords refer to their Minute of the 25th July last, in which they fixed the future establishment and salaries of the Consolidated Office of the Paymaster-general.

150. The number of persons employed in the offices of the Paymaster-general, Paymaster of Civil Services and Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, and their salaries and allowances, before the consolidation, were as follows, viz.:

Establishments of the divided offices.

	No. of Persons.	Salaries and Allowances. £. s. d.
Paymaster-general - - - - - -	82	26,600 – –
Paymaster of Civil Services - - - -	16	6,440 – –
Paymasters of Exchequer Bills - - -	10	3,005 – –
TOTAL - - -	108	36,045 – –

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

151. The future establishment is fixed as follows:

Establishment of the Consolidated Office and Scale of Salaries.

Nos.		MINIMUM.	MAXIMUM.
1	The PAYMASTER-GENERAL, at a fixed salary of 2,000 l., as settled by Treasury Minute of the 12th May 1848.
		£.	£.
1	ASSISTANT PAYMASTER-GENERAL, with an increase of 100 l. a year after five years' service, and a further increase of 100 l. a year after ten years' service as such, as fixed by Treasury Minute of the 12th May 1848 - - - - - - - - - -	1,000	1,200
3	CHIEF CLERKS, at Whitehall, with an annual increase of 20 l. - - - - - - - - - -	550	700
4	PRINCIPAL CLERKS, at Chatham, Portsmouth, Plymouth, and Hanover, with an annual increase of 15 l.	450	550
1	BOOK KEEPER, on the footing of a Principal Clerk -	450	550
13	SENIOR CLERKS, with an annual increase of 10 l. -	350	450
18	ASSISTANT CLERKS, with an annual increase of 10 l. -	200	350
20	JUNIOR CLERKS, with an annual increase of 10 l. -	80	180
61
1	Office Keeper and Superintendent of Messengers, at -	150	150
11	Messengers:—1 at - - - - - - - - -	100	100
	3 at - - - - - - - - -	90	90
	7 at - - - - - - - - -	80	80
73	Persons.

Reduction effected.

152. The reduced establishment will thus consist of the Paymaster-general, 60 officers and clerks, and 12 messengers, whose present salaries amount to 19,900 l.; making a reduction, in numbers, of 35 persons, and in salaries of 16,145 l. per annum, subject to the charge for superannuation allowances. This reduction is exclusive of the saving which may arise from giving up the offices occupied by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills and the Paymaster of Civil Services, and from the decrease in the expense of printing, stationery, and other contingent expenses.

No extra pay or allowances to be given in addition to salary.

153. In fixing the rates of salaries assigned to the several ranks in the foregoing scale, my Lords have given full consideration to the duties and pecuniary responsibilities of the Paymaster-general's Department; and it is their desire that all extra allowances may cease, and that no extra pay may at any time be allowed, as they consider that those salaries afford a fair and sufficient remuneration to the parties for their labour, and for the trusts they undertake.

Hours of attendance:—Attendance Book.

154. The hours of attendance shall be from ten in the forenoon until four in the afternoon, unless a longer attendance shall be at any time required for the public service. The business of the day is not to be considered as closed until the whole of the accounts of the day's receipts and payments shall have been finally agreed and balanced. To insure the regular attendance of every person employed, and to afford to this Board hereafter an additional test of the regularity and diligence with which the several parties have attended to the discharge of their official duties during the course of their employment, when their cases shall be brought forward for superannuation, my Lords desire that an attendance book shall be kept, in which every clerk shall inscribe his name as he arrives at the office, and that he shall also state the time of his arrival, if he shall arrive later than a quarter past ten; this book is to be closed and delivered to the Assistant Paymaster-general at 11 o'clock each day.

Period of annual vacation.

155. My Lords are pleased to authorize the Paymaster-general to grant to such persons as he shall consider deserving of the indulgence, a vacation of one calendar month in each year, at such times as he may consider most convenient with reference to the public business; and in cases where clerks may have given extra attendance during the year, and may have displayed more than ordinary zeal and diligence, that period of leave may be extended to six weeks; but such additional leave is only to be granted upon satisfactory certificates, from the heads of departments, that the applicant has strictly fulfilled the conditions upon which alone the indulgence is sanctioned.

Report to Treasury after three months' absence.

156. When a clerk may have been absent from his duties during any one year for a longer period than three months, from whatever cause, my Lords direct that he may be reported to them for their orders.

In cases of Superannuation, absence during the preceding 10 years to be reported.

157. It is the desire of my Lords that the Paymaster-general will comply with the regulation established by their Minute of the 21st June 1831, under which the heads of departments are required, when they recommend any individual for superannuation, to state his attendance and absence during the preceding 10 years; and that he will, in all such cases, cases, transmit to this Board, in addition to the usual statement exhibiting the merit, value and extent of the services of the party recommended, a statement of the average annual absence of such party from his public duties during the 10 preceding years.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

No person to hold any private employment.

158. My Lords have fixed the before-mentioned scale of salaries for the officers and clerks of the Paymaster-general's establishment, with the distinct understanding that those salaries are to secure the full and undivided time and attention of the parties to the service of the public. They therefore strictly enjoin the Paymaster-general not to permit any officer or clerk employed in his department to act as director of a public company, or in the capacity of an agent for claimants, or to accept any private employment whatever, as my Lords are satisfied that such private callings are incompatible with the full and conscientious discharge of public duty. The Paymaster-general will report to this Board the name of any gentleman who may hereafter be guilty of a breach of this regulation.

Appointment of Clerks on probation.

159. All appointments of clerks in the Paymaster-general's office will be made by their Lordships. The rules for the admission and probation of clerks are to be as follows:— The candidate, before his admission, is to be subjected to an examination, under the superintendence of the Assistant Paymaster-general, the object of which shall be to ascertain that he possesses the requisite degree of education for the satisfactory execution of the official duties which will be entrusted to him. He is to be examined in the common rules of arithmetic, and in vulgar and decimal fractions, and he is to be required to make an abstract of some official documents to test his intelligence, and to show that he is able to write and compose correctly. The result of this examination is to be reported to the Paymaster-general, and the candidate is to be admitted to probation only in case it shall be considered satisfactory. The candidate is then to be subjected to a year's probation, and the confirmation of his appointment will depend upon the Paymaster-general being satisfied of his talents, conduct, and assiduity, by a written certificate from each of the chief clerks under whom he may have served during his probation, stating "that the candidate, in their opinion, possesses good natural abilities, that his conduct and diligence during probation have been uniformly satisfactory, that he is, in all respects, fit for the duties of a clerk in the department, and that there is every prospect that, as he advances to the highest situations in the office, he will be fit to fill them efficiently." If the Paymaster-general should be satisfied of the fitness of the candidate, after the required term of probation shall have expired, he is to make a report to that effect to this Board, when my Lords will confirm the appointment. If, at any time during the period of probation, the candidate should prove to be unfit to be placed on the establishment of the office, my Lords, on receiving the necessary communication from the Paymaster-general, will at once cancel the nomination.

Assistant Paymaster-general to be appointed by selection.

160. To the situation of Assistant Paymaster-general my Lords will appoint by selection, either in or out of the office, the person whom they may consider the best qualified for so responsible a situation.

Rule of promotion from class to class.

161. It is their Lordships' intention that promotion from class to class shall proceed by merit and good conduct. Although length of service and standing in the department will have their due weight in the consideration of the claims of parties to promotion, it is to be clearly understood that seniority cannot be permitted to overcome the superior claims of diligence and ability. My Lords also consider that in an office of such extensive pecuniary trust as that of the Paymaster-general, it is incumbent on them to direct that any clerk, who may be known to be in embarrassed pecuniary circumstances, should be considered ineligible for promotion to the higher classes of the department.

Copy of instructions to be laid before Parliament.

162. My Lords desire that a copy of these instructions be laid before Parliament, in compliance with the provisions of the Act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 55.

Copies to be sent to the several Departments.

163. Transmit copies of this Minute to the Paymaster-general, to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, the Lords of the Admiralty, the Secretary-at-War, the Commissioners for Chelsea Hospital, and the Master-general and Board of Ordnance for their information and guidance.

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

CONTENTS OF THE PRECEDING MINUTE.

	Pars.	Page
Consolidation Act of 1848 (11 & 12 Vict., c. 55)	1	511
Consolidation Act of 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35)	2	511
Services to be paid by the Paymaster-general	3	511
Course to be followed preparatory to the Issue of Exchequer Credits	4	511
Monthly Estimates of Credits required	5	511
Special Applications for the Issue of Credits	6	511
Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants	7	511
Existing Regulations to continue in force	8	511
Extra Receipts through the Cash Account	9	511
Transfers between Departments	10	511
Regulation of the Balances at the Bank	11	512
Mode hitherto adopted by the Paymaster-general	12	512
Balances should be kept as low as possible	13	512
No Payments to be made in excess of Grants of Parliament	14	512
Cash Account to be exhausted before drawing upon Exchequer Credits	15	512
Weekly and Monthly Returns of Balances to be sent to the Treasury	16	512
Exchequer Credit and Cash Accounts at the Bank	17	513
Drawing and Bill Accounts at the Bank	18	513
Cheques and Bills, Advice Lists	19	513
Security afforded by the existing arrangements	20	513
Bank Pass Books	21	513
Cheques never to be signed or countersigned in blank	22	513
Rules for transactions with the Bank to be strictly enforced	23	513
Payments in Office Cash	24	513
Control and examination of the Balance	25	514
Payment of Ships at Woolwich	26	514
Weekly Payments at Chelsea Hospital	27	514
Out Stations—Branch Banks at Portsmouth and Plymouth	28	514
Chatham Balance wholly in Notes and Specie	29	514
Similar arrangement at Hanover	30	514
Supplies of Money for the Ports regulated by the Admiralty	31	514
Control and Examination of the Balances at the Ports vested in the Admiralty	32	514
Payments through the Bank of Ireland	34	514
Authorities for Paymaster-general's Payments	35	515
Warrants for Army Effective Services and Chelsea Out-Pensions	36	515
Sign Manual Warrants for Army Non-effective Services	37	515
Certified Payments for Chelsea In-pension Charges	38	515
Other Payments authorized by Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital	39	515
Payments for Kilmainham Hospital	40	515
Authorities for Payment of Commissariat Effective Services	41	515
Authorities for Payment of Commissariat Non-effective Services	42	515
Correspondence with the Audit Board in 1841, 1842 and 1843, on the subject of authorizing Payments for Commissariat Services	43	516
An Annual Covering Warrant agreed upon	44	516
A reconsideration of this Arrangement necessary	45	516
An Annual Sign Manual Warrant will be obtained	46	516
Payments for Commissariat Services to be authorized by Treasury Letters	47	516
Commissariat Chest Payments (late Army Extraordinaries)	48	516
Nature of Commissariat Chest Account	49	516
Advances by Revenue Departments similar in principle	50	516
Monies for the Supply of the Chests advanced by the Paymaster-general	51	517
Royal Sign Manual Warrant for the application of Commissariat Chest Funds	52	517
Treasury Warrants for the Payment of Treasury Bills out of the Votes for Land Forces	53	517
These Warrants are not in conformity with the terms of the Royal Warrant	54	517
Treasury Bills to be made payable out of the Funds of the Commissariat Chest	55	517
A more speedy recovery of Advances necessary	56	517
Available Fund at the Credit of the Commissariat Chest	57	517
Monthly Repayments to be made by the several Departments upon Account	58	518
Commissioners of Audit to report quarterly as to Miscellaneous Votes	59	518
Acceptance of Treasury Bills	60	518
Authorities for payment of other Commissariat Chest Services	61	518
An Amended Royal Warrant will be obtained	62	518
Navy Effective Services:—Authorities for payments	63	518
Acts of Parliament, Orders in Council, &c. relating to Naval Payments to be duly attended to	64	519
Navy Effective Services:—Payments on collective Orders	65	519
Navy Non-effective Services:—Authorities for Payments	66	519
Transfers from the Sums voted for Greenwich Out-pensioners	67	519
Pensions of Commissioned Officers on the Greenwich Out-pension List	68	519
Naval Prize, Authorities for Payments	69	519
Ordnance Effective Services:—Authorities for Payments	70	519
Salaries of Ordnance Establishments at home and abroad to be paid by local Accountants	71	519
Ordnance Non-effective Services:—Authorities for Payments	72	519
Ordnance Payments for other Departments	73	520
Inconvenience of employing Ordnance Funds for the purpose	74	520
Opinion of Commissioners of Inquiry in 1844	75	520
Expenses incurred by the Board of Ordnance for other Departments	76	520

Pay Office.

T. M., 22 Dec. 1848.

	Pars.	Page
Payments transferred from the Office of the Paymaster of Civil Services	78	520
Charges on the Consolidated Fund	80	520
Civil List Payments	81	521
Annuities and Pensions	82	521
Conditions on which payable	83	521
Pension Books of Paymaster of Civil Services to be transferred to Paymaster-general	84	521
The payment of Annuities, &c. will be authorised by Treasury Letters	85	521
Salaries and Allowances	86	521
Payments to be made on special Authorities	87	521
Diplomatic Services	88	521
Courts of Justice	89	521
Miscellaneous Charges on the Consolidated Fund	90	522
Advances out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund	91	522
Entries of Assignments, Powers of Attorney, &c. to be recognised by the Paymaster-general	92	522
Quarterly Returns of Deaths, &c. to be transmitted to the Treasury	93	522
Payments under the several heads of the Miscellaneous Estimates	94	522
Payments out of Special Funds on the Cash Account	95	522
Exchequer Bills	96	522
Exchange of Exchequer Bills to be advertised	98	522
Interest of Bills advertised to be reported to Treasury	99	523
Holders may claim to be paid in Money	100	523
Bills not presented for Exchange may either be paid in Money, or in New Bills at the next Exchange	101	523
Instructions for holders of Exchequer Bills	102	523
Holders leaving Bills for Exchange or Payment to receive an acknowledgment	103	523
Bills to be counterfoiled and cancelled	104	523
Statement of New Bills required to be sent to the Exchequer	105	523
New Bills to be prepared for delivery to Claimants	106	523
Entries in Books of Record and Account	107	523
Payment of Exchequer Bills in Money	108	523
Payment of West India Relief Bills	109	523
Principal of Exchequer Bills paid off in the year not to exceed the Exchequer Credit	110	523
Course pursued in paying off Deficiency Bills	111	524
Deficiency Bills purchased on account of the Sinking Fund to be cancelled	112	524
Weekly Return of Bills paid off to be sent to Exchequer	113	524
Annual Return of "Overdue" Bills	114	524
Instructions as to receipt and return of Counterfoils	115	524
Bills to be compared with Counterfoils at the request of Holders	120	524
Proceedings relative to Lost Exchequer Bills	121	524
To be paid in Money in certain cases	123	524
Authorities under which payment of lost Bills can be stopped	124	525
Instructions relative to Supply Bills sent from Ireland	125	525
Bills to be forwarded to the Paymaster-general to be exchanged for new Bills	126	525
Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland to deliver the new Bills and pay the Interest	127	525
The arrangement only applicable to Exchequer Bills held by Bankers in Ireland	128	525
Paymaster-general to establish Checks upon the accuracy of Demands for new Bills	129	525
Custody of new Bills	130	525
Modes of Payment to be adopted by the Paymaster-general	131	525
Modes of paying Effective Services	133	525
Modes of paying Naval Non-effective Services	135	526
Naval Non-effective Allowances not to be paid upon Assignments	136	526
Modes of Payment for Army Non-effective Services	138	526
The Regulations prescribed by Acts of Parliament incomplete	139	526
The appearance of the Claimant before the Paying Officer is preferable	140	526
Payment of Non-effective Allowances by Admiralty Store-keepers	141	526
Payment to Non-effective Claimants resident in the Colonies and Germany	141	526
Repayments to the Revenue Boards	142	527
Payments on Powers of Attorney	143	527
Provisions of the Act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20, as to Naval Letters of Attorney	144	527
Necessity for the Entry of Powers of Attorney at the Audit Office to be considered	145	527
The Paymaster-general's Accounts to be sent to Audit Office monthly	146	527
To be declared to by the Assistant Paymaster-general annually	146	527
The Accounts to be delivered for Audit within six weeks after every month	147	527
The whole of the Accounts to be kept by Double Entry	148	527
Establishments of the divided Offices	150	527
Establishment of the Consolidated Office and Scale of Salaries	151	528
Reduction effected	152	528
No extra Pay or Allowances to be given in addition to Salary	153	528
Hours of Attendance:—Attendance Book	154	528
Period of Annual Vacation	155	528
Report to Treasury after three months' absence	156	528
In cases of Superannuation, absence during the preceding 10 years to be reported	157	528
No person to hold any private Employment	158	529
Appointment of Clerks on probation	159	529
Assistant Paymaster-general to be appointed by Selection	160	529
Rule of Promotion from Class to Class	161	529
Copy of Instructions to be laid before Parliament	162	529
Copies to be sent to the several Departments	163	529

Appendix, No. 1.

Lord Monteagle's Letter, 16 January 1849.

Lord Monteagle to the Lords of the Treasury, on the subject of the preceding Minute.

Exchequer, 16 January 1849.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of the 13th instant, and to thank you for having communicated to me the Treasury Minute of 1836 according to my request.

I shall now proceed to lay before your Lordships the observations which have occurred to me in relation to your Lordships' Minute of the 22d December 1848, transmitted for my information in your assistant-secretary's letter of the same date, and which, I presume, is to be considered as embodying the regulations for the office of the Paymaster-general issued under s. iv, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 55, which, if issued in conformity with the statute, are directed to be observed by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

It is in consequence of this provision alone that I take the liberty of addressing your Lordships. So far as the Minute relates to other departments, it would be presumptuous and intrusive on my part to offer any unsolicited advice or observations.

I anticipate that in issuing this Minute it was the intention of your Lordships to provide only for the safety, economy, and advantage of the public service, and not to set aside or defeat any of the regulations which have hitherto been acted upon by the authority of the Legislature and of your Lordships. If the Minute of the 22d December appears to have the latter tendency or effect in my judgment, it is very possible that this may be traced to some misconception on my part which your Lordships may remove, or to some inaccuracy or looseness in the words of the Minute, which may not justly or accurately convey the meaning of the Treasury.

In order to make my observations intelligible to your Lordships it is necessary that I should recapitulate the steps which must necessarily be taken to provide for the supply services of the year.

1st. A vote in Committee reported and agreed to by the House.

2d. A Ways and Means Act providing funds and granting authority for the supply voted.

3d. A Royal Sign Manual warrant authorising the issue of the vote so authorised and provided for.

4th. A Treasury warrant to the same effect.

5th. An issuing letter directing the special issue whether to the full extent or in part of the vote.

6th. The Comptroller-general's warrant directing a credit to the amount required in the issuing letter.

It is by a combination of these several authorities that the amount of the vote can be applied, and no application of public money for the service in question can be legal, if any one step be defective or inaccurate; and, by the Act constituting this office, before I grant my warrant, I am first required to satisfy myself of the regularity and legality of the entire proceeding.

If I were consequently to issue my warrant in any case without a vote in supply, without a sanction of a Ways and Means Act, without the Sign Manual, or Royal Order, and without the authority of your Lordships' instructions, I should act in disregard of my duty, and be justly liable to censure. Nor is it in my judgment legal that in default of the Exchequer authority involving and expressing the completion of each and all of the several conditions I have enumerated, that any public money can be applied to satisfy the votes in supply.

I do not mean to question that in furtherance of the public service out of extraordinaries and contingencies specially left at the disposal of the Treasury and accounted for to Parliament, advances might not justly and properly be made and be repaid in case funds were subsequently provided for by vote. Such has been the case frequently of payments out of Civil Contingencies by Mr. Sargent, and which probably are referred to by your Lordships, s. 16, p. 5, though I have to regret that in describing this process the words "A fictitious cash account" should have been used to describe what is in itself a simple and intelligible transaction, and not exposed to any animadversions whatever.

I do not mean to doubt the policy of establishing one general cash account on which the Paymaster-general may be enabled to operate for his disbursements. But I submit to your Lordships the entire illegality of enabling payments to be made out of such cash balance in the absence of the several successive authorities to which I have referred, subject to occasional advances such as I have described out of a contingent fund. This is, I think, wholly at variance with the Act regulating this office, at variance with the provisions of the Appropriation Act, and of the constitution, and is calculated to throw great doubts and uncertainties on the returns made to me by the Bank of England, and on which my accounts to the auditors and to Parliament depend.

The point which I specially urge on your Lordships' attention, is the propriety of issuing money for the public service requiring an Exchequer credit without the actual issue of that credit from this department. The question is one which, if doubtful, might advantageously be brought under the attention of the law officers for their opinion.

In section 19, your Lordships state that the course proposed will be perfectly consistent with a strict appropriation of the Votes of Parliament, "as the paymaster will not make a payment under any head of service, exceeding the balance remaining of the grant of Parliament Parliament for that service;" but your Lordships will see that, if this is to be the only limitation, all the authority of the subsequent checks are withdrawn. The issue in question may be made without the sanction of a Ways and Means Act, without the sanction of a Sign Manual Warrant or Treasury Warrant, and the control vested in this department, and for which I am responsible to Parliament, may be wholly set at nought.

It seems obvious that it would be illegal for your Lordships to proceed without a Royal Order on which to ground your warrant. It would be equally illegal on my part to issue a credit without your Lordships' authority, that of the Crown, and that of the Legislature; yet all these checks and securities will be set at nought if the Paymaster-general be directed and instructed to make payments for the public service in the manner which seems the obvious meaning of your Lordships' Minute.

Nor can the evils of such a course be treated as wholly imaginary. I can refer your Lordships to an occurrence of no very remote date that would show how the system would work, and the confusion which under certain circumstances it could hardly fail to occasion.

I allude to the transactions of the year 1841. At that time upwards of 100 votes in supply had passed and been agreed to by the House, Sign Manual Warrants and Treasury Warrants were transmitted to me by the Treasury. I declined to recognise their validity and refused on my responsibility to give them effect. After a somewhat protracted and controversial correspondence, I submitted a case for the opinion of Sir W. Follett and Sir F. Pollock, who considered my objections just and valid. The Sign Manual and Treasury Warrants were all corrected in the points to which I had objected, and then, and then only did I grant the credits required and authorise the issues demanded by the Treasury.

Now, had the system then existed which seems to be sanctioned and contemplated by the Minute of the 22d December, issues might have been made under all these irregular warrants. This would have been done by the authority of the Paymaster; and it would have been after these payments had been made that the irregularity would have been admitted, but too late to correct the confusion in the public accounts that could not but have ensued.

It is true that your Lordships observe, section 22, that where such unauthorised advances take place they may be adjusted by a proportionate variation in the subsequent Exchequer credit. It is added, that in this way no inconvenience will arise. I submit most respectfully to your Lordships, that it is a question rather of law and of constitution than of convenience; let me suppose that no ways and means have been provided, no Royal Order, Treasury or Exchequer Warrant, have issued for a vote for the Houses of Parliament or the Royal Palaces, yet if there stands in the cash account of the Paymaster a sufficient sum arising out of funds provided for Army, Navy, or Ordnance, it would be lawful to defray the former service out of the latter, a result which, though hardly possible in practice, might be justified under the system about to be introduced.

I need hardly point your Lordships' attention to the difficulty of reconciling this practice with the stringent words of the Appropriation Act.

But other and, in my mind, serious difficulties would ensue.

By the constitution of this office and your Lordships' original Minutes, the Bank of England are bound to transmit to me daily an account of the actual payments made on account of the several credits granted. On these returns I found my quarterly accounts to the Audit Office and to Parliament annually. But if, as in the supposititious case I put, credits granted for army services could be applied for building the Palace at Westminster in the expectation of a future re-adjustment of the accounts, the data on which I may have previously reported to the auditors and to Parliament will become to that extent illusory. On this account, likewise, I feel my responsibility as Comptroller-general involved, and I submit to your Lordships that the public interests require that the Exchequer accounts rendered under a special Act of Parliament should be freed from all such uncertainty or suspicion.

All the observations I have hitherto made apply, mutatis mutandis, to the mass of the payments for charges on the Consolidated Fund. In order to legalise such payments, your Lordships' authority and mine are both required, the Comptroller-general being first required to satisfy himself of the legality of the proposed payment. This is, indeed, admitted, p. 17, s. 92, which makes the payment dependent on the Paymaster's receiving credits applicable thereto. This same obligation may be intended to be repeated, s. 95, where the words "in the usual form" are introduced, though as this refers rather to Treasury than to Exchequer forms, the meaning is less distinct; but in s. 96, it would appear that the control of the Exchequer is wholly dispensed with, and a quarterly letter from the Treasury founded on a requisition from the Foreign Office is substituted, and a similar course is taken in relation to the Courts of Justice, s. 97, and to the Miscellaneous Charges, s. 98.

As a practical example of the inconvenience which might arise, I beg to refer your Lordships to the case of the Russian Dutch Loan, which is included under the head of Miscellaneous Charges. To this payment my predecessor, Lord Grenville, objected, and if his objection had not been withdrawn on legal authority, the payment would not under the existing law have taken place. But under the Minute of the 22d December, the payment might have gone on as a matter of course by the Paymaster, and the Exchequer control would only have been applied at a period too late to give it any efficient operation.

I have also to call your Lordships' attention to the steps taken from time to time, by which certain sums remaining as unexhausted credits or votes are declared savings. This is done on a comparison of the amount originally appropriated with the amount actually issued. But if payments on account of these votes take place from any other source, the balances to which I have adverted, and which have hitherto been held conclusive, will be made wholly illusory and deceptive.

Lord Monteagle's Letter, 16 January 1849.

A still more serious question might arise in relation to the surplus of revenue applicable to the reduction of debt quarterly. This depends wholly on the confidence reposed in the integrity of the Exchequer accounts. But how can this be relied on if a loose system be adopted and sanctioned by your Lordships in a Minute claiming to possess a legislative authority, and if possessing it, not capable of being varied except by the Act of the Legislature itself.

I am quite aware that I may have misapprehended your Lordships' intention. A general reference, s. 4, is given to the powers and functions of the Comptroller-general. This general recognition may be intended to accompany and govern all the subsequent clauses of the Minute. But I submit to your Lordships that this intention is not clear, and when it prescribes the duties of other departments of the Government which are expressly laid down in distinct terms, it can hardly be sufficiently precise to affix a limitation on the powers and authorities assigned to them.

I have to intreat your Lordships' indulgence for so long a statement; but charged as I am by Parliament with peculiar and independent duties of check and control, I feel convinced that you will give me credit for a desire to perform my duty, and no more than my duty, when I bring before your attention a Minute which might be interpreted, though hardly so intended by your Lordships, as setting aside the constitutional functions which are intrusted to me, and leaving the issue of the public money at the sole command of officers holding their station at the pleasure of the Crown.

Responsible to Parliament as I feel myself to be, this appeal to your Lordships seems to me prescribed by the obligations I am called on to fulfil.

PAPER showing the Alterations made in the TREASURY MINUTE, dated 22 December 1848, in consequence of the preceding Letter.

Portion of original Minute withdrawn.

Regulation of the balances at the Bank.

MY Lords proceed to consider what instructions it is necessary to issue to the Paymaster-general on the subject of his transactions with the Bank of England. It appears to be necessary, in the first instance, that the principle upon which he should regulate his balances should be clearly understood.

Two different modes of regulating the public balances at the Bank of England have been pursued by the Paymaster-general and by the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Mode hitherto adopted by the Paymaster-general.

In the Paymaster-general's Department, the balances at the Bank have been considered as a general fund applicable to the payment of all current services; the demands upon the Exchequer, to replenish the balances, have been made with reference to the known or expected wants of the respective departments having authority to draw upon him, and the appropriation of the issues to the various services to which they relate has been made daily in the Paymaster-general's own books, upon the actual vouchers presented for payment. By this arrangement, the necessity of keeping a larger balance at his credit at the Bank than was actually required for carrying on his payments, and the complication of his accounts at the Bank, caused by multiplying and subdividing balances, which in accounts so extensive, would have entailed great labour and risk of error, without any useful practical result, has been avoided.

Mode hitherto adopted by the Paymaster of Civil Services.

In the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services separate Bank accounts have been kept for every head of service, under which he has been called upon to make payments out of Exchequer credits. The consequence of this system has been an unavoidable accumulation of credits at the Bank, as it has been necessary to keep every separate service in funds to meet the demands upon it. The care and attention required in paying from a variety of funds, and in keeping numerous accounts of the transactions between the office and the Bank, have also occasioned much additional labour to guard against errors.

The separate accounts at the Bank have not provided an additional check.

These separate accounts at the Bank of England have not afforded any further security for the correct appropriation of the grants of Parliament than has hitherto been as satisfactorily attained by the checks established at the Treasury and the Exchequer upon the issue of credits out of the respective votes. As regards the Exchequer credits issued for services payable out of the Consolidated Fund, the application of which is limited to the service of the particular quarters for which the charge is made on the Consolidated Fund, it has not been found practicable to adopt quarterly sub-divisions of such credits in the Bank accounts, and the required check has therefore been necessarily confined to the books kept in the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Immediate payments made from the cash account of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

The Paymaster of Civil Services has also had a Cash Account at the Bank, which has been, to some extent, used as a common fund for current services. Thus, whenever it has been necessary that a payment should be made before the forms of office would admit of the issue of an Exchequer credit to meet it, it has been necessarily defrayed out of this fund, and a fictitious cash account for that service has been opened in the books of the Paymaster of Civil Services, which has been subsequently adjusted by a transfer at the Bank from the Exchequer Credit Account. The necessity of making advances for services requiring immediate payment must still be provided for; and the principle by which the accounts of the Paymaster-general have been regulated at the Bank appears to be better calculated to effect this object, with simplicity and accuracy, than that which has been pursued in the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Portion of Original Minute withdrawn.

It is an object of great importance that the public money should not be drawn from the Exchequer, either before it is wanted, or in larger sums than the services for which it is issued requires, or, in other words, that the balances should be confined to the lowest sum necessary for carrying on the payments for the public service in a punctual and regular manner; and this object, so essential both to security and economy, may be greatly facilitated by considering all the sums placed to his credit at the Bank of England as forming one common fund, to be used indiscriminately for all current payments, according to the practice of the Paymaster-general's Office.

Balances should be kept as low as possible.

For these reasons, my Lords desire that the system of account and payment which has been pursued in the Paymaster-general's Department since the last consolidation of the Pay Offices in 1836, be extended to the services lately transferred to his charge; that is, that instead of having a separate balance at the Bank of England, under each head for which sums are drawn from the Exchequer, he shall make all his payments out of a general balance; and that separate accounts shall be kept in his own books, showing the receipt and expenditure under each head of service; and that his balance at the Bank shall be replenished, from day to day, from the several grants of Parliament, on account of which payments are made.

The system hitherto adopted by the Paymaster-general to be extended.

This course will be perfectly consistent with a strict appropriation of the votes of Parliament, as the Paymaster-general will not make a payment under any head of service exceeding the balance remaining on the grant of Parliament for that service; and will keep in his books separate accounts of the grants remaining in the Exchequer and in his hands, under the several heads of service, that he may be prepared to exercise an efficient check upon the accounts of the application of the votes of Parliament, and to submit to this Board any order for payment which may be drawn upon him, in excess of the available balance of the grant unissued from the Exchequer, or in his hands, to which such order may relate.

No payment to be made in excess of the Votes of Parliament.

This principle of regulating the accounts of the Paymaster-general at the Bank will be in exact accordance with that prescribed by the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, for the regulation of the Exchequer account at the Bank. By the 10th section of that Act, it is provided that all monies paid into the Bank, on account of the Exchequer, shall be treated as forming one fund in the books of the Bank, while the separate accounts to which the monies belong are required to be kept at the Exchequer and the Treasury; and the appropriation of such monies is to be regulated by the several statutes applicable thereto. In like manner the Paymaster-general will take care to regulate his payments for the respective services out of his common balance, according to the appropriation authorised by Parliament.

The Exchequer balance at the Bank considered as one fund.

The order contained in their Lordships' Minute of the 26th September 1834, for the regulation of the office of the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer, by which the Paymaster-general is required to exhaust the balance of monies on his cash account for Army, Navy and Ordnance Services, in making payment for those services before any drafts are drawn by him on the Exchequer account, is consistent with the directions of this Minute, and should be strictly observed.

Cash Account to be exhausted before drawing upon Exchequer Credits.

Under the mode prescribed by this Minute for regulating the Paymaster-general's balances of cash, it may occasionally happen that the payments on some heads of service may exceed the sums transferred to the Bank from the Exchequer account to meet them. No inconvenience will, however, arise from this circumstance, as the Paymaster-general will frame his next requisition upon the Exchequer with a view to restore the balances, by drawing upon the Exchequer Accounts for those heads of service, for the amounts required to replace the sums temporarily advanced out of the general balance. To enable my Lords, however, to judge of the regularity of the requisitions, it is their desire that the Paymaster-general will transmit to this Board, in addition to the weekly statement now sent to them, showing the actual balances on his accounts at the Bank, a Monthly Return of the Service Balances of Cash on every head of account opened in his books.

Requisitions for money to be framed to adjust the balances.

Weekly and monthly returns of balances to be sent to the Treasury.

These regulations provide, moreover, great facilities for conducting the payments for the numerous services embraced in the Paymaster-general's accounts. The funds placed to the drawing account being applicable to the payment of all services indiscriminately, bankers, agents and others receive one cheque for their claims, however numerous and various they may be; and while this arrangement promotes the convenience of claimants on the department, it greatly reduces labour and simplifies the accounts, both in the Paymaster-general's Office and at the Bank of England.

Facilities in conducting the payments, reduction of labour, and simplification of the accounts.

For which the following was substituted.

11.—My Lords proceed to consider what instructions it is necessary to issue to the Paymaster-general on the subject of his transactions with the Bank of England. It appears to be necessary, in the first instance, that the principle upon which he should regulate his balances should be clearly understood.

Regulation of the balances at the Bank.

Pay Office Minute. Paragraph substituted.

Mode hitherto adopted by the Paymaster-general.

12.—The balances at the Bank have hitherto been considered as a general fund applicable to the payment of all current services; the demands for Exchequer credits, to replenish the balances, have been made with reference to the known or expected wants of the respective departments having authority to draw upon the Paymaster-general, and the appropriation of the issues to the various services to which they relate has been made daily in the Paymaster-general's own books, upon the actual vouchers presented for payment. By this arrangement, the necessity of keeping a larger balance at his credit at the Bank than was actually required for carrying on his payments, and the complication of his accounts at the Bank, caused by multiplying and subdividing balances, which in accounts so extensive would have entailed great labour and risk of error, without any useful practical result, has been avoided.

Balances should be kept as low as possible.

13.—It is an object of great importance that the public money should not be drawn from the Exchequer either before it is wanted, or in larger sums than the services for which it is issued requires, or, in other words, that the balances should be confined to the lowest sum necessary for carrying on the payments for the public service in a punctual and regular manner; and as this object, so essential both to security and economy, is greatly facilitated by the arrangement and practice above referred to, my Lords desire that the system of account and payment which has been pursued in the Paymaster-general's department since the last consolidation of the pay offices in 1836, be applied to the services lately transferred to his charge.

No payments to be made in excess of Grants of Parliament.

14.—My Lords will, in all cases, communicate to the Paymaster-general the amounts of the several grants made by Parliament for the public service, in respect to all those departments the payments for which are made in his office, as soon as the votes shall have been granted in Supply, and Ways and Means shall have been appropriated by Parliament to satisfy them; while at the same time the Royal Orders and the Warrants will be duly completed by this Board and by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, to enable my Lords to direct the grant of the necessary credits, from time to time, to meet the expenditure. The Paymaster-general, from the manner in which the books of account are to be prepared and made up in his office, will be able at once to satisfy my Lords of the necessity of directing the grant of such credits from time to time, and will have the most ready means of calling their Lordships' attention to the fact, if any order shall have been given to him by any department, a compliance with which would lead to an exceeding upon any one of the heads of service for which separate sums have been granted by Parliament. While by these arrangements the constitutional check exercised by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer upon the issue of the public money, under the provisions of the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, will in all respects be maintained, the regulations which their Lordships prescribe for the government of the Paymaster-general's office, will afford to this Board a further control and check over the expenditure in detail, which will enable their Lordships to ensure that no payment is made upon the order of any department under any head of service beyond the amount of the specific grant of Parliament legally applicable thereto. In this manner my Lords will have the means of satisfactorily exercising that control and authority which is vested in them by the Appropriation Act, whereby, while, on the one hand, the departments of Expenditure are restrained from applying any part of one specific grant in aid of another specific grant, this Board, on the other hand, in relation to Navy, Army or Ordnance Services, is authorised, on being satisfied of its being indispensably necessary, to convey Her Majesty's sanction to the application of the surplus on one grant to supply the deficiency on any other, provided the total of all the grants for the particular department as aforesaid, which applies for such sanction, be not thereby exceeded.

MEMORANDUM by Lord Monteagle on the Exchequer. 1854.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

In conformity with the wishes expressed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that I should reduce to writing the communication which I have already made to him verbally, I proceed to execute a duty of which I feel the importance to the public service, more especially at the present moment.

Before I proceed further, I must, however, guard myself against any misapprehension on two points. First.—In bringing under careful review the present mode of providing for the public expenditure, nothing is further from my intention, than to impute blame, or attribute irregularity to the Executive Officers charged with this branch of the public service: they, I presume, faithfully obey the orders they receive, and act on a system devised for their government. It is the system itself, rather than its administration, which I consider to be dangerous and indefensible; tending to supersede the stringent provisions of the statute law; to defeat all Parliamentary responsibility; to strike at the integrity of the accounts rendered to both Houses, and to the auditors; and to permit an application of the public revenue without due authority; and, possibly, to purposes wholly unsanctioned by law.

The second point on which I should wish not to be misunderstood, is the following:—My application to the Government is made only because it is connected directly with my own department, department, and my immediate duties and functions. Though at all times ready to render any assistance to the public service, however slight it may be, which it is in my power to offer, I should not intrude myself, unasked, on the present or on any other occasion, if I did not perceive, and if an official knowledge was not forced upon me, of an entire and daily increasing departure from the law, tending to lessen, and which may ultimately totally defeat all the functions with which I am charged, whatever may be the accuracy with which those functions are performed. In such circumstances, if I hesitated in bringing this vicious system under the direct notice of the Government, I might be held an acquiescing party in what I consider as indefensible, and I might be considered justly censurable by the Houses of Parliament, to whose united judgment I am by law made responsible.

Exchequer Memorandum. 1854.

These motives press on me more strongly at the present moment, when it appears, by the proceedings in the House of Commons, that the functions of the Exchequer are proposed to be augmented. It would indeed be inconsistent that Parliament should be induced to intrust the Exchequer with additional functions, as a check and security against undue issue and appropriation, whilst at the very same time a system is practised and is daily extending, which goes far to render such Exchequer control nugatory and unavailing. Should the country be plunged into war, the risks and difficulties which I anticipate, will also be greatly increased. The difficulties of administering the expenditure, during an European war, will have to be encountered for the first time in our modern history, through the instrumentality of one single Pay Department in place of five. In the late war there were separate offices for paying the Army, the Navy, Army Ordnance, Chelsea, and the Civil Service, besides votes placed in the hands of the Treasury, for Army Extraordinaries and Civil Contingencies. At present, all is carried on at one single Pay-office, and unless the issues for each department are accurately made and kept distinct from each other, as required by law; unless care be taken to prevent any possible misappropriation of the funds provided by Parliament from the special services for which they were granted; and unless the public accounts of the Treasury, the Pay-office, and the Bank of England, are so kept as to check each other, and correspond with the legal authorities given, and with the Exchequer Records, I anticipate with indescribable alarm the consequences to the public service which must ensue.

It is on these grounds that I felt it my duty to make to the Chancellor of the Exchequer the verbal representation, which, at his request, I now bring before him in a written form. I do so, assuring him that my earnest desire is to avert from the Government of which he is a distinguished member a serious responsibility, and to protect the public from a great and imminent danger. I feel it is also due to myself to avoid any seeming participation in a system which renders my legal duties at the Exchequer inoperative, and exposes the public accounts to confusion and error.

The responsibility and danger to which I allude, appear to me to arise from the present mode of issuing and applying the public money, which I consider to be not only a violation of the general principles of the Constitution, but contrary to express law, repugnant to the intentions of Parliament, superseding the restraints of the Appropriation Act, making the public accounts illusory and contradictory, and, as far as I can judge, throwing corresponding difficulties in the way of the final proceedings of the auditors.

To render my statement clear and intelligible, it is necessary that I should recapitulate the several steps which are required by law to be taken to justify any issue of public money. I shall, in the first instance, confine myself to the sums voted in Supply.

1. To provide legally for any public service, there must, first, be a vote taken in Committee of Supply, reported and agreed to by the House of Commons, or an Act passed to the same effect.

2. Ways and means must also be provided, and an Act of Parliament passed, authorising the issuing of such ways and means for any services voted by the House of Commons. Such is the constitutional jealousy of Parliament, that it is not the usage of the House of Commons to grant ways and means exceeding the amount of Supplies actually voted.

3. There must be a Royal Sign Manual Warrant, countersigned by the Treasury, addressed to the Comptroller of the Exchequer, authorising an issue, chargeable on Ways and Means provided by the Legislature for specific services, voted by Resolution of the House of Commons, or sanctioned by Act. Such Resolution or enactment must be recited at length, in the Royal Order, in order to secure the exclusive application of the sums to be issued to their legal uses and no other.

4. The next step taken is the issue of a Treasury Warrant, duly signed, and addressed in like manner to the Comptroller of the Exchequer, authorising the issue of such sums as are included within the recited Resolution or Act of Parliament, provided for in the Ways and Means Acts, and comprehended in the Royal Sign Manual Warrant or Order. The issues are thus directed to be made in strict accordance with these several authorities, and for the purposes specified in the Act recited, or in the Resolution of the House of Commons. If more issues than one should be directed by separate warrants, to be made on account of the same vote, each successive Royal Order and Treasury Warrant must specify the original sum voted, the sum already issued, and the balance remaining applicable; thus guarding against any excess of issue beyond the Parliamentary appropriation.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

5. On the completion of these authorities, an issuing letter, signed by a Secretary of the Treasury, founded upon and referring to the several instruments already described, is addressed to the Comptroller of the Exchequer; this document carries into effect the preceding orders, with this one distinction, that, in general, the issuing letters are for lesser amounts than are authorised by the former orders and warrants, and are forwarded to the Exchequer from time to time according to the exigencies of the public service. Each issuing letter recites the special purposes for which the particular sum is required. The issuing letter also points out and directs the express ways and means to which such issues shall severally be charged in the books of this department.

6. On receipt of these documents, the Comptroller-general is bound to ascertain whether the Parliamentary vote has been agreed to, or an Act passed; whether the Ways and Means Bill, applicable to such vote, has also become law; whether the Sign Manual, reciting the special purposes of the vote, and not exceeding its amount, the Treasury Warrant, and the Issuing Letter, are all conformable to law in substance and form. The Comptroller-general, on being fully satisfied that each of these five indispensable conditions has been duly complied with, is bound to direct the Bank of England, by his Exchequer warrant, to grant a credit from the Exchequer account to the department pointed out by the Treasury, for the exact sum required, and for the specified service authorised.

Consequently, without the Exchequer warrant no issues from the Bank Exchequer account, and no payment, can legally be made, and every such warrant contains its orders of specific appropriation.

The Bank of England is bound by law to return to the Exchequer daily accounts of the daily payments, and of their precise appropriation; which accounts are meant to inform the Exchequer of the amount authorised, the amount actually paid, and the amount which may remain unexhausted. It is from such returns that the books of the Exchequer are kept, the weekly Bank returns to the Treasury made, as well as the Comptroller-general's quarterly accounts for the auditors, and annual accounts for Parliament. These proceedings are all prescribed under the following clauses, in 4 Will. 4, c. 15, ss. 14 and 20.

Sect. 14. "Provided always, and be it further enacted, That in cases in which any "credit shall be granted to any person by the said Governor and Company, in pursuance "of this Act, no sum of money shall be transferred from the account of His Majesty's "Exchequer, until the same shall be actually paid by the Bank to or on account of the "person to whom such credit shall be granted: Provided always, that nothing in this Act "contained shall be construed to alter or affect the regulations now in force, by virtue of "any Act or Acts relating to the payment of the dividends on account of the public debt."

Sect. 20. "And be it further enacted, That the Governor and Company of the Bank "of England shall, and they are hereby required to transmit from day to day to the "said Comptroller an account of the several payments actually made by them in the course "of the preceding day, on account of the credits granted by him; and the said Governor and "Company shall likewise weekly transmit to the Commissioners of the Treasury a statement, "specifying the sums of money paid within the preceding week to the drafts or orders of "the several public accountants to whom credits shall have been granted by the said "Governor and Company in pursuance of the warrants of the said Comptroller, distin-"guishing the payments on each account, and also a statement of the balance of money "remaining in the Bank at the close of each such week on account of the Exchequer; all "which several statements shall be authenticated by the signature of one of the cashiers, "or other officer of the Bank, to be appointed for that purpose."

It can be easily ascertained, on reference to the official accounts of the Pay-office, whether the actual mode of transacting the business at the Pay-office admits of a strict adherence to the preceding clauses; whether the daily accounts rendered by the Bank to the Exchequer comprehend all the daily payments really made; and, in fact, whether these accounts represent the accounts before or after what seems to be described by the term rectification or adjustment.

It is thus provided by law how the votes of Parliament, the pleasure of the Crown, the authority of the Treasury, and the final order of the Exchequer, should be invariably carried into effect; and that no sum should be issued or applied to any purpose not warranted by law or exceeding the amount specifically voted.

It was to enforce these great principles, and to guard against any possibility of undue appropriation, that the office of the Exchequer was established; and that on the abolition of the office of auditor, the four tellers, and the clerk of the pells, the duties and powers of these six officers were transferred to one Comptroller-general, to whom, under a specific Parliamentary responsibility, was intrusted the enforcement of a rigid Parliamentary appropriation of the public money.

It here becomes necessary to refer more distinctly to the origin of the system of Exchequer control, to the principles of the existing law (4 Will. 4, c. 15), and to the proceedings adopted both in Parliament and by the public departments for the enforcement of these constitutional principles.

The whole question was submitted to the examination of two Royal Commissions, under under the Governments of the Duke of Wellington and of Earl Grey; and in the Report made to Parliament in 1831 it is stated,—"The Exchequer does not exercise any authority "over the administrative departments, further than to guard against the illegal application "of the public money. The constitutional functions of its officers, who hold their situations "for life, are to provide for the proper keeping and proper appropriation of the public money." That such had been the constitution in the earliest times, is shown by the following extract from the evidence of the clerk of the Pells (the Right Hon. H. Ellis), quoted and adopted by the Commissioners:—"The Exchequer is at least coeval with the Norman conquest, "and from its earliest institution has been looked upon as a check on the Lord High Treasurer, "and a protection for the king, as well as the subject, in the custody, payment, and issue of "the public money." (Sessional Paper, No. 313.)

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

The Commissioners proceed to recommend the creation of the present office of Comptroller-General, in the following words:—"We are decidedly of opinion that the most "efficient restraint on the Crown and on its Ministers should be provided and maintained. "It becomes our duty to suggest means for obtaining full security that no appropriation of "the funds received should take place under any circumstances, however urgent, without such "sanction as shall be a real guarantee to the public for the legality of the appropriation."

Founded on this Report, the Act of the 4 Will. 4, c. 15, was introduced into the House of Commons by Sir James Graham, who had been one of the Commissioners of Inquiry. The objects of the Act were explained by him, with his accustomed clearness and ability, and set forth the intentions of Lord Grey's Government in proposing, and of Parliament in passing, the Exchequer Act. "The highest function of the Exchequer," he observed, "is that of control. * * The Comptroller-General is to exercise the duties now per- "formed by the auditor and clerk of the Pells, and to see that all payments made are "sanctioned by Acts of that House; the measure will give an effective control over the "Executive, as regards the future expenditure." The speaker proceeded to explain the provisions of the Bill, which he described as providing "that before any cheque or draft "was issued or paid, the order (warrant) of the Comptroller-General, directing the payment, "should be issued. * * The Treasury Warrant must recite the particular Act or Vote "of Parliament sanctioning such payment. The Comptroller-General will have to see "whether the money advanced or expended was within the provisions of the Appropriation "Act, or the authority granted by Parliament."

The Act received the unanimous concurrence of the House of Commons, the only doubt suggested being, whether the responsible functions of the Comptroller were not such as to require the joint authority of two public officers, rather than one. "No single "individual," observed Lord Granville Somerset, who had acted as one of the Commissioners of Inquiry appointed by the Duke of Wellington, "would be able to resist the "strong pressure occasionally brought into play against him, whenever he put his view of "what was right in opposition to the wishes of the Executive Government." This suggestion was not, however, adopted, and the Bill passed the Commons in its present form, by which the absolute power of the Exchequer is entrusted to the Comptroller-General, subject to his responsibility to both Houses of Parliament.

In conformity with the principles laid down by Sir James Graham, the Earl Grey, on moving the second reading of the Bill in the House of Lords, stated its object to be, "to regulate the Exchequer business, and to establish an efficient and proper control. The "revenue should only be extracted from the Bank by Royal Order, but in all cases a reference "should be made to the Act or Acts by which such issues were authorised."

All these objects were consequently provided for in the Exchequer Act, 4 Will. 4, c. 15.

It now becomes necessary to compare these later Parliamentary declarations and enactments with the acknowledged law of Parliament and the provisions of the Appropriation Acts.

From early times a right was asserted by the House of Commons, to guard against any misapplication of the public treasure. This became one of the questions to be struggled for, by those to whom the Constitution owes its progress and its completion. But it was resisted by high authorities. Clarendon stigmatised it as republicanism. But the principle was finally adopted and engrafted into our Constitution at the time and by the men to whom we owe our liberties. The words of Hatsell, are as follows (Vol. iii., p. 202):—"This idea, (of Parliamentary appropriation), which was conceived originally only as a "restraint on those who had the management of the public service, was adopted to a much "larger extent, and made part of that system of government which was established for "better securing the rights, liberties, and privileges of the people of this country. Imme- "diately after that æra, all the grants were applied and strictly appropriated," &c.

This principle was strictly carried out, and special penalties were imposed on any officers of the Exchequer who should make issues at variance with the statutable appropriation. The same penal clauses were inserted in the 6 & 7 Will. 3, c. 7. The impeachment of Sir E. Seymour comprehended a charge, "for that he, being treasurer "of the navy, did, contrary "to law and to the duty of his office, lend 90,000 l., raised and appropriated for building "ships, to the support of the army, contrary to the Act," &c.

The assertion and legislative adoption of the great constitutional doctrine of enforcing a strict Parliamentary Appropriation, originated with Lord Somers, who is said to have been directed by the House of Commons to prepare the proper clause, which became, and has since continued to be, the constitutional law of England. Nor was this principle less carefully enforced in subsequent times. In 1711, a resolution was passed by the House of Commons to the following effect:—"The applying any sum of unappropriated money or "surplusage of grants, to uses not voted or addressed for in Parliament, hath been a mis-"application of the public money." In the year 1734, by Resolution, and in the 7 Geo. 2, c. 12, s. 12, in the Appropriation Act, a more relaxed system was temporarily introduced. But this was done in a time of exigency, and so justified only. Against a similar course, which had been taken in 1727, much opposition had been given in the House of Lords; and a Protest appears in the Journals, signed by many Peers, including the name of the then Earl of Aberdeen. These exceptional cases confirm the general rule, and had a Parliamentary justification; and therefore there is no reason to question the authority of the author, who states distinctly that,—"The uniform practice, begun at the Revolution and "continued for near a century, is that the money granted by the House of Commons for "the current service of the year, should, by a special appropriation, either in the Act for "levying the aids, or in some other Act of the same Session, be applied only to the services "for which they were voted."

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

The case of 1782 is a further illustration of the same principle. In the month of December, there being some doubt respecting the duration of the war, the Army Estimates were not introduced before Christmas. The Navy only was provided for, and was charged on the Land and Malt Taxes. But it being found that all the money voted for the Army in former Sessions had been issued, and that a further sum for the pay and subsistence of the land forces would be wanted before the House of Commons met in January, on mature consultation with the officers of the Treasury and Exchequer, it was judged necessary that a sum should be voted on the Army account, in order to give the Paymasters of the Army a credit with the Exchequer. An Estimate for the Army was therefore presented, a vote taken, and the constitutional principle was strictly maintained.

Again, in 1784, when it was anticipated that public moneys might, after the dissolution, be applied to purposes not sanctioned by Parliamentary appropriation, the highest constitutional authorities then existing induced the House of Commons, on the 12th January, to pass the following Resolution:—"For any person at the Treasury, Exchequer, or Bank "of England, or employed in the payment of public moneys, to pay any moneys for services "voted in the present Session of Parliament, after Parliament hath been prorogued or "dissolved, before the passing of an Act of Parliament appropriating the services, will be "a high crime and misdemeanor, a daring breach of public trust, derogatory to the funda-"mental principles of Parliament, and subversive of the Constitution of the country."

Though such was the admitted Constitution of England, abuses were not wholly checked, even in later times, when abuses were, it might be thought, less likely to prevail. But, in order at once to adhere to the principle of Parliamentary appropriation, and yet to meet unforeseen exigencies in the public service, two very considerable votes had for many years been customarily taken, which were freed from the restraints of any very special application, and left much more at the discretion of the Treasury, subject to the responsibility of a subsequent Parliamentary account of the expenditure. The one was the Vote for Army Extraordinaries; the other, the Vote for Civil Contingencies. These votes were at all times viewed with a natural and a just jealousy on the part of the House of Commons. The abuses resulting from the Extraordinary expenditure of the Army, are noticed in the Seventh Report of the Commissioners of Army Accounts, pp. 11–14. Extraordinary expenditure was always viewed with suspicion. Even so early as in 1780–82 the expenses for extraordinaries have been declared "to have rendered the Votes of Parliament, and "the Bills for appropriating the Supplies, ridiculous and nugatory." In the closing years of Lord Liverpool's Government, it was shown, mainly by the perseverance and exertions of Lord Derby, that the whole expenses of the Rideau Canal had been thus defrayed without Parliamentary authority, and had amounted to 700,000 l. or 800,000 l. It was also discovered that the salaries of the North American Bishops and Clergy were borne and paid out of the Military chest, and charged to Army Extraordinaries. A reform was effected by the Whig Government. All that was reducible to estimate was included in the Annual Votes; and the vote for Army Extraordinaries was discontinued.

The Civil Contingency Vote has been greatly reduced, and amounts at present to no more than 100,000 l.

Thus the whole course of Parliamentary proceeding has been greatly to limit the discretion of the Treasury in relation to the public expenditure, and to bring very nearly the entire expenditure under the direct control of Parliament, the Exchequer, and the Auditors.

It was, however, in Sir James Graham's remarkable speech, on moving the Navy Estimates of 1831, that the necessity of efficient check was more fully exhibited to Parliament than had ever previously been done. This speech, made on the 25th February 1831, contains a masterly exposure of the abuses which even then prevailed. He described the many mischiefs arising from the want of a rigid and invariable adherence to the principle of appropriation, and "the inconvenience arising from the intermingling of accounts, and "the practice of throwing the surplus of one department into the deficiency of another." Sir James Graham expressed his strong disapproval of this system, and referred to the constitutional principle of Lord Somers's Act of Appropriation, "which not only recognised "the right of Parliament to fix the whole quantum of supplies, but the right to apportion "them to particular branches of the public service." Sir James Graham showed that, under the relaxed system which he denounced, 155,534 l. had been expended at Weevil without any Parliamentary authority; that at Cremill, on a vote of 4,000 l. an expenditure of 229,441 l. had taken place; that at Leith and Ascension, 7,900 l. and 10,000 l. had been laid out without any Parliamentary authority. Sir James Graham added, that "having "consulted the Law Officers of the Crown on these practices, he was advised that the system "was illegal, and he considered it likewise to be most injudicious." He condemned the permitting "a saving in one department from being made to account for a deficiency in "another." Steps were taken by him to prevent the recurrence of these abuses in future, and to enforce a rigid adherence to the appropriations made by Parliament.

229,441 l.

It was with a knowledge of these facts, and with a desire of averting any future recurrence of these abuses, that Sir James Graham was selected as being the fitting person to introduce the Act (4 Will. 4, c. 15), which was intended not only to simplify Exchequer practice, but to strengthen the control over the Treasury. His observations, in recommendation of this Act, have been already alluded to.

The stringency of the system thus enforced by law, more especially after the cessation of the vote for Army Extraordinaries, was felt to be so great, that by the 9 & 10 Vict., c. 116, the following clause was introduced into the Appropriation Act, to give somewhat more of discretionary power to the Treasury. This clause has since been re-enacted annually. The words and import of the enactment are remarkable, and deserve the utmost attention from the Government. They are as follows. After the appropriation of Ways and Means to the several services voted, the Act proceeds:—

"Provided, that if the exigencies of the service shall render it indispensably necessary "to alter the proportions assigned to any of the separate services comprised in the aggre- "gate sums granted in this Act for Navy, Army, or Ordnance Services, the department "where such necessity arises shall represent the circumstance, in writing, to the Treasury, "and it shall be lawful for such department, on Her Majesty's pleasure being signified by "the Treasury, to apply in aid of the deficient grant a further limited sum out of any "surplus, under any other head of service, in the same department. Provided that the "aggregate sum granted be not exceeded." Such is the existing law, and such the latest but most conclusive assertion and enforcement of the right and obligation of a Parliamentary appropriation. This clause is conclusive. It proves that without its statutable relaxation the funds provided for a specified vote in one service could not lawfully be applied to another vote, though in the same service; but that, even when under "circumstances of "exigency," an abandonment of the strict rule became "indispensably necessary," this deviation was permitted only on a "representation in writing" from the responsible department, and that this representation could only be acted on by the Command of the Sovereign, signified by the Lords of the Treasury: it proves further, that even assuming the concurrence of all these several authorities and circumstances, no sums voted for Army, Navy, or Ordnance could be transferred or applied interchangeably to one of these services from another, either under the general law or under the enabling proviso. It is, therefore, undeniable, that except under the exceptional circumstances stated, all such transfers are now illegal. Expressio unius, exclusio alterius. The latitude given must be confined strictly within the excepted cases. By this clause the principle asserted by Parliamentary practice in earlier times, and from the Revolution downwards, is finally re-enacted and enforced. It will hereafter be shown how entirely it is set at nought by the existing system of the Pay-office.

But it is first necessary to call the attention of the Government to the alterations made in the Pay Departments of the State, which bear essentially on the subject under review.

At the accession of Will. 4, there were maintained, at a very considerable charge, three offices of Paymasters, all held with seats in Parliament.

1. Paymaster-general of the Forces (originally there were two Joint-paymasters).
2. Treasurer of the Navy.
3. Treasurer of the Ordnance.

To these should be added, the Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, and the establishment for the payment of the Civil Service.

The three first-named appointments, being supported at a very considerable cost, and increasing the influence of the Crown, had often been the subjects of Parliamentary animadversion. A Bill was introduced into the House of Commons, in 1835, which became law, as the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35, to consolidate these three departments, and also that of Chelsea, into one general Pay-office. The Paymaster of Civil Services was created by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15; but this office also was subsequently abolished by the 11 & 12 Vict., c. 55, and its duties transferred to the Paymaster-general. Thus all payments are now made by one single department. It was neither intended by Parliament, nor is it provided by the Consolidating Statute, that any variation was thereby to be made in the system of strict appropriation or Exchequer control. On the contrary, no issue is recognised under these statutes, except as sanctioned by Act or vote of Parliament, by Ways and Means Act, Royal Order, Treasury Warrant, Treasury Issuing Letter, and Exchequer Warrant; and in each of these several documents, as has been already shown, the principle of specific appropriation is set forth and maintained. But though the obligation of adhering strictly to this appropriation is undiminished by the consolidation of the pay-offices, the power of evading it is increased, and the consequent risk of a violation of the law is proportionally augmented. Whilst there existed five distinct pay-offices, no transfer of funds from one to another could take place, except by a confederacy between two independent functionaries, involving involving both in a common responsibility, incurred for the convenience of one. Such occurrence was therefore highly improbable. It is otherwise where the five classes of payments are concentrated in one department. In this latter case, full opportunity is given to the Paymaster, however strictly the Exchequer control may be exercised, to set all restrictions at nought, if so directed or advised, and to bid defiance to the principles of a strict appropriation of the public money.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

These restrictions may, in many cases, be for the time inconvenient and inconsistent with a more rapid march of the public business; but as they are embodied in the law of the land, and are essential to support the rights of Parliament, they cannot legally be set aside by any department whatever, without incurring that which was made matter of impeachment in the case of Sir E. Seymour, was directly condemned in the Resolutions of 1711, and condemned in spirit by those of 1784.

After the final consolidation of the Pay Office, by the 11 & 12 Vict., c. 55, a Treasury Minute, to carry that law into effect, was passed on the 22d December 1848. This Minute was communicated in a printed form to the Exchequer, the Paymaster's Office, the Audit Office and other departments, for their guidance. On perusing this Minute, it appeared to me to be so irreconcilable with constitutional principle and statute law, that I stated my objections to the highest authorities of the Treasury, and finally prepared the Draft (Appendix III., p. 548) of an official letter of remonstrance against the Treasury Minute; this draft I sent to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the 17th January 1849, for his consideration, before it was formally addressed to his department. The objections which I urged were, that the Minute "was open to an interpretation subversive of all legal and constitutional checks." In consequence of this communication, the Minute of the 22d December was submitted to the consideration of Sir Alexander Spearman (one of the best practical authorities that could have been consulted), who, after an interview with me, recommended several changes in the Minute to meet my objections. Those changes were adopted by the Treasury. On the 26th March 1849, the Treasury informed the Comptroller-general that amendments had been made in the Minute of 22d December, and a revised Minute was transmitted, to be substituted for the former, which was withdrawn. I should earnestly request the Chancellor of the Exchequer to compare these two Minutes, and having noted the distinctions between them, to inquire whether the practice animadverted on in this letter is not in closer conformity with the Minute which was withdrawn as objectionable, than with that which was adopted by the Treasury. The amended Minute carefully recites and maintains the principles of Parliamentary appropriation enforced by Exchequer control; the present system subverts both. That the amended Minute adheres religiously to the constitutional principle will appear from considering sections 4, 7 and 8, and more especially section 14; in which latter clause "the constitutional check exercised by the Comptroller-"general on the issue of the public money, is in all respects maintained;" and the Treasury most truly affirm their own duty to be "to ensure that no payment is made upon the order "of any department, under any head of service, beyond the amount of the specific grant of "Parliament legally applicable thereto." The Minute concludes in the following significant words: "Thus, my Lords will have means of exercising that authority vested in them by the "Appropriation Act, whereby, whilst the departments of expenditure are restrained from "applying any part of one specific grant in aid of another specific grant, the Treasury, on the "other hand, in relation to Army, Navy and Ordnance Services, is authorised, on being "satisfied that it is indispensably necessary, to convey Her Majesty's sanction to the appro-"priation of the surplus of one grant to supply the deficiency on any other, provided that the "total of the grants for the particular department which applies for such sanction be not "thereby exceeded." Here is a most authoritative declaration and recognition of the principle of specific appropriation. My statement now is, that this principle is habitually and systematically endangered, or actually set aside.

The principle which, from the proceedings of the Pay Office, appears to me to prevail, but of which of course I cannot be quite accurately informed, is as follows:

That the funds in the Paymaster's hands are dealt with as a consolidated balance, from which all services, directed by the Treasury to be provided for, may be made good, with or without the requisite legal authority.

That under this system, with or without an Exchequer Warrant, or any special transfer or payment from the Bank, to meet a particular service, issues may be made by the Paymaster, and are made, for that service, in anticipation of funds to be subsequently appropriated, and are thus paid in the absence of all legal authority.

That in cases where such unauthorised payments are made, and the Exchequer authority is subsequently received, a rectification or adjustment of account takes place, and the proper vote is charged with a payment made anteriorly and without authority.

That under this system, payments are made first without authority, and at a subsequent time the authority is obtained, without which it is impossible that such payments should legally be made.

That Army, Navy and Ordnance funds may thus be used interchangeably, contrary to the express provisions in the Appropriation Acts, trusting to a subsequent rectification of accounts which shall give a legal semblance to what had previously been an illegal act.

That in like manner the civil votes may be made interchangeable within themselves, or may be made applicable to the three great services, or to the payment of charges on the Consolidated Fund, before the payment for such charges have received a legal sanction.

That issues, to defray charges on the Consolidated Fund, may be misapplied in the same manner.

That

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

That in this manner payments may be made—

1. For services not voted by Parliament, or sanctioned by statute.

2. For services for which no ways and means have been provided, and which cannot therefore legally be defrayed.

3. For services, respecting which no Royal Order, Treasury Warrant and issuing letter have ever issued; or if issued, have never been sanctioned by the Exchequer as regular and conformable to law.

4. For services for which no Exchequer Warrant to the Bank of England has issued, directing a credit to the Paymaster for this particular service or head of service.

The consequence of this mode of proceeding leads inevitably to the total absence of all conformity between the actual payments and the Exchequer accounts, which are declared records by Act of Parliament. The balances returned must be erroneous, in any instances where payments are made by the Paymasters for services not voted by Parliament, or for which ways and means have not been previously granted. The state of each vote will also be equally inaccurate, if, in addition to payments made out of credits regularly granted, further payments are made, unknown to the Exchequer, and made out of balances otherwise appropriated. Utter confusion must prevail, and a double set of books must, I conceive, be kept in such cases, wherever the payments such as I have described are made; the one being the actual record of payment made without authority, the other of payment necessarily altered in date and in the head of charges, whenever the subsequent rectification or adjustment of accounts takes place; the first of these accounts will show real transactions, but all contrary to law; the second will show imaginary transactions, but all represented as conformable to law. The annual accounts submitted to Parliament by the Exchequer will be in the same way erroneous; the quarterly accounts made to the auditors, and the daily accounts rendered by the Bank to the Exchequer, will only go to produce or to support an illusory system of account.

The errors and mistakes to which this mode of transacting public business must necessarily be incident, are obvious. An account made on principles needing a periodical rectification and adjustment, never can be relied on as securing accuracy; it is, on the contrary, not only indefensible in principle, but is open to more than twofold the number of mistakes.

In case the Exchequer should refuse to sanction any irregular warrant or warrants, in which issues have already been made, by anticipation, by the Paymaster, the evil would seem to be without remedy. That this might very probably occur will be obvious, from the case of 1841, where 106 Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants, all under Sign Manual, and bearing the counter signatures of the Treasury, were set aside by the Comptroller-general, as irregular, and consequently illegal. Had payments out of balances, issued for other purposes, been then made by anticipation, not only would the statutable functions of the Exchequer have been superseded, but a misapplication of public money would have taken place, to which no existing law could have furnished a corrective. Yet it is to abuses of this character that the existing mode of issuing money for the public service not only leads, but has led. That it is directly contrary to law seems so obvious as not to stand in need of argument; Sir James Graham stated in Parliament that such was the opinion of the law officers in 1831; but should any possibility of doubt on the subject exist, I respectfully suggest the propriety of submitting the following questions to the law advisers of the Crown:

1. Is it consistent with law that issues should be made by the Paymaster, for the public service (other than out of Civil Contingencies), except where such issues have been sanctioned by an Act, or by a Resolution of Supply agreed to by the House of Commons, or except when lawfully charged on the Consolidated Fund, and in both cases specially provided for by a Ways and Means Act?

2. Is it consistent with law to make such issue, except under a Royal Order, Treasury Warrant, and Issuing Letter, in cases of Supply services, or under a Treasury Warrant and Issuing Letter, in regard to charges on the Consolidated Fund?

3. Is it consistent with law to make such payments, till the existence and the legality of the Parliamentary, the Royal, and the Treasury authorities are affirmed by the issue of an Exchequer Warrant to that effect, addressed to the Bank of England?

4. Is it consistent with law to make payments for any peculiar service, by anticipation, out of balances appropriated for other purposes, and in the hands of the Paymaster, in the expectation that the authority not existing or completed at the date of the payment, may afterwards be complete, and procured after such payment has been made?

5. Is it consistent with law to apply to one of the three great services, or to the votes of the Civil Service, sums voted for another service, for which no funds have been transferred to the Paymaster, relying on a future adjustment of account to make such payment consistent with a strict appropriation?

Believing that these questions must all be answered in the negative, as matters of law, the questions of fact will easily be disposed of by an examination of the Paymaster's accounts, and calling for a return of any issues or advances made for the public service, as under colour of supplies,—

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

1. Before any Parliamentary Vote or Appropriation Act has been agreed to.

2. Before the issue of a Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, authorising such issue.

3. Before the issue of the Exchequer Warrant, addressed to the Bank, for the like purpose.

4. (In the case of Consolidated Fund charges)—Before the issue of the Treasury and the Exchequer Warrants.

5. Return of all advances made out of the Paymaster's balances, for services not provided for in such balances, at the time of making such advances, and of any subsequent adjustments of accounts to balance such advances, and the date of making such advances, and their amount, together with the date and amount of the corresponding adjustments of accounts.

In this manner the questions of law and of fact may both be brought under the consideration of the Government.

At various times the attention of Parliament, of the Treasury, and of the Pay Departments, has been called to the danger and inconveniences of consolidating several votes for separate services, even where such consolidation was accomplished by lawful authority. In the Session of 1846, for instance, the following services were consolidated in one vote, for 57,568 l., included in one Royal Order, and its accompanying Treasury Warrant:

	£.
Law charges	21,000
Mint prosecutions	10,600
Sheriffs' expenses	12,600
Insolvent debtors	13,368
	£. 57,568

The attention of the Treasury was called to this consolidation by the Comptroller-general, though it had been made by lawful authority; he remonstrated, not only on the ground of technical objections, but because the control of the Exchequer was thereby defeated, and that any one, or even three of the several services, might have been left unpaid, provided the gross sum of 57,568 l. were not exceeded. (See Appendix, No. I., p. 547.) The Comptroller-general represented the obvious duty of preserving unchanged the constitutional control of the Exchequer. The Treasury, by letter of the 5th August 1846, "expressed their concurrence in his views," and adopted his recommendation; and, although the Resolution of the House of Commons had already passed, and the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant had already issued, decided that the consolidation objected to should be corrected by the severance of the four votes in the following Appropriation Act. This was done accordingly by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 116, s. 18.

Another very striking case occurred in the Session of 1849, in which the House of Commons itself interposed, and enforced the very same principle which had been adopted by the Treasury at the suggestion of the Comptroller-general in 1846, as has already been shown (Appendix, Nos. VI., VII., p. 549.) In 1849 the following five separate services were included in one vote for 702,523 l. 7 s. 8 d.

	£.	s.	d.
Superintendence of prisons	14,331	–	–
Prison and convict establishments	258,993	11	2
Maintenance of prisoners	127,181	7	6
Expense of transportation	72,112	13	3
Colonial convict establishments	229,904	15	9
Taken in one Vote for	£. 702,523	7	8

One Royal Order and Treasury Warrant was issued for this gross sum; the effect of which would have been to enable the Treasury to exercise what might be considered a legislative rather than an administrative power, by applying the whole sum intended for colonial transportation to convicts at home or vice versâ. But at the morning sitting of the 24th August 1849 the attention of the House was called to the consolidated Vote, and to the irregularity of the mode in which it was proposed. (Appendix, No. VI., p. 549.) After debate Sir Charles Wood, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, "promised that he would re-arrange "the Vote in the following year, and place the different classes of expenditure under their "distinct heads, if the House would then pass the Bill." The House was satisfied, the Bill was passed, and the consolidated Vote was subsequently severed, as will appear by comparing the Estimates and Appropriation Acts of 1849 and 1850. (Appendix, No. VII., p. 549.)

Exchequer Memorandum 1854.

It has already been stated that a confusion of issues and their consolidation could hardly fail to act inconveniently on the statement of the balances of accounts; of this an instance took place in August 1846. The Comptroller-general found that the Paymaster's balances, in place of being returned under each particular head of service by the Bank, were returned as one general balance, rendering any compliance with the ss. 23, 24, 4 Will. 4, c. 15, absolutely impossible; he therefore requested that this should be in future corrected, in order that the law should be carried fully into effect. Instructions were forthwith given by the Bank that this request should be complied with. (Appendix, No. II., p. 548.)

In the meanwhile it appeared that, under the looser system complained of, errors in the appropriation of sums as stated in the Exchequer Parliamentary accounts had necessarily arisen from the errors contained in the vouchers furnished to the Exchequer on which the Parliamentary accounts were founded. The Comptroller-general, therefore, felt it his duty to let this fact be known to the Legislature, to whose authority he was responsible, and an explanatory note was subjoined to the accounts, and will be found in the Appendix, No. IV., p. 549. These irregularities he endeavoured to check, and to prevent, so far as his official functions permitted him to do so; and the result was made known to Parliament in a second note, subjoined to the Exchequer account of 1847. (Appendix, No. V., p. 549.) It is necessary, however, to explain, that in certifying the "accuracy of issues," he only referred to the issues as directed by the Exchequer Warrants, and not to payments made by the Paymaster-general.

In May 1848, finding that errors had arisen in the Paymaster's balances, which were exhibited when the general balance came to be severed under the several heads of service, an inquiry took place by the Chief Accountant of the Exchequer, in conjunction with an officer of the Paymaster's office; the result of which was that 60,000*l.* were required to be added to the Army Exchequer balance, and 100,000*l.* to be deducted; that 106,000*l.* had to be added to the Navy Exchequer balance, and 50,000*l.* deducted; and in like manner 16,000*l.* were added to, and 176,000*l.* deducted from the Ordnance. It is right, however, to add that, in a single case within the Exchequer, one of these errors had arisen by a clerical mistake, by which, June 13, 1845, a payment of 10,000*l.* had been placed to Army, and not to Navy Services. The particulars of this investigation, and its results, are all stated in the Appendix, No. XII., p. 552. All these practices, which the Parliament, the Treasury, and the Exchequer dealt with as objectionable, even when sanctioned by lawful authority, can now be done, and by the present system of payments are now habitually done, without any colour of law.

The object of the preceding references and remarks is to show how scrupulously the principle of specific appropriation has been enforced by law, by the House of Commons, by this department, and recognised by minutes and decisions of the Treasury. The deviations from the lawful practice on which this paper animadverts, arise from the habit of issuing, without legal sanction, from one general balance, on account of services for which no Exchequer credits have been given, and consequently for which no funds are placed in the Paymaster's hands. That this takes place systematically is plain from the documents before me, as well as from a fact coming within my own personal knowledge, to which I shall advert hereafter. But it is first necessary to guard against a misconception which might arise possibly from an expression contained in the amended Minute of 22d December 1848, in which it is stated that "the Paymaster's balances have hitherto been considered as "a general fund, applicable to the payment of all current services" (sect. 12); and it might be suggested, however erroneously, that these words are a warrant in justification of the practices objected to. The reply is obvious, and irresistible. By "current services" can only be meant current services legally provided for, and sanctioned by all the requisites rendered necessary by law. A demand for army, navy, ordnance, or the Civil Service, could not be held a current service payable out of the public money, till every previous condition required by statute had been expressly fulfilled. Any other interpretation would not only be indefensible, upon reasoning most elementary but most conclusive, but would be repugnant to the Exchequer authority, affirmed fully in the same Minute, s. 4, which declares "the "course to be followed preparatory to the issue of credits in favour of the Paymaster-general, "to be as pointed out by the 4 Will. 4, c. 15; and the Minute of the 26th September 1834, "issued in pursuance thereof." It would be still more repugnant to the conclusive assertion of the binding obligation of the strict Parliamentary appropriation, contained in s. 12 of the same Minute, on which I have already commented. It will be shown by the returns which I have already suggested as necessary to be called for, to what extent the system of unauthorised payments, and of subsequent adjustments of accounts, has been carried. But more direct evidence on the subject may be required from me, to prevent the supposition that my reasoning rests on vague hypothesis. This I can easily furnish, in a few illustrative cases. I believe it will be found that the annuities and pensions charged on the Consolidated Fund are pretty generally paid when due. I have inserted in the Appendix, No. X., p. 551, an account showing the quarterly amount of such charges, and the date at which the Treasury first applied for and obtained the legal warrant for such payments. By calling for an account of the payments actually made, with their dates, and comparing them with the date of the Exchequer Warrant, it will be at once shown how many payments were made without authority, out of funds otherwise appropriated, and requiring a subsequent re adjustment. So of the salaries and allowances on the Consolidated Fund, an example of which may be found in the October quarter, 1853: these charges were due on the 10th October, but the Exchequer Warrant was not obtained till November 9th. It is clear that all payments for these services made between those days were unauthorised; were made out of funds otherwise appropriated; that they could not be charged, when made, to a credit which had not then been issued; that they must, if the entry is made truly and at the time, have been charged to some other fund, to be reimbursed, repaid, and adjusted. My own salary as Comptroller-general, is among these charges, and I find it has been paid, in some instances, to my bankers before any Exchequer Warrant had authorised the payment; and I have no doubt whatever that the same practice will be found to prevail through this head of payments, and will be traceable likewise in the charges for Courts of Justice, the diplomatic, and other services provided for in like manner.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

In the preceding part of this memorandum it has been proposed to show, (1) What the law is, and what are the legal restraints imposed on the Government in respect to the issue of the public money; (2) what is the present system of financial administration, and its tendency to set aside all legal restraints; and (3) to prove by examples that such misapplications do at present take place. It has been shown that the present system substitutes for Parliamentary law and the Appropriation Act, the order of the Treasury and the unquestioning obedience of officers holding during pleasure. It has been shown that irregularities and confusion in the public accounts are the actual and inevitable consequences, and that the public accounts rendered to Parliament no longer truly represent the public payments. All this seems to me to have been incontestably proved, but if doubts should be still entertained, I have suggested the mode for determining both the law and the fact.

A few practical observations, in conclusion, seem all that is now required, in order to make an immediate application of this argument to the present time, and to its peculiar exigencies. War must necessarily require heavy and unforeseen issues to be made on the instant, in satisfaction of foreign demands. These difficulties are now to be encountered, after the ordinary votes for Army Extraordinaries have for many years ceased; when all payments, military as well as civil, are concentrated in one single department; placed nominally under the control of a great officer of State, but really conducted by an able, and, I believe, a highly trustworthy clerk, who carries into effect implicitly the orders of the Treasury. The Paymaster-general, however, continues to be legally responsible. The last Bank Charter Act may render the aid formerly derived from that corporation, doubtful and dangerous in many cases, impossible in others. The millions withdrawn from the Exchequer, in payment for Exchequer bills, and to satisfy the holders of South Sea Stock, have crippled our resources, and have lessened our readiest means of meeting the present crisis. It is also intended to add to the duties of the Exchequer and Pay-office the receipt and expenditure of about 4,000,000*l.*, being the charge for the collection of the revenue, a charge which will render it still more difficult, but more important, that a strict appropriation should be adhered to. In addition to these important and significant facts, a loose system of issuing the public money has been introduced, and is gradually extending. All this, I submit, is full of danger. The Treasury seems to me giving a fatal example to all the subordinate financial departments of an open violation of the law. The law is fully known and understood; a contrary practice is open and avowed, and comes within the cognizance of every clerk of the Treasury, of the Exchequer, of the Pay-office, of the Bank of England, and it is to be hoped, for the sake of the public interest, within the cognizance of the Audit-office likewise. The law and the practice should assuredly be brought into exact conformity. The one should be repealed, or the other reformed. A system of issues made from one appropriated balance to another service unprovided for, a misapplication of balances to be remedied by subsequent alteration or rectification of accounts, would not be tolerated in any private banking or commercial establishment in the City of London; and even if it were not illegal, would be condemned as imprudent and inexpedient in the highest degree. It is a system which, if not corrected, will necessarily extend, especially in time of war; and may ultimately produce a crisis, in which the absolute powers of restraint vested in the Exchequer must necessarily be called into action, at a time when the performance of such an unavoidable duty will lead to public inconvenience. When the last Pay-Office Consolidation Bill was in the House of Lords, I proposed a clause, declaring and enacting that no Treasury Orders should issue under the Act which might sanction a departure from the legal system of Exchequer control and Parliamentary appropriation. The Duke of Wellington spoke, and earnestly dissuaded me from pressing a clause to guard against what he could only consider to be an imaginary danger, as he felt assured that no Government would ever be found to issue an order so unjustifiable. Lord Granville will remember this discussion, he having then charge of the Bill. I did not take the sense of the House on the clause, but withdrew it. I was content to record it on the Journals, in justification of my own opinion. It will not, I presume, be seriously stated that the legislative restraints all apply, and apply exclusively, to prevent the undue issue of public money into the hands of the Paymaster; but that, once in his hands, that money may be indiscriminately applied to any purposes, whether legally sanctioned or not, as may be directed by the Treasury. This would indeed be a dispensing power, setting aside all law, and all constitutional restraint. It would amount to a repeal of the Exchequer Act and of the Appropriation Act; and if rashly asserted, could not be defended effectually in a British House of Commons.

To meet the risks of war expenditure, there will be required a steady exertion of the legal powers of the Treasury, which should never be exceeded; an experienced and vigilant revenue room, a cessation of all unauthorised payments, and a careful separation of the Paymaster's accounts hereafter, kept in consistency with the real disbursements, controlled by an uncompromising and undeviating enforcement of the prescribed functions of the Exchequer.

quer. This may avert the many and complicated difficulties I anticipate, but it will require this combination to avert them. Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

The Paymaster's balances will be increased from day to day, and the Exchequer balances be reduced, contrary to the distinct terms of the Treasury Minute. (Appendix, Nos. VIII., IX., p. 550.) As between the 17th October and the 10th December, 3,128,000 l. of Exchequer bills were placed to his credit, (1,413,000 l. having been deposited to his credit in one single day,) these great balances will be indiscriminately drawn upon, by order of the Treasury, and a system irreconcilable with the Parliamentary Constitution of England will be acted on, difficult to defend, and impossible to justify.

Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

Exchequer, 10 February 1854.

P.S. Since the preceding memorandum has been put in type, the Comptroller-general has read with satisfaction the Auditor's Report on Naval Expenditure, dated the 24th January 1854, and the consequent Treasury Minute. These important documents bear out, to the fullest extent, the legal and constitutional doctrine on which the Comptroller-general has insisted, and which he earnestly suggests ought to be invariably adhered to. It appears that the Admiralty had entered into a contract to pay 10,000 l. for the use of a patent screw-propeller. No provision had been made for this sum in the Estimate of 1852–53. The Admiralty applied to the Treasury for permission to pay it out of the surplus unexpended on certain votes, under the enabling clause in the Appropriation Act. This application the Treasury declined to sanction, directing that the 10,000 l. for this service should be included in the Estimates for 1853–54. But as a contract had been actually made, to complete this payment an advance of 10,000 l. was given from Civil Contingencies, to be repaid out of the sum proposed to be voted. This is not only the strongest condemnation of the principle that would have permitted the payment for such a service, by the Paymaster, out of a general balance, but is a conclusive affirmance of the opposite and more correct principle, namely, that of an invariable adherence to the strict Parliamentary appropriation, carried into effect with the several sanctions prescribed by law.

Let this principle govern the Paymaster's issues throughout, and all irregularities, to be corrected by future "adjustments and rectifications," will cease.

APPENDIX.

No. I.

Exchequer, 31 July 1846.

My Lords,

I BEG to call your Lordships' attention to the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant of the 18th July, acted upon by your Lordships' letter of the 22d instant.

These documents introduce a new practice, which I think will be found inconsistent with the mode in which the public business has heretofore been transacted, and the public accounts kept, both at the Exchequer and the Bank of England; and which deprives this office of the power of seeing that sums granted for particular services are not exceeded.

The Royal Order and Warrant in question consolidate in one sum of 57,568 l. four separate grants, heretofore kept separate and distinct: they are as follows,—

Law Charges, paid by Treasury Solicitor - - - -	£. 21,000
Mint Prosecutions - - - - - - - -	10,600
Sheriffs' Expenses, Officers of Exchequer - - - -	12,600
Insolvent Debtors' Court - - - - - - -	13,368

These sums, amounting in the aggregate to 57,568 l., are applicable to four separate heads of expenditure, kept in this office and at the Bank under separate accounts. There are also four distinct accountants, your Lordships' solicitor, Mr. Maule; Mr. Shiel, as Master of the Mint; Mr. Sargent, as Paymaster of Civil Services; and Mr. Massey, the Chief Clerk of the Insolvent Court.

On some of these accounts balances still remain to the credit of the accountant. If that separate account be kept, it will be difficult and inconsistent to combine with it issues from the new account proposed to be opened for 57,568 l.

Besides these technical objections, your Lordships will observe that the control of this department ceases altogether in respect to the appropriation of this sum between these four several heads of service. Provided the total sum of 57,568 l. be not exceeded, the whole vote might be expended on any one of these heads and the three others left unprovided for; the sum intended for the Insolvent Court might be issued to your Lordships' solicitor; or the Mint might absorb what had been provided for the expenses of sheriffs.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

I therefore beg to represent to your Lordships, that both from the necessity of adhering to established practice, from the expediency of avoiding complex and confused accounts, and from the obvious duty of maintaining unchanged the constitutional control of the Exchequer, the more regular system should be in future pursued.

If your Lordships shall concur in these observations, the present period of the Session seems to me to afford the means of acting upon them in the case I have brought before you, and this without much difficulty, and in a legitimate manner. If in the Appropriation Act the four separate votes and heads of service are recited distinctly, and that, in the meanwhile, I receive your Lordships' authority to make the issues and keep the accounts in the accustomed manner, I conceive this will be sufficient to govern me.

I have, &c.
Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 5 August 1846.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having had before them your Lordship's letter, dated 31st ultimo, calling their attention to the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant of the 18th ultimo, in which are included in one sum of 57,568 l. four separate grants, heretofore kept separate and distinct, I am directed by their Lordships to state that they concur in the view which your Lordship has taken of the subject, and have given directions for the heads of expenditure referred to being stated separately in the Appropriation Act, till which time their Lordships request that you will make the issues and keep the accounts in the accustomed manner.

I am, &c.
C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

No. II.

Gentlemen, Exchequer, 24 August 1846.

I beg leave to call your attention to the Exchequer Account of the Paymaster-general, as to the mode in which the balance on his accounts is returned by you to this office, in your quarterly statement of "Balances of Public Accountants."

In the statements alluded to, one general balance is given on the Paymaster-general's accounts, kept at the Bank of England. By the 23rd section of the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, the balances on each head of service, according to credits granted by the Comptroller-general, are required to be stated in the accounts transmitted annually from this department to Parliament. I have therefore to request that in future you will give directions for the Exchequer Balances to be stated separately, so as to enable me effectually to comply with the provisions of the said Act.

I have, &c.
Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

The Governor and Deputy Governor,
Bank of England.

My Lord, Bank of England, 28 August 1846.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter of the instant (no date), suggesting certain alterations in the present mode of returning the Balances of the Exchequer Account of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general; and in reply, I am directed to state that instructions have been given to the proper officers of the Bank to make the future returns in question, in conformity with your Lordship's suggestion.

I have, &c.
W. Marshall,
Chief Cashier.

The Right Hon. the Lord Monteagle,
&c. &c. &c.

No. III.

Extract from the Comptroller-general's Draft Letter to the Treasury, dated 16th January 1849.

This Letter will be found at pages 532 and 533.

My

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 26 March 1849.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having made certain amendments in their Minute, dated the 22d December last, for the government of the office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general, I am commanded to transmit to your Lordship the accompanying copies of the revised Minute, and I am to request that you will cause the same to be substituted for the copies sent with the letter from this Board, dated the 22d December last, and the last-mentioned copies to be returned to this office.

I am, &c.
C. E. Trevelyan.

To the Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

No. IV.

Note to the Parliamentary Account, for the year ended 5th April 1847.

Note.—The total of these three sums is strictly accurate; but the apportionment between the departments of Army, Navy and Ordnance is now under investigation, and may be subject to future correction.

No. V.

Note to the Parliamentary Account, for the year ended 5th April 1848.

Note.—To the Annual Account of the 23d April 1847, the following note was subjoined, as explanatory of the issues for Army, Navy and Ordnance Services:—"The total of these "three sums is strictly accurate; but the apportionment between the Army, Navy an "Ordnance is now under investigation, and may be subject to future correction." By regulations made by the Comptroller-general, in conjunction with the Bank of England, the Paymaster-general's balances, which had been formerly given in one sum, are now separated under distinct heads: the corrections alluded to in the note above recited have been carried into effect, and the probability of any similar error in future has been avoided. It is to be understood, however, that no inaccuracy whatever had taken place in the issues, or in the authority under which they were made, but only in the mode in which these issues were recorded.

No. VI.

Morning Sitting, Tuesday, 24 July 1849.

Consolidated Fund Bill.

Mr. Hume called the attention of the Committee to the irregularity of the vote of 702,523 l., under the head of "Law and Justice."

Sir George Grey replied, that he supposed it arose from the recommendation of the Committee on the Miscellaneous Estimates.

Mr. Vernon Smith and Mr. Henley, on the part of the Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, did not acquiesce in the view taken by Sir George Grey.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer promised he would re-arrange the vote next year, and would place the different classes of expenditure under distinct heads, if the House would pass the Bill in its present form.

No. VII.

Prisons and Convict Services, &c.

Anno 1849.

Extract from Estimates for 1849.

	£.	s.	d.
Superintendence of Prisons - - -	14,331	–	–
Prison and Convict Establishments -	258,993	11	2
Maintenance of Prisoners - -	127,181	7	6
Expenses of Transportation - -	72,112	13	3
Convict Establishments in the Colonies	229,904	15	9
	£. 702,523	7	8

Taken in one vote. Ret. Ho. of Comm., 4th June 1849, and Approp. Act, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 98.

Anno 1850.

Extract from Estimates for 1850.

	£.	s.	d.
Superintendence of Prisons - -	14,550	–	–
Prisons and Convict Establishments	237,224	–	–
Maintenance of Prisoners - -	135,848	–	–
Expenses of Transportation - -	119,230	–	–
Convict Establishments in the Colonies	200,147	–	–
	£. 706,999	–	–

Voted separately. Approp. Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 107.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

No. VIII.

BANK BALANCES of Exchequer Credits, on the 5th January 1854.

	£.	s.	d.
Agent-general for Crown Colonies, G. Baillie, Esq.	2,215	19	–
Inclosure Commissioners' Drainage	24,630	–	–
Chief Clerk of the Insolvent Debtors' Court	386	7	3
Master of the Mint—Bullion, &c.	51,356	16	3
,, Expenses	3,302	4	9
Comptroller of the Stationery Office	2,722	1	4
	£. 84,613	8	7

(Examined) T. Kent, Cashier.

No. IX.

Exchequer Bills (part of) £.17,742,500; Supply, anno 1853, per Act 16 Vict., c. 25, were issued for the following Services, viz.—

To the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, to be placed to the Account of the Paymaster-general.

	1853:	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Army Services	October - 17	100,000 – –
	,, - 24	55,000 – –
	,, - 24	95,000 – –
	November - 26	350,000 – –
	December - 10	400,000 – –
			1,000,000 – –
Navy Services	October - 17	150,000 – –
	,, - 24	140,000 – –
	November - 26	240,000 – –
	December - 10	500,000 – –
			1,030,000 – –
Ordnance Service	October - 17	50,000 – –
	,, - 24	75,000 – –
	November - 26	230,000 – –
	December - 10	185,000 – –
			540,000 – –
New Houses of Parliament	October - 24	– – –	15,000 – –
Consuls Abroad	,, - 24	20,000 – –
,, ,,	December - 10	5,000 – –
			25,000 – –
Harbours of Refuge	November - 26	– – –	90,000 – –
Holyhead Harbour, &c.	,, - 26	– – –	40,000 – –
County Rates	,, - 26	– – –	50,000 – –
Kafir War	December - 10	– – –	200,000 – –
Prisons and Convict Establishments	,, - 10	– – –	10,000 – –
Transportation of Convicts	,, - 10	– – –	5,000 – –
Buildings—British Museum	,, - 10	– – –	6,000 – –
Superannuations, &c.	,, - 10	– – –	30,000 – –
Salaries—Two Houses of Parliament	,, - 10	– – –	12,000 – –
,, Treasury	,, - 10	10,000 – –
,, ,,	,, - 30	600 – –
			10,600 – –
,, Home Office	December - 10	– – –	6,000 – –
,, Foreign ditto	,, - 10	– – –	12,000 – –
,, Colonial ditto	,, - 10	– – –	10,000 – –
,, Privy Council ditto	,, - 10	– – –	15,000 – –
,, Poor Law Commissioners	,, - 10	– – –	10,000 – –
,, Paymaster-general's Office	,, - 10	– – –	5,900 – –
,, Office of Woods, &c.	,, - 10	– – –	5,500 – –
		£.	3,128,000 – –

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

No. X.

Issues from Consolidated Fund.

Consolidated Fund, Quarterly Charges.	Date of Treasury Warrant.	Amount of Treasury Warrant.	Date of Comptroller-General's Credits.	Amount of Comptroller-General's Credits.
		£. s. d.		£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Annuities and Pensions - - -	11 Oct. 1851	82,568 19 2	Oct. 13	20,000 – –
			„ 20	40,000 – –
			„ 31	22,568 19 2
					82,568 19 2
„ - - -	6 April 1852	77,004 1 4	April 19	Issued in full -	77,004 1 4
„ - - -	6 July „	77,562 19 10	July 16	Issued in full -	77,562 19 10
„ - - -	6 Jan. 1853	76,701 11 2	Jan. 13	50,000 – –
			„ 17	26,701 11 2
					76,701 11 2
„ - - -	6 April „	77,750 17 8	April 16	40,000 – –
			„ 21	37,750 17 8
					77,750 17 8
„ - - -	6 July „	77,530 6 5	July 16	25,000 – –
			„ 18	52,530 6 5
					77,530 6 5
„ - - -	11 Oct. „	77,604 18 2	Oct. 15	50,000 – –
			Nov. 9	27,604 18 2
					77,604 18 2
Salaries and Allowances - -	6 April 1852	47,888 6 –	April 20	First Issue -	43,088 6 –
„ - - -	6 July „	52,991 5 5	July 19	- „ -	45,162 3 7
„ - - -	6 Jan. 1853	44,902 17 1	Jan. 13	- „ -	39,052 17 1
„ - - -	6 April „	45,652 19 5	April 18	- „ -	40,752 19 5
„ - - -	6 July „	49,476 18 10	July 19	- „ -	41,547 17 –
„ - - -	11 Oct. „	49,062 16 5	Nov. 9	- „ -	44,002 16 5
Courts of Justice - - - -	6 April 1852	96,227 – –	April 28	50,000 – –
			May 6	45,200 8 8
			„ 24	1,026 11 4
					96,227 – –
„ - - -	6 July „	65,397 15 5	July 19	Issued in full -	65,397 15 5
„ - - -	6 Jan. 1853	70,167 9 7	Jan. 14	50,000 – –
			„ 29	15,000 – –
			March 21	5,029 10 11
					70,029 10 11
„ - - -	6 April „	103,989 17 1	April 18	60,000 – –
			May 7	43,989 17 1
					103,989 17 1
„ - - -	6 July „	72,463 17 8	July 18	Issued in full -	72,463 17 8
„ - - -	11 Oct. „	118,362 10 8	Nov. 8	- - -	117,947 4 –
Diplomatic Services - - -	6 April 1852	41,675 10 –	May 6	6,675 10 –
			„ 20	32,252 19 1
					38,928 9 1
„ - - -	6 July „	41,610 6 4	July 19	6,610 6 4
			Aug. 12	31,480 13 7
					38,090 19 11
„ - - -	6 April 1853	40,741 – –	April 18	5,741 – –
			„ 30	31,494 12 8
					37,235 12 8
„ - - -	6 July „	40,877 18 11	July 19	5,877 18 11
			Aug. 1	30,000 – –
			„ 4	2,053 13 1
					37,931 12 –
„ - - -	11 Oct. „	40,333 10 –	Nov. 9	5,3[illegible]
			„ 14	31,755 2 9
					37,089 2 9

No. XI.

CLAUSE

To be proposed on Third Reading by the Lord Monteagle of Brandon, 11 August 1848—"Lords' Journals," vol. lxxx., p. 782.

"Provided always, and be it further declared and enacted, that nothing contained in "this Act, or in an Act passed in the fifth and sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty "King William the Fourth, intituled, an Act for consolidating the offices of Paymaster-"general, Paymaster and Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, Treasurer of the Navy, Treasurer "of the Ordnance, shall be deemed, construed, or applied so as to permit in any manner "the issue or payment of any sum or sums of money appropriated under the annual Acts

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

"for the appropriation of the supplies granted to Her Majesty, or charged on the Consolidated Fund for specific purposes, or issuable and applicable under any Act of Ways and Means, to any uses or purposes other than those to which they are made specially applicable and to which they are appropriated as aforesaid." After short debate, clause, by leave of the House, was withdrawn.

No. XII.

My Lord, Exchequer, 9 May 1848.

In compliance with your Lordship's directions, I beg to report upon the circumstances respecting the errors that have arisen in the balances on the Paymaster-general's Account at the Bank of England.

On the 10th October 1846, by a new arrangement, the general Balance returned by the Bank of England was divided under the respective heads of Services of Army, Navy and Ordnance; these were found to differ with the Exchequer Balances. Upon communicating with the Paymaster-general's Office, it was ascertained how these errors had arisen. I examined the books of the Paymaster-general, with Mr. Paterson the book-keeper, and compared the entries with the vouchers returned to that office from the Bank of England. The annexed statement shows the result of that investigation.

I have, &c.
Geo. Frederick,
Accountant.

The Right Hon. Lord Monteagle,
&c. &c. &c.

	To be added to Army Exchequer Balance; or to be deducted from Army Balance.	To be added to Navy Exchequer Balance; or to be deducted from Navy Balance.	To be added to Ordnance Exchequer Balance; or to be deducted from Ordnance Balance.
	£.	£.	£.
Pay.-Gen.'s Error 1842, Aug. 29.—Write off marked Navy instead of Army	15,000	15,000	—
„ „ Dec. 12.—Write off marked Navy instead of Army	10,000	10,000	—
Bank Error - 1843, Jan. 20.—Returned by Bank to Exchequer as Navy in place of Ordnance - -	- - -	1,000	1,000
Pay.-Gen.'s Error 1844, Feb. 21.—Write off marked Navy instead of Ordnance - - - - - -	- - -	5,000	5,000
„ 1845, April 17.—Write off marked Navy in place of Army - - - - - -	22,000	22,000	—
Exchequer Error „ May 13.—Carried to account by Exchequer as Navy in place of Army - -	10,000	10,000	—
Bank Error - „ June 13.—Returned by Bank as Army in place of Navy - - - - -	12,000	12,000	—
„ „ „ 28.—Returned by Bank as Army in place of Navy - - - - -	38,000	38,000	—
Pay.-Gen.'s Error „ „ 30.—Write off marked Navy in place of Army - - - - -	12,000	12,000	—
„ „ Nov. 3.—Write off marked Army in place of Ordnance - - - - -	10,000	- - -	10,000
„ 1846, May 14.—Write off marked Navy in place of Army - - - - - -	18,000	18,000	—
Bank Error - „ June 18.—Returned by the Bank as Navy in place of Army - - - - -	13,000	13,000	—
To be added - - - -	60,000	106,000	—
To be deducted - - -	100,000	50,000	16,000
Excesses to be added - - -	- - - -	56,000	—
To be deducted - - - -	40,000	- - -	16,000
Exchequer Balances on the 10th October 1846, as resulting from the return of Payments made by the Bank of England to the Exchequer, with the exception of the above error, on the part of the Exchequer on 13th May 1845 - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	490,000	591,000	176,000
Correct Balances of the Paymaster-general's and Exchequer Accounts on the 10th October 1846, after rectifying the above errors - - - -	450,000	647,000	160,000

Those Sums underlined to be deducted.

Comptroller-General's Minute.

Read Mr. Frederick's Report, of 9 May 1848.

Whilst the Comptroller-general regrets that any inaccuracies should have crept into the accounts from any cause whatever, it is yet satisfactory to him that it did not arise from any part of the system adopted in his Department, but from the mode of consolidating the Paymaster-general's accounts at the Bank of England, since corrected by the Comptroller-general's interposition on the 24th August 1846; and that even in relation to these errors of detail, detail, not involving the totals of the sums issued, out of twelve cases between 1842 and 1846, only one case can be traced to the Exchequer.

Exchequer Memorandum, 1854.

The Comptroller-general adverts to the note appended to the annual Exchequer Parliamentary Accounts for 1847 and 1848, in which this matter is noted and referred to.

Let Mr. Frederick make the necessary entries in the books to record these errors and their correction: taking care, however, that no interlineation or erasure is allowed in the accounts, and that such new entries be made in red ink.

Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

REMARKS by Mr. Anderson on Lord Monteagle's MEMORANDUM on the EXCHEQUER.

Improvements introduced since 1830.

THERE is probably no period of equal duration in the history of this country, in which such solid progress has been made in promoting the objects of constitutional control and legal appropriation of the public money, and in simplifying the system of public accounts, and in which a more durable foundation has been laid for further progressive improvement, than that which has elapsed since the accession of Lord Grey's Government in 1830. Prior to that date, the principles of appropriation were imperfectly understood, and were still more imperfectly acted on; and Parliament itself, by not insisting on the production of accounts of actual expenditure, showing the appropriation of the grants, seemed indifferent to a rigid adherence to the provisions of the Appropriation Act. The results of this laxity showed themselves in the state of the public accounts. In none of the large departments of expenditure were satisfactory accounts kept, showing the appropriation of the annual grants of Parliament; and the inevitable consequences were defective estimates, and errors of appropriation. The first practical steps taken to establish the authority of Parliament originated in the Naval Department in 1831, when Sir James Graham was First Lord of the Admiralty. He began by reforming the system of accounts, being satisfied that strict appropriation was unattainable without true accounts. He then revised the classification of the naval expenditure, and framed the Naval Estimates in accordance therewith. To secure a due appropriation of the votes for the navy to the particular branches of the service for which they had been granted, he introduced clauses in an Act for the Consolidation of the Civil Departments of the Navy, by which the Lords of the Admiralty were required to prepare an annual account of the naval expenditure, compared with the grants under each of the votes of the Navy Estimates; and, in order to fix their responsibility to Parliament for the legal application of the monies granted for the naval service, it was enacted, that the account should be examined, with the vouchers, by an independent authority, the Audit Board, and that this account, with the report of examination, should be laid before Parliament.

Commenced in the Admiralty.

Extended to Army, Commissariat and Ordnance.

After these measures had been fully tested for several years in the Naval Department, and the success of the naval system of account and control had been clearly established, similar steps were taken with the accounts and votes of the Army, and at a subsequent period with those of the Commissariat and Ordnance Departments; and an Act was passed in 1846, under which the annual accounts of those departments have been examined and certified by the Audit Board, and laid before Parliament.

Regulation of Commissariat Chest Account.

There still remained, however, for investigation and revision, a very intricate and important account; viz., that for "Army Extraordinaries," which is referred to in the Exchequer Memorandum (p. 540), as having formerly rendered "the votes of Parliament, and the bills for appropriating the supplies, ridiculous and nugatory." To organise the details of this account, which embraced public services of every description, and current accounts with numerous public departments, for receipts, payments and advances on their account in all the British Colonies, was an undertaking of considerable difficulty. The Army Extraordinaries had, however, in former times, been the cover for so much abuse, had been the subject of so much suspicion in Parliament, and were still the cause of so greatly unsettling the Paymaster-general's balances, that the Treasury determined to grapple with the difficulty; it was, moreover, so essential to the completion of the system of control and audit in progress, that the transactions of the Military Chests should be thoroughly sifted, and the results annually submitted to Parliament in a comprehensive and intelligible account, which should be above suspicion, that the task of reducing them to order was assigned to the Audit Board itself. The very successful manner in which this essential part of the general scheme of Naval and Military Account and Audit has been advanced to completion is shown in a Return annually submitted to Parliament under the title of the "Commissariat Chest Account."

Result of these improvements.

The result, therefore, of all these practical reforms is, that in the period referred to, the whole naval and military expenditure of the country has been brought under strict and uniform rules of appropriation and account, and that statements certified by an independent Board have been annually laid on the table of the House of Commons, showing in aggregate and in detail the appropriation of the monies granted for those services. With this unimpeachable evidence in existence, printed and promulgated every Session, no reasonable doubt can be entertained that the appropriation of the large grants annually made for those services has been strictly legal and constitutional. A contrary opinion cannot be advanced, without impugning the administration of the Lords of the Admiralty, the Secretary-at-War, and the Board of Ordnance, and without questioning the truth of the certificates of the Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

Audit Board. Nor can any charge be fairly directed against the Treasury and the Pay Office, because the Treasury has little direct control over those large portions of the public expenditure, the Pay Office none. Any charge of misappropriation and violation of the law could only apply to the Naval and Military Departments, because they alone have control over and are responsible for the detailed application of the sums granted to them.

As the greater part of the Exchequer Memorandum refers, not to the temporary mixing of Exchequer credits in a common cash balance (which is merely a measure of public security and economy, and which will be commented on in the sequel), but to the actual misappropriation of the public money, by expending it for services "not voted or addressed for in Parliament," and as in the memorandum the danger of these irregularities is fixed upon the Treasury and the Pay Office, it becomes necessary to show how far the power as well as the temptation to misapply the votes exists in those departments.

Authority for Army issues.

The principal votes in supply are for naval and military services. 1st. The monies granted for Army and Militia services are under the control of the Secretary-at-War. Parliament grants the money to the Crown, and a Royal order directs the Paymaster-general to pay upon warrants signed by the Secretary-at-War within the limits of the respective grants. The Treasury has no power to draw upon these grants, and the best security which the public has against the misapplication of them by the Paymaster-general under the directions of the Treasury, is that the Audit Board would disallow, in his accounts, any payment made upon an order not drawn in conformity with the law.

Authority for Naval issues.

2dly. Again, the whole of the votes for naval services are expended upon orders issued from the Naval Department. An order from the Treasury to pay out of a naval vote would be contrary to Act of Parliament, and would not be complied with by the Paymaster-general, or, if complied with, would be disallowed in his accounts by the Audit Board.

Authority for Ordnance issues.

3dly. The Ordnance votes are paid away upon orders emanating from the Master-general and Board under the authority of their patent. A Treasury authority to pay out of an Ordnance vote would not therefore be a valid one in the Paymaster-general's accounts, and would be rejected by the auditors accordingly.

Commissariat Votes.

There is one service, however, forming part of the military expenditure, which is conducted by officers placed under the control of the Treasury, namely, the Commissariat Branch. But a closer examination of this service will show how limited is the power which it places in the hands of the Treasury. The purchases of provisions, forage, fuel and light, and the expense of transport, are regulated by numbers, and by the movement of troops. The military authorities are, therefore, in reality, responsible for incurring the expenditure, and the duty of the Treasury is to provide, pay, and, as far as possible, to control; no power of misappropriation exists. The troops in the Colonies must be victualled, forage and transport must be provided, and no larger sum is voted than is absolutely necessary for these objects. Moreover, the Commissaries' cash and store accounts are rendered direct to the Audit Board, by whom the classified returns of payments are compiled, upon which the accounts of nearly the whole of that expenditure are prepared, so that any introduction of an improper charge is impracticable.*

Miscellaneous Votes.

An examination of the votes for miscellaneous civil services will prove that the detailed application of those grants by the Treasury is comparatively limited.

Public Works, &c.

The first class relates to public works and buildings. The scale of expenditure to be submitted to Parliament is indeed proposed under the responsibility of the Treasury, but the votes themselves are expended under the direction of the departments charged with the duty of carrying on the works. The responsibility for the proper execution of the works and for keeping the expenditure within the limits of the Parliamentary grants rests with those departments, and the duty of the Treasury is to guard against their incurring liabilities in excess of those grants.

Salaries of Public Departments.

The second class relates to the salaries of the Houses of Parliament and of various public departments. There is no margin in these votes for any misappropriation; each department will take care to have its quota, and there is no danger that one department will go unpaid to provide the means of paying another a larger sum than Parliament has voted for it.

Law and Justice.

The third class relates to "Law and Justice." The expenses of Government prisons and convict hulks, of transportation, conveyance of prisoners, law charges, and the other expenses included in this division of the estimates, are not incurred by the Treasury; by far the greater portion of these expenses is incurred under the direction of the Secretaries of State for the Home Department and for Foreign Affairs, and of the directors of convict prisons; the remaining expenses in these estimates are examined before payment at the Treasury. The Lords of the Treasury control this branch of expenditure as far as possible; but as the expenses are incurred under the direction and responsibility of other departments, and money must be provided to meet their demands to the full extent of the grants, the Treasury would only embarrass themselves by any act of misappropriation which would deprive them of the means of meeting those demands.

Education, Science and Art.

The fourth division of the Miscellaneous Estimates relates to "Education, Science and Art." These votes are in like manner under the direction of separate departments, the duty of the Treasury being to provide funds or authorise payments on the requisitions of such departments. The Committee of Council on Education, the Board of Trade, the Trustees of the British Museum, and the Board of Works, are intrusted with the application of their respective proportions of these grants, subject to the authority of the Treasury as to the the issue of money. The duty of the Treasury is to keep each department within the limits of its grants; and the separate departments having a specific credit appropriated to their use by Parliament, form thus a check on the Treasury. Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

* Note.—The Commissariat was transferred to the War Department by the Treasury Minute, dated the 22d December 1854, and the expenditure for this service is consequently no longer under the immediate direction of the Treasury.

The fifth division of the Miscellaneous Estimates embraces "Colonial and Consular Services." The Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs and for the Colonies, in conjunction with the Treasury, control these expenses. There is no opportunity of misappropriating these votes, as they provide chiefly for fixed establishments subject to little variation from year to year, the salaries and expenses of which must be paid when the bills are presented Colonial and Consular Services.

The sixth class of the Miscellaneous Estimates relates to "Superannuations and Charities." There is no fluctuation in charges of this description; the money must be provided as the payments become due, and no margin is left for payments out of these votes for other services not voted by Parliament. Superannuations, &c.

The remaining grants of the Miscellaneous Estimates are for special and temporary objects, and the preceding remarks apply equally to these votes. Special and temporary objects.

The vote for Civil Contingencies is expended under the responsibility and directions of the Treasury, and Parliament exercises its control over the Treasury, by requiring that a detailed account of the expenditure of that vote in the past year shall be submitted to the House of Commons before the vote for the succeeding year is granted. Civil Contingencies.

It will be seen by the preceding description of the votes in supply how greatly the power of the Treasury to misappropriate the annual grants of Parliament has been magnified in the Exchequer Memorandum; moreover, the real position and functions of the Treasury in reference to the appropriation of the public money have been altogether overlooked. No department is so interested in maintaining intact the settlement of the annual charges as sanctioned by Parliament, and in avoiding the embarrassments which a departure from that settlement is calculated to occasion, as the Treasury, which has to provide the ways and means. The practical control over the issue of the grants rests actually with the Treasury, and only nominally with the Exchequer; if certain forms (which are all within the control of Government) are correctly complied with, the Exchequer cannot refuse the issues. It has been already shown that the detailed application of the votes is intrusted to the several executive departments; and the power of misapplication is greatest where that trust resides. The authority of the Treasury is exerted to control that power; but even the control of the Treasury is insufficient to provide perfect security against the votes being exceeded; Parliament has therefore supplied an additional check, not through the Exchequer, but through the Audit Board. This important check, so far as it has been applied to the Naval and Military Departments, has been already referred to. Real position and functions of the Treasury overlooked

It might be inferred also, from the remarks in the Exchequer Memorandum, that the Paymaster-general had strong inducements to misappropriate (in a Parliamentary sense) the funds placed in his hands for public disbursements. The whole tenor of the Memorandum shows that the most complete misapprehension exists as to the authorities and checks by which the Paymaster-general is governed in making his payments. The Comptroller-general appears to imagine that the Treasury has supreme authority over the Paymaster-general's payments, and that Acts of Parliament, Royal Warrants, the authority of the departments intrusted with the administration of the different branches of the public service, may all be set aside to further any misapplication which the Treasury may think fit to order. Nothing can be more incorrect than such a supposition; the authority of the Treasury, as already shown, is very limited; it cannot reach the payments for Army, Navy, Ordnance, and many other services. The power of the Pay-office to misappropriate the grants is still more limited; no payment can be made except upon an order legally issued, and the Naval and Military Departments are furnished periodically with returns showing the monies drawn from their grants and the application of the same; they fix, moreover, the amount of the monthly memorials upon which the Exchequer issues are based, and the whole of the accounts and vouchers are transmitted monthly to the Audit Office. Moreover, what motive could the Paymaster-general have to misappropriate the grants of Parliament? He is not responsible for the application of any portion of those grants; his duty is simply to pay on the orders of the several departments legally drawn within the limits of their respective grants, and he has neither the power nor even a reasonable motive to lend himself to any "confederacy between two independent functionaries" (a very improbable occurrence) for the purpose of misappropriating the grants. Misapprehension as to the powers of the Treasury and Pay Office.

The remarks made in the Exchequer Memorandum upon the mode of regulating the Paymaster-general's payments and balances, betray so complete a misunderstanding of the subject that it is necessary to describe what the practice is. Regulation of the Paymaster-general's payments and balances.

The first step taken after the votes have been passed, is to open accounts in the Paymaster-general's books assigning to each service the specific credit which Parliament has granted for it; and so far as the Paymaster-general has the means of enforcing the check, he takes care that no payment is made in excess of that Parliamentary credit. Parliamentary Credits.

As a measure indispensably necessary for the public security and for economy, the Paymaster-general is required to keep his balances as low as the current demands of the public service will permit. As a general rule, therefore, his requisitions on the Treasury are made from day to day, and no larger sum is demanded than the amount estimated to be required for the payments of the day. The amount of these requisitions is regulated by the claims which are expected to be presented for payment; the money, therefore, is and must be drawn out on estimate. The services coming in course of payment cannot be accurately ascertained beforehand; bills at sight, and "immediate" orders from the several departments, are presented for payment which it is impossible to foresee, and for which, consequently, no Exchequer credits can have been drawn. On the other hand, expected His demands are limited to the sums required for his daily payments.

Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

claims may have been included in the daily estimate which are not presented for payment, thus leaving on other heads a surplus of credits. The course adopted in such cases is this: the services for which no cash has been provided in the daily estimate are paid out of the general balance, provided they do not exceed the balance of Parliamentary credits voted for them, and in the next estimate the cash for them is drawn out of the balance of the vote in the Exchequer. But, according to the views expressed in the Exchequer Memorandum, the services for which no Exchequer credits have been granted ought to be rejected, however large the credits for those services in the Exchequer and the surplus of available cash in the Paymaster-general's hands for other services may be: the bills should be dishonoured, and the other claims not provided for in the daily estimate should be delayed, at whatever risk, loss, or inconvenience to the public service. It is evident that such restrictions could never be carried out in practice.

Exchequer control impracticable.

But, to show the impracticability of establishing an Exchequer control by means of specific credits, a few practical examples will suffice.

Payments for public services in the Colonies.

1st. The fund formerly known as "Army Extraordinaries," but which is now called the Commissariat Chest Fund, has been already noticed. This is the banking fund which the Government uses exclusively for carrying on the public service abroad and in the Colonies. It embraces Army, Navy, Ordnance, Colonial, Civil, Convict and a variety of other services; in short, every pecuniary transaction between the mother country and the colonies, conducted through the agency of the Government, appears in the Commissariat Chest Account. The chests in the colonies contain, as a rule, a reserve of cash equal to two months' expenditure, unless special circumstances should justify a departure from the rule. They are supplied with funds by bills drawn on the Treasury; by bills drawn on the government of India; by consignments of specie from England; by revenue of Customs and Post-office, paid in for remittance; by various sums received for remittance to England on account of Army, Navy, and Ordnance services; by proceeds of the sale of captured slave-vessels, and various other sums to be repaid in England. On the other hand, sums are paid to the Paymaster-general in England for remittance through the Commissariat Chest account to the Colonies. Of all these sources of receipt, the bills drawn on the Treasury and accepted payable on the Paymaster-general's account form the largest item, amounting annually to upwards of 2,000,000 l. sterling, and to a much larger sum in times of war or insurrection. It must be evident, from the preceding description, that these bills, which are only the net sums required, after taking into account a great variety of pecuniary transactions, cannot be brought under the Exchequer rules of specific appropriation, and that there is no alternative but to charge them upon the general funds of one service, till accounts and vouchers are rendered to the auditors upon which the necessary adjustments between the votes for the various public services can be made. In the Treasury Minute of the 26th September 1834, for the regulation of the Exchequer, provision is made for the payment of these bills as follows:—

"For the purpose of enabling the Paymaster-general to make provision at the Bank for the payment of such bills as shall be drawn upon and accepted by this Board, my Lords propose that lists should be furnished to him from week to week, during the month, of the bills becoming due in the course of the month, and that he should, upon such lists, give authority to the Bank to pay such bills out of the credits which have been granted to him for Army services."

There does not exist in the whole range of the public services paid by the Paymaster-general a more complete mixture of services, voted and not voted, than these bills contain; and yet the rule laid down in the Minute for the regulation of the Exchequer Office is, that they shall be paid out of credits granted for Army services; in other words, advances for Navy, Ordnance, Civil, Colonial, Convict, and other expenses, are made payable out of Army credits.

Remittances of specie.

Again, when specie is sent abroad for the supply of the Commissariat chests, it is clear that no specific appropriation of it can be made by anticipation. Such payments must follow the rule laid down for the payment of Treasury bills.

It should, however, be explained, that the necessity for resorting to the Army grants for the payment of the Treasury bills and other advances on account of the Commissariat chests, has been very much lessened by the more rapid recovery of advances which has taken place since the Commissariat Chest Account has been placed on a proper footing, under the superintendence of the Audit Board; but still, Exchequer control cannot exist in regard to all voted services which are defrayed from the Commissariat chests in the colonies.

Imprests.

2d. There is a class of payments made by the Paymaster-general, numbering many thousands in the year, and amounting to upwards of 3,000,000 l. annually, called "Imprests." These are advances to public accountants, to carry on Navy and Ordnance services; the specific appropriation of these advances, according to the votes to which they relate, cannot be ascertained before the expenditure takes place; this being the case, it is beyond the power of the Exchequer to prevent an excess upon any one of the Navy and Ordnance votes.

Transfers.

3d. There is another class of transactions which never come under the review of the Exchequer, and which are adjusted in a manner eminently conducive to simplicity and security, but inconsistent with the specialty of credits insisted on in the Exchequer Memorandum. It is the practice of one department to execute services for another, where the public convenience and economy render such a course desirable. Thus, if the Ordnance require a hoy or lighter to be built and equipped, the Admiralty execute the service for them, and pay for it in materials, wages, and stores, out of Naval monies; and at a subsequent quent period the Ordnance repay the amount. The Ordnance department, on the other hand, executes various services for the Navy, which are settled in like manner. The War Office advances monies on account of pensions paid through staff officers of pensioners for other departments, and reimbursement is made at a subsequent date. These mutual services between departments average about 5,000,000*l.* annually, including the transactions of the Commissariat Chests: the following is a statement of such advances in the year 1852–53:—

Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

Transfers.

SERVICES.	Received from other Services.			Paid to other Services.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Army - - - -	571,204	6	2	1,370,233	2	2
Commissariat Votes - -	373,146	6	1	844,739	17	5
Commissariat Chest - -	2,897,357	5	8	810,357	19	8
Navy - - - -	460,823	12	3	505,769	7	4
Ordnance - - -	305,319	7	–	445,103	8	1
Civil Services - - -	186,495	13	4	818,142	15	10
£.	4,794,346	10	6	4,794,346	10	6

These transactions are adjusted entirely by transfers of account in the books of the Paymaster-general, without any transfer of money whatever at the Bank of England. Thus, if the Navy has to pay 10,000*l.* to the Ordnance, and the Ordnance has to pay a like sum to the Navy, the transaction is settled without any Exchequer credit. But here again it is necessary to refer to the minute of September 1834, for the regulation of the Office of the Receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer. It would appear by the terms of that minute that the Board of Ordnance were apprehensive that the rules prescribed for giving effect to the provisions of the Exchequer Act might not permit temporary advances out of Ordnance monies for services to be executed on account of other departments; and this opinion is now repeated in substance in the Comptroller-general's memorandum. But the Minute of September 1834 overruled the apprehensions of the Ordnance Board. The terms of the Minute are as follows:—

"With respect to that part of the communication from the Ordnance which relates to the necessity of making provision hereafter for placing funds at the disposal of that Board, to enable them to pay for such services as they may be required to perform for other departments of the Government, my Lords desire that it may be pointed out to the Master-general and Board that there is nothing in the Act to deprive that department of the means they now possess of making such payments; and that my Lords consider that it would occasion great complexity in the accounts of the Ordnance, and in the accounts of the other departments, if advances for all such services should be made hereafter on the estimate of a sum that may probably be required, instead of repaying, as at present, the amount actually disbursed, seeing that the exact amount that will be required cannot be known until the service has been performed. My Lords are of opinion, therefore, that the existing arrangements in that respect should be continued, and will take care that all such services shall be paid for by each department, as soon as the Ordnance shall be able to state what the amount of the expenditure has actually been."

According to this Minute, there is nothing in the Exchequer Act to deprive the Ordnance of the means they possess of making payments for Navy, Army, Colonial, Convict, or any other service, out of Exchequer credits granted for Ordnance services. It is perfectly clear that this Minute, which has been acted upon ever since 1834, when the Exchequer was re-organised without a question being raised upon it, is directly opposed to the opinions now put forth in the Exchequer Memorandum. At the same time, no person who has any practical knowledge of public business can entertain a doubt that the Minute takes the sound, common-sense view of the proper mode of making these temporary advances.

Payments through Collectors of the Revenue.

4th. The Paymaster-general makes numerous payments for noneffective services through the collectors of the revenue. The Admiralty and War Office also issue orders payable in like manner. These payments are all made, vouched, and examined before any Exchequer credit is applied for to meet them. The services are paid all over the country, out of local revenue collected, before the money reaches the Exchequer, and the vouchers are used as a form of remittance. This mode of applying the revenue collected even before it reaches the Exchequer, and defraying voted services for which the Comptroller-general's warrant has not been issued, nor even applied for, may appear to be subversive of that constitutional control which it is the object of the Exchequer Memorandum to enforce; and yet the course adopted is ordered by various Acts of Parliament; and penalties are enacted against any collector, who, having funds in his hands, shall refuse to make such payments. In such arrangements, the practical requirements of the public service have been studied, and useless forms and nominal checks have been very properly set aside.

5th. In

Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

Cash Account to be exhausted before drawing on Exchequer credits.

5th. In the Treasury Minute of September 1834 for the regulation of the Exchequer, which has been already referred to, as well as in the Minutes for the regulation of the Pay Office, it is provided, that when any balances may be at the cash account of the Paymaster-general at the Bank of England, they shall be exhausted in making payments before any drafts are drawn on the Exchequer account. These cash balances are frequently very large, and they are exhausted in conformity with the Minutes referred to; they never come within the cognizance of the Exchequer; and if misappropriation were the object of those to whom the public balances are entrusted, they would afford the means of misapplication without clashing with Exchequer control. These cash balances, however, are subjected by the Paymaster-general to an appropriation as distinct as Exchequer credits; and although the regulation which requires that they shall be exhausted before drawing upon the Exchequer, is a very proper one, it is nevertheless at variance with the principles laid down in the Exchequer Memorandum; and moreover, the Exchequer cannot control the appropriation of public money which never passes through the Exchequer accounts, and consequently these accounts can never agree with those of the Paymaster-general and of the Bank of England.

Votes of Credit.

6th. It has been the practice of Parliament, since the discontinuance of the annual votes for "Army Extraordinaries," to provide for the extraordinary expenditure occasioned by war or insurrection, by special votes of credit. A large portion of the war expenses is covered by the separate estimates of the war departments; thus the expenses which can be regularly estimated, such as the pay of additional troops or seamen, increased supplies of provisions, navy and ordnance stores, are included in the ordinary estimates: but there are numerous expenses arising out of active operations during war or insurrection, which cannot be estimated with sufficient accuracy to enable the Government to propose to Parliament a specific appropriation of the provision demanded for them. During the two last Kaffir wars these extraordinary expenses were provided for by votes taken "to defray the expenses beyond the ordinary grants for Army, Commissariat, Navy, and Ordnance services occasioned by the Kaffir war."

Under this arrangement the expenditure, ordinary and extraordinary, is accounted for by the separate departments under the several heads of service to which it relates; and if the extraordinary expenditure occasions an excess upon any of the ordinary votes of the department, the sanction of the Treasury is first obtained, under the provisions of the Appropriation Act, to apply in reduction of such excesses any savings which may have arisen upon other votes of the ordinary estimate of the same department, and the net excess of expenditure upon the total estimate of the department for the year, is made good out of the vote of credit; this net sum, however, must not exceed the amount of expenditure, which can be shown to have arisen from the extraordinary service for which the vote of credit has been granted. All this can only be done upon the final settlement of the accounts when received from abroad, many months after the termination of the year. But the question suggested by this explanation of the nature of votes of credit is, how does this system harmonise with Exchequer control, as defined in the Exchequer Memorandum? Parliament has made a general provision to cover not only expenditure in excess of the separate votes of the different departments, but an excess upon the aggregate of the votes; and this provision is not apportioned to army, navy or ordnance, nor in many cases to distinct years; it is general for the naval and military departments, and is intended to cover, not every excess upon the votes of those departments, but such excesses only as may be occasioned by the events contemplated by the vote of credit. It is clear that the strict appropriation of such votes, as well as of the votes for ordinary services, in aid of which they are granted, can only be secured by an audit of accounts and vouchers after payment, and that the Exchequer can render no assistance whatever in controlling the appropriation of them.

Votes are limited to the service of the year.

7th. The votes of Parliament are granted not only for distinct services but for distinct periods. Thus misappropriation may take place, either by applying the money voted for one service to defray the charge for a different service, or by appropriating the surplus of a particular service for one year to the same service for a subsequent year.

In regulating the supplies of money to the Paymaster-general for the public payments, the Treasury and the Exchequer issue the grants of different years in regular succession, that is, they usually exhaust the grants of one year before they issue upon those of the succeeding year. Any other course would lead to confusion and to unnecessary complexity of account. But as regards Exchequer control and the value of Exchequer accounts, the effect is this:—The navy, for instance, will draw the whole of their grants for the year 1853-4 from the Exchequer before the middle of April 1854; but naval services for that year, paid abroad by naval accountants up to the 31st of March 1854, will continue in course of settlement at home, either by direct payments upon bills of exchange, drawn from abroad before the 31st March, or by repayments to the Commissariat Chest, for many months after the grants of the year 1853-4 have been paid away. The Exchequer credits out of the navy grants for the succeeding year 1854-5, must therefore be used in liquidating the account of the year 1853-4. On the other hand, the Exchequer credits issued out of the grants for 1853-4, at or near the close of March 1854 and subsequently, will be applied in replenishing the chests at the outports, and in making both imprest and final payments for the service of the year 1854-5. The exact apportionment of the payments for the service of each year is a matter of account, which can only be adjusted after the examination of the whole of the accounts of payments made at home and abroad. Now all this shows that when the duty of controlling the appropriation of the votes was assigned to the Exchequer, the practical working of this part of the financial business of the Government was very imperfectly understood. Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

the

Other difficulties equally formidable might be advanced in opposition to the Comptroller-general's view of the proper mode of conducting the public payments and keeping the public accounts; but they would unnecessarily extend these remarks: the instances already given are more than sufficient to prove that Exchequer control, in the form now advocated by the Comptroller-general never has existed, and never can be established.

Having described the actual practice of the Pay Office, it is necessary to explain what it is which the Comptroller-general would exact, for the purpose of maintaining the semblance of an Exchequer control over the application of the public money.

He would require that the Paymaster-general should keep a distinct balance in his hands on every head of service for which he may be called upon to make payments, and that this balance should be of such an amount as to obviate the danger of running short of funds on any account, and being consequently compelled either to refuse payment of bills and claims, or to use credits not legally applicable to such payments. Setting aside, for the sake of argument, all that has been advanced against the practicability of such a system of payment, it must stand condemned on other grounds: Inexpediency of multiplying balances.

1. To keep every cash account of the votes in credit in the Paymaster-general's books, without reference to the balances of the votes remaining in deposit in the Exchequer, it would be necessary that the Paymaster-general should keep a permanent balance in his hands of 600,000 l. or 700,000 l.; but a much larger sum would be required if he were compelled to keep distinct credits for the votes of different years. Under the present arrangements a tenth part of that sum is sufficient; the difference would therefore represent the sum upon which the public would most unnecessarily have to pay interest. Increase in amount of balance.

2. The rule now acted upon for the security of the public money is that the Paymaster-general shall keep his balances as low as possible, unless special circumstances should induce the Treasury to direct him to increase them. This is a general rule applicable to all public accountants, but more especially binding on one having so large a trust as the Paymaster-general, and a due regard for the protection of the public requires that the Treasury should constantly enforce it. But what security would there be if a system were laid down which should compel the Paymaster-general indefinitely to increase his balances to comply with the requirements of the Exchequer? Present balances kept low.

3. If the Paymaster-general were required to draw upon special credits instead of upon general accounts as at present, he would require a greatly increased staff of paymasters and clerks. It is not necessary to go further back than 1848 to prove this: the plan of drawing upon special credits was in operation in the offices of the Paymaster of Civil Services and of the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills before the duties of those offices were transferred to the Paymaster-general in that year. Twenty-three paymasters and clerks, at a cost of 9,200 l. a-year, were employed in conducting the limited duties of those departments upon the system advocated by the Comptroller-general. Since the transfer of those duties to the Paymaster-general, the payments have more than doubled; notwithstanding this increase, the duties do not provide more than moderate occupation for five clerks. This example will give some idea of the increase which might be expected to result from the extension of the former system to the whole of the Paymaster-general's payments. The recommendation in the Exch. Mem. would lead to an increase of the establishment.

The multiplied risks of error, the complication of accounts, the delay and inconvenience to the public claimants, the enormous increase of trouble to the Bank of England, and the weakening of those simple checks which are now found efficient for the public security, may also be urged against the adoption of so retrograde a step as the Comptroller-general recommends. His Lordship states, that the present system "would not be tolerated in any private banking or commercial establishment in the city of London." Would any private banker ever dream of keeping separate cash-boxes to contain the money paid in by his different clients, in order that he might pay their cheques out of their own monies? It is more reasonable to suppose that he would do as the Paymaster-general does, place their money in the general till, and pay all cheques indiscriminately out of it, looking to their credit in his ledger. So the Paymaster-general looks to the unappropriated balance of the vote at the credit of a service in his ledger, and is guided in his issues accordingly. Multiplied risks, and increase of labour.

There are some minor points in the Exchequer Memorandum which call for a very brief notice.

A Schedule of Errors is given at page 552, from which it might be inferred that various inaccuracies had been committed in the Paymaster-general's balances. The books of the Pay Office for the period referred to in the schedule have been examined, and it cannot be found that any such errors ever existed in them. It appears, that in a series of years, out of some thousands of "writes off," a few clerical errors were made in the description of the service; but as they led to no errors in the Pay Office books, no further notice of this part of the Comptroller-general's Memorandum is necessary. Errors pointed out in Exch. Mem. did not exist in Pay Office books.

Various references are made in the Memorandum to "irregularities and confusion in the public accounts," to "accounts made on principles needing a periodical rectification and adjustment;" and it is asserted, moreover, that "utter confusion must prevail, and a double set of books must be kept," "the one being the actual record of payment made without authority, the other of payment necessarily altered in date and in the head of charges, whenever ever the subsequent rectification or adjustment of accounts takes place." It is sufficient to say, that all this is purely imaginary, and totally incorrect. The Pay Office may safely submit its accounts to the scrutiny of competent judges, in the full confidence that they will bear a favourable comparison with those of any public or private establishment in the kingdom. It is needless to add any further comments on these subordinate points, as the discussion of them would only tend to withdraw attention from the more prominent subject of the Memorandum.

Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

Revision of the Exchequer Act necessary.

But an important question is forced into notice by this discussion. Is it desirable that the delusion of an Exchequer control over the application of the grants should be continued? The Comptroller-general very properly remarks, "The law and the practice should assuredly be brought into exact conformity; the one should be repealed, or the other reformed."

Ancient Exchequer.

In early times the Exchequer was no doubt a very useful and efficient department. As the facilities which now exist for the transfer of money were unknown, the Exchequer received the revenue in coin by weight and tale; there were also sub-Exchequers; the sheriffs of counties both received and paid money on account of the Exchequer; they also passed accounts at the Exchequer. The duties of collecting and controlling the revenue, the custody of the money, the payments out of the revenue, and the audit of accounts, were all united in that single institution. The growth of the public service, the increase of wealth, and the expansion of the pecuniary business of the country, have led by degrees to the establishment of separate revenue departments, with their separate collectors, to pay departments, and offices for auditing the public accounts, and to the employment of the Bank of England for the custody of the public revenue.

Modern Exchequer.

The Exchequer has thus been gradually stripped of all its important functions. The Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831 recommended a large reduction in the establishment of the Exchequer, and a considerable diminution of its duties. A praiseworthy attempt was made in 1834, upon the recommendation of the Commissioners, to establish it as an office of control, and part of the machinery of the French system was adopted to accomplish that object; certainly no better model could have been selected than the system in operation in France. The French system of public accounts and audit has engaged the attention of some of the first men of that country, and their labours have produced a consolidated system of account and control such as probably no other country in Europe can boast of; but our attempt to imitate their forms has been very unsuccessful.

French system misunderstood.

In adopting the system of "Exchequer credits," we have thoroughly misunderstood the operation of the French system of "Legislative credits." These are the accounts of the annual votes opened in the books of the Finance Department, against which the several departments are authorised to draw, and the monthly "repartitions" are merely estimates of the probable sums which may be required in the month. The working cash accounts are not complicated by subdivisions, which would tend to no other purpose but that of retarding and embarrassing current operations. The actual payments are set off against the "Legislative credits" in the books of the Finance Department. This simple machinery is not clogged with any unnecessary forms, and appears to be admirably adapted to all purposes of control and record. But this simplicity is wanting in our system. First, we have the Treasury, where accounts of the votes are kept, and where the amount of each vote is exhausted by the orders for credits given to the Exchequer. Secondly, we have the Exchequer, where accounts of the votes are also kept, against which are set off the credits actually given to the Paymaster-general and other accountants at the Bank. Thirdly, we have the Pay Office, where accounts of the votes are again kept, and where the actual payments are charged against the votes. Fourthly, we have the Executive Departments, where a fourth set of accounts with the votes are opened, and the final charge against each vote is made, and where the whole details of the accounts are finally gathered for audit. The worst part of the Exchequer system is the attempt to carry out a scheme of separate Exchequer credits upon hundreds of heads of service through the daily operations of cash, instead of confining the credits, as the French do, to the annual votes, or "Legislative credits." The breaking up of annual votes into daily credits, with a specific appropriation of each daily credit which must not be exceeded, would be fatal to simplicity and regularity of payment and account, even if the plan could be carried out in practice.

Exchequer control impracticable.

It must be evident, from the preceding explanations, that no effectual control over the appropriation of the grants of Parliament, more especially of the large grants for naval and military services, respecting which Parliament has always shown the greatest jealousy, can exist at the time of issuing the money from the Exchequer. The best, if not the only means of bringing under the control of Parliament the expenditure of every department of the State, consists in an effective and uniform system of public accounts, and an independent audit of expenditure upon vouchers after payment.

Remedy for existing defects.

The remedy for the defects of the present system is simple. Adhere more closely to the model selected by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831; let your system be based on confidence in the Government, and let the controlling and responsible department of the State have full freedom of action; simplify your machinery; make your system of public accounts as comprehensive, uniform, and exact as possible; and extend the control of the Audit Board, not to obstruct the current business of Government, but to verify the regularity of the whole of their accounts, and of their financial proceedings.

Finance Department in France the office of Control.

In France, the Finance Department is the office of Government control over the whole of the public finances; it keeps in its own hands the collection and distribution of the public treasure; and retains the custody of the public balances. There is no Exchequer and no separate separate Pay Office. The Court of Accounts exercises an independent control over the financial and other public departments, being charged by law with the duty of examining all accounts, and of "bringing under public control, by the annual publication of a general declaration and of a report to the Crown, the correctness of the accounts of its Ministers, and the regularity of their financial proceedings;" but it is not invested with powers of restraint which can be exerted to paralyze the action of Government. "The Court of Accounts," says the Marquis d'Audiffret, the President of the Court, "is a tribunal sui generis, whose principal mission it is to protect the State against the errors, deviations from law and regulations, and malversations of accountants, without at any time being able to arrest or impede the course of administration."

Remarks on Exchequer Memorandum.

Court of Accounts.

Treasury, 27 March 1854. W. G. Anderson.

MEMORANDUM by Mr. Edward Romilly, Chairman of the AUDIT BOARD, written in 1850.

Mr. Romilly's Memorandum.

ISSUES to be made by the TREASURY, with or without Account.

IN what cases is it competent for the Treasury to issue money without account? Is there any limitation to their power?

If Parliament direct that issues should be accounted for, the Treasury must obey such directions.

Parliament may give such directions, either by voting a particular sum for a particular purpose, or by declaring legislatively that such and such services are to be accounted for to the auditors, or in such way as the Treasury may direct, or such other way as they may specify. In all such cases the authority of Parliament is supreme, and the Treasury is bound to obey.

But by what means is the Treasury bound to obey? What is the sanction to enforce compliance with such directions? The Treasury, if left to themselves, may disregard such directions, or act counter to them. Practically, no instance can perhaps be found in which the Treasury have issued money without account for a service which Parliament has declared should be accounted for to the auditors; but instances can be adduced of the Treasury having directed the auditors to examine accounts, which Parliament has declared should be otherwise disposed of.

If, indeed, the Treasury were to issue money without account for a service which Parliament declared should be accounted for to the auditors, the auditors would themselves at once represent the matter to the Treasury, and would maintain the superior authority of Parliament over the Treasury, as binding upon them, the auditors.

If, however, the auditors neglected to take this step, and sheltered themselves from responsibility under the Treasury authority, and thus neglected to call for the accounts, and had so much the less work to do, no one need be a bit the wiser; and the only check upon such omissions would be the remote and unlikely chance of the fact transpiring and being noticed in Parliament.

In cases, however, in which the Treasury have transmitted to the auditors for examination accounts which Parliament has directed to be otherwise disposed of, the auditors have thought it unnecessary to insist upon the apparent provisions of the Act, since the Treasury have a general power of sending to them for examination any accounts they please; and any examination of ours will not invalidate that other examination provided for by Parliament, and may afford useful information to the Government.

A third instance might be adduced, in which Parliament has directed that accounts should be audited, not only by persons locally interested in the expenditure, but by the auditors also: and in which these provisions are so enacted, that a compliance with them has been impracticable.

Irish Municipal Act.

Now in this case, and in all others in which Parliament have issued instructions, is it not right that they should know how far those directions have been complied with?

In all cases in which Treasury regulations are neglected by accountants, it is the duty of the Audit Office to represent such deviation to the Treasury. And does not the same rule hold good with respect to Parliament? If Parliament has given directions, ought they not to be specially informed whether those directions have been carried into effect?

As I have before stated, there are two modes by which Parliament declares its wishes with respect to the expenditure of the country:

1st. By voting particular sums for particular objects; and,
2dly, By declaring that certain services shall be accounted for to the auditors.

In both cases Parliament ought to be informed that its intentions have been fulfilled. In the first, that the sums voted have been applied to the purposes for which they were granted, and none other; and in the last that expenditure has been accounted for as directed.

If statements to these effects were laid before Parliament, the first one would act as a check upon the Government, and the second as a check upon the auditors; and if the auditors were called upon to perform this duty, although it would raise them to great importance, and, by making them servants of Parliament, enable them to exercise a check over the Government for the time being, it would only be to the extent that Parliament itself had prescribed. From the circumstance, however, of the Treasury being entrusted with with the public purse, there will be cases requiring issues of public money, independently of the specific directions of Parliament.

Mr. Romilly's Memorandum.

In such cases the Treasury may direct the issues to be made without account; and might not a statement of such issues also be laid before Parliament?

Constitutional History, vol. ii, p. 432 vol. iii, p. 158, Second Edition.

The appropriation of supplies for limited purposes dates, as we are told by Hallam, from the reign of Richard the Second and Henry the Fourth; was revived by the last Parliament of James the First in 1624; and was still further enforced in 1641 and 1665, from which latter date the undisputed principle that supplies granted by Parliament are only to be expended for particular objects, specified by itself, was recognised by constant practice. This led to the necessity of having estimates regularly laid before The House, and during the reign of William the Third, Parliament by such means exercised a more close and constant superintendence over the departments of the Navy, Army, and Ordnance than had hitherto existed. This system continued down to 1832, with no other check over the issue and final expenditure of such grants than the annually repeated clause in the Appropriation Act of each Session, by which the Lords of the Treasury are forbidden to order by their warrant any monies in the Exchequer so appropriated, from being issued for any other service, and the officers of the Exchequer to obey any such warrant.

Audit of Naval Balance Sheet.

In 1832, however, Sir James Graham introduced and carried an Act by which the accounts of the Navy were subjected to the examination of the auditors whose province it became to report annually to Parliament, how far the directions had been carried into effect with respect to this service: and the same principle was in 1846 extended to Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat Services, and a special officer and department appointed for the purpose, acting under the superintendence and control of the Board of Audit, whose duty it became to prepare for Parliament the accounts in question, with any observations they gave rise to.

It is however to be observed, that these accounts so prepared are laid before Parliament by the Treasury, and not by the auditors themselves, as had been the case with respect to the Navy accounts from 1832 to 1846, and it is questionable whether this change was one in the right direction.

Thus, as far as these services are concerned, the more extensive function for which the House of Commons had contended on several former occasions, and sometimes with success, that of "investigating the wisdom, faithfulness, and economy with which their grants had been expended," was finally recognised; and, instead of special Commissioners being appointed to investigate the appropriation of particular votes, the auditors have been made permanent Commissioners to investigate the appropriation of the issues for these particular services (Navy, Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat).

If, however, this principle be applied to the three services before referred to, why is it not equally applicable to all others in which Parliament has voted a particular sum for a particular purpose?

Appropriation of Miscellaneous Votes not under the control of Audit Board.

The appropriation of the miscellaneous votes does not come under the control of the auditors; and it can hardly be contended that the Treasury, as the supreme department of the State, should be exempted from a control to which the subordinate departments of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance are subjected; especially, too, when it is remembered that this principle, if contended for, has already been deviated from in the case of Commissariat services, the vote for which is equally taken by the Treasury. If, again, it is considered derogatory to the Treasury that a subordinate office like that of the auditors should in any way control their proceedings, and act as a check upon the issue of public money, that argument should have been used before; for if the expenditure under the Commissariat vote is submitted to Parliament by the auditors, upon the same principle all other votes taken by the Treasury should be subject to the same ordeal.

Audit of appropriation should be extended to all branches of expenditure.

But it is also to be observed, that in investigating the appropriation of Parliamentary grants for Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat services, it is not only the duty of the auditors to see that the sums issued to those departments by the Treasury are in accordance with the Appropriation Act, but that the issues have been expended by them in accordance with the estimates approved of by Parliament. The authority of the Appropriation Act is, of course, superior to that of the Treasury; and if the provisions of that Act were infringed by the Treasury in making those issues, it would be the duty of the auditors to lay the matter before the notice of Parliament. It is not, therefore, merely with respect to the expenditure for Commissariat services, for which the Treasury take the vote, and in respect of which they are in the same relative position as the other departments are with regard to the votes taken by them respectively, that the Treasury are subject to the control of the auditors, but they are also under their control, so far as the issues from the Exchequer are concerned, in cases of all the departments concerned; and this principle having been laid down by the present Government, there would seem to be no grounds why it should not be still further extended, and that it must be their intention and wish to carry it into full effect throughout every branch of expenditure so voted by Parliament.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer does not account.

It must not, however, be forgotten that before the issue can be made, it is not only necessary that the Lords of the Treasury should sign a warrant to that effect, but also that that warrant should be obeyed, provided it is not in excess of any aggregate vote, and that no issues should be made from the Exchequer, but such as are so warranted. The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer is the officer upon whom this duty devolves of obeying the warrants of the Treasury for issues in detail, after that functionary shall have received a Royal sign manual warrant, authorising him to issue upon such warrants to the extent of the total grants of Parliament; but what security has Parliament that it is

Mr. Romilly's Memorandum.

is duly performed? And if it has been thought necessary in the services before mentioned, to have the additional and still greater security provided by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, with respect to the Treasury, is it not necessary that a similar security should be provided with respect to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer?

But can this security be provided?

Necessity for an examination of the Exchequer Accounts.

The object in view, is to see that the warrants of the Treasury for the issues of public moneys are obeyed, and none other, and the only mode by which this can be accomplished, is by the Exchequer accounts being rendered to the auditors supported by the warrants in question.

It is true that under the 23 Sect. of 4 Will. 4, c. 15, an annual account is rendered to Parliament of the receipts into, and payments out of the Exchequer, but that account is not verified by an independent authority; there is nothing but the statement of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to show that the issues made by him are in accordance with the Royal and Treasury warrants; and if Parliament has deemed a similar check necessary with respect to the accounts of the departments before referred to, it is difficult to conceive why it should not be equally necessary with respect to the miscellaneous votes paid through the Exchequer account.

But there is another and still stronger ground why these accounts should be subject to some independent check. Parliament has to provide for the pecuniary exigencies of the State by means of taxes, and whether fresh taxes should be imposed or existing taxes should be modified or abolished, depends altogether on the available revenue of the country. The revenue raised by the several departments concerned is paid into the Exchequer. Sums received from the sale of stores, or otherwise, are also paid into the Exchequer. These sums form credits in the Exchequer account; but without the Exchequer account it is impossible to see that they correspond with the sums taken credit for by those departments as paid into the Exchequer, and that all sums which should be, are credited in those accounts.

It is unnecessary to say more to show the importance of the accounts being submitted to an independent check, in order to enable Parliament to perform satisfactorily the functions with which they are invested.

In a word, Parliament, by the Appropriation Act of each Session, directs that its grants should be expended for particular purposes, but provides no sanction, no penalty of any kind, if its directions should be neglected, except in the cases of the Navy, Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat Services; and in these cases, the only check upon the sums brought to credit, is their agreeing with the statements in the Exchequer lists, which lists may or may not be in accordance with the directions of the Treasury warrants under which the issues are made.

It may be said, that as Parliament is cognizant of the amount of its several grants, if it sees the ultimate expenditure of those grants, all intermediate steps are unimportant.

But if so, why should these issues be made at all by warrants? If these warrants are a necessary and important formality, is it not right, is it not additional security, that some independent party should see that they have been regularly drawn, and regularly obeyed? And is this security the less required, when it is known that the documents are necessarily drawn up by subordinates, and on the faith of their accuracy are signed by their superiors as a matter of form?

Paragraphs which were proposed to form part of the Pay Office Minute of the 22d December 1848, relative to the Appropriation of the Grants for Miscellaneous Services, but were not adopted.

Appropriation of the Miscellaneous Grants.

In a former part of this Minute the Paymaster-general has been directed to keep such an account of the Votes of Parliament and of his payments thereout as will enable him to exercise a check upon the accounts of the expenditure of each vote, and to call the attention of this Board, from time to time, to any payments which he may be instructed to make, which may appear to be in excess of the funds provided by Parliament for the services to which such payments may relate. The subject of the appropriation of the miscellaneous grants of Parliament appears, however, to require more detailed and specific instructions than my Lords have yet prescribed for the guidance of the Paymaster-general.

Recent measures relative to the appropriation of the Naval and Military Grants.

Various measures have been adopted by this Board, during the last few years, to secure the strict application of the grants of Parliament for Naval and Military Services to the purposes and within the limits sanctioned by the annual Appropriation Act, and to provide for the presentation to the House of Commons of an annual account from each department, in such form as would bring the expenditure of the public money more directly under the cognisance and control of Parliament. Previously to the Minute of this Board, dated the 13th January 1846, in which certain fixed principles were laid down for the guidance of the respective Naval and Military Departments in the preparation of their Annual Estimates, no uniform principle of computing the sums required to be provided in their estimates for the service of the year had been followed by those departments. The difficulties which have retarded the adoption of one uniform system by those departments have, however, been satisfactorily removed, and all the Annual Estimates for Naval and Military Services are now prepared on the principle of providing for the sums actually required under each vote to meet the charges to be defrayed within the period for which the estimates are framed.

Uniformity of principle in the preparation of the estimates introduced.

Uniformity of principle in keeping the accounts.

My Lords have also succeeded in establishing an uniform system of keeping the Cash Accounts of those departments; and Annual Accounts of the expenditure, compared with the Votes, are now prepared by them for the information of Parliament, and of this Board. It Appropriation of Miscellaneous Grants.

Audit of the accounts of the appropriation of the Votes extended.

It appeared to my Lords desirable that the final Annual Accounts of the expenditure of each department, compared with the Votes for the year, showing the excess of grants to be given up, or the deficiency to be voted, should be examined by the Audit Board, and the correctness of the appropriation, and of the balances certified before such accounts were presented to Parliament. A regulation of this kind was already in operation under the authority of the Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, in regard to the Annual Account of Naval Receipt and Expenditure, and it appeared to my Lords proper that it should be extended to the accounts of the Army, Commissariat, and Ordnance receipt and expenditure. My Lords, therefore, submitted to Parliament a Bill for that purpose in 1846, the provisions of which are embodied in the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92.

These regulations should be extended to the Miscellaneous Votes.

The measures which my Lords have thus adopted to bring under the review and control of Parliament the large amount of the Annual Expenditure of the State, comprised in the Estimates for the Naval and Military Services, having been brought into full and satisfactory operation, my Lords are of opinion that the time has arrived when similar measures may be beneficially extended to the expenditure defrayed out of the various Annual Votes for "Miscellaneous Services;" and that the Paymaster-general, who is already charged with the preparation of the Annual Account of Receipt and Expenditure for Commissariat Services authorised by this Board, should be intrusted with the duty of preparing for Parliament a similar account for Miscellaneous Services.

The accounts heretofore kept have not provided a sufficient check.

Although accounts have been opened in the books of the Paymaster of Civil Services under the titles of the several Miscellaneous Votes, no attempt has yet been made to keep the account of each year's votes in such a form as to exhibit the excesses of expenditure, or the savings, as compared with the annual amount of the votes. The expenditure under each vote has been kept as a running Cash Account, and no general balance between the votes and the expenditure for a given year has ever been struck, so as to prevent the surplus of one year's vote from being carried over and applied to the service of a succeeding year, or the deficiency from being defrayed out of the funds provided by Parliament for the same service in the next year. Moreover, there has been no fixed date for closing the account of the issues under the respective votes, as in the case of the Naval and Military Departments, where the votes are closed on a date fixed by statute, and the unexpended balances are surrendered to Parliament.

Principle upon which the Miscellaneous Estimates should be framed.

In applying the regulations established by Parliament for the appropriation of the grants for Naval and Military Services to the several votes comprised in the Miscellaneous Estimates, the first point upon which instructions appear to be required is the principle upon which the estimates are to be framed and the votes taken.

The Votes for Naval and Military Services, as already explained, are taken for the payments to be made within the year for which the Estimates are framed; and my Lords entertain no doubt that this would be the most correct principle to apply to the Miscellaneous Votes if the practice of Parliament were altered so as to ensure the passing of all those Votes before the 1st April in each year. This alteration does not, however, appear to be at present practicable, and it will therefore be necessary that the Miscellaneous Estimates should, for the present, continue to be framed to meet the payment of the "Sums due for the year."

Application of the principle of "payments for the year."

My Lords proceed to offer a few remarks in regard to the application of this principle to each class of expenditure included in the Miscellaneous Estimates.

The expenditure comprised in the Miscellaneous Estimates may be divided under three heads:—

Periodical or recurrent charges.

First. Periodical or recurrent charges, such as the salaries, allowances, and contingent expenses of the public departments, and of the Colonial and Consular Establishments; superannuations and other personal allowances; periodical claims for supplies made, and for services performed; periodical accounts of expenses incurred for ordinary works, repairs, and maintenance of public buildings, &c. For services of this description provision is made in the annual Estimates for the sum required to defray the expenses of the year ending on the 31st March; and the claims and accounts for such services are generally made out at stated periods. After payment of the final claim for the year ending on the 31st March, the balance of each Vote remaining unapplied should revert to the Exchequer, as a surplus no longer required for the service of the year for which it was granted.

Expenditure "upon account."

Secondly. Expenditure "upon account," such as payments for new works, or any other service, in part of a gross Estimate submitted to Parliament, portions of which are voted from year to year, until the whole of the original Estimate for the completion of the service has been granted. In these cases the Vote demanded "upon account" should not exceed the annual sum likely to be required for carrying on the work or service, until the usual period of voting the next supply. For these services, while they are in progress, no surplus balance can be surrendered, unless any part of the Vote for the year should be unexpended at the date which may be fixed for the closing of the annual account. The rule in regard to these Votes will, therefore, be to consider the date when the Vote may be exhausted as the termination of the year's service, provided that date shall occur within the period allowed for the completion of the account.

Special grants.

Thirdly. Special grants, such as fixed sums voted in aid of the funds of charitable institutions, special rewards or remuneration for services performed, Votes in reimbursement of specific accounts of past expenditure, and special grants for relief of sufferers by fire, &c. In these cases, the grants are either of the nature of donations, or of retrospective services, payable soon after the passing of the Votes. There seems to be no reason why expenditure of this description should not always be defrayed within the year in which the grant may be made. Appropriation of Miscellaneous Grants.

of

It is the desire of my Lords that, from the 1st April 1849, the Paymaster-general will keep accounts of the appropriation of the miscellaneous grants, regulating such accounts, according to the principles before explained. The payments made by him on permanent orders issued by this Board will be charged by him against the respective accounts, according to the principles laid down for each class of expenditure. The special authorities to be issued by this Board for the payment of any of the services before mentioned will be assigned to their proper Votes at the time the authority is given. Accounts of the appropriation of the grants to be kept from 1st April 1849.

The Paymaster-general will prepare annually, for the information of Parliament and of this Board, an account showing the sums granted by Parliament under the several heads of the Miscellaneous Estimates for the service of the year; and he will show in this account the appropriation of the several grants, and the saving under each head, to be repaid to the Exchequer. An annual account to be prepared for Parliament.

The following departments receive issues direct from the Exchequer, viz.: the Commissioners of Woods, the Solicitor for the Affairs of the Treasury, the Master of the Mint, the Comptroller of the Stationery Office, the Paymaster of Civil Services and the Board of Works in Ireland. With a view to render the account which my Lords have desired the Paymaster-general to prepare for Parliament and this Board more complete, they will direct the issues granted to the departments in question out of the Miscellaneous Votes to be made through the Paymaster-general. All issues out of the Miscellaneous Votes will be passed through the Paymaster-general's accounts.

The time to be allowed for the completion of the annual account is to be the same as that fixed by the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92. for the closing of the accounts of the Army, Ordnance and Commissariat Receipt and Expenditure, namely, 12 months after the expiration of the year. If it should be found to be hereafter practicable to apply to the Miscellaneous Estimates the principle adopted in the preparation of those for the Naval and Military Services, namely, by taking the Votes for the payments to be made in the year, instead of for the sums which may fall due within the year, the annual Account of Receipt and Expenditure for the Miscellaneous Services may then be prepared at a much earlier date. Time to be allowed for the completion of the annual account.

To carry out to the full extent the application to the Miscellaneous Services of the regulations prescribed for the rendering of the annual Accounts for the Naval and Military Departments, my Lords consider it necessary that the annual Account for the Miscellaneous Services should be submitted to the examination of the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts. This examination, which is to be conducted through the naval and military auditor, should keep pace with the preparation of the account, so that as little time as possible may intervene between the completion of the account and the presentation of it to Parliament. The annual account for Parliament to be audited.

My Lords will be prepared to furnish to the Paymaster-general and to the Commissioners of Audit any further instructions which they may require for their guidance, in giving effect to these directions.

When these arrangements shall have been carried into full effect, there will not remain any portion of the public expenditure defrayed out of the annual Votes of Parliament of which an annual audited account will not be submitted to the House of Commons.

Appendix, No. 2.

PAPERS relating to the Re-arrangement of the Services Charged on the Gross Revenue, Consolidated Fund, and Annual Votes in Supply. Appendix, No. 2.

MODE of providing for the Expenses of the Revenue Departments.

Among the various administrative reforms which have been submitted to the consideration of the Government during the last 20 years, and which have not yet been adopted, that of bringing the Revenue Departments under the direct control of the Legislature is, on account of the constitutional check on the appropriation of the public money which it involves, one of the most important. The Revenue Departments ought to be brought under the direct control of the Legislature.

The improvements which have been adopted since the Peace, in connexion with the application of the public money and the simplification of the public accounts, have chiefly been confined to the departments of expenditure. The financial improvements since the Peace have been chiefly confined to the departments of expenditure.

Thus, the Estimates of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance Departments have been revised and enlarged, the classification of their expenses improved and made uniform, and the principle of appropriating their Parliamentary grants clearly defined; their accounts have been been framed on one model, their forms have been assimilated, their payments have been concentrated in one office, and audited balance-sheets of their pecuniary transactions have been annually submitted to Parliament. But none of these arrangements have been extended to the Revenue Departments, which still continue as free from direct Parliamentary interference with their annual expenditure, as if the money they disbursed formed no part of the public account.

Appendix, No. 2.

Opinion of Commissioners of Public Accounts, 1831.

The anomalous position of this branch of the Public Service was brought under the notice of Parliament in a Report from the Commissioners of Public Accounts to the Treasury in 1831, from which the following passages are extracted:

"To accomplish, with perfect security and efficiency, these objects of safe custody, legal appropriation and record, it is obviously necessary that all public moneys whatever should, in the first instance, be paid into the Exchequer. But it appears from the accounts laid before Parliament, that the whole amount of the public income is not so paid, but that amounts derived from divers sources of revenue are received and disbursed without the intervention of this institution, or being in any way submitted to its control.

"It is also certain that considerable sums arising from taxes and other matters are deducted from the gross receipts, and retained and expended by several departments, which only account to the Exchequer for the net amount after such deductions. We think this practice should be discontinued; and we recommend that the gross receipts of public money, whether arising from taxes in each part of the United Kingdom; from the income or sale of Crown property under the administration of the Woods and Forests; from the sale of old naval, ordnance, and other stores; from unclaimed dividends; unclaimed prize-money; deductions from pensions; loans on Exchequer bills; or from any other sources, should be placed, without deduction, in the custody of the Exchequer, and be accounted for to Parliament, whose authority should be necessary for the appropriation of the whole.

"We feel this principle to be one of paramount importance for the security of the public money, in the two great branches of Receipt and Expenditure. We think that no portion of the public treasure should be arrested, on any plea or pretence whatever, on its way to the Exchequer, and that no portion of it should be issued from the Exchequer, without previous Parliamentary sanction.

"Your Lordships will perceive that a really efficient and complete control can be introduced into the different departments of the Public Service only by the adoption and establishment of the principle we recommend, a principle which we believe to be the necessary preliminary to all satisfactory financial reform; by which means, not only will the whole of the public treasures be made available for the Public Service, but the expense of collection will appear as a part of the Public Expenditure, and be consequently placed immediately under legislative and official control."

Commissioners of Excise Inquiry: 11th Report, p. 57. 20th Report, p. 150 to 152.

A few years afterwards the Commissioners of Excise Inquiry, in their 11th and 20th Reports, expressed themselves to the same effect.

The recommendation of the Commissioners of Public Accounts has been complied with as regards—

Although the great departments of the revenue still continue to exercise the same independent power as formerly, of expending a large amount of the Public Income, without previously submitting to Parliament any specifications of their expenses, the recommendations of the Commissioners of Public Accounts have not been entirely disregarded, as the following references to some recent changes will show.

1st. The incidental receipts of the Naval and Military Departments.

Dated 2 May 1848.

1st. Previously to the year 1849, sums amounting to about half a million annually were received in the Naval and Military departments for old stores, rents, purchase of soldiers' discharges, unclaimed prize-money, and a variety of other services. It was the practice of these departments, up to the year 1848 inclusive, to retain these receipts, and to ask Parliament for so much less on their annual estimates. In that year the Treasury issued a Minute directing those departments to pay over thenceforth the amount of those receipts to the Exchequer, and to submit their estimates to Parliament for the full sums required for their disbursements.

2d. The receipts connected with services included in the Miscellaneous Civil Estimates: and,

2d. In the same year (1848), various receipts which had previously been retained in like manner for services included in the Miscellaneous Civil Estimates, amounting to about 200,000 l. a year, were under the like authority paid over to the Exchequer, and the full provision was voted for the services to which such receipts had till then been applied. As part of this arrangement, several offices whose expenses had been either wholly or in part defrayed out of fees, surrendered the amount to the Exchequer, and submitted estimates to Parliament for the full amount of their annual expenses.

3d. The expenses of management of the Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues of the Crown.

3d. In the Session of Parliament 1851, the sums required for the salaries, pensions, and expenses of the office charged with the management of the Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues of the Crown were, in pursuance of a clause introduced into the Act 13 & 14 Vict. c. 42, provided for in estimates submitted to the House of Commons, instead of being charged upon and stopped out of the revenues of that department in their progress to the Exchequer, according to previous usage.

In these changes the principles advocated by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, have been fully recognised.

Resolutions in accordance with the recommendation of the Commissioners have been twice carried in the House of Commons.

It should also be noticed that on two different occasions, resolutions in accordance with the recommendation of the Commissioners in reference to the payment of the gross revenue into the Exchequer, have been submitted to the House of Commons, and carried, notwithstanding the opposition of the Government.

Although

Although the progress which this question has made in 20 years appears but small, still the above-mentioned steps have been taken in the right direction. Indeed, the soundness of the principle laid down by the Commissioners, of paying the gross revenue into the Exchequer, and of obtaining the sanction of Parliament to the appropriation of the whole, has never been seriously disputed in the discussions which have taken place on the subject. Even Lord Monteagle, who, as Secretary of the Treasury, first opposed the recommendations of the Commissioners when their report was brought under consideration at the Treasury, and upon whose statement of objections their plan was at the time abandoned, has made the following admissions in the evidence given by him before the Select Committee on Miscellaneous Expenditure in 1848.

Lord Monteagle, who opposed the recommendation of the Commissioners, is favourable to the principle of the proposed arrangement.

In answer to Question 2545, his Lordship states:
"Undoubtedly the arrangement would give a more efficient control over the public money, if it were not connected with accompanying inconveniences."

And further:
"I need not say that to the principle itself I was strongly favourable."

In answer to Question 2551, his Lordship reiterates:
"The Committee will have the goodness to understand that I think the principle a good one to be adopted in all cases where there is not a practical objection to it."

And in reply to a further Question (2556), his Lordship continues:
"I think from year to year the tendency has been, for the last 20 years at least, to bring under Parliamentary control more and more of the expenditure of the country; and, in my opinion, most wisely and most justly."

It is needless to multiply these extracts; they sufficiently establish his Lordship's approval of the principle laid down by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831; his objections rest solely upon supposed practical inconveniences, which he apprehends will "be found to be so great as to supersede the benefit."

It is, therefore, necessary to consider these practical objections as they are explained in the same evidence.

Practical objections to the measure as stated by Lord Monteagle.

His Lordship states, in answer to Question 2551:
"If you do not adhere to the present system, you must necessarily place in the hands of each of those departments (of revenue) a large contingent fund. You must enable them to pay their drawbacks, and various expenses of that description to which they may be subjected. They must have, therefore, a contingent fund at their command, and I think that that would be just as objectionable as the present mode."

1st. Necessity of reserving a large contingent fund.

And in answer to Question 2559, he continues:
"Unless Parliament were to vote a very large contingent sum, which would really practically leave the matter where it is now, it would be impossible to take the charges of the collection of the revenue, and make these matters of estimate and Parliamentary discussion, and make them matters of issue, subject to the control of the Exchequer."

In these answers it is assumed that it would be impossible to provide for the charges of collection by special grants of Parliament, unless a large vote for undefined contingencies were placed at the disposal of each of the revenue departments; and this course, his Lordship considers, would be as objectionable in point of principle as the present practice of paying without any vote at all. The reasons why a large contingent fund would be necessary, and why charges of collection or management cannot, in this branch of the public service, be made matters of estimate, as they are in all others, are not very clearly explained; but it is evident from a reply to another question in the same evidence (No. 2567), which is quoted in a subsequent part of this memorandum, that these supposed difficulties are founded upon a complete misapprehension of the course which it would be necessary to pursue to give effect to the recommendations of the Commissioners.

The explanations submitted in this paper in illustration of the course of proceeding which should be adopted to give practical effect to the measure, will set at rest all doubts as to the practicability of applying to the revenue departments the strict rules of Parliamentary appropriation as effectually as they are enforced in other branches of the Government.

Being asked whether he thought it would conduce to economy in the management and collection of the revenue in its various departments, if the whole of the Customs establishments, for instance, at each port were to be voted annually by Parliament, instead of being paid in the manner in which they are at present, his Lordship replies:— Question 2564, p. 192.

2d. Obstruction to the business of the House of Commons.

"I am persuaded, from the very long experience of 25 years, that instead of such a system being conducive to economy, it would lead to a very opposite result. Besides which, I believe, that taking the business of Parliament as it now stands, and the period which Parliament has for the discharge of that business, to require the House of Commons to vote, in addition to the present estimates, the estimates for the Customs and Excise, the Post Office and Stamps, in a Committee of Supply, would so augment the pressure as to make the business of the House of Commons, and especially its legislative business, utterly and completely impracticable."

Advantage of the constant supervision of past expenditure by Committees or by The House itself.

"But having said this, I wish to reserve an opinion of an opposite kind in the strongest way. While I think that the House of Commons, à priori, cannot with advantage vote in the way of estimate, yet when the expenditure has been incurred, I think the constant supervision by Committees, or by The House itself, of the expenditure which has been so incurred, comparing it from time to time with what Parliament may think it ought to be, is of the most enormous and pressing advantage. That was the opinion which, as Secretary to the Treasury, I gave to Lord Spencer and to the Commissioners of Accounts, and upon that statement of opinion their judgment was founded when they abandoned the scheme of voting these items in supply."

Modification of the preceding opinion.

This opinion, however, so strongly expressed in the answer just quoted, his Lordship materially modifies in his reply to a subsequent Question (No. 2585); he there states:—

"When the subject of gross and net revenue was brought before me officially, while I felt the impossibility of voting in supply all the expenditure, I was most desirous myself of considering any other plan which might be satisfactorily adopted, and I did submit to Lord Spencer a scheme for an annual inquiry before Committee into the past expenditure of the year. I confess that I attached some importance to that for a time; but viewing the course taken by Parliament itself, and viewing how very much things degenerate into matters of mere routine, viewing for instance, that where Parliament requires annual accounts to be laid before it, those accounts are not always examined with the same attention as when they are called for upon an occasion, I thought, upon the whole, there would be a better and more effectual control against any abuse if in Parliament it were left to move for a Committee, like the present Committee, upon a case shown, and the necessity of the case arising, and the public attention called to it, than to have every year a Committee which might degenerate into a Committee like that upon expiring laws, in which the chairman meets, the clerk attends, a paper is signed, and the paper is printed, and very little results beyond that. I was afraid it would become too much a matter of routine."

2564. 2585.

It seems scarcely necessary to dwell upon the suggestion contained in the first of the answers last quoted, as to the Parliamentary revision of past expenditure, because it is disposed of by the arguments used in the second answer. It should, however, be remarked, that a revision of expenditure, after it has been incurred and paid, falls more properly within the province of a department of audit, and that it comes too late for efficient Parliamentary control.

3d. Inconvenience of first remitting the public money to London, and then remitting a portion of it back again to pay the expense of collecting it.

His Lordship is asked in Question 2567, whether, in his opinion, any additional security would be given to the public against any misapplication of the money by which the expense of the civil government of Scotland is defrayed, if the whole of the Excise and Customs' Revenue were remitted from that country to London, and the payments required to be made in Scotland were again sent back thither. To which he replies as follows:—

"I do not think that any additional security would be given, but I am sure that a most operose, expensive, and troublesome system would be introduced in the place of a very simple one."

And in reply to a similar Question (2574) he adds:

"It would be attended with very great inconvenience to individuals and to the public; and the loss of time in the remittance of the public money first to London, and thence its remittance back to the outports for Revenue payments, would be very great."

Unfounded nature of this hypothesis.

This question, and the answer to it, supply the clue to those imaginary difficulties and inconveniences with which the question of the payment of the gross revenues of the State into the Exchequer is associated in the minds of those who have hitherto resisted the measure. Can they seriously imagine that the progress of improvement in the Government service has been so slow, that the ordinary facilities and securities for the remittance of money, so familiar to the commercial community, are still unknown or unpractised in the Revenue Departments; or that the pecuniary intercourse between the different branches of the Government is still of that primitive kind, that the gross revenues could not be paid into the Exchequer without sending up to London, from all parts of the kingdom, the gross sums collected, and transmitting back from the Exchequer to the country the sums required for the payment of the local charges of collection? It is needless to say that the supposition would be entirely erroneous. Indeed, the system which it would be necessary to adopt if the charges of management were provided for by annual votes of Parliament, is already in operation in the Revenue Departments all over the kingdom for other voted services. Thus, they pay monthly allotments of pay to seamen's relatives, remittances of wages and prize-money, half-pay of army, navy, and ordnance officers, military and civil pensions and allowances of all kinds, and various other services. These are all the subjects of annual estimates and votes, and they are paid in every part of the country by the local collectors of revenue out of their current receipts.

These payments in the several Revenue Departments do not probably fall far short of two millions annually; and if the Departments of Revenue have hitherto paid these voted services for other departments without difficulty, they could with at least equal facility pay their own.

The preceding extracts from Lord Monteagle's evidence before the Select Committee on Miscellaneous Expenditure in 1848, contain the principal, as well as the most recent, objections which have been recorded against the measure recommended by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831. It has been considered the more necessary to comment fully upon them, because it was in deference to those opinions, founded, as they are, on entirely erroneous assumptions, that the Commissioners abandoned their measure, and thus delayed the accomplishment of a great practical improvement for more than twenty years.

Steps to be taken to give effect to the recommendation of the Commissioners of Public Accounts: 1st. A clear distinction should be made between receipts and income; and income alone, after deducting deposits, drawbacks, &c., should be accounted for to the Exchequer.

It is proposed now to consider the steps which should be taken to give effect to the recommendations of the Commissioners.

And first, as to Income:

It is necessary, in the first place, to draw a clear distinction between Receipts and Income. Taking the Customs as an instance; the gross receipt embraces the full sums paid to the Customs, whether in the nature of final receipts to be accounted for as income, or in the nature of deposits, part of which is eventually repaid to the merchant. The correct principle appears to be that income alone should be accounted for to the Exchequer. Thus, as a principle, all repayments of duties, whether for drawbacks, over-entries, or in whatever form they may arise, should be made out of the gross receipts, and the residue only accounted for as Income. To provide for the payment of drawbacks and other similar returns of duties, by Votes of Parliament, as Expenditure, would be to increase both the income and expenditure of the Customs beyond their legitimate amounts. Let the Customs apply to their accounts the principle which the merchant adopts in his. If he deposits with the Customs 1,000 l. for duties, which on the settlement of his account only amount to 900 l., he receives back the over-payment of 100 l., and the balance of the original deposit, viz. 900 l., is the sum which he will debit his account with for duties paid; and this is also the sum which the Customs should credit in theirs for duties received.

2d. Expenditure.

2d. As to Expenditure:

Having provided above for those payments which are not expenditure, but repayments of duties overpaid, there remain two classes of payments which are now made out of income in its progress to the Exchequer: first, payments for the expenses of collecting and managing the revenue, which strictly belong to the business of the respective departments; and secondly, payments for various services which are in no way connected with the revenue, but which are specially charged upon it by various Acts of Parliament.

1st. Expense of collecting and managing the revenue; and, 2d. Payments charged upon the revenue by various Acts of Parliament.

Each department should prepare an estimate for Parliament of the expense of collecting and managing its revenue;

As regards the departmental expenses incidental to the collection and management of the revenue, each office should prepare an annual estimate of the sums required to defray such expenses, according to a form and classification to be approved by the Treasury; and as uniformity is desirable in all public estimates and accounts, the forms already in use for other public services should determine in a great measure the shape of the new estimates. It may also be desirable to consider whether a great part of the matter now laid before Parliament in the Finance Accounts, might not be added to the estimates in the form of explanatory Appendices.

and the other charges should be transferred to the Consolidated Fund, or the votes in supply.

With respect to those charges which are now paid out of the revenue of particular departments in pursuance of Acts of Parliament, but which do not in any way relate to the service of those departments, authority should be obtained for the transfer of such charges either to the Consolidated Fund or to the estimates to be voted in supply. The principle which should influence such transfers would appear to be this:

Principle which should be observed in making this apportionment.

That all grants for life or in perpetuity, the amounts of which are specified in the Acts of Parliament by which they are authorised, and which are not subject to revision (such as ancient grants, pensions, and stipends), and all salaries of judicial officers and other functionaries whose independence of Parliament it may be considered right to secure, by not subjecting them to the uncertainty of an annual vote, should be charged upon the Consolidated Fund. All other services would appear to be proper subjects for votes in supply.

Mode of disbursing the Votes of Parliament for collection and management.

It seems almost unnecessary to offer any suggestions upon so simple a matter as that of the routine to be adopted in disbursing the Votes of Parliament for the expenses of collection and management; but to prevent misconception, the following brief observations are submitted on that part of the subject.

The salaries and expenses would be paid everywhere, as at present, out of the local receipts; and the issues from the Exchequer out of the votes would be placed to a distinct account at the Bank of England for each department; all the rest would be simple matter of account in the books of each department, and of transfer between accounts at the Bank of England.

Illustration derived from the existing practice.

As a practical illustration, let us take the case of a payment on account of a voted service, which is now made by a collector of the revenue. An officer, under an order from the proper department, draws his half-pay quarterly from the Collector of Customs at Liverpool, to whom he gives his receipt for the sum paid to him. The Collector remits this receipt to the Custom-house in London, as he would a letter of credit or bill of exchange; it is then presented for payment to the officer in London charged with the examination and payment of half-pay (the Paymaster-General), by whom the amount is transferred from the vote of Parliament to the credit of the account of the Customs at the Bank of England. Such is the simple routine by which thousands of payments for voted services services are settled quarterly between the revenue departments and the various public departments of expenditure.

Appendix, No. 2.

Revision of services charged on the gross revenue, Consolidated Fund, and annual votes in supply, necessary;

In the year 1846 the payments out of the revenue in its progress to the Exchequer, and the payments made out of the Consolidated Fund, were inquired into by the Treasury, with the view of bringing them "more fully under the control of Parliament," (as stated in one of the drafts of Treasury Minutes prepared at the time), and information was called for and obtained from all the departments concerned in the collection of the public revenue; but the inquiry did not lead to any practical result. The salaries and expenses of various public departments and commissions, and numerous other services, which it was intended in 1846 to provide for by annual votes, are still defrayed out of the gross revenue or the Consolidated Fund. Expenses perfectly similar in their nature are charged upon the gross revenue or the Consolidated Fund, or are provided for by Votes in Supply, without any fixed rule. The Registrar-General's Office, the large subordinate establishments of the Audit Office and the National Debt Office, the Public Works Loan Office, and the Inclosure and Tithe Commissioners and their establishments, are charged on the Consolidated Fund; and the greater part of the civil expenditure of Scotland is paid out of the gross revenue of the Customs and Excise; while all other public establishments, except those for the collection of the revenue, are annually voted. The expense of the Insolvent Debtors' Court in England is an annual vote in supply; in Ireland the same expense is a permanent charge on the Consolidated Fund. The expense of the London police is a charge on the Consolidated Fund; the expense of the Dublin police is the subject of an annual vote. The salaries of inspectors of prisons in Ireland, and other charges, are paid out of the Consolidated Fund, while precisely similar expenses in England are voted annually in the Civil Service Estimates. A few hereditary pensions are paid out of the gross revenue, while the greater number of such pensions are charged upon the Consolidated Fund. It is evident from these examples, that a revision of the services charged on the gross revenue and on the Consolidated Fund is necessary, and that, for the future, a clear line of distinction should be drawn between annual and permanent grants.

which would necessarily lead to a re-construction of the present annual Finance Accounts.

An alteration in the mode of providing for the expenses stopped out of the revenue, and a revision of the services to be permanently charged on the Consolidated Fund, would necessarily lead to a re-construction of the present Finance Accounts annually laid before Parliament. The matter and form of these accounts were settled by a Committee of the House of Commons in 1822, and in 30 years of progress they have undergone no change. A complete and careful revision of these accounts, and of the various detached periodical returns relating to finance, which the growing requirements of the Legislature have from time to time created, is a necessary preliminary to the preparation of a clear and comprehensive national account.

Inconsistent regulations in our system of financial control.

Before concluding this memorandum, it may not be superfluous to advert to a few facts which will serve to illustrate the absence of any defined principle of control over the general expenditure of the country. Take, for instance, the cost of the departments engaged in carrying on the public service. The expenses of some departments are submitted to Parliament in detailed estimates, and they are discussed, examined, and finally voted in the House of Commons, with a limitation both as to time and amount. Other departments prepare no such estimates, but the law gives them a permanent and unlimited credit upon the Consolidated Fund, and they are subject to no control over their expenses beyond that of the Government. Others, again, stop the amount of their salaries and expenses out of the taxes they collect for the public, and hand over the balance to the public treasury; they are under no Parliamentary restriction as to the amount of their expenses. One department may not expend 500 l. upon a storehouse or a hospital without submitting estimates to Parliament and obtaining a legal sanction for the outlay; while another department may build expensive offices, purchase or erect new buildings and machinery for a distillery, establish a revenue police, purchase and equip revenue cruizers, with no other limitation of cost than that which their own discretion or that of the Treasury may impose, without going through even the formality of an intimation to Parliament.

These inconsistent regulations are serious defects in our system of financial control, and they embarrass all attempts to simplify the Government accounts. The measure recommended by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, will go far to introduce uniformity and strengthen the control of the Legislature, while it will also lay the foundation of further important improvements in the public accounts.

C. E. Trevelyan.
W. G. Anderson.

1 February 1853.

The Bill "to alter the mode of providing for certain Expenses now charged upon certain Branches of the Public and Hereditary Revenues, and upon the Consolidated Fund," with the original Schedules; and the alterations made in the Bill and Schedules previously to the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, which was founded upon it, being passed.

Appendix, No. 2.

[Note.—The words erased, and the parts printed in Red Ink, denote the alterations made in the Bill.]

~~A BILL~~

AN ACT to Alter the Mode of providing for certain Expenses now charged upon certain Branches of the Public ~~and Hereditary~~ Revenues, and upon the Consolidated Fund.

[10*th August* 1854.]

[Note.—The Words printed in Italics are proposed to be inserted in Committee.]

~~Preamble.~~ WHEREAS the several Charges and Payments described in the Schedule (A.) to this Act are charged, by various Acts of Parliament or otherwise, upon certain Branches of the Public Revenue: And whereas certain other Charges and Payments described in the Schedule (B.) to this Act are also charged by the like Authorities upon the said Revenue and upon the Consolidated Fund respectively: And whereas it is expedient, in order to bring the gross Income and Expenditure of the United Kingdom and the Isle of Man under the more immediate View and Control of Parliament, that such Charges and Payments should be otherwise provided for, as hereinafter mentioned, and that the financial Accounts should be prepared and Payments regulated with reference to the Periods for which Supplies are now commonly granted by Parliament: Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, as follows:

Charges in Schedule (A.) to be payable out of the Consolidated Fund; and Charges in Schedule (B.) to be ~~voted~~ paid out of Aids, &c. granted in Parliament, except in certain cases.

I. From and after the First Day of April One thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, the several Charges and Payments described in the Schedules (A.) and (B.) to this Act, and which, under the Acts and Authorities in the same Schedules respectively referred to, are charged on or made payable out of the several Branches of the Public Revenue in such Schedules mentioned, or on or out of the Monies in the Hands of Commissioners or Collectors or other Receivers of such Revenues, or otherwise now charged on or payable out of all or any Parts of such Revenue respectively, or on or out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, shall cease to be so charged and payable; and such of the said Charges and Payments as are described in the said Schedule (A.) shall be charged on and payable out of the said Consolidated Fund; and such of the said Charges and Payments as are described in the said Schedule (B.) shall be paid out of such Aids or Supplies as may be from Time to Time provided and appropriated by Parliament for the Purpose:

Except in certain cases.

Provided always, that where the Salary of any Office holden for Life or during good Behaviour is fixed by or under any Act of Parliament, and charged on or payable out of the said Consolidated Fund, or payable out of the gross Produce of Customs and Excise under the Act of the Seventh Year of Queen Anne, Chapter Eleven, the Act of the Tenth Year of Queen Anne, Chapter Twenty-six, and subsequent Acts, nothing herein contained shall, so long as the present Holder of such Office continues to hold the same, affect the Charge on the said Consolidated Fund, or the Payment out of the gross Produce of Customs

Appendix, No. 2.

Charges to be defrayed as heretofore up to the passing of the Act.

Customs and Excise, of the Salary which at the Time of the passing of this Act is payable in respect of such Office: Provided also, that in the event of any Payment being made out of the said Revenues, or out of the Consolidated Fund, before the passing of this Act, on account of any of the Services described in the said Schedules for any Period subsequent to the said First Day of April One thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, the same shall be repaid to the said Revenues, or to the Consolidated Fund, as the case may be, out of the Consolidated Fund, or out of Monies which may be provided by Parliament for such Services for the Year One thousand eight hundred and fifty-four—five.

Annual Financial Accounts to be made up to 31st March instead of 5th January. ~~56 G. 3, c. 98, s. 22.~~

II. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, if they shall see fit, at and after such Time as may appear to them convenient, instead of the Accounts now by Law directed to be annually prepared and made out for One Year ending on the Fifth Day of January in each Year of the total Income of the United Kingdom, including all the ordinary Revenues and extraordinary Resources thereof, and of the Income of the said Consolidated Fund, and of the actual Payments thereout, and of the future annual Charge upon the said Fund, and of the net Produce of all the permanent Taxes of the United Kingdom, and of the Arrears and Balances due from all public Accountants, and of the Exports and Imports of the United Kingdom, and of the Shipping registered in or belonging to the several Ports of Her Majesty's Dominions, and of the public Expenditure of the United Kingdom, and of the Public Funded Debt of the United Kingdom, and the Reduction thereof, and of the Unfunded and Outstanding Debt of the United Kingdom, and instead of the Account showing how the Monies given for the Service of the United Kingdom for the Year preceding the said Fifth Day of January have been disposed of, to cause Accounts to be annually prepared and made up for One Year ending on the Thirty-first Day of March, and in all respects with reference to such Day, in like Manner as if in the Provisions now in force relating to the Preparation and making out of such Accounts the Thirty-first Day of March was substituted for the Fifth Day of January; and the said Commissioners shall in each Year cause such Accounts to be laid before both Houses of Parliament on or before the Thirtieth Day of June, if Parliament be sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within Fourteen Days after the next Meeting of Parliament.

Quarterly Accounts of Receipts and Expenditure of the United Kingdom to be made up to the end of March, June, September, and December, instead of the old quarter days. ~~10 G. 4, c. 27, s. 1.~~

III. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, at and after such Time as may appear to them convenient, instead of the Accounts of the actual Receipt and Expenditure of the United Kingdom now by Law directed to be prepared Four Times in the Year within Thirty Days after the Fifth Day of April, the Fifth Day of July, the Tenth Day of October, and the Fifth Day of January respectively, showing the actual Receipt and Expenditure of the United Kingdom in the Four Quarters for the whole of the Year immediately preceding such several quarterly Days respectively, according to the actual Receipt and Issue of Monies at the Receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer, to cause like Accounts to be prepared within Thirty Days after the Thirty-first Day of March, the Thirtieth Day of June, the Thirtieth Day of September, and the Thirty-first Day of December in each Year, showing such Receipt and Expenditure in the Four Quarters for the whole of the Year ending on such several last-mentioned quarterly Days respectively, and from and after the Time at which the said Accounts shall be first made up to any of such last-mentioned quarterly Days to which such Accounts shall be made up, in pursuance of this Act, the Sums by the Act of the Tenth Year of King George the Fourth, Chapter Twenty-seven, directed to be from Time to Time issued out of the said Consolidated Fund to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, shall be ascertained according to such Accounts as if the last-mentioned quarterly Days had been mentioned in the said Act instead of the quarterly Days mentioned therein, and all other Provisions relating to the Accounts required to be prepared as aforesaid and referring to such quarterly Days shall be construed in like Manner.

10 G. 4, c. 27.

Accounts of Income and Charge of Consolidated Fund to be made up to the end of March, June, September and December, instead of the old quarter days.

IV. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, at and after such Time as may appear to them convenient, instead of making up the Accounts of the Income and Charge of the said Consolidated Fund for the Quarters ending on the Fifth Day of April, the Fifth Day of July, the Tenth Day of October, and the Fifth Day of January in each Year, to cause such Accounts to be made up for the Quarters ending on the the Thirty-first Day of March, the Thirtieth Day of June, the Thirtieth Day of September, and the Thirty-first Day of December in each Year, and from and after the Time at which the said Accounts shall be first made up to any of such last-mentioned quarterly Days, in case it appear to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, upon making up such Accounts for the Quarter ending on any of such quarterly Days in any Year, that the Produce of the said Fund is not sufficient to defray the Charges thereupon, including such Charges as would fall due on the old quarterly Day then next, it shall be lawful for such Commissioners, from Time to Time, by Warrant under their Hands, to cause or direct Exchequer Bills to be made out for the Deficiency, according to the Provisions of the Act of the Fifty-seventh Year of King George the Third, Chapter Forty-eight, and as if the last-mentioned quarterly Days had been mentioned in such Act instead of the quarterly Days mentioned therein, and the Provisions of the said Act shall be construed accordingly.

57 G. 3, c. 48, s. 6.

Times to which quarterly Exchequer Accounts are to be made up.

V. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, at and after such Time as may appear to them convenient, to direct that the quarterly Accounts now made up by the Comptroller-General of the Exchequer, under the Provisions of the Twenty-third Section of the Act, Fourth William the Fourth, Chapter Fifteen, shall be made up to the Termination of the Quarters ending Thirty-first March, Thirtieth June, Thirtieth September, and Thirty-first December, in every Year, and that the annual Account directed by the same Section of the said Act to be prepared and laid before each House of Parliament, together with the Certificates required to be furnished by the Principal Cashier of the Bank of England of the Sum remaining to the Credit of the Exchequer, shall be prepared for the Year ending on the Thirty-first March; and such quarterly Accounts shall thenceforward be transmitted to the Commissioners for auditing the Public Accounts; and such annual Accounts shall be laid before each House of Parliament within Ten Days after the Times fixed for such Purpose by the said Act.

Charges in Schedule (B.) may be paid on the new quarter days.

VI. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, if and where they see fit, to cause all or any of the said Charges and Payments described in the said Schedule (B.) now payable on any other quarterly Days than the Thirty-first Day of March, the Thirtieth Day of June, the Thirtieth Day of September, and the Thirty-first Day of December, to be paid on such last-named Days, or where any such Charges or Payments are payable yearly or half-yearly on any other than some of such Days, to cause the same to be paid on One or Two (as the case may require) of such Days as aforesaid; and where the Days of Payment of any such Charge or Payment are altered as aforesaid the said Commissioners shall cause such Deduction to be made from the Payment to be made on the first of the substituted Days of Payment of such Sum as shall be proportionate to the Period by which such Payment is accelerated.

Fees applicable towards the Payment of Charges in Schedule (B.) to be carried to Consolidated Fund.

VII. Where any of the Charges and Payments described in the said Schedule (B.) are by Law payable out of or charged upon any Fees or other casual Receipts, and are payable out of the said Consolidated Fund only in the Event and to the Extent of any Deficiency of such Fees or other casual Receipts, such Fees or other casual Receipts shall from and after the said First Day of April One thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, in such Cases as the Commissioners of the Treasury may think fit and direct, cease to be applicable to such Charges or Payments, and be from Time to Time paid into the Receipt of the Exchequer, and be carried to and form Part of the said Consolidated Fund, in which Case the entire Charges shall be provided for out of Moneys to be granted by Parliament; but until such Fees or other casual Receipts shall be so paid into the Receipt of the Exchequer, in pursuance of any Direction of the Commissioners of the Treasury, the same shall continue applicable to such Charges or Payments, and such Charges or Payments shall be paid out of Aids or Supplies to be from Time to Time provided and appropriated by Parliament only in the Event and to the Extent of any Deficiency in such Fees or casual Receipts.

Appendix, No. 2.

Treasury may make Regulations, &c.

VIII. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury from Time to Time to make such Rules and Regulations and issue such Orders concerning the Form and Mode of Transmission of Certificates and Vouchers, and otherwise for checking, controlling, and regulating the Payment of the Charges transferred to the Consolidated Fund by this Act, and for enforcing and regulating the accounting for and due Payment of the Moneys to be carried to the Consolidated Fund under this Act, as they may think fit; and a Return of any such Rules and Regulations which may be issued by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury shall be laid before Parliament within Six Weeks from the Date of the Issue thereof, if Parliament be then sitting; and if not then sitting, within Six Weeks from the Day of the next ensuing Meeting of Parliament.

SCHEDULE (A.)

SCHEDULE OF SALARIES, PENSIONS, COMPENSATIONS, and other PAYMENTS, charged on the gross REVENUES of CUSTOMS, EXCISE, and TAXES, under the Acts 7 Anne, cap. 11; 10 Anne, cap. 26; 50 Geo. 3, cap. 31, and subsequent Acts, to be charged on the CONSOLIDATED FUND.

Salaries of the Lord President of the Court of Session, the Lord Justice Clerk, and the other Judges of the Court of Session performing the duties of the Courts of Session, Justiciary, and Court of Exchequer, and of the Bill Chambers, as fixed by the Act 2 & 3 Vict., cap. 36 - - - - - - - - -

Pensions of the Judges in Scotland, according to the Scale fixed by the Act 48 Geo. 3, cap. 145, and 2 Will. 4, cap. 54 - - - - - - - -

Salaries of Sheriffs and Sheriffs Substitute, per Act 16 & 17 Vict., cap. 80 - -

Retiring Allowances to the Sheriffs Substitute, under the Act 1 & 2 Vict., cap. 119 -

Compensations to various Persons for Loss of Fees, and Annuities, granted under the following Acts, viz.:

- 49 Geo. 3, cap. 42 - - - - - - - - - -
- 50 Geo. 3, cap. 112 - - - - - - - - -
- 1 & 2 Geo. 4, cap. 38 and cap. 39 - - - - - - - -
- 4 Geo. 4, cap. 97 - - - - - - - - - -
- 11 Geo. 4, & 1 Will. 4, cap. 69 - - - - - - - -
- 1 & 2 Vict., cap. 118 - - - - - - - - -
- 10 & 11 Vict., cap. 47, and cap. 51, and cap. 67 - - - -

Augmentation of Stipends to Scotch Clergy, under the Acts 50 Geo. 3, cap. 84; 4 Geo. 4, cap. 79; 5 Geo. 4, cap. 72, and cap. 90 - - - - -

Charges upon the Customs Revenue of the Isle of Man, under the Act 16 & 17 Vict., cap. 107 - - - - - - - - - - - - -

---

SCHEDULE

SCHEDULE (B.)

SCHEDULE OF SALARIES and PAYMENTS charged under various Acts of Parliament upon or payable out of the Consolidated Fund, and ~~upon~~ the several Branches of the Public Revenues, to be provided for by ANNUAL VOTES, or otherwise, as prescribed in Clauses ~~21~~ and 67.

Now Charged on
C. Fund	~~Salaries of Clerks Assistant, Serjeant at Arms, and Speaker's Secretary~~	~~12 & 13 Vict., c. 72.~~
,,	Salaries and Contingencies of the Audit Office, exclusive of the Salaries of the Board	46 Geo. 3, c. 141.
,,	Salaries and Contingencies of the General Register Office of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, England	6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86.
,,	Salaries and Contingencies of the General Register Office of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, Ireland	7 & 8 Vict., c. 81.
,,	Salaries and Contingencies of the Tithe, Copyhold, and Inclosure Commission	6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71. 14 & 15 Vict., c. 53. 8 & 9 Vict., c. 118.
,,	Salaries and Contingencies of the National Debt Office	4 Geo. 4, c. 19.
,,	Salaries and Contingencies of the Public Works Loan Office, including the Expenses of the Office for West India Islands Relief	5 Vict. (sess. 2), cap. 9 and 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 125.
,,	~~Ditto~~ Contingent Expenses of the Lunacy Commissioners	8 & 9 Vict., c. 100.
,,	Salaries of Official Referees and Registrar for Metropolitan Buildings	7 & 8 Vict., c. 84. 9 Vict., c. 5.
,,	Salary of the Registrar of Friendly Societies	13 & 14 Vict., c. 115. 15 & 16 Vict., c. 65.
,,	Salary of the General Superintendent of Turnpike Roads in South Wales	7 & 8 Vict., c. 91.
,,	Salary of the Secretary to the Board of Education in Ireland and Contingencies of the Board	53 Geo. 3, c. 107. 3 Geo. 4, c. 79.
,,	Allowance in aid of the Royal Irish Academy, Dublin	40 Geo. 3, c. 60. 41 Geo. 3, c. 32.
,,	Expenses of the Police Courts of the Metropolis, except the Salaries of the Police Magistrates	2 & 3 Vict., c. 71.
,,	Expenses of the Mounted Police, River Police, and Police Van Service, and Superannuation of the late Horse and Foot Patrol	2 & 3 Vict., c. 47.
,,	Contribution towards defraying the charge of maintaining the Police of the Metropolis and Salaries of the Commissioners of Police	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 89. 2 & 3 Vict., c. 47.
,,	Salaries and Contingencies, Queen's Prison	5 Vict., c. 22.
,,	Salary of Clerk of the Patents, Court of Chancery	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 84.
,,	Salary of the Clerk of the Crown, Court of Chancery	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 84. 7 & 8 Vict., c. 77. 15 & 16 Vict., c. 87, s. 23.
,,	Salaries of Treasurers of County Courts	9 & 10 Vict., c. 95.
,,	Deficiency of Fee Fund of County Courts to pay Salaries of Officers, and the Expenses of the said Courts other than the Salaries of Judges

Now Charged on
C. Fund.	Expenses of the Crown Office - - - -	6 Vict., c. 20.
"	Expenses of the Registrar's and Marshal's Office of the High Court of Admiralty - - - -	3 & 4 Vict., c. 66.
"	Remuneration to Revising Barristers for revising Lists of Voters in England and Wales - -	6 Vict., c. 18.
"	Deficiency of the Fee Fund for Payment of Salaries and Contingencies of Officers of Court of Queen's Bench, Westminster, excepting Masters - -	1 Vict., c. 30. 15 & 16 Vict., c. 73.
"	Deficiency of the Fee Fund for Payment of Salaries and Contingencies of Officers of Court of Common Pleas, Westminster, excepting Masters - -
"	Deficiency of Fee Fund for Payment of Salaries and Contingencies of Officers of Court of Exchequer, Westminster, excepting Masters - - - -
"	Salaries and Allowances of Officers (excepting Salary of Master of the Rolls and Masters in Ordinary) and Clerks and Expenses in the Court of Chancery in Ireland, under the Acts - - - - -	4 Geo. 4, c. 61. 6 Geo. 4, c. 30. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 78. 11 & 12 Vict., c. 132.
"	Salaries and Allowances of the Officers and Clerks of the Court of Queen's Bench, Ireland, excepting Masters - - - - - - - - -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 107.
"	Salaries and Allowances of the Officers and Clerks of the Court of Common Pleas, Ireland, excepting Masters - - - - - - - - -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 107.
"	Salaries and Allowances of the Officers and Clerks of the Court of Exchequer, Ireland, excepting Masters - - - - - - - - -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 107.
"	Salaries of Taxing Officers in Common Law Business, and of Clerks to ~~ditto,~~ the same, in Ireland -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 107. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 53.
"	Salary of Clerk to the Court of Errors, Ireland -	40 Geo. 3, c. 39.
"	Salaries and Contingent Expenses of the ~~Commissioners and others, of the~~ Insolvent Debtors' Court, Ireland (except Salaries of Commissioners) - -	1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 59. 3 Geo. 4, c. 124.
"	Salaries of Registrars to the Judges, Ireland - -	1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 54.
"	Salaries of Marshals, Chaplains, Medical Officers; Repairs and Expenses of the Four Courts, Marshalsea, Ireland - - - - - - -	7 Geo. 4, c. 70. 7 Geo. 4, c. 74. 50 Geo. 3, c. 103.
"	Salaries of Justices of Police (Commissioners), Dublin - - - - - - - - -	6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 29.
"	Pay, Superannuations, and all other Expenses of the Constabulary Police in Ireland - - - -	9 & 10 Vict., c. 97. 10 & 11 Vict., c. 100.
"	Office of Clerk of Writs and Appearances and Seal Expenses (Dublin) - - - - - -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 107. 13 & 14 Vict., c. 18.
"	Registrar of Judgments, ~~ditto~~ Office of, Dublin -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 90. 13 & 14 Vict., c. ~~48~~ 74.
"	Expenses of Judges attending adjourned Assizes (Ireland), saving and except the Salaries and Remunerations to the Judges and Crown Lawyers acting judicially, and presiding or serving at adjourned Assizes - - - - - -	36 Geo. 3, c. 26, and 40 Geo. 3, c. 69, Irish.
"	Expenses of Judges attending Special Commissions (Ireland), saving and except the Salaries and Remunerations to the Judges and Crown Lawyers acting judicially and presiding or serving at Special Commissions - - - - - - -

Now Charged on
C. Fund.	Lodging Money for Judges at Assizes (Ireland) -	41 Geo. 3, c. 88.
,,	County Infirmaries, Ireland - - - - -	5 Geo. 3, c. 20.
,,	Bounty on Slaves, and Tonnage of Slave Vessels -	1 Will. 4, c. 55. 1 & 2 Vict., c. 47.
Now Charged on Customs and Excise.	Salaries and Allowances, and Expenses of the Officers, Clerks, and others of the several Courts of Law in Scotland, Salaries of Her Majesty's Advocate, Her Majesty's Solicitor, Keeper of the Register of Hornings and Abbreviates of Adjudications, Deputy Clerk Registrar and other Salaries, Allowances and Expenses payable out of the Revenues of Customs and Excise, and not placed on Consolidated Fund in Schedule (A.) - -	7 Anne, c. 11. 10 Anne, c. 26, and subsequent Acts.
,,	Her Majesty's Allowance for the Register House, Edinburgh - - - - - - - -
,,	Salaries of the Lion King-at-Arms, Heralds and Pursuivants - - - - - - - -
,,	Expenses of Judges and Officers of the Circuits of the Justiciary and Jury Courts - - - -
,,	Expenses of extra Advocates Depute, Clerks and Macers on Circuit - - - - - - -
Customs.	Difference between Dues on British and Foreign Vessels under Treaties of Reciprocity - - -	59 Geo. 3, c. 54.
Customs and Excise.	Treasurers of Counties for Corn Returns, Salaries of Inspectors, -&c-., and Expenses - - - -	5 Vict., (s. 2), c. 14.
Customs.	Expenses of Quarantine.
Ditto.	Expenses of carrying out the Merchant Seamen and Mercantile Marine Acts - - - - - -	7 & 8 Vict., c. 112.
Excise.	The Commissioners of White Herring Fishery Board, &c., and for repair of Piers, Quays, and Boats, -&e.	5 Geo. 4, c. 64.
Ditto.	Ditto for improving Fisheries and Manufactures -	5 Geo. 1, c. 20.
Ditto.	Salaries to Process-servers, Ireland - - -	7 Geo. 4, c. 36.
Taxes.	Commissioners Highland Roads, -&e-. and Bridges -	59 Geo. 3, c. 35.
Post Office.	Expenses of Milford Road Fund - - - -	6 Will. 4, c. 25.
Customs.	Charges of Collection and Management of the Revenue, ~~Superannuations, Pensions, &c.,~~ of Customs -	Various Acts.
Inland Revenue.	Ditto - ditto ,, - ,, - -
	Of Inland Revenue - - - - -
Post Office.	Ditto - ditto ,, - ,, - -
	Of Post Office - - - - - -

Appendix, No. 2.

TREASURY MINUTE, dated the 22d August 1854, for carrying into effect the Provisions of the Act 17 & 18 Vict., cap. 94.

Object of the Act.

MY Lords read the Act 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94, altering the mode of providing for certain expenses heretofore charged upon certain branches of the Public Revenues, and upon the Consolidated Fund.

By this Act various judicial and other charges, which have hitherto been defrayed under the authority of various Acts of Parliament from the revenues of Customs, Excise, and Taxes, are made payable out of the Consolidated Fund from the 1st April 1854. These charges are enumerated in Schedule A. annexed to the Act.

Various other charges, described in Schedule B. annexed to the Act, which have hitherto been paid out of the Consolidated Fund, or out of the revenues of Customs, Excise, Taxes, and Post Office, are by the said Act removed from the Consolidated Fund, or from the said branches of the public revenue, and provision has been made for paying the same out of moneys provided by Parliament, as set forth in the Appropriation Act for the year 1854–5.

My Lords proceed to lay down the regulations for the future payment of these several charges, in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

Charges of collection to be paid, as before, out of the revenue collected on the spot.

In giving effect to that part of the Act which transfers the charges of collection and management of the revenue to the Votes of Parliament, my Lords consider it desirable to adhere, as far as possible, to the regulations at present established for collecting and remitting the public revenue, and for defraying the public services which have hitherto been paid in every part of the United Kingdom out of local receipts. The change which has been made in the mode of providing for the expenses of collection has for its object to bring that branch of the public expenditure under the annual revision of the House of Commons, and does not render it necessary to restrict the facilities which have hitherto existed for the payment of such expenses as may have received the sanction of Parliament. Under the existing mode of payment the public money is made available for the service of the public at the earliest moment, all unnecessary remittances to and from the country are avoided, a saving of interest and commission is effected, the security of the public money is promoted, and the public accounts are simplified. This mode of payment is moreover consistent with the provisions of various Acts of Parliament regulating the payment of naval and other voted services where they are directed to be made by the collectors of the revenue out of local receipts. My Lords desire, therefore, that the expenses of collection and management at the several stations throughout the United Kingdom may be paid, as heretofore, out of the revenue collected on the spot, and that the vouchers for such payments may be remitted to London and treated as bills recoverable out of the Votes of Parliament.

The cash received on account of revenue at the head offices in London has in like manner been made immediately available for the public service, and the claims on those offices have been satisfied out of the current daily receipts. The payment of such receipts to the Bank in gross, and the issue of them again from the Bank for the purpose of meeting the daily payments, would have the effect of increasing the balances, and would be attended with unnecessary risk. My Lords are therefore pleased to authorise the Revenue Departments to continue their existing banking arrangements, which are perfectly consistent with the strict appropriation of the grants of Parliament, with such modifications only as the following directions may render necessary.

The payments consist—

The payments to be made by the Revenue Departments, either at head-quarters or through their local collectors, will consist of—

1st. Of drawbacks, pensions, &c.;

1st. Drawbacks, repayments, pensions, superannuations and retired allowances. These payments remain as heretofore, finally chargeable on the revenue, and they will not be affected by any of the regulations to be made for the services to be defrayed out of the sums voted by Parliament for the charges of collection and management of the revenue.

2d. Charges of collection;

2d. Advances for charges of collection and management, which being provided for by votes of Parliament, will be repaid to the revenue out of such votes.

3d. Advances for other departments.

3d. Advances for other departments of Government for services provided for by Parliament, which will in like manner be repaid to the revenue out of the funds and in the manner prescribed by Parliament.

Royal Orders issued in favour of the Receivers of Customs and Inland Revenue and the Postmaster-general,

In accordance with the provisions of the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, which prescribes the authorities and forms for the issue of the grants of Parliament, my Lords have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Orders of Credit in favour of Sir Francis Hastings Charles Doyle, Bart., Receiver-General of Customs, for the following grants for the service of the year 1854–5; viz.,

£. 840,785 for salaries and expenses of the Customs Department.

479,320 for salaries and expenses of the Coast-Guard, including revenue cruisers.

And for the following sums, in favour of James Brotherton, Esq., Receiver-General of Inland Revenue; viz.,

£. 1,154,594 for the salaries and expenses of the Inland Revenue Department.

52,769 for the salaries and expenses of the Revenue Police in Ireland and "Seamew" steamer.

Also

Appendix, No. 2.

Also in favour of the Right Honourable the Viscount Canning, Her Majesty's Postmaster-General, for the sum of 1,525,335 l. to defray the charges for Post Office services, and the collection of the revenue of that department.

and forwarded to the Exchequer.

These Royal Orders, and the Treasury warrants required by the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, will be forwarded to the Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

Course to be followed in making issues out of the grants.

When money may be wanted by the Revenue Departments on any of the votes of their respective estimates, either to replace advances made out of revenue, or to meet prospective payment, a certificate of the amount required on each vote, signed by the Comptroller-General of Customs, by the Comptroller and Accountant-General of Inland Revenue, or by the Receiver and Accountant-General of the Post Office, is to be addressed to this Board, when Exchequer credits for the amount applied for will be granted at the Bank of England. From these credits, the necessary writes-off or transfers to the drawing and vote accounts, or to such other accounts as the advances or payments may be made from, will be ordered by the persons authorised to draw on the Bank accounts.

Grants appropriated to services which will come in course of payment during the year.

My Lords desire to call the attention of the Revenue Departments to the terms of the Appropriation Act, by which the sums granted are to be appropriated; the several sums are granted for the services "which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March 1855;" in other words, the payments to be made in the year are to be considered as the expenditure of the year chargeable against the grant of Parliament for that year. This principle of applying the votes of Parliament, which is in accordance with that adopted for all the naval and military expenditure, will enable the Revenue Departments to close their annual accounts of expenditure at a much earlier period than if the votes had been taken for payments falling due within the year.

Excess of expenditure beyond the grants should and can be avoided.

The Revenue Departments should be careful to avoid any excess of expenditure beyond the sums appropriated by Parliament in each year for the service of their respective departments. As so large a proportion of the expenditure consists of salaries of establishments, my Lords consider that there will be little trouble in so regulating them, and in making the proper provision for them in the annual estimates, as to avoid the danger of exceeding the limit of expense prescribed by the vote of Parliament.

Annual accounts of the expenditure, as compared with the votes, to be rendered to the Treasury for Parliament.

To give a further guarantee to Parliament for the due application of the sums granted upon the annual estimates, the several Revenue Departments are to prepare annually abstract accounts of the sums expended in the year contrasted with the sums voted; and these accounts are to be transmitted to this Board, for presentation to Parliament, as soon after the termination of the financial year as the same can be accurately made up.

Surpluses to be surrendered, and excesses to be voted.

If it should appear by these accounts that any surplus of grants remains after defraying the expenses of the year, the same will be declared available as Ways and Means; if, on the other hand, any excess of expenditure beyond the grants shall have taken place, a statement of the amount of such excess must be submitted to Parliament, that a special vote may be taken for it.

Salaries to be paid according to the new quarter days, from the 31st March 1855.

The payment of salaries which has hitherto been made for the quarters ending 5th of January, 5th of April, 5th of July, and 10th of October, in each year, should hereafter be made for the quarters ending 30th of June, 30th of September, 31st of December, and 31st of March. This change has already taken place in the Post Office, and it should be carried into effect in the Customs and Inland Revenue Departments not later than the 31st of March next, on which day my Lords propose to alter the termination of the quarters for the financial accounts.

Financial statements how to be prepared with reference to the quarter days.

My Lords also desire that financial statements of the gross receipt and net produce of the several heads of duty, of the charges of collection, and of the income and disposal of income for the quarter ended the 5th of April last, be made up in the usual form, to be laid before Parliament at its next meeting, and that the succeeding financial accounts be made up from that date to the 31st of March 1855.

Judicial charges in Scotland provisionally payable out of gross revenue.

According to the proviso contained in the first clause of the Act, the following charges of the judicial establishments in Scotland remain chargeable on the gross revenue during the lives of the present holders, and the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer will transmit to this Board separate quarterly schedules of such charges, that the issue of the amount may be authorised through the Receiver-general of Inland Revenue, and no further charge on account of the judicial establishment in Scotland will be payable out of the Customs Revenue, viz.:

	£.	s.	d.
Salary of the Clerk of Justiciary - - -	185	–	–	per annum.
Presenter of Signatures (Exchequer) - -	300	–	–	„
Writer of Hornings - - - - -	50	–	–	„
Salaries of Sheriff Clerks - - - -	9,059	4	–	„
Estimated charge for 1854–55 - -	£. 9,594	4	–

Charges in Scotland payable out of Consolidated Fund.

The following charges, included in Schedule A., hitherto paid out of the revenues of Customs, Excise, and Taxes, are made payable by the first clause of the Act, out of the Consolidated Fund, from the 1st April 1854, viz.:—

Salaries of the Judges of the Courts of Session, Justiciary, and Exchequer, and of the Bill Chambers, in Scotland.
Pensions of the Judges in Scotland.
Salaries of Sheriffs and Sheriffs Substitute, Scotland.
Retiring allowances to Sheriffs Substitute, Scotland.
Compensations to various persons for loss of fees and annuities, Scotland.
Augmentation of stipends to Scotch clergy.

Appendix, No. 2.

The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer will transmit to this Board a separate quarterly Schedule of the above charges payable out of the Consolidated Fund, upon which my Lords will give their usual warrant to the Paymaster-general to place the amount to his credit at the bank in Scotland employed by the Government.

Charges in Scotland payable out of Votes.

All other charges connected with the support of the judicial establishments in Scotland, and which are described in Schedule B. of the Act, are payable from the 1st of April 1854 out of the sums granted for such charges in the Appropriation Act for 1854–5. These charges are to be added to the Schedule of Services payable out of Votes of Parliament transmitted to this Board quarterly by the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, in order that the issue of the amount thereof may be authorised through the Paymaster-General.

The salaries of the Macers, &c., of the Court of Session, and of the officers payable from the Fee Fund, are to be included in the Schedule of the Votes to be paid by the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer. The Collector of the Fee Fund will transmit to the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, on the 1st September next, for the quarterly Schedule to the 30th September, a statement of the fees received by him since the close of the last quarter, and will pay the amount thereof to the account of the Votes of Parliament in the national bank where the Government accounts are at present kept; the Collector will follow a similar course, in future quarters, with the fees received by him in the three months ending on the 1st December, 1st March, 1st June, and 1st September, in every year.

Charges of Civil Government of Isle of Man.

The payments for the support of the Civil Government of the Isle of Man, and for public works, hitherto chargeable upon the Customs Revenue of the island, are payable out of the Consolidated Fund from the 1st of April 1854. These payments will continue to be made out of the local revenue by way of advance; and on the Commissioners of Customs transmitting to this Board the accounts of such advances in each quarter, my Lords will cause the necessary charge to be made on the Consolidated Fund, in order that the amount thereof may be repaid by the Paymaster-General to the Receiver-General of Customs.

Audit Office.

The salaries of the Commissioners for auditing the public accounts being payable out of the Consolidated Fund, while the other salaries, as well as the contingent expenses of the Audit Office, are payable out of the Vote of Parliament, the Salary List transmitted by the Commissioners of Audit to the Paymaster-General every quarter should be confined to the salaries payable out of the Vote of Parliament, as a distinct authority for the payment of the salaries of the Commissioners out of the Consolidated Fund will be issued to the Paymaster-General by this Board.

Commissioners of Lunacy.

As the salaries and travelling allowances of the Commissioners of Lunacy, and the salaries of their establishment, are continued on the Consolidated Fund, while the contingent expenses of the Commissioners are by the Act transferred to the Votes, separate applications for advances should in future be made by the Commissioners of Lunacy to this Board, in accordance with that arrangement.

Police Courts.

The statement furnished to this Board quarterly, upon which the advances to the Receiver of the Police Courts are authorised, should in future be divided into two statements; one for the salaries of the magistrates, the payment of which is charged on the Consolidated Fund; the other for the salaries of the clerks, ushers, gaolers, and messengers, and for the other expenses of the police courts which are payable out of the Vote of Parliament. As provision has been made for the full amount of the expenses of the police courts, the fees, penalties, and forfeitures hitherto applied in diminution of the charge on the Consolidated Fund, are payable to the Exchequer; and the Receiver should pay over to the Paymaster-General, for transfer to the Exchequer, the amount of such receipts from the 1st of April last. The contributions to the Civil Superannuation Fund, received since the 1st of April last, should, in like manner, be paid to the Paymaster-General, for transfer to the Exchequer, and the same course should be followed quarterly in future.

Charges, Ireland.

A copy of the Act and of the Supplemental (Revenue) Estimates for 1854–5 should be transmitted to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, in order that his quarterly Schedules may in future be prepared in accordance with the classification of the charges adopted in those estimates, the voted charges being classed in a separate Schedule.

The following services hitherto paid out of the Revenue of Customs have been provided for under "Vote 3, Miscellaneous Charges," in the Civil Supplemental (Revenue) Estimates for the year 1854–5, viz.:

Trinity Dues, &c. — Difference of Trinity Light and Pilotage Dues under Reciprocity Treaties.

Corn Returns. — Treasurers of Counties for Corn Returns.

Quarantine expenses. — Quarantine Expenses.

Merchant Seamen's Act. — Expenses of carrying out the Merchant Seamen's Act.

The Customs Department will continue charged with the duty of making these payments, but they are no longer to be finally charged upon the revenue. The Commissioners will transmit to this Board quarterly accounts of the advances made out of the Customs revenue for such services, that my Lords may authorise the Paymaster-General to issue out of the Vote of Parliament to the Receiver-General of Customs the amounts necessary to replace such advances.

The

Appendix, No. 2.

The following charges hitherto defrayed from the revenues of Excise and Taxes have also been provided for under Vote 3 of the Civil Supplemental Estimates for the year 1854–5, viz.:

Corn Returns.

Salaries of Inspectors of Corn Returns and Expenses.

Process Servers.

Salaries of Process Servers, Ireland.

Board of Fisheries, &c.

Expenses of the Board of Fisheries, and building of Piers and Quays, Repairs of Boats, &c., Scotland.

Highland Roads, &c.

Grant to the Commissioners of Highland Roads and Bridges.

Board of Manufactures.

Annuity to the Board of Manufactures in Scotland.

It is necessary that the payments for the first and second items should continue to be made by the Collectors of the Revenue; and on receiving quarterly applications from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, my Lords will direct the Paymaster-General to repay the sums advanced to the account of the Receiver-General. With respect to the other three charges, my Lords will make arrangements for paying them in future by direct issues through the Paymaster-General.

Milford Road Fund.

The arrangement made by this Board in June 1840, under which an annual sum of 437*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* has been paid out of the Post-Office revenue, to liquidate the principal and interest of loans made by the Public Works Loan Commissioners for the completion of roads in Carmarthen and Pembrokeshire, and which sum has been transferred to the Votes for the year 1854–5 under the head of "Milford Road Fund," is one which my Lords are of opinion should cease after payment of the sum voted for the present financial year. The additional rates of postage imposed by the Act 6 Will. 4, c. 25, on letters between Great Britain and Ireland, by way of Milford Haven, as a security for the repayment of the loans in question, having been abolished by the introduction of the Penny Postage in 1840, it does not appear to my Lords desirable that the fictitious mode of extinguishing the debt which has been pursued since that year should be continued.

Militia charges.

Under the Act 49 Geo. 3, c. 120, s. 76, relating to the Militia, the collectors of the revenue are required to pay to the clerks of general meetings, and to the clerks of sub-division meetings, the sums therein specified, as remuneration for their attendance. It is desirable that these charges should be removed from the Customs and Excise Revenues, and that they should be paid out of the general Militia Vote. My Lords therefore request that the Boards of Customs and Inland Revenue will issue the necessary directions for discontinuing such payments, and that the claimants may be referred to this Board for the future payment of the charges in question.

Two charges have hitherto appeared in the Finance Accounts laid before Parliament, as payable out of the Excise Revenue, under the head of "Payments other than Charges of Collection," which are not included in either of the Schedules annexed to the Act;

Allowances to officers of the late Tax Department.

1st. Allowances to late officers of the Tax Department in Ireland.

Clothing on removal of convicts Ireland.

2d. Expenses of Clothing on removal of convicts in Ireland.

As the Tax and Excise Departments are now consolidated, the first charge is clearly part of the general non-effective charge of the Inland Revenue Department, and should be paid out of the same fund as other similar charges.

The charge for clothing on the removal of convicts in Ireland, was transferred to the Votes in Class 3 of the Miscellaneous Estimates for the year 1849–50, and the charge on the Excise Revenue should have ceased from that year. My Lords will be prepared to direct the repayment to the Excise Revenue of all sums advanced for those expenses from the 1st April 1849, from which date an annual provision has been made for them in the Votes of Parliament, on receiving from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue a statement of the sums paid in each financial year. As these expenses are no longer chargeable on the Excise Revenue, my Lords are of opinion that it will be desirable to discontinue the present mode of paying them through the agency of the Collectors of Excise which was adopted under the provisions of the 117th section of the Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 74, and that arrangements should be made for paying them through the Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin in future, for which purpose a communication is to be made to the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Other charges in Schedule B.

With respect to the various charges in Schedule B., which are not specially referred to in this Minute, my Lords propose to issue separate directions as the charges come before them for payment.

Mode of adjusting past payments.

It only remains for my Lords to prescribe the mode of adjustment to be pursued, under the authority of the 1st clause of the Act, in regard to such of the payments made out of the gross revenues or out of the Consolidated Fund before the passing of the Act, as cease to be chargeable on those funds, for any period subsequent to the 1st April 1854.

The Commissioners of Customs, and the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, are to prepare and transmit to this Board statements of the sums advanced by them in the quarter ending 5th July last, and in the present quarter, out of the gross revenues of Customs, Excise and Taxes, for the several charges enumerated in Schedule A. of the Act, in order that my Lords may take the necessary steps for the repayment of the amounts to the several branches of the Public Revenue. As the advances made by the Revenue Boards for the Judicial Establishments in Scotland will be partly chargeable on the Consolidated solidated Fund, and partly on the Votes of Parliament, the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer will separate the proportions of such advances to be repaid to the gross revenue from each fund, in accordance with the division of such charges laid down for future issues at page 579 of this Minute.

Appendix, No. 2.

The Commissioners of Customs and Inland Revenue, and the Postmaster-General, are also to prepare statements of the several sums advanced out of the revenue in the quarter to 5th July last, and in the present quarter, for services described in Schedule B. of the Act; and on receiving such statements my Lords will give the necessary directions for replacing the amounts to the different branches of revenue.

Transmit copy of the Act and of the Supplemental Estimates to the Paymaster-General, and to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, and desire that they will prepare and transmit to this Board separate statements, in accordance with the provisions of the 1st clause of this Act, of the sums advanced to them in the quarter to the 5th July last, and in the present quarter, out of the Consolidated Fund, for the several services described in Schedule B. of the Act, in order that my Lords may direct the issue of the necessary credits for the repayment of such advances to the Consolidated Fund.

Communications to the Exchequer,

Transmit to the Comptroller-General of the Exchequer the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants authorising the issue of credits to the persons therein named for the several services transferred to the Votes of Parliament by the Act 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94, and acquaint him that my Lords propose to authorise the grant of credits at the Bank of England to the several Revenue Departments, in precisely the same manner as they do in the case of the Paymaster-General and other public accountants.

to the Bank of England,

Acquaint the Governor and Company of the Bank of England that Parliament having made provision by Votes for the expenses of the Revenue Departments, under the authority of an Act passed in the last session of Parliament (17 & 18 Vict., c. 94), it will be necessary that Exchequer credits should be granted to the Receiver-General of Customs, the Receiver-General of Inland Revenue, and the Postmaster-General, to enable them to defray such expenses, and that these Exchequer credits will be drawn upon by the several departments under the regulations already in force in regard to other accounts opened in their books for those departments, except that they will only be operated upon by writes-off.

to the Revenue Departments,

Transmit copies of this Minute to the several Revenue Departments for their information and guidance.

and to other Offices.

Write to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, the Lunacy Commissioners, the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, the Collector of the Fee Fund of the Court of Session, Scotland, and the Public Works Loan Commissioners, in accordance with the directions contained in this Minute.

TREASURY MINUTE, dated 24 November 1854, prescribing further Arrangements for giving effect to the Act 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94.

Further arrangements recommended by the Board of Inland Revenue.

MY Lords have before them a letter from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, dated 19th ultimo, reporting on Treasury Minute of the 22d of August last, for giving effect to the provisions of the Act 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94, and submitting to my Lords certain arrangements connected with that department for carrying out the objects of the said Minute; these arrangements my Lords are pleased to sanction in the following Minute:—

Advances in Ireland to be repaid in England, and to be carried to the Irish Account.

Acquaint the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer that my Lords have received an application from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, in which they request that authority may be given by this Board to his Lordship, to receive in London the sums to be repaid on account of advances made from the revenue of stamps and income-tax in Ireland, and to place them to the credit of the Exchequer Account in Ireland, in the same manner as he now deals with similar advances from the Excise Revenue in that country, and state that as my Lords fully concur in the suggestion made by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, they desire that he will receive the sums in question in London on account of the Revenue collected in Ireland, and carry them to account accordingly.

A separate account for the quarter ended 5 April 1854 to be transmitted to the Commissioners of Audit.

Acquaint the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts that the accounts connected with the Public Revenue will in future be made up for the year terminating on the 31st of March, instead of for the year ending on the 5th January; and that my Lords have given their approval to a suggestion made by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue on the 19th October last, for making up the accounts of the Accountant and Comptroller-general of that Department to the 31st March in each year, instead of to the 5th January; and that under this arrangement a separate account for the quarter from the 6th January to the 5th April 1854, will be prepared and transmitted to them.

Salaries and allowances to be uniformly calculated for broken periods according to the number of days in the quarter.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue have suggested that it would be convenient if my Lords would authorise them to adopt one uniform principle in the mode of computing salaries and allowances for broken periods in the several branches of their department; and they have called attention to the correspondence which took place on this subject in the year 1851, on a similar suggestion made by the Commissioners of Audit.

My Lords have again under their consideration the reports made to them on this subject by the Commissioners of Audit on the 8th July and 5th September 1851, and by the Commissioners missioners of Inland Revenue on the 9th August and 15th December 1851. It appears from these Reports that the obstacle to the adoption of one uniform principle of computation for broken periods arose from the great variation in the number of days in the revenue quarters; but this objection no longer exists. The expenses of collection being now voted, and the revenue year having been altered to correspond with the financial year, my Lords are of opinion that the change in the mode of computing broken periods in the Excise branch of the Inland Revenue Department, proposed by the Commissioners of Audit in their letter of the 8th July 1851 should now be adopted. Appendix, No. 2.

Acquaint the Commissioners of Audit and the Commissioners of Inland Revenue that the uniform principle of calculating broken periods of a quarter according to the number of days in the quarter, is to be adopted in future.

Acquaint the Commissioners of Inland Revenue that my Lords approve of their deferring the change of period for making up the charges of the several duties, and for holding sittings for the collection thereof, until the quarter commencing on the 6th January next. Change of period to be deferred in certain cases till the January quarter.

State also that my Lords concur with them in considering the half-yearly reports of increase and diminution as superseded by the annual Estimates and Accounts to be submitted to Parliament. Half-yearly reports of increase and diminution superseded by the annual estimates and accounts.

Acquaint them, also, that my Lords have given directions to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer respecting the receipt of money in England on account of Irish Revenue, and to the Commissioners of Audit respecting the period of making up the account of the Accountant and Comptroller-general in accordance with their suggestions. Inland revenue informed of instructions to Exchequer and Audit Board.

Treasury Minute, dated 2 March 1855, for paying the Revenue to the Exchequer Account daily.

My Lords read again their Minute of the 26th September 1834, explanatory of the Exchequer Regulation Act, 4 Will. 4, c. 15. In that Minute they prescribed the regulations under which transfers should be made from the accounts of the several Receivers General of the Revenue at the Bank of England to the Account of the Exchequer. According to the Minute of 26 Sept. 1834, the Receivers-general make their payments to the Exchequer on three days in the week.

According to those regulations, the Receivers General are required to make their payments to the Exchequer Account by one o'clock on three days of every week, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, and on quarter days up to five o'clock of the afternoon.

It appears to my Lords desirable that the transfers should be made from the accounts of the Receivers General to that of the Exchequer at the Bank of England daily, in order that the revenue may be rendered available for the public service with the least possible delay. This arrangement is already in operation at the Bank of Ireland. The payments to be made daily in future.

My Lords do not intend to make any alteration in the hour fixed by their former Minute for making the transfers to the Exchequer Account, except that in order to expedite the completion of the accounts of the Revenue prepared on the last day of each quarter, no second transfer should take place on those days, but that the Receivers General should complete their payments to the Exchequer Account by one o'clock P.M., as on other days. On the last day of each quarter the Receivers General to complete their payments by one o'clock, as on other days.

Under the Minute of the 26th September 1834, which directed that the Receivers General should not reserve on their accounts larger sums than the public service required, some of the Revenue departments have made their daily transfers for fractional sums. My Lords consider that it will promote simplicity in the accounts if the Revenue departments, in their daily transfers upon account to the Exchequer, will avoid paying in the fractional parts of 1,000 l. The fractional parts of 1,000*l.* not to be paid in.

As my Lords wish to receive the earliest information of the sums paid to the Exchequer, they desire that the Revenue departments will immediately advise them of the daily transfers, and when arrangements shall have been made for discontinuing the specification papers now in use, that they will send a duplicate of such advice to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. When no transfers are made, nil returns are to be sent. The daily transfers to be immediately advised to the Treasury and Exchequer.

The same Minute prescribes that no sum shall be received on the Exchequer Account at the Bank of England without the production of a specification paper, signed by the Comptroller-general or Assistant Comptroller of the Exchequer. Although this regulation is necessary in regard to a certain class of miscellaneous receipts, it causes inconvenience and delay when applied to the regular transfers made by the Revenue departments. Each department is compelled to send to the Exchequer-office, in Whitehall-yard, to obtain the required specification paper before any transfer can be made to the Exchequer Account at the Bank; and the inconvenience arising from this regulation will be much increased when the daily transfers directed by this Minute come into operation. My Lords are therefore desirous of relieving the Customs, Inland Revenue, and Post Office departments from the regulation prescribed by their Minute of the 26th September 1834; and they desire that the Comptroller-general may be informed of their wishes in regard to the discontinuance of the specification papers, and that he be requested to suggest the mode in which this can be done without inconvenience to his department. Inconvenience of specification papers in reference to the regular transfers made by the Revenue Departments.

As

The Comptroller of the Exchequer requested to furnish daily returns of specifications and credits.

As my Lords find that it is necessary for properly conducting the public service that they should be enabled to ascertain the state of the public monies in the Exchequer daily, instead of weekly, as at present, they desire that the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer may be requested to furnish this Board with a daily return of the specifications signed at the Exchequer for the receipt of money on the Exchequer Account at the Bank of England, and also with a daily return of the amount of credits granted on the Exchequer Accounts at the Banks of England and Ireland under the several heads of service, for the Consolidated Fund and for Supply Services, according to the forms annexed.

Credits to the Paymaster-general to pay off Deficiency Bills to be granted in the same manner as other credits.

When the preceding arrangements shall have been carried into effect, my Lords consider that the credits to the Paymaster-general, to enable him to pay off Deficiency Bills, may be granted on letters of direction signed by the secretary or assistant secretary to this Board, in the same manner as all other credits are granted, and that the "set-off" and credit may be sent to the Bank on the same day. Let the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer and the Paymaster-general be requested to make arrangements accordingly.

The Revenue year to be assimilated to the Financial year from the 31 March 1855.

My Lords are authorised by the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, to alter the periods of making up the revenue and other accounts from the 5th April, 5th July, 10th October, and 5th January (the dates to which the quarterly accounts have hitherto been made up) to the 31st March, 30th June, 30th September, and 31st December, so that the Revenue year and the Financial year may terminate on the same day, viz., 31st March.

My Lords desire that the Revenue Boards will make this change on the 31st March next, and that the quarterly accounts may in future be made up to the 30th June, 30th September, 31st December, and 31st March in each year.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to regulate his proceedings accordingly.

Acquaint the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and request that he will consider all payments which he may have been authorised to make out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund for the quarter to the 5th April 1855 as applicable to the quarter ending 31st March 1855; and request, further, that his quarterly account for the Audit Office, and his annual account for Parliament may be regulated accordingly.

Improved daily and weekly accounts to be rendered by the Banks of England and Ireland.

Inform the Bank of England and the Bank of Ireland of the several changes directed by this Minute, so far as they relate to each; and request the Bank of England to substitute for the daily and weekly returns specified in the margin, a daily account of receipts and payments according to the form annexed (A.), and in lieu of weekly accounts of cash balances of public accountants, and payments thereout, to transmit a weekly account according to the amended form annexed (B.)

1st. Daily account of the particulars of sums paid to the Exchequer account.
2d. Weekly return of Exchequer monies in the Bank of England.
3d. Weekly return of Exchequer deficiency bills.
4th. Weekly Bank returns of Exchequer credits, and payments thereout.

Copies of the Minute to be sent to various departments.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Boards of Customs and Inland Revenue, and to the Postmaster-general, and desire that they will govern themselves accordingly.

Transmit copy also to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts.

Write to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, the Paymaster-general, the Bank of England, and the Bank of Ireland, as directed.

FORM

FORM (A.)

Appendix, No. 2.

The Account of H. M. Exchequer at the Bank of England, on the 185

Dr.			Cr.
To Payments under the following Heads:	£.	s. d.	By Balance brought from the 185 - - - -	£.	s. d.
1st Consolidated Fund:			„ Revenue and other Receipts, under the following Heads, viz.:
			Customs - - -
			Excise - - - -
			Stamps - - }
			Land and Assessed Taxes }
			Property Tax - -
2d. Supply Services:			Post Office - - -
Army - - -			Crown Lands - -
Navy - - -			Drainage Advances -
Ordnance - - -			Public Works and Fisheries
Total Payments - £.
To Balance carried to next Account:—	£.	s. d.
Balance of Credits remaining - - }
Available Balance -			By Advance made this Day on Deficiency Bills - - -
Total - £.
Total - £.

Balance of Exchequer Credits remaining at the Close of the Week ending Saturday the 185 .

To whom granted.	Service.	Amount.
		£. s. d.

Exchequer Deficiency Bills outstanding, Week ending

	£. s. d.
Advanced in the Quarter commencing 1st of 185 - - -
Paid off in ditto - - - - - - - -
Outstanding on the 185 - - - - £.

Appendix, No. 2.

FORM (B.)

RETURN of CASH BALANCES on the following PUBLIC ACCOUNTS at the BANK of ENGLAND on Saturday the 185 .

		£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Customs:—Receiver-General	Cash Account
	Drawing Account
Inland Revenue:—Receiver-General	Excise
	Stamps and Taxes
	Postage Stamps
	Duties on Property
	Bankruptcy Stamps
	Admiralty Stamps
	Chancery Stamps
	Drainage Repayments
Postmaster-General	Cash Account
Commissioners of Woods, &c.	Cash Account
	Drawing Account
Paymaster-General	Cash Account
	Drawing Account
	Bill Account
	Patriotic Fund
Master of the Mint	Cash Account
Solicitor of the Treasury
Receiver of the Metropolitan Police
„ for the Police Courts
Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty
Receiver-General of Droits of Admiralty
Registrar-General of Births, Deaths, &c.
Poor Law Board
British Museum, Trustees of	Cash Account
„ „	Drawing Account
Commissioners, Colonial Land and Emigration
„ Inclosure, England and Wales
„ Ecclesiastical
„ Greenwich Hospital
„ Loans for Public Works, &c.
„ Metropolitan Roads. (Lord Lonsdale and others)
Agent General for Crown Colonies. (E. Barnard)
Trinity House, London (Public Account)
Insolvent Debtors' Court, Chief Clerk of Receiver of Fines, &c. (John Wilkin)

Appendix, No. 2.

Treasury Minute; dated 25 September 1855, relating to Exchequer Specifications and Acquittances.

Treasury empowered by the Act 18 & 19 Vict., c. 96, to regulate specifications and acquittances.

My Lords read the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 96, which contains the following clause conferring on them powers to prescribe amended regulations for the payment of moneys to the Exchequer Account at the Bank of England, and for the grant of acquittances to the persons by whom such payments are made, viz.:

"1. All Customs duties and other public moneys payable to the Exchequer Account at "the Bank of England shall be received to the credit of such account by the Governor and "Company of the said Bank, under such regulations and directions as the Commissioners "of Her Majesty's Treasury shall from time to time prescribe; and the specifications or "statements of particulars required by an Act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his "late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act to regulate the Office of the "'Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster,' to be delivered to the cashier or other "officer of the Bank of England by the person paying in any such money shall be required "only in such cases, and shall be signed and issued by such person as the said Com-"missioners shall from time to time direct; and the acquittances for all payments made to "the account of the Exchequer at the Bank of England shall be made out in such form "and under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the said Commissioners, and such "acquittances shall have in all respects the same force and validity in law as the acquit-"tances heretofore given by the Comptroller of the Exchequer by virtue of the ninth section "of the said recited Act of the fourth year of the reign of King William the Fourth, chapter "15; and the several orders, rules, and regulations which may be issued under the authority "of this Act by the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, as relating to such "specifications and acquittances as aforesaid, shall be laid before both Houses of Parlia-"ment within six weeks after the issue of such orders, rules, and regulations, if Parliament "shall be sitting, or if not sitting, then within six weeks next immediately after the "reassembling of Parliament."

Commissioners of public accounts recommended that the Bank should receive payments from the Receivers-general directly and from all other persons on special authority from the Treasury.

In framing new regulations to amend and simplify the course of proceeding laid down in the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, for the receipt of moneys at the Bank of England on specification papers previously obtained at the Exchequer, my Lords advert to the recommendation contained in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts on the Exchequer (Parliamentary Paper, No. 313, October 1831), on which that Act was founded. In that Report (page 9) the Commissioners state:

"We propose to remove all difficulties with respect to the legal admissibility of payments "made into the Bank of England on the public account (a subject which appears to have "been attended with some trouble and perplexity, and to have given rise to various official "and technical embarrassments), by providing that all payments into the Bank be classified "under two heads; first, the payments of the receivers-general and other receivers of "taxes, who are known and recognised public officers, which payments the Bank should be "authorised to receive directly from these officers; and, secondly, all other payments of "money due to the public; which latter the Bank of England may be directed to receive "on account of the Exchequer, on special authority from the Treasury, given by documents "according to prescribed forms."

My Lords consider that the adoption of the recommendation of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, as to the direct receipt of moneys at the Bank from the receivers-general and other receivers of taxes who are known and recognised public officers, will obviate the delay and inconvenience to which those officers have hitherto been subjected by the regulation which requires them to apply daily at the Exchequer for a special authority to the Bank to receive from them the sums payable to the Exchequer Account. They are, moreover, of opinion that the further recommendation of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, as to the payment of other moneys to the Exchequer Account, on special authority from the Treasury, given by documents according to the prescribed forms, should also be adopted, as it will give this Board the earliest information of sums payable to the credit of that account, which is essential to the proper regulation of the issues for the public service.

New regulations respecting specification papers.

My Lords therefore direct that the following regulations as to "Specification Papers" shall be substituted for those which have been in force since the passing of the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15.

1st. The Bank to receive, without special orders, sums paid by the Revenue Departments and the Paymaster-general.

1st. The Bank of England shall receive from time to time from the Customs, Inland Revenue, Post Office, and Woods and Forests Departments, under the authority of this Minute, all sums which those departments may have to transfer to the Exchequer Account, without any special receivable order. They shall also receive, without special receivable orders, all sums which the Paymaster-general may from time to time transfer to the credit of the same account.

2d. Statements of such payments to be made to the Treasury and Exchequer.

2d. On payment of any sum to the Exchequer Account by the Revenue Departments above-named, or by the Paymaster-general, a statement showing the head of Revenue to which the amount is to be credited, or in the case of the Paymaster-general, a full description of each receipt, as at present, is to be prepared in duplicate, one copy of which is to be forwarded to this Board and the other to the Exchequer, on the day on which the payment is made to the Bank.

3d. In all other cases receivable orders to be furnished by the Treasury, which are to be sent at the close of each day by the Bank to the Exchequer.

3d. All other persons by whom money is payable to the Exchequer Account at the Bank are to apply to this Board for special "Receivable Orders," by which the Bank of England will be authorised to receive such sums from them. At the close of each day the Governor and Company of the Bank of England are to transmit all such special receivable orders issued by this Board which may have been delivered to them on payment of any sum into their hands for the Exchequer Account to the Comptroller-General of the Exchequer. These orders will contain the necessary particulars for the accounts and returns which the Comptroller-General is required to transmit to this Board.

Object of acquittances.

The acquittances for all payments made to the account of the Exchequer at the Bank of England are directed by the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 96, to be made out in such form and under such regulations as shall be prescribed by this Board. As the obvious intention of these acquittances is to prevent the possibility of a public accountant obtaining credit for a payment into the Exchequer which he has not actually made, my Lords are of opinion that this object will be effectually secured by the preparation of a certificate of payments made to the Exchequer Account by public accountants, and the transmission of such certificate direct from the Exchequer to the Audit Office.

A monthly return of payments to be sent from the Exchequer to the Audit-office, where it is to be admitted as evidence of sums paid to the Exchequer.

My Lords therefore direct that a monthly return shall be prepared at the Exchequer, after the close of each month, in which the Comptroller-general shall certify the sums paid in by the several receivers-general on account of the different branches of the public revenue, and by all other public accountants, and that this return shall be transmitted by the Comptroller-general to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, by whom it shall be admitted as evidence of the sums paid to the Exchequer by such receivers-general and other public accountants, according to the terms of the first section of the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 96.

Copies of this Minute to be furnished to the Bank and various public departments.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the several Revenue Departments, to the Commissioners of Audit, and to the Paymaster-general, for their information and guidance, and acquaint them that it is to take effect from and after the expiration of the present month.

Transmit copy to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and request that they will take the necessary steps for giving effect to it, so far as it relates to the Bank, from the commencement of the ensuing month.

Transmit copy to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and request that any persons who may apply to him for specification papers after the close of the present month may be referred to this Board.

The Treasury Minute, dated 2d May 1848, directing the payment of the Old Store Moneys and extra receipts into the Exchequer, instead of abating them from the Annual Naval and Military Estimates, as "Appropriations in Aid," will be found at page 115 of the series of Papers relating to the Audit of Naval and Military Accounts.

Appendix, No. 3.

COMMISSARIAT CHEST ACCOUNT.

MEMORANDUM by Mr. Anderson, dated in 1840.

Appendix, No. 3.

The Account of Army Extraordinaries should not be considered as one of "Expenditure," but simply as an intermediate account, from which other voted services receive temporary advances on the security of their grants, which advances should be repaid by the several departments, without reference to the state of their votes. This is, in fact, now the practice of some of the departments that are accommodated with advances out of the military chest: for instance, when public accountants abroad belonging to the Navy or Ordnance require money from the commissaries, it is advanced to them out of Army Extraordinaries; and on receipt of the necessary documents in England, repayment of such advances is claimed, and made without inquiry as to whether such repayment will cause an excess or not on the grants for Navy or Ordnance services. Thus the Army Extraordinaries are never charged with any deficiency arising on the Navy and Ordnance Estimates. The same course should be pursued with the Army and Commissariat; whatever sums are advanced out of the military chests abroad for those services should be repaid in England to the account of Extraordinaries out of the moneys voted for Army or Commissariat services, without waiting to ascertain if such repayment will lead to an excess on any particular grant or not. If an excess should arise, it would be the duty of the department to which the expenditure belonged to go to Parliament with a Supplementary Estimate. The reason which has been assigned for not charging these excesses on the Army or Commissariat grants is, that they generally arise from unforeseen contingencies, which are not provided for in the annual Estimates; but it is necessary not to lose sight of the fact that under the present system these unforeseen contingencies, whether voted or not, are actually defrayed, in the first instance, out of the Army grants. The arrangement suggested, that of requiring every department to repay in full all advances to it out of Extraordinaries, would satisfactorily define the service for which an excess of expenditure was incurred, instead of concealing it under the ambiguous title of "Extraordinaries;" and if a vote were ever required to make good a deficiency, the particulars of the expenditure could be easily supplied by the department to which it related. Were this course adopted, and votes taken, moreover, for the freight of specie, passage money, and other small items, the account of Army Extraordinaries, instead of exhibiting, as it now does, year after year, an increasing deficiency, would on the contrary show a surplus of receipts, arising from the gain by exchange and other receipts abroad, which are not repaid in England. It would be easy to dispose of these receipts by appropriating them in aid of the Commissariat Estimates, and transferring them accordingly in the books of the Paymaster-general.

The Account of "Army Extraordinaries" herewith, exhibits the sums received and paid by the Paymaster-general in the years stated; but as the account is almost exclusively one of imprests or advances, any attempt in his office to set forth the items which constitute the gross deficiency, or even to state the proportion of the balance which may be considered as deficiency, would be fruitless. An approximation might be attained if the several departments could furnish estimates of the probable sums advanced to them out of the military chests abroad up to the close of last year, which were not repaid at that time. Such estimates abated from the balance on the account herewith, after giving effect to all outstanding bills to the same date, and the difference between the balance at the beginning and at the close of the year, would leave the probable sum to be provided for.

AN ACCOUNT showing the GROSS PAYMENTS by Her Majesty's Paymaster-General for ARMY EXTRAORDINARIES, also the TOTAL SUMS received to the Credit of that Account, and the NET SURPLUS EXPENDITURE remaining uncleared.

Commencing on the 1st April 1833 (the Date from which the Annual Votes for Army Extraordinaries have been discontinued), and ending on the 31st December 1838.

	Nine Months, from 1 April to 31 December 1833.	1834.	1835.	1836.	1837.	1838.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Bills drawn on the Treasury by Commissaries abroad	1,025,000 – –	1,272,607 6 1	1,685,028 3 11	1,820,571 8 10	1,893,665 9 10	2,597,167 3 3
Repayment of Sums paid into the Military Chest abroad	156,488 6 10	143,679 5 4	140,903 15 11	79,273 12 10	200,316 5 1	189,596 7 –
Purchase of Specie	– – –	218,442 11 11	150,503 10 –	201,500 – –	132,373 19 2	24,120 – –
Freight of Specie	1,672 3 10	3,739 11 7	2,683 – 2	4,662 11 11	5,924 13 9	6,420 7 9
Pay of Regiments in India	141,212 4 9	199,245 8 4	190,320 12 11	188,206 19 8	179,827 2 3	193,082 6 –
Advances for the service of the Colonies, to be repaid Abroad	15,485 8 2	28,000 – –	11,500 – –	10,073 14 1	42,740 – –	114,625 – –
Passage Money	2,577 7 –	2,096 17 –	597 15 –	1,141 2 3	800 – –	221 – 2
Pay of Officers, &c.	3,282 10 1	2,985 19 3	2,143 12 4	926 9 2	631 12 –	3,383 8 7
Commutation of Half-pay (Purchase of Commissions)	67,447 8 4	45,983 – 9	16,521 11 8	5,047 10 8	8,407 5 10	2,417 6 8
Various Miscellaneous Payments	75,587 17 5	17,936 4 10	27,512 – 1	18,855 3 4	10,901 17 11	1,046 11 4
£.	1,488,713 6 5	1,934,716 5 1	2,227,714 2 –	2,330,258 12 9	2,475,588 5 10	3,132,079 10 9
Credits,—Sums received from other Departments of Government, the East India Company, &c., in repayment of Advances out of Army Extraordinaries	1,482,279 5 4	1,551,160 – 2	1,794,742 7 5	1,863,059 – 7	2,191,054 1 9	2,539,694 13 9 and *460,000 – –
£.	6,434 1 1	383,556 4 11	432,971 14 7	467,199 12 2	284,534 4 1	132,384 17 –

ABSTRACT.

EXCESS of PAYMENTS above RECEIPTS in the following Years.

	£. s. d.
Nine months, to 31st December 1833	6,434 1 1
In the Year 1834	383,556 4 11
„ 1835	432,971 14 7
„ 1836	467,199 12 2
„ 1837	284,534 4 1
„ 1838	132,384 17 –
£.	1,707,080 13 10
Deduct Surplus of Receipts which remained on the 31st March 1833, when the Annual Votes for Extraordinaries ceased	542,581 13 5
£.	1,164,499 – 5

* Proportion of a Vote of Credit for 500,000 l.; the remaining 40,000 l. given to the Ordnance.

ESTIMATE of the Probable State of the COMMISSARIAT CHEST ACCOUNT at Home and Abroad, on 31st March 1841.

DUE TO THE CHEST.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Balances in the Commissariat Chests on 31st March 1841		1,000,000 – –
Specie in transitu on 31 March 1841, viz.:
From the Cape of Good Hope, shipped by the Commissary there, on board of the "Melville," and received in London in August 1841	20,000 – –
From Mexico to the various military chests abroad	131,000 – –
		151,000 – –
Balances due by Public Departments for Advances Abroad beyond the Sums repaid by them, viz.:
The War Office	420,000 – –
The Admiralty	100,000 – –
The Board of Ordnance	300,000 – –
The Commissariat	100,000 – –
The Paymaster of Civil Services for Convict Service, New South Wales	222,000 – –
Liberated Africans	7,200 – –
Chelsea Hospital	25,000 – –
		1,174,200 – –
Advances for the East India Company, on account of recruiting for regiments in India, and for other charges on account of the army, beyond the sums repaid by the Company		450,000 – –
Miscellaneous Advances Abroad prior to 31 March 1841, not repaid till after that date, viz.:
For the salaries and allowances to special magistrates in the late slave Colonies	90,280 18 11
For expenses of the Indian Department in Upper and Lower Canada, between 1 April 1838 and 31 March 1841	20,297 7 2
For the ecclesiastical establishments there	8,550 6 3
For salaries and expenses of the Governor-general in Canada and his Staff, in 1840, beyond the amount repaid from Colonial grants	15,000 – –
For services at St. Helena, Cape of Good Hope, and in Canada, on account of the Vote for St. Helena Services, for the year ending 31 March 1841	16,175 – 4
For expenses of a mail boat and lighthouses at the Bahamas	1,715 5 7
For expense of distributing slave compensation in the Colonies	945 15 3
For various purposes, sundry smaller issues, about	2,697 6 6
		155,662 – –
Balance of grant for Canada expenses, 1839–40, and 1840–41, unissued from Exchequer, on 31 March 1841		154,497 – –
	£.	3,085,359 – –

DUE BY THE CHEST.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Advance by the Paymaster-general out of Army Grants		1,660,000 – –
Treasury bills accepted prior to 31 March 1841 unpaid on that day, and bills drawn abroad prior to 31 March, but not presented for acceptance till after that date		600,000 – –
Proceeds of Ordnance old stores sold abroad, and lodged in the Chests prior to 31 March 1841, and not repaid till after that date		120,000 – –
Expenses incurred by the Ordnance Department prior to 31 March 1841, in Canada, chargeable on the balance of the grant for Canada expenses, 1839–40, and 1840–41, stated on the other side		112,000 – –
Ditto, in Australia and Van Diemen's Land, to be repaid to the Ordnance		100,000 – –
Miscellaneous Sums paid into the Chests Abroad prior to 31 March 1841, and not repaid till after that date, viz.:
To the Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty, proceeds of condemned ships	11,551 10 8
To the Paymaster of Civil Services, viz.:
Clergy reserve funds in Canada	9,127 17 6
Value of provisions delivered from convict ships, in 1837, 1838, 1839, and 1840, for the Commissariat	2,635 16 9
To the Receiver-general of the Post-office, Post-office revenue	5,959 16 –
To the Receiver-general of the Customs, Customs revenue	1,234 3 10
To sundry parties, various smaller sums, about	2,490 15 3
		33,000 – –
		2,625,000 – –
Probable balance, being a surplus of assets, supposing the affairs of the Chest to have been wound up on 31 March 1841		460,359 – –
	£.	3,085,359 – –

Appendix, No. 3.

TREASURY MINUTE, 3 October 1845, directing the preparation of an Account, showing all the SUMS paid into or out of the COMMISSARIAT CHEST in 1846-7, and of the Assets and Liabilities of the Chest at the close of the Year.

MY Lords have under consideration the Return prepared annually by the Audit Board, and laid before Parliament, entitled, "Abstracts of the Accounts of the Commissariat Officers Abroad of the Receipts into and Payments from the several Commissariat Chests."

Independently of certain defects in this Return, to which their Lordships' attention has been called, arising, for the most part, out of the changes which have taken place in the various arrangements connected with this branch of the public service since the plan of the Return was originally framed, the statement which it presents of the transactions of the Commissariat Chests is necessarily incomplete.

The Commissariat Chest Account is one which is constantly kept open between the mother country and the several colonies. The Commissaries abroad act under the direction of the Treasury as bankers for the several public services within their district, and the Paymaster-general acts under the same authority in the receipt and payment of all moneys in this country on account of the Chests abroad; thus the bills drawn abroad for the supply of the Chests are accepted by the Treasury, payable out of the account of the Paymaster-general at the Bank of England, and the greater part of the advances made abroad are repaid at home to the account of the Paymaster-general.

It is obviously impossible, therefore, to prepare a satisfactory account of such transactions from the cash returns of the Commissariat officers alone. It must necessarily embrace the home receipts and payments for the Chest, which pass through the Paymaster-general's books; every transaction must be traced from its first appearance in the accounts of the Commissary until its final settlement in those of the Paymaster-general, and every cash advance which originates in the home account of the Chest kept by the Paymaster-general must in like manner be followed up until its final liquidation through the account of the Commissary abroad.

My Lords are aware that it was the practice, up to the year 1831 inclusive, to submit to Parliament a return of the sums received and paid in this country in each year by the Paymaster-general, on account of the Commissariat Chests, under the title of "Army Extraordinaries," and that an Estimate was founded on this return, and a vote taken for various undefined services; but this return was so imperfect, that it was discontinued, and my Lords directed that the charges formerly covered by the annual vote for Army Extraordinaries should be provided for in the Estimates of the different departments to which they related. The receipts and payments at home connected with the Commissariat Chests have not, therefore, appeared in any accounts laid before Parliament since that year.

The necessity for preparing a general statement showing the employment of the moneys which pass through the Commissariat Chests, and the state of the liabilities of the various departments connected with that account, cannot be more forcibly illustrated than by reviewing the imperfect results obtainable from the books and accounts now kept.

The only accounts in which the balances applicable to the Commissariat Chest Account at the close of each year appear, are—

1. The annual debtor and creditor abstracts prepared by the Audit Board, in which the sums remaining in the Chests abroad at the close of each year are shown.

2. The debtor and creditor account kept in the Paymaster-general's books, in which is recorded the balance of cash applicable to the Commissariat Chest Account at home.

To show how insufficient the results exhibited by these two accounts are, to explain the real state of the Commissariat Chest Account, my Lords select the balances which appeared on them at the following dates:—

On the 31st March 1839 the account in the Paymaster-general's books was in debt 1,631,321 l.; and the accounts abroad in credit 1,112,635 l., leaving a net deficiency on the two accounts amounting to 518,686 l.

On the 31st March 1844 the account in the Paymaster-general's books was in credit 105,183 l.; and the accounts abroad were also in credit, 849,261 l., making together a gross credit of 954,444 l.

The difference between the two balances amounts to 1,473,130 l.

Notwithstanding this large increase in the balance shown by the Paymaster-general's books, on the 31st March 1844, there is no reason for supposing that any material change has has taken place in the amount of the general balance of the Commissariat Chest Account since 1839. The increase is owing almost exclusively to the more expeditious settlement in this country of the advances made out of the Chests abroad, which in 1839 was very much in arrear.

These fluctuations serve, however, to show the necessity which exists for some more comprehensive and systematic record of the transactions connected with the receipts and issues of the Commissariat Chest Account, both through the accounts in this country and the colonies. It appears to my Lords that such an account can only be satisfactorily kept in the Audit Office, where the accounts of the Commissaries and of the Paymaster-general are examined.

The course which my Lords are of opinion should be followed in the office of the Commissioners of Audit, with a view to the preparation of a complete account, is to establish a separate set of books, with a double-entry journal and ledger, in which the cash accounts of the Commissaries abroad, abstracted under fixed heads of account, and the receipts and payments for the same service made by the Paymaster-general, should be systematically recorded. Every advance to a public department must be charged against it, from the accounts in which it appears, until repaid; and the ledger should be framed so as to show the balances due to or from the Chest, and the departments or individuals to or from which such balances are due.

My Lords are aware that the present accounts kept at the Audit Office have not been prepared with the object of recording the general balance applicable to the service of the Commissariat Chest, and that this balance can only be gathered from the various accounts and transactions as they are presented for record; but my Lords trust that the settlement of the balances now in arrear may be expedited, so that the net surplus available for carrying on the service of the Commissariat Chest, and with which the first balance sheet to be laid before Parliament should open, may be ascertained with accuracy when that document shall be prepared.

This balance, when correctly ascertained, will be liable to fluctuations in the distribution of it; but the net assets of the chest ought not to be subject to any variation, inasmuch as my Lords have placed on the Estimates of the different departments all the items of receipt and payment which formerly remained finally chargeable on the funds of the Commissariat Chest Account. This account is therefore now confined entirely to transactions which ultimately find a place in the accounts of other branches of the public service.

The return for Parliament, to be prepared from the new set of books, should be one more of results than of details, and should embrace,—

1. A Statement, exhibiting the results of the transactions of the year to which it relates, and showing the services for which the funds of the Commissariat Chest have been employed. If it should be found conducive to clearness to separate the transactions at home from those abroad, this statement may be divided into two accounts current.

2. A Balance Sheet, showing the debts due to and from the Commissariat Chest Account on the last day of the year for which the return is prepared, with such explanations against the several items as may be found necessary to elucidate the account.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Commissioners of Audit, and desire that they will take the necessary steps for establishing a set of books in their office, in accordance with the preceding directions, for the record of the general transactions of the Commissariat Chest from the 1st April 1846; and desire, moreover, that the returns for the intervening years 1844–45 and 1845–46, may be confined to Abstracts of the Accounts of the Commissaries abroad, prepared upon an amended and uniform classification of the receipts and payments, and omitting the account headed "Analysis of the Commissariat Chest Account."

Transmit copy to the Paymaster-general, and desire that he will furnish the Commissioners of Audit with monthly returns of his receipts and payments on account of the Commissariat Chest, from the 1st April next, in such form as may facilitate the record of them at the Audit Office, in conformity with the directions of this Minute.

Appendix, No. 3.

REPORT from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 15 December 1848, transmitting the Account in question.

In pursuance of your Lordships' Minute of the 3d October 1845, we had the honour to lay before you, on the 27th April 1848, a General Account and Balance Sheet of the Commissariat Chest for the year 1846-47.

As that account, however, was not laid before Parliament during the last Session, as we had anticipated from the tenor of your Lordships' Minute, we have again considered the form in which the account was laid before you, and have referred to the concluding part of your Lordships' Minute, directing its preparation.

It is therein stated, that "the return for Parliament to be prepared from the new set of books should be one more of results than of details, and should embrace,—

"1st. A statement exhibiting the results of the transactions of the year to which it relates, and showing the services for which the funds of the Commissariat Chest have been employed.

"2dly. A balance sheet, showing the debts due to and from the Commissariat Chest Account on the last day of the year for which the return is prepared, with such explanations against the several items as may be found necessary to elucidate the account."

2.

Upon further consideration of your Lordships' wishes thus expressed, we have had the account prepared in an altered form, working out the results by means of two statements, which we now beg leave to lay before your Lordships, to be placed with the former account referred to.

The first is an account showing the cash transactions of the Commissariat Chest between the 1st April 1846 and the 31st March 1847.

Your Lordships will perceive that this account consists of three elements; viz.

1. Money raised within the year, and on the credit side the money which has been paid off within the year, part of which had been raised in previous years.

2. Sums paid into the Chest for deposit, while the credit side will show the amount which has been remitted or paid out during the year.

3. On the credit side, the advances made out of the Chest for carrying on the public service during the year; while on the debit side will appear the amount of those advances which have been repaid by the respective departments.

The services for which the funds of the Commissariat Chest have been employed will be found set forth under each head of the account; and by a comparison of those sums, the amount due to or from the Chest on account of each department of the public service for the year 1846-47, can be ascertained.

The balance of cash in the Chest on the 31st March 1847, at the foot of this account, is 1,315,866 l. 16 s. 1 ¼ d.

The second account is a statement of the assets and liabilities, so far as known, on the 31st March 1847. The balance of 1,245,375 l. 6 s. 3 ¼ d. is not the exact surplus for carrying on the services of the Chest, owing to many unsettled transactions prior to the 1st April 1846; but as they are not large in amount, even in the aggregate, it is expected that as they come in course of settlement, the assets and liabilities will nearly balance each other, and that the balance available will be increased instead of diminished.

Your Lordships will perceive a difference of 393,744 l. 0 s. 2 d. between the balance stated to be available for carrying on the service of the Commissariat Chest in the account sent to your Lordships with our Report of the 27th April 1848, and the account now forwarded.

This arises in consequence of that sum being now included as a liability in the account, being the amount of Chinese Indemnity money received at Hong Kong prior to the 1st April 1846, but which was not paid over to the Consolidated Fund until after the period of the account. It being so large a sum, we have, upon reconsideration, deemed it better to include it, by which the balance is reduced accordingly.

The only further remark which suggests itself to us, is, that in our opinion the large public departments should be required to pay over to the Chest larger sums on account of advances than they do at present; and we would also submit whether your Lordships may not think it expedient that the transfers in repayment should be made monthly instead of quarterly.

We request that we may be favoured with your Lordships' decision hereon, in order that we may give directions for the account of the ensuing year to be prepared accordingly.

We, have, &c.
(signed) W. L. Herries.
A. Grant.
Henry Arbuthnot.

To the Right Hon.
the Lords of the Treasury, &c. &c. &c.

TREASURY MINUTE, 29 December 1848, approving of the Account.

Write to the Commissioners of Audit that my Lords have received with much satisfaction the amended account of the transactions of the Commissariat Chest for the year 1846-47, which appears to have been prepared with much care and intelligence, and will, it is hoped, completely answer the important object contemplated by the Minute of this Board, dated 3d October 1845.

EXTRACT from the Treasury Minute, dated the 22d December 1848, for the Government of the Office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-General, prescribing an Arrangement for the more speedy Repayment of the Advances made out of the Commissariat Chests.

"It will be necessary, when this arrangement shall be brought into operation, to issue such directions, in regard to the more speedy recovery of the advances made out of the Commissariat Chests, as will tend to place the Paymaster-general sufficiently in funds for Commissariat Chest purposes, to enable him to comply with the provisions of the amended Warrant, as it is proposed to frame it in future.

"My Lords are aware that the service for which the greater part of the Treasury Bills in question are drawn, is for the payment of the troops abroad, and that the Votes for Army Services ultimately become charged with a large proportion of the moneys raised by such bills. They are also aware that there is a considerable sum at the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account, upon a general balance of all its assets and liabilities. This balance is the result of a running account of the receipts and payments, under the head of 'Army Extraordinaries,' from a very remote date, and it does not exceed the sum indispensably necessary for making the advances for carrying on the various branches of the public service abroad. By an account recently completed by the Commissioners of Audit, in pursuance of directions issued by their Lordships on the 3d October 1845, it appears that on the 31st March 1847, there remained available for carrying on the banking operations of the Commissariat Chest a surplus balance amounting to 1,245,375 l. My Lords are satisfied that if proper arrangements are made for regulating the periodical repayments to the Commissariat Chest Account, in the Paymaster-general's books, for advances made abroad, there ought to be no difficulty in carrying on the service with the available balance referred to, without borrowing from the grants for any other service, to meet the current payments. My Lords are strengthened in this opinion by an examination of the account before referred to, by which it is shown that there remained due on the 31st March 1847, to the Commissariat Chest Account by the Naval and Military Departments, beyond the quarterly repayments made by them on account of advances in the year 1846-47, a sum exceeding 1,160,000 l. In addition to this sum, there was a further balance due to the Commissariat Chest, at the same date, from various services voted on the Miscellaneous Estimates, exceeding 200,000 l., making a total sum exceeding 1,360,000 l. due from voted services. It is clear, therefore, that so far from the Commissariat Chest Account being in debt to the army and other services for the amount apparently advanced out of the Votes for those services, to meet the current payments on account of the Commissariat Chest, those services were, in fact, at that date, considerably in debt to the Commissariat Chest on a balance of the accounts between them.

"With the view of preventing so large an arrear of debt to the Commissariat Chest Account at the close of the year, and of avoiding the consequent necessity of apparently borrowing from other funds to meet the current payments for that account, my Lords are pleased to direct that the several departments, whose agents abroad receive advances from the Commissariat Chest, authorise the Paymaster-general to transfer monthly, from their respective votes, to the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account in his books, a sum nearly equal to the estimated advances on account of each. This Estimate should be regulated by the amount of advances made in the last year for which the accounts may be complete, except in cases where a change of circumstances may render it advisable to add to or to diminish that amount. A reserve of 10 per cent. to be paid as a balance on the final adjustment of the account with each department, will be sufficient to meet the ordinary fluctuations of the service.

"Similar transfers should be made on account of advances from the Commissariat Chests abroad for services provided for in the Miscellaneous Estimates; and my Lords desire that the Commissioners of Audit will report to them every quarter the sums which it may be proper to transfer to the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account in the Paymaster-general's books, according to the principle laid down above. These transfers may be confined to the principal services in the Miscellaneous Estimates for which such advances are made."

AN ACCOUNT showing all the SUMS which have been received into the between 1 April 1846

Dr.

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
To CASH BALANCE on the 1st April 1846:
Cash in the hands of the Paymaster-General, and in the several Commissariat Chests abroad on that day				819,549	1	11
1. MONEY RAISED IN THE YEAR 1846-7.
To CONSIGNMENTS OF SPECIE:
Amount of Specie received at the several Stations Abroad from England, viz.:
Shipped prior to 1st April 1846 - - - - - £. 725 – –
Ditto in the year 1846-7 - - - - - - 507,075 – –
	507,800	–	–
To TREASURY BILLS DRAWN:
Produce of Bills drawn on Her Majesty's Treasury by Commissariat Officers abroad, in the year 1846-7 (less Premium shown below) - - - - -	2,433,250	6	10
To BILLS ON INDIA:
Produce of Bills drawn on the Government of India by the Commissariat Officer at Hong Kong, in the year 1846-7 - - - - - - - -	9,024	2	5
To DEBENTURES ISSUED:
Amount raised on Debentures by the Commissariat Officer at the Cape of Good Hope, to assist in providing Funds for the Kafir War, in the year 1846-7 -	74,700	8	–
To TEMPORARY ADVANCES BY COLONIAL BANKS:
Amount received at the Cape of Good Hope - - - £. 46,484 5 –
Ditto - - - Van Diemen's Land - - - - 10,000 – –
	56,484	5	–
To TEMPORARY ADVANCES FROM COLONIAL FUNDS:
Amount received at the Cape of Good Hope - - - - £. 5,000 – –
Ditto - - - New South Wales - - - - 55,000 – –
Ditto - - - New Zealand - - - - - 2,000 – –
	62,000	–	–
				3,143,259	2	3
2. SUMS RECEIVED INTO THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST, FOR REMITTANCE, &c.
To PREMIUM ON BILLS DRAWN:
Amount of Premium received in the year 1846-7 on Bills drawn by Commissariat Officers abroad - - - - - - - - - - -	5,852	10	6
(Similar Receipts will be in future paid over to the Exchequer.)
To ARMY SERVICES:
Balances received from Regimental Paymasters, and other receipts in the year 1846-7, to be paid over to the Secretary-at-War - - - - - -	17,185	4	2
To NAVY SERVICES:
Proceeds of the Sale of Old Stores, &c., received Abroad in the year 1846-7, to be paid over to the Admiralty - - - - - - - - -	3,991	13	11
To ORDNANCE SERVICES:
Rents, Barrack Damages, and other Receipts Abroad, in the Year 1846-7, to be paid over to the Board of Ordnance - - - - - - - - -	56,779	7	6
Carried forward - - - £.	83,808	16	1	3,962,808	4	2

COMMISSARIAT CHEST, and which have been paid out of the same, and 31 March 1847.

Cr.

			£. s. d.
1. PAYMENTS ON ACCOUNT OF MONEY RAISED.
BY CONSIGNMENTS OF SPECIE:		£. s. d.
Payments to the Mint and Bank of England, for Specie sent to Commissariat Stations abroad:
Shipped prior to 1st April 1846	£. 10,000 – –
Ditto in the year 1846–7	528.075 – –
Specie remitted home from various Commissariat Stations abroad in the year 1846–7	12,000 10 –	550,075 10 –
BY TREASURY BILLS PAID:
Bills paid by the Paymaster-general in the year 1846–7:
Drawn prior to 1st April 1846	£. 442,120 19 7
Drawn in the year 1846–7	1,546,548 4 3	1,988,669 3 10
BY DEBENTURES PAID OFF:
Amount paid off by the Commissariat Officer at the Cape of Good Hope in the year 1846–7		23,675 – –
BY TEMPORARY ADVANCES BY COLONIAL BANKS, REPAID:
Amount repaid in the year 1846–7 by the Commissariat Officer at the Cape of Good Hope	£. 10,000 – –
Ditto – – ditto – – Van Diemen's Land	10,000 – –	20,000 – –
BY TEMPORARY ADVANCES FROM COLONIAL FUNDS, REPAID:
Amount repaid in the year 1846–7 by the Commissariat Officer at the Cape of Good Hope	£. 5,000 – –
Ditto – – ditto – – New South Wales	9,723 11 8
Ditto – – ditto – – New Zealand	2,000 – –	16,723 11 8
			2,599,143 5 6
2. PAYMENTS ON ACCOUNT OF SUMS RECEIVED INTO THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST, FOR REMITTANCE, &c.
BY ARMY SERVICES:		£. s. d.
Amounts paid over to the Secretary-at-War:
Deposited in the Chest prior to 1st April 1846	£. 10,782 8 8
Ditto – – in the year 1846–7	10,101 12 4	20,884 1 –
BY NAVY SERVICES:
Amounts paid over to the Admiralty:
Deposited in the Chest prior to 1st April 1846	£. 4,825 3 11
Ditto – – in the year 1846–7	29 10 –	4,854 13 11
BY ORDNANCE SERVICES:
Amount paid over to the Board of Ordnance on account of Sums deposited in the Chest prior to 1st April 1846		103,000 11 9
	Carried forward £.	128,739 6 8	2,599,143 5 6

Dr. AN ACCOUNT showing all the Sums which have been received into the COMMISSARIAT CHEST,

	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Brought forward - - -	83,808 16 1	3,962,808 4 2
2. SUMS RECEIVED INTO THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST, FOR REMITTANCE, &c.—continued.
To REVENUE DEPARTMENTS:
Revenue received abroad, and paid into the Commissariat Chest, in the year 1846-7, for Remittance:
To the Receiver-general of Customs - - - - £. 1,741 18 –
To the Receiver-general of the Post Office - - - 33,175 15 4 34,917 13 4
To COLONIAL GOVERNMENTS:
Sums received from the following Colonial Governments in the year 1846-7, for payment to their respective Agents in England; viz.
Ceylon - - - - - - - - - - £. 65,761 17 6
Gibraltar - - - - - - - - - - 1,737 17 2
Malta - - - - - - - - - - - 1,850 – –
Mauritius - - - - - - - - - - 22,000 – –
Sierra Leone - - - - - - - - - 9 2 –
New South Wales - - - - - - - - 23,356 8 1
South Australia - - - - - - - - 73,903 – –
	188,618 4 9
To CONTRIBUTIONS FROM COLONIAL FUNDS FOR MILITARY PROTECTION:
Amounts received from the following Colonial Governments, in the year 1846-7, towards defraying Military Expenditure; viz.
Ceylon - - - - - - - - - - £. 24,000 – –
Ionian Islands - - - - - - - - - 17,596 3 6
Malta - - - - - - - - - - - 6,200 – –
	47,796 3 6
To CAPTURED SLAVE VESSELS:
Proceeds of the sale of Slave Vessels condemned in Vice-admiralty and Mixed Commission Courts, received abroad in 1846-7, to be paid over to the Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty - - - - - - - -	1,258 7 7
To CHINESE INDEMNITY MONEY:
Amount received by the Commissariat Officer at Hong Kong, out of the Chinese Indemnity Money, in the year 1846-7, to be paid over to the Consolidated Fund - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	126,705 13 11
To FREIGHT OF SYCEE SILVER:
Amount received by the Paymaster-general, in the year 1846-7, out of the proceeds of the Sycee Silver, on account of the freight due to Officers of the Royal Navy - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	7,517 2 5
To VARIOUS SMALL DEPOSITS IN THE CHEST FOR REMITTANCE, &c. - - -	599 17 7
		491,221 19 2
Carried forward - - - £.		4,454,030 3 4

and which have been paid out of the same between 1 April 1846 and 31 March 1847—continued. Cr.

	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Brought forward - - -	128,739 6 8	2,599,143 5 6
2. PAYMENTS ON ACCOUNT OF SUMS RECEIVED INTO THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST, FOR REMITTANCE, &c.—continued.
By Revenue Departments:
Amounts paid over to the Receiver-general of Customs:
Deposited in the Chest prior to 1 April 1846 - - £.913 7 9
Ditto - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - - - 299 15 2	1,213 2 11
Amounts paid over to the Receiver-general of the Post Office:
Deposited in the Chest prior to 1 April 1846 - - £.9,444 – 4
Ditto - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - - - 20,471 13 10	29,915 14 2
By Colonial Governments:
Sums paid in England to the Agents of the following Colonies:
Ceylon - Deposited in the Chest prior to 1 April 1846 - £.18,214 16 11
Ditto - - - - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - 47,350 7 10
Gibraltar - - - ditto - - - ditto - - - 1,737 17 2
Malta - - - - ditto - - - ditto - - - 1,850 – –
Sierra Leone - - ditto - - - ditto - - - 9 2 –
New South Wales - ditto - - prior to 1 April 1846 - 7,720 16 –
Ditto - - - - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - 2,709 6 –
South Australia - ditto - - prior to 1 April 1846 - 600 – –
Ditto - - - - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - 1,501 10 –	81,693 15 11
By Contributions from Colonial Funds for Military Protection:
Amounts paid over to the Secretary-at-War, and Board of Ordnance, on account of the Sums received towards defraying the Military Expenditure incurred by those departments, in the following Colonies:
Ceylon - Deposited in the Chest prior to 1 April 1846 - £.24,000 – –
Ionian Islands - - ditto - - - ditto - - - 5,884 16 3
Ditto - - - - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - 3,420 2 8	33,304 18 11
By Captured Slave Vessels:
Amounts paid over to the Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty, on account of the proceeds of the sale of Condemned Slave Vessels:
Deposited in the Chest prior to 1 April 1846 - - £.2,536 9 6
Ditto - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - - - 1,204 10 1	3,740 19 7
By Freight of Sycee Silver:
Amount paid to Officers of the Royal Navy, under Admiralty directions -	6,517 2 5
By various small Repayments:
Deposited in the Chest prior to 1 April 1846 - - - £.236 6 8
Ditto - - ditto - - in the year 1846–7 - - - 656 6 6	892 13 2
		286,017 13 9
Carried forward - - £.		2,885,160 19 3

Dr. AN ACCOUNT showing all the Sums which have been received into the COMMISSARIAT CHEST,

	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Brought forward - - -		4,454,030 3 4
3. SUMS RECEIVED IN REPAYMENT OF ADVANCES FROM THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST.
To SUMS RECEIVED OUT OF THE VOTES OF PARLIAMENT, in repayment of ADVANCES for the following Services; viz.
	For Advances prior to 1 April 1846.	For Advances in the Year 1846-7.
To ARMY:	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Effective Services - - - -	373,652 16 11	660,011 5 –
Chelsea Out Pensions - - -	54,920 12 2	19,957 3 8
Commuted Pensions - - -	31,704 4 7	2,768 3 9
Other Non-effective Services - -	11,420 12 7	9,511 11 2
	471,698 6 3	692,248 3 7
To NAVY:
Effective Services - - - -	171,176 14 9	200,251 7 7
Greenwich Out Pensions - - -	1,179 19 7	905 19 11
Other Non-effective Services - -	7,215 8 11	4,647 10 5
	179,572 3 3	205,804 17 11
To ORDNANCE:
Effective Services - - - -	283,724 2 11	334,318 9 –
Non-effective Services - - -	2,327 7 9	3,121 12 11
	286,051 10 8	337,440 1 11
To COMMISSARIAT:
Effective Services - - - -	35,640 18 6	320,000 – –
Non-effective Services - - -	3,952 2 3	4,487 9 8
	39,593 – 9	324,487 9 8
To MISCELLANEOUS (Civil Establishments, &c.):
Lighthouses, Bahamas - - -	949 12 4
Western Coast of Africa - - -	945 – –
St. Helena; Establishment - -	2,146 3 9
Western Australia - - - -	22,003 6 10
New Zealand - - - - -	9,304 16 3
Clergy, North America - - -	6,856 14 8
Indian Department, Canada - -	6,310 4 –
Stipendiary Justices - - -	89,539 – 10
Liberated Africans - - - -	24,080 17 5
Hong Kong - - - - -	148,149 6 8
Emigration, Canada - - -	- - -	5,000 – –
	310,285 2 9	5,000 – –
Convict Services - - - - -	56,235 13 2	160,000 – –
Militia and Volunteers, Canada -	30,763 15 5	2,436 4 7
Relief of Distress in Ireland and Scotland:
Votes, Sales of Food, &c. - -	19,475 10 4	795,673 18 9
Extraordinary Staff of the Board of Works, &c. - - - -	- - -	210,051 16 10
Magnetic Observatories in Canada, at the Cape of Good Hope, &c. -	864 3 7	- - -
Military Secretary to the Governor-general, Canada - - - -	1,359 3 –	- - -
Expedition for exploring Central Australia - - - - - -	1,900 – –	- - -
Relief of Sufferers by Fire at Quebec	19,136 6 8	878 15 7
Ditto, at St. John's, Newfoundland	- - -	56,353 18 3
TOTAL SUMS repaid out of Votes - £.	1,416,934 15 10	2,790,375 7 1
Carried forward - - - £.		4,207,310 2 11 4,454,030 3 4

and which have been paid out of the same, between 1 April 1846 and 31 March 1847—continued. Cr.

	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Brought forward - - £.	- - -	2,885,160 19 3
3. ADVANCES FROM THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST, TO BE REPAID:
By Advances in the year 1846-7 to be repaid out of the Votes of Parliament, for the following Services; viz.
By Army:
Effective Services - - - - - - £. 1,054,903 4 10
Chelsea Out-Pensions - - - - - - - 57,924 16 11
Commuted Pensions - - - - - - - - 7,150 17 3
Other Non-effective Services - - - - - 19,215 9 4
	1,139,194 8 4
By Navy:
Effective Services - - - - - - - 331,870 15 9
Greenwich Out-Pensions - - - - - - 1,919 3 11
Other Non-effective Services - - - - - 10,540 16 2
	344,330 15 10
By Ordnance:
Effective Services - - - - - - - 581,344 17 4
Non-effective Services - - - - - - - 4,487 14 5
	585,832 11 9
By Commissariat:
Effective Services - - - - - - - 671,152 6 1
Non-effective Services - - - - - - 7,403 6 2
	678,555 12 3
By Kafir War:
Extraordinary Expenses - - - - - - - - -	254,033 - 3
By Miscellaneous (Civil Establishments, &c.):
Lighthouses, Bahamas - - - - - - 622 14 1
Western Coast of Africa - - - - - - 1,995 - -
St. Helena, Establishment - - - - - - 6,657 9 11
Ditto, Pensions - - - - - - - 692 5 11
Western Australia - - - - - - - 7,311 12 6
Falkland Islands - - - - - - - 2,000 - -
New Zealand - - - - - - - - 10,174 15 10
Clergy, North America - - - - - - 6,740 13 2
Indian Department, Canada - - - - - 5,499 17 4
Stipendiary Justices - - - - - - - 38,027 11 4
Liberated Africans - - - - - - - 9,148 15 1
Hong Kong - - - - - - - - 53,528 12 1
	142,399 7 3
Convict Services - - - - - - - - - - -	221,733 2 11
Militia and Volunteers, Canada - - - - - - - -	15,600 3 3
Relief of Distress in Ireland and Scotland:
Temporary Advances for Purchases of Food, for Freight, &c. - -	813,130 4 7
Ditto - - - - for Extraordinary Staff of the Board of Works, &c.	191,784 3 10
Ditto - - - - for the Relief Commission - - - -	7,500 - -
Ditto - - - - for Grants in aid of Poor-law Unions - -	2,331 8 10
Ditto - - - - for the Fisheries in Scotland - - - -	1,501 - 8
Magnetic Observatories in Canada, at the Cape of Good Hope, &c. - -	185 6 1
Relief of Sufferers by Fire at Quebec - - - - - - - -	878 15 7
Ditto - - - - at St. John's, Newfoundland - - - -	27,453 6 8
Carried forward - - - £.	4,426,443 8 4	2,885,160 19 3

Dr. AN ACCOUNT showing all the Sums which have been received into the COMMISSARIAT CHEST,

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Brought forward - - - £.	4,207,310	2	11	4,454,030	3	4
3. SUMS RECEIVED IN REPAYMENT OF ADVANCES FROM THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST—continued.
To SUMS RECEIVED OUT OF THE CONSOLIDATED FUND:
In repayment of Advances for Slave Compensation under the Act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 73; viz.
Advanced prior to 1 April 1846 - - - - - £.	676	9	4
Ditto, in the year 1846–7 - - - - - -	174	7	–
	850	16	4
To SUMS RECEIVED FROM REVENUE DEPARTMENTS:
From the Customs:
In repayment of Advances for Pensions prior to 1 April 1846 - - - - - - - - - - £.	229	14	4
Ditto, in the year 1846–7 - - - - - -	161	9	4
	391	3	8
From the Excise:
In repayment of Advances for Pensions prior to 1 April 1846 - - - - - - - - - - - £.	150	15	2
Ditto, in the year 1846–7 - - - - - -	148	16	–
	299	11	2
To SUMS RECEIVED OUT OF COLONIAL FUNDS:
In repayment of Advances on Account of the following Colonies; viz.

	For Advances prior to 1 April 1846.			For Advances in 1846–7.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Canada - - - - - - -	44	15	10	706	16	1
Mauritius - - - - - -	3,959	14	7	16,036	17	6
New South Wales - - - -	380	19	–	1,012	13	4
West Indies (Coolie Emigration) - -	4,916	12	4	16,320	10	10
£.	9,302	1	9	34,076	17	9

	43,378	19	6
To SUMS RECEIVED FROM THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT:
In repayment of Advances in New South Wales to a French Ship of War, prior to 1 April 1846 - - - - - - - - - - - - -	6,635	16	11
To SUMS RECEIVED FROM THE EAST INDIA COMPANY:
In repayment of Advances abroad for the Service of the Company, prior to 1 April 1846 - - - - - - - £.	19,626	13	11
Ditto, in the year 1846–7 - - - - - - -	10,174	11	–
	29,801	4	11
To SUMS RECEIVED FROM THE BRITISH RELIEF ASSOCIATION:
In repayment of Advances in 1846–7, on account of the Association connected with the relief of distress in Ireland - - - - - - - - - -	988	4	8
To SUMS RECEIVED FROM THE MASTER OF THE MINT:
In repayment of Expenses incurred at Hong Kong, prior to 1 April 1846, in the shipment of the Chinese Indemnity Money - - - - - - - - - - - - £.	438	1	5
In repayment of an Advance on account of Freight of Sycee Silver - - - - - - - - - - - -	4,011	7	5
	4,449	8	10
To SUMS RECEIVED IN REPAYMENT OF VARIOUS SMALL ADVANCES made prior to 1 April 1846 - - - - - - - £.	1,119	5	8
Ditto, in the year 1846–7 - - - - - - - -	366	2	5
	1,485	8	1
			4,295,590 17 –
£.			8,749,621 – 4

Audit Office,
15 December 1848.

and which have been paid out of the same, between 1 April 1846 and 31 March 1847—continued. Cr.

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Brought forward	4,426,443	8	1	2,885,160	19	3
3.—ADVANCES FROM THE COMMISSARIAT CHEST, TO BE REPAID—continued.
By Advances to be repaid out of the Consolidated Fund:
Payments in the year 1846–7, for Slave Compensation, under the Act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 73	296	11	4
By Advances to be Repaid by Revenue Departments:
Pensions paid Abroad in 1846–7, on Account of the Customs	572	16	7
Ditto ditto Excise	270	–	8
By Advances to be Repaid out of Colonial Funds:
Advances in 1846–7 on Account of the following Colonies:
Canada £. 706 16 1
Canada and Nova Scotia (Railway Survey) 4,500 – –
Cape of Good of Hope 373 – 11
Ceylon 36 4 11
Mauritius 24,183 1 5
New South Wales 1,012 13 4
New Zealand 2,000 – –
Van Diemen's Land 1,834 5 –
West Indies (Coolie Emigration) 23,309 14 8
	57,955	16	4
By Advances in New South Wales to a French Ship of War, in the year 1846–7, repayable by the French Government	4,472	5	7
By Advances on Account of the East India Company:
Pensions paid in 1846–7, chargeable on the Military Fund of the Company, and for Advances in New South Wales, Van Diemen's Land, at the Cape of Good Hope, &c., to be repaid by the Company	50,689	11	6
By Advances on account of the British Relief Association, connected with the Relief of Distress in Ireland	6,405	6	6
By Various Small Advances, to be repaid	1,487	8	5
				4,548,593	5	–
			£.	7,433,754	4	3
By Cash Balance on the 31st March 1847, as explained in the Statement at page 606			£.	1,315,866	16	1
			£.	8,749,621	–	4

By Order of the Board,
R. M. Bromley, Secretary.

AN ACCOUNT showing the LIABILITIES and ASSETS

Dr. LIABILITIES.

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
TO THE MASTER OF THE MINT:
Specie consigned to Commissiariat Officers abroad	4,000	–	–
TO TREASURY BILLS:
Amount of outstanding Bills negotiated by Commissariat Officers abroad, on or before the 31st March 1847	886,702	2	7
TO BILLS ON INDIA:
Amount of outstanding Bills drawn on the Government of India by the Commissariat Officer at Hong Kong	9,024	2	5
TO OUTSTANDING DEBENTURES:
Outstanding Debentures issued by the Commissariat Officer at the Cape of Good Hope, for providing funds for the Kafir War	51,025	8	–
TO COLONIAL BANKS:
Temporary Advances outstanding on the 31st March 1847	36,484	5	–
TO COLONIAL GOVERNMENTS:
Temporary Advances outstanding on the 31st March 1847	45,276	8	4
				1,032,512	6	4
TO SUMS RECEIVED INTO THE COMMISSARIAT CHESTS, FOR REMITTANCE, &c. on or prior to the 31st March 1847; viz.
Due to —
Commisssriat Estimates for 1848–9 — Premium on the negotiation of Treasury Bills in 1846–7	5,852	10	6
Secretary at War — Regimental Balances, &c.	7,083	11	10
Admiralty — Old Stores, &c. sold	3,962	3	11
Board of Ordnance — Rents, Barrack Damages, &c.	56,779	7	6
Customs — Revenue paid in abroad, for remittance to England	1,442	2	10
Post-office — ditto	12,704	1	6
Colonial Governments — Sums received, and not paid over to their Agents	133,460	1	8
Secretary at War and Board of Ordnance — Contributions for Military Protection	44,376	–	10
Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty — Proceeds of the Sale of Slave Vessels	53	17	6
Various persons at St. John's, Newfoundland — Balance of Vote and Subscriptions not distributed	28,900	11	7
Her Majesty's Exchequer — Chinese Indemnity Money, paid to the Commissariat Officer at Hong Kong	520,449	14	1
Certain Officers of Her Majesty's Ships — Freight of Sycee Silver awaiting directions for distribution	1,000	–	–
Board of Works in Ireland — Balance of Vote for Extraordinary Staff	18,267	13	–
Emigration Vote — Sum received remaining unapplied	5,000	–	–
Various Small Deposits	428	6	1
				839,760	2	10
TOTAL LIABILITIES			£.	1,872,272	9	2
TO BALANCE, being the SURPLUS of ASSETS available for carrying on the Service of the Commissariat Chest, on the 31st of March 1847				1,245,375	6	3
			£.	3,117,647	15	5

Audit Office, 15 December 1848.

of the COMMISSARIAT CHEST, on 31 March 1847.

ASSETS. Cr.

	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
BY CASH due by Officers acting as Paymasters for the Commissariat Chest:
Balances due by the Paymaster-general and by the several Commissariat Officers at Stations Abroad, &c., on the 31st March 1847, as shown at the foot of the general Cash Account for the Year 1846-7, at page 603, and detailed in the Explanatory Statement of Cash Balances at page 606	- - -	1,315,866 16 1
BY SPECIE IN TRANSIT:
Specie consigned to Commissariat Officers Abroad, which was on its passage to Foreign Stations on the 31st March 1847 - - - - - -	- - -	37,000 10 -
BY ADVANCES from the Commissariat Chest prior to 31st March 1847; viz.
Due from VOTES OF PARLIAMENT for the following Services:
ARMY - - Effective Services - - - £. 394,891 19 10
Chelsea Out-pensions - - - 37,967 13 3
Commuted Pensions - - - 4,382 13 6
Other Non-effective Services - - 9,703 18 2	446,946 4 9
NAVY - - Effective Services - - - - 131,619 8 2
Greenwich Out-pensions - - - 1,013 4 -
Other Non-effective Services - - 5,893 5 9	138,525 17 11
ORDNANCE - Effective Services - - - - 247,026 8 4
Non-effective ditto - - - - 1,366 1 6	248,392 9 10
COMMISSARIAT Effective Services - - - - 351,152 6 1
Non-effective ditto - - - - 2,915 16 6	354,068 2 7
KAFIR WAR:—Extraordinary Expenses - - - - - -	254,033 - 3
MISCELLANEOUS ESTIMATES:
Civil Establishments, &c. - - - - - 142,399 7 3
Convict Services - - - - - - 61,733 2 11
Militia and Volunteers, Canada - - - 13,163 18 8
Relief of Distress in Ireland and Scotland, through the Commissariat Department - - - 17,456 5 10
Ditto, Relief Commission - - - - - 7,500 - -
Ditto, Grants to Poor-law Unions - - - 2,331 8 10
Ditto, Fisheries in Scotland - - - - 1,501 - 8
Magnetic Observatories - - - - - 185 6 1	246,270 10 3
£.	1,688,236 5 7
Due from the CONSOLIDATED FUND:—Advances for Slave Compensations, under the Act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 73 - - - - - - - -	122 4 4
Due from REVENUE DEPARTMENTS:
Advances on account of the Customs - - - - - -	411 7 3
Ditto - - - - Excise - - - - - - -	121 4 8
Due from COLONIAL FUNDS:
Advances on account of various Colonies - - - - - -	12,389 14 9
Ditto - - - West Indies, for Coolie Emigration - -	6,989 3 10
Ditto - - - Canada and Nova Scotia, for the Railway Survey - - - - - - - -	4,500 - -
Due by the FRENCH GOVERNMENT:—Advance on account of Supplies to a French Ship of War - - - - - - - - - -	4,472 5 7
Due by the EAST INDIA COMPANY:—Advances for Pensions and various Services chargeable to the Company - - - - - - -	40,515 - 6
Due by the BRITISH RELIEF ASSOCIATION:—Advances for relief of Distress in Ireland - - - - - - - - - - - -	5,417 1 10
Due by VARIOUS PARTIES:—Various small Advances - - - -	1,606 1 -	1,764,780 9 4
	£.	3,117,647 15 5

By Order of the Board,

R. M. Bromley, Secretary.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT of the CASH BALANCE on 31 March 1847.

	Number of Chests at each Station among which the Balance is divided.	Cash in the Chests.	Add Money in Transit.	TOTAL.	Deduct Outstanding Remittances, to which the foregoing Cash Balances are liable.	Net Balance, as shown in the foregoing Account, page 603.
		£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Her Majesty's Paymaster-General	1	520,021 12 7	- - -	520,021 12 7	45 1 3	519,976 11 4
The Commissary at Bahamas	1	4,570 17 10	- - -	4,570 17 10	- - -	4,570 17 10
Ditto - - Bermuda	2	5,034 17 2	- - -	5,034 17 2	- - -	5,034 17 2
Ditto - - Canada	13	85,654 13 4	- - -	85,654 13 4	1,938 3 3	83,716 10 1
Ditto - - Cape of Good Hope	7	56,872 6 9	- - -	56,872 6 9	47,235 4 7	9,637 2 2
The Deputy Paymaster-General at Ceylon	1	3,328 18 7½	- - -	3,328 18 7½	- - -	3,328 18 7½
The Commissary at Fort Garry	1	5,209 18 5	- - -	5,209 18 5	- - -	5,209 18 5
Ditto - - Gambia	2	4,663 9 3	- - -	4,663 9 3	- - -	4,663 9 3
Ditto - - Gibraltar	1	8,269 2 4	- - -	8,269 2 4	- - -	8,269 2 4
Ditto - - Gold Coast	1	2,314 6 4	- - -	2,314 6 4	- - -	2,314 6 4
Ditto - - Honduras	1	4,173 6 2	- - -	4,173 6 2	- - -	4,173 6 2
Ditto - - Hong Kong	1	72,909 19 9	- - -	72,909 19 9	- - -	72,909 19 9
Ditto - - Ionian Islands	6	10,006 5 2¾	55 5 7	10,061 10 9¾	- - -	10,061 10 9¾
Ditto - - Ireland, Commissariat Service	1	383 - -	- - -	383 - -	- - -	383 - -
Ditto - - Ireland, Relief Service	10	44,002 6 -½	1,842 10 10	45,844 16 10½	- - -	45,844 16 10½
Ditto - - Jamaica	2	18,585 9 3½	35 - -	18,620 9 3½	- - -	18,620 9 3½
Ditto - - Malta	1	9,428 7 9	- - -	9,428 7 9	- - -	9,428 7 9
Ditto - - Mauritius	2	25,517 10 2	- - -	25,517 10 2	- - -	25,517 10 2
Ditto - - Newfoundland	1	10,721 13 3	- - -	10,721 13 3	- - -	10,721 13 3
Ditto - - New South Wales	1	137,121 1 2	- - -	137,121 1 2	153 19 9	136,967 1 5
Ditto - - New Zealand	3	31,510 15 -	1,896 4 5	33,406 19 5	72 10 5	33,334 9 -
Ditto - - North Australia	1	2,570 5 4	- - -	2,570 5 4	283 10 3	2,286 15 1
Ditto - - Nova Scotia	5	23,032 9 7	- - -	23,032 9 7	319 13 4	22,712 16 3
Ditto - - St. Helena	1	9,293 17 11	- - -	9,293 17 11	- - -	9,293 17 11
Ditto - - Scotland, Relief Service	3	1,089 2 9	2,050 - -	3,139 2 9	75 - -	3,064 2 9
Ditto - - Sierra Leone	1	2,194 6 6	- - -	2,194 6 6	66 19 9	2,127 6 9
Ditto - - South Australia	1	1,336 4 8½	4,150 - -	5,486 4 8½	- - -	5,486 4 8½
Ditto - - Van Diemen's Land	2	148,307 3 -	62 4 6	148,369 7 6	- - -	148,369 7 6
Ditto - - Western Australia	2	1,122 12 8	- - -	1,122 12 8	- - -	1,122 12 8
Ditto - - West Indies	11	104,123 6 1½	- - -	104,123 6 1½	2 8 -	104,120 18 1½
Deputy Assistant Commissary-general Major	- -	390 10 9¾	- - -	390 10 9¾	- - -	390 10 9¾
Deputy Assistant Commissary-general Ross	- -	2,208 5 6	- - -	2,208 5 6	- - -	2,208 5 6
TOTAL	86	1,355,968 1 4	10,091 5 4	1,366,059 6 8	50,192 10 7	1,315,866 16 1

Audit Office,
15 December 1848.

R. M. Bromley,
Secretary.

THE Cash Balance at the credit of the Commissariat Chest Account in the books of the Paymaster-general, is applicable to the payment of outstanding Treasury Bills, and other liabilities of the Chest, to be paid in this country. This balance is subject to considerable fluctuations, and the amount was unusually great on the 31st March 1847, owing to the large amount of liabilities, as shown at page 604, which remained unliquidated at that date.

According to the 185th article of the Commissariat Regulations, the balance in the Chest at each station abroad is not to exceed the sum required for two months' expenditure, unless some peculiar circumstances render it necessary that a larger reserve should be kept up, in which case the Commissariat officer in charge is required to report to the Treasury Board the grounds of such necessity.

With regard to Canada, the balance in the Chest on the 31st March 1847, although large, was less than the average expenditure for two months; and the balance at Hong Kong, where the supplies of money are chiefly derived from the East Indies, was below the average expenditure for three months.

In

In New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land great difficulty has been experienced from time to time in raising the requisite supplies of specie, and a discretionary authority (which has since been considerably modified) was given to the Commissariat officers in charge at those stations to extend their respective balances to an amount sufficient to meet the expenditure for a period of from four to six months, if they should find it expedient to do so. The Commissariat Chest in New South Wales is necessarily kept up beyond the amount required for that colony, to enable the Commissariat officer to assist the Commissariat in New Zealand, where the expenditure is to a large amount, and very little money can be obtained by negotiations on the spot.

The balance in the West Indies is distributed between 11 detached stations. There has always been a difficulty in raising money for the supply of the Commissariat Chests in the West Indies, which has rendered it necessary to keep in reserve a larger balance than is ordinarily allowed elsewhere.

MEMORANDUM on the COMMISSARIAT CHEST FUND, which formed part of the Evidence of Sir C. Trevelyan before the Select Committee on Army and Ordnance Expenditure, 1850 (Q. 6266.)

THE Commissariat Chest Fund has its origin in the vote which was formerly taken every year for Army Extraordinaries. The practice was to provide for the pay of the troops in the Army Estimate, and for the pay of the Commissariat in the Commissariat Estimate, and to include the staff pay, allowances, recruiting expenses for regiments in India, commissariat supplies, and a variety of colonial and other civil services, in the vote for Army Extraordinaries. Any unprovided army or commissariat service was likewise charged to Army Extraordinaries.

The issues out of Army Extraordinaries were made by the Paymaster-general of the Forces at home, and the Commissariat officers abroad, under the direct authority or control of the Treasury; and the sums required for this service abroad were chiefly raised by bills drawn by the Commissariat officers on the Treasury, which were accepted payable by the Paymaster-general of the Forces.

Besides the final payments made out of Army Extraordinaries, advances were made abroad out of this fund for carrying on services voted in the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Miscellaneous Estimates, which advances were repaid from the respective grants in this country.

The annual vote for Army Extraordinaries was taken on a rough estimate of the probable wants of the ensuing year, calculated with reference to the payments at the Army Pay Office (including the commissariat bills drawn from abroad) during the past year.

The last vote for Army Extraordinaries was taken for five quarters up to the 31st of March 1833, and arrangements were afterwards made for distributing the various services formerly provided for in it, among the estimates of the departments to which they properly belonged. This object, however, was only gradually accomplished, and in the meantime numerous payments continued to be made from the commissariat chests without any vote being taken for them.

Two accounts were annually laid before Parliament in connexion with this fund: one, of the receipts and payments of the Paymaster-general of the Forces, and the other, of the receipts and payments of the Commissariat officers abroad during the preceding year, and the balances in their chests at the end of it; but as neither account contained any notice of the sums due to the chest on account of the advances which had been made to the different departments, it was impossible to ascertain from them the real state of the fund.

About the year 1840 the home side of the account in the Paymaster-general's books showed a large deficit, which, according to established practice, was met by applying sums voted for army services to pay the bills drawn upon the Treasury by the Commissariat officers abroad, and the repayments made by the departments were carried to the credit of the army grant in reduction of these advances. The "Army Extraordinaries" Fund was therefore constantly indebted to the army grants in a fluctuating balance, which reached in 1839 the sum of two millions, and there was every appearance of the fund being hopelessly bankrupt, and of its becoming necessary to apply to Parliament for a vote of credit of at least a million, to be employed in cashing the commissariat bills, and to prevent the grants of Parliament from being appropriated in a manner not authorized by Parliament.

Nevertheless, on a closer scrutiny, there was reason to hope that, notwithstanding the exhausting process above described as having taken place for many years subsequently to 1832, the account would show a more satisfactory result if it were properly made up. The sums voted in former years for Army Extraordinaries, on an unbalanced account running on during a long series of years, were for a very large amount. For instance, the sums voted in the three following years were as follows:—

	£.	s.	d.
1813 - - - - -	14,162,797	2	–
1814 - - - - -	15,350,132	4	10
1815 - - - -	23,983,435	0	3
Making altogether - - -	£. 53,496,364	16	1

besides votes of credit in the same years amounting to 15,351,056 l.

Appendix, No. 3.

Large sums were also for many years, owing to the imperfect manner in which the public accounts were then kept, voted twice over for the same services, in the estimates of different departments, and the surplus remained to the credit of Army Extraordinaries; and lastly, no effectual measures had yet been taken to secure the punctual repayment of the large sums which had been advanced for the service of other departments.

The successive steps which have been taken to place this account on a regular and correct footing have been as follows:—

1. All expenses incurred in ordinary times in connexion with the different departments of the army were directed to be provided for in the estimates of the departments to which they properly belonged, and when incurred without the previous sanction, but with the subsequent approval, of the Treasury, they are charged to the grant in which they would have been included if they had been voted, and are reported to Parliament in the next estimate.

Treasury Minute, 27 November 1840.

2. The cases were defined in which it might still be necessary to take a vote of the nature of Army Extraordinaries; and it was laid down that the estimate in these exceptive cases should be prepared under the direction of the Treasury, and that a special account of the expenditure should be laid before Parliament.

Treasury Minutes, 4 December 1840; 13 November 1849; 27 March and 2 November 1849.

3. Regulations were issued for bringing under control, expenditure incurred without the previous authority of Parliament, in works of defence, the payment, clothing, and provisioning of new levies, and other services arising out of unforeseen exigencies.

Treasury Minute, 27 November 1840.

4. The fund previously known by the name of "Army Extraordinaries" was directed to be called the "Commissariat Chest Fund;" and it was distinctly laid down that it was, for the future, to be used merely as a banking fund for the purpose of making the necessary advances from the commissariat chests for carrying on the services connected with this country abroad, and settling, by a transfer in account, without any actual remittance, a great variety of transactions continually in progress between the mother-country and its dependencies. This arrangement was confirmed by the Royal warrant, dated 16th of June 1849, regulating the application of the funds of the commissariat chest account.

Treasury Minute, 22 December 1848; par. 62.

5. The aggregate balance in the commissariat chests abroad was reduced, by carefully adjusting the supplies of cash to the exigencies of the service at the different stations, from an average of 1,350,000 l. to an average of 470,000 l.

Various Treasury Minutes, the substance of which was afterwards embodied in the 174th Article of the Commissariat Regulations.

6. Arrangements were made with all the different departments on whose account advances are made from the commissariat chests abroad, for the more speedy repayment of those advances.

Treasury Minutes, 20 December 1839; 24 June 1844; 22 October 1844; and 22 December 1848, par. 58.

7. An annual account was directed to be prepared at the Audit Office, showing:—

Treasury Minute, October 1845.

1. The sums advanced from and repaid to the commissariat chest during the year; and

2. The sums due to or by the commissariat chest on the last day of the same year.

And by the Royal warrant dated 16 June 1849, this account, made up to the 31st March in each year, was directed to be laid before Parliament on or before the 1st day of June in the following year, being the same date as that appointed for laying before Parliament the accounts of the expenditure of the Army, Commissariat, and Ordnance grants.

The result is, that instead of the Home side of the account being constantly in debt to the Army Grant, it is now kept permanently in sufficient credit to meet the payment of the commissariat bills, and all other demands upon it; a sum amounting to about 1,260,000 l. is constantly in a state of circulation in the Commissariat Chest Account; so that if it were possible to carry on the service without retaining a sufficient balance at home, and at the different stations abroad, to pay the commissariat bills, and make the numerous advances required, the above-mentioned amount might be paid back into the Exchequer; and although it is indispensably necessary to retain a floating balance of upwards of a million sterling for the above-mentioned purposes, yet as it has now been fully established that no payments are to be finally charged upon the Commissariat Chest Fund, and an annual account of the transactions connected with it is laid before Parliament, full security is given that no expenditure can take place connected with this fund without the knowledge of Parliament.

Royal Warrant dated the 27 June 1837, to apply Sums applicable to Extraordinary Expenses of the Army, pursuant to Treasury Warrants. (Q. 6361.)

Our will and pleasure is, and we do hereby direct, authorise, and require that all such sums of money as are now in or may come to your hands, applicable to the extraordinary services of Our army, be applied by you in pursuance of such warrants as may be issued by virtue hereof, by the Commissioners of Our Treasury for the time being, or of such warrants for the like services as have been issued by Our said Commissioners under the authority of the warrant of his late Majesty in that behalf, dated the 7th day of July 1830, and are still remaining unsatisfied.

Royal Warrant, dated the 16th June 1849, for the Regulation of the Commissariat Chest Account. Q. 6365.

"Our will and pleasure is, and we do hereby direct, authorise, and require, that all such sums of money as are now in, or may come to the hands of our Paymaster-general, applicable to the service of the Commissariat Chests, be applied by you in pursuance of such warrants or letters as may be issued by virtue hereof, by the Commissioners of our Treasury for the time being, or of such directions for the like services as have been issued by our said Commissioners under the authority of our warrant in that behalf, dated the 27th day of June 1837, and are still remaining unsatisfied. And we do further direct and require that the said monies shall be applied only in payment of monies raised for the supply of the Commissariat Chest, or in repayment of monies previously deposited in the said Chest, or in payment of advances to be repaid; and that such payments shall in no case remain finally charged upon the funds of the Commissariat Chest. It is further Our will and pleasure that you shall from time to time render to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, statements, supported by proper vouchers, of all monies received and paid by you on account of the said Commissariat Chest, as well as of all transfers of accounts made by you in respect of the same; and that an annual account of the same, made up to the 31st March in each year by the said Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, shall be by them transmitted to the Commissioners of our Treasury, and that the same shall be laid by the said Commissioners of our Treasury before Parliament on or before the 1st day of June in the year next following the said 31st day of March, if Parliament be then sitting, or if not, then within one week after Parliament shall be next assembled."

Memorandum by Sir C. Trevelyan, dated the 5th February 1851, with Remarks upon it, dated the 14th June 1854.

The Commissariat Memorandum Chest Fund is composed of the savings of the annual grant formerly made for Army Extraordinaries, and it is employed in making the advances required for carrying on the public service abroad, which advances are repaid to the Paymaster-general from the grants for the respective services in this country.

Previously to the year 1840 this fund was apparently in a bankrupt state, being constantly indebted to the army grants in a fluctuating balance, which reached in 1839 the sum of 2,000,000*l.; but since that, by reducing the balances in the Commissariat Chests abroad, by arrangements for the more speedy repayment of the advances, and by transferring the debt of the East India Company for recruiting for regiments in India to the War-office grant, for the express purpose of placing the Commissariat Chest Fund in a solvent state, the home side of the account has been brought into a state to meet the payment of the Commissariat bills and all other demands upon it.

The mode of operating upon this fund is regulated by the Royal Warrant, dated 16 June 1849, which directs that it "shall be applied only in payment of moneys raised for the supply of the Commissariat Chest, or in repayment of moneys previously deposited in the said Chest, or in payment of advances to be repaid; and that such payments shall in no case remain finally charged upon the funds of the Commissariat Chest."

Remarks.

They now amount to upwards of 500,000*l.*, but of this 150,000*l.* arises from surplus funds deposited in the chests in Australia for emigration remittances.

The outstanding balance due by the East India Company for the regiments in India, has since been recharged to the Commissariat Chest Fund. See the latter part of the Memorandum.

After the fund had been gathered up and placed in a solvent state, this Warrant was passed to establish its character as a banking fund to be used for the replenishment of the Commissariat Chests, and for making advances for carrying on the service of the country abroad, to be repaid from the respective votes, and in order to prevent any final payments being made from the fund. For many years claims were made upon it with more or less of reason, arising out of the charges formerly defrayed from the annual vote for Army Extraordinaries, but these were by degrees all disposed of, principally by assigning them to their proper

The

* The balances in the Chests abroad have been reduced since 1840 from an average of 1,350,000*l.* to 440,000*l.*

Appendix, No. 3.

Parl. Paper, No. 662, Sess. 1850, Q. 6350 to 6424 See also Appendix, No. 158. p. 1114.

The Warrant also directs that the account of the Chest shall be audited by the Commissioners of Audit, and shall be laid before Parliament on or before the 1st day of June in each year.

The last account laid before Parliament was for the year 1848–9, and showed a total balance, after deducting all liabilities, of 1,267,806 l. 10 s. 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.

Recent experience shows that this sum is larger than is required for meeting the demands of the service in ordinary times. If the Paymaster-general were to act at once upon the orders given by the respective departments, directing the transfer of sums to the Commissariat Chest in repayment of advances made abroad for Army, Navy, and Ordnance services, his Commissariat Chest cash balance would amount to nearly a million sterling; and in order to prevent so large a sum from being unnecessarily withdrawn from the Exchequer, he has for some time past delayed to make the transfers, whereby results apparently contradictory are shown in the Commissariat Chest account and in the balance sheets of the respective departments laid before Parliament.

But, on the other hand, it would be unsafe to reduce the Commissariat Chest Fund to the lowest amount required for making the necessary advances for carrying on the service in a time of general tranquillity. Owing to the widely extended colonial and foreign relations of this country, unexpected events may again occur calling for a large immediate outlay; and if, instead of a reserve fund being available to meet the increased amount of Commissariat Bills which would be drawn upon the Treasury in such a contingency, these bills had to be paid out of the grants of Parliament (if they would bear it) for the service of the current year, in addition to the other increased demands upon those grants likely to arise at such a period, an embarrassing derangement of the funds voted for other services might occur, before sufficient data could be collected on which to found an application to Parliament for increased supplies.

Under proper grants of Parliament; and, since the Warrant has been passed, the fund has been used only for making advances and repayments, or, in other words, strictly as a banking fund. All this was stated by me to Sir J. Graham, in my examination before the Army and Ordnance Committee, but it was justly considered that the fund ought to be appropriated under a Parliamentary sanction. A Queen's Warrant is not a sufficient security to Parliament that another Government might not obtain another Warrant, whereby the conditions would be altered.

This has been punctually done, and generally much earlier in the year than June. By the 3d clause of the Bill it is proposed that the account of each year, up to the 31st March, shall be laid before Parliament before the corresponding date in the following year. A complete set of the accounts, consisting of seven accounts, beginning with 1846–7, and ending with 1852–3, is submitted herewith, and the Treasury Minute, dated 3 October 1845. It is printed at the commencement of the first of them, and contains many important explanatory details.

The balance of assets over liabilities in each year have been as follows; and it will be seen that there has been a gradual increase in the capital of the fund, as old outstanding debts of a date prior to the 1st April 1846, when the account was commenced, have been got in:

		£.	s.	d.
31 March	1847	1,245,375	6	3
„	1848	1,270,733	16	2 $\frac{3}{4}$
„	1849	1,267,806	10	8 $\frac{3}{4}$
„	1850	1,270,790	13	7 $\frac{1}{4}$
„	1851	1,274,034	10	11 $\frac{1}{4}$
„	1852	1,292,590	13	4 $\frac{1}{4}$
„	1853	1,303,808	6	11 $\frac{1}{4}$
[„	1854	1,325,807	13	3 $\frac{1}{4}$
„	1855	The same as in the preceding year.]

We have not been troubled with any "embarras des richesses" on this fund since the East India Company's debt has been re-transferred to it. The sum due to it by the Company at present is more than half a million.

The justice of these remarks has been since confirmed by the Caffre and Russian wars, which could not be carried on without large sums being available on the spot, to meet the extraordinary expenditure as it arose. £. 330,000 has been already remitted to Turkey in specie, from the Commissariat Chest Fund, for the supply of the Commissariat Chest in that country.

This

Under these circumstances, it is suggested that the advances shown on the annual War-office Balance Sheet to be due by the East India Company to the Army Grant, should be re-transferred to the debit of the Commissariat Chest fund, whereby the War Office would be enabled to close each year's account and to pay over the balance to the Exchequer, in the same manner as the other departments; and the debt of the East India Company would be transferred from the annual grant for the current service of the army to the Central Banking Fund, to which it appears more properly to belong, and to which it did belong previously to 1841, when it was transferred to the War Office grant for the purpose of relieving the Commissariat Chest.

The sum due by the East India Company to the Army Grants, on the 31st March 1849, which is the date of the last balance sheet laid before Parliament, amounts to 263,286 l. 1 s. 4 d., to which must be added a further sum upon the balance sheet for 1849–50, about to be closed; and when these deductions shall have been made from the balance at the credit of the chest in the Paymaster-general's books, what will remain will not be more than sufficient to meet the requirements of the present period, besides leaving a moderate reserve for any emergency that may occur.

If this arrangement shall be adopted, 179,934 l., the unappropriated balance remaining on the Army Grants for 1848–9 and preceding years, may be at once rendered available in aid of Ways and Means; and the same course may be adopted in regard to any unappropriated surplus on the Army Grants of subsequent years.

It appeared from the tenor of several questions put to me, in my examination before the Army and Ordnance Committee, that the Committee was under the impression that it is inconsistent with constitutional checks that so large a sum as that composing the Commissariat Chest Fund, the original Parliamentary appropriation of which can no longer be traced, should be at the disposal of the Executive Government without any restraint except what is self-imposed, and may therefore be at any time altered or withdrawn. If this view should be adopted, the most convenient mode of regulating the fund by legislative enactment, would perhaps be to make it the subject of a clause in the Appropriation Act, drawn in the terms of the Royal Warrant, by which the fund is at present regulated, because the amount of the fund would then annually come under review, and be adjusted with reference to the expected demands of the service during the ensuing year; but if this course of proceeding would not be in accordance with Parliamentary rules, a separate Act must be passed on the subject.

This was accordingly done with the beneficial result expected. The account of the Army Grant being relieved from this burden has ever since been annually closed at the appointed time, and the unexpended balance has been repaid to the Exchequer. Besides promoting the regularity of the accounts, therefore, this arrangement has had the effect of releasing balances which the War Office could not before surrender without crippling their means of carrying on the current service.

It was considered best to dispose of this subject once for all, by a special Act of Parliament, instead of introducing it annually into the Appropriation Act, and the draft of a Bill was prepared but has not yet been brought in.

Appendix, No. 3.

NOTE from Mr. Anderson, dated 24 July 1851.

I ENCLOSE a short estimate showing the demands upon the running balance of the Chest, including, of course, the debt of the East India Company for regiments in India. The effect of re-transfering that debt to the Chest, will be to release the surpluses of the Army Grants which are now retained in addition to the balance of the Commissariat Chest. This arrangement will therefore act practically as a surrender of so much of the Commissariat Chest surplus balance.

COMMISSARIAT CHEST BALANCE.

ASSUMING that the necessity for keeping up a fund for carrying on the business now conducted through the Commissariat Chests will not be questioned, the only point to be considered is the amount to which the balance of the fund ought to be limited.

	£.	s.	d.
1st. Balances must be kept in the hands of the several persons acting as paymasters of the fund, to enable them to meet the current demands of the public service in all parts of the world. The Paymaster-general, for instance, should have a balance in hand to meet the drafts of the commissaries and other payments for the Chest, equal to a month's expenditure, say -	250,000	–	–
The several Commissariat officers should have balances in hand equal to two months' expenditure, say - - - - -	500,000	–	–
2d. The several departments for which advances are made out of the funds of the Commissariat Chest cannot repay immediately the whole of such advances; time must be allowed for the receipt, examination, and settlement of accounts; as a low estimate of such outstanding debts, deducting the current debts of the Commissariat Chest itself, say, net - - - - - -	100,000	–	–
3d. The debt of the East India Company for advances on their account for recruiting for regiments in India, pay of officers, and other expenses, should be provided for out of the fund; the accounts on which this debt arises being voluminous, a long delay takes place before the balance can be settled; this debt cannot be set down at less than - - - - - -	*350,000	–	–
Making a Total of - - - £.	1,200,000	–	–

These are the chief items of the Commissariat Chest balance; many smaller ones might be introduced in favour of and against the fund, but without affecting the general result.

This balance is not sufficient to meet the suddenly increased demands of a Canada insurrection, nor those of a Caffre war; such exigencies must be provided for by special Votes; but for all the ordinary demands of the public service the balance will be found fully sufficient; and if the East India Company would repay the advances made on their account as quickly as the accounts are sent to them, the balance would then admit of reduction, say, to one million.

MEMORANDUM on the above by Mr. Anderson, dated the 15th June 1854.

I SEE no reason for altering this Estimate; the increased demands upon the Chest must be met by placing the account in funds by issues out of the extraordinary Vote to be obtained for the expedition.

---

* This debt is now considerably more, but steps have been taken for reducing it, a larger payment on account being now made quarterly.

COMMISSARIAT CHEST FUND.

1851. 14 Vict.

DRAFT of a BILL for Limiting and Regulating the Commissariat Chest Fund.

Whereas various sums were granted by Parliament from time to time, up to the year One thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, for defraying certain services denominated "The Extraordinaries of the Army:" And whereas a fund now called "The Commissariat Chest Fund," the available balance of which amounted, on the Thirty-first day of March One thousand eight hundred and fifty, to the sum of One million two hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and ninety pounds Thirteen shillings and Sevenpence, has arisen out of the said grants, and from the receipt of other monies on the public account, and the said Fund has been employed, under the direction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, as a banking fund, for facilitating remittances, and for temporary advances for public and colonial services, to be repaid out of the monies appropriated by Parliament, or otherwise applicable to those services: And whereas it is expedient to maintain in the Commissariat Chest Fund a sufficient available balance for supplying the several Commissariat Chests with monies for carrying on the public service, to limit the amount of such balance, and to make other provisions in respect of the said fund: Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows: Preamble.

I. From and after the passing of this Act, the available balance of the Commissariat Chest Fund shall be limited not to exceed the sum of and in case upon the taking of the first annual account hereinafter directed, or upon the taking of any subsequent annual account, such available balance be found to exceed the said sum of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury shall direct the surplus of such balance above the said sum of to be paid to and form part of the Consolidated Fund. Available balance of Commissariat Chest Fund to be limited as herein mentioned, and surplus to form part of Consolidated Fund.

II. It shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to employ from time to time the said Commissariat Chest Fund, or the balances in the hands of persons acting as paymasters for the same fund, in the purchase of specie and payment of bills drawn on the said Commissioners for the supply of the several Commissariat Chests, in making temporary advances for public and colonial services, to be repaid to the Commissariat Chest Fund out of the money appropriated by Parliament to such services, or out of such other monies as may be applicable thereto, and in the repayment of monies deposited in any of the Commissariat Chests abroad on account of the public service: Provided always, that no expenditure whatsoever shall be finally defrayed out of or permanently charged upon the said fund. How Commissioners of Treasury are to employ the said Fund.

III. The said Commissioners shall cause to be prepared an annual abstract account, made up to and including the 31st day of March in every year, showing the sums received into and paid out of the several Commissariat Chests, in the financial year ending such Thirty-first day of March, and the balances remaining on that day in the hands of each of the persons acting as paymasters for the Commissariat Chest Fund; and such account shall also show the liabilities and assets of the said fund, and the available balance thereof, on the said Thirty-first day of March; and the said Commissioners shall lay such account before both Houses of Parliament, on or before the Thirty-first day of March in the year following the termination of such account, if Parliament be sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within fourteen days after the next meeting of Parliament. Annual abstract account of said Fund to be made by Commissioners of Treasury, and laid before Parliament.

Appendix, No. 4.

Appendix, No. 4.

REPAYMENT OF LOANS.

Extract from a Letter from the Commissioners of Audit to the Treasury, 5 May 1848.

How far it is incumbent upon the Commissioners of Audit to see to the recovery of advances by Accountants.

The Special Commissioners further observe, that it is a question for the serious consideration of the auditors "how far any audit of these accounts can be considered final and "complete which does not follow up the recovery of the monies advanced?"* We may observe, however, that the audit of an account, and the recovery of monies advanced by an accountant under competent authority, are distinct and different duties. An accountant is chargeable with such sums only as he has actually received; and when he has satisfactorily proved to us by his accounts that he has properly disbursed those sums, he is entitled to his discharge, and we, in our capacity of auditors, are, as it seems to us, precluded from following the matter any further; and if it were part of the duty of an accountant to take such steps as might be necessary for the recovery of monies properly advanced by him, and he were invested with full powers for that purpose, the utmost we could then do would be to ascertain that the account of the loan had been properly kept, and to inquire from time to time whether any or what steps have been taken to enforce repayment, and, in the event of any difficulties occurring, to report to your Lordships on the subject; and it will be seen, on reference to that part of the Commissioners Report under the head of "Loan Accounts" (p. 1-6), in which the state of the proceedings for the recovery of these advances is described, together with their complicated nature and large amount, that this in itself would be found to be no slight additional duty thrown upon this office, and which we have no means, with our present strength, of adequately performing. If, however, the Commissioners, by the expression of "following up the recovery of the monies advanced," intend to convey the meaning that we should ourselves take those steps which may be necessary for the actual recovery of these advances, we cannot but apprehend that this is a duty which could only be satisfactorily performed by some executive department possessed of full powers.

Treasury Minute on the above Letter, 15 May 1848.

Reference to the Special Commissioners for the audit of the Famine Accounts.

Refer to the Special Commissioners for the audit of the expenditure connected with the Irish Relief Works.

Extract from Letter of Messrs. Anderson and Kirby, Special Commissioners for the Audit of the Expenditure connected with the Irish Famine, 24 May 1848.

Whether Auditors ought not to follow up the recovery of monies advanced.

The observations of the Commissioners make it necessary that we should offer a few explanations in reference to the suggestion at page 31 of our First Report, that it should be considered whether the auditors ought not to follow up the recovery of the monies advanced. Our meaning was that the Commissioners of Audit should have a check upon the Board of Works as to the collection of any advances liable to be recovered and credited in their accounts, so as to secure a credit for every sum received or which ought to be received from persons indebted for such advances. Our reason for the suggestion was, that some of the frauds in the Shannon accounts having arisen from rents received by the accountant, but not paid in and brought to account, we thought it possible that repayments of advances recoverable by the Board of Works might be exposed to similar irregularities.

The Commissioners state that "the audit of an account, and the recovery of monies advanced by the accountant under competent authority, are distinct and different duties."

We admit that they are distinct transactions in the accounts; but the question we submitted for the consideration of the Commissioners of Audit was, whether the repayments ought not to be under such a control as might prevent or detect the misappropriation of them in the manner stated. The following are the cases to which we thought the regulation might be usefully applied:—

Cases to which such a regulation might be usefully applied.

Large sums are now being laid out by the Board of Works under the heads of "arterial drainage" and "piers and harbours:"

On the completion of the works, awards will be made, and the repayments will be remitted from time to time to the Board of Works by the proprietors and others liable; as these repayments will be very numerous and of large aggregate amount, we considered that a check ought, if possible, to be established upon them. As, however, the Commissioners of Audit are of opinion that after they have ascertained the correctness of the advances, they are

* See pages 31–2 of the printed copy of the First Report of the Commissioners appointed by the Treasury in 1847 to report upon the Accounts of the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland laid before Parliament in 1848.

are precluded from following the matter any further, our recommendation that they should establish a check upon the accounts of the recoveries falls to the ground; but we are still of opinion that such a control should exists somewhere, and that the audit is not complete without it.

Treasury Minute on the preceding Letter, 26 May 1848.

Transmit a copy of this letter to the Commissioners of Audit, for their information, with reference to their report, dated the 5th instant.

A control ought to exist somewhere for the purpose of securing the repayment of Loans at the proper periods, and of preventing the misappropriation of the sums so repaid.

State that their Lordships concur in opinion with Messrs. Anderson and Kirby, that a control ought to exist somewhere for the purpose of ascertaining that due precautions are taken to secure the repayment, at the proper periods, of the loans referred to in this letter, made by the Board of Works, and of preventing the misappropriation of the sums so repaid; and my Lords request that the Commissioners of Audit will assist them with any suggestions they may have to offer towards the attainment of this important object.

The Commissioners of Audit to the Treasury, 28 September 1849.

A central check should be established in the Audit Office, for the purpose of bringing before the Treasury from time to time the state of the debts due to the public.

We having again had under our consideration the subject of Mr. Pennington's letter, dated 27th May 1848, wherein your Lordships express an opinion that a control ought to exist somewhere, for the purpose of ascertaining that precautions are taken to secure the repayment, at the proper periods, of the loans made by the Board of Works in Ireland for drainage of land, and for preventing the misappropriation of the sums so repaid; and at the same time you desire that we should make any suggestions that may occur to us towards the attainment of this important object. In reply, we beg to observe that we have long been of opinion that some central check should be established, with the view of bringing before your Lordships, from time to time, the state of the debts due to the public; and we have arrived at the conclusion that it would be better for the public service that such check should be established in this office, where all the public accounts should centre, than in any other department of the Government. We beg leave to enclose copy of a Minute of our Board upon this subject, showing the course that it will be necessary to adopt in the first instance, should your Lordships approve of our proposition.

We need hardly observe to your Lordships that a considerable amount of additional labour will be entailed upon this office in keeping the proposed accounts. We are, however, willing, in the first instance, to undertake the duty with our present establishment; but should we hereafter find the establishment insufficient to meet the increase of duty, we shall deem it necessary to apply to your Lordships for such assistance as may be requisite.

Enclosure.

Copy of Minute of the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, of 19 September 1849, referred to in their Report dated 28 September 1849.

Proposal that the Commissioners of Audit should be furnished with a certificate from the Chief Remembrancer of the payments made by the County Treasurers to the Paymaster of Civil Services, and with statements of all presentments outstanding and unpaid.

The Board resume the consideration of Mr. Pennington's letter of the 27th May 1848, by which they were informed that the Lords of the Treasury were of opinion that "a "control ought to exist somewhere, for the purpose of ascertaining that precautions are "taken to secure the repayment, at the proper periods, of the loans made by the Board of "Works in Ireland (for drainage, &c.), and for preventing the misappropriation of the "sums so repaid; and their Lordships requested that this Board would assist them with "any suggestions which they might have to offer towards the attainment of this important "object." The Board have also before them their Report, dated 15th September 1840, upon a reference from the Treasury of a letter from the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland on the subject of his account of sums received in repayment of advances from the Consolidated Fund under an Act of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 116. In this Report the Board expressed their approval of the proposal of the Paymaster of Civil Services to furnish a statement or certificate from the Chief Remembrancer, who acts in the capacity of auditor of the county treasurers' accounts (with the exception of the county of the city of Dublin), showing the description and the amount of the payments made by such treasurers to the Paymaster of Civil Services within the period of such account; the Board also stated their reasons for considering it desirable that they should be furnished with statements of all presentments outstanding and unpaid.

Reply of the Treasury.

In reply to that Report the Board were informed by Treasury letter, dated 3d November 1840, that the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland was required, by Treasury Minute of 23d December 1839, to make out an annual account of all sums advanced, repaid and outstanding, a duplicate of which, it was stated, might be transmitted to this office, for the Board's information in regard to the general result of the previous examination; but it does not appear that any statement of the kind has been forwarded to this office; the Board therefore think it desirable that the Lords of the Treasury should be requested to transmit to this office the statement in question.

Ledger account proposed to be opened at the Audit Office

The committee of inquiry into the state of this office, to whom the Treasury letter of 27th May 1848 was referred, expressed an opinion, in their paper No. 19, that a ledger account should be opened in the secretary's department against each party or body from whom against each party from whom money is due to the Crown.

whom money is due to the Crown, and from whom repayment will have to be claimed (such as the recoverable cases referred to in the Treasury letter), upon the same principle as advances on imprest are recorded in the books of the office.

The Board, by their Minute of the 18th December 1848, were pleased to approve of this recommendation of the committee.

Statements required for this purpose.

In order, however, to carry into effect this recommendation of the committee of inquiry, which was not limited to those cases referred to in the Treasury letter of 27th May 1848, but was intended to apply to all cases of outstanding loans, it will be necessary that this Board should be furnished with a statement, in the annexed form, of sums due to the Crown, as exhibited by the books of the several accountants, excepting those sums on imprest to sub-accountants and others which form a portion of the balance for which the accountant is responsible.

The statement should exhibit the loans in classes, and the general authority under which each class of loan was made, should be inserted.

Upon the receipt of these statements in the office, made up to the close of the last year, accounts are to be opened in ledgers for the several parties or bodies named therein: and the balance on the last day of the year is to be raised as the first charge against each respectively, by crediting the general loan fund, and debiting the party indebted to the Crown.

A similar statement will be required annually from each accountant to be sent to this office for the purpose of adjusting the charge in each case.

The Board direct that a copy of this Minute be forwarded to the Lords of the Treasury, for their approval of the course proposed to be taken.

STATEMENT of SUMS due to the Public, being Advances that have been made to the following Parties as Loans to be repaid, with Interest thereon (when Interest is payable), on account of*

Under the authority of

* Here insert the Class of Loan.

No. of Loan.	Name of Party or Body indebted.	——	Original Amount of Loan and Interest thereon to 18 .	Amount of Principal and Interest repaid prior to 18 .	Balance of Loan and Interest due on the 18 .	Further Sum advanced within the Year, and Interest upon the Total Debt, due to the 18 .	TOTAL.	Date of the last Advance on account of the Loan.	Repayments in the Year ended 18 .		Balance outstanding on the 18 .			Date of last Repayment.	REMARKS.
									Principal.	Interest.	Principal.	Interest.	TOTAL.
			£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest
		Loan -
		Interest

Treasury Minute on the preceding Letters and Papers, 13 November 1849.

Appendix, No. 4.

My Lords have before them a report from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 28th September last, in which, after referring to the letter from this Board, dated 28th May 1848, wherein their Lordships expressed their opinion that a constant check and control should be exercised over the measures directed to be adopted for securing the repayment at the proper periods, of the loans made by the Board of Works in Ireland, and for the due appropriation of the sums so repaid, and desired that the Commissioners of Audit would make any suggestions that might occur to them towards the attainment of this important object, the Commissioners express their concurrence in this view, and suggest that a ledger account should be opened in the secretary's department against each party or body from whom money is due to the Crown.

Recapitulation of previous correspondence.

The check which it is the function of the Audit Office to maintain upon the transactions of public accountants, would obviously be very incomplete if means were not adopted to secure the punctual payment of all sums owing to the public, whether they are due for rents, repayment of advances, or on any other account; and as this duty properly belongs to the Audit Office, it should, in the opinion of this Board, be executed on the same principle, and, as far as possible, according to the same arrangements as those which regulate the rest of the business of that office.

The Audit Office should secure the punctual payment of all sums owing to the public.

It is incumbent on the accountant to show, in reference to every sum for the recovery of which, on behalf of the public, he is responsible, 1st, that he has taken all the steps prescribed for that purpose by the Treasury or other competent authority, and, 2d, that each sum, when recovered, has been paid by him to the proper account.

Responsibility of accountant.

The accountant should render such accounts, and furnish such explanations to the Commissioners of Audit, as may enable them to judge whether he has properly discharged himself of his responsibility in the above-mentioned respects; and, provided the accounts so rendered include all the points required for an effective examination of the transactions which form the subject-matter of them, their Lordships hope that it will not be necessary to open separate ledger accounts at the Audit Office.

If proper accounts are rendered, it may not be necessary to open a separate ledger account at the Audit Office.

Much the greater portion, both in number and aggregate amount, of the advances made on behalf of the Government, and of the repayments due upon them, is conducted by the Public Works Loan Commissioners and the Drainage Commissioners in England, and the Board of Public Works and the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland; and it appears to my Lords, that when the Commissioners of Audit shall have ascertained the actual state of each Loan, and of the repayments upon it, on a date to be fixed for the purpose, which might be the commencement of the ensuing year, it will not be difficult to maintain a current check upon the subsequent repayments.

Offices which are the medium of most of the advances and repayments.

My Lords have lately had under their consideration the measures proper to be adopted for the actual recovery of the advances made under various Acts of Parliament in Ireland, and they have determined that the duty of realizing the whole of the pecuniary claims of the Government in that country shall be intrusted to the Paymaster of Civil Services, subject to the arrangements described in the Minute of this Board dated 16th ultimo, a copy of which is to be transmitted to the Commissioners of Audit, for their information.

The Paymaster of Civil Services to recover all the loans in Ireland.

A check is maintained in the Audit Office over the collection of the rents and other dues of the Government connected with the land revenue, and this control should be extended to the rents and tolls collected by the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland in their capacity of Shannon Commissioners, and to any other cases to which it is applicable.

The collection of rents and tolls to be checked by the Audit Board.

The Commissioners of Audit will therefore call upon the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland and other accountants, to furnish such periodical accounts in reference to each class of loan transactions as may, in their opinion, be necessary, for the purpose of bringing the collection of sums owing to the public under the same effectual check and control, by examination and audit at the Audit Office, as the expenditure of sums due by the public; and my Lords will be ready to furnish the Commissioners with any further information, and to give them any other assistance that may be required for the satisfactory accomplishment of this important object.

Such periodical accounts to be furnished as will enable the Commissioners of Audit to bring sums owing to the public under the same control as sums due by the public.

The annual account of all sums advanced, repaid, and outstanding in Ireland, which the Paymaster of Civil Services was directed to furnish by the Minute of this Board, dated 23d December 1839, a duplicate of which, it was stated in the letter from this Board, dated 3d November 1840, might be transmitted to the Commissioners of Audit for their information, has been printed in the Annual Finance Accounts; and this statement, and the detailed accounts of the loan transactions of the Board of Works in Ireland, published in the Appendix to their Annual Reports, afford valuable information relative to the several classes of payments due to the public in Ireland.

Accounts already furnished.

Write accordingly to the Commissioners of Audit.

Transmit a copy of this Minute to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, for his information and guidance.

Treasury Minute, dated 16 October 1849.

My Lords have before them a report from the Commissioners of Public Works, dated 25th August last, recommending that an officer should be appointed and attached to the Board for the special purpose of collecting repayments under the Drainage, and Piers and Harbours Acts, who should, if necessary, as the business increases, have the assistance of one,

New establishment recommended by the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, for the purpose of collecting repayments.

one, two or more clerks, and that under this officer a competent local collector should be employed to make personal application on the lands whose current liability shall not be satisfied.

New establishment required in the Paymaster of Civil Services Office.

My Lords have also before them a letter from the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, dated 1st instant, stating that the assistance of a third person has become indispensably necessary for the proper execution of the duties in his office incident to the recovery of the advances made under the Land Improvement Act, but that he hopes that three persons may be found adequate to the permanent discharge of these duties; pointing out the difficulties likely to arise in the recovery of the monies advanced under Mr. Labouchere's letter, for securing the repayment of which the Act of last Session of Parliament, chapter 60, was passed; and stating that one very careful and intelligent person is at once required to take charge of this department, with one assistant, and that very soon after a second assistant will be necessary.

Reference to the Report of Messrs. Anderson, Kirby and Bromley.

My Lords also refer to that portion of the report of Messrs. Anderson, Kirby and Bromley, upon the accounts of the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, dated 14th December 1847, which relates to the drainage and piers and harbours accounts.

Advances repaid through the Paymaster of Civil Services;

The following advances of public money in Ireland are repaid through the agency of the Paymaster of Civil Services:—

1. Loans to counties for various objects under different Acts of Parliament.
2. Advances made under the Act 2 & 3 Vict. c. 61, for the improvement of the navigation of the River Shannon.
3. Loans by the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, pursuant to the provisions of the Act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 44.
4. Annuities charged on counties and baronies for the repayment of the advances made under 1 Vict. c. 21, and 9 Vict. c. 1.
5. Loans made in anticipation of county presentments for roads under 9 Vict. c. 2.
6. Annuities from counties and baronies under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 87, for repayment of advances under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 107.
7. Annuities charged on Land under the Land Improvement Act, 10 Vict. c. 32.
8. Annuities charged under Mr. Labouchere's letter, dated 5th October 1846.

and through the Board of Works.

And the following advances are repaid through the Board of Works:—

1. Loans made by the late Commissioners for the issue of loans out of the Consolidated Fund under the 57 Geo. 3, c. 54, and subsequent Acts.
2. Loans made by the Commissioners of Public Works to counties, &c. under the Acts 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33, and subsequent Acts, which have been advanced in Exchequer bills.
3. Annuities charged on lands by the final awards of the Commissioners of Public Works as Commissioners of Drainage under the Acts 5 & 6 Vict. c. 89, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 69, and subsequent Acts.
4. Sums chargeable on districts or individuals by the awards of the Commissioners of Public Works made under the Acts for the construction of piers and harbours, 9 Vict. c. 3, and 10 & 11 Vict. c. 75.

Extent and duration of the duty.

The recovery of these advances at the stated half-yearly periods, will involve open accounts and correspondence with many thousand individuals for the next twenty-five or thirty years, even supposing no new measures of the kind to be introduced into Parliament; and it is therefore of the highest consequence to the public interest, that a well-defined system should be established, under which the repayments will be secured according to a fixed routine.

All the above repayments to be realized by the Paymaster of Civil Services.

For this purpose my Lords consider it to be indispensably necessary that the whole of this business should be performed by one establishment under one superintendence; and as it has always been the intention of this Board that the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services should be charged with the recovery of all the pecuniary claims of the Government in Ireland, and satisfactory arrangements have been made in that office for the repayment of the majority of those claims, including the numerous repayments under the Labour Rate and Land Improvement Acts, my Lords are pleased to determine that the duty of realizing all the above-mentioned classes of repayments shall be confided to the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Loans under the 57 Geo. 3, c. 34;

The loans under 57 Geo. 3, c. 34, and subsequent Acts were made previously to the establishment of the Board of Works. Those which are still outstanding are twenty in number, upon some of which no payments have been made for many years past, either on account of interest or principal. When the Paymaster of Civil Services shall have perused the correspondence relating to these loans, and shall have obtained all other requisite information regarding them, he will make a special report to this Board, in addition to the information which has been already furnished from his office on the subject of them, submitting the measures which appear to him to be required for the realization of such of the outstanding loans as are still recoverable, and explaining the actual state of the facts, in cases in which the loans appear to him to be absolutely and entirely irrecoverable.

under the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33.

The loans made by the Board of Works under the Act 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33, which remain unpaid, are seventy-one in number, and the instalments of principal and interest are, for the most part, regularly paid as they become due. Some of these loans, however, are in arrear, and in respect to these the Paymaster of Civil Services will make a careful inquiry and report, as has been directed in reference to the preceding class of loans.

Course to be adopted when the Board of Works is receiver.

In some cases included in the two last-mentioned classes of loans, the Board of Works are receivers of the rents, tolls, &c. upon which the loans are secured. This arrangement will will remain undisturbed, and the sums received by the Board of Works will be transferred, as they accrue, to the credit of the Paymaster of Civil Services, to be paid by him to the Consolidated Fund.

Loans under the Arterial Drainage Acts.

The sums due under the Drainage Acts, are fixed by the final awards made by the Commissioners of Public Works acting as Commissioners of Drainage, after the completion of each drainage work. An equal annuity, including principal and interest, on the plan of the Land Improvement Act, is charged in each case, under the authority of the letter from this Board, dated 28th November 1848, instead of fixed instalments of principal, and varying instalments of interest; and the amount of each annual instalment, and consequently the duration of the annuity, depends upon the net annual addition made to the proceeds of the land drained, as directed by the Drainage Acts. Eight final awards, including 124 indebted proprietors, have been passed, and 14 others are in a forward state.

The loans which have to be repaid, were partly obtained from private individuals, on the security of debentures, bearing an interest of 5 per cent., and were partly advanced by the Government at 4 per cent.

Remedies provided by these Acts.

The remedies provided by the Drainage Acts against defaulters are:—that in case any instalment which has become due, shall remain for thirty-one days unpaid, an additional charge of 1 s. in the pound shall be made on the sum overdue; and if the sum does not exceed 50 l., the Commissioners of Public Works may recover by civil bill against the party liable to pay the same; if the instalment shall remain unpaid three months, the Commissioners may enter into possession of the rents and profits of the lands upon which the loans have been secured, or may raise the sums overdue by mortgage upon them; and if the instalment remains unpaid a year, the Board of Works may proceed to the sale of the property.

Course to be adopted.

Copies of the final awards will be delivered by the Commissioners of Public Works to the Paymaster of Civil Services, as the basis of the demands to be made by him. In the realization of the sums due under these awards, the Paymaster of Civil Services will follow the same general plan which is already successfully acted upon by him in regard to the Land Improvement repayments, with this difference, that instead of employing the agency of the Crown Solicitor to take the requisite legal steps against defaulters, the Paymaster of Civil Services will furnish a list of the defaulters under each award to the Commissioners of Public Works, in order that the Commissioners may proceed against them, under the powers conferred upon them by the Drainage Acts, the sums overdue being paid, when recovered, to the credit of the Paymaster of Civil Services.

Proprietors to be encouraged to pay off the principal sums.

The Paymaster of Civil Services will offer every practicable facility and inducement to the indebted proprietors to pay off the sums respectively due by them, in anticipation of the period fixed by the award; and with this view a circular letter should be sent to each individual, pointing out the advantage to him from the adoption of this course, according to the plan already commenced by the Board of Works.

Order in which the sums repaid are to be applied.

The Commissioners of Public Works will furnish the Paymaster of Civil Services with a statement of the principal and interest due on the loans connected with each drainage work upon which a final award has been made, and the Paymaster of Civil Services will apply the sums received by him in the following order; i. e., first, to the payment of the interest on the private loans; secondly, to the payment of the principal sums composing those loans; and, thirdly, to the payment of the principal and interest of the Government loans.

Loans for the construction of Piers and Harbours.

The sums due under the Acts for the construction of piers and harbours are in like manner determined by awards to be made by the Commissioners of Public Works. No such awards have yet been made, but when any shall have been completed, copies of them will be delivered by the Commissioners of Public Works to the Paymaster of Civil Services, together with all other necessary information, in order that the Paymaster of Civil Services may collect the sums due, under the same general system as will be pursued in respect to the other repayments. All the loans for this class of works have been made by the Government, and the whole of the sums to be received will be therefore payable to the Consolidated Fund.

Board of Works to furnish a statement completed up to the latest date.

It is their Lordships' wish that these arrangements should be carried into effect at the earliest practicable period, and the Board of Works will therefore furnish the Paymaster of Civil Services with a statement, completed up to the latest date, of the accounts connected with each class of loans, the repayment of which will be transferred to that officer, upon receipt of which statements the Paymaster of Civil Services will proceed to secure the repayments as above directed.

When necessary, the Paymaster of Civil Services to act under a legal authority from the Board of Works.

In those cases in which the Board of Works is charged by law with the duty of receiving the repayments, the Paymaster of Civil Services will for the present act under a legal authority from that Board.

Three Clerks to be transferred from the Board of Works to the Paymaster of Civil Services.

My Lords are prepared to make any addition to the establishment of the Paymaster of Civil Services that may be indispensably necessary to enable him to carry out the instructions contained in this Minute, but they consider that it will be sufficient for the present if the services of three experienced and efficient clerks are placed at his disposal. My Lords are accordingly pleased to direct that Mr. J. Jackson, Mr. W. Yondell, and Mr. J. C. Barton, whose claims formed the subject of the letter from the Board of Works dated 26th June last, and of the Minute of this Board dated 3d July, be employed for the future under the Paymaster of Civil Services. The pay to be allowed to them will be the same as that which they received under the Board of Works, or 156 l. 10 s. per annum, and they will be considered to be on probation until the Paymaster of Civil Services shall be able to report that they are in every respect qualified to be placed on his establishment.

Annual Returns to be furnished.

In order that my Lords may periodically have before them the state of the repayments under

Appendix, No. 4.

under all the heads under which advances have been made in Ireland, they desire that the Paymaster of Civil Services will, as soon as possible after the close of each year, furnish them with a return made up to the 5th January, containing the following particulars:—

1. The aggregate sum due under each head on account of the arrears of former years;
2. The amount collected during the past year on account of such arrears;
3. The sum which became due during the past year;
4. The amount collected on account of such sum, and the amount still outstanding; and,
5. The names of the defaulters, and the sums for which they are respectively in default.

Transmit a copy of this Minute to the Paymaster of Civil Services, and to the Commissioners of Public Works, for their information and guidance respectively.

IRELAND.

Abstract of sums repaid under—
1st. Landed Property Improvement;
2d. Labouchere Drainage;
3d. Arterial Drainage.

STATEMENT of Sums Due, Paid, and Outstanding in respect of LANDED PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT, 5 April 1848 to 10 October 1855; LABOUCHERE DRAINAGE, 10 October 1848 to 10 October 1855; ARTERIAL DRAINAGE, 1 May 1849 to 1 November 1855.

	Due.			Paid.			Outstanding.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Landed Property Improvement - -	479,212	3	5	463,747	3	11	15,464	19	6
Labouchere Drainage - - - -	39,688	16	6	79,713	13	8	9,975	2	10
Arterial Drainage - - - - -	90,362	8	7	87,198	17	8	3,163	10	11
£.	659,263	8	6	630,659	15	3	28,603	13	3

LANDED PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT.

Landed Property Improvement.

AMOUNT sanctioned to be issued under the Provisions of the Landed Property Improvement Acts, 10 Vict. c. 32, &c. - - - - - £. 2,000,000.

	£.	s.	d.
Amount of Rent-charge accrued due - - - - - - - - -	479,212	3	5
Ditto - - - Received - - - - - - - - -	463,747	3	11
Ditto - - - Outstanding - - - - - - - £.	15,464	19	6

Periods at which Rent-charge became Payable.	Amount of Rent-charge Accrued Due.			Amount Received.			Amount Outstanding.			Number of Defaulters.	Income Tax allowed and deducted from Rentcharge Accrued Due.				Defaulters whose Estates are in the Encumbered Estates Court.
															Number.	Amount.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.		£.	s.	d.			£. s. d.
5 April 1848	67	7	2	67	7	2	—			—	—				—	—
10 Oct. –	4,970	12	8	4,967	7	8	3	5	–	1	-	-	-	-	1	3 5 –
5 April 1849	12,308	12	3	12,280	18	–	27	14	3	6	-	-	-	-	3	20 17 9
10 Oct. –	16,739	15	5	16,669	10	6	70	4	11	20	-	-	-	-	8	40 6 11
5 April 1850	23,824	10	9	23,636	12	10	187	17	11	33	-	-	-	-	13	114 15 5
10 Oct. –	27,415	18	5	27,097	16	1	318	2	4	44	-	-	-	-	17	188 17 5
5 April 1851	32,205	16	10	31,689	3	–	516	13	10	56	-	-	-	-	21	306 16 11
10 Oct. –	34,781	19	1	34,159	6	3	622	12	10	66	-	-	-	-	25	347 15 11
5 April 1852	37,836	11	5	36,908	2	1	928	9	4	81	-	-	-	-	30	403 – 11
10 Oct. –	39,426	5	4	38,421	15	–	1,004	10	4	85	-	-	-	-	31	412 15 11
5 April 1853	40,710	4	3	39,532	12	8	1,177	11	7	99	-	-	-	-	32	425 2 11
10 Oct. –	[a]40,838	1	2	39,577	16	7	1,260	4	7	106	[a]395	6	7	Rate at	34	426 15 11
5 April 1854	[b]41,646	–	6	40,144	7	9	1,501	12	9	118	[b]401	19	8	2⅓ £.	36	471 16 6
10 Oct. –	[c]41,568	5	2	39,710	1	9	1,858	3	5	130	[c]816	13	2	Rate at	39	534 2 6
5 April 1855	[d]42,383	4	7	40,254	12	4	2,128	12	3	146	[d]835	4	10	4⅔ £.	39	534 2 6
10 Oct. –	[e]42,488	18	5	38,629	14	3	3,859	4	2	171	[e]960	11	4	Rate at 5⅓ £.	40	551 13 11
£.	479,212	3	5	463,747	3	11	15,464	19	6							4,782 5 10

Amount received for Redemptions, part Redemptions or unexpended Balances of Loans, and paid to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer - - - - - - £. 70,422 5 4

Paymaster of Civil Services Office, Dublin Castle,
14 April 1856.

Compiled up to and including 12 April 1856.

LABOUCHERE DRAINAGE.

Appendix, No. 4.

Labouchere Drainage.

STATEMENT showing the Amounts accrued due, received, and outstanding on account of Instalments of Principal and Interest, and Annuities respectively, to the 10 October 1855, pursuant to 10 Vict. c. 10, and 11 & 12 Vict. c. 106; together with the Total Sums received for Redemption of Annuities, and Payments in full for Principal and Interest, to 12 April 1856 inclusive.

Periods at which Amounts became due.	Total Amounts of Rent-charge, Principal and Interest.	Amounts Paid.	Arrears Outstanding.	Number of Defaults.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
10 October - 1848	1,381 6 6	620 13 1	760 13 5	50
5 April - - 1849	762 - 6	165 15 10	596 4 8	50
10 October - „	6,777 6 3	6,168 9 6	608 16 9	56
5 April - - 1850	6,769 9 7	6,155 1 11	614 7 8	59
10 October - „	7,003 7 5	6,390 1 1	613 6 4	62
5 April - - 1851	6,993 7 7	6,370 4 9	623 2 10	68
10 October - „	6,975 14 8	6,361 2 6	614 12 2	68
5 April - - 1852	6,959 15 5	6,349 9 -	610 6 5	69
10 October - „	6,838 7 10	6,226 12 -	611 15 10	72
5 April - - 1853	6,807 18 8	6,142 6 4	665 12 4	77
10 October - „	6,587 19 -	5,916 7 4	671 11 8	81
5 April - - 1854	6,576 13 1	5,890 - 11	686 12 2	84
10 October - „	6,477 7 1	5,778 - -	699 7 1	87
5 April - - 1855	6,463 13 9	5,701 2 10	762 10 11	102
10 October - „	6,314 9 2	5,478 6 7	836 2 7	124
£.	89,688 16 6	79,713 13 8	9,975 2 10

	£. s. d.
Total Sum received in full for Principal and Interest - - - -	11,856 7 7
Ditto - - - - for Redemption of Annuities - - - -	8,354 5 -

ARTERIAL DRAINAGE, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 89, &c.

Appendix, No. 4.
Arterial Drainage.

INSTALMENT ACCOUNT:—86 Awards: 11 April 1856. 92 Awards Enrolled: five paid, and one "Clonakilty," not for Collection:

Instalment Payable.	Net Amount of Instalment.	Amount paid to 11th April 1856.	Arrears on 11th April 1856.	Instalments Outstanding.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
1 May - - 1849	487 16 4	487 16 4	—	—
1 November - „	1,207 2 6	1,188 17 3	18 5 3	2
1 May - - 1850	1,707 6 3	1,686 14 1	20 12 2	4
1 November - „	2,908 2 5	2,885 10 7	22 11 10	7
1 May - - 1851	3,202 8 4	3,160 12 6	41 15 10	10
1 November - „	4,753 12 7	4,711 16 9	41 15 10	10
1 May - - 1852	7,096 2 10	7,045 9 —	50 13 10	15
1 November - „	8,324 18 8	8,221 1 11	103 16 9	25
1 May - - 1853	8,687 5 1	8,573 18 1	113 7 —	29
1 November - „	8,589 — 1	8,384 9 9	204 10 4	33
1 May - - 1854	8,519 9 5	8,296 11 6	222 17 11	36
1 November - „	10,594 2 4	10,231 13 —	362 9 4	67
1 May - - 1855	10,929 17 1	10,454 11 11	475 5 2	100
1 November - „	13,355 4 8	11,869 15 —	1,485 9 8	202
TOTALS - - £.	90,362 8 7	87,198 17 8	3,163 10 11	540

	£. s. d.
TOTAL EXPENDITURE on 91 Awards - - - - - - -	629,740 16 1
Amount remitted per 16 & 17 Vict. c. 130, to 12 Jan. 1856 -	183,636 17 4
Principal to be Repaid - - - - - £.	446,103 18 9

TOTAL RECEIPTS:	£. s. d.
Instalments - - - - - - -	87,198 17 8
Redemptions - - - - - -	36,426 3 4
County Payments - - - - -	34,246 3 10
Poundages - - - - - -	931 1 8
Supplemental Grant Ardee - - -	1,112 2 6
£.	159,914 9 —

	PRINCIPAL.	INTEREST.	TOTAL.
APPROPRIATION:	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Public Loan Fund - - -	28,171 1 9	12,773 17 7	40,944 19 4
Debenture Account - -	109,603 — —	7,509 9 9	117,112 9 9
TOTAL - - £.	137,774 1 9	20,283 7 4	158,057 9 1
Balance - - -			1,856 19 11
			159,914 9 —

Paymaster of Civil Services Offices,
Dublin Castle, 11 April 1856.

Appendix, No. 5.

CUSTOMS.

A RETURN showing the GROSS INCOME of the CUSTOMS, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sums Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purpose for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum paid into the Exchequer, for the Years 1854-5 and 1855-6.

YEAR commencing 6 April 1854 and ending 31 March 1855.

Balances and Bills outstanding on 5 April 1854.	Gross Receipt.	Repayments, Drawbacks, &c.	Net Receipt, including Balances.	Payments out of Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.*	Payments into the Exchequer.
£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
401,967 11 3	22,245,117 17 1	253,442 13 9	22,393,642 14 7	200,176 17 10	21,429,903 14 9

* Purposes for which the Sum of 200,176 l. 17 s. 10 d. was paid out of the Income of the Year ended 31 March 1855, in its progress to the Exchequer, with the Authorities for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENT.	AMOUNT.	AUTHORITY FOR PAYMENT.
	£. s. d.
Superannuation and Compensation Allowances and Pensions (net amount after abatement of Superannuation Deductions, per Act 4 Will. 4, c. 24) - - - -	198,250 3 6	Various Treasury Orders, under the Acts 50 Geo. 3, c. 117; 3 Geo. 4, c. 113; and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24.
Compensation Allowances to Naval Officers in the Plantations - - - - - - - - - -	1,926 14 4
£.	200,176 17 10

YEAR commencing 1 April 1855 and ending 31 March 1856.

Balances, Bills, and Advances repayable out of Votes, outstanding on 31 March 1855.		Gross Receipt.	Repayments, Drawbacks, &c.	Net Receipt, including Balances and Advances.	Payments out of Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.*	Payments into the Exchequer.
Balances and Bills.	Advances repayable out of Votes.
£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
449,987 17 11	313,574 4 1	23,481,817 15 6	268,020 15 –	23,977,359 2 6	207,033 13 3	23,034,029 – 7

* Purposes for which the Sum of 207,033 l. 13 s. 3 d. was paid out of the Income of the Year ended 31 March 1856, in its progress to the Exchequer, with the Authorities for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENT.	AMOUNT.	AUTHORITY FOR PAYMENT.
	£. s. d.
Superannuation and Compensation Allowances and Pensions (net amount after abatement of Superannuation deductions, per Act 4 Will. 4, c. 24.) - - - -	202,990 16 –	Various Treasury Orders, under the Acts 50 Geo. 3, c. 117; 3 Geo. 4, c. 113; and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24.
Compensation Allowances to Naval Officers in the Plantations - - - - - - - - - -	1,890 19 –
Expenses under the Merchant Shipping Act, Part 2 -	2,142 18 3	- - Merchant Shipping Act, 1854. (17 & 18 Vict., c. 104.)
£.	207,033 13 3

The particulars embodied in the foregoing Return have in part been supplied by the Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Customs.

Office of the Inspector-general of Imports and Exports, Custom House, London, 9 June 1856.

John A. Messenger, Inspector-general of Imports and Exports.

A RETURN, showing the Gross Income of the Excise, Stamps, Land and Assessed Taxes, and Income and Property Tax, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sum Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purpose for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum Paid into the Exchequer, for the Years 1854–5 and 1855–6.

INLAND REVENUE.

YEAR commencing 5 April 1854, and ending 31 March 1855.

	Balances and Bills outstanding on the 5th April 1854.	Gross Receipt.	Repayments, Drawbacks, &c.	Net Receipts, including Balances.	Payments out of the Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.	Payments into the Exchequer.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Excise - - - -	322,584 12 1	17,669,548 13 8¾	627,253 12 1¾	17,364,879 13 8	187,969 11 11¼	16,695,537 14 –
Stamps - - -	173,989 11 8¾	7,404,073 12 4½	244,533 19 2	7,333,529 4 11¼	15,418 12 1	7,093,777 4 –
Land and Assessed Taxes	12,269 4 1¼	3,229,642 8 6¾	4,520 18 8¼	3,237,390 13 11¾	16,047 3 4	3,160,640 19 10
Income and Property Tax	43,911 17 4¾	11,031,836 7 4½	109,569 10 7¼	10,966,178 14 2	- - -	10,642,620 19 9
Total - - £.	552,755 5 3¾	39,335,101 2 –½	985,878 – 7¼	38,901,978 6 9	219,435 7 4¼	37,592,576 17 7

Purposes for which the Sum of 219,435*l.* 7 s. 4¼ d. was paid out of the Income of the Year ending 31 March 1855, in its Progress to the Exchequer, with the Authority for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENTS.	AMOUNT.	AUTHORITY FOR THE PAYMENTS.
	£. s. d.
Superannuation or retiring allowances and compensation allowances upon abolition of office.	187,736 10 8¼	Treasury; under the provisions of the Acts 50 Geo. 3, c. 117, 3 Geo. 4, c. 113, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24.
Compensation allowances upon abolition of fees - - -	110 8 7	Treasury Warrant, dated 20th July 1839.
Irish charity pensions - - - - - - - -	661 5 10	Treasury Letter, dated 30th September 1824.
Pensions to widows and children of men killed, and to officers and men wounded in the service.	992 13 –	Treasury; under the provisions of the Act 47 Geo. 3, c. 66, s. 42.
Annuities to widows and children of contributors to the late Scotch Incorporation Fund.	7,020 17 2	Parliament, per Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 72.
Allowances to late officers of the tax department in Ireland -	2,981 18 3	Treasury Warrant, dated 28th November 1825, on the repeal of the assessed taxes in Ireland.
Gratuities to disabled and discharged men of the revenue police in Ireland.	1,374 12 1	Treasury Letters of various dates. These persons not being entitled to a retiring allowance under the Superannuation Acts, when they become disabled, are recommended by the Board to the Treasury for such gratuity as their Lordships may think fit to award. In ordinary cases the gratuity made is one month's pay for each year of service.
Pension to assignees of the late Charles Boone, esq. (moiety of Earl Bath's pension).	1,200 – –	Letters Patent, dated 16th August, in the 25th year of the reign of Charles the Second.
Pension to the Duke of Grafton - - - - -	7,191 12 –	Letters Patent, dated 22d October, in the 26th year of the reign of Charles the Second.
Judicial establishment for Scotland remaining chargeable on the Excise revenue during the lives of the present holders.	10,165 9 9	Parliament; per Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94.
£.	219,435 7 4¼

INLAND REVENUE.

YEAR commencing 1 April 1855, and ending 31 March 1856.

	Balances and Bills outstanding on 31 March 1855.	Gross Receipt.	Repayments, Drawbacks, &c.	Net Receipt, including Balances.	Payments out of the Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.	Payments into the Exchequer.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Excise - - - -	481,372 7 8¾	18,355,449 4 9	723,310 10 5	18,113,511 2 –¾	373,734 2 6¾	17,117,373 9 6
Stamps - - -	224,333 8 10¼	7,297,666 17 1½	233,154 16 –½	7,288,845 9 11¼	14,742 2 4	7,076,912 13 3
Land and Assessed Taxes	60,702 10 9¾	3,140,465 16 3	4,388 10 4¼	3,196,779 16 8½	18,058 8 1	3,100,031 1 8
Income and Property Tax	323,557 14 5	15,402,901 14 11½	243,444 – 7	15,483,015 8 9½	- - -	15,070,958 2 9
TOTAL - - £.	1,089,966 1 9¾	44,196,483 13 1	1,204,297 17 4¾	44,082,151 17 6	406,534 12 11¾	42,365,275 7 2

Purposes for which the Sum of 406,534 l. 12 s. 11 ¾ d. was Paid out of the Income of the Year ending 31 March 1856, in its Progress to the Exchequer, with the Authority for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENTS.	AMOUNT.	AUTHORITY FOR THE PAYMENT.
	£. s. d.
Superannuation or retiring allowances upon abolition of office	185,845 14 8¼	Treasury; under the provisions of the Acts 50 Geo. 3, c. 117, 3 Geo. 4, c. 113, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24.
Compensation allowances upon abolition of fees - - -	105 – 10½	Treasury Warrant, dated 20th July 1839.
Irish charity pensions - - - - - - - - -	656 8 8¾	Treasury Letter, dated 30th September 1824.
Pensions to widows and children of men killed, and to officers and men wounded in the service.	933 18 1½	Treasury; under the provisions of the Act 47 Geo. 3, c. 66, s. 42.
Annuities to widows and children of contributors to the late Scotch Incorporation Fund.	6,604 13 3½	Parliament; per Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 72.
Allowances to late officers of the Tax Department in Ireland	2,737 9 7½	Treasury Warrant, dated 28th November 1825, on the repeal of the Assessed Taxes in Ireland.
Gratuities to disabled and discharged men of the revenue police in Ireland.	1,429 11 2¾	Treasury Letters of various dates. These persons not being entitled to a retiring allowance under the Superannuation Acts, when they become disabled, are recommended by the Board to the Treasury for such gratuity as their Lordships may think fit to award. In ordinary cases the gratuity made is one month's pay for each year of service.
Pension to the assignees of the late Charles Boone, esq., moiety of Earl Bath's pension.	1,200 – –	Letters Patent, dated 16th August, in the 25th year of the reign of Charles the Second.
Pension to the Duke of Grafton - - - - -	7,191 12 –	Letters Patent, dated 22d October, in the 26th year of the reign of Charles the Second.
Purchase of the pension of the Duke of Grafton - - -	193,777 13 2	Treasury Letter, dated 25th January 1856.
Judicial establishment for Scotland remaining chargeable on the Excise revenue during the lives of the present holders.	6,052 11 3	Parliament, per Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94.
£.	406,534 12 11¾

Inland Revenue Office,
10 June 1856.

L. S. Lyne,
A. & C. G.

Appendix, No. 5.

POST OFFICE.

RETURN, showing the GROSS INCOME of the POST OFFICE, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sums Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purposes for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum Paid into the Exchequer for the Year 1854-5, and for the Year 1855-6.

YEAR commencing 5 April 1854 and ending 31 March 1855.

Balances and Bills outstanding on 5 April 1854.	Gross Receipts.	Repayments, Drawbacks, &c.	Net Receipts, including Balances.	Payments out of Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.	Payments into the Exchequer.
£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
455,255 5 4	2,689,916 9 10½	54,579 18 4	3,090,591 16 10½	26,708 18 9	2,343,000 – –

Purposes for which the Sum of £. 26,708. 18. 9. was paid out of the Revenue of the Year ended 31st March 1855, in its Progress to the Exchequer, with the Authority for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENTS.		AMOUNT.	Authority for the Payment.
		£. s. d.
Superannuations and pensions to persons formerly employed in the collection of the Post Office Revenue –		19,317 11 7	The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.
Less superannuation abatements under Act 4 Will. 4, c. 24 – – – – – – – – – –		5,424 14 1
		13,892 17 6
Compensation for offices abolished – – – –		2,580 11 3	The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.
Hereditary Pensions charged on the Post Office Revenue:		16,473 8 9
To His Grace the Duke of Marlborough – – –		4,000 – –	Act of Parliament, 5 Anne, cap. 4.
His Grace the Duke of Grafton – – – –		3,384 – –	Grant, 19th January, in 20th year of the reign of Charles the Second, confirmed by Act 22 & 23 Charles the Second, No. 44.
Receiver-general's fee thereon paid over to revenue –		23 10 –
The heirs of His Grace the Duke of Schomberg, viz.:
The Duke of Leeds – – – – £.	1,080
Charles, Eyre, Esq. – – – – –	720
Trustees of Henry Philip Powys, Esq. –	360
R. Gosling, Esq. – – – – –	360
Trustees of Caroline Mary, wife of Sir Robt. W. Gardiner, Emily Anne, wife of Burke Cuppage, Esq., and Georgina, wife of Lieut.-Col. Henry Pester, under the marriage settlement of Lady Ker with Capt. M'Leod, R.A. (in 1783), and under the will of Lieut.-Col. Francis M'Leod – –	216	2,828 – –	Grant, William and Mary, confirmed by Act 1 George the First, No. 78, and Letters Patent of 29th June, 2 George the First.
Lieut.-Col. Henry Pester (during minority of his son, John Constantine Pester) 72*l.* unpaid – – – – – – –	—
Dame Henrietta M'Leod – – – –	72
Receiver-general's fees on the above pensions paid over to the revenue – –	20
	£.	26,708 18 9

General Post Office, May 1856.

Geo. E. Hide,
Receiver and Accountant-general.

YEAR commencing 1 April 1855 and ending 31 March 1856.

Balances and Bills outstanding on 1 April 1855.	Gross Receipts.	Repayments, Drawbacks, &c.	Net Receipts, including Balances.	Payments out of the Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.	Payments into the Exchequer.
£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
720,882 18 1½	2,793,870 10 -¾	26,669 5 1½	3,488,084 3 -¾	53,494 5 2	2,757,752 17 10

Purposes for which the Sum of £. 53,494. 5. 2. was paid out of the Income of the Year ending 31 March 1856, in its Progress to the Exchequer, with the Authority for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENTS.		AMOUNT.	Authority for the Payment.
		£. s. d.
Superannuations and pensions to persons formerly employed in the collection of the Post Office Revenue -		27,345 10 2	The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.
Less superannuation abatements under Act 4 Will. 4, c. 24		6,511 1 4
		20,834 8 10
Compensation for offices abolished - - - -		2,665 10 3	The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.
		23,499 19 1
Hereditary Pensions charged on the Post Office Revenue:
To His Grace the Duke of Marlborough - - -		4,000 - -	Act of Parliament, 5 Anne, c. 4.
His Grace the Duke of Grafton - - - -		3,384 - -	Grant, 19th January, in the 20th year of the reign of Charles the Second, confirmed by Act 22 & 23 Charles the Second, No. 44.
Receiver-general's fee thereon paid over to revenue -		23 10 -
To The Heirs of His Grace the Duke of Schomberg, viz.:	£. s. d.
The Duke of Leeds - - -	1,080 - -
Charles Eyre, Esq., one year, to 5th January 1856 - - -	720 - -
Charles Eyre, Esq., 6th January to 17th March 1856 - - -	142 8 4
Trustees of Henry Philip Powys, Esq. - - - - - -	360 - -
R. Gosling, Esq. - - - - -	360 - -
Trustees of Caroline Mary, wife of Sir R. W. Gardiner, Emily Anne, wife of Burke Cuppage, Esq., and Georgina, wife of Lieut.-col. Henry Pester, under the marriage settlement of Lady Ker with Captain M'Leod, R.A. (in 1783), and under the will of Lieut.-col. Francis M'Leod -	216 - -	3,187 8 1	Grant, William and Mary, confirmed by Act 1 Geo. 1, No. 78, and Letters Patent of 29th June, 2 George the First.
Lieut.-col. Henry Pester (during minority of his son, John Constantine Pester), three years' payment - - - - - -	216 - -
Dame Henrietta M'Leod - -	72 - -
Receiver-general's fee on the above pensions paid over to revenue -	20 19 9
Amount paid to Charles Eyre, Esq., for purchase of one-fourth of grant held by the heirs of the Duke of Schomberg - - - - - - - - -		19,399 8 -	The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.
	£.	53,494 5 2

General Post Office,
24 May 1856.

Geo E. Hide,
Receiver and Accountant-general.

Appendix, No. 5.

CROWN LANDS.

RETURN showing the Gross Income of the Crown Lands, distinguishing the Total Sums Received, the Sum Paid in its Progress to the Exchequer, the Purpose for which Paid, and the Authority for such Payment, and the Net Sum Paid into the Exchequer, for the Years 1854–5, and 1855-6.

YEAR commencing 1st April 1854 and ending 31st March 1855.

Balances outstanding on the 1st April 1854.	Gross Receipts.	TOTAL.	Payments out of Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.	Payments into the Exchequer.	Balances outstanding on the 31st March 1855.
£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
56,266 7 9	383,756 15 1	440,023 2 10	122,132 16 3	272,571 16 8	45,318 9 11

Purposes for which the Sum of £. 122,132. 16. 3. was Paid out of the Income of the Year ending 31st March 1855, in its Progress to the Exchequer, with the Authority for the same.

PARTICULARS OF THE PAYMENT.	AMOUNT.	Authority for the Payment.
	£. s. d.
Salaries and Per-centage of Receivers and Stewards of Manors, including their Expenses -	8,078 1 10	Acts 10 Geo. 4, c. 50, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 42.
Surveys, Plans, &c., of Crown Property - -	3,969 8 8
Repairs and Improvements - - - -	20,922 18 –
Rates and Taxes - - - - - -	12,032 11 7
Fixed Charges, Pensions, Stipends, &c. - -	7,572 16 8
Other Payments - - - - - -	9,610 18 10
£.	62,186 15 7
Windsor Forest and Parks - - - -	19,706 17 6
Royal Forest and Woodlands - - - -	40,239 3 2
£.	122,132 16 3

YEAR commencing 1st April 1855, and ending 31st March 1856.

Balances outstanding on the 1st April 1854.	Gross Receipts.	TOTAL.	Payments out of Income in its Progress to the Exchequer, as per following Detail.	Payments into the Exchequer.	Balances outstanding on the 31st March 1856.
£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
45,318 9 11	421,715 1 1	467,033 11 –	134,302 19 1	281,515 15 9	51,214 16 2

Purposes for which the Sum of £. 134,302. 19. 1. was Paid out of the Income of the Year ending 31st March 1856, in its Progress to the Exchequer, with the Authority for the same.

PARTICULARS OF PAYMENT.	AMOUNT.	Authority for the Payment.
	£. s. d.
Salaries and Per-centage of Receivers and Stewards of Manors, including their expenses -	8,644 4 11	Acts 10 Geo. 4, c. 50, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 42.
Expenses attendant on the preparation and sales of Timber on Estates - - - - - -	7,962 7 2
Surveys, Plans, &c., of Crown Property - -	2,625 10 2
Repairs and Improvements - - - -	37,727 2 9
Rates and Taxes - - - - - - -	1,549 5 3
Fixed Charges, Pensions, Stipends, &c. - -	8,146 8 5
Other payments - - - - - - -	10,152 4 7
£.	76,807 3 3
Windsor Forest and Parks - - - -	18,459 8 1
Royal Forests and Woodlands - - - -	39,036 7 9
£.	134,302 19 1

Charles Gore, James Howard, } Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues.

Office of Woods, &c.
16 July 1856.

Appendix, No. 6.

Appendix, No. 6.

STATEMENT, showing the Sums received on account of EXTRA RECEIPTS (ARMY, ORDNANCE, and COMMISSARIAT), for each Year since 1848, with the Payments made on such Account to the Exchequer, or Pay Office, during the same Period.

YEAR.	ARMY.	ORDNANCE.	COMMISSARIAT.	Total Amount paid into Her Majesty's Exchequer in the same Period.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
1849 - - -	91,556 15 –	144,676 – –	15,969 – 5	252,201 15 5
1850 - - -	79,245 18 5	164,548 16 10	10,327 10 5	254,122 5 8
1851 - - -	86,740 7 1	166,005 13 3	13,282 2 4	266,028 2 8
1852 - - -	84,766 14 7	231,853 13 –	5,681 8 9	322,301 16 4
1853 - - -	89,676 18 9	179,293 8 5	10,752 19 4	279,723 6 6
1854 - - -	65,053 4 5	183,914 14 11	12,172 2 2	261,140 1 6
1855 - - -	111,234 1 2	208,948 5 11	Account not yet prepared by Commissioners of Audit.	320,182 7 1
£.	608,273 19 5	1,279,240 12 4	68,185 3 5	1,955,699 15 2

War Department, 30 May 1856.

Henry Smith.

Appendix, No. 7.

Appendix, No. 7.

RETURN showing the SUMS received for OLD NAVAL STORES, &c., for each Year since 1848, with the Payments made on such Account to the Exchequer, or to the Paymaster-General's Office, during the same Period.

YEAR IN WHICH RECEIVED.	AMOUNT RECEIVED.	REMARKS.
	£. s. d.
Year ended 31 December 1848 - -	195,650 5 6	These amounts have been paid over to the Exchequer quarterly, pursuant to the directions contained in the Treasury Minute of 2 May 1848.
,, ,, 1849 - -	175,348 19 2
,, ,, 1850 - -	151,057 5 8
,, ,, 1851 - -	118,942 3 11
,, ,, 1852 - -	146,410 14 1
,, ,, 1853 - -	*133,060 2 1
,, ,, 1854 - -	140,759 2 7
,, ,, 1855 - -	202,185 1 10
£.	1,263,413 14 10

* In addition to this amount, 50,000*l.* was transferred from the Naval Prize Balance in the hands of the Paymaster-general to the Consolidated Fund in June 1853, with the approval of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, under Act 13 & 14 Vict. c. 40, sect. 2.

Admiralty, 23 May 1856.

R. M. Bromley,
Accountant-General of the Navy.

Appendix, No. 8.

VOTES for Revenue Departments, showing the Amount of each Vote, the Date and Amount of each Issue from the Exchequer, and the Date when drawn by the Accountants from the Exchequer Account; showing also the Payment of certain consequent Amounts into the Exchequer Account under the same Heads of Revenue.

	Amount of Vote.	When Issued from Exchequer.	Amount.	When Drawn from the Exchequer Account.	Payments into the Exchequer Account immediately succeeding the Issues.
					Date.	Amount.
Year to 31 March 1855:	£.		£. s. d.			£. s. d.
Customs - - -	840,785	1854: Dec. - 4	406,649 8 2	1854: Dec. 6
		1855: Mar. - 6	202,048 9 10	1855: Mar. 8
		„ June 11	196,579 18 5	„ June 12
			805,277 16 5		1854: Dec. 7	749,529 14 6
		Balance unissued	35,507 3 7		1855: Mar. 8	432,946 14 5
		£.	840,785 – –		„ June 13	362,000 – –
Coast Guard - -	479,320	1854: Dec. - 4	214,301 9 –	1854: Dec. 6		Note. The Customs repayments include the Coast-Guard.
		1855: Mar. - 6	110,245 13 3	1855: Mar. 8
		„ June 11	106,263 9 5	„ June 12
			430,810 11 8
		Balance unissued	48,509 8 4
		£.	479,320 – –
Inland Revenue -	1,154,594	1854: Nov. 23	313,390 17 6	1854: Nov. 24	1854 Nov. 25	220,420 6 4
					„ Nov. 28	226,840 8 7
		„ Dec. 28	218,903 11 11	„ Dec. 29	„ Dec. 30	208,245 12 –
					1855: Jan. 2	288,356 12 4
		1855: Feb. 19	49,722 – 5	1855: Feb. 20	„ Feb. 20	217,330 15 7
		„ Mar. 15	272,541 3 8	„ Mar. 15	„ Mar. 17	489,811 6 1
		„ June 11	294,042 19 9	„ June 12	„ June 14	436,000 – –
			1,148,600 13 3
		Balance unissued	5,993 6 9
		£.	1,154,594 – –
Revenue Police, Ireland	52,769	1854: Nov. 23	11,895 10 9	1854: Nov. 24	No means of checking the repayments separately.
		„ Dec. 28	12,245 15 6	„ Dec. 29
		1855: Feb. 19	3,230 17 4	1855: Feb. 20
		„ Mar. 15	14,458 – –	„ Mar. 15
		„ June 11	10,938 16 5	„ June 12
		£.	52,769 – –
Post Office - -	1,525,335	1854: Nov. 30	311,906 6 10	1854: Dec. 1	1854: Dec. 2	320,000 – –
		„ Dec. 27	258,476 6 5	„ Dec. 29	„ Dec. 30	376,000 – –
		„ Dec. 27	116,383 9 5
		1855: Feb. 19	357,077 8 7	1855: Feb. 20	1855: Feb. 22	367,000 – –
		„ June 11	435,732 15 9	„ June 12	„ June 12	445,000 – –
			1,479,576 7 –
		Balance unissued	45,758 13 –
Total - - £.	4,052,803	£.	1,525,335 – –

	Amount of Vote.	When Issued from Exchequer.	Amount.	When drawn from the Exchequer Account.	Payments into the Exchequer Account immediately succeeding the Issues.
					Date.	Amount.
Year to 31 March 1856:	£.		£. s. d.			£. s. d.
Customs - - -	835,182	1855: Sept. 24	196,031 19 4	1855: Sept. 24
		„ Dec. 11	206,284 5 9	„ Dec. 11
		1856: Mar. 11	202,169 6 10	1856: Mar. 11
			604,485 11 11
		Balance unissued	230,696 8 1		1855: Sept. 25	362,000 - -
					„ Dec. 12	340,000 - -
		£.	835,182 - -		1856: Mar. 12	325,000 - -
Coast Guard - -	483,238	1855: Sept. 24	108,780 6 5	1855: Sept. 24
		„ Dec. 11	116,355 3 5	„ Dec. 11
		1856: Mar. 11	112,793 14 11	1856: Mar. 11
			337,929 4 9
		Balance unissued	145,308 15 3
		£.	483,238 - -
Inland Revenue -	1,365,950	1855: Sept. 24	321,458 10 6	1855: Sept. 24	1855: Sept. 26	377,000 - -
		„ Dec. 11	301,753 14 3	„ Dec. 12	„ Dec. 13	330,000 - -
		1856: Mar. 11	280,602 2 1	1856: Mar. 11	1856: Mar. 13	350,000 - -
			903,814 6 10
		Balance unissued	462,135 13 2
		£.	1,365,950 - -
Revenue Police, Ireland	62,720	1855: Sept. 24	16,162 10 -	1855: Sept. 24	No means of checking the repayments separately.
		„ Dec. 11	14,237 11 2	„ Dec. 12
		1856: Mar. 11	14,594 16 10	1856: Mar. 11
			44,994 18 -
		Balance unissued	17,725 2 -
		£.	62,720 - -
Post Office - -	1,638,861	1855: Sept. 24	383,242 15 -	1855: Sept. 25	1855: Sept. 25	330,000 - -
		„ Dec. 11	353,727 12 3	„ Dec. 12	„ Dec. 13	365,000 - -
		1856: Mar. 11	432,752 17 10	1856: Mar. 12	1856: Mar. 13	432,752 17 10
			1,169,723 5 1
		Balance unissued	469,137 14 11
Total - - £.	4,385,951	£.	1,638,861 - -

Appendix, No. 9.

LIST of CASES of CONTROL exercised at the EXCHEQUER, with References to the original Correspondence.

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 1., p. 42	1834 : 5 Nov.	Comptroller-General to Chancellor of Exchequer.	- - Calls attention to Credits being directed for Navy and other Departments, before they are required, considerable Balances remaining unapplied. (Copy of Letter appended, No. 1, p. 648.)
– p. 138	1835 : 11 Feb.	Assistant Comptroller to Chancellor of Exchequer.	- - Again calls attention to same subject, and to the saving that might have been effected on Interest of Deficiency Bills. (14 Feb. Chancellor of Exchequer will give the important subject immediate attention.) (Copies appended, No. 2, p. 649.)
Vol.. 2, p. 38	1839 : 28 Dec.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Warrant for Maintenance and Repair of Marshalsea in Dublin, not in strict conformity with Act, which contemplates only Building and Repairs. (Treasury Reply, that Warrants will be more correctly worded in future.)
– p. 46	1840 : 3 Jan.	Ditto to Chancellor of Exchequer.	- - Difference between maximum Charge and actual Payment for Diplomatic Services. Striking off Balance suggested. (Copy appended, No. 3, p. 650.)
– p. 53	„ 27 Jan.	Ditto to Treasury - -	- - On the Revenue Departments (Ireland), suggesting improved method of vouching correctness of their Accounts for Acquittances. (Suggestions approved by Treasury.)
– p. 71	„ 26 May	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Warrant of Transfer for Queen's Inn Society, founded on expired Act. Cannot act.
– p. 74	„ 17 June	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Informality in Royal Order and Treasury Warrant for 39,900 l. Secret Service Money. (Amended Royal Order and Warrant transmitted from Treasury.)
– p. 87	„ 3 July	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Inadequate Balance in the Exchequer in Ireland to meet quarterly Charge. (Deficiency provided for by Treasury, 3 July, Comptroller-General's Minute.) (Copy appended, No. 4, p. 650.)
– p. 90	„ 13 July	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Issue of certain Officers in Ireland, attending during Session of Parliament. Doubts if warranted in sanctioning continuance of this Charge. (Copy appended, No. 5, p. 651.)
Minute Book.
P. 27	„ 29 Dec.	Comptroller-General's Minute.	- - On legal construction of Act for Annuity to Bank of Ireland. (Copy appended, No. 6, p. 651.)
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 2, p. 146	1841 : 15 Oct.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Legality of Issues from Ways and Means granted in Second Session for Services granted in First Session; Opinion of Law Officers taken, involving also irregularity in Royal Orders and Treasury Warrant, dated before Ways and Means Acts, and consequent correction. (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 7. p. 652.)
„ p. 237	„ 11 Nov.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Treasury Warrant and Letter for Transfer to Commissioners of Public Works (Ireland), for 4,964 l. 9 s. 6 d. exceeding amount granted by Act. Both instruments illegal, and cannot be carried into effect. (Withdrawn and cancelled, fresh Instruments substituted.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 8, p. 665.)

(continued)

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 2., p. 240	1841	10 Nov.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Returning informal Warrants for corrections; drawn on wrong form, and with unattested erasures.
– p. 250	„	13 Nov.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Issuing letter; 5,000 l. to Paymaster of Exchequer Bills incorrect, Royal Order not being quoted; to prevent delay has forwarded Credit without waiting for corrected instrument.
– p. 283	„	24 Nov.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - On Warrant for remittance of 50,000 l. from Exchequer Fund at Bank of England to that at Bank of Ireland; care necessary to be taken that this sum does not appear as double receipt; subsequent correspondence with Audit Office on the subject, referring to non-audit of Exchequer Accounts.
– p. 286	„	25 Nov.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Discrepancy between Royal Order for Credit to Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland, and issuing letter for Transfer; points out reasons for authorising Transfers in Ireland in place of giving Credits.
– p. 320	„	27 Nov.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Royal Order, 500 l., for Museum of Economic Geology, granted to Commissioners of Woods, &c., and Treasury Warrant to Mr. Sargent; authorities conflicting, and cannot be complied with. (Warrant withdrawn and corrected.)
– p. 344	„	9 Dec.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - 5,000 l. Exchequer Bills for Public Works, Ireland, issued by way of Loan, but not so applied; Bills since paid off and amount repaid to Consolidated Fund; will create error in accounts of Advances and Repayments.
– p. 353	„	21 Dec.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Attention drawn to sum of 25,050, stated by Paymasters of Exchequer Bills as Exchequer Bills outstanding, but which really appears as an amount agreed upon about the year 1820, to reconcile accounts with Treasury books and Parliamentary Papers; also to 5,700 l.; particulars not known. (Explanation by Paymasters; reference to Audit Office, and final exclusion from accounts.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 9, p. 665.)
Vol. 3., p. 22	1842	11 Jan.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Discrepancy in issuing letter for 8,000 l. to Commissioners of Woods, for New Buildings, British Museum; Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, directing Credits to Paymaster of Civil Services; directions conflicting, and cannot be complied with. (Treasury Letter returned, and new Letter forwarded:)
– p. 50	„	28 Jan.	Assistant Comptroller to Treasury.	- - Transfer suspended to Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland, 30 l. 4 s., for Royal Exchange, Dublin, the Acts being misquoted. (Subsequent explanation from Commissioners of Customs.)
– p. 52	„	28 Jan.	Comptroller-General to Secretary of Chancellor of Exchequer.	- - Comptroller-General's amendments on draft of proposed Bill for removing restrictions on Appropriation Acts of two Sessions of 1841.
– p. 73	„	7 Feb.	Ditto to Chancellor of Exchequer.	- - Returns copy of the Bill submitted to him, with an amendment.
– p. 57	„	29 Jan.	To Comptroller-General from Treasury, with Minute.	- - Referring to Comptroller-General's objection, that Principal and Interest of Exchequer Bills for improvement of River Shannon, could not legally be paid by Paymaster of Civil Services; and directing payments to be made by Exchequer in the usual manner.
– p. 123	„	15 Feb.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Referring to Report of Commissioners for inquiring into Exchequer Bills, states case for opinion of Law Officers as to Assistant Comptroller's functions ceasing under section 26 of the Exchequer Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, during attendance of Comptroller-General. (Pa. 169, 28 February 1842. Law Officers' opinion, that Assistant Comptroller may sign Exchequer Bills when Comptroller-General is in attendance.)

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 3, p. 192	1842: 23 Mar.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - As to Treasury Letter, directing issue of 875 l. for expenses of Master of the Horse, for Quarter to 30 January 1841, out of 3d Class of Civil List, for Quarter to 31 March 1841, submits that by the Act 1 Vict. c. 2, s. 9, such an issue is illegal. (Corrected; issuing Letter afterwards acted on). (Copy of Letter appended, No. 10, p. 674.)
– p. 232	„ 21 April	Comptroller-General to Mr. Trevelyan.	- - Draft Royal Order and Treasury Warrant for 60,000 l., Civil Contingencies, England and Ireland, irregular; legal distinction between Credit and Transfer; refers to former Correspondence.
– p. 250	„ 2 May	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Returns Draft Warrant for 90,000 l. to Commissioners of Public Works, for Quarter to 5 April 1842, charging Amount on Consolidated Fund, and directing issue out of growing Produce, Quarter to 5 July; Warrant wrong; no authority in Act to charge on growing Produce; difficulty of making charge in middle of the Quarter (afterwards charged on Consolidated Fund, Quarter to 5 July). (Copy of Letter appended, No. 11, p. 674.)
– p. 326	„ 6 July	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Has issued transfer for Annuities and Pension, minus 922 l. 12 s. 11 d., amount of Lord Manners' Pension; dead some time back; subsequent correspondence as to Comptroller's functions in suspending issues for lapsed Pensions. Treasury Letter, 11 July; Comptroller-general's Answer, 12 July; and Treasury Letter, 3 August. (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 12, p. 674.)
Vol. 4, p. 36	1843: 7 Jan.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Attention drawn to a charge in Schedule of Salaries, Courts of Justice, Ireland, obviously inserted after date and signature of Paymaster of Civil Services, and not authenticated by him or any other person. (19 January 1843, Treasury approve Comptroller's course, and will in future authenticate any addition by signature of Secretary). (Copies appended, No. 13, p. 677.)
Minute Book.
P. 121	„ 18 April	Comptroller-General's Minute.	- - Correcting anomaly in making payments into Exchequer Account, on account of Conscience Money, through the Chief Clerk to the Comptroller-general.
P. 132	„ 18 Aug.	Ditto - - - -	- - When Committee of Supply has closed, List of Votes to be compared with Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants already received.
P. 132	„ 22 Aug.	Ditto - - - -	- - Comptroller-General has compared every Royal Order and Treasury Warrant of this Session with the Resolutions of Supply, and marked them with his initials in red ink. This course to be always pursued.
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 5, p. 47	1844: 8 April	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Enclosing case for Law Officers; legality of consolidating in one Royal Order the several Votes for Army, &c. (Copies appended, and Treasury Letter, and Opinion of Law Officers, 24 June 1844, No. 14, p. 678.)
– p. 67	„ 29 April	Ditto to ditto - -	- - On recommendation from Audit Commissioners, that Comptroller-General should grant acquittance to Paymaster of Civil Services, for repayments of Loans for Public Works, to Exchequer Account, by Bank of Ireland; Comptroller-General objects to grant acquittance to any other persons than those by whom the payments are made. (Further Correspondence from Treasury, 4 March 1845, and Comptroller-General's Reply of 5 March).
– p. 97	„ 1 Aug.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Returns Treasury Warrant, for transfer to Paymaster-General, for Expenses of Convicts, Ireland; contrary to precedent, and anomalous.
– p. 115	„ 15 Aug.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Comptroller-General reports on suggested alterations in Specifications, and mode of payment into Exchequer by Revenue Departments; illegal under Exchequer Act. (20 September 1844, Treasury Minute adopts Comptroller-general's view.)

(continued)

Minute Book.
P. 168.	1845: 24 Mar.	Comptroller-General's Minute.	- - Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants. when received at the Exchequer, to be forthwith examined and compared with the authorities on which they are founded. (Copy of Minute appended, No. 15, p. 681.)
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 5, p. 207	„ 11 Aug.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Discrepancy in amount of Royal Order and Treasury Warrant (7,565 l.), and Vote (22,565 l.) for New Zealand. (13 August 1849. Treasury requests return of erroneous instruments, and Comptroller-general returns them the same day.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 16, p. 682.)
– p. 272	1846: 31 July	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Four separate Votes for Law Charges consolidated in one Royal Order; this alteration inconsistent with Exchequer control. Suggests adherence in future to established practice, separate Votes in Appropriation Act, and Issues kept distinct in Exchequer Books. (5 August. Treasury concur.) (Copy of Comptroller-General's Letter appended, No. 17, p. 682.)
– p. 276	„ 3 Aug.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Calls attention to an Act passed, authorizing advances of Exchequer Bills for Public Works, when no Exchequer Bills for this purpose are authorized to be issued.
– p. 278	„ 8 Aug.	Comptroller-General to Master of the Mint.	- - Suggests keeping distinct Accounts at the Bank of England according to Votes of Parliament, that the Bank Returns of Payments may enable the Comptroller-general effectually to make his Annual Account to Parliament. (12 August. Suggestion adopted.)
– p. 286	„ 24 Aug.	Comptroller-General to Bank of England.	- - Refers to the Bank Quarterly Statement of Balances, showing one general Balance of Paymaster-general: Under Exchequer Act, Comptroller-general is required to state Balances, under each head of Account, in his Parliamentary Account; requests, therefore, Balances to be separately stated in Bank Return. (28 August. Bank reply; will conform in future to suggestions.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 18, p. 683.)
– p. 289	„ 3 Oct.	Assistant Comptroller to Treasury.	- - Calls attention to issue of 50,000 l. out of the Consolidated Fund in Ireland, under the Relief Act of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 107; and to objectionable provisions of the Act, authorizing Issues to an unlimited amount, and making no provision for the repayment of Advances. (15 October. Treasury concur in objections; omission of providing for repayments will be supplied in future legislation.)
Vol. 6, p. 50	1847: 25 Sept.	To Public Works Office, Dublin.	- - Act not quoted in payment into Exchequer Account at Bank of Ireland; this essentially requisite in all cases.
– p. 72	„ 29 Nov.	To Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland.	- - Questions accuracy of payment into Exchequer Account at Bank of Ireland of 45,000 l. for "Temporary Relief of Destitute Persons;" Treasury directing this payment on account of "Grants for Distress in Ireland."
– p. 139	1848: 24 July	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Calls attention to neglect of payment from Treasurer of Surrey, towards Expenses of Official Referees, as directed, half-yearly: no payment since 8 October 1846. (Similar Letter, 17 February 1849. No Arrears paid up, 16 May 1849.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 19, p. 683.)
– p. 139	„ 24 July	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Certain issuing Letters, dated 22 July, irregular in not reciting Title of Ways and Means Act, which had not, in fact, received the Royal Assent when the Letters were written; but a Royal Assent was given the same day; and the law admits of no fraction of a day; the Comptroller-general has acted on the Letters, but returns them to the Treasury for completion, in conformity with usage.

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 6, p. 175	1849: 16 Jan.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	-- Draft Letter, with Observations on the Treasury Minute regulating the Office of the Paymaster-general, 22 December 1848. (Appended to the "Exchequer Memorandum," Minute amended at Comptroller-General's suggestion.)
-- p. 201	„ 6 Mar.	Ditto to ditto - -	-- Comptroller-General declines to sign Acquittance for Interest on Loans to British Guiana, &c. till furnished with Treasury Certificate under the Act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 22. (Similar Letter from Comptroller-General on 27 April 1850.)
- p. 235	„ 14 July	Ditto to ditto - -	-- Of 100,933 l. 7 s. 10 d. directed to be issued to National Debt Commissioners on account of the Public Works Loan Fund, being the amount of repayments under various Acts, the sum of 53,282 l. 11 s. 5 d. only is re-issuable under the Acts quoted, and Comptroller-General objects to issue more. (6 August 4849, Treasury send explanation of Paymaster of Civil Services, dated 27 July, and 7 August, Comptroller-General reports he has no further difficulty in issuing full amount.)
- p. 254	„ 28 Aug.	Ditto to ditto - -	-- Irregularity of Issues upon Loans for Workhouses, Ireland, directed under Treasury Warrant, dated 19 June 1849, for purposes of an Act passed 1 August, suggests new Warrant, and declaration that former Warrant will not be acted on. (Treasury reply, 22 December 1849, will continue to draw on old Warrant for old services, and will issue new Warrant for Loans under new Act.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 20, p 684.)
- p. 269	1850: 7 Jan.	Comptroller-General to Paymaster of Civil Services.	-- Names of two deceased persons inserted in Irish Schedules; presumes payment will be made to day of death only.
- p 277	„ 16 Jan.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	-- Out of 89,149 l. 8 s. 5 d. declared to be repayments of Advances for Public Works, Ireland, Comptroller-General objects to issue more than 78,737 l. 10 s. 3 d. legally re-issuable under the Acts quoted, without further information. (Treasury reply, 2 May 1850, enclosing explanation from Paymaster of Civil Services, dated 22 April.)
- p. 319	„ 18 May	Ditto to ditto - -	-- Royal Order for 2,000,000 l. for Army, founded on Votes of 12 and 18 March, together for 2,902,000 l., not strictly correct, as Exchequer Act requires that Royal Orders should quote particular Act or Vote; Comptroller-General has acted on it, but submits propriety of stricter definition in future. (Treasury reply, pa. 322, 28 May, that they think the Royal Order in strict conformity with practice and opinion of Law Officers in 1844; if Comptroller-General differs, will submit new case.)
p. 326	„ 13 June	Comptroller-General to Paymaster-general.	-- Irregularity in Receipt for Exchequer Bills issued to Paymaster-general; Comptroller-General objects to any Receipt not bearing Paymaster-general's signature.
p. 335	„ 21 June	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	-- Irregularity in payment of Lord Campbell's Salary, charged, but not issued from the Exchequer, no Patent having been produced; rests with Treasury and not Exchequer; correction difficult, as the Comptroller-General does not see how issue can be made for service which, he has been informed, has already been paid. (Copy of Letter appended, No. 21, p. 684.)
p. 350	„ 18 Sept.	Assistant Comptroller to Secretary of Treasury.	-- In reply to Treasury Letter, declines to alter Exchequer Books, which are legal records, as desired by Treasury, to correct errors made by Paymaster of Civil Services, in repayments made into the Exchequer, the accounts having been reported to the Treasury and Audit Office by the Exchequer. -- (continued)

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 6, p. 363	1850: 21 Oct.	Assistant Comptroller to Treasury.	- - Refers to payment into Exchequer Account by Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland, of Balance of Credit to Commissioners of Public Records; presumes under Treasury Authority; requests notice in future from Treasury as to these payments, not immediately sanctioned by Parliament, as at Bank of England. (Copy of Letter appended, No. 22, p. 685.)
– p. 374	„ 18 Dec.	Comptroller-General to Sir A. Y. Spearman.	- - Arranging the Form of Warrant, and Issue for Civil List Savings. (Copy of Letter appended, No. 23, p. 685.)
Vol. 7, p. 2	1851: 2 Jan.	Ditto to Treasury - -	- - Erroneous payment into Exchequer Account of 200 l. by Bank of Ireland, remitted by Bank of England; affecting Comptroller-General's Audit Account, Parliamentary Account, and the Balance of Income and Expenditure. (16 January. Treasury reply, with adjustment of this error.)
Minute Book.
	„ 14 Jan.	Comptroller-General's Minute.	- - Erroneous payment into Exchequer Account by Paymaster-general of 681 l. 13 s. 6 d. on account of Sycee Silver (China Money), instead of Balance of Grant for Relief of Distress in Ireland. (7 March. Treasury Letter correcting this error, and transmitting Finance Accounts for correction.) (Copies appended, No. 24, p. 686.)
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 7, p. 30	„ 6 Feb.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Adjustment of error in the Public Accounts of Repayments by the Treasurer of Cashel and Shillelagh Unions. (30 January 1851. Comptroller-General Minute.) (Copy appended, No. 25, p. 687.)
– p. 34	„ 21 Feb.	Comptroller-General's Chief Clerk to Bank Cashier.	- - Error in Bank Return of Daily Payments, Account for Navy Services overdrawn by 20,000 l. (24 February. Cashier's reply; amended Return forwarded, error in substituting Navy instead of Ordnance, arising from deficient check. New check arranged, and error cannot occur again.)
– p. 52	„ 8 Apr.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Suspending from Transfer for Salaries, Irish Courts of Justice, 115 l. 7 s. 9 d., salary of P. K. Mahoney, late Accountant-general of Exchequer, lately deceased, no new Appointment having been recorded at Exchequer. Comptroller-General doubts if Office be not abolished under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 51, s. 12. (13 June 1851. Treasury reply, enclosing Report from Paymaster of Civil Services.) (11 August. Comptroller-General in continuation, as to irregular system of Charges on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland, and suggesting mode of correction as to lapsed Charges. (17 September. Treasury reply, with Minute of 12 September, to carry out Comptroller-General's Suggestions.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 26, p. 687.)
– p. 54	„ 11 Apr.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Legality of Issue to Paymaster of Civil Services for Constabulary Expenses, Ireland, and not to Receiver-general of Constabulary as directed by Act. (16 April. Sir C. E. Trevelyan's reply. Treasury embarrassed by Comptroller-General's doubt of legality; Mr. Leake will explain.) (2 May. Treasury Letter; issue to Paymaster-general for the use of Receiver-general.) (Copies appended, No. 27, p. 689.)
– p. 65	„ 6 May	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Transfer of account at Bank of England, of Commissioners of Woods to Paymaster-general; Comptroller-General must issue Credits to Commissioners of Woods, till informed officially by the Treasury of the Change. (31 March. Treasury Letter enclosing Minute of 25 March, authorizing transfer of Account to Paymaster-general.—N. B. Not received at Exchequer till 12 May.)

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 7, p. 92	1851: 11 Aug.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Calls attention to Unissued Balances of Charges on Consolidated Fund, and expediency of declaring them Savings. Refers to his previous Letter of 3d March 1848. Appends List. (23 August. Treasury declare part Savings, and ask information as to remainder. 6 October. Comptroller explains as to 25,000 l., Quarter's Annuity to Queen Dowager. 6 December. Treasury declare all Savings.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 28, p. 690.)
– p. 121.	„ 18 Oct.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Suspending Issue for Salaries of Assistant Barristers, Ireland. (5 November. Treasury Letter and Minute. 19 November. Further ditto, with opinions of the Attorney-general, Ireland, and Mr. Coppinger. 25 November. Comptroller-General's Reply. Treasury Directions irregular and unprecedented, and cannot properly be carried into effect. Suggests, meanwhile, advances out of Civil Contingencies. 31 December. Treasury reply and Minute. Comptroller's suggestions carried out.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 29, p. 693.)
– p. 173	1852: 7 April	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Certain Salaries (Justice Crampton, &c.) charged, according to Treasury directions of 5th April, on Consolidated Fund. Requests Warrants, granting those Salaries, to be recorded at the Exchequer, to authorize Issues. (Patents recorded at Exchequer 12 April.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 30, p. 697.)
– p. 174	„ 12 April	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Transfers suspended of certain Salaries, Courts of Justice, Ireland, till authorities recorded at Exchequer. (10 April. To Paymaster of Civil Services on same subject. N. B.—Authorities forwarded by Treasury, on 26th April.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 31, p. 697.)
– p. 193	„ 22 June	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Irregular Issue of Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants (Kaffir War, &c.), no Ways and Means remaining unappropriated. (26 June. Treasury reply as to correction. 13 July. Comptroller-General acknowledges correcting Royal Order, &c. 13 July. Comptroller-General's Minute.) (Copies appended, No. 32, p. 699.)
– p. 216	1852: 21 Dec.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Refers to Treasury Directions to carry to head of "Imprest Monies Repaid," &c. Payment into Exchequer by Paymaster-general, on account of Exchequer Fees. Comptroller-General submits it should be carried to head of "Surplus Fees." (7 January 1853. Treasury concur.)
– p. 233	1853: 11 Feb.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Overcharge of 137 l. 18 s. 8 d. in Consolidated Fund Warrant for Lord Chancellor's Salary. (9 March. Treasury reply; Overcharge will not be issued.) (Copy of Comptroller-General's Letter appended, No. 33 p. 704.)
– p. 240	„ 11 Mar.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Comptroller-General not authorized by Law to issue 10,000 l. on account of the Funeral of the Duke of Wellington. Supplemental Votes of 1852–53. Difficulty as to Ways and Means. (14 March. Treasury reply.) 15 March. Comptroller-General in continuation. 24 March. Treasury reply, as to undoubted intention of Parliament; undertake to include these Votes in next Appropriation Act. 24 March. Comptroller-General consequently justified in issuing these Votes after 31st March: meanwhile will issue 141,000 l. for Land at Kensington Gore, under the peculiar and exceptional exigency. 5 April. Treasury vindicate their course as according to precedent. 14 April. Comptroller-General has issued these Votes on Treasury undertaking to insert Clause in Appropriation Act. (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 34, p. 704.)

(continued)

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 7, p. 323	1853: 8 June	Comptroller-General to Secretary of Treasury.	- - Returns proposed Scrip of Exchequer Bonds, with corrections and observations. (23 June. Treasury reply. Opinion of Law Officers will be taken as to period of Interest on Bonds. 8 July. Treasury send Law Officers' opinion. 9 July. Comptroller will give effect to preceding Letter, but would feel precluded from authorizing Charge or making Issues beyond period stated in Act.) (Copies of Letters appended, No. 35, p. 708.)
Vol. 8, p. 10	„ 30 July	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Irregular payment into Exchequer of Interest on guaranteed Loan for St. Lucia, without presentation and counter-signature of Specification. Acquittance signed, and Treasury authority requested. (13 September. Treasury approve; similar irregularities will in future be prevented.)
– p. 17	„ 26 Aug.	Ditto to Commissioners of Works.	- - Payments into Exchequer through Paymaster-general, must be distinctly stated to be on account of the Office of Works.
– p. 25	„ 3 Sept.	Ditto to Treasury - -	- - Payments for Ionian Government through Paymaster-general into Exchequer, not made according to Treasury direction. (12 September. Treasury reply, their directions erroneously made.) (Copies appended, No. 36, p. 711.)
– p. 99	„ 13 Dec.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - On issue of Exchequer Bills for Supply Services not passing through Exchequer Account at Bank of England; amount of premium or discount, affecting Appropriation Act and Exchequer Control, not included in Bank Return of Daily Payments. 11 January 1854. Treasury reply. 13 „ „ Comptroller-general in continuation, and further Correspondence.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 37, p. 712.)
– p. 120	1854: 11 Jan.	Ditto to Chancellor of Exchequer.	- - Mode of Public Expenditure; attention drawn to. (16 February. Comptroller sends Exchequer Memorandum to Chancellor of Exchequer. 24 March 1855, Comptroller sends Memorandum officially to Treasury.)
– p. 162	„ 21 Mar.	From Chancellor of Exchequer to Comptroller-General.	- - Legality of Issues of 1,750,000 l. Supply Exchequer Bills, before commencement of year, on what ground doubted. (22 March 1854. Comptroller-General explains the principle, and that it has always been acted on. Does not understand how the money can have been sent abroad.) 4 April. Memorandum of Comptroller-General; Bills now ready for issue.) (Copies appended, No. 38, p. 722.)
– p. 183	„ 8 April	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Return from Bank of England of Deficiency Bills for whole amount of Dividends, and new issues for amount required from day to day; special authority requested from Treasury.
– p. 227	„ 14 June	Ditto to Sir C. E. Trevelyan.	- - With Comptroller-General's amendments on Public Revenue Bill. (21 June. From Sir C. E. Trevelyan; amendments adopted.)
– p. 233	„ 19 „	Ditto to Treasury - -	- - Credit for Stationery Office, &c., directed to Paymaster-general, instead of Comptroller of Stationery, or under Treasury Minute of 26 September 1834. (20 June. Treasury reply, directed, intentionally to replace advances from Civil Contingencies.)
– p. 267	„ 1 Aug.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Comptroller calls attention to discontinuance of Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant, and its necessity for Exchequer control. Long Correspondence on the subject. (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 39, p. 723.)

Correspondence Books.
Vol. 8, p. 313	1854: 25 Sept.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - New Charges in Scotland transferred to Consolidated Fund; mode of proceeding to be adopted.
– p. 321	„ 9 Oct.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Credit for salary of Mr. Romilly, as Chairman of Audit Board, withheld till Patent produced; further involving Exchequer Control in examining and recording Patents, &c. Further and lengthened Correspondence. (13 October 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General. 31 October „ Comptroller-General to Treasury. 1 January 1855 - - ditto - - to ditto. 9 January „ - - ditto - - to ditto. 6 March „ Treasury to Comptroller with Minute. 22 March „ Comptroller-General to Treasury. 23 March „ - - ditto - - to ditto. 13 June „ Mr. Romilly to Comptroller-General. 14 June „ Treasury to Comptroller-General. 20 June „ Comptroller-General to Treasury. 25 June „ Treasury to Comptroller-General.) (Copies of Correspondence appended, No. 40, p. 741.)
– p. 324	„ 11 Oct.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Salary of Assistant Taxing Master, Ireland, doubly charged. (14 October. Treasury reply, they are aware of it, but there will be no double issue.)
– p. 368	„ 4 Nov.	Comptroller-General to Sir C. E. Trevelyan.	- - On new system of marking, on Treasury issuing Letters the precise hour at which Exchequer Credits are to be lodged at Bank. Care should be taken to allow sufficient time. For example, on 31 October directions were received at 12.55, to grant Credit for 40,000 l.; at 2 P. M. on the same day at the Bank.
– p. 371	„ 9 Nov.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Requesting authority to discharge from Exchequer books, 5,500 l. Exchequer Bills overdue and outstanding prior to 1830, declared in Estimate as not necessary to be provided for, and which have been discharged from Paymaster-general's books. (18 November. Treasury question the propriety of discharging them from Exchequer books.)
Vol. 9, p. 8	„ 27 Dec.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Transfer suspended for salary of P. Shaw, Sheriff of Chancery in Scotland, till information necessary to authorize it, is produced. (13 February 1855. Treasury reply, and explain that an amount previously issued ought to have been returned.) (Copies appended, No. 41, p. 756.)
– p. 76	1855: 6 Mar.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Specifications of receipts from Revenue departments, desired to be discontinued by Treasury, shown by Comptroller to be required under Exchequer Act, and cannot be dispensed with except by authority of Parliament.
– p. 80	„ 6 Mar.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Royal Orders returned to Treasury as invalid and irregular, being dated previously to Ways and Means Act receiving Royal Assent; their subsequent illegal correction. (See Précis of Correspondence appended, No. 42, p. 757.)
– p. 313	„ 11 Mar.	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Issue for Crimean Medals, voted 1856-7, withheld till commencement of financial year.
– p. 333	„ 3 May	Ditto to ditto - -	- - Amount of Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, 21,182,700 l. to pay off Supply Exchequer Bills limited under provisions of Funding Act. (5 May. Treasury reply, quite aware of limitation, and issuing letters will be regulated accordingly). In reply to Letter of 29 April. (See Comptroller-General's evidence, No. 489.)
– p. 336	1856: 5 May	Comptroller-General to Chamberlain of London.	- - Discrepancy in period of payments on account of rebuilding London Bridge. Under what authority paid through Paymaster-general, and not in conformity with Bonds? (10 May. Chamberlain explains. 7 June. From Chamberlain; renewed application for Exchequer acquittance. (Copies appended, No. 43, p. 757.)

DRAFTS of WARRANTS, MINUTES and other INSTRUMENTS, submitted by Treasury for Comptroller-General's consideration.

Minute Book.
P. 19	1840: 3 July	Comptroller-General's Minute.	- - Consideration of two Draft Treasury Warrants to provide for inadequate Balance in the Exchequer in Ireland to meet Quarterly charges. (Copy of Minute appended to Cases of Control. No. 4.)
P. 30	1841: 9 Jan.	Ditto - - - -	- - Draft Treasury Warrant for Compensation to Mr. North, amended. (Amendment adopted.)
P. 31	,, 14 Jan.	Ditto - - - -	- - Draft Treasury Warrant for payment to Bank of England, for pains and labour on West India Compensation Loan, amended. (Amendment adopted.)
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 3, p. 52	1842: 26 Jan.	From Mr. Goulburn's Secretary.	- - Draft of proposed Bill for removing restrictions on Appropriation Acts of two last Sessions. (Pp. 52, 53. Comptroller's Amendments adopted in 5 Vict. Sess. 2, c. 1.)
– p. 72	,, 6 Feb.	From ditto - - -	With printed Bill for re-appropriating Supplies of 1841. (P. 73. Comptroller's Amendment also adopted.)
– p. 116	,, 14 Feb.	From Treasury - -	- - With Report of Exchequer Commissioners, and proposed Regulations for preparing Exchequer Bills. (P. 336. Comptroller's observation on proposed Regulations, all adopted.)
– p. 232	,, 21 Apr.	From ditto - - -	- - With Draft, Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, for 60,000 l. Civil Contingencies, England and Ireland. (P. 232. Comptroller's Observations. Instrument irregular.)
– p. 249	,, 28 Apr.	From ditto - - -	- - With Draft of Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, for 90,000 l., to be charged and issued out of Consolidated Fund for Advances for Public Works. (P. 250. Comptroller's objections; attended to.)
– p. 256	,, 9 May	From ditto - - -	- - With Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, for issue of Exchequer Bills. (Form approved of.)
Vol. 4, p. 164	1843: 24 May	From ditto - - -	- - With Draft of proposed Minute as to uncancelled Irish Public Works Bills. (Pp. 164, 165. Comptroller-general's Amendments.)
Vol. 5, p. 2	1844: 3 Feb.	From ditto - - -	With Draft of Exchequer Bill Warrants. (P. 2. Comptroller-general's approval, with Amendments.)
Vol. 6, p. 174	1849: 17 Jan.	From Comptroller-General to Chancellor of Exchequer. (Private.)	- - With Draft of reply to Treasury Minute, 22d December 1848. (P. 190. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in reply.)
– p. 373	1850: 12 Dec.	From Comptroller-General Sir A. Y. Spearman.	With observations on Civil List Warrants and Savings. (Adopted.)
– p. 374	,, 18 Dec.	Ditto - - - -	- - With Form of Warrant for Civil List Issues and Savings. (Adopted. Copy of Letter appended to Cases of Control, No. 21.)
Vol. 7, p. 57	1851: 28 Apr.	From Treasury - -	- - With Draft Warrant Civil List Savings and Minute, forwarded for approval of Comptroller-general. (Pp. 58, 59. Comptroller-general's reply and Amendments adopted.)

Correspondence Book.
Vol. 7, p. 296 297 298	1853: 30 April	Mr. Masterman - - Mr. Anderson's - -	- - With suggestions for altering the present system of exchanging Exchequer Bills; and, Observations. (P. 298, 301, 299, 302, 300, 303. Comptroller-general's Observations on the preceding.) (P. 304. Chancellor of the Exchequer acknowledges Comptroller-general's papers on the above.)
– p. 322 323	„ 7 June	From Mr. Wilson - -	- - With form of Scrip of Exchequer Bonds for Comptroller-general's opinion. (P. 323. Comptroller-general in reply, partly adopted.) Pages 329 and 328 on same subjects. Copies of Letters (appended to Cases of Control, No. 32.)
– p. 349	„ 19 July	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	- - Returning Draft Warrant for preparing Exchequer Bonds, with Observations.
Vol. 8, p. 2	„ 22 „	From Treasury - -	- - With Warrant and form of Scrip of Exchequer Bonds.
– p. 16	„ 23 Aug.	- Ditto - - -	- - Enclosing Letter from Office of Works; payments into Exchequer to be made through Paymaster-general. (P. 17. Comptroller-general in reply; suggestions adopted.)
– p. 217	1854: 6 June	- Ditto - - -	- - With Form of Bond A. and two Draft Warrants, requesting suggestions of Comptroller-general. (P. 216. Comptroller-general in reply; suggestions acceded to.)
– p. 230	„ 13 June	- - Ditto - - -	- - With proposed Amendment in Public Revenue Bill. (P. 227. Comptroller-general in reply, with suggestions.) P. 236. From Treasury, adopting Comptroller-general's suggestions.
Vol. 9, p. 16	„ 24 Dec.	From Sir A. Y. Spearman	- - Requesting observations on Savings Banks Investments Bills. (P. 10–12. Comptroller-general in reply, with Observations.)
– p. 42	1855 7 Feb.	From Mr. Wilson - -	- - With proposed Resolution in Ways and Means Committee on Supplemental Supply Votes. (P. 43. Comptroller-general in reply, with Suggestions.)
– p. 239	„ 10 Aug.	- Ditto - - -	- - With Draft Warrant (abbreviated) for Supply, Exchequer Bills. (P. 240. Comptroller-general in reply, with Observations and Draft Warrant, adopted as amended.)

INDEX of Copies of Correspondence appended to Cases of Control exercised at the Exchequer.

Correspondence Book.			No.	Page.
Vol. 1, p. 42	1834: 5 Nov.	Comptroller-General to Chancellor of Exchequer.	(1.) Excessive Naval Credits	648
– p. 138	1835: 11 Feb.	Assistant Comptroller, ditto	(2.) Ditto, and effect of Deficiency Bills	649
			14 February. Chancellor of Exchequer in reply	649
Vol. 2, p. 46	1840: 3 Jan.	Comptroller-General to Chancellor of Exchequer.	(3.) Excessive charge for Diplomatic Services	650
Minute Book. P. 19	„ 3 July	Comptroller-General's Minute.	(4.) Inadequate Balance in Ireland to meet quarterly charge	650
Correspondence Book. Vol. 2, p. 90	„ 13 July	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(5.) Charge for Irish Officers attending Parliament	651
Minute Book. P. 27	„ 29 Dec.	Comptroller-General's Minute.	(6.) Legal construction of Act for Annuity to Bank of Ireland	651
Correspondence Book. Vol. 2, p. 146	1841: 15 Oct.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(7.) Indiscriminate Issues of Ways and Means, granted in the two Sessions of 1841, and Irregularity of Royal Orders for Second Session, dated previously to Ways and Means Acts	652
			15 October. Treasury Issuing Letter	652
			15 October. Comptroller-General to Treasury	652
			22 October. Comptroller-General to Chancellor of Exchequer	652
			Case for Opinion of Law Officers	653
			27 October. Treasury to Comptroller General, with following Minute	654
			27 October. Treasury Minute, stating their Views in opposition to Comptroller	654
			4 November. Comptroller-General to Treasury, in Reply	656
			4 November. Paymasters of Exchequer Bills to Comptroller-General	659
			4 November. Comptroller-General to Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, in Reply	659
			10 November. Treasury to Comptroller-General, with following Minute	659
			5 November. Treasury Minute	659
			17 November. Treasury to Comptroller, with Opinion of Law Officers	660
			15 November. Opinion of Sir F. Pollock and Sir W. Follett	660
			17 November. Comptroller-General to Treasury	660
			19 November. Treasury to Comptroller-General	661
			19 November. Comptroller-General to Treasury	661
			Consequent Irregularity in Royal Orders for Second Session, dated previously to Ways and Means Acts	661
			22 November. Comptroller-General to Treasury	661
			18 December. Comptroller-General to Chancellor of Exchequer	662
			28 December. Comptroller-General to Treasury	662
			28 December. Comptroller-General's Minute	662
			27 December. Copy of Correcting Royal Order	663

Correspondence Book.			No.	Page.
Vol. 2, p. 237	1841: 11 Nov.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(8.) Excessive Issue for Public Works, Ireland	665
			13 November. Treasury reply - -	665
			15 November. Extract of Comptroller's Answer - - - - -	665
– p. 353	„ 21 Dec.	- „ - - „ -	(9.) £. 25,050, over-due outstanding Exchequer Bills, &c. - - - - - - -	665
			27 December. Comptroller to Paymasters of Exchequer Bills - -	666
			29 December. Paymaster's reply -	667
			6 January 1842. Treasury to Comptroller - - - - - - -	667
			23 February 1842. Comptroller to Treasury (Extract) - - - - -	667
			28 April 1842. Treasury to Comptroller, with Extract of Letter from Paymasters of Exchequer Bills -	669
			3 May 1842. Comptroller to Treasury	670
			5 July 1842. Ditto, with - -	671
			10 June 1842. Report of Auditors -	671
			7 July 1842. Comptroller to Treasury	673
			9 August 1842. Treasury reply -	673
Vol. 3, p. 192	1842: 23 Mar.	- „ - - „ -	(10.) Civil List Issues for Quarter differing from Charge - - - - - - -	674
– p. 250	„ 2 May	- „ - - „ -	(11.) Draft Warrant for Public Works, wrong -	674
– p. 326	„ 6 July	- „ - - „ -	(12.) Issue suspended for Lord Manners' Pension; lapsed - - - - - - - -	674
			11 July. Treasury to Comptroller -	675
			12 July. Comptroller to Treasury -	676
			3 August. Treasury reply - -	677
Vol. 4, p. 36	1843: 7 Jan.	- „ - - „ -	(13.) Unauthenticated addition to Irish Schedules
			19 January 1843. Treasury reply -	677
Vol. 5, p. 47	1844: 8 Apr.	- „ - - „ -	(14.) Legality of consolidating Army Votes in one Royal Order - - - - -	678
			Case enclosed - - - -	678
			24 June. From Treasury, with Opinions of Law Officers - - - -	681
Minute Book.
P. 168	1845: 24 Mar.	Comptroller-General's Minute.	(15.) Examination and Control of Royal Orders -	681
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 5, p. 207	„ 11 Aug.	Ditto to Treasury - -	(16.) Discrepancy in Royal Order for New Zealand
			13 August. Treasury reply - -	682
– p. 272	1846: 31 July	- „ - „ - -	(17.) Four Votes for Law Charges consolidated in one Royal Order - - - -	682
– p. 286	„ 24 Aug.	Ditto to Bank of England	(18.) Separation of Balances in Bank Statement
			28 August. Bank reply - - -	683
Vol. 6, p. 139	1848: 24 July	Ditto to Treasury - -	(19.) Neglect of Payment by Treasurer of Surrey
			17 February 1849. Similar Letter -	683
– p. 251	1849: 28 Aug.	- „ - „ - -	(20.) Irregular Issue for Loans for Workhouses, Ireland - - - - - - -	684
			22 December. Treasury reply - -	684
– p. 335	1850: 21 June	- „ - „ - -	(21.) Irregularity in Payment of Lord Campbell's Salary - - - - - - - -	684
– p. 363	„ 21 Oct.	Assistant Comptroller to Treasury.	(22.) Notice requested for Payments into Exchequer - - - - - - - - -	685

Correspondence Book.			(No.)	Page.
Vol. 6, p. 374	1850 : 18 Dec.	Comptroller-General to Sir A. Y. Spearman.	(23.) Form of Warrant for Civil List Savings -	685
Minute Book.
p. 331	1851 : 14 Jan.	Comptroller-General's Minute.	(24.) Erroneous Payment on account of Sycee Silver - - - - - - - - -	686
			7 March. Treasury Letter - -	686
			10 March. Comptroller-General in reply	686
p. 333	„ 30 Jan.	Ditto - - - -	(25.) Erroneous Repayment by Treasurer of Cashel and Shillelagh Union - - -	687
Correspondence Book.
Vol. 7, p. 52	„ 8 April	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(26.) Salaries, Irish Courts of Justice; P. K. Mahony - - - - - - - - -	687
			13 June, Treasury reply; and 3 May, Report of Paymaster of Civil Services - - - - - - -	688
			11 August. From Comptroller-General	688
			17 September. Treasury reply, enclosing
			12 September. Treasury Minute -	689
– p. 54	„ 11 April	- „ - - „ -	(27.) Issue to Paymaster-general for Constabulary Expenses, Ireland - - - - -	689
			16 April. Sir C. E. Trevelyan in reply	690
			2 May. From Treasury - - -	690
– p. 92	„ 11 Aug.	- „ - - „ -	(28.) Unissued Balances of Consolidated Fund -	690
			23 August. Treasury Letter, and Minute of 19 August - - -	691
			6 October. From Comptroller-General	692
			6 December. Treasury reply; and Warrant of 5 December - - -	692
– p. 121	„ 18 Oct.	- „ - - „ -	(29.) Issue suspended for Salaries of Assistant Barristers, Ireland - - - - -	693
			5 November. Treasury Letter and Minute - - - - - -	695
			19 November. Further ditto, with Opinion of Law Officers - - -	695
			25 November. Comptroller-General's reply - - - - - -	696
			3 December. Treasury Letter, and -	697
			28 November. Treasury Minute -	697
– p. 173	1852: 7 April	- „ - - „ -	(30.) Issue suspended till Grants produced; Justice Crampton, &c. - - - - -	697
			5 April. Treasury Letter - - -	697
– p. 174	1852: 12 Apr.	- „ - - „ -	(31.) Issue; Salaries, Courts of Justice, Ireland -	697
			10 April. Comptroller-General to Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland -	698
– p. 193	„ 22 June	- „ - - „ -	(32.) Irregular Issue of Royal Orders; no Ways and Means; Kaffir War, &c. - -	699
			19 June. Comptroller-General's Minute	699
			22 June. Comptroller-General to Treasury - - - - - -	699
			26 June. From Treasury - - -	701
			13 July. From Comptroller-General	701
			13 July. Comptroller-General's Minute - - - - - -	703
– p. 233	1853: 11 Feb.	- „ - - „ -	(33.) Overcharge for Lord Chancellor's Salary -	704
– p. 240	„ 11 Mar.	- „ - - „ -	(34.) Supplemental Votes, 1852–53. Duke of Wellington's Funeral, &c. - - -	704
			14 March. Treasury reply - -	705
			24 March. Treasury reply - -	705
			15 March. From Comptroller-General	705
			24 March. From Comptroller-General	707
			5 April. Treasury reply - - -	708
			14 April. From Comptroller-General	708

Correspondence Book.			No.	Page.
Vol. 7, p. 323	1853: 8 June	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(35.) Corrections and Observations on Scrip of Exchequer Bonds	708
			23 June. Treasury reply	709
			8 July. Ditto and Opinion of Law Officers	710
			9 July. From Comptroller-General	710
Vol. 8, p. 25	„ 3 Sept.	„ „	(36.) Payments for Ionian Government not made according to Treasury direction	711
			12 September. Treasury reply; directions erroneously made	712
– p. 99	„ 13 Dec.	„ „	(37.) Issue of Exchequer Bills for Supply Services not passing through Exchequer Account at Bank of England; amount of premium or discount, affecting Appropriation Act and Exchequer Control, not included in Bank Return of Daily Payments	712
			11 January 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	714
			13 January 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	715
			16 January 1854. Ditto to ditto	716
			31 January 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	718
			5 April 1854. Ditto to ditto	719
			7 April 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	719
			7 April 1854. Ditto to ditto	720
			3 July 1854. Ditto to ditto	720
			20 July 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	721
			24 July 1854. Comptroller-General to Board of Audit	722
			8 August 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	722
– p. 162	1854: 21 Mar.	Chancellor of the Exchequer to Comptroller-General.	(38.) Legality of Issues of 1,750,000 l. before, commencement of Financial Year	722
			22 March 1854. Comptroller-General's reply	722
			4 April 1854. Ditto Memorandum	723
– p. 267	1 Aug.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(39.) Discontinuance of Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant, and its necessity for Exchequer Control	723
			3 August 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	724
			7 August 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	724
			29 August 1854. Treasury to Comptroller General	725
			6 September 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	726
			9 October 1854. Mr. Ottey to Mr. Dwight	728
			20 October 1854. Comptroller-General's Minute	728
			26 October 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	729
			27 October 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	729
			2 November 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	730
			3 November 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	731
			19 December 1854. Treasury to Comptroller-General	731
			30 December 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury	733
			1 January 1855. Ditto to ditto	736
			3 March 1855. Treasury to Comptroller-General	737
			20 March 1855. Comptroller-General to Treasury	739

Correspondence Book.			No.	Page.
Vol. 8, p. 321	1854: 9 Oct.	Comptroller-General to Treasury.	(40.) Mr. Romilly's Salary suspended till Patent produced; involving Exchequer Control	741
			13 October 1854. Treasury reply -	741
			31 October 1854. From Comptroller-General - - - - -	742
			1 January 1855. Ditto - -	747
			9 January 1855. Ditto - -	748
			6 March 1855. Treasury reply and Minute - - - - -	748
			22 March 1855. From Comptroller-General - - - - -	750
			23 March 1855. Ditto - -	753
			13 June 1855. Mr. Romilly to Comptroller-General - - - -	754
			14 June 1855. From Treasury - -	754
			20 June 1855. Comptroller-General's reply - - - - - -	755
			25 June 1855. From Treasury - -	756
Vol. 9, p. 8	„ 27 Dec.	- „ - - „ -	(41.) Issue suspended for P. Shaw's Salary -	756
			13 February 1855. Treasury Explanation - - - - - -	756
– p. 80	1855: 6 Mar.	- „ - - „ -	(42.) Royal Orders irregular, dated before Act; Précis of Correspondence - - -	757
– p. 336	1856: 5 May	Comptroller-General to Chamberlain of London.	(43.) Discrepancy in Payments on account of London Bridge - - - - -	757
			10 May. Reply of Chamberlain -	758
			7 June. Letter from Chamberlain -	758

COPIES of CORRESPONDENCE appended to Cases of Control exercised at the Exchequer.

(No. 1.)

Excessive Naval Credits.

Office of Comptroller-general, Exchequer,
5 November 1834.

Sir,

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 5 Nov. 1834.

A LETTER of direction from the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury has been transmitted to me this day for a credit of 70,000 l. to the Treasurer of the Navy, for the service of that department, to which I have, as Comptroller-general, affixed my signature, lest any inconvenience should result from withholding it even for a day.

I feel it, however, to be my duty to request their Lordships' attention to the following facts, as applied to credits given to this and some other departments, without apparent necessity for thus appropriating the public revenue, before the period when the exigency of the services of such department seems to require it, and whilst a considerable portion of the credits before given remains uncalled for.

On the 22d October a credit was given to this department of - -	£. 60,000
On the 30th October a second credit of - - - - - - - -	70,000
Making a Total of - - - - - - - - -	£. 130,000
Out of this, up to the 3d November inclusive, there has been called for only - - - - - - - - - - - - -	50,000
Leaving still uncalled for - - - - - -	£. 80,000

And now, whilst this sum remains uncalled for, but locked up by the former credits, a further credit is called for of 70,000 l., for which the surplus still unapplied would fully provide.

I have, &c.
(signed) J. Newport, Comptroller-general.

F. T. Baring, Esq.
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 2.)

Appendix, No. 9.

Excessive Naval Credits, and Effect of Deficiency Bills.

Office of Comptroller-general, Exchequer,
11 February 1835.

Sir,

Assistant Comptroller to Chancellor of Exchequer, 11 February 1835.

The Comptroller-general addressed a letter to the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, on the 5th November 1834, respecting the balances of credits given by him, under directions from the Treasury; and I now beg leave to call your attention more particularly to the subject, believing that if the different Paymasters were instructed to ask for such credits only, as are required by the immediate exigencies of the public service, considerable saving might be effected by the more rapid reduction of the Deficiency Bills, with a consequent diminution of the interest payable on them.

The average weekly balance of credits at the Bank of England for the last four weeks has been 761,890*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.* I am well aware that there must be a balance kept up on each Paymaster's account, but if one-half had been the amount of them, which is large, the remaining half might have been applied to the reduction of the Deficiency Bills, and the interest thereby reduced 22*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* a day.

To make myself more fully understood, I take the liberty of troubling you with two cases of credits more in detail. On the 31st January there was a balance of credits on the Army account of 386,271*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, and the payments upon that account, as returned by the Bank of England, appear as follows:—

	£.	s.	d.
On February 2	85,965	1	–
„ 3	81,433	19	4
„ 4	45,251	4	3
„ 5	8,288	9	7
„ 6	6,024	11	8

Now, had credits been daily given to that Paymaster to meet the daily demands upon him, there would have been a saving of 124*l.* 7*s.* 5*d.* interest on Deficiency Bills, by the difference being applied to their more rapid reduction; or even had a credit been given to the Paymaster on the 31st, for the whole of his payments during the following week, which amounted to 176,963*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*, the balance, 209,307*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.*, might have been applied on the 31st to the reduction of the Deficiency Bills, and the seven days' interest, 91*l.* 11*s.* 6½*d.*, saved on that amount.

Again, by the 10 Geo. 4, c. 27, s. 3, one-fourth part of the actual annual surplus is to be applied to the reduction of the National Debt.

On the 11th October last, a credit was given to the Commissioners of 344,257*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* upon which, by the returns, they drew as follows:—

	£.	s.	d.
October 14	12,590	12	10
„ 15	12,177	–	–
„ 16	12,535	7	6
„ 17	12,436	15	–
November 20	10,136	5	–
„ 21	12,322	10	–
„ 25	12,359	7	6
„ 26	12,328	2	6
„ 27	12,458	5	–
„ 28	12,359	7	6

On this day the Deficiency Bills were entirely paid of.

Now, had credits been only given as the gradual reduction was made, and the difference at once applied to setting off the Deficiency Bills, the charge for interest on them in that quarter would have been diminished 855*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*; and it is further to be observed, that by the Bank returns, it would appear that the Commissioners only required 121,703*l.* 12*s.* 10*d.* up to November 28; so that if this credit had been simply divided into two payments, as was the case in the quarters ending 10 October 1830, January 5 and April 5, 1831, the difference, 222,553*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*, would not have been issued in Deficiency Bills, and the 48 days' interest on that sum might have been saved, 667*l.* 13*s.* 2½*d.*

I am, &c.
(signed) Arthur Eden, Assist. Compt.

The Right hon.
the Chancellor of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

Sir,

Whitehall, 14 February 1835.

Chancellor of Exchequer to Assistant Comptroller, 14 Feb. 1835.

I will for the present content myself with the acknowledgment of the receipt of your letter of the 11th February, and the assurance that I will give the important subject to which it refers immediate consideration.

I have, &c.
(signed) Robert Peel.

Arthur Eden, Esq.
&c. &c.

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 3.)

Excessive Charge for Diplomatic Services.

Comptroller-general to Chancellor of Exchequer, 3 January 1840.

My dear Sir, Whitehall-yard, 3 January 1840.

I THINK it may not be without advantage to the public service if I call your attention, in a semi-official manner, to a branch of the expenditure charged on the Consolidated Fund.

By the arrangements made on the accession of his late Majesty, a fixed charge was placed on the Consolidated Fund to answer the Diplomatic Service. This charge was necessarily a maximum; and, looking at an account which has been prepared in this office, the difference between the amount paid and that which might have been charged, from October 1834 to October 1839, is no less than 28,851 l. 10 s.

Perhaps, after a certain time, when it is ascertained how the account actually stands, and when it it shown that the whole sum required for the service of any particular year has been issued, it might be expedient that the balance between that sum and the maximum charge should be struck off, as not being a sum which will be called for. By this means the accounts will be simplified, and no imaginary and useless charge will be carried forward.

I trust I shall stand excused in having brought this matter under your consideration, and that in doing so I may not appear to you to have exceeded my duty.

The Right hon.
the Chancellor of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle.

(No. 4.)

Inadequate Balance in Ireland to meet Quarterly Charge.

MEMORANDUM.

3 July 1840.

Comptroller-general, 3 July 1840.

IT is of course the province of the Treasury exclusively, and not mine, to consider how the case of deficiency in Ireland, as stated in my letter of yesterday's date, had best be met, the responsibility of preparing the warrant for my subsequent consideration resting exclusively with that department.

But, in furtherance of the public service, I have given my best attention to the two drafts which have been submitted to my consideration, and shall proceed to make the suggestion which occurs to me as being that which it may be most desirable to adopt.

In this, or any similar case, the most legitimate way of meeting the difficulty is, not by providing for the deficiency when it has occurred, but by preventing that deficiency from occurring. It appears to me, therefore, that where from deficiency of income or increase of expenditure in Ireland, a deficiency may be apprehended, it would be prudent, in place of directing payments for Army and Ordnance in Ireland, to make those payments here to the Paymaster-general, by whom they could be transferred at the Bank of England to the Irish account. In this way the Exchequer Account in Ireland would be husbanded, and an adequate balance kept at the close of the quarter to meet the dividends and other charges on the Consolidated Fund.

But it is now too late to resort to this process, and it becomes necessary to act on another principle.

The Papers (A.) and (B.) contain two separate proposals.

(A.) The one is a draft warrant, which, referring to the warrant of the 4th July, which is already before me, and which authorises the payments of dividends due in Ireland on the 5th instant, directs that the sum of 374,158 l. 3 s. 3 d. be transferred to the account of the Bank of Ireland, in order to meet so much of the first warrant, for which adequate funds would not be otherwise provided.

(B.) The other form is a warrant simply directing the transfer of £. from the balance of the Exchequer Account with the Bank of England to the Consolidated Fund Account in Ireland, without reciting the object or appropriation of the sum so transferred.

It appears to me essential that the Warrants should be precise and determinate, and should, as far as it is possible, correspond strictly with the directions and authority issued by me to the Bank of Ireland.

The state of the Irish Account, as reported to me this morning, is as follows:

	£.	£.
Balance to 27th June - - - - - -	377,322
Receipts to Wednesday - - - - -	43,000
		420,322
Out of this sum is to be deducted the issues to this day - -		44,282
Available balance, as advised, to this day - - - £.		376,040

On the 5th July 1839, the schedules of the charges on the Consolidated Fund amounted to about 70,000 l. Assuming that the amount of this charge will be about similar on the present present occasion, I should submit that the transfer to be directed from England should be to that precise amount, that the warrant for such transfer should recite the s. 1, 56 Geo. 3, c. 98; that it should further recite, that the payments set forth in the schedules are charges on the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, and should authorise me to direct a transfer to the Bank of Ireland for making these payments. Appendix, No. 9

I must infer that Parliament, in making the dividends and other payments a charge upon the Consolidated Fund of the Empire, intended to vest the Treasury and the Exchequer with the means of carrying the contract into effect by a transfer of funds, when necessary, from the one country to the other.

(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

(No. 5.)

Charge for Irish Officers attending Parliament.

Office of Comptroller-general, Exchequer,
13 July 1840.

My Lords,

My attention has been lately called to a charge issued out of the Consolidated Fund in Ireland, under the Act 41 Geo. 3, c. 32, which appears to me open to much objection, if it be not distinctly contrary to law, and which I therefore submit to your Lordships, should be in future excluded from your Lordships' quarterly warrant. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 13 July 1840.

The sum to which I allude, is the issue of 1,938 l. 5 s. 4 d. which is paid to the Receiver of Fees in your Lordships' office, and which is carried to the credit of the Treasury Fee Fund.

This sum was originally granted to "pay the necessary allowances to certain officers from Ireland attending during the Session of Parliament in London, and to such other officers as may be employed in preparing proceedings and attending to business in Parliament relating to Ireland."

The issue is now applied to the general Fee Fund of the Treasury; no such services as those contemplated in the Act being now performed or necessary to be provided for.

I doubt whether I can be warranted in sanctioning a continuance of this payment in future, and shall be glad to be favoured with your Lordships' opinion thereon.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 6.)

Legal Construction of Act for Annuity to Bank of Ireland.

29 December 1840.

NOTE on the Treasury Memorandum respecting the Payment of the Bank of Ireland Annuity under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 75, s. 2. Comptroller-general, 29 Dec. 1840.

The words of the Act on which the decision turns are the following:

Provided always, that the payment to be made on the 5th January 1841, shall be only a proportionate part of the said annuity of 115,384 l. 12 s. 4 d. for the period that shall have elapsed from the passing of the Act (7 August 1840), to the said 5th January.

The first object of this part of the Act was to consolidate the existing Bank of Ireland Annuities into one annuity of 115,384 l. 12 s. 4 d., redeemable on certain conditions. A consequent and necessary provision was to fix the time of payment, including the broken period.

But it is clear that no greater or less amount was contemplated to be paid under the new than under the old system.

I should, therefore, construe the word proportion to mean such a sum, as, together with a sum received on account of the separate annuities for the period from 5th January 1840 to 7th August 1840, shall make up the sum of 115,384 l. 12 s. 4 d.

Any other construction would make the payments for 1840 greater than even in the years anterior, and the years subsequent, which is absurd.

As the Bank of Ireland puts the question upon the construction of the Act of Parliament, and as the Treasury may naturally feel a delicacy in deciding in their own favour, being at once judges and parties, I should recommend the opinion of the Crown lawyers to be taken.

(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 7.)

Indiscriminate Issues of Ways and Means, granted in the two Sessions of 1841, and Irregularity in Royal Orders for second Session, dated previously to Ways and Means Acts.

From Treasury, 15 October 1841.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 15 October 1841.

THE Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury desire that you will authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to grant out of the General Fund of the Exchequer at the Bank a credit of 10,000 l. for principal of Exchequer Bills, pro anno 1841–2, to Edward Henry Nevinson and John Henry Latham, Esqrs., Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, on account of the sum of 21,626,350 l., set forth in the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, bearing date respectively 25th May 1841, and that you will charge the same in the accounts of your department as an issue out of any money arising from the funding of Exchequer Bills, per Act 5 Vict. c. 8, pro anno 1841–2.

I am, &c.
(signed) G. Clerk.

(Immediate.)

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 15 October 1841.

My Lords, Comptroller-general's Office, 15 October 1841.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Secretary's letter of this date, desiring that I should authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to grant out of the General Fund of the Exchequer a credit of 10,000 l. to the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, on account of the sum of 21,626,350 l. set forth in the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant of the 25th May 1841, charging the same as an issue out of any money arising from the funding of Exchequer Bills, per Act 5 Vict. c. 8.

Having referred to the 21st section of the Act in question, I perceive that it is provided that "all sums of money which shall be so subscribed and paid in" are appropriated to the services granted in the last Session of Parliament, and, as it appears to me, are legally applicable to such services only.

If this construction of the statute be correct, the direction contained in your Lordships' letter of the 15th cannot be complied with.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Compt.-genl.

The Lords Commissioners of H. M.'s Treasury, &c. &c. &c.

Comptroller-general to Chancellor of Exchequer, 22 October 1841.

My dear Sir, Exchequer, 22 October 1841.

I RETURN the papers which you were so good as to have given me, and I have considered the whole question with the most anxious desire to forward the views of the Treasury, if I could persuade myself that I was justified in so doing by the directions contained in the Acts of Parliament.

I have also consulted the oldest and most experienced of the officers of the Exchequer, not even confining myself to those who are now in the public service, and they all concur in the view which I most reluctantly felt myself compelled to take of the subject in my letter to the Treasury of the 15th instant.

I will show you where I think the precedent to which you refer me, and which is also stated in Mr. Brooksbank's memorandum, fails in its analogy; even supposing that if the analogy were precise, it would release me from the obligations of the 4 Will. 4, c. 15.

All the Ways and Means Bills before the dissolution in 1830 recite specifically that the object of the grants is for the service of the year 1830 (11 Geo. 4, c. 2, 19, 28, and 63.)

The clause to which you refer strikes me rather as an enabling than a restraining clause, authorising the issue upon Resolutions of the House of Commons, which could not otherwise take place until the sanction of the Appropriation Act was first obtained.

All the Ways and Means Acts after the dissolution are to the same effect, and recite the object to be for the service of the year 1830. 1 Will. 4, c. 1 and 5.

Now, in 1841 the case is different, so far as relates to the Acts passed after the dissolution.

Before the dissolution, the sums provided by the 4 & 5 Vict. c. 4 and 53, are stated to be for the service of the year 1841; but in the two Acts passed after the dissolution, no reference is made in the enactment of the year but to the services voted during the Session only.

In this 5 Vict. c. 8, s. 21, the monies paid in are directed to be applied to such services as shall have been granted in this Session of Parliament. In s. 24, the money received by sale of stock is in like manner appropriated to "such services as shall have been granted in this Session of Parliament." So in the Appropriation Act, in which the provision is made towards "raising the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament;" and by the further enactment, s. 8, the monies received under the former Act (5 Vict. c. 8) there are specifically appropriated to the several votes which are recited seriatim.

Now it appears to me that the cases are distinguishable, even without referring to the vote of 3,253,882 l. in 1830, to make good supplies voted in the preceding Session, which sums are covered by a corresponding vote in Ways and Means.

Therefore

Therefore the case stands simply thus: Are monies provided in the Session, after the dissolution, legally applicable to services voted before the dissolution?

As you suggest, I shall prepare a case, and transmit it through you for the opinion of your law advisers.

Believe me, &c.

The Right Hon. the Chancellor of the Exchequer, &c. &c. &c.

(signed) Monteagle.

Case for Opinion of Law Officers.

A DOUBT has arisen respecting the construction of the Revenue Acts passed in the present year 1841, which renders it necessary for the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, acting under the Statute 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, to obtain the opinion of the law advisers of the Crown.

4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15.

The authority of the Comptroller-general is entirely derived under this Act, and his duties are also thereby clearly prescribed.

By sect. 6, it is enacted, that whenever any sums of money shall have been granted to his Majesty by any Act of Parliament or vote of the House of Commons for any specified branch of the public service, and ways and means shall have been granted for making good the same, his Majesty may issue a Royal Order requiring the Comptroller-general to place to the credit of the Public Accountant in the respective branch or service the amount of the sum so granted or voted, at such times and proportions as the Commissioners of the Treasury shall direct; and such Royal Order is to contain a reference to the particular Act or vote of Parliament, and shall, after being recorded at the Treasury, be transmitted to the Comptroller to be entered in his office, "the said Comptroller having first satisfied himself that the said order has been made in conformity with, and has not exceeded, the amount of the grant of Parliament."

By the section 12, the Commissioners of the Treasury are authorised to issue these warrants to the Comptroller, requiring him to transfer to the respective officers of the public departments such sum as shall be requisite for the respective services; and every such warrant shall recite the substance of the Royal Order upon which it is founded, referring to the Act or vote therein mentioned, and shall specify the total amount of the monies authorised by such order, and the credits, if any, which shall have been previously issued on account thereof, and the balance remaining to be issued; and the Comptroller is to compare such warrant with the Royal Order and preceding warrants, and satisfy himself that such warrant has been made in conformity with, and has not exceeded, the Royal Order.

The powers of the Comptroller-general being thus defined, to make the case more clear as to the points on which the opinion of the law advisers of the Crown is desired, it is necessary to class the general Statutes of the present year 1841, referred to, under two heads—1st, those passed in the present Session of Parliament.

CLASS I.—ACTS PASSED BEFORE THE DISSOLUTION.

4 Vict. c. 4. The title of this Act is, "An Act to apply 8,000,000 l. out of the Consolidated Fund to the Service of the Year 1841."

Sect. 1. By this section, 8,000,000 l. were granted from the Consolidated Fund, to be issued and applied towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty "for the service of the year 1841."

Sect. 7. The Treasury are authorised to issue this sum for any services voted by the Commons during that Session of Parliament.

4 Vict. c. 19. The title of this Act is, "An Act for raising 11,000,000 l. by Exchequer Bills, for the Service of the Year 1841."

Sect. 1. By this section, 11,000,000 l. Exchequer Bills were authorised to be issued towards raising the supplies granted in that Session of Parliament.

Sect. 3. The Treasury was authorised to apply this money to services voted in that Session of Parliament.

This was for the exchange of Exchequer Bills, which was wholly executed during that Session.

4 & 5 Vict. c. 53.

Sect. 1. By this section, 6,200,000 l. are granted from the Consolidated Fund towards making good the supply granted for the service of the year 1841.

Sect. 7. The Treasury are authorised to issue and apply this sum for services voted by the Commons in that Session of Parliament.

Sect. 10. By this section, the 8,000,000 l., the 11,000,000 l. Exchequer Bills, 6,200,000 l., (with other specific sums) so granted, are strictly limited and appropriated to the several special uses or services thereinafter expressed; and then follows a list of the various grants made in that Session of Parliament.

Sect. 21. Declares that the aids and supplies provided as aforesaid shall not be issued or applied to any other use, intent or purpose whatsoever.

CLASS 2.—ACTS PASSED AFTER THE DISSOLUTION.

5 Vict. c. 8. This Act is intituled, "An Act for funding Exchequer Bills, and for making Provision for the Service of the Year 1841."

The object of the Act in the section 1st, is stated to be for making provision to satisfy the principal sum contained in certain Exchequer Bills, to the amount of 5,000,000 l., and to raise the necessary supplies granted in that Session of Parliament.

Sect. 4 allows subscribers to contribute money, as well as Exchequer Bills.

Sect. 21 enacts, that the Treasury shall issue and apply all monies subscribed and paid into the Exchequer to such services as shall have been granted in that Session of Parliament.

Appendix, No 9.

Sect. 24 enacts, that stock may be created and sold, and the monies arising from such sale are to be paid into the Exchequer, to be applied to such services as shall have been granted in that Session of Parliament.*

5 Vict. c. 11. This Act is intituled, "An Act for raising 10,626,350 l. Exchequer Bills for the Service of the Year 1841, and for appropriating the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament."

Sect. 1. Stating the object to be "towards raising the supplies granted in this Session." The Treasury are authorised to issue out 10,626,350 l. in Exchequer Bills.

Sect. 3 enacts, that the Treasury shall apply all sums raised by such bills to such services as shall have been voted by the Commons in this Session of Parliament. Sect. 8 enacts, that the monies received under the 5 Vict. c. 8, and the 10,626,350 l. under this Act, shall be and are thereby appropriated to the several uses and purposes thereafter expressed; and then a list of the various grants made in that Session of Parliament follows,† including 24,896 l. to make good supplies granted last Session.

Sect. 17 enacts, that the aids and supplies provided as aforesaid shall not be issued or applied to any other use, intent or purpose, but those mentioned.

It is observable that the words "for the service of the year 1841," are repeated in the first section of the Acts passed prior to the dissolution, whilst in the Acts passed after the dissolution these words are then omitted; but the restrictive words in the appropriated clauses in all are the same, that is, to services either voted or granted "in this Session of Parliament."

The questions on which the opinion of the law officers of the Crown is requested, are the following:

1st. Whether, according to the meaning of these statutes, the Comptroller-general can legally authorise the monies paid to the Exchequer under the 5th Vict. c. 8, s. 21 & 24, to be issued and applied to services not voted or granted in the last Session of Parliament, but to services voted or granted in the Session before the dissolution.

2d. Whether any of the funds provided either under the 5th Vict. c. 8, or under the 5th Vict. c. 11, can, according to the true construction of these statutes, be issued and applied to services not voted in the last Session, but to services voted before the dissolution.

3d. Whether the funds provided under the 4 Vict. c. 4, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 19 and c. 53, passed before the dissolution, can legally be issued and applied to services voted after the dissolution, and provided for by the 5 Vict. c. 8 and c. 11.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 27 October 1841.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 27 October 1841.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit to you the enclosed copy of their Minute on the subject of your Lordship's letter to them of the 15th of this month, respecting their direction of an issue to be made by your Lordship from the funds of the Exchequer of 10,000 l. for the payment of principal of Exchequer Bills.

I have, &c.

To the Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, &c. &c. &c.

(signed) Thomas F. Fremantle.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 27 October 1841.

Treasury Minute, 27 October 1841.

MY Lords have before them the letter of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, dated the 15th instant, stating that having received a letter from one of the Secretaries to this Board, desiring that he would authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to grant out of the general fund of the Exchequer a credit of 10,000 l. to the Paymaster of Exchequer Bills, on account of the sum of 21,626,350 l., set forth in the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant of the 25th May 1841, charging the same as an issue out of any money arising from the funding of Exchequer Bills, per Act 5 Vict. c. 8; and that having referred to the 21st section of the Act in question, he perceives that it is provided that "all sums of money which shall be so subscribed and paid in are appropriated to the services granted in the last Session of Parliament, and, as it appears to him, are legally applicable to such services only;" and that if this construction of the statute be correct, the directions contained in the letter from this Board cannot be complied with.

It appears to my Lords that the doubts which have been raised by the Comptroller-general as to the issue of the particular sum of 10,000 l. on account of the Royal Order of May 1841, involve a more material question than the mere issue of the sum to which he refers in his letter.

The real point which that letter raises, and on which my Lords are to decide, is whether the sums granted as ways and means in one or other of the two Sessions of the year 1841, are to be applied exclusively to the services voted in one or other of those Sessions respectively, or whether the ways and means of the two Sessions are not indiscriminately applicable to the services of the year 1841, without distinction as to the Session of that year in which those services may have been voted.

My

---

* Note.—This arises from the Acts passed before the dissolution, and does not refer to votes of the House of Commons out of Grants of Parliament, i. e., the Act of the Legislature.

† In this list is a grant of 24,896 l. to make good supplies granted in the last Session of Parliament.

My Lords consider that the decision of this question turns, first, upon a just view of what were the real intentions of Parliament with respect to it in the year 1841; and secondly, upon the practice of the Treasury and the Exchequer in previous cases of precisely similar occurrence; and my Lords are disposed to attach great weight to precedent in such a case, from a sense of the inconvenience which cannot fail to result from giving to legal enactments new constructions at variance with those which have been previously acted on, thereby causing great uncertainty in the financial administration of the country.

My Lords would observe that it is the usual course of Parliament, in each Session, after voting, by Resolutions of the House of Commons, several items in supply towards the expenditure services of the current year, to provide by Acts of Parliament the ways and means for defraying such expenditure.

These Resolutions and these Acts all merge and are embodied in a General Act passed at the end of the Session, called the Appropriation Act, in which all the Ways and Means Acts are recited, as well as the Resolutions for the Expenditure; and the money "coming into the Exchequer" under those Ways and Means Acts is further and specially appropriated by this last Act to the several items of expenditure previously sanctioned by the Resolutions of the House of Commons.

It also contains a restrictive clause, usually expressed in the following words: "And be it "hereby also enacted, that the said aids and supplies provided as aforesaid, shall not be "issued or applied to any use, intent or purpose whatever, other than the uses, intents and "purposes before mentioned, or for the other payments directed to be satisfied thereout by "any Act or Acts, or any particular clause or clauses for that purpose contained in any "other Act or Acts of this Session of Parliament."

In the usual course, all the Ways and Means Acts, and all the Resolutions of expenditure, for one and the same year, are comprised in one Sessional Act, and the words "granted in this Session," have, therefore, in such cases, the same meaning and effect as if they were "granted for the service of the year."

It has only happened on two occasions that the services for the same year have been divided and provided for by two Appropriation Acts. This happened in the year 1830, after the death of King George 4, and in the present year.

There appears to be no difference whatever in principle, or in words, between the Appropriation Acts in the year 1830 and those in the present year, nor can any distinction be made as to the intentions of Parliament in those two years.

My Lords have, therefore, to consider what those intentions were, in what manner they were fulfilled by the Treasury and Exchequer in 1830, and whether there be any sufficient reason why the construction given by the Treasury and Exchequer to the Appropriation Acts of 1830 should be departed from on the present occasion.

The two Appropriation Acts for the service of the year 1841 (viz. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 53, and 5 Vict. c. 11,) were passed under circumstances well known to every one, and the intentions of Parliament in passing them could not be mistaken.

In examining, therefore, the precise words of the Acts with a view to fix their real meaning, it is important not to lose sight of the known intentions of Parliament, as explanatory of words which might perhaps otherwise be doubtful.

These intentions of Parliament were, in the year 1841, as in the year 1830, to provide by ways and means for the expenditure granted for the service of those years respectively.

The titles of the Appropriation Acts of the year 1830 were, to apply a sum of £. to the service of the year 1830, and to appropriate the supplies granted in this Session of Parliament.

The titles of the Acts of the year 1841 were, to raise a sum of £. for the service of the year 1841, and to appropriate the supplies granted in this Session of Parliament.

In 1841, as in 1830, the first Session was brought to a close before the whole of the ways and means could be provided, and before the whole of the expenditure or supplies could be granted for the year, and an Appropriation Act was in each year passed, comprising in it the several grants in ways and means and supply for a portion of the services of the year only, leaving the remaining portion to be provided for and granted in the ensuing Session; and such remaining portion for the service of the year having been granted in the ensuing Session, there could not exist a doubt that Parliament intended to provide, in the ordinary course, both for the ways and means and supplies of the whole year as effectually by the grants of the two Sessions as if there had been but one Session.

My Lords further remark, that no doubt whatever appears to have existed on the subject in 1830, and no legal opinion was thought necessary by Lord Grenville, then Auditor of the Exchequer, nor by Lord Grey, then First Lord of the Treasury, to justify the indiscriminate application of the grants in both Appropriation Acts to the general services of the year 1830, without restriction as to the particular heads of expenditure to which they were specially allotted by the separate Appropriation Acts of the two Sessions.

In the present year, so far as my Lords are aware, nothing has occurred from whence it can be inferred that Parliament did not intend to act strictly according to the precedent of 1830, to which no objection had ever been raised, and to provide in the usual manner for the services of the year 1841, notwithstanding the division of the services occasioned by the two Appropriation Acts.

My Lords further observe, that one payment has already been made by the Exchequer out of the grant of ways and means of the 1st Session of this year to defray a service voted in the 2d Session, and they cannot see on what ground objection is now made to defraying a service voted in the first Session out of the ways and means of the second. It appears to my Lords that the principle involved in both payments is precisely the same.

Appendix, No. 9.

Considering, therefore, the intentions of Parliament in 1841, the practice of the Treasury and Exchequer in the year 1830, and the issue from the Exchequer which has already this year been made in conformity with that practice, my Lords are of opinion that they should not be justified in acquiescing in the view which the Comptroller-general has taken of this subject, nor in sanctioning a new interpretation of the words in the Appropriation Acts, which would to a degree impede the public service, and might materially affect the public interests.

(Immediate.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 4 November 1841.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 4 November 1841.

I HAVE received your Lordships' Minute of the 27th ultimo, on the subject of the objection which I had most reluctantly felt myself compelled to raise against the execution of your Lordships' direction, commanding me to make an issue out of the sums levied or received under the 5 Vict. c. 8, an Act of the present Parliament, in payment of services voted in the last Session of the late Parliament.

I have perused the Minute with all the respect which is due to your Lordships' superior wisdom; and it is with the utmost pain, and with an humble consciousness of my own fallibility, that I am still constrained to adhere to my opinion, and most reluctantly to differ from your Lordships' judgment.

The Treasury Minute of the 27th October extends the question which I had raised to a much larger one, connected with it most undoubtedly, but one which it does not necessarily include. I had only taken the liberty of submitting my opinion that sums raised under the 5th Vict. c. 8, being specially appropriated to grants of the present Parliament, could not, by law, be issued by your Lordships to services voted in the late Parliament; but your Lordships have called on me to consider whether all the sums provided for the public service in 1841 should not be considered as consolidated, and issuable indiscriminately to services voted both before and after the dissolution.

I shall proceed to consider your Lordships' Minute, and shall observe upon it with that freedom which I entreat your Lordships to consider as perfectly compatible with the respectful deference which I feel to be due to your Lordships' judgment and authority.

The reasoning of the Minute is founded (1) on the supposed intention of Parliament, as explanatory of the several statutes referred to; and (2) on the authority of usage and precedent, as proving the mode in which similar Acts of Parliament had been construed by the Treasury and Exchequer in former time. I shall deal with these two arguments separately.

1. Your Lordships call my attention, in the first place, to a "just view of the real intentions of Parliament," and to the application of these intentions, as the rule by which I am to be governed.

I most humbly submit to your Lordships that I should set at nought all the obligations imposed on me by the statute constituting my office, if I were to substitute, for the just and legal construction of an Act of Parliament, a reference to the supposed intention of its framers. With the most sincere deference to your Lordships, and in profound humility, I venture to suggest that the only interpretation which I am at liberty to put on the statute law of the land, is that which would be given to that statute law by courts of justice. I am unwillingly constrained to differ from your Lordships, believing that it is solely by the legal import of the statute that I must be governed. If the principle of construction suggested by your Lordships were adopted, I should tremble at the consequences to which it might lead in respect to the functions of any Comptroller-general. If the intentions of Parliament are to be referred to as a guide, the Government or the Comptroller must assume the right of interpretation. Either supposition would be dangerous. Upon the Comptroller-general's belief of what were the intentions of Parliament, that officer might refuse to abide by the true interpretation of the statute law; he might capriciously impede the public service, and resist the authority of your Lordships' Board, all-powerful as it should ever be with this office, when its functions are exercised according to law. The construction of the law would vary with the varying judgments of successive Comptrollers, and there would necessarily ensue the very evil your Lordships, with so much wisdom and justice, deprecate, "a great uncertainty in the financial administration of the country." The case would involve further and more serious constitutional objections, if the Government of the day, or the framers of these laws, were to be recognised as organs and expositors of the statute laws. Such a doctrine would not only lead to all the uncertainty to which your Lordships have adverted, but it would also subvert the independence of the office I have the honour to hold. I am therefore led irresistibly to the conclusion, that, strictly defined as are my duties, I must consider these statutes as their own expositors, not seeking, in the supposed intentions of Parliament, for any rule of construction, where the plain and evident meaning of the enactment can be understood.

2. I now proceed to consider your Lordships' second argument, founded on usage and precedent of the Treasury and of the Exchequer. No person can look up to the authority of usage with more respect than I do; but to give it that authority, usage must surely be proved to have been ancient and continued; or at least to have occurred under unchanged laws and unaltered circumstances.

My Lords, I submit with all deference (1) that the precedents quoted in the Treasury Minute are insufficient, even if in point; and I further humbly submit, that even if they were sufficient, they are inapplicable.

I submit

I submit also (2) that the state of the law is no longer what it was in 1830; and,

(3) That the Appropriation Act and Ways and Means Acts passed in 1830 and 1841 differ from each other in their language and in their enactments; and cannot, therefore, legally be considered to have the same force and effect.

It is surely obvious that two modern precedents, even if in point, can scarcely be considered any evidence whatsoever of practice and of usage. I can assure your Lordships that I look with the same respect which is implied in the language of the Treasury Minute, both to the high authority of Lord Grey, and to the venerated memory of Lord Grenville. I, in common with your Lordships, feel persuaded that the one would never have given, nor the other have executed an illegal order. But your Lordships will observe, that in the interval between 1830 and 1841 the statute regulating my office has passed, and that it is by that Act that I am bound. It is not, therefore, by any precedent anterior to 1834 that I can be governed, unless it be consistent with the Act of 1834. It is the duty confided to me by the Act of 1834 that I must endeavour, however inadequately, to execute.

It is true that the case has occurred of a single issue during the present year adverted to by your Lordships, by which a grant of ways and means of the late Parliament has been applied to a service voted in the present. Your Lordships, however, will see that the case raised by me is not whether a service of the second Session may be defrayed out of the ways and means of the first, voted, as the latter grants specifically were, for the service of the year 1841, (see 4 & 5 Vict. c. 4, s. 1, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 53, s. 1); the question I put is, whether ways and means, in the last Session, provided "for services granted during that Session of Parliament," (see 5 Vict. c. 8, s. 21, 24, and 5 Vict. c. 11,) can legally be issued and applied to services voted in another and a previous Session of another and a preceding Parliament. But even if this single issue had been inconsiderately made, and made in deference to a Treasury Warrant, which might primâ facie be supposed to have been issued according to law, that single issue is far from being conclusive. Your Lordships would feel that I should be totally unworthy of any favourable consideration, if, being convinced of error, I were not ready frankly to confess a mistake, if I had made one, rather than obstinately to persevere in a recognised error. Besides which, that issue was one made before the passing of the Appropriation Act; and it is on the wording of that Act, subsequently passed, that the difficulty has arisen.

But I am not without some hopes that I can make it appear to your Lordships, by a precise comparison of the enactments in 1830 and 1841, that even if that precedent were authoritative, still it did not apply on the supposition stated by your Lordships. The Treasury Minute asserts that "there is no difference whatever in principle, or in words, between the Appropriation Acts of 1830 and 1841." Oppressed as your Lordships must be with the weight of arduous and most important duties, it is possible that the distinction between the two cases may have escaped you.

It is quite true that in 1830, as in 1841, there were two Sessions; the first Session in each year being followed by a dissolution. It is true that supplies and ways and means were voted in each Session, and an Appropriation Act passed. Thus far, I entirely concur with your Lordships in thinking the cases not only similar, but identical. But this identity of 1841, as compared with 1830, loses all its force, if it can be shown that the enactments of the second Appropriation Act of 1830 differ essentially in language and import from those of the Act of 1841, and therefore can neither legally nor logically have the same meaning. The simplest method of bringing this under your Lordships' observation is to exhibit two series of enactments in parallel columns.

Acts of 1830. Before the Dissolution.	Acts of 1841. Before the Dissolution.
11 Geo. 4, c. 11, s. 1:	4 & 5 Vict. c. 4, s. 1:
Be it enacted, &c., that there shall be issued and applied for and towards making good the supply granted to His Majesty, for the service of the year 1830, 4,000,000 l. from the Consolidated Fund, &c.; and the Treasury authorised and empowered to issue and apply the same accordingly.	Be it enacted, &c., that there may be issued and applied towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty, for the service of the year 1841, 8,000,000 l., &c.; and the Treasury authorised and empowered to issue and apply the same accordingly.
11 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 1:
Be it enacted, that there shall be issued for the service of the year 1830, &c.
11 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 1:
Be it enacted, that there shall and may be raised and applied towards making good the services of the year 1830, &c., 4,000,000 l., &c. &c.
11 Geo. 4, c. 63 (Appropriation Act):	4 & 5 Vict. c. 53 (Appropriation Act):
Be it enacted, that there shall be issued and applied towards raising the supply granted for the service of the year, &c., 1,500,000 l., &c.	Sect. 1. Be it enacted, that there may be issued and applied for making good the supply granted for the service of the year 1841, &c.

Appendix, No. 9.

Acts of 1830. Before the Dissolution.	Acts of 1841. Before the Dissolution.
Sect. 18. Certain specified sums voted for nine months only.	Sect. 19. Contains specified services provided for six months only; 1,634,791 l. for the Commissariat in Canada, Civil Contingencies, and Miscellaneous Services.
Sect. 20. Votes not to be applied for any purpose but that for which they were voted, &c.	Sect. 20. Votes not to be applied to any purpose but those for which they were voted.
1 Will. 4, c. 1, s 1:	5 Vict. c. 8, s. 1 (For Funding Exchequer Bills):
Be it enacted, that there shall be issued and applied towards making good the supplies granted for the service of the year 1830, 3,000,000 l., &c.; and that the Treasury be authorised to issue and apply the same accordingly.	Sect. 4. Subscribers allowed to pay money in lieu of Exchequer Bills. Sect. 21. The Treasury may apply all such sums to such services as shall have been granted in this Session of Parliament. Sect. 24. Stock may be created and sold, and the monies arising from such sales applied to such services as shall have been granted in this Session of Parliament.
1 Will. 4, c. 5 (Appropriation Act):	5 Vict. c. 11 (Appropriation Act):
Sect. 1. Be it enacted, that there shall and may be issued and applied towards making good the supply for the service of the year 1830, 1,850,000 l.; and that the Treasury be authorised to apply the same accordingly. Sect. 12. £. 3,253,882 to be applied to the supplies voted in the last Session.	Sect. 1. We, the Commons, &c., towards making good the supplies granted in this Session of Parliament, have resolved to grant, &c. The Treasury permitted to issue 10,636,350 l. in Exchequer Bills. Sect. 8. All monies raised by this Act and 5 Vict. c. 8, to be applied as hereinafter expressed. Schedule of Appropriation follows, including 24,896 l. towards making good the supplies granted in the last Session of Parliament.

Such are the enactments. I have altogether excluded, on both sides, the clauses authorising issues on votes of the House of Commons. These appear to me to be enabling clauses only, justifying issues to be made under votes of the House of Commons, which, if these clauses had not been enacted, could only have been made under grants of Parliament, or in other words, by Acts of the whole Legislature.

Your Lordships will observe, that in the Acts before the dissolution, both in 1830 and in 1840, the language is precisely the same: the enactment is, to provide for the service of the whole year: but in the Acts passed after the dissolution, the case is different, for, in the Acts of 1830, the words used refer to the service of the year 1830, while for these words are substituted, in 1841, the very different words for the service of the Session, or for the services granted during the Session.

As the words are different, so I am led to conclude the meaning must be different also, for your Lordships would deem it most unbecoming, most rash and disrespectful, if I were to assume that the Legislature did not know the meaning of its own words, and could not discriminate between the service of the Session and the service of the year.

On these grounds I venture, with great deference, to submit to your Lordships that the reasoning of your Lordships' Minute is insufficient to warrant the conclusion drawn from it by your Lordships.

I feel, my Lords, that I may appear to be guilty of a presumptuous reliance on my own opinion, and nothing but the stringent words of the Statute constituting my office would induce me to do so. That Statute (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 11,) is clear and precise, and leaves me no discretion. I dare not yield to your Lordships' authority, however inclined, in humble respect, to do so. I may be in error, and I can, in all sincerity, assure your Lordships that, if it can be so shown, on legal authority, by reference to the true interpretation, and not the implied intention of the Legislature, I shall at once and readily abandon the objection I have raised, and to which, with all humility, I still adhere.

Mistrusting my own fallible judgment, I have to request of your Lordships to submit the enclosed case, together with your Lordships' Minute and this letter, for the judgment of the law advisers of the Crown. By the opinion of those learned and eminent persons, given as it will be under a due sense of their responsibility to your Lordships, to Parliament, and to their country, I am quite willing to be governed, and I shall be more than gratified at finding myself in error, if I am thereby enabled to comply with the directions of your Lordships.

I have, &c.,

(signed) Monteagle.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Exchequer Bill Office, 4 November 1841.

May we beg your Lordship to inform us if the credit ordered by the Treasury to be placed at our disposal by their letter of 15th October has been acted upon, and if the sum of 10,000 l., the amount of that credit, has been placed to our account with the Bank of England. Paymasters of Exchequer Bills to Comptroller-general, 4 Nov. 1841.

This money will be required to-morrow.

We have, &c.
(signed) J. H. Latham,
E. H. Nevinson,

The Right Honourable Lord Monteagle,
Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

Comptroller-general's Office, Whitehall-yard,
4 November 1841.

Gentlemen,

In reply to your letter of this date, I have to inform you that the credit of 10,000 l. that was required by your application to the Treasury of the 15th October has not yet been placed to your account with the Bank. Comptroller-general to Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, 4 November 1841.

I remain, &c.,
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Paymasters of Exchequer Bills.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 10 November 1841.

In reply to your Lordship's letter of the 4th instant, I have it in command from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to transmit to you copy of their Lordships' Minute of the 5th inst., respecting their direction of an issue to be made by your Lordship from the funds of the Exchequer of 10,000 l. for the payment of principal of Exchequer Bills. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 10 November 1841.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

COPY of Treasury Minute, dated 5th November 1841.

Read, &c.

Although there are some parts of the argument contained in the letter of the Comptroller-general to which my Lords cannot assent, and which they would, under ordinary circumstances, feel disposed to controvert; yet, considering the inconvenience which would be sustained by the public service from any further delay in ascertaining how the money voted for the service of the year 1841 ought to be issued, my Lords deem it more advisable to abstain from any further controversy. Treasury Minute, 5 November 1841.

They are pleased, therefore, to direct the case drawn up by Lord Monteagle, and his Lordship's letter of the 4th instant, together with the Minute of this Board of the 27th ultimo, to be submitted to the Law Officers of the Crown, for their immediate consideration and opinion.

They have only thought it necessary to add to these documents the subjoined Comparative Statement of the Acts passed after the dissolution in 1830 and 1841, which appears to them to furnish a fuller statement of their contents than that enclosed in the Comptroller-general's letter.

Acts of 1830. After the Dissolution.	Acts of 1841. After the Dissolution.
1 Will. 4, c. 1.	5 Vict. c. 8.
Title. An Act to apply the Sum of 3,000,000 l. to the Service of the Year 1830.	Title. An Act for funding Exchequer Bills, and for making Provision for the Service of the Year 1841.
Sect. 1. Be it enacted, that there shall be issued and applied, towards making good the Supply granted to his Majesty for the service of the year 1830, 3,000,000 l., and that the Treasury be authorised to issue and apply the same accordingly.	Sect. 1. Funding Exchequer Bills.
Sect. 6. It shall be lawful to issue and apply the same from time to time to such services as shall then have been voted in the present Session.	Sect. 4. Subscribers allowed to pay money in lieu of Exchequer Bills.
	Sect. 21. It shall be lawful to issue and apply all such sums to such services as shall have been granted in this Session of Parliament.
	Sect. 24. Money arising from sale of stock to be applied to such services as shall have been granted in this Session.
1 Will 4, c. 5, Appropriation Act.	5 Vict. c. 11, Appropriation Act.
Title. An Act to apply the Sum of 1,850,000 l. to the Service of the Year 1830, and to appropriate the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament.	Title. An Act for raising, &c. for the Service of the Year 1841, and for appropriating the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament.

Appendix, No. 9.

Acts of 1830. After the Dissolution.	Acts of 1841. After the Dissolution.
Sect. 1. Towards making good the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament, Be it enacted, that there shall be issued and applied towards making good the Supply for the service of the year 1830, 1,850,000 l., and that the Treasury be authorised to issue and apply the same accordingly. Sect. 6. It shall be lawful to issue and apply the same from time to time to such services as shall then have been voted in this present Session.	Sect. 1. Towards raising the Supplies granted in this Session, have resolved to grant 10,626,350 l. Exchequer Bills. Sect. 3. It shall be lawful to issue and apply the same to such services as shall then have been voted in this present Session.
Sect. 12. £. 3,253,882 to be applied to the Supplies voted in the last Session.	Sect. 14. £. 24,896 to be applied to the Supplies granted in the last Session.
Sect. 9. All monies received under 1 Will. 4, c. 1, or this Act, to be applied as hereinafter expressed.	Sect. 8. All monies received under this Act, or 5 Vict. c. 1, to be applied as hereinafter expressed.
Sect. 15. That the aforesaid Aids and Supplies shall not be applied to any purpose other than those before mentioned, or those sanctioned by any Act of this Session.	Sect. 17. That the said Aids and Supplies shall not be applied to any purpose other than those directed to be satisfied thereout by any Act of this Session.

Transmit the case enclosed in the letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and all the papers, to the Solicitor, and desire that he will submit the same to the Attorney and Solicitor-general, for their immediate consideration and opinion.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, for his information.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 17 November 1841.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 17 November 1841.

I HAVE it in command from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to transmit to your Lordship herewith a copy of the opinion of the Attorney and Solicitor-general upon the questions submitted to them by their Lordships' directions, relative to the issues of monies from the Exchequer for the service of the present year, 1841, agreeably to the request contained in your Lordship's letter, dated the 4th instant; and I am to request that your Lordship will inform my Lords, with as little delay as possible, of the course that your Lordship intends to pursue, in consequence of the opinion given respecting the application of the Ways and Means granted for the service of the year 1841.

I am, &c.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. (signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

Opinion of Law Officers.

IT appears to us that the general scope and intention of the Acts of the first Session and second Session of this year (1841), was to provide for the service of the year; and that the Legislature could not have intended the distinction and separation (as insisted upon by the Comptroller), of the Supplies of the two Sessions accidentally occurring in the same year. The word "Session" has been used as importing "the Parliamentary year" (with which in general it is practically synonimous); and we entertain no doubt, referring to these and other Acts, that the intention and meaning of the Legislature, in consequence of this mistake, has not been conveyed by the language used.

But we think, as a question of law, that this mistake (however obvious) cannot be corrected, except by Parliament, and that the word "Session" must receive its true legal construction (viz. a particular sitting of Parliament, from its commencement to its close), and cannot be read as "Year."

(signed) Fred. Pollock.
W. W. Follett.

Temple, 15 November 1841.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 17 November 1841.

My Lords, Exchequer, 17 November 1841.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of this day, enclosing the opinion of the law officers of the Crown upon the Case and Supplementary Papers submitted to them, respecting the just construction of the several Acts of Parliament for defraying the charges of the public service (1841).

Your Lordships are pleased to require that I should state, with as little delay as possible, the course which I intend to pursue in consequence of the opinion given respecting the application of the Ways and Means granted in 1841.

The Crown lawyers consider that an obvious mistake has been made in the wording of the Statutes, but that it is one which cannot be corrected except by Act of Parliament, and that the word "Session" must receive its true legal construction, namely, a "particular sitting of Parliament, from its commencement to its close," and cannot be read "year."

Under

Under this opinion, I feel myself restrained from issuing the credit required by your Lordships' letter of the 15th October. Appendix, No. 9.

With respect to the further points which have been raised during this correspondence, I have to request your Lordships, in all humility, to procure me, for my further guidance, replies to the three queries submitted by me on the 4th instant, for the opinion of the law officers.

The opinion already given, whilst it is conclusive in respect to the illegality of issuing any Ways and Means, provided under the 5th Vict. c. 8, and 5 Vict. c. 11, for services voted in the preceding Parliament, only raises a strong analogy in respect to the Ways and Means placed at your Lordships' disposal by the 4 & 5 Vict. c. 4, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 5, as well as under the annual Sugar Act.

Unless subject to the consent and sanction of Parliament, I cannot but hold myself bound to govern my conduct by the legal interpretation given to these several statutes.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptrollor-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Treasury Chambers, 19 November 1841.

My Lord,

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 19 November 1841.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have had before them your Lordship's letter of yesterday's date, acknowledging the receipt of their Lordships' letter, enclosing the opinion of the law officers of the Crown upon the Case and Supplementary Papers submitted to them, respecting the just construction of the several Acts of the late and present Parliament, for defraying the charges of the public service, and stating that, under this opinion, your Lordship feels yourself restrained from issuing the credit of 10,000 l., required by the letter of this Board of the 15th October.

My Lords desire me to request that your Lordship will return that letter to the Treasury, in order that their Lordships may direct the issue in question to be made from a Ways and Means fund of the first Session of Parliament held in the present year.

My Lords desire me to acquaint your Lordship that the whole of the statement in your Lordship's paper, transmitted to the Treasury in your Lordship's letter of the 4th instant, as drawn up by your Lordship for the "opinion of the Crown lawyers relative to the construction of the Revenue Acts of the year 1841," and commencing with the words "a doubt has arisen," and ending with "provided for by the 5 Vict. c. 8 and c. 11," was submitted to the Attorney and Solicitor-general, with a request that they would advise "on the above-stated questions," and my Lords therefore consider that the opinion, as given by them, applies clearly to all that is contained in the three questions submitted to them by the desire of your Lordship.

I am, &c.
(signed) Tho. F. Fremantle.

To the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

Exchequer, 19 November 1841.

My Lords,

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 19 November 1841.

In compliance with the request of your Lordships, signified to me in your Secretary's letter of this day's date, I return herewith the letter of direction of the 15th October last for the credit of 10,000 l. to the Paymaster of Exchequer Bills, a copy of which I have retained for the use of this office.

I am, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Exchequer, 22 November 1841.

My Lords,

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 22 November 1841.

It is with infinite regret that I feel myself compelled to call the attention of your Lordships to a consequence resulting from the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, communicated to me on the 17th instant.

Under that opinion, the Ways and Means voted in the Session before the dissolution cannot be legally applied to provide for Services voted in the present Parliament.

It therefore follows, that there were not any Ways and Means applicable to the latter Services before the passing of the 5 Vict. c. 8, and the 5 Vict. c. 11. These Acts received the Royal Assent on the 7th day of October.

A series of Royal Orders under the sign manual, and countersigned by your Lordships, has been forwarded to me. These Royal Orders all bear date on the 1st October, being executed previously to the passing of the Acts by which Ways and Means were provided to defray the Services for which these Royal Orders were intended to provide.

But in reference to sect. 11 of the Act constituting the office of Comptroller of the Exchequer, it will appear that the period fixed by law for the execution of a Royal Order is, "whenever any sums of money shall have been granted by any Act of Parliament or Vote of the House of Commons, and Ways and Means shall likewise have been granted for satisfying and making good the same."

Your Lordships will, therefore, perceive that whilst the law provides that Ways and Means should first be granted before a Royal Order issues, in the present case the date of the Royal Order is unfortunately antecedent to the grant of Ways and Means. Thus the Royal Orders referred to are not without the provisions or authority of the 4 Will. 4, c. 15.

Appendix, No. 9.

Your Lordships will bear in mind that, anticipating what was likely to be the opinion of the law officers, I took the liberty of asking your Lordships' permission to reserve to myself the right of submitting this point for your Lordships' consideration, though I was unwilling to impede the public service by declining to issue the credits required by the Treasury.

Your Lordships will, I hope, permit me to assure you of the anxiety which I feel to concur with your Lordships in any arrangement which may remedy, with the least inconvenience or delay, the mistake which appears to me to have been committed.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Comptroller-general to Chancellor of Exchequer, 18 December 1841.

My Dear Sir, Exchequer, 18 December 1841.

I HAVE not yet received the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, the form of which you settled with me nearly a month ago. I have been carrying on the public service somewhat irregularly since, to avoid giving the Queen and the Treasury the trouble of issuing an entire series of amended Warrants; but will you be so good as to let me have the Order and Warrant without delay, that I may have a sufficient authority for the course I have taken.

Yours, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 28 December 1841.

My Lords, Exchequer, 28 December 1841.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants of the 27th instant, communicating to me the will and pleasure of the Crown that the 106 Royal Orders and Warrants therein named, and all bearing date the 1st October 1841, shall be taken, received and acted upon as if they had been dated subsequently to the passing of the Ways and Means Acts of the last Session.

Considering this to have the same legal effect as if the whole of these Royal Orders and Warrants had been recalled, corrected and re-acknowledged, I feel no further difficulty with respect to the legality of giving effect to your Lordships' instructions.

A clerical error has been inadvertently committed in the schedules, the grant for the Improvement of the Shannon being recited as for 1,459*l.*, whereas it should be for 1,459*l.* 10*s.*; but the words of description are sufficient to render it unnecessary to trouble your Lordships' for any amendment of this mistake.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Comptroller-general's Minute, 28 December 1841.

28 December 1841.

THE Comptroller-general has before him Her Majesty's Royal Order, bearing date the 27th day of December in the present year, reciting that various Royal Orders had been given on the 1st October 1841, being prior to the day of the passing of the Acts in the last Session of Parliament for Funding Exchequer Bills, and for appropriating the Supplies granted in the last Session, and declaring it to be Her Majesty's Royal will and pleasure that the said Royal Orders of the 1st October, and the directions contained therein, shall be taken, received and acted upon as if all such Royal Orders had been dated subsequently to the date of the passing of these Acts.

The Comptroller-general proceeds to examine the Treasury Warrants bearing the same date, and to the like effect.

The objections taken by the Comptroller-general to the Royal Orders and Warrants of the 1st of October having been, that they had been executed and issued before any provision of Ways and Means had been made by Parliament for the services voted in the last Session, and were contrary to sect. 11, 4 Will. 4, c. 15, the statute regulating the proceedings of the Exchequer, by which it is provided, that whenever any sums shall have been granted by Act of Parliament or Vote of the House of Commons, and Ways and Means shall likewise have been granted for satisfying and making good the same, it shall be lawful for his Majesty, by Royal Order under sign manual, countersigned by the Lords of the Treasury, to authorise and require the Comptroller-general to issue credits accordingly.

The Royal Orders of the 1st October having been issued before the grant of any Ways and Means applicable to the service, appeared to the Comptroller-general inconsistent with the Act, and therefore irregular and invalid. By the instruments now under consideration, Her Majesty is pleased to direct all such Royal Orders to be received and acted upon as if they had been executed after the grant of Ways and Means by Parliament. The Treasury Warrant is to the same effect.

The Comptroller-general considers this to amount, practically, to a recall for correction and re-acknowledgment of the 106 informal Royal Orders, and corresponding number of Treasury Warrants, signed on the 1st October, and a sufficient authority and justification to him for the course, which under the peculiar circumstances of the case, he has taken.

Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

VICTORIA R.

Appendix, No. 9.

ROYAL ORDER.

Correcting Royal Order, 27 December 1841.

WHEREAS by various Royal Orders, as hereinafter set forth, given by us, bearing date on the 1st day of October 1841, being prior to the day of the passing of the Acts in the last Session of Parliament, intituled, "An Act for funding Exchequer Bills, and for making Provision for the Service of the year 1841," and another Act, intituled, "An Act for raising the Sum of 10,626,350 l. by Exchequer Bills, for the Service of the year 1841, and for appropriating the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament," We authorised credits to be given by you for certain services voted in the last Session of Parliament, at such times and in such proportions, and out of such funds as should be specified in the warrants and directions to be given by the Commissioners of our Treasury: These are to declare it to be our Royal will and pleasure, that the said Royal Orders, and the directions contained therein, shall be taken, received and acted upon in the same manner as if all such Royal Orders had been dated subsequently to the day of the passing of the said Acts.

DATE OF ROYAL ORDER.	SERVICES.	AMOUNT. £.	s.	d.
1 October 1841	Civil Contingencies	60,000	–	–
"	Works and Repairs of Public Buildings	51,654	10	–
"	Kingstown Harbour	5,000	–	–
"	Holyhead Roads, Harbour, &c.	2,680	10	–
"	Works at the British Museum	21,202	–	–
"	Temporary Accommodation, Houses of Parliament	4,184	10	–
"	New Houses of Parliament	15,406	–	–
"	Model Prison	15,000	–	–
"	General Prison at Perth	2,500	–	–
"	Museum of Economic Geology	844	10	–
"	Erecting a Hall at Edinburgh	2,500	–	–
"	Salaries and Expenses of both Houses of Parliament	29,000	–	–
"	Ditto, Treasury	26,300	–	–
"	Salaries and Expenses of the Home Department	10,750	–	–
"	Ditto - Foreign - ditto	44,000	–	–
"	Ditto - Colonial - ditto	10,000	–	–
"	Ditto - Privy Council Office	15,750	–	–
"	Salary of the Lord Privy Seal	1,000	–	–
"	Office of Paymaster-general	17,473	10	–
"	Salaries and Expenses of the Exchequer	8,785	–	–
"	Insolvent Debtors' Court	6,679	–	–
"	Penitentiary, Milbank	9,722	–	–
"	Parkhurst Prison, Isle of Wight	3,092	10	–
"	Salaries, &c., State Paper Office	1,141	–	–
"	Ecclesiastical Commissioners	1,500	–	–
"	Commissioners, Poor Laws	29,077	10	–
"	" Slave Trade	8,250	–	–
"	Consuls Abroad	56,796	–	–
"	Inspectors of Factories	4,500	–	–
"	" Prisons	3,100	–	–
"	Expenditure of the Mint	15,700	–	–
"	Commission on Employment of Children in Mines	2,500	–	–
"	Superannuations	41,000	–	–
"	Toulonese and Corsican Emigrants	3,250	–	–
"	National Vaccine Institution	925	–	–
"	Maintenance of Criminal Lunatics	1,695	–	–
"	Protestant Dissenting Ministers	1,950	–	–
"	Foreign and other Secret Service	19,600	–	–
"	Printing and Stationery for the Public Departments	103,747	–	–
"	Law Charges	14,000	–	–
"	Convicts at Home and Bermuda	39,440	–	–
"	Ditto Abroad	132,500	–	–
"	Captured Negroes, Support of	12,500	–	–
"	Public Record Office	5,169	–	–
"	Public Education	15,000	–	–
"	University of London	2,660	–	–
"	School of Design	795	–	–
"	Revising Barristers	14,500	–	–
"	Sheriffs' Expenses, &c.	6,150	–	–
"	County Rates (Charges)	73,500	–	–
"	Polish Refugees	6,000	–	–
"	Manuscripts, &c., British Museum	3,540	–	–

(continued)..

Appendix, No. 9.

DATE OF ROYAL ORDER.	SERVICES.	AMOUNT. £.	s.	d.
1 October 1841	Spanish Claims	56,855	–	–
"	Steam Communication to India	25,000	–	–
"	Civil Establishment, Bahamas	2,930	–	–
"	" Bermudas	2,024	10	–
"	" Prince Edward's Island	1,535	–	–
"	Settlements, Western Australia	3,549	10	–
"	Ecclesiastical Establishment, British North America	5,795	–	–
"	Settlements, Western Coast of Africa	5,440	–	–
"	Indian Department, Canada	9,447	10	–
"	Governors, West Indies	9,333	10	–
"	Civil Establishment, Heligoland	511	10	–
"	Stipendiary Justices, West Indies	29,350	–	–
"	Education of Negroes	15,000	–	–
"	Colonial Land and Emigration Board	3,326	–	–
"	Civil Establishment, St. Helena	5,750	–	–
"	Establishment at Sable Island, Nova Scotia	200	–	–
"	Expedition to the Niger	19,987	–	–
"	Settlement of New Zealand	3,000	–	–
"	Port Essington	2,211	10	–
"	Civil Establishment at the Falkland Islands	1,000	–	–
"	Public Walks	5,000	–	–
"	Schools of Design in Provincial Towns	5,000	–	–
"	Pictures for the National Gallery	1,750	–	–
"	Lighthouses in Jamaica and Bermuda	2,250	–	–
"	Census of the Population of Ireland	10,000	–	–
"	Miscellaneous Charges, Scotland	37,150	–	–
"	Services in Canada	54,000	–	–
"	Education in Ireland	25,000	–	–
"	Foundling Hospital in Dublin	4,793	–	–
"	House of Industry in Dublin	7,846	10	–
"	Female Orphan House, Circular Road, Dublin	500	–	–
"	Westmoreland Lock Hospital	1,250	–	–
"	Lying-in Hospital, Dublin	500	–	–
"	Dr. Stevens' Hospital, Dublin	750	–	–
"	Fever Hospital	1,900	–	–
"	Hospital for Incurables	250	–	–
"	Roman Catholic College	4,464	–	–
"	Royal Irish Academy	150	–	–
"	Hibernian Academy	150	–	–
"	Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, Ireland	350	–	–
"	Royal Belfast Academical Institution	975	–	–
"	Public Buildings, Ireland	8,250	–	–
"	Department of Chief Secretary to Lord Lieutenant, Ireland	12,542	10	–
"	Salaries of Lord Lieutenant's Household	6,232	–	–
"	Paymaster of Civil Services	2,369	10	–
"	Printing Proclamations and Statutes	2,075	–	–
"	Dissenting Ministers	17,453	10	–
"	Criminal Prosecutions	51,000	–	–
"	Police, Dublin	19,050	–	–
"	Board of Public Works	1,392	–	–
"	Townland Survey of Ireland	3,500	–	–
"	Improvement of the River Shannon	1,459	10	–
"	Refuge for the Destitute	1,500	–	–
"	Salaries of Professors of Oxford and Cambridge	1,003	–	–

Given at our Court at Buckingham Palace this 27th day of December 1841.

By Her Majesty's Command,

Henry Goulburn.
Alexander Pringle.
J. Milnes Gaskell.

Authority respecting various Royal Orders, dated 1 October 1841.

(No. 8.) Appendix, No. 9.

Excessive Issue for Public Works, Ireland.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 November 1841.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your Lordships' letter of direction of the 10th instant, desiring me to authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland to transfer from the general account of the Exchequer to the account of the Commissioners of Public Works, the sum of 4,964 l. 9 s. 6 d. in full of the Treasury Warrant (22,159 $\frac{5}{11}$) for a similar sum. Your Lordships will find, on reference to the Act 1 Vict. c. 21, to which I am referred, that authority is given for the issue of 50,000 l. for the purposes contemplated by Parliament. But by the account enclosed, your Lordships will perceive that 47,786 l. 15 s. 7 d. has already been issued under this statute, and the amount now required by your Lordships' Warrant would exceed the sum legally issuable by 2,751 l. 5 s. 1 d. The warrant and letter are, therefore, contrary to law, and cannot be carried into effect. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 Nov. 1841.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, &c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 13 November 1841.

IN reply to your Lordship's letter of the 11th instant relative to the amount required to be transferred by Treasury Warrant to the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, I have it in command from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to request you will return to this Board the letter of direction of the 10th instant, mentioned in your letter; and that you will transmit to my Lords an account of the issues made to the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, in part of the sum of 50,000 l. authorized by the 62d section of the Act of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 13 Nov. 1841.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

My Lords, Exchequer, 15 November 1841.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' Secretary's letter of the 13th November, requesting me to return the letter of direction of the 10th of November, directing a transfer of 4,964 l. 9 s. 6 d. to the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, under authority of your Lordship's warrant, referred to in the margin. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 15 Nov. 1841.

22,159 $\frac{5}{11}$.

I enclose the letter in original, as your Lordships desire, having retained a copy in this office. Your Lordships will perceive the extreme inconvenience that will arise to the public service, if warrants, letters, or other official instruments upon which official proceedings are taken, should subsequently be withdrawn, as by this practice the antecedent steps taken may, so far as the records of this department are concerned, be made obscure or unintelligible.

Your Lordships are also pleased to request that I should furnish you with an account of the issues made to the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, for grants in part of the sum of 50,000 l., authorised by the 62d section of the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33. I am unable to comply with your Lordships' desire, as all books, accounts and papers relating to the Exchequer, and of a date anterior to 1834, have been deposited with the Master of the Rolls, by your Lordship's orders.

Your Lordships will, however, perceive, from the accounts appended to the Reports of the Commissioners of Public Works, and laid before Parliament, that from these documents it would appear that the 50,000 l. provided by the Act 1 & 2 Will. 4, has long since been expended.

But your Lordship's warrant, referred to, rests not upon the 1 & 2 Will. 4, but on the 1 Vict. c. 21, under which the issues appear to have been 47,786 l. 15 s. 7 d., making, with the new transfer ordered, a total issue exceeding by 2,751 l. 5 s. 1 d., the grant authorised by Parliament.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

(No. 9.)

£. 25,050 over-due Outstanding Exchequer Bills, &c.

My Lords, Exchequer, 21 December 1841.

IN reference to the weekly account of Exchequer Bills yesterday transmitted to your Lordships, I feel it my duty to call your Lordships' special attention to the first entry which it includes. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 21 Dec. 1841.

"Various descriptions of bills advertised to be paid off, the interest whereon has ceased, "but which are still outstanding, 47,650 l."

Appendix, No. 9.

Having had occasion in consequence of the late inquiry to call on the Paymasters for a detailed and particular account of all Exchequer Bills outstanding, I find from their reply that this sum includes a sum of 25,050 l., stated to be an amount agreed to about the year 1820, to reconcile accounts with Treasury books and Parliamentary papers. I have no cognizance of the transactions here described, nor any means of ascertaining what took place. But as it is clear that a considerable sum returned as the amount of Exchequer Bills outstanding does not consist of Exchequer Bills at all, but is, in fact, a fictitious entry for the reconciling of accounts which did not agree, I submit the matter to your Lordships' superior wisdom, in order that such directions may be given thereon, and such inquiries made, as the circumstances may seem to demand. Your Lordships are aware that the form of account to which I have adverted has existed from the first establishment of this office, and I am unwilling to make any alteration in its form till I receive your Lordships' direction; but in the meanwhile, in order to prevent an account which passes through this office from being the basis of that which is inaccurate and delusive, I shall for the future subjoin to my weekly certificate a note of explanation.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

To the Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury.

Comptroller-general to Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, 27 Dec. 1841.

Gentlemen, Exchequer, 27 December 1841.

Having had occasion to consult the papers belonging to the late Auditor's office, which have been removed from my custody to the Rolls, I have found an account furnished by you to Lord Grenville, bearing date the 22d October 1833, and signed H. Jadis and J. H. Latham.

The document in question is an account of all Exchequer Bills issued pursuant to Acts of Parliament passed prior to the year 1832, but which bills have not yet been presented for payment. The account is as follows:—

	£.			£.
Supply, 1825:	10,500,000,	6 Geo. 4, c. 70,	2/1,000 - - - 6,148/9	2,000
„ 1828:	12,000,000,	9 Geo. 4, c. 2,	2/100 - - - 2,516/7	200
„ „	16,046,800,	9 Geo. 4, c. 89,	1/1,000 - - - 3,473	1,000
„ 1829:	12,000,000,	10 Geo. 4, c. 4,	2/100 - - 1,918, 2,756	200
„ „	13,438,800,	10 Geo. 4, c. 60,	1/500 - - 2,629	500
„ 1830:	13,607,600,	1 Will. 4, c. 62,	4/100 - 1,640, 3,142/4/5	400
„ 1831:	12,000,000,	1 Will. 4, s. 2, c. 11,	2/200 - - 10, 501	400
			1/100 - - - 2,016	100
„ „	13,616,400,	„ „ c. 14,	1/500 - - - 3,090	500
			1/200 - - - 789	200
			10/100 - 568, 1,072/5
			1,077 1,509 4,095	1,000
			4,187, 5,188
			£.	6,500

You will observe that by this account the only bills of 1825, stated on the authority of your office to be outstanding in 1833, were two bills for 1,000 l. each; whereas in the month of November last, a bill for 100 l., No. 1,882, dated 25th June 1825, has been presented for payment, and paid off by you. There must consequently have been an error somewhere in respect to this bill.

You will also observe that in the foregoing account there are no bills returned as outstanding prior to 1825, whereas in the account furnished from your office, dated 6th December 1841, bills are returned as outstanding issued in the years 1803, 1807, 1810, 1813, 1814, 1815, 1816, 1817, 1818, 1820, 1821, 1822, 1823 and 1824. This discrepancy proves an error in the one account or the other, which it will be desirable to account for, or to reconcile, otherwise the weekly Exchequer Bill Account furnished to the Treasury will be inaccurate.

In addition to the 5,000 l. bills noted in the margin, there is a further sum of 5,700 l. to be added, being the bills outstanding of which the particulars are not known. £. 30,750 after deducting 25,050 l., the amount which you inform me was agreed on by the Treasury to reconcile accounts with Treasury books and Parliamentary papers. Hence it would seem that there is a discrepancy between your account of 22d October 1832 and of 6th December 1841, of not less than 10,700 l. The sum of 25,050 l. does not appear to me to be one which ought to be returned as of outstanding Exchequer Bills, and I have called the attention of the Treasury to the subject.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Paymasters of Exchequer Bills.

Appendix, No. 9.

My Lord, Exchequer Bill Office, 29 December 1841.

Paymasters of Exchequer Bills to Comptroller-general, 29 Dec. 1841.

Your Lordship's respected letter of the 27th December has had our attention, and we will proceed to explain to you as far as we may be able the discrepancy existing between the account furnished by this department to Lord Grenville, dated 22 October 1833, and that we had the honour to send to your Lordship, dated 6 December 1841.

That the document in question purports to be "An Account of all Exchequer Bills," &c., &c., is true, but such account is evidently improperly headed, and the error arose from such heading being originally used, and subsequently adopted, when similar accounts, or, more properly speaking, continuations of such accounts, were called for. The account immediately in question was of all Exchequer Bills issued prior to 1832, and were then (22 October 1833) outstanding; but in point of fact it was a continuation of a similar account, furnished 15 February 1828, of all such bills issued prior to 1825. With reference to the fact of the bill for 100 l., No. 1,882, 25 June 1825, not being included in this statement of bills outstanding that were issued prior to 1833, we are satisfied such omission was attributable to the negligence of the party who made out the account, for our register represented such bill as outstanding until it was paid off in November last. The account of outstanding bills dated 15 February 1828, is the preceding one to that bearing date the 22d October 1833, to which we beg to refer your Lordship, in further explanation of the appearance in our account dated 6 December 1841 of outstanding bills, from the year 1803 to 1824, being 30 bills, value 5,000 l. But with regard to the particulars of the bills that constitute the further sum of 5,700 l., we regret we are unable to discover them.

We have, &c.
(signed) Edward H. Nevinson.
J. H. Latham.

The Right Hon. Lord Monteagle,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 6 January 1842.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 6 January 1842.

With reference to your Lordship's letter of the 22d ultimo, I am commanded by my Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to inform your Lordship that the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills have been directed to exclude from their account of over-due bills the Exchequer Bills for 25,050 l. therein referred to, there appearing no reason for their being returned as over-due, after Parliament had in 1823 made provision for the payment of them, which had been inadvertently made by anticipation in 1822.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-General
of Her Majesty's Exchequer,
&c. &c.

My Lords, Exchequer, 23 February 1842.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 23 February 1842.

I fear I may not be enabled, as fully as I could wish, to assist your Lordships in your inquiries respecting outstanding Exchequer Bills, as requested by your Lordships' letter of the 29th ultimo. The whole of these accounts are in so very confused a state as returned to Parliament and to this office, and the explanations given since I brought the matter under your Lordships' notice are so conflicting, that I feel myself wholly at a loss to understand them.

To the Paymasters' account of the 6th of December 1841, showing 47,650 l. returned as of outstanding Exchequer Bills, the following note is added:

"Various Bills, of which the particulars are not known, including a sum of 25,050 l.
"amount agreed upon, about the year 1820, to reconcile accounts with the Treasury books
"and Parliamentary Papers, 30,750 l."

In your Lordships' letter of the 6th January I am informed that "the Paymasters have "been directed to exclude from their account of over-due bills the Exchequer Bills therein "referred to, there appearing no reason for their being returned as over-due after Parliament, "in 1823, had made provision for the payment of them, which had been inadvertently made "by anticipation in 1822."

Your Lordships will perceive that these two statements seem difficult to reconcile, and similar difficulties occur in respect to other parts of the account.

But both accounts are alike irreconcileable with an account presented to Parliament on the 17th February 1838, certified by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, and their accountant, a copy of which is as follows:

Appendix, No. 9.

"ACCOUNT of all Exchequer Bills now Outstanding and not claimed, the Interest on which "has ceased, showing the Amount of Principal of such Bills of each year's Issue not "claimed."

Parl. Papers. 352 1828.

	£.
Prior to the year 1816	32,450
Supplies, anno 1816	800
Ditto - - 1817	200
Ditto - - 1818	500
Ditto - - 1820	300
Ditto - - 1821, and Public Works	1,200
Ditto - - 1822	500
Ditto - - 1823	500
Ditto - - 1824	300
Ditto - - 1825	100
Ditto - - 1828	1,200
Ditto - - 1829	100
Ditto - - 1830	100
Ditto - - 1834, and Public Works	1,100
Ditto - - 1835	700
Ditto - - 1836	50,800
TOTAL over-due Bills outstanding 5th January 1838	£.90,850

If this account is not altogether illusory, I cannot comprehend how it is possible that 25,050 l. can have been "an amount agreed upon, about the year 1820, to reconcile "accounts with Treasury books and Parliamentary Papers," as stated by the Paymasters, or how "Parliament" (in 1823) "had made provision for the payment of these bills by an- "ticipation in 1822."

But if the account given by the Paymasters on the 6th December 1841 is correct, this sum of 25,050 l. does not properly represent outstanding Exchequer Bills, but is a conventional and imaginary sum agreed on for an adjustment and reconcilement of accounts.

But the first entry in the account of the Paymasters of 5th January 1838 is equally extraordinary and unintelligible. By that entry, it is stated that there were the Exchequer Bills issued prior to the year 1816 outstanding, and not claimed, and on which the interest had ceased, to the value of 32,450 l. Now this appears to be wholly contradicted by other documents.

By a letter addressed to the Chief Clerk of the Auditor, 3d August 1807, by the Paymasters, it is certified "that all Exchequer Bills prior to 1794 have been cancelled and "paid off, and that all counterfoils antecedent to 1794 might therefore be destroyed." In the year 1808 (12 December) the Paymasters gave to the Exchequer a further certificate, that all the Exchequer Bills dated prior to 1803 had been cancelled and made void, except eight for 100 l. each, of which the numbers and denominations are given.

None of these are dated prior to 1794, and thus the account of the 3d August 1807 is confirmed by the similar account of the 12th December 1808.

By a similar certificate signed by the Paymasters and their accountant, on the 25th March 1815, all bills issued prior to 1813 were declared to be cancelled, with the exception of 37, of the value of 14,200 l., excluding, however, from this account two issues in 1808 of three millions each, which appear to have probably been bills taken by the Bank. This account extends from 1806 to 1812 inclusive. A similar account is returned on 12th July 1819, comprehending the years from 1807 to 1815; it exhibits Exchequer Bills outstanding prior to 1816, as 8,100 l. only, excluding one of the issues of 3,000,000 l. made in 1808, to which I have already alluded. If I am correct in this recapitulation, the account rendered by the Paymasters to the Exchequer on the 12th July 1819 would represent no more than 8,100 l. as due prior to 1816, whilst in the account laid before Parliament on the 5th January 1838, the amount due prior to 1816 is stated as no less than 32,450 l. That the former account is in all probability correct, would appear, because in the Paymaster's certificate, dated on the 15th February 1828, and enclosed to your Lordships in Lord Grenville's letter of the same date, it is shown that at that period there was not one single bill outstanding prior to 1816, and that the whole amount of outstanding bills from 1816 to 1825 was but 24,600 l. When in 1828 both Lord Grenville and the Paymasters agree that not one single Exchequer Bill was outstanding prior to 1816, I am totally at a loss to account how a sum of 32,450 l. can appear as outstanding prior to 1816, and be returned as such to Parliament by the Paymasters in 1838. Nor are these difficulties lessened by the letter from the the Paymasters of the 24th January 1842, enclosed in your Lordships' communication of the 29th ult. The Paymasters state that on the 5th January 1823 there were first returned as outstanding advertised Exchequer Bills issued prior to 1816, 10,800 l., and that this sum was reduced to 7,400 l. on the 10th October 1830. Now both these statements are contradicted by the evidence of Lord Grenville and of the Paymasters in 1828, in which it is expressly set forth that no bills whatsoever were due or outstanding prior to 1816; and they are contradicted also by the Paymasters' return to Parliament in 1838, setting forth 32,150 l. of these bills as then outstanding. It will be for the Paymasters to reconcile these discrepancies, which have mainly arisen since 1828, the date of Lord Grenville's correspondence, his Lordship's letter and the Paymaster's certificate of that date, negativing conclusively the existence, at that period, of any bills prior to 1816. Your Lordships will observe from the two Parliamentary accounts, copies of which are enclosed, that the Paymasters have returned in 1838 and in 1840 the amount of Exchequer Bills outstanding from year to year. I presume they must be enabled to refer to the documents from which these accounts, as well as the Annual Finance Accounts, were compiled, and to give your Lordships information more satisfactory than I can offer in obedience to your Lordships' commands. In reference to the sum of 5,700 l., respecting which the Paymasters state that they can give no explanation whatever if the documents to which I have so frequently referred, can be relied on, no such amount of outstanding Exchequer Bills exists; but whether this sum or the sum of 25,050 l. can be struck out of the public accounts on this evidence, and whether correction of some sort or another should not be made in the accounts already presented to Parliament, I leave it to your Lordships' wisdom to determine. Appendix, No. 9.

* * * * * *

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Exchequer Bill Office, 11 April 1842.

Sir,

In our letter to you of the 8th ult. respecting certain discrepancies in the accounts of outstanding Exchequer Bills pointed out by the Comptroller-general, we engaged to furnish such explanation as the books of our office might afford as soon as our accountant was disengaged from the pressure of the payment then in progress. The Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, 11 April 1842. (Enclosed in Treasury Letter of 28 April 1842.)

We now forward to you the best explanation he is able to give in a matter of such long standing, and part of which, as we have mentioned in former communications to you, was an arrangement made at the Treasury by one of the Secretaries at that period. We regret it is not altogether more satisfactory, but the statement of the Comptroller-general would not have so materially added to the mystery had he therein stated, as had been explained to him on the 29th December 1841, that the various certificates sent from this office to his were always considered as being in continuation of each other.

We have, &c.
(signed) J. H. Nevinson.
E. H. Latham.

Copy. £. 25,050. A.

By Treasury letter dated the 6th January 1842, this sum 25,050 l. was directed to be discontinued in the account of Exchequer Bills outstanding and over-due.

A reference to this sum will be useful in explaining (by deduction or addition) almost every discrepancy.

B.

Paragraph.	The 32,450 l. consists of bills prior to 1816 - -	£. 7,400
	Add - - - - - - - - -	25,050
	Thus - - - - -	£. 32,450

The sum 25,050 l. stood in the books of this office without explanation when this return was made to Parliament in 1838, and being unknown, was assumed to be Exchequer Bills dated prior to 1816, the first item in the account, and was added thereto accordingly. It would have been more correctly stated if an explanation had accompanied it, as thus:

Bills prior to 1816 - - - - - - - - -	£. 7,400
Unknown, assumed to be prior to 1816 - - - - -	25,050
	£. 32,450

Appendix, No. 9.

C.

The several certificates referred to in this and following paragraphs were mere memoranda, the sole object and intention of them being to preserve from destruction the counterfoils of the bills therein named of the grants therein named, in addition to those desired to be preserved in previous memoranda or certificates. Nearly every paper commences with the supply of the year, subsequent to the last supply of the previous paper, as follows:—

Certificates of—

10 December 1808	Supplies	1794 —— to 1804
20 March 1815		1806 —— to 1812
12 July 1819		1807 —— to 1815
28 February 1828		1816 —— to 1825
22 October 1833		1825 —— to 1831

The wording of these certificates was inaccurate in expressing only the bills represented in the annexed memorandum, without reference to those included in previous similar returns.

D.

The sum 7,400*l.*, therein alluded to, was in addition to 25,050 l.; making, as per return to Parliament,

	£.7,400
	25,050
	£.32,450

E.

With reference to the sum of 5,700*l.*, the particulars of which are not known, its removal from the account should be with the understanding that upon any Exchequer Bills, dated prior to 1816, and not included and particularised in the account (1,700 l.) given in the accompanying statement, being presented for payment, application shall be made to the Treasury previous to its discharge.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 3 May 1842.

My Lords, Exchequer, 3 May 1842.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 28th April, transmitting for my observation a copy of the Paymasters' of Exchequer Bills letter, dated the 11th ultimo.

I can only refer your Lordships to my former correspondence on this most obscure and perplexing subject, and more particularly to my letter of the 23d February 1842, to which the letter from the Paymasters purports to be a reply. I cannot consider the present explanation, either as it respects the sum of 25,050 l. or the other sums, as in any degree satisfactory, or as clearing up the discrepancies to which I have called your Lordships' attention.

I cannot adopt the suppositions of the Paymasters, which seem to me to deprive all previous returns made to this office, and to your Lordships, and to Parliament, of all authenticity.

I have discharged my duty in bringing the question before the Treasury. I cannot consider the papers on which your Lordships ask for my observation as in any degree satisfactory. My own office does not furnish me with the means of rendering your Lordships any further assistance; but it may not be unlikely that, by reference to the Auditors of Public Accounts, to whom the accounts of the Paymasters are sent annually, some of the difficulties of the case may be made intelligible, if they be not wholly removed.

Such is the course which, in obedience to your Lordships' desire, I venture to recommend.

The Lords of the Treasury, &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 9.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 5 July 1842.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 5 July 1842.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit to your Lordship herewith a copy of a report of the Commissioners of Audit, dated 10th ultimo, upon the subject of the discrepancies in the statements made by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills as to the amount and number of Exchequer Bills overdue and outstanding; and I have to request you will favour my Lords with your opinion as to the expediency of adopting the course recommended by the Commissioners of Audit.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

(8,900/42.)

Commissioners of Audit to Treasury, 10 June 1842.

My Lords, Audit Office, 10 June 1842.

In obedience to your Lordships' order of reference of 6th ultimo, on a letter from Lord Monteagle, Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, accompanied by a correspondence between your Lordships, the Comptroller-general and the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, together with statements of accounts (all of which are herewith returned) upon the subject of certain discrepancies in the statements which had been at different times made by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills as to the number and amount of Exchequer Bills considered by that department to be overdue and outstanding.

We have the honour to report that the examination of the Exchequer Bill Account in this office has been restricted to the ascertaining of the correctness of the receipt and expenditure of the several sums passing through the hands of the accountants; that the respective items have been charged and allowed, under due and sufficient authority; and that for every allowance a satisfactory voucher, or cancelled bill, has been delivered in support of the credit claimed; whereas the discrepancies which it is your Lordships' object to have explained, relate to the precise number of bills unpaid at different periods; a subject which has never formed part of the examination in this office; they must, however, we apprehend, have been caused by a defective system formerly in the arrangements in the department of the Paymasters, but which we have reason to believe is now conducted with regularity and accuracy.

As the accounts of this office did not afford us any means of explaining those discrepancies, we requested the attendance of Mr. Wood, the Accountant of the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, with a view to obtain from him, personally, such information upon certain of the statements and accounts bearing on these transactions, which, in our opinion, required a more specific explanation than was given by the documents themselves; and we proceed to describe what we consider to be the general nature of the transactions in question, in so far as their complexity will admit of, and at a period so long after that at which the commencement of these irregularities seem to have occurred.

As the basis of our statement, we take the Paymaster's account, dated 6th of December 1841, wherein the sum of 47,650*l.* is returned as the amount of overdue and then outstanding Exchequer Bills, the component parts of which they describe, as follows, viz.:

	£.	s.	d.
Amount outstanding, of which the particulars can be given, including the 1,700*l.*, previous to 1816	15,900	–	–
Struck out by Treasury authority, dated 6th January 1842	25,050	–	–
Amount outstanding prior to the year 1816, of which the particulars are not known	5,700	–	–
Cancelled at the Exchequer in the year 1818, a Bill originally issued for Public Works	1,000	–	–
	£. 47,650	–	–

The 1st and 4th items do not call for any observation from us, the same being supported by the records and registry, and verified by regular entries in the books of the Paymaster's Office, as to the correctness of which no doubt would appear to exist.

The second item of 25,050*l.* having already been withdrawn from the list of overdue and outstanding bills, in pursuance of your Lordships' directions to that effect conveyed to the paymasters by Mr. Trevelyan's letter of 6th January last, in like manner does not require any notice from us with a view to any steps to be taken thereon; we have, however, endeavoured to gain some insight into the origin of this sum having been returned as outstanding, and we regret to say that we have been unable to afford any further explanation.

We are informed that at the time of Mr. Wood's appointment to the office of Accountant in the Paymaster's establishment, on the death of his predecessor in the year 1827, he found the amount of bills returned as outstanding, and in the first instance he supposed it to be a further amount of old bills really outstanding, and returned the same accordingly; but that he afterwards ascertained that this sum had been erroneously considered as still outstanding, and that the error had arisen from the paying off in the month of December 1822, of certain bills bills of about that amount which had been issued in the month of January of the same year for church building and for the employment of the poor, for the paying off of which no Vote of Parliament had been obtained, so that the payment must have been made from the funds voted and applicable to other services of the year 1822, and that with a view to re-obtain this amount in the accounts from Parliament, the bills in question thus paid were returned as still outstanding and unpaid, when they had, in fact, been paid; and this sum of 25,050*l.* was accordingly included in the Estimates and voted, in addition to the amount required for the following year (1823), and that this arrangement had been adopted, with the concurrence of Mr. Hill, at that time one of the secretaries to the Treasury, for the purpose of adjusting the ways and means; and the return of this sum as outstanding seems to have been continued afterwards in error.

Appendix, No. 9.

We have referred to our audited accounts for the years alluded to, for the purpose of ascertaining, if possible, whether they confirmed this supposed cause of the irregularity, but we only find that in the year 1822 the sum of 250,050*l.* in Exchequer Bills was paid off (out of a larger sum voted) from bills issued for poor employment, and that 58,050*l.* was also paid off from bills issued for church building; such bills for that joint amount having been cancelled and delivered up; but we cannot identify any bill of those which are supposed to have made up this sum of 25,050*l.*, although they may have formed a portion of the two larger sums just specified as having been paid for poor and for church building, but there is nothing to connect this payment of 25,050*l.*, with the general payments under those heads of service.

The third item, 5,700 l., is stated to have been composed of bills issued previously to the year 1816, and which sum the Paymasters in their letter to your Lordships, of 24th January 1842, recommend to be withdrawn from the list of overdue and outstanding bills.

In this case also we are unable to afford any explanation: this sum is presumed to have been the amount of Supply Bills outstanding, but we can neither trace the particular service for which they were issued, or the number, value or date of any one bill. The Paymasters in their letter to your Lordships above referred to, state that on the 5th January 1823 these bills (together with others since brought in and paid) were first returned as outstanding, and as having been issued prior to 1816, and that after a diligent search in their office, in which up to the year 1805, the records were but imperfectly kept, they cannot find any means by which to afford your Lordships a satisfactory explanation of this transaction.

Under these circumstances, although it is perhaps, just possible that some one of these bills, if really outstanding, may be presented for payment hereafter, as there are no clear records in the department to show that they really are outstanding or any particulars respecting them, we concur in opinion with the Paymasters that it would be advisable to discontinue the returning of them as outstanding, as if it were known clearly that there were old bills to that extent outstanding, and what particular bills they were, we consider it would be better that your Lordships should cause the same course to be pursued with respect to this sum of 5,700 l., as with respect to the 25,050 l.; thus leaving the sum of 15,900 l. as the only clearly verified amount of bills overdue and outstanding, of which the particulars are specifically and properly entered in the books of the Paymasters, and of which a schedule has been exhibited to your Lordships in a paper accompanying the documents upon which the present report is founded. At the same time we would suggest, that your Lordships should cause instructions to be given to the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, that in the event of any bill being hereafter presented to them for payment, which may purport to have been issued previously to the year 1816 (with the exception of the 12 bills amounting to 1,700*l.*, issued before 1816, and forming a part of the 15,900*l.* just mentioned), a special report thereon should be made by them to your Lordships, previously to the payment of the same calling for your Lordships' directions in respect thereto.

Finally, we have only to observe, in respect to the variations in the Paymaster's certificates of outstanding bills given by their department at different times, and remarked upon by Lord Monteagle in his letter to your Lordship of 28 February last, that the principal discrepancy is connected with the sum of 25,050*l.*, in respect to which it is distinctly admitted by the Paymaster's Department that one of their returns was incorrect; but we are inclined to think that the other variations are rather apparent than real, and are partly at least to be attributed to the manner in which the certificates are headed, some purporting to be of all the bills outstanding at the date of the certificate, others merely an account of bills outstanding at the particular period when the certificate was granted; and from copies of some of those returns obtained by us from the office of the Paymasters, we are of opinion that although some discrepancies may exist, yet that some of the certificates could never have been intended at the time to express the precise gross number and amount of bills outstanding at the date of the instrument, but that they were to be considered as continuous or additional returns to others which had preceded them; and we are confirmed in this view of the case by that part of Lord Monteagle's letter, wherein he refers to the circumstances of its having been made to appear that in the year 1828 Lord Grenville, the then Auditor of the Exchequer, and the Paymasters had agreed that not one single Exchequer Bill was at that time outstanding which had been issued previously to the year 1816.

From whatever cause this impression may have been formed, we feel assured that it must have originated in error, since at no period for a considerable time back was it in our opinion probable, owing to the nature of the service, that every bill could have been paid off. Upon the whole we do not think that any material benefit is likely to ensue from a farther investigation vestigation of the circumstances under which these certificates have been at different times made out and presented.

The material question seems to be upon what data returns of this description ought to be rendered in future, as being the most correct which can now be made out from the official records, and we are of opinion that such returns should be upon the principle that the sum of 15,900*l.* was the amount outstanding on the 6th day of December 1841.

We have, &c.
(signed) F. S. Larpent.
H. F. Luttrell.
J. Osborn.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

Exchequer, 7 July 1842.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 7 July 1842.

My Lords,

I HAVE to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 5th instant, enclosing a copy of the Report of the Auditors on the subject of the discrepancies in the statements made by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills respecting the number and amount of Exchequer Bills outstanding.

Your Lordships are pleased to request my opinion on the expediency of adopting the course recommended by the Commissioners of Audit.

The discrepancies and confusion which appear on the face of these documents are so great, and of such long standing, that it is extremely difficult to form any very correct estimate of the proper steps to be adopted. Any adjustment of this account upon arbitrary grounds will be wholly irreconcileable with the Parliamentary accounts, and with the facts of the case.

I presume that in the accounts of Exchequer Bills unpaid and outstanding, made up to the 5th January 1842, and forming a part of the Finance Accounts of the year, the two sums of 25,050*l.* and 5,700*l.* will have necessarily entered. If these two sums are simply excluded from the accounts to January 1843, it will seem that 30,750*l.* of the unfunded debt has been paid off during the 12 months, more than has been the fact; this would render the public accounts to that extent irregular and delusive.

It appears that on Mr. Wood's appointment in 1827, he found 25,050*l.* returned as of bills outstanding, and that he supposed such bill to exist, but that he afterwards found that this sum was erroneously described. He does not state when or from whom this communication was received, but what is clear is, that no step was then taken to correct the error; but that till I brought the matter under your Lordships' notice this error was allowed to continue.

It is stated by the Auditors that bills to this amount, if included in the bills paid off in December 1822, must have been discharged from funds voted and applicable to other services of the year 1822, and these must consequently have been paid off in violation of the Appropriation Act of that Session. I presume there must have been either some serious neglect, or some very imperative necessity, to produce such a course; I am unable to trace the matter from any information in this department.

But if these bills were irregularly paid off, the continuance of their account from 1823 to 1842 in the accounts rendered to the Treasury and to Parliament year by year, is still more erroneous and incomprehensible. If the course recommended by the Commissioners of Audit is followed, I should submit that steps should also be taken for the correction and explanation of the Parliamentary accounts. If this is done, and the two sum of 25,050*l.* and 5,700*l.* are struck off altogether, the sum of 15,900*l.* will remain, of which the particulars are clearly known; and if the arrangements now adopted are strictly adhered to, no further confusion is likely to arise.

I should, however, recommend that once in the year, if not more frequently, the Paymasters should furnish to your Lordships a schedule of the numbers and denominations of all Exchequer Bills outstanding on which the interest had ceased, adding a certificate that the counterfoils of such bills were in their custody and possession.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury.

Treasury Chambers, 9 August 1842.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 9 August 1842.

My Lord,

THE Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having had under their consideration your Lordships' Report, dated 7th ultimo, on the subject of the discrepancies in the statements made by the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills respecting the number and amount of Exchequer Bills outstanding, I am commanded to acquaint your Lordship, that in addition to the sums of 1,000*l.*, included and deducted from the outstanding bills in the Exchequer Certificate to the 1st January 1842, and of 25,050*l.* excluded by direction of this Board in the certificate to 5th January 1842, being 26,050*l.*, as stated in the Annual Finance Accounts laid before Parliament in the present year, my Lords are pleased to authorise and direct that the further sum in question of 5,700*l.* be also excluded from the accounts of outstanding and over-due bills not deemed necessary to be provided for.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 10.)

Civil List Issues for Quarter differing from Charge.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 23 March 1842.

My Lords, Exchequer, 23 March 1842.

I HAVE before me your Lordships' letter of direction of the 22d March 1842, for a credit to the Paymaster of Civil Services of 875*l.* for expenses of the Department of Master of the Horse for the quarter ended 30*th June* 1841, on account of the sum of 96,250*l.*, set forth in the Warrant of Appropriation of the 6th of January 1841, for the quarter ended the 31*st day of March* 1841; and I am directed to place the same in the accounts of this department as an issue out of the monies set apart from the Consolidated Fund to defray the charge of the 3d class of Her Majesty's Civil List for the quarter ended 31*st March* 1841.

It is provided by the 9th section of the 1st Vict. c. 2, "that if any saving or surplus "shall arise in any quarter in respect of any money appropriated for defraying the charges "of any particular class, so as that the sum appropriated thereto shall be more than sufficient "for the full and complete payment of the charges thereon, such quarterly saving or sur- "plus shall in every such case be carried forward in the Exchequer to the account and "credit, and be applied for the purposes of the class in which it shall have arisen, until "the 31*st of December in every year*;" after which it is made lawful to apply the same in aid of the charges of any other class (except the fifth), or of any charge upon Her Majesty's Civil List revenues.

Under these provisions, I humbly submit to your Lordships that I am not at liberty to grant a credit chargeable upon monies appropriated for the payment of the charge upon any class of the Civil List, for a given quarter, to be applied to the payment of the expenses of the same class in a subsequent quarter of the same year, unless I am apprised by your Lordships that "the sum so appropriated was more than sufficient for the full and com- "plete payment of the charges therein" in the quarter to the services of which your Lordships' warrant originally applied; and that I am still less at liberty to apply any apparent balance of the sum so appropriated after the 31st of December of the year in which the warrant is dated, unless your Lordships shall have directed me to apply the same as a yearly surplus in aid of the charges upon Her Majesty's Civil List.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

(No. 11.)

Draft Warrant for Public Works.

Comptroller-General to Mr. Trevelyan, 2 May 1842.

My dear Sir, Exchequer, 2 May 1842.

I RETURN the draft warrant under the 5th Vict., sess. 2, c. 9, which you referred to me, with an inquiry whether I saw any objection to the manner in which it is drawn. I have carefully considered the draft warrant, and do not think that it satisfies the exigencies of the Statute. Indeed I see much difficulty in considering how it can be made to do so.

Two things are contemplated in sect. 1 of the Act. The Treasury is empowered "by "warrant to charge the Consolidated Fund, after providing for all preceding charges, but "having preference of all future charges, and to direct the issue thereout of a sum not "exceeding 360,000 l. per annum, by quarterly issues, not exceeding 90,000 l. per quarter, "the same to become due on 5 January, 5 April, 5 July, 10 October; the first instal- "ment becoming due and payable on the 5th April 1842, or on the passing of this Act, "whichever shall last happen."

There are two things to be done,—a charge to be created, and an issue made.

The warrant does not, in terms, create any charge, though it refers by inference to a charge raised, and it directs an issue out of "growing produce," words not used in the Act at all.

I feel confident that the warrant, as prepared, is wrong; but how the charge is now to be made in the midst of a quarter, I know not; and if made, it could only take effect after providing for existing charges.

I have referred to the 1 Vict. c. 2, s. 15, and to 7 Will. 4, c. 9, s. 2, to try if these precedents would enable me to extricate the Treasury from its difficulty in the present instance, but those Statutes do not use the same words, and simply direct an issue.

Believe me, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

C. E. Trevelyan, Esq., &c. &c.

(No. 12.)

Issues suspended for Lord Manners' Pension; lapsed.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 6 July 1842.

My Lords, Exchequer, 6 July 1842.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your Lordships' warrant of the 5th July, and your Assistant Secretary's letter of the same date, desiring me to authorise the Bank of Ireland to transfer to the account of Mr. Kennedy the sum of 19,752*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* for annuities and pensions for the last quarter.

Referring

Appendix, No. 9.

Referring to the schedule furnished by Mr. Kennedy, I observe that it includes a sum of 922*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*, being the amount of one quarter's allowance due to the late Lord Manners, as having formerly filled the office of Lord Chancellor in Ireland. As Lord Manners died before the 5th July, and as a retired allowance of this description is not payable beyond the day of the death of the party interested, I have felt myself unable to direct the transfer required. But as any delay with respect to the warrant, which is regular in other respects, would not have failed to create the most serious distress to individuals, and consequently an inconvenience to the public service, I have ventured to deduct the sum payable to the representatives of Lord Manners from the transfer, and to intrust the Bank of Ireland to issue the balance, 18,752*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*

I trust that this course may meet your Lordships' approval, as being a preferable one to returning the schedule and warrant for correction previously to the transfer.

For the warrant of 5th July for England, there are also included the pensions to the late Sir William Alexander, Mr. Justice Littledale and Lord Rodney. Before the issues under this warrant are completed, I submit to your Lordships that similar directions should be in like manner made. So soon as the exact date of the death of Lord Manners is ascertained, and the amount payable to his Lordship's representatives is ascertained, on receiving your Lordships' sanction and approval to the course I have pursued, a supplementary transfer may be directed to be made by the Bank of Ireland to Mr. Kennedy's account.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

P. S.—I have just ascertained that the date of Lord Manners' death was 31 May 1842, which will enable your Lordships to advise me by your letter of direction what transfer should be made to Mr. Kennedy on account of Lord Manners' executors.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 11 July 1842.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 11 July 1842.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, in reply to your letter dated 6th instant, upon the subject of the amount directed by their Lordships' warrant, dated 5th instant, to be transferred by the Bank of Ireland to Mr. Kennedy, for annuities and pensions for the last quarter, that all pensions, of the lapse of which my Lords have not received authoritative information, are necessarily included in the charge on the Consolidated Fund made up on each quarter day, and the certificates of the amount required to be advanced by the Bank of England to meet the deficiency is furnished by your Lordship accordingly.

If, therefore, the credits for the amount required to pay the pensions were to be issued, minus the amount due on the particular pension supposed to have lapsed, a permanent discrepancy between the original charge and the credits subsequently given upon it would be established in all the classes of salaries and pensions charged on the Consolidated Fund, similar to the discrepancy in respect to the diplomatic salaries, the existence of which has already been found to be productive of considerable inconvenience on account of the appropriated balances set apart every quarter in the books of the Exchequer, when the sums required do not amount to the original charges.

As it would be improper for the Treasury to act upon common report, or upon statements contained in newspapers, it has always been the rule, in order to secure the public against over-payments on pensions not paid to the parties themselves, to require the production of a life-certificate previously to any payment being made, or if the party should have deceased, a certificate of the date of his death and letters of administration, or a probate of wills.

It is the duty of the Paymasters of Civil Services to ascertain these particulars, and the savings on the broken period of the quarter within which each party died are periodically repaid by the Paymaster of Civil Services (as an imprest accountant) to the Consolidated Fund, and the sum so repaid appears in the Annual Finance Account, under the head of "Imprest and other Monies."

It appears to their Lordships that any arrangement that could be devised, by which the functions at present performed by the Paymaster of Civil Services in regard to ascertaining the date of the decease of each pensioner could be performed by the Treasury, and the credits on the Exchequer could be suspended until the facts had been ascertained, would be attended with serious inconvenience, and after every precaution had been taken, the object would still be only imperfectly accomplished, particularly in respect to pensioners residing abroad, and to persons receiving small pensions at home, whose deaths are not a matter of public notoriety.

For these reasons, it appears to their Lordships that they cannot give their sanction to the existing practice on this subject being disturbed.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

To the Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

Appendix, No. 9.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 12 July 1842.

My Lords, Exchequer, 12 July 1842.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letters of the 11th, on the subject of the amount authorised by the Treasury warrant of the 5th instant, directing the transfer to Mr. Kennedy of 18,752 l. 15 s. 4 d. for annuities and pensions stated to be due for the last quarter, which warrant comprehended the retired quarter's allowance of 922 l. 12 s. 5 d. to the late Lord Manners, and 782 l. 16 s. 4 d. to the late Earl of Shannon, neither of which sums can be fully due, as the death of both those noblemen occurred within the quarter. To the former of these cases I called your Lordships' attention, the latter having escaped my notice till the following day, and the decision upon the first case being such as to determine the principle. The same points also arose in respect to the pension of the late Lord Rodney, Sir William Alexander and Sir J. Littledale.

The doubt which I felt, and continue still to feel, is, whether I was warranted under the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 13, to direct a credit or a transfer for more than the sum legally due.

Your Lordships are pleased to inform me that all pensions, of the lapse of which you are not authoritatively informed, are necessarily included in the charge on the Consolidated Fund made up on each quarter day, and that if credits to the same amount are not issued there will be a permanent discrepancy between the original charge and the credits subsequently given, which will be productive of inconvenience to the public service. Your Lordships afterwards explain, how, under the able and efficient control of Mr. Sargent and Mr. Kennedy, any undue issue will be guarded against. I hope I need not express my entire confidence in the accuracy of those two most admirable public servants, nor yet my desire in every respect to avert any public inconvenience; but that on which I am called upon to decide is what the law commands me to perform in this office.

When your Lordships considered that the charge on the Consolidated Fund ought to include all pensions, of the cessation of which no authoritative information had been received, it had escaped your Lordships' observation, that in respect to this warrant several pensions had been excluded, on the presumption of their lapse, by reason of the non-claims of the parties, and without any authoritative information that such pensions had fallen in.

The pensions and allowances to which I allude, are the following:

H. Hughes.
Eliza Gifford.
Jane Moore.
A. Paislow.
C. Richardson.
Maria Gilholy.
Anne Sneyd.

In every one of these several cases the pensions are excluded, not on the ground of authoritative information, but either on the ground of continued non-claim, or of a report that the parties are dead.

If these pensions are properly excluded, it would seem to follow that where the death of the parties was perfectly notorious, as in the case of Lords Shannon, Manners and Rodney, and the retired Judges, Alexander and Littledale, a similar rule should be applied. Indeed, in respect to the death of Lord Shannon, the most authoritative information is given, as by the Journals of the House of Lords, evidence before your Lordships and before me, the present Lord Shannon has applied to establish his right of voting as a Representative Peer, which is conclusive proof of the death of his Lordship's predecessor and father.

Your Lordships will observe that by any other construction, in the event of no claim being made on the public for the amount of salary due at the time of death on the part of the personal representatives of the deceased, the charge would be indefinitely continued, and the check, both of your Lordships' office and of the Exchequer, would be altogether lost.

But further, by 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 13, the warrant for charges on the Consolidated Fund is authorised to issue only in the cases in which the late auditor was required to make and pass debentures for the several charges.

Now in no instance would debentures have been issued by the auditor for sums not actually payable to the parties interested, and in the case under consideration the debentures for the representatives of Lords Manners, Shannon, Rodney, &c. would not have been for the quarter's salary, but for the fractional part of that quarter accruing due.

The duty of the Comptroller seems prescribed with an accuracy which, however, needs no analogy to explain it. In these cases the pension to Lord Manners under the 40 Geo. 3, c. 69, is for his life only; the retired allowances to Sir William Alexander and Sir J. Littledale were for their lives only, by virtue of 39 Geo. 3, c. 110; 53 Geo. 3, c. 153; and 6 Geo 4, c. 84.

The pensions to Lord Rodney are partly for life and partly in perpetuity. The Comptroller is bound "first to satisfy himself that the payments directed are according to law." Now where it is within his own knowledge that the life for which an annuity was originally granted has dropped, and the grant has consequently ceased, or where, as in the case of Lord Shannon, there is conclusive evidence of the death of the party, I do not see how it is possible that he can direct a payment, under the conviction, however well founded, that by vigilance of another department the legal payment, and that payment only, shall take place.

If

If this leads to inconvenience, I respectfully submit to your Lordships whether the proper course to be taken would not be to insert a clause in the Bill, which it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to introduce, which shall amend the existing law. If so desired by your Lordships, I shall give my best care to the preparation of such a clause, or shall, in any other way, most gladly devote my poor services to the furtherance of your Lordships' wishes for the public interests.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 3 August 1842.

Having laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury your Lordship's further communication, dated 12th ultimo, on the subject of the arrangements for making the final payment on lapsed pensions, I am commanded to acquaint your Lordship that my Lords will be prepared to consider the subject of the clause proposed by you whenever a Bill shall be introduced into Parliament connected with the Exchequer.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 3 August 1842.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

(No. 13.)

Unauthenticated Addition to Irish Schedules.

My Lords, Exchequer, 7 January 1843.

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' warrant of 6 January, directing the charge to be placed on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland for the expenses of the courts of justice. The Treasury warrant refers to the accompanying schedule from the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, which appears to have been signed by Mr. Kennedy, on 24 December 1842, and as so made up and authenticated, it purports to contain charges, amounting in the whole to 31,934 l. 11 s. 4 d.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 7 January 1843.

To this sum there has been added, after the signature of Mr. Kennedy, a further entry to the following effect, which entry is made in another hand. It is not authenticated by Mr. Kennedy, or any one else:

The Honourable David Plunket, Prothonotary, Common Pleas, for contingent expenses - - - - - - - - - £. 606. 3. 7.

which is added to the former total, making up a sum of 32,540 l. 14 s. 11 d. That this is an interpolation is obvious; and the following page, which contains a comparative account of the charge for the last and the current quarter, states the letters at 31,934 l. 11 s. 4 d., and not at 32,540 l. 14 s. 11 d. As the latter sum is included in your Lordships' warrant, though irregularly added to Mr. Kennedy's schedule, I have felt myself at liberty to direct the charge to be made for the larger sum. In this I trust I may be sanctioned by your Lordships, although the addition to any public document after the signature of the same by any responsible officer, and without the attestation of some person duly authorised, is a practice which manifestly leads to inconvenience and incorrectness.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 19 January 1843.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter, dated 7th instant, calling their Lordships' attention to an unauthenticated addition which appears to have been made to the schedule of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, dated 24th December 1842, upon which their Lordships' Warrant of the 6th instant was founded, directing the charge to be placed on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland for the expenses of the courts of justice.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 19 January 1843.

My Lords desire me to state that they approve of the course which your Lordship has taken on the present occasion, in directing the charge to be made including such addition, the same having been included in their Lordships' warrant; and I am instructed to add, that in future whenever it shall be found necessary to make any alteration or addition to such schedules after they have been signed, the alteration or addition will be authenticated by the signature of one of the Secretaries of the Treasury.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 14.)

Legality of Consolidating Army Votes in One Royal Order.

Treasury to Comptroller-General, 8 April 1844.

My Lords, Exchequer, 8 April 1844.

I CANNOT but feel reluctance in suggesting any doubt respecting the strict accuracy of the method in which the execution of one branch of the public business has been conducted both by the Board of Treasury and the Exchequer, since the establishment of the latter office. But as a question might be raised on the subject, I think it infinitely better to bring the whole under your Lordships' consideration, in order that all doubts may be resolved by the opinion of the law advisers of the Crown.

The difficulty which I feel is in respect to the form of Royal Orders for Army, Navy and Ordnance Services, including the Commissariat. This difficulty arises before the enactment of the Annual Appropriation Act. These services are voted respectively, as your Lordships know, by many distinct Resolutions. The Royal Order is prepared on an aggregate of these Resolutions. If it be the true intent and meaning of the 4th Will. 4, c. 15, s. 11, that the Exchequer check and control should be applied, so as to prevent the possibility of an excess of issue beyond these several Resolutions, that check is not applied, though the aggregate amount of the Resolutions cannot be exceeded.

On the contrary, if the exigency of the statute is satisfied by preventing an undue issue to the service, for which the aggregate of votes has been taken, the present practice is correct.

I have the honour of enclosing a statement of the facts of the case, and a reference to the authorities under which I act; and I request that your Lordships will be so good as to submit the question to the law officers, and to communicate their opinion to me for my future government.

I have, &c.

The Lords of the Treasury, &c. &c. &c.

(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-General.

CASE.

Case for opinion for Law Officers.

DOUBT having been entertained with respect to the true construction of the 4th Will. 4, c. 15, so far as it relates to the mode of making issues for the public service, it is requested that the opinion of the law advisers of the Crown should be taken thereon, for the future guidance of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. The issues respecting which these doubts have arisen, are those for the Navy, Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat Services.

The authorities under which all these issues are made are the 4th Will. 4, c. 15, and the Treasury Minute, 26th September 1834, together with the directions given by the Treasury, 6th October 1834.

To render the question intelligible, it is expedient to state the exact mode of proceeding in respect to all supply issues, to which alone the present case applies.

These issues may be classed under two heads: the first, the issues made during the progress of the Parliamentary Session, and before the passing of an Appropriation Act; the second, after the Appropriation Act has passed, and in accordance with its provisions. It is unnecessary to allude to the latter case.

The preliminary step taken in respect to the first class of payments, respecting which only the present doubts have arisen, is, that a vote or votes should be passed in Committee of Supply, and should be reported to the House, and agreed to.

A corresponding vote in Ways and Means must then be taken, reported, agreed to, and an Act passed founded thereon.

In every such Act is contained a clause to the following effect: "And be it further "enacted, that it should be lawful for the Treasury to issue and apply such sums as may be "raised under this Act to such services as shall have been then voted by the Commons of "the United Kingdom." Vide, for example, 4 Will. 4, c. 3, s. 11.

The annual estimates may be classed under various heads: The Army, Navy, Ordnance, Commissariat, and Miscellaneous. The Army Estimate for 1844-5 has been voted by seventeen separate Resolutions, as follows:

Vote 1.	Number of Men	—
„ 2.	Charge of Land Forces	£. 3,431,764
„ 3.	Staff Officers	158,231
„ 4.	Public Departments	90,308
„ 5.	Royal Military College	—
„ 6.	Royal Military Asylum	13,408
„ 7.	Volunteer Corps	88,077
„ 8.	Unprovided for Services of former years	1,649
„ 9.	Rewards for distinguished Services	13,953
„ 10.	Army Paymaster-general	77,000
„ 11.	Full pay for Retired Officers	62,300
„ 12.	Half-pay and Military Allowances	450,000
„ 13.	Foreign Half-pay	54,932
„ 14.	Widows' Pensions	141,610
„ 15.	Compassionate List	110,000
„ 16.	In-pensioners	1,252,792
„ 17.	Superannuations	38,500

The

The Navy and Ordnance Votes are taken on Estimates prepared in a similar manner, that is to say, by separate Resolutions, without any one general Resolution, either summing up the whole sum voted for one Service, or the whole sums voted at any one particular time.

The Commissariat is voted in like manner also.

The Miscellaneous Services are all voted by separate Resolutions. The following transcript of No. 1, of the Miscellaneous Estimates for 1844-5, will exemplify the practice:

	£.
Buildings and Palaces	112,190
Houses of Parliament	5,240
New Houses	60,000
Trafalgar Square	7,000
Holyhead Roads, &c.	4,164
Caledonian Canal	50,000
Buildings in Ireland	26,871
Kingston Harbour	8,000

There is not any general Resolution taken summing up these votes, or showing the amount voted on any particular day.

It is the Parliamentary practice to vote such number of Resolutions as time and convenience may permit on each Supply night, and such Resolutions are reported and agreed to on subsequent nights, in like manner.

After the Vote in Supply has been taken, and Ways and Means provided, as already described, the next step is to obtain a Royal Order, a Treasury Warrant, and a letter of direction, addressed to the Comptroller-general, and authorising the specific issue or issues which may be required. The mode in which these instruments are to be made out, and their force and obligation, are set forth in the following sections of the Act constituting the Comptroller-general's office:

"XI. And be it further enacted, that from and after the commencement of this Act, "whenever any sum or sums of money shall have been granted to his Majesty by any Act "of Parliament, or Vote of the House of Commons, for any specified branch of the public "service, and Ways and Means shall likewise have been granted for satisfying and making "good the same, it shall be lawful for his Majesty, by his Royal Order, under the sign "manual, to be countersigned by the Commissioners of the Treasury, to authorise and "require the said Comptroller to place at the Bank of England, to the credit of the Public "Accountant to the Crown, in the respective branch of service, the amount of the sum so "granted or voted, at such times and in such proportions as the said Commissioners shall "from time to time direct to be applied by such officer to such service, and that such "Royal Order shall contain a reference to the particular Act or Vote of Parliament, and "shall, after having been recorded and entered by the Commissioners of the Treasury in "their books, be transmitted to the said Comptroller, to be entered on record, and to remain "in his office, the said Comptroller having first satisfied himself that the said order has been "made in conformity with and has not exceeded the amount of the Grant of Parliament.

"XII. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of the "Treasury, by warrant under their hands, from time to time, as they shall see expedient and "proper, to authorise and require the said Comptroller to transfer from the general Fund of "the Exchequer at the Bank, to the credit of the respective officers whose duty it shall be to "make payments on account of the several public departments, such sums as shall be requisite "for carrying on the respective services, and every such warrant shall recite the substance "of the Royal Order upon which it is founded, referring to the Act or Vote therein mentioned, and shall specify the total amount of the monies authorised by such order to be "issued, and the credits (if any) which have previously been issued on account thereof, and "of the balance still remaining to be issued; and upon the receipt of every such warrant "at the office of the said Comptroller, the same shall be compared with the Royal Order "and with the preceding warrants (if any) which shall have been made in pursuance thereof; "and the said Comptroller having satisfied himself that such warrant has been made in "conformity with and has not exceeded in amount the Royal Order, shall, from time to "time (in pursuance of directions to that effect from the Commissioners of the Treasury), "by a warrant under his hand, authorise the Governor and Company of the Bank of "England to grant credits on account of the sum or sums therein mentioned to the person "or persons therein described, which warrant shall be forwarded to the said Governor and "Company, who, on the receipt thereof, shall grant the credit thereby required."

Appendix, No. 9.

The form of the Royal Order, authorising the Comptroller-general to grant credits for Army, Navy, Ordnance and Miscellaneous supply services, according to such warrant and directions as he shall receive from the Treasury, was transmitted on the 6th October 1834, and is as follows:

ROYAL ORDER.

PUBLIC SUPPLY SERVICE, 1834–35.

NAVY.

Our will and pleasure is, that you do place to the credit of the Right honourable the treasurer of our navy, or the treasurer of our navy for the time being, the sum of granted to us by Resolution of the House of Commons, bearing date for naval services, at such times, and in such proportions, and out of such funds granted by Parliament for this service, as shall be specified in the warrants and directions, which you will receive for your guidance from the Commissioners of our Treasury.

Given at our Court at this day of by his Majesty's commands.

Amount of Navy votes or grants for 1834–35 - - -

Credits already authorised thereon by Royal Orders -

Remains - - -

To the Comptroller-general of our Exchequer.

As it is in respect to the construction of the Royal Order only that any difficulty arises, and that the advice of the law officers is requested, it is not necessary to confuse the case by any observations respecting Treasury Warrants, Letters of Direction or Exchequer Warrants founded thereon.

It has already been shown that the Army Estimates include 17 separate and distinct votes, of which 15 were for money, and that these votes amounted in the whole to 5,984,524 l.; and the miscellaneous votes, No. 1, include eight money votes, amounting in the whole to 273,465 l. The usage has been to include and consolidate the several army votes in one Royal Order, on which the Treasury Warrants, Letters of Direction and Comptroller-generals' Warrants are afterwards founded; but in regard to the miscellaneous votes, separate and distinct Royal Orders, Warrants and Letters of Direction are prepared, on which separate vouchers, distinct Exchequer Warrants are signed by the Comptroller-general. The blank of the form of Royal Order is thus, in the case of Army, Navy and Ordnance services filled up with a gross sum, stated to be granted by the House of Commons, whilst no such general resolution has, in point of fact, ever been passed, though separate resolutions, making together the aggregate sum set forth in the Royal Order, have been agreed to by the House. The result of this difference of practice, as respecting the greater services and the miscellaneous services, may be illustrated by the following example. Under the present practice no issue can be made for the first vote of the miscellaneous services exceeding the sum of 112,190 l., the sum voted for that service by a specific and particular resolution, whilst, on the contrary, in respect to any vote for the army, as, for example, that of 110,000 l. for the Compassionate List, the Comptroller-general has no means of judging whether the sum exceeding the separate resolution may not be issued; all check upon the distinct issue, as derived from the distinct and separate resolution, being lost altogether, so far as the Exchequer is concerned, though a check exists against any excess on the whole consolidated votes, and on the aggregate sum granted for Army services.

Such is the mode of proceeding in respect to the current issues during the Parliamentary Session, and before the appropriation Act has passed, and the question on which the opinion of the law officers is required is, whether, in reference to the 4th Will. 4, c. 15, s. 11, hereinbefore set out, it is lawful to consolidate and unite all the separate Army votes in one Royal Order, or whether the same course is necessary to be taken by law as is now pursued in relation to the miscellaneous services, a separate and distinct Royal Order being prepared, founded on each particular vote of Parliament or resolution of supply agreed to, upon which and not exceeding which Royal Order, the Comptroller-general is justified in issuing his Exchequer Warrants to the Bank of England.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 9.

My Lord, Treasury, 24 June 1844.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit herewith for your Lordship's information, with reference to your letters of 8th and 16th April last, an extract from the case which had been laid before the law officers of the Crown, together with a copy of their opinion upon the subject of the Royal Orders, for Army, Navy and Ordnance Services. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 24 June 1844.

I am, &c.
(signed) G. Clerk.

Extract of Case as to the Practice of obtaining and making Issues from the Exchequer for Army Services.

The Attorney and Solicitor-general are requested to advise on the question raised by the Comptroller-general. Opinion of Law Officers.

Whether with reference to the statute 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 11, 12, it is lawful to consolidate and unite all the separate Army votes in one Royal Order, or whether the same course is necessary by law as is pursued in relation to Miscellaneous Services, a separate and distinct Royal Order being prepared, founded on each particular vote of Parliament or resolution of Supply agreed to, upon which, and not exceeding which Royal Order, the Comptroller-general may be justified in issuing Exchequer Warrants to the Bank of England.

Opinion:

We do not think that it is necessary to have a distinct and separate Royal Order for each separate vote for Army Services. We think that the several votes for the branch of the public service may be united in one Royal Order.

(signed) W. W. Follett.
F. Thesiger.

(No. 15.)

Examination and Control of Royal Orders.

Minute, 24 March 1845.

The Comptroller-general takes into his consideration the mode in which the important branch of his duty, which relates to the examination and control of Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants, is performed, and it appears to him that a considerable improvement may be effected thereon. Comptroller-general's Minute, 24 March 1845.

It was formerly the usual habit to bring the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants under the consideration of the Comptroller-general, at the time only when issues were required to be made for the Public Service, although such Orders and Warrants might have been for some time previously transmitted from the Treasury to the Exchequer. Of late, and since the Minute of the 22d August 1843, p. 132, a better system has been introduced, and at the close of the Committee of Supply in each Session, the Orders and Warrants forwarded to the Exchequer have been brought under his cognisance: they have been carefully compared with the authorities under which they have been prepared, and when their strict accuracy has been ascertained, they have been noted by him, and initialled in testimony of such examination, and approved. See also Minute, 15 August 1844, p. 157.

It is the opinion of the Comptroller-general that this improvement may be carried still further, and a possible public inconvenience may be rendered less possible.

By the existing system, it might so happen that an irregularity or defect in an Order or Warrant should not be discovered in time for its reasonable and easy correction. Cases are possible, in which the interposition of the Legislature might be required, the opinions of the law officers might be sought for, or new Orders might be substituted for the Royal Sign Manual. The delay incidental to such proceedings, even if the circumstances always admitted of having recourse to the appropriate remedy, could not fail to be considerable, and might be greatly prejudicial to the public service. Of this, the events which occurred on the 15th October 1841 (see Correspondence-book, p. 146) is a memorable example, in relation to which case it was not till the 28th December following (see Minute-book, p. 65) that the amended Royal Order and Warrant was forwarded for the consideration of the Exchequer.

For the purposes of guarding against the inconvenience which might result from any similar instance, the Comptroller-general directs that henceforth, whenever any Orders or Warrants are submitted by the Treasury to the Exchequer, these documents are to be forthwith brought under examination, and a comparison made between them, and the authorities on which they are founded, and that in the event of any informality appearing in these instruments, or any legal objection arising, an immediate communication to that effect be addressed to the Treasury; the present system in other respects remaining unchanged.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 16.)

Discrepancy in Royal Order for New Zealand.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 August 1845.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 August 1845.

Among the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants transmitted to me with Mr. Cardwell's letter of the 9th instant, I have found a Royal Order and corresponding Warrant for 7,565 l., referring to a Resolution of the House of Commons, of 31st July 1845, to defray the charge of the colony of New Zealand.

I have referred to the Votes of The House of that date, and find that the Resolution which passed was not for 7,565 l., but for 22,565 l. In other respects, except as relates to the discrepancy of the sum, the Order and Warrant are correct.

I report this to your Lordships without delay, in order either that a new and corrected authority should be furnished to me, or that a supplemental authority should be given for the balance between the greater and the lesser sum, without which I should not feel at liberty to direct a credit for a sum exceeding 7,565 l.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 13 August 1845.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 13 August 1845.

I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter, dated 11th instant, calling their attention to an error in the amount stated in a Royal Order and corresponding Warrant for 7,565 l., to defray the charge of the colony of New Zealand, which was forwarded to you with the letter of this Board of 9th instant; the Resolution of the House of Commons, of 31st July 1845, referred to in the said Royal Order having passed, not for 7,565 l., but for 22,565 l.; and I am desired to request that your Lordship will return the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant referred to, in order that their Lordships may give directions for the preparation of fresh instruments.

I am, &c.
(signed) Edward Cardwell.

To the Comptroller-General, Exchequer.

(No. 17.)

Four Votes for Law Charges consolidated in One Royal Order.

My Lords, Exchequer, 31 July 1846.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 31 July 1846.

I beg to call your Lordships' attention to the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant of the 18th July, acted upon by your secretary's letter of the 22d instant.

These documents introduce a new practice, which I think will be found inconsistent with the mode in which the public business has heretofore been transacted, and the public accounts kept both at the Exchequer and the Bank of England, and deprives this office of the power of seeing that sums granted for particular services are not exceeded.

The Royal Order and Warrant in question consolidate, in one sum of 57,568 l., four separate grants heretofore kept separate and distinct; they are as follows:

	£.	s.	d.
Law charges paid by Treasury solicitor - - -	21,000	–	–
Mint prosecutions - - - - - - -	10,600	–	–
Sheriffs' expenses, officers of Exchequer - - -	12,600	–	–
Insolvent Debtors' Court - - - - -	13,368	–	–

These sums, amounting in the aggregate to 57,568 l., are applicable to four separate heads of expenditure, kept in this office and at the Bank under separate accounts. There are also four distinct accountants: your Lordship's solicitor, Mr. Maule; Mr. Shiel, as Master of the Mint; Mr. Sargent, as Paymaster of Civil Services; and Mr. Massey, the chief clerk of the Insolvent Court.

On some of these accounts, balances still remain to the credit of the accountant. If that separate account be kept, it will be difficult and inconsistent to combine with it issues from the new account proposed to be opened for 57,568 l.

Besides these technical objections, your Lordships will observe that the control of this department ceases altogether, in respect to the appropriation of this sum between those several heads of service. Provided the total sum of 57,568 l. be not exceeded, the whole vote might be expended on any one of these heads, and the three others left unprovided for, the sum intended for the Insolvent Court might be issued to your Lordships' solicitor, or the Mint might absorb what had been provided for the expenses of the sheriffs.

I therefore beg to represent to your Lordships that both from the necessity of adhering to established practice, from the expediency of avoiding complex and confused accounts, and from the obvious duty of maintaining unchanged the constitutional control of the Exchequer, the more regular system shall be in future pursued.

If

If your Lordships should concur in these observations, the present period of the Session seems to me to afford the means of acting upon them in the case I have brought before you, and this without much difficulty, and in a legitimate manner. If in the Appropriation Act the four separate votes and heads of service are recited distinctly, and that in the meanwhile I receive your Lordships' authority to make the issues and keep the accounts in the accustomed manner, I conceive this will be sufficient to govern me.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

(No. 18.)

Separation of Balances in Bank Statement.

Gentlemen, Exchequer, 24 August 1846.

I BEG leave to call your attention to the Exchequer Account of the Paymaster-general as to the mode in which the balance on his accounts is returned by you to this office in your quarterly statement of balances of public accountants. Comptroller-general to Bank of England, 24 Aug. 1846.

In the statements alluded to, one general balance is given, on the Paymaster-general's accounts kept at the Bank of England, by the 23d section of the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, the balances on each head of service according to credits granted by the Comptroller-general are required to be stated in the accounts transmitted annually from this department to Parliament. I have therefore to request that in future you will give directions for the Exchequer balance to be so stated separately as to enable me effectually to comply with the provisions of the said Act.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England.

My Lord, Bank of England, 28 August 1846.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter of the instant (no date), suggesting certain alterations in the present mode of returning the balances of the Exchequer Account of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general; and in reply I am directed to state that instructions have been given to the proper officers of the Bank to make future returns in question, in conformity with your Lordship's suggestion. Bank Cashier to Comptroller-general, 28 Aug. 1846.

I have, &c.
(signed) M. Marshall,
Chief Cashier.

The Right hon. Lord Monteagle.

(No. 19.)

Neglect of Payment by Treasurer of Surrey.

My Lords, Exchequer, 24 July 1848.

I BEG to call your Lordships' attention to the fact, that in reference to the payments directed to be made by the Justices of the Peace of Middlesex, Surrey and Kent, and the Corporation of London, respecting the payments under the Act 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84, s. 96, and 9 Vict. c. 5, s. 6, the half-year's payment due June 1846, by the county of Surrey, was made October 8, 1846; no further payment has been made since the above date. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 24 July 1848.

Of this your Lordships are already aware, by the absence of acknowledgment of any such payments in the ordinary returns which I have made to you weekly, which is the regular mode in which the neglect of this or any other payment is brought under your Lordships' consideration.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lords, Exchequer, 17 February 1849.

WITH reference to my letter of the 24th July 1848, informing your Lordships of an irregularity in the payments into the Exchequer due from the Justices of the Peace for the county of Surrey, under the authority of the Acts 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84, and 9 Vict. c. 5, and in obedience to your Lordships' desire, signified by your Assistant Secretary's letter of the 6th July 1846, that I should report if any default take place in any of the payments into the Exchequer required by the statutes above referred to; I beg now to draw your Lordships' attention to the fact that the half-yearly payments due to the Exchequer from the county of Surrey, Comptroller-general to Treasury, 17 Feb. 1849.

Appendix, No. 9.

Surrey, as directed by the said Acts, and under the authority of your Lordships' letters, now amount to the sum of 800 l., and are in arrear for the periods under-mentioned; viz.:

For the half-year due December 1846	- - -	£. 160 – –
Ditto - June - 1847	- - -	160 – –
Ditto - December 1847	- - -	160 – –
Ditto - June - 1848	- - -	160 – –
Ditto - December 1848	- - -	160 – –
		£. 800 – –

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 20.)

Irregular Issue for Loans for Workhouses, Ireland.

My Lords, Exchequer, 28 August 1849.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 28 August 1849.

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of the 16th instant, and of the Minute of your Lordships' Board therein enclosed, dated 10th August.

Referring to your Lordships' warrant of the 19th June, for the sum of 100,933 l. 7 s. 10 d., on which the issue of 35,000 l. has already taken place, I submit to your Lordships that it would not be regular, or consistent with the rules of this department, to make that instrument applicable to the purposes of an Act (12 & 13 Vict. c. 86), which only received the Royal Assent on the 1st August.

When, therefore, your Lordships are pleased to direct any funds to be provided under this last Act, I respectfully suggest the execution of a new warrant, apprising me, at the same time, that the unexhausted balance of the warrant, the 19th June, will not be drawn upon.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 22 December 1849.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 22 Dec. 1849.

In answer to your Lordship's letter of the 28th August last, representing the irregularity of applying any part of the sum of 100,933 l. 7 s. 10 d., for which a warrant has been issued under the authority of the Act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 51, for the purposes of the Act 12 & 13 Vict. c. 86, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to inform you, that my Lords will continue to draw upon the above warrant for the Act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 51, the sums which may be required, and will issue a new warrant for re-issues under the Act 12 & 13 Vict. c. 86.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

To the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

(No. 21.)

Irregularity in Payment of Lord Campbell's Salary.

My dear Sir, Exchequer, 21 June 1850.

Comptroller-general to Secretary of Treasury, 21 June 1850.

In reference to your conversation with me yesterday, on the subject of the payment of Lord Campbell's salary without sufficient authority, the facts are these:

By the Treasury Warrant, 6th April, signed R. M. Bellew, H. Rich, I was authorised and required to transfer to the Paymaster-general a sum of 97,044 l. 2 s. 9 d., for certain services therein particularised, including—the same being put as a charge on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter ending 5th April 1850.

Right honourable Lord Denman, to 28 February - - -	£. 1,200
Right honourable Lord Campbell, from 28 February - -	800

The charge was accordingly so placed; but, as you are aware, credits on the authority of this warrant are not given by me without a further application from the Treasury, in the form of an issuing letter. Issuing letters to the amount of 96,244 l. 2 s. 9 d. only have been received and acted upon by me, the sum of 800 l. for Lord Campbell being still reserved till the proper patent and other authorities are produced at this office.

If, as I conclude is the case, the payment has been made, you will perceive the irregularity does not rest with me, but with the Treasury itself, which has paid a service which had been withheld here till the proper instruments justifying the payment had been produced. The correction correction of this may now be difficult, as, having heard from you that the payment was already made, I do not clearly see the mode of directing an issue for the 800 l. reserved.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Right honourable G. W. Hayter,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 22.)

Notice requested for Payments into Exchequer.

Exchequer, 21 October 1850.

Sir,

Assistant Comptroller to Secretary of Treasury, 21 October 1850.

An account from the Paymaster of the Civil Services in Ireland, dated 19th instant, states, that a sum of 7 l. 7 s. 1 d., "received from the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Public Records of Ireland, stated to be the balance remaining in Bank of Ireland to their credit, now paid to the Consolidated Fund," has been transferred to the account of the Exchequer.

I presume the payment referred to has been made under directions from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

As similar payments, not immediately sanctioned by Act of Parliament, are made from time to time to the Exchequer account at the Bank of Ireland, I have most respectfully to request that their Lordships will be pleased to give directions that the Exchequer be informed that such payments have the sanction of their Lordships, as is the practice with respect to like payments directed to be carried to the Exchequer account at the Bank of England.

I am, &c.
(signed) A. Eden, Assistant Comptroller.

Sir C. E. Trevelyan,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 23.)

Form of Warrant for Civil List Savings.

Exchequer, 18 December 1850.

My dear Spearman,

Comptroller-general to Sir A. Y. Spearman, 18 Dec. 1850.

I think it more satisfactory to reduce to writing the results of the best considerations I have been able to give to my conversation with you and with the Chancellor of the Exchequer respecting the Civil List issues.

Though I do not see anything in the way in which this business has hitherto been conducted which at all entrenches on the principle of law, yet I consider that the form of the Treasury Warrants may be rendered more consistent and more clear by a few changes, which I proceed to suggest.

In order to make these suggestions intelligible, I shall refer to the warrants for April 1849, which you can easily consult, either at the Treasury or at this office; you will find them Treasury Warrants, the first or charging warrant (which I shall term the quarterly charging warrant), puts a charge of 96,000 l. on the Consolidated Fund, distributing it according to the Civil List Act, among the first, second, third, fourth and sixth classes, in their fixed proportions. Now, this instrument is drawn up in a manner in which it would seem absolute and final in its appropriation, which ought not to be the case. No reference is made to the ninth section of the Civil List Act, which provides for a contingency under which the original appropriation may be varied in cases when, at the close of the year, the Treasury are enabled to declare certain unissued Civil List monies in my hands to be savings, and issuable for the purposes set forth in the section to which I have referred you, namely, for the application of savings on one class, in aid of a deficiency in another, or as applicable to any charge on Her Majesty's Civil List.

I therefore suggest that an addition should be made to the existing form of the quarterly warrant (see 5 April 1849), to the following effect, "the said appropriation between the "several classes hereinbefore set forth being nevertheless subject to any declaration of "savings which may be made at the end of the year, under and by virtue of the 1 Vict. "c. 2, s. 9, and to any further directions which you shall from time to time receive from "us thereon, for the issue of such sums so declared to be savings for the purposes set forth "in the said statute."

The second instrument will be the savings warrant, namely, that by which the Treasury, at the close of the year, declares certain sums to be savings under the ninth section, and applicable for the purposes specified therein, and issuable under the authority of the proviso suggested, as an addition to the original or charging warrant. It will be clearer and better, and indeed it becomes necessary for the accounts of this office, that the warrant declaring the savings should not only state the total amount for the year in each class, but should discriminate in reference to each class the amount of savings which may have accrued in each of the four quarters to which the declaration applies.

No further warrant appears to me to be required, the ordinary letter of direction from the Treasury being sufficient to authorise me to issue the savings, always assuming that they are directed to be issued and applied to the uses specified in section 9, and to no other; both warrants should, however, be distinctly set forth in the Treasury letter, the first, as authorising the issue under the ninth section, in a certain contingency, namely, the declaration of savings; the second, on savings' warrant, satisfying the Exchequer that which was contemplated as a contingency, has actually taken place.

"In

Appendix, No. 9.

In this way the two warrants and the Treasury letter are rendered consistent with each other, and an anomaly in my accounts is remedied, from which it might appear that I had examined and sanctioned Treasury Warrants to a greater amount than was authorised to be issued for Her Majesty's Civil List.

Believe me, &c.
(signed) Monteagle.

To Sir Alex. Spearman, Bart.

(No. 24.)

Erroneous Payment on Account of Sycee Silver.

MINUTE.

14 January 1851.

Comptroller-general's Minute, 14 Jan. 1851.

THE Comptroller-general reads the Treasury letter of the 15th November 1850, and the letter enclosed therein from the Auditors, of the 23d October 1850, and refers to the Specification Paper of the 30th July 1850, signed by the Deputy Paymaster-general.

It appears from the latter, that authority was requested, from the Comptroller-general by the Deputy Paymaster-general, to pay into the Exchequer Accounts, a sum of 681 l. 13 s. 6 d. specified, as being "three-fourths of the value of a box of Sycee silver deficient in the consignment to this country, by Her Majesty's ship 'Serpent,' per Treasury letter, 31 December 1847," which sum was accordingly paid into the Exchequer Account on the 31st July, and an acquittance was given to the Paymaster-general in the terms of the Specification already set forth. This payment appears also regularly entered in the Quarterly Accounts forwarded to the Auditors on the 17th October 1850; and in the accounts of the Quarter's Revenue made up for the quarter ended 10 October 1850, in both which documents it is entered, as described in the Specification Paper already alluded to. It now appears, from the correspondence immediately under consideration, that the Specification Paper of the Paymaster-general of the 30th July, was founded on an error; that the sum of 681 l. 13 s. 6 d. so paid in at that date by the Paymaster-general, had been already included in a larger sum paid into the Exchequer in October 1848; and that the sum described as 681 l. 13 s. 6 d. as the produce of Sycee silver, was, in fact, "part of the surplus balance of the grants of Parliament on account of the relief of distress in Ireland and Scotland."

It is observable that the Comptroller-general has no power whatever to detect or correct the erroneous description given him in the Paymaster-general's specification. It was his duty only to authorise its receipt, and to see that it was duly entered as advised. This has been regularly done, and he cannot understand the statement of the Auditors "that this "amount does not appear in the Quarterly Accounts of Revenue, ended the 10th October "1850, under the head of 'China Money,'" as the payment does, on the contrary, appear regularly described as such in the accounts alluded to.

As the Exchequer Accounts are made records by statute, and as such the Comptroller-general, not feeling himself justified in making any correction or alteration therein, he directs that this Minute be appended to the Quarterly Account now about to be furnished to the Auditors, in order to carry into effect the desire of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Secretary of the Treasury to Comptroller-general, 7 March 1851.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 7 March 1851.

WITH reference to your Lordship's letter of 14 January last, on the subject of an erroneous payment into the Exchequer, on 31 July 1850, by the Paymaster-general of the sum of 681 l. 13 s. 6 d., specified as being "three-fourths of the value of a box of Sycee "silver, deficient in the consignment to this country, by Her Majesty's ship 'Serpent;' but "which sum was, in fact, part of the surplus balance of the grant of Parliament, on account "of the relief of the distress in Ireland and Scotland;" and with reference also to the accounts of imprest monies repaid by Public Accountants in the year ended 5 January 1851, subsequently transmitted to this Board by your Lordship, from which accounts the said sum of 681 l. 13 s. 6 d. is altogether omitted; I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to inform your Lordship, that as it is necessary to show, in the Finance Accounts laid before Parliament, the whole of the imprest monies repaid to the Exchequer within the year, my Lords request that your Lordship will cause the requisite addition to be made to the Account, No. 4, which is accordingly herewith returned to your Lordship for that purpose.

I have, &c.
(signed) G. Cornewall Lewis.

To the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 10 March 1851.

My Lords, Exchequer, 10 March 1851.

I SEE no sufficient reason to prevent me from complying with the request contained in Mr. Cornewall Lewis's letter of 7 March, and adding to my Account, No. 4, of the 31 January, the sum of 681 l. 13 s. 6 d., erroneously described by the Paymaster-general; but your Lordships will perceive that this addition to the Account, No. 4, must be accompanied by a simultaneous entry of the explanatory memorandum made by me to the Account, No. 6, in in which account the sum in question appears, as being the proceeds of Sycee silver; and which memorandum, it seems to me, should necessarily appear on the face of the Parliamentary Accounts. Appendix, No. 9.

I have, &c.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, &c. &c. &c. (signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

(No. 25.)

Erroneous Repayment by Treasurer of Cashel and Shillelagh Union.

30 January 1851.

Comptroller-general's Minute, 30 Jan. 1851.

The Comptroller-general reads the letter of Mr. Cornewall Lewis, written by command of the Lords of the Treasury, and dated 10th September 1850, and enclosing a Minute of their Lordships' Board of 3d September 1850, specifying certain errors made by the treasurers of the Cashel and Shillelagh Unions in Ireland of sums levied under the Rate in Aid Act, and requesting that the Exchequer Accounts may be so adjusted as to meet the views of the Lords of the Treasury in correcting the specified errors.

It appears that the treasurer of the Cashel Union is stated by the Treasury Minute to have erroneously paid to the credit of the Paymaster of Civil Services a sum of 2,729 l. 1 s. as a repayment of advances under the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 7, but which sum had been raised under the Rate in Aid Act 12 Vict. c. 24, and that a similar mistake had been made by the treasurer of the Shillelagh Union in relation to another sum of 372 l. 16 s. 9 d. As the payments to the Exchequer Account have, it is to be presumed, been made by the Paymaster of Civil Services, in conformity with the statute, it would follow that there is an error of excess in the repayments to the Consolidated Fund of 3,101 l. 16 s. 10 d., in consequence of the mistake of the treasurer of the two unions already named, and a deficiency to the same amount in the repayments to the Rate in Aid. The Lords of the Treasury were informed by the Assistant Comptroller, on 18th September, in conformity with the invariable usage of this department, that the suggestion contained in Mr. Cornewall Lewis's letter of 10th September, that "The Exchequer Accounts should be so adjusted "as to meet the views of the Lords of the Treasury," for the correction of these errors, could not be legally complied with.

The Comptroller-general reads further a letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, 15th November 1850, enclosing a report from the Commissioners of Audit (23 October 1850) on the same subject, and conveying the desire of the Lords of the Treasury, that the accounts of this department may be adjusted in the manner suggested by the Auditors, unless the Comptroller-general shall see any material objection thereto.

The Auditors state in their letter, that in their opinion the course recommended in the Treasury Minute of 3d September, already alluded to, would be the most simple and satisfactory; but, inasmuch as such a course appears to the Comptroller-general contrary to usage and to law, he does not feel it necessary to advert to such proposition further, though at variance with their opinion.

The Auditors themselves seem to adopt the judgment of the Comptroller-general when they most properly state that they could not allow the accounts already furnished to them to be altered, in which accounts the errors made in Ireland, and continued in the payments made to the Exchequer Account, were necessarily included. From the statutable character of records given to the Exchequer Accounts, such adjustment would be most inexpedient, even if legal, as the entries would then cease to correspond with the specifications and acquittances which are their vouchers.

Probably from anticipating this result, the Auditors suggest that a memorandum of the transaction may be made in the next quarterly statement rendered by the Comptroller-general, and although the facts can only be known to him through the documents already laid by the Treasury before the Auditors, which is higher authority and better evidence than any secondary recital of the same facts can be, he has prepared this Minute, and directs that it may be appended to the quarterly statement for the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Audit.

(signed) Monteagle.

(No. 26.)

Salaries, Irish Courts of Justice; P. K. Mahony.

Exchequer, 8 April 1851.

My Lords,

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 8 April 1851.

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of 5th April, directing a transfer of 39,916 l. 7 s. 8 d. to the account of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, for expenses of Her Majesty's Courts of Justice in Ireland.

I have to observe in relation to a sum of 115 l. 7 s. 9 d., being the quarter's salary assigned to the Accountant-general of the Court of Exchequer, that the officer, Mr. P. K. Mahony, was returned as dead in the January schedule. In fact, he ought to have been so returned in the quarter preceding for October, notwithstanding which this charge has been irregularly continued, as even if there were a power of filling up the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Mahony, I should not feel myself authorised to put such a charge on the Consolidated Fund, without an official knowledge of the fact, and date of the new appointment; but it appears to me that the office of Accountant-general of the Exchequer is one of the offices abolished under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 51, s. 12, all the funds of the Court standing to the Accountant-general's credit, being by s. 4 transferred to the Court of Chancery.

Appendix, No. 9.

I have, therefore, till I am more fully informed, deducted from my warrant of transfer the sum of 115 l. 7 s. 9 d. payable on this account.

I have to request your Lordships to obtain, for the guidance of this department, information from the Paymaster of Civil Services with respect to the date of the death of Mr. P. K. Mahony, late Accountant-general of the Exchequer, and a statement of what issue has been made, and to whom, of the sums charged as for this office, in the several quarters for October 1850 and January 1851. It may also be necessary to have an account of the several offices abolished under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 51, s. 12, of their annual salaries and emoluments, and the funds from which they were payable respectively.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 13 June 1851.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 13 June 1851.

With reference to your Lordship's letter of the 8th April last relative to the death of Mr. P. K. Mahony, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit herewith copy of a report from the Paymaster of Civil Services in Dublin for your Lordship's information.

I am also to transmit to you a list of officers on the equity side of the Exchequer, abolished by the Act of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 51, and to acquaint your Lordship that it has not yet been decided whether the offices of Serjeant-at-Arms and Usher, held by Mr. M'Clintock and Mr. Breen, were abolished by that Act.

I am, &c.
(signed) G. Cornewall Lewis.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, &c. &c. &c.

Report of Paymaster of Civil Services, 3 May 1851.

It was not until the 30th ultimo that the precise date of the late Mr. P. K. Mahony's death was ascertained by this department, viz. 21st July 1850, when his widow, as administratrix, was authorised to draw a bill for 32 l. 2 s. 4 d. for salary of deceased to that date; and on the 1st instant 198 l. 13 s. 2 d. was transferred to the Exchequer account at the Bank of Ireland, being savings on the sums included in respect of the deceased officer, in quarterly schedules to October 1850 and January 1851.

In the quarterly schedule to October 1850, Mr. Acheson Lyle was included for 500 l. as Chief Remembrancer, of which 190 l. 14 s. 5 d. was paid to him for his salary as such to 31st July 1850, and the balance, viz. 309 l. 5 s. 7 d. applied towards the payment of his salary as Master in Chancery from 1st August 1850. Mr. M'Clintock, Serjeant-at-Arms, still receives a salary of 88 l. 1 s. per annum, and Mr. Breen a salary of 200 l. as Usher; but it is doubtful whether they originally belonged to the law or equity side of the Exchequer. This office is unable to give the information required with respect to the other abolished offices on the equity side of the Exchequer.

(signed) A. Chalmers, for Paymaster Civil Services.

Dublin, 3 May 1851.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 August 1851.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 August 1851.

I have had the honour of explaining, both orally and in correspondence, the irregularity of system which has prevailed with respect to certain charges on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland, the consequences of which have received not only illustration, but proof, in the continuance on the schedules prepared by the Paymaster of Civil Services, and communicated by your Lordships' authority to me, of the name and salary of Mr. Pierce Mahony, after the death of that officer, and the abolition of his office by statute.

Accounts are rendered to me by the Paymaster of Civil Services, of the savings transferred to the Exchequer account, but this is done without system, and I have therefore to request your Lordships to give instructions that these accounts should be in future rendered to this office quarterly, in the first week of the months of March, June, September and December, made up to the latest period, and specifying the amount of saving, and the precise items on which it occurred. This would afford me a check in considering the propriety and legality of the charges included in the schedules for the subsequent quarter, and would prevent any error similar to that described in my letter of the 8th April 1851.

In respect to the same schedules, I have also to call your attention to another matter which required correction. When a charge is placed on the Consolidated Fund in England, even in cases where the fact is notorious, as for example, an annuity granted by Her Majesty to a member of the Royal Family, under an express statute, the patent, or other instrument, is produced, entered and copied in this department, and is thus made the foundation of the subsequent charges and issues; but in the Irish schedules the authority is most commonly set forth as "Treasury letters," of a given date, no communication of such Treasury letter being made to me. I have to submit to your Lordships the propriety, in point of law, that your Lordship's minute, letter or warrant should be communicated here contemporaneously to its transmission to Ireland; it would then be entered on the records of this office, and I should should thus obtain an effective check on the correctness of the schedules for the quarterly charges, which is now wanting. Requesting your Lordship's attention to these suggestions,

I have, &c.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury. (signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 17 September 1851.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 17 Sept. 1851.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having had before them your Lordship's letter of the 11th ultimo, calling the attention of this Board to certain irregularities which have prevailed with regard to the charges on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland, I am commanded by their Lordships to transmit, for your information with respect to the directions they have given for the purpose of carrying into effect the suggestions contained in your letter, copy of their Minute of the 12th instant thereon; and I am to request that you will give directions that all warrants, letters, and other instruments authorising charges to be made on the Consolidated Fund, may be entered in your office immediately on their being sent to you from the Treasury, and that a note of such entry may be made on the instrument.

I am, &c.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, &c. &c. &c. (signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

Treasury Minute, dated 12 September 1851.

Treasury Minute, 12 Sept. 1851.

Read a letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, dated the 11th ult., calling their Lordships' attention to certain irregularities which have prevailed with respect to the charges on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland.

For the purpose of furnishing him with the information which is necessary to afford him a check in considering the propriety and legality of the several charges included in the quarterly schedule proposed by the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, and sanctioned by the Treasury, his Lordship is of opinion that a statement should be forwarded to the office quarterly, in the first week in March, June, September and December, of the several items in which savings have been made, by deaths or otherwise, in the charges upon the quarter; and he should also be informed whenever any new charges are directed by this Board to be inserted in the schedule.

Write to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, desiring he will transmit to my Lords an account of the savings, arising from deaths or otherwise, which will probably be made in the charges on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland which will appear in his schedule for the present quarter when compared with the last, and that he will send similar amounts of savings in the first week of March, June, September and December in every year, in order that my Lords may forward the same to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, to enable him to check the propriety and legality of the charges which may appear in the schedule when they come before him.

Inform him also that for the same purpose my Lords will direct that all warrants or letters, and other instruments issued from the Treasury, authorising the insertion of any new charge in the schedule of payments to be made from the Consolidated Fund in Ireland shall be first transmitted to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, in order that they may be entered in his office; and desire that in case any warrant, letter or other instrument authorising a charge on the Consolidated Fund shall be transmitted to him, on the face of which it shall not appear that it has been entered at the Exchequer, he will return the same to the office, in order that it may be so entered.

Let care be taken in the several departments of the office that all warrants, letters and other instruments authorising charges to be made on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland may be first sent to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, to be entered in his office, before any are forwarded to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland.

(No. 27.)

Issue to Paymaster-general for Constabulary Expenses, Ireland.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 April 1851.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 April 1851.

I have the honour to call your Lordships' attention to your warrant of this morning's date, authorising a transfer from the Exchequer account with the Bank of Ireland of a sum of 2,460*l.* for constabulary expenses in Ireland, which transfer is directed to be made to the Paymaster of Civil Services, and not to A. B. Cane, Esq., Receiver of Constabulary, as has hitherto been the invariable usage. I have referred to the original Act, 6 Will. 4, c. 13, s. 35, and find that by that section the issues from the Consolidated Fund for this branch of the public service are directed to be made to the Receiver, agreeably to the usage hitherto acted on. It is true that the expenses of the constabulary are affected by the subsequent Act of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 97, and the section 35 of 6 Will. 4. c. 13, is recited as amongst the provisions in the first statute affected and varied by the second.

Appendix, No. 9.

But that part of section 35 which directs the issues to be made to the Receiver of Constabulary, does not appear to me to have been repealed; nor would such a supposition be consistent with the mode of transfer hitherto practised, anteriorly to the date of your Lordships' last warrant; I have therefore, with much regret, to ask your Lordships for a reference to some legislative authority which repeals or varies my obligations to issue to the Receiver under the express words of 6 Will. 4, c. 13, s. 35.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-General.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

My dear Lord, Treasury, 16 April 1851.

Sir C. E. Trevelyan to Comptroller-general, 16 April 1851.

We are placed in an embarrassing position by your letter on the subject of the issue to the Paymaster of Civil Services, on account of the Receiver of Constabulary. Following out our usual policy, we have, in order to avoid an unsafe accumulation of funds in the hands of the Receiver, taken the opportunity of a revision of the financial arrangements of the force, consequent on the abolition of the paymasterships, to arrange that the issues to the Receiver shall be made through the Paymaster of Civil Services, by whom the money will be doled out as it is required; and as it never occurred to us that the legality of this course of proceeding could be questioned, it has been embodied in full detail in the revised printed regulations.

As I leave town to-morrow morning, I have requested Mr. Leake to wait upon you, and he will explain our reasons for thinking that we have not transgressed the law.

I have, &c.
The Right Hon. Lord Monteagle. (signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 2 May 1851.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 2 May 1851.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, in answer to your letter of the 11th instant, in which you stated the legal objections which appeared to your Lordship to exist to the issue of money from the Consolidated Fund for constabulary services in Ireland, under the authority of the Acts of 6 Will. 4, c. 13, and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 97, to any person except the Receiver of the Constabulary, as their Lordships' Warrant of the 11th instant required; that my Lords, with a view to meet your Lordship's objections, have caused another warrant to be prepared, directing the issue to be made to the Paymaster of Civil Services, for the use of the Receiver of the Constabulary, and to be applied by him for Constabulary Services; and I am to request that you will act upon this second warrant, if you see no objection thereto, and return the first warrant to this Board, in order that it may be cancelled.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Right Hon. the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

(No. 28.)

Unissued Balances of Consolidated Fund.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 August 1851.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 Aug. 1851.

I have the honour to recall to your Lordships' memory my letter of 3d March 1848, in which I informed you that there were unissued balances, under the heads set forth below, which remained by reason of the excess of the issues charged on the Consolidated Fund, between the July quarter 1838 and the 5th January 1847, and the actual issues made, amounting to 21,347 l. 18 s. 11 d., viz.:—

	£.	s.	d.
Salaries and Allowances - - - - - -	6,541	8	4
Diplomatic Services - - - - - -	14,792	2	1
Interest on Exchequer Bills, 1839 - - -	14	8	6
	21,347	18	11

I have now to apprise your Lordships that a further accumulation of outstanding balances has taken place under the heads set forth in the paper enclosed; and considering the manifest inconvenience which must arise out of the continuance of so many years' accounts, under unsatisfied warrants, and the irregularities which might be consequent therefrom, I am led to expect that your Lordships will concur with me in the expediency of of giving me an authority to close the accounts finally, and to declare the unsatisfied balances to be savings. Appendix, No. 9.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

	£.	s.	d.
Former report - - - - - -	21,347	18	11
Present report - - - - - -	49,315	6	3
TOTAL - - -	70,663	5	2

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

(Enclosure.)

PARTICULARS of BALANCES charged on the Consolidated Fund.

Quarters ending	Salaries and Allowances Nil. Annuities and Pensions. £.	s.	d.	Diplomatic Services. £.	s.	d.	Annual Total. £.	s.	d.
5 April - - 1847	-	-	-	754	13	1
5 July - - „	-	-	-	1,062	2	9
10 October - „	-	-	-	2,008	15	7
5 January - 1848	-	-	-	2,217	-	4
							6,042	11	9
5 April - - „	-	-	-	1,648	6	-
5 July - - „	-	-	-	1,945	1	5
10 October - „	-	-	-	617	3	9
5 January - 1849	-	-	-	2,794	-	5
							7,004	11	7
5 April - - „	-	-	-	1,840	13	2
5 July - - „	-	-	-	3,018	9	9
10 October - „	25,000	-	-	3,476	5	8
5 January - 1850	-	-	-	2,932	14	4
							36,268	2	11
TOTAL - - £.	25,000	-	-	24,315	6	3	49,315	6	3

Treasury Chambers, 23 August 1851.

My Lord,

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit, for your Lordship's information, a copy of a Treasury Minute of the 19th, upon the subject of your Lordship's communication of the 11th instant, and to request that you will take the sum of 14 l. 8 s. 6 d., interest on Exchequer Bills 1839, and so much of the sum of 6,541 l. 8 s. 4 d. (reported on the 3d March 1848 to be outstanding on salaries and allowances) as may now remain unissued as savings. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 23 Aug. 1851.

I am further to request that your Lordship will report the particular annuity or annuities forming the sum of 25,000 l.,* which is reported to be outstanding in your letter of the 11th instant.

* Vide next Letter.

I am, &c.
(signed) G. Cornewall Lewis.

The Right Hon. the Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 19 August 1851.

MY LORDS refer to the letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer of the 3d of March 1848, and to the minute of the 14th of the same month, directing an application to be made to the Foreign Office, requesting the opinion of the Secretary of State whether the arrear of claims upon the Consolidated Fund, on account of salaries of diplomatic servants between July 1838 and January 1847, might not be brought forward in aid of the public service, to which letters no answer has been received.

Write to Mr. Addington, requesting he will call the attention of Viscount Palmerston to the above letter, and transmit to him an extract of so much of the enclosed statement as relates relates to the diplomatic services, from which it will appear that the sums now outstanding on warrants issued for that service, amount to 39,107 l. 8 s. 4 d., viz.—

Appendix, No. 9.

	£.	s.	d.
In the former statement - - - - - -	14,792	2	1
In the present - - - - - - - -	24,315	6	3
	£.39,107	8	4

Request he will inform Lord Palmerston that, unless his Lordship shall see any objection thereto, my Lords will give directions to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to declare these unsatisfied balances to be savings.

My Lords, Exchequer, 6 October 1851.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 6 Oct. 1851.

Giving information on sum of 25,000 l. reported as saving, charged for Queen Dowager.

Vide preceding Letter.

In reply to your Lordships' inquiry made on the 23d August, with respect to the annuity of 25,000 l. forming the sum reported by me as charged on the Consolidated Fund, and unissued, I have to inform you that it consists of the quarter's charge on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter October 1849, for the late Queen Dowager, whose death took place before such annuity became payable.

I therefore presume the proper course will be, to declare that sum a saving, as already suggested by my letter of the 11th August.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

To the Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 6 December 1851.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 6 Dec. 1851.

With reference to your Lordship's letters of 11th August and 6th October last, reporting certain sums, amounting in the whole to 70,663 l. 5 s. 2 d. which are now outstanding balances, and have formed parts of the charges on the Consolidated Fund in the respective quarters between the 5th of July 1838 and 5th January 1850, as will more particularly appear by the accompanying warrant; and suggesting, that as the said sums are not likely to be required for the public service, they may be declared savings, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship that my Lords entirely approve of your suggestion, and are pleased to authorize your Lordship to cause the said sums to be withdrawn from the amount of appropriated balances, and made available and brought in aid of the first issues from the Consolidated Fund in the present quarter.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

Treasury Warrant.

Whereas it appears by the under-mentioned Account, that the following Sums remain to be issued to complete the charges on the Consolidated Fund; viz.

Quarters ending	Annuities and Pensions.			Salaries and Allowances.			Diplomatic Services.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
5 July - - 1838	-	-	-	37	17	6	—
10 October - „	-	-	-	100	-	-	—
5 January - 1839	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,308	10	-
5 April - - „	-	-	-	50	-	-	—
10 October - „	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,039	3	10
5 January - 1840	-	-	-	-	-	-	503	3	9
5 April - - „	-	-	-	-	-	-	86	7	1
5 July - - „	-	-	-	-	-	-	354	19	1
5 January - 1841	-	-	-	-	-	-	79	11	6
5 July - - „	-	-	-	6,000	-	-	—
5 January - 1842	-	-	-	-	-	-	50	-	-
5 July - - „	-	-	-	-	-	-	588	13	9
5 April - - 1843	-	-	-	-	-	-	120	8	5
5 July - - „	-	-	-	-	-	-	107	10	2
10 October - „	-	-	-	-	-	-	271	-	3

TREASURY WARRANT—continued.

Quarters ending	Annuities and Pensions. £. s. d.	Salaries and Allowances. £. s. d.	Diplomatic Services. £. s. d.
5 January - 1844	- - -	- - -	187 9 10
5 July - - „	- - -	- - -	38 3 2
10 October - „	- - -	- - -	1,524 9 6
5 January - 1845	- - -	353 10 10	1,229 7 1
5 April - - „	- - -	- - -	358 17 9
5 July - - „	- - -	- - -	666 16 10
10 October - „	- - -	- - -	1,730 10 1
5 January - 1846	- - -	- - -	1,769 7 4
5 April - - „	- - -	- - -	1,438 4 10
5 July - - „	- - -	- - -	421 6 11
5 January - 1847	- - -	- - -	918 - 11
5 April - - „	- - -	- - -	754 13 1
5 July - - „	- - -	- - -	1,062 2 9
10 October - „	- - -	- - -	2,008 15 7
5 January - 1848	- - -	- - -	2,217 - 4
5 April - - „	- - -	- - -	1,648 - 6
5 July - - „	- - -	- - -	1,945 1 5
10 October - „	- - -	- - -	617 3 9
5 January - 1849	- - -	- - -	2,794 - 5
5 April - - „	- - -	- - -	1,840 13 2
5 July - - „	- - -	- - -	3,018 9 9
10 October - „	25,000 - -	- - -	3,476 5 8
5 January - 1850	- - -	- - -	2,932 14 4
TOTALS - £.	25,000 - -	6,541 8 4	39,107 8 4

	£. s. d.
Diplomatic Services - - - - - - - -	39,107 8 4
Salaries and Allowances - - - - - - - -	6,541 8 4
Annuities and Pensions - - - - - - - -	25,000 - -
Interest on Exchequer Bills issued for Public Works, in the quarter ended 5 April 1839 - - - - - -	14 8 6
£.	70,663 5 2

Amounting, in the whole, to the sum of 70,663 l. 5*s.* 2*d.*, and which sum will not be required to be issued to complete the above charges, and are hereby declared savings.

These are to authorize and require you to transfer the above sum of 70,663*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* to the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, to be made available for any charges on the said Fund for the quarter ending 5th January 1852.

Whitehall, Treasury Chambers, this 5th day of December 1851.

(signed) R. M. Bellew.
H. Rich.

To the Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

(No. 29.)

Issues suspended for Salaries of Assistant Barristers, Ireland.

Exchequer, 18 October 1851.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 18 Oct. 1851.

My Lords,

I HAVE received your Lordships' warrant for directing a transfer in the books of the Bank of Ireland to the credit of the Paymaster of Civil Services (Mr. Grey) of a sum of 38,769 l. 13*s.* 3*d.*, being the amount of certain charges for Courts of Justice in Ireland, the particulars of which are detailed in the Schedule No. 3, prepared by Mr. Grey.

Among these charges are included the new and increased salaries of the 33 Assistant Barristers of Ireland, granted by an Act of the last Session (14 & 15 Vict. c. 57); to that Act is appended a Schedule classifying the Assistant Barristers, and fixing their salaries.

The new scale of salaries for these Local Judges is as follows:

1st Class - - - - - - - - -	£. 1,000
2d Class - - - - - - - - -	800
3d Class - - - - - - - - -	600

And

Appendix, No. 9.

And a special provision is also made for certain of the present assistant barristers during their tenure of office.

	Present Judge.	His Successors.
Dublin	£. 900	£. 800
Tipperary	1,600	1,000
East Riding, Cork	1,200	1,000

The Act contains the following proviso, section 4: "that such salaries shall be over and above the sum payable to them in respect to the registration or provision of Parliamentary voters."

By your Lordships' warrant of 20th September 1851, to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, an authority was given to pay the several assistant barristers the sum set forth in the Schedule in the Act of the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57, being the increased salaries to which I have adverted above. This warrant authorises no further payment.

In the quarterly schedule received from Mr. Grey for the payments of this October quarter, and transmitted with your Lordships' corresponding warrant (9th October instant), these salaries are set out as payable from 31st August 1851, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57; but a marginal note is made by Mr. Grey to the following effect: "100 l. a-year for revising the List of Parliamentary Voters is included (per s. 4, 14 & 15 Vict.)"

This sum has consequently been included, making an additional annual charge to the public for this service of 3,300 l.

I have referred to the section in question, and find it to be a saving of antecedent rights only, and not the creation of any new right, or the grant of any new emolument whatsoever.

It remains therefore to be ascertained what antecedent right to this payment of 3,300 l. did exist at the time of the passing of the 14 & 15 Vict., and whether the charge, if justifiable, is made in a proper and legal manner.

The statutes which bear on the subject are, 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, s. 67, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69. To these it is necessary to call your Lordships' attention, as, upon their meaning depends the legality of the present claim of an additional sum of 3,300 l. for the assistant barristers of Ireland.

By the Irish Reform Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, s. 66, the Government are authorised to appoint barristers of six years' standing to act as deputies to the assistant barristers for the revision of voters; and, by s. 56, such deputies shall receive five guineas per diem, and travelling expenses, the amount to be proved before the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and, in order to provide for the additional labour which shall devolve on the assistant barristers under this Act, it is made lawful for the Lord Lieutenant to direct the assistant barristers "to be paid, in addition to their salaries, such yearly sum not exceeding 100 l., at the discretion of the Lord Lieutenant."

Your Lordships will note that the payments to barristers other than assistant barristers is made a quantum meruit proportioned to the labour done. In relation to the assistant barristers, a maximum is fixed, subject, however, to the discretion of the Lord Lieutenant.

By the last Irish Franchise Act the system of registering voters was changed and simplified. By the section 10 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 69) the provisions of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, in respect to registration, and to the expense of such registration, are repeated, but with a somewhat contradictory proviso, "saving the yearly remuneration provided by the former "Act 2 & 3 Will. 4."

Not having before me any sufficient legal authority for the issue, either from your Lordships or from Ireland, I suspended the issue of this questionable sum till I shall be more fully informed on the subject. I requested from Mr. Grey such further information as should justify the issue.

By the post of this afternoon I have received a reply from that officer, together with a copy of the Lord Lieutenant's warrant constituting the authority for this payment. Mr. Grey's letter and a copy of the Lord Lieutenant's warrant are here enclosed.

It appears that on the 14th February 1833, subsequently to the enactment of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, Sir Hussey Vivian, as one of the Lords Justices of Ireland, directed the issue of 800 l., amount of additional salary for registering voters under the Reform Act, for one quarter of a year. It does not appear that this sum was otherwise sanctioned as a permanent annual charge, though Mr. Grey states it has since been subsequently paid and included in the quarterly warrants.

The original sum was fixed by statute as a maximum of 100 l., at the discretion of the Lord Lieutenant. By Sir Hussey Vivian's warrant this maximum sum was made a minimum fixed by the discretion of the Irish Government, and it is now proposed to continue it in future, as an additional payment to all assistant barristers, whether they are appointed to the larger counties (Class 1), or to the smaller (Classes 2 and 3).

I need not remind your Lordships that all the authorities vested in the Lord Lieutenant in 1833 are now transferred to your Lordships, and I therefore submit the facts to your consideration. Awaiting your further directions,

I have, &c.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty' Treasury.

My

Appendix, No. 9.

Treasury Chambers, 5 November 1851.

My Lord,

With reference to your Lordship's letter of the 18th ultimo, requesting directions as to whether the assistant barristers in Ireland are to be paid the allowances of 100 l. per annum heretofore made to them for revising the lists of Parliamentary voters, in addition to the increased salaries awarded to them, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit herewith, for your information, copy of their Lordships' Minute of the 4th instant, on the subject; and I am to request that you will now make a further transfer of 825 l. to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, to complete the warrant for the transfer from the Consolidated Fund of 38,769 l. 13 s. 3 d. to defray the expenses of courts of justice in Ireland, for the quarter ending 10 October 1851.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 5 Nov. 1851.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

COPY of Treasury Minute, dated the 4th November 1851.

Transmit to Sir Thomas Redington a copy of the letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer of the 18th ultimo, and request he will lay the same before the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland for his information, and call his attention to the enactments of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 57, adverted to by Lord Monteagle.

Treasury Minute, 4 Nov. 1851.

On considering these enactments, my Lords have authorised the insertion of the schedule of charges on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter ended 10th ultimo, of the allowances heretofore payable to the assistant barristers of 100 l. per annum each, for revising the list of Parliamentary voters, and will direct the Paymaster of Civil Services to pay the same, on sufficient funds being transferred to him by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer; but previously to issuing their warrant authorising the charge of these salaries in the schedules in future quarters, my Lords request that Sir T. Redington will inform them whether his Excellency is of opinion that, under the circumstances stated in Lord Monteagle's letter, the existing payments should be continued to the persons now holding the situation of assistant barrister; and if so, whether the salaries should not be subjected to a revision upon new appointments being made.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer for his information, with reference to his letter of 18th ultimo, and desire that he will now make a further transfer of 825 l. to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, to complete the warrant for the transfer from the Consolidated Fund of 38,769 l. 13 s 3 d. to defray the expenses of courts of justice in Ireland, for the quarter ending 10th October 1851.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland for his information, with reference to his letter of 17th ultimo on this subject.

Treasury Chambers, 19 November 1851.

My Lord,

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit herewith, for your Lordship's information, copy of a further Minute of this Board, dated 18th instant, relative to the period from which the increased salaries of the assistant barristers in Ireland are to commence, together with extracts from a letter from the Attorney-general for Ireland, dated 27th ultimo, and one from Mr. Coppinger, dated 20th ultimo, on this subject.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 19 Nov. 1851.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, &c. &c. &c.

COPY of Treasury Minute, dated 18 November 1851.

Read a copy of a letter from the Attorney-general for Ireland, in which he refers to the fourth section of the Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57, which directs that increased salaries shall be paid to the assistant barristers and other officers, in consideration of the additional duties thrown upon them by the said Act, and of the abolition of the fees heretofore received by them from the commencement of the said Act, which is fixed by the 164th section to be the 31st August 1851. Such increased salaries to be paid by four quarterly payments, the first payment thereof to be made on the quarterly day of payment which shall next ensue after the commencement of the Act; and the Attorney-general states it to be his opinion that, under the above enactment, the officers therein named are entitled to receive a full quarter's increased salary on the 29th September 1851; whereas the salaries have been inserted in the schedules for salaries prepared by the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, under their Lordships' directions, for the quarter ended 10th October 1851, for the period between the 31st August and 29th September only.

Treasury Minute, 18 Nov. 1851.

My Lords have also before them a copy of a letter from Mr. Coppinger on the subject of the allowances to be received by the assistant barristers under the recent Act.

Acquaint the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland with the opinion of the Attorney-general, and inform him that my Lords, concurring therein, desire that he will prepare and transmit to them a supplementary schedule of salaries chargeable on the Consolidated Fund, for

Appendix, No. 9.

for the quarter ended 10 October 1851, including the salaries inserted in Schedule (B.) of the Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57, calculated for the period from 24 June to 31 August 1851; and that, on receiving the same, my Lords will issue their warrant for the transfer of the amount thereof to the account of the Bank of Ireland, from the Consolidated Fund, and return to him the schedule, with their authority, for paying the salaries inserted therein.

Extract from Attorney-General for Ireland's Letter, dated 27 October 1851.

Attorney-general, Ireland, Opinion, 27 Oct. 1851.

It appears to me that the assistant barristers are entitled to the full rate of payment on the scale of the new salaries, for the quarter ended the 29th of September.

I think that they are so entitled under the legal construction of the new Act, and it appears to me that they are equitably so; as the fees which they would receive at the present October Sessions have, in the shape of stamps, been paid long since into the Treasury.

Extract from Mr. Coppinger's Letter, dated 20 October 1851.

Mr. Coppinger, 20 Oct. 1851.

First.—That the assistant barristers were not entitled to be paid a full quarter's salary, according to the rate prescribed by the present Civil Bill Act, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57.

That they were only entitled to receive a proportionable part of the increased salary under that Act; viz., from the first day of September up to the 29th day of that month, the quarter day.

That their salaries for the remainder of the quarter should be calculated after the rate of the old salaries payable to them.

The assistant barristers allege and claim to be entitled to the full quarter's salary, under the present Civil Bill Consolidated Act, and they assert that same was due to them on the 29th day of September, and is now payable to them.

They contend that the plain and literal meaning of the 4th section of the Act is to this effect.

They say that no other construction can be put upon the concluding words of that section; that the meaning of these words, "the first payment thereof to be made on the quarter day of payment which should next ensue after the commencement of this Act," means in plain English, that one quarter of the salary provided for by that Act should be paid on the first day of payment.

Such words occur every day in leases respecting the payment of the received rent, and in annuity deeds.

The 62d section of the Act states that additional salaries are to be paid in lieu of fees, which are abolished, and stamps substituted for these fees to create this fund; in fact, the fees are turned into stamps, and the money, instead of going at the sessions into the pocket of the assistant barrister, goes into the Treasury before the sessions, in the shape of stamps.

The Government have now received all the money payable on the proceedings by Civil Bill at the sessions now being held, and as the assistant barrister cannot receive any, it is not unreasonable that he should require to repair his salary out of that fund, expressly created for the purpose of paying him.

The fees payable to the assistant barrister of many counties amounted to very large sums of money; and several of them (if the Treasury persist in their present intentions), will lose some hundreds, or rather will be deprived of the same, though the Treasury has received the money properly applicable to pay them through means of the stamps.

These observations apply with peculiar force to those who hold first and second class counties, though all will suffer.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 25 Nov. 1851.

My Lords, Exchequer, 25 November 1851.

I beg to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 19th instant, on the subject of the salaries of the assistant barristers of Ireland, and their claim to the full increased salaries, provided under the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57, which your Lordships are of opinion, with the Attorney-general for Ireland, should be payable on the 29th of September 1851.

I observe that your Lordships' Minute states that you have instructed the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland to prepare and transmit a supplemental schedule of salaries chargeable on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter ended 10th of October 1851, including the additional sum in question for the Irish assistant barristers, with a view to the issue of your Lordships' Warrant for a corresponding transfer.

But on reflection, your Lordships will perceive that this course will be entirely irregular and unprecedented, and one which could not properly be carried into effect. The charge on the Consolidated Fund has already been ascertained and settled by your Lordships' Warrant, as compared and agreed on by this department. It cannot be reopened according to usage, and if such a step were taken, it would derange the accounts both of the Treasury and of the Exchequer.

Your Lordships' object will best be attained by including this unprovided-for balance in the charge on the Consolidated Fund, which will be settled at the next quarter; and if a payment payment is required in the meanwhile, your Lordships will be the best judges whether an advance may not be conveniently made out of Civil Contingencies, repayable to that fund in the next quarter. Appendix, No. 9.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 3 December 1851.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit, with reference to your Lordship's letter of the 25th ult., on the subject of the salaries of the assistant barristers in Ireland, and their claim to the full increased salaries provided by the Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57, copy of their Lordships' minute of 28th ultimo. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 3 Dec. 1851.

I have, &c.
The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. (signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

TREASURY MINUTE, dated 28 November 1851.

DIRECT the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland to advance out of the sums in his hands on account of Civil Contingencies, such sums as may be required for paying the salaries of the Chairman of the Dublin Sessions, and the assistant barristers included in the supplementary schedule transmitted in his letter of 21st instant, not exceeding in the whole the sum of 3,035 l. 15 s. 3 d., and such advance to be replaced to the Civil Contingencies from the Consolidated Fund when the warrant which has been prepared for charging these salaries on the Consolidated Fund can be legally issued. Treasury Minute, 28 Nov. 1851.

(No. 30.)

Issues suspended till Grants produced; Justice Crampton, &c.

My Lords, Exchequer, 7 April 1852.

WITH reference to your secretary's letter of the 5th instant, stating that certain charges for salaries had been directed to be placed on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter ended 5th April 1852, I beg to inform your Lordships that I have allowed those charges to be made; but in having done so, I must request that your Lordships will give directions that the several warrants granting those salaries should be forwarded to this department to be recorded, to authorise me in making the issue under your Lordships' directions. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 7 April 1852.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

My Lord, Treasury, 5 April 1852.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship that the names of the undermentioned persons have been placed on the Consolidated Fund; viz. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 5 April 1852.

Sir Charles Crompton, Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, in the room of Sir John Patteson, from 12 February 1852.

James Brooks, Esq., Treasurer of County Courts, in the room of James Hoskins, resigned, from 26 January 1852.

John Parker, Esq., Judge of the Court of Requests at Sheffield, from the 24th February 1852, when he resigned the office of Secretary to the Admiralty, at the rate of 1,239 l. 4 s. per annum.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

(No. 31.)

Issue; Salaries, Courts of Justice, Ireland.

My Lords, Exchequer, 12th April 1852.

I HAVE received your Lordships' Warrant for directing a transfer in the books of the Bank of Ireland to the credit of the Paymaster of Civil Services (Mr. Grey), of a sum of 43,780 l. 1 s. 7 d., being the amount of certain charges for courts of justice in Ireland, for the quarter ended 5th instant. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 12 April 1852.

With reference to several new charges in the Schedule of the Paymaster of Civil Services, I must beg to call your Lordships' attention to your minute of the 12th and letter of 17th

Appendix, No. 9.

September last, directing that, whenever any new charge was placed on the Consolidated Fund, "such warrant, letter or other instrument authorizing the charge should be transmitted to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, in order that they may be entered in his books before being forwarded to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland."

Not having received your Lordships' authority for placing the charges on the Consolidated Fund, as enumerated in the accompanying statement, I have deducted the amount, viz. 2,082*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*, from your warrant of the 5th instant; and so soon as I have received the requisite authorities for allowing these charges, I will forward a supplementary transfer to the Paymaster of Civil Services. I also beg to inform your Lordships that I have written to the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, stating my reasons for withholding the issue of the charges in question; and I have requested him to forward me a copy of those appointments, which do not appear to originate with your Lordships.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

Comptroller-general to Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland, 10 April 1852.

Sir, Exchequer, 10 April 1852.

In forwarding the transfer to the Bank of Ireland, for the payment of the salaries, &c. of the officers of the courts of justice in Ireland, for the quarter ended 5th instant, I beg to inform you that from the warrant of transfer for 43,780*l.* 1*s.* 7*d.*, the amount stated to be required, I have deducted the sum of 2,082*l.* 14*s.* 11*d.*, the particulars of which I enclose; and so soon as I have received the necessary copies of authorities for placing these charges in the Schedule, I will forward a supplementary transfer. I shall not require a copy of these charges, placed in the Schedule by authority of Treasury letter, from you, as the Treasury have given instructions for the proper authorities for allowing these charges to be forwarded to me.

I have, &c.
C. S. Grey, Esq. (signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

SCHEDULE enclosed.

		£.	s.	d.
Chancery	The Right Hon. Francis Blackburn, Lord Chancellor	615	7	8	Copy of Patent.
	J. M'Mahon, Acting Deputy Keeper of the Rolls	116	4	9	Treasury Letter.
Queen's Bench	The Right Hon. T. Lefroy, Chief Justice	236	19	10	Copy of Patent.
	Charles G. Burke, Master	136	5	3	Treasury Letter.
Common Pleas	Oliver M'Causland, Principal Assistant	69	4	7	- ditto.
	J. Stewart, 1st Clerk, relating to Judgments	23	1	6	- ditto.
	C. Davy, 2d ditto	11	10	9	- ditto.
	Hon. D. Plunket, Master	235	16	10	- ditto.
Exchequer	R. Wilson Greene, Fourth Baron	172	5	5	-- Copy of Patent or other Instrument.
Registration of Judgments Office	W. Scriven, Searching Clerk	16	9	8	-- Copy of Letter of Appointment.
	R. Hitchcock, ditto	17	2	10	- ditto.
Office of Clerk of Writs	Robert Cooper, Clerk of Writs	85	14	3	Treasury Letter.
	J. Clancy, 3d Assistant ditto	85	14	3	- ditto.
Assistant Barrister	A. Wills	225	–	–	-- Copy of Order of Lord Chancellor.
Four Courts, Marshalsea	J. D. Mullen, Marshal	35	17	4	-- Copy of Instrument of Appointment.
	£.	2,082	14	11

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 32.)

Irregular Issue of Royal Orders, no Ways and Means remaining Unappropriated; Kaffir War, &c.

MINUTE, 19 June 1852.

THE Comptroller-general notices the Treasury issuing letter dated 18th June, requiring a transfer of 3,000 l. to the Bank of Ireland, to the credit of the Paymaster of the Civil Services for the payment of the Dublin Police, and directing that the same should be charged to the account of the issue out of the Consolidated Fund of 8,000,000 l., per Act 15 Vict. c. 1. Comptroller-General's Minute, 19 June 1852.

The Comptroller-general adverts to the fact, that the ways and means voted amount to 25,742,800 l., and the same have already been exhausted by the following Royal Orders and corresponding Treasury Warrants; viz: for,

Army Services - - -	£. 3,000,000	bearing date	31 May 1852.
Navy Services - - - -	3,000,000	- -	3 April 1852.
Ordnance Services - - -	2,000,000	- -	3 April 1852.
Exchequer Bills - - -	17,742,800	- -	4 May 1852.
£.	25,742,800

He also refers to his letter to the Treasury of the 22d November 1841.

On these grounds he declines directing the transfer for 3,000 l., as desired in the issuing letter recited above. He communicated verbally to the Chancellor of the Exchequer the facts of the case, to avoid any unnecessary delay or impediment to the public service, in order that such steps may be taken as the Treasury may consider right, and that may enable him to make this transfer conformably with the Act for regulating the Exchequer.

He regrets that, per incuriam, one issue of 60,000 l. has been made under a Royal Order and Treasury Warrant dated 30th April 1852; and a transfer of 10,000 l. has also been made under a Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, dated the 12th June 1852, under similar circumstances to the present. The Comptroller-General awaits a communication from the Chancellor of the Exchequer with respect to the irregularity in question in order to give his permanent instruction as to the way in which the existing difficulty is to be met.

In the meanwhile let no credit or transfer be directed, except for Army, Navy, or Ordnance Service, till further orders.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

My Lords, Exchequer, 22 June 1852.

I BEG to call your Lordships' attention to an irregularity which has arisen in the Financial Administration of your Lordships' department, and in which this department is also to a certain extent involved. Comptroller-General to Treasury. 22 June 1852.

By the 15 Vict. c. 1, a sum of 8,000,000 l. was granted as Ways and Means out of the Consolidated Fund. This Act received the Royal Assent, 30 March.

By the 15 Vict. c. 10, a sum of 17,742,800 l. was authorised to be raised by Exchequer Bills for the service of the current year. This Act received the Royal Assent on the 3d May.

These Acts therefore made provision of Ways and Means, amounting together to a sum of 25,742,800 l.

Her Majesty's Royal Orders, and your Lordships' warrants were addressed to this department for the services, and of the dates as follows:—

Army - - - - -	31 March 1852 - - - - - -	£.	3,000,000
Navy - - - - -	3 April „ - - - - - -		3,000,000
Ordnance - - -	3 April „ - - - - - -		2,000,000
Exchequer Bills -	4 May „ - - - - - -		17,742,800
		£.	25,742,800

Appendix, No. 9.

Thus the full amount of 25,742,800 l. provided under the two Acts which I have adverted to, was acted upon and appropriated by the Royal and Treasury authorities recited.

This was not according to the usual course taken by the Treasury, but it was in all respects within the terms of the law, and was an exercise of your Lordships' discretion which neither required nor would have justified any observation from me.

It, however, rendered the issue of any further Royal Orders or Treasury Warrants impossible till further Ways and Means had been provided.

Three such Orders issued, and were addressed to me, to which it is my duty to call your Lordships' attention. They were as follows:—

	Royal Orders.		Issuing Letters.
	Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.
		£.		£.
Kaffir War - - -	30 April -	460,000	28 May -	60,000
Irish Education - - -	12 June -	164,577	12 June -	10,000
Dublin Police - - -	12 June -	36,500	18 June -	3,000

Attention was not directed in this office, as I admit ought to have been done, to the fact, that when the two first Royal Orders were issued no Ways and Means existed warranting such Orders, and that, consequently, they were not executed in conformity with the law. A vote in Ways and Means had, however, been taken in the House of Commons, and the Appropriation Act was in progress that would have given them validity had that Act been previously passed.

I regret to say that, acting on the Royal Orders in question, and your Lordships' Secretary's issuing letter, credits were issued as if no irregularity had taken place in your Lordships' department. That error was not discovered.

But on the 19th June an issuing letter was addressed to me to transfer 3,000 l. to Ireland for the Dublin Police under the Royal Order of the 12th June. The irregularity was then first brought under my notice, and I felt it my duty to decline making the transfer, as it was unsupported by due authority, no Ways and Means being unappropriated.

I had the honour of communicating to the Chancellor of the Exchequer the fact of the previous appropriation of the whole of the Ways and Means granted, and the legal objection which existed to the Royal Order for the Dublin police. At that time I was not aware that the two credits for the Kaffir War and the Irish Education were subject to the same objection.

But a series of Royal Orders, of which the following is a list, have since been forwarded to me, which are all equally irregular, and on which I cannot legally act. I beg to refer your Lordships to my letter to the Treasury, of 22d November 1841, and to the opinion of the law officers referred to therein. Perhaps this reference may suggest to your Lordships, as a fit subject of consideration, the mode in which these irregularities may be corrected, and I shall be happy to concur with your Lordships in taking the simplest and most convenient mode of correcting the errors I have noticed.

I should not have addressed this letter to your Lordships, but for the error which per incuriam has taken place in the Exchequer, and for which I hold myself responsible.

Awaiting your Lordships' instructions,

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Compt^r.-Gen^l.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

APPENDIX.

Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants, dated 12 June 1852.

		£.
Chief Secretary's Office (Ireland)	A° 1852	22,563
Board of Public Works - ditto	„	32,013
Mint Expenses	„	36,439
Office of Woods	„	20,645
Lord Privy Seal	„	2,680
Commissioners of Public Works	„	22,820
Comptroller-General, Exchequer Office	„	6,326
Paymaster-general's Office	„	23,150
Poor Law Commissioners	„	221,361
Factory Officers, &c.	„	15,190
Public Record Office	„	11,668
Port Patrick Harbour	„	1,351
Superintendence of Prisons	„	16,196
Stationery, accommodation for	„	10,000
Sheriff's Expenses	„	17,700
Law Expenses (Scotland)	„	121,165
Law Charges in Ireland	„	57,710
Holyhead Harbour	„	89,396
Kingstown Harbour	„	11,028
Dublin Police	„	36,500
County Rates	„	240,000
Works, &c., New Houses of Parliament	„	121,249
Maintenance of Prisoners	„	159,123
Harbours of Refuge	„	170,000
Royal Palaces, &c.	„	113,476
Stationery	„	216,509
Secret Service (dated 14 June)	„	32,000
Salaries, &c. Houses of Parliament	„	95,800
Paymaster Civil Services Office, Ireland	„	6,051
Household, Lord Lieutenant	„	6,464
State Paper Office	„	2,761
Officers in Scotland	„	1,700
Ecclesiastical Commisionsers	„	3,273
Colonial Office	A° 1852	38,815
Privy Council Office	„	65,320
Foreign Office	„	67,735
Treasury	„	54,400
Home Office	„	26,550
Education, Great Britain	„	160,000
Royal Parks, &c.	„	60,546
Prison and Convicts	„	261,522
Public Buildings (Ireland)	„	35,865
Repository for Public Records	„	8,320
Justices, &c., West Indies	„	33,862
Governors, &c., ditto	„	19,528
Western Australia	„	7,059
Western Coast of Africa	„	13,780
Indian Department, Canada	„	12,424
Ecclesiastical Establishment, B. N. America	„	7,747
St. Helena	„	10,802
Bermudas	„	4,019
Port Essington	„	491
Queen's University, Ireland	„	1,710
University of London	„	3,957
Royal Hibernian Academy	„	300
Royal Irish Academy	„	300
Royal Dublin Society	„	6,340
Professors, Belfast	„	3,000
Geological Survey	„	14,920
Scientific Works, &c.	„	4,018
Scottish Universities	„	7,560
Schools of Design, &c.	„	17,920
Oxford and Cambridge Professors	„	2,006
National Gallery	„	2,495
Buildings, British Museum	„	21,350
Establishment, ditto	„	52,343
Antiquities, ditto	„	2,966
National Gallery, Scotland	„	5,000

Treasury to Comptroller-General. 26 June 1852.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 26 June 1852.

I have laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury your Lordship's letter of the 22d instant, pointing out irregularities which have arisen in the execution of Royal Orders, and am directed to acquaint you that My Lords deeply regret that irregularities should have occurred, both in their Department and in the Exchequer, in so important a branch of the public service as that relating to the issue of money.

I have to state to your Lordship that it appears to My Lords that the simplest mode of obviating the difficulty to which these irregularites have led, will be that their Lordships should submit to Her Majesty warrants for altering the apportionment directed by former Royal Orders of the sums appropriated to paying off Exchequer Bills, and for the services of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance.

My Lords cannot conclude without expressing their hope that such irregularities will not again occur, either in their Department or in that which is under your Lordships' control.

I have, &c.
(signed) Geo. A. Hamilton.

The Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

Comptroller-General to Treasury. 13 July 1852. See List of Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants appended.

My Lords, Exchequer, 13 July 1852.

I have postponed acknowledging the honour of your Lordships' letter of the 26th June till I had examined and controlled the several Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants marked in the margin. This has now been done, and under the force of the amending Royal Orders, and corresponding Warrants of the 24th and 25th June. the 53 Warrants founded on the votes of 4 and 7 June are, in my judgment, rendered available for the public service, and valid.

In reference to the hope which your Lordships express, that such irregularity may not take place again, either in your Lordships' Department or in mine, I have much satisfaction in assuring you that I have given such directions as shall ensure the immediate notice of any such irregular Royal Orders or Treasury Warrants as those I have alluded to, should they be addressed to the Exchequer; so that the issues which such Orders and Warrants may direct may immediately be stopped. In the two cases which unfortunately did occur before before the irregularity in the issue of the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants was discovered at the Exchequer, and the transfer under a third Warrant stopped by me, this Department was misled by the course, for the first time, I believe, adopted by your Lordships, in exhausting the whole ways and means voted on the three great services, and on the year's Exchequer Bills, and by the subsequent preparation of Orders and Warrants before ways and means had been provided.

Appendix, No. 9.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

APPENDIX to Comptroller-General's LETTER of 13 July 1852.

A LIST of ROYAL ORDERS and TREASURY WARRANTS which have not been acted on.

DATE OF RESOLUTION.	SERVICE.	AMOUNT.
		£.
4 June 1852	Salaries, Chief Secretary's Office, Ireland	22,563
4 —	Salaries, Board of Public Works	32,013
4 —	Expenses, Poor Law Commissioners	221,361
4 —	Salaries, Inspectors of Factories	15,190
4 —	Salaries, Exchequer	6,326
4 —	Salaries, Public Record Office	11,668
4 —	Port Patrick Harbour	1,351
4 —	Superintendence of Prisons	16,196
4 —	Expenses, Stationery Department	10,000
4 —	Sheriffs' Expenses	17,700
4 —	Law Expenses, Scotland	121,165
4 —	Law Charges, Ireland	57,710
4 —	Holyhead Harbour, &c.	89,396
4 —	Kingstown Harbour	11,028
4 —	County Rates	240,000
4 —	New Houses of Parliament, Works at	121,249
4 —	Maintenance of Prisoners	159,123
4 —	Harbours of Refuge	170,000
4 —	Royal Palaces and Public Buildings	113,476
4 —	Expense of stationery, printing, &c.	216,509
4 —	Secret Service	32,000
4 —	Salaries, Houses of Parliament	95,800
4 —	Salaries, Lord Lieutenant's Household	6,464
4 —	Salaries, State Paper Office	2,761
4 —	Salaries, Officers in Scotland	1,700
4 —	Expenses, Ecclesiastical Commissioners	3,273
4 —	Salaries, Home Office	26,550
4 —	Public Education, Great Britain	160,000
4 —	Prisons and Convict Establishments at home	261,522
4 —	Public Buildings, Ireland	35,865
4 —	General Repository, Public Records	8,320
7 —	Justices, West Indies	33,862
7 —	Governors, West Indies	19,528
7 —	Western Australia	7,059
7 —	Western Coast of Africa	13,780
7 —	Indian Department, Canada	12,424
7 —	Ecclesiastical Establishment, North America	7,747
7 —	St. Helena	10,802
7 —	Bermudas	4,019
7 —	Port Essington	491
7 —	Queen's University, Ireland	1,710
7 —	London University	3,957
7 —	Royal Hibernian Academy	300
7 —	Royal Irish Academy	300
7 —	Royal Dublin Society	6,340
7 —	Salaries, Theological Professors, Belfast	3,000
7 —	Geological Survey, Ireland	14,920
7 —	Scientific works, &c.	4,018
7 —	Scottish Universities	7,560
7 —	Oxford and Cambridge Professors	2,006
7 —	Expenses, National Gallery	2,495

Appendix, No. 9.

DATE OF RESOLUTION.	SERVICE.	AMOUNT.
		£.
7 June 1852	National Gallery, Scotland	5,000
7 —	Buildings, British Museum	21,350
10 —	New Zealand	10,000
10 —	Heligoland	986
10 —	Falkland Islands	9,474
10 —	Emigration	14,083
10 —	Captured Negroes	30,000
10 —	Suppression of Slave Trade	11,250
10 —	Consuls abroad	150,983
10 —	Superannuations	135,359
10 —	Toulonese and Corsican Emigrants	3,219
10 —	Vaccine Establishment	2,000
10 —	Refuge for the Destitute	325
10 —	Polish Refugees	3,300
14 —	Miscellaneous, formerly Civil List	4,469
14 —	Foundling Hospital, Dublin	1,691
4 —	Law Charges, England	21,000
4 —	Insolvent Debtors Court	8,830
4 —	Transportation of Convicts	101,041
4 —	Convict Establishments in the Colonies	253,587
14 —	Civil Contingencies	100,000
14 —	Encumbered Estates' Commission	11,730
14 —	Concordatum Fund	6,552
14 —	Dr. Steeven's Hospital, Dublin	1,050
14 —	House of Industry, Dublin	9,788
14 —	Westmorland Lock Hospital	1,500
14 —	Female Orphan House, Dublin	600
14 —	Incurables Hospital, Dublin	350
14 —	Fever Hospital, Dublin	2,660
14 —	Lying-in Hospital, Dublin	600
14 —	Repairs, Ambassador's House, Madrid	783
14 —	Navigation, Menai Straits	4,000
14 —	Lighthouses abroad	7,760
15 —	Labuan	4,000
15 —	Hong Kong	12,000

MINUTE, 13th July 1852.

THE Comptroller-general has had brought before him, for his control, all the outstanding Royal Orders, with the corresponding Treasury Warrants, which have been hitherto received at the Exchequer, but upon which as yet issues have not been directed. He has compared them with the Resolutions of Supply on which they are founded, and to which he has found them strictly conformable. He has thus taken cognisance of each of these documents, and has marked it with his initial in red ink, in testimony of its having been so tested and controlled, and has thus completed the examination of every document for the issue of public money, under the authority of a vote of supply, as far as the completion of the Royal Orders enables him to do.

Comptroller-General's Minute of 13 July 1852. See List of Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants appended to Comptroller-General's Letter of 13 July 1852.

In respect to the remaining Royal Orders, which have not as yet been forwarded from the Treasury, the Comptroller-general directs that a memorandum should be subjoined to the daily report forwarded to him, stating the day on which they are sent to the Exchequer, the date of the several Resolutions as recited on reference to the Appropriation Act, the object of the credits or transfers, and the amount specified in such Orders and Warrants.

In executing this duty, it is, however, indispensable to notice the special circumstances of the case. In respect to the 53 Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants issued in relation to the Supplies voted on the 4th and 7th June, it is clear that they were prepared and signed before corresponding ways and means had been provided by Parliament, and that consequently such Orders and Warrants could not have been held to come under the provisions of the Exchequer Act, and to have been carried into effect. The Comptroller-general, however, reads the Royal Orders of the 24th and 25th June, in which the irregularity alluded to is acknowledged and corrected. On these grounds he has had no difficulty in affixing his initials of approval to the several Orders and Warrants, and in directing that they should be acted on whenever issuing letters are received.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

Appendix, No. 9.

(No. 33.)

Overcharge for Lord Chancellor's Salary.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 February 1853.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 Feb. 1853.

I BEG to call your Lordships' attention to some circumstances connected with certain charges on the Consolidated Fund which I allowed to be made in the quarter ended 5th January last, with reference to the salaries of the late and present Lord Chancellor, and of the Right honourable Lord Cranworth, as one of the Lords Justices of Appeal in the Court of Chancery.

In your Lordships' Quarterly Warrant of Issue of the 6th January, for expenses of Courts of Justice, the following sums are stated to be due; viz.

For the late Lord Chancellor - - - - - -	£.	1,500	– –
For Lord Cranworth, one of the Lord Justices of Appeal -		1,500	– –

Having received notice from your Lordships of the appointment of Lord Cranworth as Lord Chancellor, bearing date the 29th December 1852, the above sums cannot be correct, and the following sums are what they are entitled to receive:

Late Lord Chancellor, to 28th December inclusive - -	£.	1,362	1	4
Lord Cranworth, as one of the Lords Justices of Appeal, to 28th December 1852 inclusive - - - - - -		1,362	1	4
Lord Cranworth, as Lord Chancellor from 29th December 1852 to 5th January 1853 - - - - - - -		137	18	8

This leaves an overcharge of 137*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.*, which it must be obvious to your Lordships cannot be issued.

I was induced to allow the charges in question, as I was informed that there was a temporary difficulty in obtaining the dates of the new appointments before closing the charge on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter, and because I was aware that the ultimate production of the evidence required would take place before the Warrant was exhausted, but from the inconvenience which has arisen from the Warrant of Issue containing incorrect amounts, your Lordship will perceive that it will hereafter be advisable not to make any issue before the correctness of the charge has been ascertained by the production of evidence showing the dates of the appointments.

There is a sum of 5,167*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* remaining unissued on the Warrant, and I have to request that your Lordships will have the kindness, before making any further issues, to inform me how this overcharge is to be corrected.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 34.)

Supplemental Votes, 1852-53; Duke of Wellington's Funeral, &c.

My Lords, Exchequer, 11 March 1853.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 March 1853.

I REGRET to say that, after much consideration, I do not feel that I am authorised by law to carry into effect your Lordships' directions, in placing to the credit of the Paymaster-general the sum of 10,000*l.* on account of the charge of 80,000*l.* for the funeral of the late Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington.

The Royal Order of the 21st February, which was transmitted to me, with a corresponding Treasury Warrant of like date, and your Secretary's Letter of the 3d of March, are the documents on which this issue is directed to take place, and to the circumstances of this issue I beg to call your Lordships' attention.

The Supplemental Votes taken by the House of Commons on the 7th December 1852 are all for the service of the year 1852 53, or, to speak less technically, for the service of the year ending April 1853. They are not so expressed in the Resolutions of the House of Commons (Votes No. 27, p. 82), and in the Estimates for the present Session, laid before Parliament by Her Majesty's Command, they are included in the Comparative Estimates (Navy Estimates, p. 3; Ordnance Estimates, p. 3) as being so voted.

But the Royal Order of the 21st February 1853, describes the particular Vote in question as being part of the amounts of Grants for 1853-54; this description is at variance with the preceding part of the Warrant, as well as with the Vote of the House of Commons.

Your Lordships will also be pleased to observe, that if the Vote had been rightly described as for the year 1853-54, or, in other words, for the year ending April 1854, it could not regularly have been issued until the present financial year had closed, and in that case it would have been inconsistent with the principle on which the Estimates of the present year have been prepared.

I may, I trust, be excused in calling your Lordships' attention likewise to the difficulty which may hereafter arise out of the peculiar position in which these Votes stand in respect to the ordinary principles of the Appropriation Act; they could not have been included in the Appropriation Act of 1852, the Votes not having then taken place, and the Appropriation Act

Act of the present Session, if drawn up in the usual form, and without making due provision for the Resolutions of the 7th December, could not include them, as that Bill could not apply to the services provided for in the year 1853–54, under which designation these Votes do not come.

Submitting these matters for your Lordships' consideration.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

To the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 24 March 1853.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to observe to your Lordship, in reply to your letter of the 15th instant, that undoubtedly great confusion has arisen with regard to the votes taken in supply on the 7th December last, part of which were described in the Estimate as supplemental to the Votes of 1852–53, and to defray charges which may probably be incurred before the 31st of March 1853, and others, which were described, "towards defraying charges in the year 1852–53," but that my Lords, after the most careful consideration, can only treat them as Votes in the present Session of Parliament, and which my Lords will feel it their duty to see are included in the general Appropriation Act at the close of the Session, so as to bring them clearly within the description of "Grants for 1853–54;" and that referring to your Lordship's doubt in that case of the propriety of making an issue thereon before the 31st March, my Lords cannot entertain a doubt that when the House of Commons passed these Votes in December, and the Legislature subsequently placed at the disposal of the Government Ways and Means applicable thereto, that it was the intention of Parliament that issues should be made for the purposes contemplated, when they should be required. And my Lords are of opinion that the Government should not therefore allow a technical difficulty, if such exists, to stand in the way of the intentions of the House of Commons, in which they have no doubt your Lordship will concur.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 24 March 1853.

As it appears that the public Services require that a considerable portion of the sums so voted must be paid in the course of the present month, my Lords entertain a hope that with these explanations, and with the information before you, that these Votes will all be included in the Appropriation Act of the present Session; the doubts entertained by your Lordship, and expressed in your letter, as to the propriety of making the issues in question, will be removed.

I am therefore to request that your Lordship will direct the same to be done forthwith, as the monies are required for immediate and pressing use.

I have, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 14 March 1853.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, that my Lords have viewed with considerable surprise the declaration made by your Lordship in your communication of the 11th instant, that you do not feel authorised by law to issue the sum of 10,000 l., part of the sum of 80,000 l. voted in the present Session of Parliament for the funeral expenses of the late Duke of Wellington.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 14 March 1853.

The law of the case appears to my Lords simple and clear.

In the present Session of Parliament the House of Commons has granted to Her Majesty sundry sums for sundry services, and by an Act of the present Session (16 Vict. cap. 2), ways and means have been granted to make good the same, and the 11th section of the Act 4 Will. 4, cap. 15, which regulates your Lordship's office, does not appear to my Lords to require that you should do more than satisfy yourself of the above facts.

As to the fears expressed by your Lordship that the Appropriation Acts will not fully and effectually embrace all and every the money votes in supply, and Ways and Means Acts passed by the Legislature, it is a subject pretty well understood that the Committees of the House of Commons are vigilant to the minutest point in recording all the financial operations of the Session, and there therefore seems to be no doubt that the Appropriation Act for the present Session will make due provision for the resolutions of the 7th of December last.

I have, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

My Lords, Exchequer, 15 March 1853.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of the 14th instant, in which your Lordships state that you have received with considerable surprise my declaration that I do not feel authorized by law to sanction the issue of the sum of 10,000 l., being part of 80,000 l. voted for the funeral expenses of the late Field Marshal Duke of Wellington. Your Lordships are pleased to state your judgment that the law on the case is simple and clear, and you suggest the reasons on which that judgment is founded.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 15 March 1853.

Appendix, No. 9.

Your Lordships will bear in mind that no precedent for the issue, as directed by Her Majesty's Royal Order of the 21st February, is to be found, or has ever existed in this department, from the period of its first establishment to the present time; this circumstance, in itself, renders attention necessary to insure strict regularity in all respects, where the responsibility which I owe to both Houses of Parliament is involved.

But I fully admit to your Lordships that a proceeding, though without the sanction of precedent, may not necessarily be without the sanction of law, and that it is by the latter rule alone that it behoves me to regulate the decisions which I am not only empowered, but required to pronounce on such matters.

To this, which is the main and essential question, I shall proceed to apply myself, as the principle involved is one of no common importance, and is one which, if admitted, would lead to consequences not only unprecedented, but, in my mind, subversive of the authority of Parliament and of the Act for regulating this office, which it is my duty to enforce.

Your Lordships will perceive that it is not only necessary to consider the Acts to which you refer me, but the purport and form of the Royal Order of the 21st February 1853, a copy of which I had the honour of transmitting for your review, but which, in your Secretary's letter of the 14th March, seems to have been altogether overlooked.

Your Lordships are aware that I am bound to see that the Royal Order, the Treasury Warrant, and the Issuing Letter, in respect to every act of issue, are in all particulars in conformity to law, and that if an irregularity exists in any one of them I have no option, but am bound to suspend or to refuse my Exchequer Warrant.

The Royal Order of the 21st February 1853 designates the grant of 80,000 l. as made "for 1853-54." The section 11 of 4 Will. 4, c. 15, requires me to "satisfy myself that the "Royal Order is in conformity with the Grant of Parliament."

I refer your Lordships to the original Votes, of which this is one, and which your Lordships will perceive are for the service of the year 1852–53, and not for the following year 1853–54.

But I again call your Lordships' attention to the other alternative. Supposing that the Vote was taken for the service of the year 1853–54, as stated in the Royal Warrant, your Lordships will perceive that it could not be issued by me till the commencement of that year, namely, after the 31st March. To act otherwise would enable your Lordships to apply, at the present time, the Votes taken for Army, Navy and Ordnance during the present Session, though granted for the year ensuing: a course that would overthrow all usage and all responsibility if generally applied.

Again, assuming the Vote to have been for the service of 1852–53, were I to charge it, as the Royal Warrant directs, to the grants of 1853–54, I conceive that the accounts which I am bound to lay before Parliament and the Audit Office would exhibit an obvious error and irregularity. The books and accounts of this department are made records by statute s. 16, a principle on which I have invariably acted, and which would prohibit me from making any entry therein inconsistent either with the law or with the fact.

In reference to the course I have felt it to be my duty to take, in declining to give effect to the Order and Warrant, I beg leave to refer your Lordships to the proceeding in the months of October and November 1841. I then felt it to be my duty to object to 106 Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants which I showed to be irregular, and which the then Government of the late Sir Robert Peel took immediate steps to amend, and to bring into conformity with law and precedent.

In like manner, I beg to refer you to the correspondence of June last on an analogous occasion, when 53 Royal Warrants being objected to by me on the ground of irregularity, were corrected by a subsequent warrant. On that occasion, it is true that two irregular warrants had been acted on by this department before the Treasury error was discovered, but it was most properly stated in Mr. Hamilton's letter of the 26th June, that your predecessor hoped no such irregularity would again occur; and in my reply of the 12th of July, I informed the Lords of the Treasury that should irregular Orders or Warrants be addressed to this department in future, their Lordships might depend upon the care I should take to stop or suspend them; this I have now done in conformity with the provisions of the Act of Parliament, and with my responsibility to both Houses.

In reference to your Lordships' observations respecting the Appropriation Act, I have fully to admit that it did not come within the ordinary functions of the Comptroller-general to point out a future inconvenience which might lead to embarrassment to the public service, but which might be obviated by a simple, easy and effectual precaution. But under the previous Governments with which I have been in relation, I have always been led to consider that such suggestions made as a matter of public duty, were thankfully acknowledged and received.

But I conclude, from your Lordships' observation, that it is your Lordships' desire that this course should be no longer taken, and I shall conform myself with readiness to such suggestion, though it may cast upon me the necessity of checking an irregularity where it has arisen, in place of pointing out means of preventing its occurrence.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

My

Appendix, No. 9.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 24 March 1853.

My Lords, Exchequer, 24 March 1853.

I HAVE received the Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, bearing date the 21st February, directing me to place to the credit of the Paymaster-general a sum of 150,000*l.* for the purchase of lands at Kensington, together with the corresponding issuing letter of your secretary, for 141,000*l.*, directing me to charge the same in my accounts as an issue out of the Consolidated Fund under the 15 & 16 Vict. cap. 82, and in part of 2,000,000*l.* granted by the 16 Vict. cap. 6, "for the service of the year 1853."

I have also to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Wilson's letter of the same date, explanatory of this issue. It is unquestionably true that the difficulty and embarrassment which have arisen may be traced to the mode in which the Votes of the 7th December 1852 were taken, and ways and means were subsequently provided; difficulties which I had individually anticipated at the time, and endeavoured to avert.

These Votes are all practically made by Parliament according to the form of words uniformly adopted by the House, as being for the service of the year ending 31 March 1853, the difference of words in the Votes for the Supplemental Army, Navy, and Ordnance Services, and the words for the Votes for Purchase of Lands and the Duke of Wellington's funeral, only arising from the fact that the latter are for one distinct and specified object.

But whilst the Supply Votes are thus for the year 1852–53, as appears by the records of the House of Commons, the Ways and Means are provided for the service of 1853–54, those services are only applicable in strict law on the close of the present financial year, or on the 1st April next ensuing.

Your Lordships, however, are pleased to assure me, that in order to obviate any difficulty on this subject, "that these Votes shall be included in the General Appropriation Act at the "close of the Session, so as to bring them clearly within the description of grants for "1853–54." This fully answers the object which I had in view, when in my letter of the 11th instant I called your Lordships' attention to the Appropriation Act, with a view to obviate an inconvenience to which I was aware the public, as well as your Lordships, might be exposed.

In confidence that Parliament will acquiesce in the proposed enactment, I feel myself justified, under existing circumstances, in considering these votes as passed for the service of the year 1853–54.

But a further difficulty remains to be considered. The Ways and Means voted for the year 1853–54, under the 16 Vict. c. 6, are available, it is true, for the votes of that year, among which, on the grounds stated, I am willing to include the Votes of the 7th December; but they are not regularly available for such purpose till the 1st April. On that day I should feel myself justified in giving effect to the Royal Orders which I have or may hereafter receive. But as I have been assured, from official authority, that the payment of the sum of 141,000*l.* for land at Kensington, being in aid of a sum appropriated by the Royal Commissioners, is required to be made this day, the party entitled to receive this sum being about to quit England, considering also that Parliament is not now sitting, and that the sum required is more than could be advanced out of any contingent fund, though most reluctant to depart from the strict regulation and requirements of this office, I feel myself justified in forwarding my warrant to the Bank under the pressing and peculiar circumstances of the case.

When your Lordships, however, refer to what may have been the intentions of Parliament and the opinion of your Lordships that the Government should not allow a technical difficulty to stand in the way of those intentions, and add, that your Lordships have no doubt that I shall concur in such opinion, I am compelled to express my dissent from it; I am bound solely to consider the legal import of the documents presented to me, and the laws on which they rest. I should be guilty of great presumption were I to put a construction on the Act of Parliament in reference to the intention of its framer. I beg to refer your Lordships to the following extract from a letter addressed by me to Sir R. Peel's Board of Treasury, which states the principles on which I then acted, and still feel it my duty to act:

"I most humbly submit to your Lordships that I should set at nought all the obligations "imposed on me by the statute constituting my office, if I were to substitute for the first "and legal construction of an Act of Parliament a reference to the supposed intention of "its framers. With the most sincere deference for your Lordships, I venture to suggest, "that the only interpretation which I am at liberty to put on the statute law of the land "is that which would be given to that statute law in courts of justice." (Letter 4 November 1841.)

I have occupied more of your Lordships' time than I could have wished; but as I am aware that in signing the warrant for 141,000*l.* on the present occasion I am going beyond the line that would be justifiable, except under the pressure of a peculiar exigency, I am desirous of recording my reasons for so doing, not only to avoid creating a dangerous precedent, but to ensure my responsibility to both Houses of Parliament, should this question be adverted to in the Legislature.

I have, &c.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Appendix, No. 9.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 5 April 1853.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 5 April 1853.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, with reference to your letter of the 24th ult., that my Lords have carefully investigated the circumstances under which the Votes in Supply of the 7th December 1852 were granted, and for which a Bill furnishing Ways and Means received the sanction of the legislature on the 21st of February, and that they have carefully examined the books of the revenue departments of the Treasury for a period extending over 50 years, and have discovered many precedents for the view which they have taken in relation to the Votes of December; the mode in which the Royal Orders and Warrants should be drawn, and the time at which they are authorised to order issues to be made in respect thereto.

As, however, it does not appear to my Lords that this part of the practice of the Treasury and the Exchequer has ever been sufficiently clearly defined, so as to be easily rendered applicable upon some general rule to accidental or unusual circumstances under which Votes may be granted by Parliament for special purposes, my Lords are desirous to avail themselves of this occasion to establish some such general rule which may obviate a recurrence of a similar inconvenience to that which has recently been experienced.

In doing so, my Lords may feel it necessary to take the opinion of the law officers of the Crown upon some points, with regard to which they differ from the views expressed by your Lordship, but in that case my Lords will cause a copy of the case to be submitted to you before it is sent to the law officers.

My Lords are quite prepared to agree with your Lordship that you are bound by the legal import of the documents presented to you in making issues from the Exchequer, and that you would not be justified in putting a construction on an Act of Parliament, differing from its legal effect in reference to the supposed intention of its framers; but my Lords are of opinion the construction which they put upon the Votes of the 7th of December was fully borne out, not only by the terms of those Votes, and of the Act which granted Ways and Means in reference thereto, but also by numerous precedents which they have found in referring to past practice, while they have been unable to discover one which would lead them to a different conclusion.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

I have, &c.
(signed) J. Wilson.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 14 April 1853.

My Lords, Exchequer, 14 April 1853.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordships that, in pursuance of the Royal order for 2,000,000 l. for Navy Services, and the corresponding Treasury Warrant, dated 30th March 1853, together with Sir C. Trevelyan's issuing letter for 50,000 l., dated 14th April 1853, I have signed my direction of credit for that sum, and for that service addressed to the Bank of England.

But inasmuch as the recital in such order and service does not correspond with the Votes of the House of Commons of the 7th December 1852, so far as it states that those Votes were for the service of 1853/54, whereas the votes of the House of Commons specify the naval services provided for in different terms, I have directed the credit required, notwithstanding the discrepancy set forth, in consequence of the assurance conveyed by your Lordships, in Mr. Wilson's letter of the 24th ult., that these Votes of the 27th December should be included in the Appropriation Act of the year, and recognised thus by the legislature as being for the service of the present year.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, &c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

(No. 35.)

Corrections and Observations on Scrip of Exchequer Bonds.

Comptroller-general to Mr. Wilson, 8 June 1853.

My dear Sir, Exchequer, 8 June 1853.

I HAVE given my best attention to the form of scrip for the Exchequer bonds, which you sent me yesterday, and, feeling some serious objections to the proposed draft, I availed myself of your permission to communicate directly with Mr. Coulson, who attended me here, agreeably to your instructions.

The objections I felt were two, the one relating to the principal sum of the proposed bonds, the other in relation to the interest, and they were both founded on an unconformity existing between the draft of scrip and the Act of Parliament.

It would not have been according to law in either case to have omitted mention of the material fact founded on the Act of Parliament, and on the Treasury Minute and "Gazette" notice, that the redemption of the principal would only take place "so soon as Parliament "should have made the provision in respect thereof," and that the payment of interest after the day fixed in the Act, viz., the 1st of September 1894, was subject to the like contingency.

This is precisely analogous to our form of Exchequer bills, which are made payable "out of any supplies to be granted in the Session of Parliament next after the passing of "the said Act."

Mr.

Appendix, No. 9.

Mr. Coulson concurred with me and with Sir E. Ryan on these points, and made the amendments of the scrip which he has added to the original draft, which I return.

The scrip is thus proposed to run as follows: "This bond entitles the bearer to ———— " carrying interest, payable half-yearly, on the 1st day of March and 1st day of September, " from the date hereof, at the rate of 2 l. 15 s. per cent. per annum, up to the 1st day of " September 1864, inclusive, and thenceforth at the rate of 2 l. 10 s. per cent. per annum, " until and including the 1st day of September 1894, and thereafter is subject to redemp- " tion on payment of such sum of ———— at the option of the Commissioners of Her " Majesty's Treasury, so soon as Parliament shall have made due provision in respect " thereof. The several sums in respect of interest mentioned in the annexed certificates " are transferable by delivery of such respective certificates, and will be payable to the " persons producing and delivering the same *

Believe me, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

James Wilson, Esq.
&c. &c. &c.

Enclosure in Comptroller-general's letter of 8 June 1853, showing the corrections in the form of Bond.

THIS Bond entitles the bearer to 1,000 l. ~~to be paid at such time after the 1st day of September 1894 as may be appointed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the redemption hereof, and carries~~ carrying interest payable half-yearly on the 1st day of March and 1st day of September, from the date hereof, at the rate of 2 l. 15 s. per centum per annum, up to the first day of September 1864, ~~and thereafter~~ inclusive and thenceforth at the rate of 2 l. 10 s. per centum per annum, until and including the first day of September 1894, and thereafter is subject to redemption on payment of such sum of 1,000 l. at the option of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, so soon as Parliament shall have made due provision in respect thereof. The several sums in respect of interest mentioned in the annexed certificates are transferable by delivery of such respective certificates, and will be payable to the persons producing and delivering the same.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 23 June 1853.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 23 June 1853.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit herewith the enclosed form of an Exchequer Bond, and to authorise your Lordship to get the same prepared forthwith.

I am at the same time to observe to your Lordship, that as some doubt has been expressed whether the Act authorising the issue of Exchequer Bonds provides for interest being paid thereon after the 1st day of September 1894, in the event of the Government not then exercising the option of redeeming the same, and as it is necessary that no such doubt should be entertained by the public, my Lords have been pleased to direct that the form of Bond shall include words which shall make this point plain and explicit; and that the question shall be referred to the law officers of the Crown, as to whether 16 Vict., c. 23, carries that construction; and if they shall be of opinion that it does not, then my Lords will direct that a provision to that effect shall be included in a Bill to be presented to Parliament in order that the form of Bond shall be in exact conformity with the Act or Acts of Parliament.

I have, &c.
(signed) J. Wilson.

The Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

BY virtue of an Act of the Session holden in the 16th and 17th years of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, chapter 23, and of a Treasury Warrant bearing the date the 185 .

This bond entitles the bearer to 1,000 l., carrying interest at the rate of 2 l. 15 s. per centum per annum, payable half-yearly on the 1st day of March and 1st day of September from the date hereof up to the 1st day of September 1864 inclusive, and thenceforth at the rate of 2 l. 10 s per centum per annum, payable half-yearly in like manner, until and including the 1st day of September 1894, and thereafter is subject to redemption on payment of such principal sum of 1,000 l., at the option of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, so soon as Parliament shall have made due provision in respect thereof (and until such redemption such principal sum of 1,000 l. will continue to carry interest at the said rate of 2 l. 10 s. per centum per annum). The several sums in respect of interest mentioned in the annexed certificates are transferable by delivery of such respective certificates and will be payable to the persons producing and delivering the same.

Note.—The forms for dates, and signature, and attestation (which may be deemed advisable) to be added.

Appendix, No. 9.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 8 July 1853.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 8 July 1853.

With reference to the letter of this Board of 23d June, whereby your Lordship was informed that the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury had desired that the opinion of the law officers of the Crown should be taken upon the construction of the Act 16 Vict., c. 23, so far as affects the provision for the interest of the Exchequer Bonds authorised to be created and issued thereby, which shall accrue after September 1894, in the event of their not being then redeemed, I am directed to acquaint you that the Solicitor to the Treasury reports that he has raised for the consideration of the law officers the following three points; viz.

1st. Whether, under the Act as it stands taken together with the Treasury Minute issued thereon, the holders of such bonds would be entitled to claim interest after the 1st day of September 1894, provided the same shall not be redeemed, and if so at what rate? And also, in that case,

2d. Whether the form of bond transmitted to your Lordship in the letter above referred to, including the necessary words to the effect that such bonds would carry interest after the 1st September 1894 until redeemed, is strictly in accordance with the said Act, and whether such words may be inserted, if my Lords think it desirable, in order to prevent any misconstruction of the terms of the said bonds? And,

3d. If such be the case, whether the same provisions made for the payment of the interest prior to the 1st September 1894, and the same practice of the Treasury for giving effect to such provisions, will equally apply to the payment of interest after that date, so long as the bonds are not redeemed?

Upon these points my Lords have received from the Solicitor opinions to the following effect:

1st. That interest at the rate of 2 l. 10 s. per cent. will be payable after the 1st September 1894, and until the bonds are actually paid off.

2d. That the words inserted in the bond, viz., "and until such redemption such principal "sum of 1,000 l. will continue to carry interest at the said rate of 2 l. 10 s. per centum "per annum," are in accordance with and warranted by the Act of Parliament. And,

3d. That all the provisions of the Act applicable to the bonds and the payment of interest as between the 1st day of September 1864 and the 1st day of September 1894, will be applicable to the bonds and the interest thereon after the 1st day of September 1894, save only that the bonds will be liable to be paid off at any time, at the option of the Commissioners of the Treasury.

My Lords are therefore of opinion, that the form of bond as already settled and transmitted to your Lordship may be adopted without any further enactment, and I am therefore to request that the preparation of such bonds may be proceeded with with all speed. I am to add that the further details necessary to complete the said bonds will be furnished very shortly.

I have, &c.

To the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. (signed) James Wilson.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 9 July 1853.

My Lords, Exchequer, 9 July 1853.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter of yesterday's date, in which you inform me that the Solicitor to the Treasury reports that he has raised for the consideration of the law officers certain questions relating to the form of the Exchequer Bonds, which I am directed to prepare under the 16 Vict. c. 23, that opinions have been received from the solicitor to the following effect.

1st. That interest at the rate of 2 l. 10 s. per cent. will be payable after the 1st September 1894, and until the bonds are actually paid off.

2dly. That the words proposed to be inserted in the bond, viz., and until such redemption, such principal sum of 1,000 l. will continue to bear interest at the said rate of 2 l. 10 s. per annum, are in accordance with and warranted by the Act of Parliament; and,

3dly. That all the provisions of the Act applicable to the bonds and the payment of interest, as between the 1st day of September 1864 and 1st day of September 1894, will be applicable to the bonds and the interest thereon after the 1st day of September 1894, save only that the bonds will be liable to be paid off at any time at the option of the Commissioners of the Treasury. Before I proceed to make some remarks on these opinions, your Lordships will permit me to observe, that if this were distinctly a case in which the authority of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer was in the present stage of the proceedings involved, it would be absolutely necessary that the case and opinion referred to for his guidance should be communicated to him, or that he himself should obtain such legal authority as should be conclusive in his own mind. This principle was absolutely laid down during the government of Sir Robert Peel in the official correspondence between Mr. Goulburn, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and this department, and was acted on by me at the desire of the Board of Treasury of that day; any other course would obviously be to delegate the statutable authority vested in the Comptroller-general to others, and to render its exercises dependent upon documents which that officer had never seen, and for which he could not hold himself responsible. If the question now raised was therefore to impose any charge on the Consolidated Fund, or to authorise any issue from the Exchequer for interest beyond the term of the 1st September 1894, with the utmost deference and respect I venture to suggest that the letter of the 8th of July would not, in my judgment, furnish me with the authority or justification on which I should be prepared to act.

others,

But the 16 Vict. c. 23, s. 39, enacts that it shall be lawful "for the Commissioners of the "Treasury from time to time, subject to the provisions herein contained, to prescribe the "method and form in which Exchequer bonds under this Act shall be made out and "issued," and by the section 37, it is provided that these bonds, bearing interest, and conformable to the terms and provisions of this Act, shall be made out at the "receipt of "the Exchequer." It therefore appears to me, that it is upon your Lordships, and not upon me, that the responsibility rests of selecting the words used in the scrip of the bonds, provided no charge is allowed by me to be placed on the Consolidated Fund, or no issue directed, which, in my deliberate judgment, appears to be contrary to law. There can be no difficulty felt in respect to the form of words adopted by your Lordships, so far as relates to the redemption of the principal of these bonds, as the insertion of the words "so soon as "Parliament shall have made due provisions in respect thereof," by thus adopting the exact words of the statute, prevents any possible doubt from arising. The certificates which I have been directed by your Lordships to prepare for issue are also within the period, and for the amount included in the s. 2 of the 16 Vict. c. 23, namely, from the date of the bond to the 1st September 1894.

This is also in conformity with your Lordships' notice of the 13th May 1853, addressed to the holders of Exchequer bills, and published in the "London Gazette," in which your Lordships were pleased to announce "that the interest was payable to the 1st day of "September 1894." It is therefore with the highest respect that I inform your Lordships that it is on these grounds only that I feel myself authorised to give effect to your Lordships' letter of the 8th instant, as if the question had been to authorise the charge of interest beyond the term prescribed in the Act of Parliament; I should have felt myself precluded from doing so by s. 12, 4 Will. 4, c. 15, which imposes on me the obligation of first satisfying myself that the payments directed are duly authorised by law. Whether the holders of the Exchequer bonds would in the terms of the question put by the Solicitor of the Treasury, "be entitled to claim interest after the first day of September 1894," I presume not to say; but I feel assured that there does not exist by law any fund out of which such payment could now be legally directed by your Lordships, or allowed by the Comptroller-general. In this respect the interest, after the 1st day of September 1894, and the capital of the bonds, appear to me to rest on precisely the same grounds, and that both are able to be paid in such manner, and out of such funds as Parliament shall provide hereafter. This is consistent likewise with the number of certificates for interest which your Lordships have directed me to prepare, and which are now in a state of forwardness in the hands of the engraver. These certificates extend to the 1st September 1894, and no longer; nor indeed could they be issued otherwise, either in law or in practice, as being not only contrary in my judgment to the statute, but also impossible to be made out for an indeterminate period.

Your Lordships, at the close of your letter, request that the preparation of these bonds should be proceeded in with all speed. This, my past correspondence, will show your Lordships I have done, even to the extent of acting in anticipation of the formal authorities which the Act requires. But it will be necessary, more especially in relation to the form of scrip now finally adopted, and which gives the pledge of the Board of Treasury for a continuance of the interest beyond the time for which it appears to me that Parliament has made provision, that I should receive your instructions by warrant (s. 39) under your Lordships' hands, and that such warrant should be published in the "London Gazette."

I have, &c.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-General.

(No. 36.)

Payments for Ionian Government not made according to Treasury Direction.

C. B., Vol. 8, p. 25.

My Lords, Exchequer, 3 September 1853.

On the 29th March 1851 your Lordships addressed a letter to me, acquainting me that you had directed the Paymaster-general to transfer to the Exchequer account at the Bank of England the sum of 44,437 l. 14 s. 7 d., being the balance of sums received from the Ionian Government on account of staff and certain other charges for the Ionian financial years, January 1848, 1849, 1850. No such transfer being made to my account as directed, I received another letter from your Lordships, dated 6th March 1852, referring to your previous communication of the former year, and apprising me that directions had been given to the Paymaster-general to make the transfer as previously directed in 1851. The transfer, as directed by your Lordships, did not take place on this second occasion in 1852.

Appendix, No. 9.

Your Lordships will see that in both Treasury letters I was informed that it was your Lordship's desire that the receipt should be carried to the account of the Consolidated Fund, under the head of "Imprest and other Monies."

It was not until the present year that, on inquiry being made from one of the officers of the Paymaster's department, I learned that the sum of 44,437 l. 14 s. 7 d., being Ionian payments, as advised by your Lordships, was included in a sum of 79.322 l. 9 s. 1 d., described as Ordnance receipts, brought to account in the quarter ending 31st March 1852, and paid by Mr. Anderson for the Paymaster-general on the 22d of May 1852, but was not so advised to me.

Your Lordships will observe that the effect of this variance between the payment as made, and your Lordships' directions for payment as given in the letters of 1851 and 1852 has not only been the delay, but also that in the accounts of this department, and laid before Parliament, this sum of 44,437 l. 14 s. 7 d. has been entered as Ordnance extra receipts, in place of being classed with "Imprest and other Monies," according to the instructions twice given by your Lordships.

The specification paper of the 21st May 1852 made no allusion to any Ionian payment whatever, but described in a different and inconsistent manner the payment made, leaving me wholly in the dark and uninformed on the subject. The discrepancy between your Lordships' letter of 1851 and 1852, as compared with the specification paper of 21st May in the latter year is unintelligible to me.

Submitting this report for your Lordships' consideration,

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

C. B., Vol. 8, p. 32.

(Reply.)

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 12 September 1853.

With reference to your Lordship's letter of the 3d instant, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you that the letter of the 6th March 1852, referred to by you, was written in error, and that the Minute of this Board upon which it was issued directed that the Paymaster-general should not carry into effect the direction given in March 1851 to transfer the sum of 44,437 l. 14 s. 7 d. to the Exchequer account at the Bank of England, but that he should cause it to be placed to the credit of the Ordnance department, to be paid over to the Exchequer as money which would formerly have been brought in aid of the Ordnance Estimates, but under the present system should be included with other extra receipts brought to account by the Ordnance.

A letter ought to have been written to your Lordship acquainting you with this change, instead of the letter of the 6th March 1852, which was sent on the occasion.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

(37.)

Issue of Exchequer Bills for Supply Services.

(1.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 13 December 1853.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 13 Dec. 1853.

As the late issue of Exchequer Bills for supply services differed in some respects from the ordinary issues for the periodical exchanges, I think it my duty to report to your Lordships the mode in which it has been completed.

In the case of the exchanges, the department of the Paymaster-general is bound to send to this office for the Exchequer Bills when those securities are prepared for delivery. They are counted over here by the Clerks to the Paymaster, and the receipt of the Paymaster-general is handed to me before I permit the bills to leave this office.

In the present instance I received your Lordships' instructions to hand the present issues of Exchequer Bills to the Bank of England. From the peculiar exigency, and from the difficulty of completing the duty within the time limited, I was constrained, in place of asking your Lordships to apply to this case the same regulations now in force with the Paymaster-general, to send this sum of 1,427,400 l. from this office to the Bank. They were contained in one of my official boxes, and placed in the joint custody of the senior Clerk, an Exchequer Messenger, and an officer of the Metropolitan Police, and were safely handed over, as directed by your Lordships.

I submit,

Appendix, No. 9.

I submit, however, that, should issues of this description be continued or repeated, the officers of the Bank of England should be directed to attend at this office, to count over the bills here, and to give me a discharge, before public securities, payable to bearer on delivery, are permitted to issue from this department.

I enclose your Lordships a copy of the receipt given me by the Bank of England. Your Lordships will see endorsed upon that receipt the several heads of voted services, to which this issue is appropriated by law, and to which severally this large sum is applicable. Your Lordships are aware that in the accounts which it is my duty to lay before Parliament, I am bound to state, on the one hand, the monies received to the Exchequer Account, and on the other the Transfer and Credits issued by my warrants, under your Lordships' authority. The balance should represent accurately the difference between these two sums. But whilst the several credits specified on the back of the enclosed account must enter on the issue side of the account, it is impossible that a corresponding sum of 1,427,000 l. should appear as monies received on the other. It must therefore be made a special and an explanatory entry, marking that it represents, not money received by this department, but Exchequer Bills to that amount, made out here, and transferred to the Bank, under your Lordships' directions, to be made available in the mode set forth in the indorsement for the several Votes specifically voted by Parliament.

Your Lordships will excuse me if I also feel it my duty to call your Lordships' attention to one further point of considerable constitutional importance. The credits given to the several departments are exactly corresponding to the nominal value of the Exchequer Bills issued, or, in other words, to their value at par; they are so charged in my books as against the several Parliamentary Votes. Now, if these bills should be realised otherwise, either at a premium or at a discount, as the case might be, in the former case a larger sum might be placed at the command of the Executive Department than had been authorised by the Appropriation Act; or in the latter case the amount contemplated by the Vote of Parliament might not be available. The surplus produced by the premium might in this case be employed freed altogether from the check of this office, and the restraints provided to guard against authorised appropriations.

Submitting these matters to your Lordships' wisdom,

I have, &c.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, &c. &c. &c.

Your Lordships will also observe, that in the Returns of the Bank of England, made to your Lordships and to me, no entry whatever is made of any part of this sum of 1,427,400 l., as among the payments made, a circumstance adding to the difficulty of the case as relating to the public accounts.

Bank of England, 10 December 1853.

Enclosure in Letter of 13 Dec. 1853.

Received of the Right honourable the Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer 1,771 Exchequer Bills, amounting to 1,427,400 l., Supply 1853, per 16 Vict. c. 25, to be placed to the account of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general for Services as on the other side; viz.:

1,284	Bills of £.	1,000	each, Nos.	6026 to 7309	£. 1,284,000
201	ditto	500	„	1981 „ 2181	100,500
143	ditto	200	„	900 „ 1042	28,600
143	ditto	100	„	3958 „ 4100	14,300
1,771	Bills.				£. 1,427,400

For the Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

(signed) J. R. Elsey,
Deputy Cashier.

(Endorsement.)

					£.
Army	400 of £.	1,000, Nos.	6026 to 6425		400,000
Navy	358 „	1,000 „	6426 „	6783	358,000
	200 „	500 „	1981 „	2180	100,000
	140 „	200 „	900 „	1039	28,000
	140 „	100 „	3958 „	4097	14,000
	838			£.	500,000

Appendix, No. 9.

(Endorsement.)

						£.
Ordnance - - - - - -	185	of £.	1,000,	Nos.	6784 to 6968	185,000
Kaffir War - - - - - -	200	„	1,000	„	6969 „ 7168	200,000
Prisons and Convict Establishments	10	„	1,000	„	7169 „ 7178	10,000
Transportation of Convicts - -	5	„	1,000	„	7179 „ 7183	5,000
Buildings, British Museum - -	6	„	1,000	„	7184 „ 7189	6,000
Consuls Abroad - - - - -	5	„	1,000	„	7190 „ 7194	5,000
Superannuations - - - - -	30	„	1,000	„	7195 „ 7224	30,000
Salaries, Two Houses of Parliament -	12	„	1,000	„	7225 „ 7236	12,000
Ditto Treasury - - - - -	10	„	1,000	„	7237 „ 7246	10,000
Ditto Home Department - -	6	„	1,000	„	7247 „ 7252	6,000
Ditto Foreign ditto - - -	12	„	1,000	„	7253 „ 7264	12,000
Ditto Colonial ditto - - -	10	„	1,000	„	7265 „ 7274	10,000
Ditto Privy Council Office - -	15	„	1,000	„	7275 „ 7289	15,000
Ditto Poor Law Commissioners -	10	„	1,000	„	7290 „ 7299	10,000
Ditto Paymaster-general - -	5	„	1,000	„	7300 „ 7304	5,900
Ditto - - ditto - - -	3	„	200	„	1040 „ 1042
Ditto - - ditto - - -	3	„	100	„	4098 „ 4100
Ditto Office of Woods - -	5	„	1,000	„	7305 „ 7309	5,500
Ditto - - ditto - - -	1	„	500	„	2181 - -
	1,771 Bills, amounting to - - £.					1,427,400

(signed) J. R. Elsey,
Deputy Cashier.

(2.)

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 11 January 1854.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 11 Jan. 1854.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship that my Lords have had under their consideration your letter of the 13th ultimo, detailing the course that you have pursued in relation to the issue of Supply Exchequer Bills, to the amount of 1,427,400 l. on the 10th ultimo.

In the first place, my Lords would remark, that this issue is only a part of an entire issue of 31,27,400 l., under similar circumstances, during the present quarter; and therefore my Lords would have wished, that if your Lordship thought it necessary to make any representations on the subject to this Board, that they had applied to the whole sum, as doing so only to a part may lead to an inference that there is something special in the particular issue which has been made the subject of your observations. In reference to your observations as to the difference which exists in the issue of the Exchequer Bills referred to, and the ordinary issues in exchange for old bills, my Lords would remark, that the Paymaster-general is a public officer of the Crown, upon whom the duty of receiving the new bills from the Exchequer has been imposed, and who performs it in the manner so clearly detailed by your Lordship. The duty, in the present instance, where original Exchequer Bills have been issued to the Bank of England direct as part of the Supply Services voted by Parliament, of delivering those Bills to the Bank, has devolved upon the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and my Lords entirely approve of the precautions which your Lordship took to secure their safe transmission from your office to the Bank. But your Lordship suggests, that if in future any similar issues should be made, the duty of transmitting such Bills should be imposed upon the Bank of England; and that an officer of that establishment should be directed to attend at the Exchequer Office in order to receive them, and to give a discharge before they leave the office. My Lords are clearly of opinion, that they would not be entitled to impose such a duty upon the Bank, but that, as in the transmissions of all other monies and securities, and of your Lordship's warrants for the appropriation of revenue to particular Services, it is the place of the Government to deliver them to the Bank.

In reference to your Lordship's remarks as to the effect which these transactions will have upon the accounts which you present annually to Parliament, my Lords are entirely at a loss to understand in what manner the slightest difficulty can occur. In the first place, your Lordship paid out of the ordinary revenue receipts of the year, and the money grants, Exchequer Bills to the amount of 3,127,400 l., in place of exchanging them for new bills, which payment will, of course, appear on the debit side of your account with the Bank of England against the general receipts of the year and the said money grants; and when, at a subsequent period of the year, new bills are issued for the purposes for which they were granted by Parliament, the amounts applied to the several Public Services for which they are issued will appear on the debit side of the account, and will be balanced by a credit to the amount of the Exchequer Bills issued to the Bank, placed on the credit side in the same form as Deficiency Bills are introduced, and by this means a perfect balance will be restored to the account.

In reference to that portion of your Lordship's letter which refers to the rate at which the Exchequer Bills may be negotiated, and to any premium or discount which may arise therefrom, my Lords would remark, that the function of the Exchequer office is confined in this respect to to the exact amount of the Votes of Parliament, as detailed in the Appropriation Act, and therefore, as in the grant of Exchequer Bills for the Supply Services of the year, they are computed at par. My Lords are distinctly of opinion, that the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer "can only deal with them as at par, and that any consideration of premium or discount is a question between this Board and Parliament, and to be accounted for in the same manner as other profits or deficiencies, as the case may be."

I have, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

(3.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 13 January 1854.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 13 Jan. 1854.

I HAVE to acknowledge your Lordships' Secretary's letter of the 11th instant, on the subject of the late issue of Exchequer Bills. From the respect which I feel to be due to your Lordships, and from the necessity of maintaining a perfect accuracy in all that concerns the public accounts and financial correspondence, I am assured that your Lordships will feel that I only perform my duty in respectfully setting your Lordships right on some points on which you are in error, in consequence, very probably, of a want of precision in my letter of the 10th December. (1.) Your Lordships state, that the issue of 1,427,000 l. formed only part of a sum of 3,127,400 l. made out in Exchequer Bills, under your Lordships' warrant; so that you could have wished that any representations I had thought it necessary to make had applied to the whole sum. My letter was intended by me to apply in all its essentials to the whole transactions, and was necessarily and justly written at its completion, more especially on its most essential part, and related to the mode in which the Exchequer Accounts should be made up, and laid before Parliament in April, so as to represent the facts truly. (2.) Your Lordships seem to consider that it would have been inexpedient to call on the officers of the Bank to take up the Exchequer Bills in question, which your Lordships were pleased to add, were delivered under my authority in a manner of which you approved. But I should respectfully submit the expediency of reconsidering the opinion you have expressed in Mr. Wilson's letter in this respect. By your Lordships' Minutes the unsigned and incomplete Exchequer Bills, and the very paper on which they are to be printed, are required to be kept in the strong room of this office, in an iron chest, and under the joint and several custody of three public servants, precautionary measures adopted by your Lordships' predecessors, on my recommendations, and laid before Parliament. Even in transferring these bills to the Paymaster-general, I feel precluded from doing so till I have obtained that officer's receipt, which is given before the bills are taken out of my custody. Whereas, on the present occasion, your Lordships are inclined to recommend that complete Exchequer Bills payable to bearer, and negotiable by a simple delivery, should be transmitted in a hackney carriage, in the care of a clerk and policeman, from Whitehall to Threadneedle-street, subject to the obstructions and possible chances of such proceeding. I think your Lordships will see the greater necessity for not adhering to this course, when I inform you that, having on the late issue of Exchequer Bonds requested the Bank of England and the South Sea Company to send their receipts to this department, and hereto take up the bonds, no objection was even suggested to this mode of proceeding. Of course, if I receive your Lordships' authority and order to transmit these securities to the Bank, I shall act accordingly, but with the explicit declaration, that I disclaim any responsibility for what I must continue to consider an unnecessary risk. The transmission of Deficiency Bills is no precedent, as those securities not being payable to the bearers, but solely to the Bank of England or order, are exposed to no risk whatever, still less are the Exchequer Warrants for credits on transfers, which merely lead to an entry in the accounts with particular departments, and could not be misapplied, into whatever hands they might fall. (3.) In relation to the most important question which I have submitted to you, namely, the mode in which this Exchequer Bill transaction should appear in the Parliamentary Accounts, your Lordships write under a total misconception of the facts of the case, and of the forms of account, which I am bound, by the construction of this office, to render. It is true that the issue of 3,127,400 l. for Exchequer Bills paid off in money appears, as represented by the warrants of credit drawn by me, as against the Exchequer Account at the Bank. This has no connexion whatever with the issue of a like sum of Exchequer Bills issued subsequently for other specified services appropriated by Parliament, and the one is not in this sense a balance for the other: on the contrary. Neither can that later issue of Exchequer Bills appear in any shape as a payment to any account. Had the course recommended by this department, and considered to have been adopted by your Lordships, been pursued, and had the Bank, or any other body taking the Exchequer Bills, paid in the money proceeds, and that credits had consequently been issued to the Paymaster-general, the account would have explained itself, have presented a just balance, and have faithfully recorded the whole transaction.

That your Lordships have not apprehended this part of the case rightly will be obvious when I call your attention to your concluding sentence. You suggest that I should follow the same form in which deficiency bills are introduced into the accounts, by which means your Lordships consider that a perfect balance would be produced. A reference to these annual accounts will show your Lordships that the principal of deficiency bills never appears on the accounts. The advances made by the Bank on the security of these bills are paid into the Exchequer, and consequently appear as payments to my account, balanced by the amount by credits issued to pay off those securities. In the present case no monies whatever have been paid into the Exchequer Account in respect of these Exchequer Bills by the Bank, or any other authority; whilst all the credits and transfers made in satisfaction of the services thus intended to be provided for, must appear on the face of the account, and thus a failure in showing a just balance arises inevitably. The case of Deficiency Bills in no respect applies. The last point to which your Lordships advert, is the possible case of the disposal of Exchequer Bills at a premium, whilst they have been issued for the public supply service by this department at par. Your Lordships state that the functions of the Exchequer are confined in this respect to the exact Votes of Parliament as detailed in the Appropriation Act. I adopt this principle willingly. But assuming that, for a Vote of 100,000*l.*, Exchequer Bills to the same nominal amount, taken at par, were appropriated, and that these bills were taken by the Bank of England from the Treasury at 10*s.* or 20*s.* premium, it would be clear that the Parliamentary Vote to which your Lordships very properly have referred, would be to that extent exceeded. It would not, therefore, be legally appropriated for such a purpose, and ought, according to what I believe was the precedent in earlier times, to be repaid back to the credit of the Exchequer. To consider that it could be held at the unrestricted disposal of the Treasury, would be to permit the recurrence of some of the earlier abuses against which it would be your Lordships' desire, as well as duty, to guard. It is, therefore, strictly with the view of guarding against the exceeding of any Parliamentary Vote, and providing for the rigid adherence of the Act of Appropriation, that I have ventured to make these remarks.

Appendix, No. 9.

I have, &c.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

(4.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 16 January 1854.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 16 Jan. 1854.

I REGRET to trouble your Lordships again on the subject of my letter of the 13th instant, but I feel myself bound to lay before you some further information collected from the records of this office, which seems to me conclusive on the two points on which your Lordships have been disposed to differ with my suggestions.

Delivery of Supply Bills at Bank.

The first was my recommendation, that when on a late occasion the Bank of England was called on to receive Exchequer Bills, payable to bearer, the mode of delivery should be, that the Bank officer, furnished with a proper receipt, should attend at the Exchequer, count over and examine the bills, hand over the receipt to me, and convey his charge to the Bank. By this course I sought to maintain the principle which prescribes that I shall not part with such bills from this office without first obtaining a proper receipt, and that the risk of conveyance and transit should not fall on the Exchequer. To this attendance of the Bank agent at the Exchequer, your Lordships state your objection, apparently on the supposition that some unreasonable or unprecedented demand was thus made on the Bank. In reply, I informed your Lordships, that in the last issue of Exchequer Bonds, both the Bank and the South Sea Company had, without complaint or objection, adopted the course I recommended.

Appendix (A.)

But I have since found a more conclusive precedent in the correspondence of this department, 11 February 1840, in reference to the transfer of Exchequer Bills to the Bank. The Comptroller-general wrote to the Governor, Sir John R. Reid, as follows: "If you send a Bank clerk here, he can have the bills counted over, and delivered to him in one of our boxes, of which he will take charge for you."

The reply of the Governor of the Bank of England was immediate, and to the following effect: "I take the liberty of suggesting that the necessary specification paper be delivered to the Bank clerk, who attends daily at the Paymaster-general's office in the afternoon of the day previous to the issue of the Exchequer Bills. The clerk will produce the specification papers to the Comptroller-general on the following morning, and receive the Exchequer Bills in exchange."

The same course has been pursued in respect to Public Works Bills, West India Compensation Bills, Church Bills, and all other similar securities. In short, I believe I may state, that in no instance whatever have negotiable Exchequer Bills been allowed to quit this office without the previous passing of the necessary receipts from the party, whether public or private, authorised to demand possession of these securities.

I now therefore submit to your Lordships, that, in conformity with the principle undeviatingly acted upon in the ordinary issues of Exchequer Bills, in conformity with the mode adopted with the Exchequer Bonds, and in strict adherence to the arrangements made in 1840 with the Bank of England, that in this case under consideration it is expedient to require the Bank to attend here, and to give their receipt to me before the Exchequer Bills are removed from this office, when their safe custody is provided for by special arrangements, approved of by a former Board of Treasury, and laid before Parliament.

Premium on Supply Bills.

(2.) Your Lordships have also differed with me on the more material and constitutional principle, respecting the application of any possible premium which might be obtained by the sale or other negotiation of Exchequer Bills issued for specific supply services, and calculated on their issue from this department at par.

On this subject, as on the former, since the date of my last letter, I have obtained from the records of this department conclusive evidence supporting the view I took of the question, and which will, I feel confident, induce your Lordships to reconsider your opinion. But I must

must first respectfully remind your Lordships, that my primary duty is to check and prevent the possibility of any misappropriation of the public money, or any issues unsanctioned by Parliament, or exceeding the amount sanctioned by Parliamentary resolution or by law. If by an issue of Exchequer Bills at par, and disposed of at a premium, I am to overlook the fact that such premium would be an over-issue contrary to law, unless repaid by your Lordships to the public account, I should neglect the first duty. Appendix, No. 9.

Your Lordships, on the contrary, seem to assume that such excess would be held by you free from all responsibility to this department, which, as Sir James Graham stated on introducing the Bill of 1834, was established by Parliament to be "an efficient control over the Executive Government, so far as related to the public expenditure." But I enclose to your Lordships three precedents taken from the records of the Exchequer in the Rolls Office, showing how such cases have been dealt with by your predecessors, acting in conformity with law and with the constitution. Appendix (B.)

On the 28th July 1826, the Right honourable S. R. Lushington and W. Hill, Esq., then Secretaries to the Treasury, paid back to the Consolidated Fund the sum of 1,232*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*, being the extra sum realized by the negotiation of certain Exchequer Bills in the months of May and June.

On the 14th November of the same year, two further sums of like character of 2,979*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.*, and of 297*l.* 12*s.*, were also repaid to the Consolidated Fund.

In the following year, 6th November 1827, the late Right honourable Joseph Planta and William Hill, Esq., Secretaries to the Treasury, paid into the Exchequer for the Consolidated Fund 73,554*l.* 10*s.*, being the excess above the par value produced by the sale of Exchequer Bills in the public market.

But if any doubts could rest on your Lordships' mind as to the strict legality and correctness of this mode of proceeding, I beg to refer you to a correspondence between the Exchequer and the Audit Board in 1829, at a time when the late Lord Granville was responsible for the duties which have now devolved on me, when issues were made in Exchequer Bills for the public service; your Lordships will perceive that the auditors most properly required such information as should call on the several parties to whom Exchequer Bills had been issued for supply, to account for any surplus received beyond the par value of the Bills. Appendix (C.)

Feeling convinced that your Lordships' deliberate judgment must approve of every effort on my part to perform strictly those functions for which I am made by law responsible to the Houses of Parliament, and for checking any excessive issue or unsanctioned appropriation of the public money,

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury.

Appendix A.

LETTER from Comptroller-general to Governor of Bank of England, and reply, dated 11th February 1840.—(See CORRESPONDENCE, Book 2, fol. 61 and 62.)

Appendix B.

EXTRACT from Pell's Office "Introitus."—(See Lord Monteagle's Evidence, No. 619.)

Appendix (C.)

Audit Office, Somerset-place, 28 October 1829.

Sir,

* * * * * * * * * * *

I AM directed to observe, that the provisions contained in the 1st & 2d Geo. 4, c. 121, for distinguishing in the imprest certificates the issues made in Exchequer Bills from those made in cash, were founded on the recommendations contained in the Fifth Report (2d part) of the Committee on the Public Expenditure, upon the ground, as stated in the Report, that it was extremely important that the Auditors of Public Accounts should be made acquainted with the description of the issue, in order that parties receiving Exchequer Bills, instead of cash, might be made to account for the interest of such bills. Audit Office to Exchequer, 28 Oct. 1829. (Extract.)

I have, &c.
(signed) John Lewis Mallet.

G. C. Bedford, Esq.
&c. &c. &c.

Auditors' Office, 21 November 1829.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 28th of last month, from which it appears that the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts are desirous that the quarterly imprest certificates transmitted to them from hence should convey a more effectual Exchequer to Audit Office, 21 Nov. 1829.

Appendix, No. 9.

effectual information respecting the issues made here out of Exchequer Bills than is contained in its present form; so that the Commissioners may the more readily arrive at a knowledge of the cases in which public accountants shall have received payment actually in the shape of bills, and of those in which, although the issue be stated as out of bills, they (the accountants) shall have received payment in cash.

After giving every consideration to the subject, I am induced to suggest to the Commissioners, first, the expediency of an application on their part to the Lords of the Treasury, for the counterpart retained there of the annual contracts entered into by their Lordships with the Governor and Company of the Bank of England for taking and circulating Exchequer Bills herein described.

Secondly, I would propose an improvement in or addition to the information contained in the quarterly imprests certificate, by inserting therein a description of all the several denominations of bills stated in it to have been issued, showing the title of the Act of Parliament, under whose authority, the year for whose service, and the amount for which they may have been made out.

These particulars will constitute a full description of the bills.

The entry of the contract in the office of the Commissioners will show, upon reference to it, for what bills, at their nominal value, the Bank bind themselves to furnish ready money, the Government, at the same time, being pledged to place those bills exclusively in the hands of the Bank, even though that nominal should be exceeded by the actual value of them at the instant of issue.

For all the bills thus described in the contract, it must be concluded that the public accountant has received from the Exchequer payment in cash. With respect to all other bills, and which are not described in the contract, it is to be concluded primâ facie, that they have been actually paid as such to the persons to whom they may be stated in the imprest certificate to have been issued, such as the Paymaster of the Forces and the Treasurer of the Navy and Ordnance, for whom the Bank received the payments, and occasionally, though very rarely, some individuals.

As those persons, in their character of public accountants, are amenable to the investigation of the Commissioners of Audit, I should hope that, from the answers given by them, those officers will be enabled, readily and without confusion, to obtain knowledge of how such bills may have been disposed of, how converted into cash for the public service in all instances, and from what quarter to call for any account of interest which may be supposed to have grown due upon them.

J. L. Mallet, Esq.
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) G. C. Bedford.

Audit Office to Exchequer, 2 Dec. 1829.

Sir, Audit Office, Somerset House, 2 December 1829.

The Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts having had under their consideration your letter of the 21st instant, on the subject of the Quarterly Imprest Certificates transmitted from the Exchequer to this office;

I am to express the acquiescence of the Board in the suggestions contained in your letter, and to request that the future imprest certificates may be prepared in the manner proposed by you.

G. C. Bedford, Esq.

I have, &c.
(signed) J. L. Mallet.

(5.)

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 31 Jan. 1854.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 31 January 1854.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury having had before them an account, forwarded by the Bank of England, of the sale of Supply Exchequer Bills, which were issued for the public service during the last quarter, some of which were sold at par, and others at a premium, together with an account of the profit arising from the liquidation at a discount of South Sea and other stocks prior to the 5th January last; and the results attending these transactions being as follows; viz.:

	£.	s.	d.
Premium on Exchequer Bills sold, after deducting the broker's commission	5,011	6	–
Interest accruing on Exchequer Bills from the date of issues to the 5th January 1854, the day they were taken by the South Sea Company	8,085	18	4
Profit arising from the liquidation of South Sea and other stocks prior to the 5th January 1854	1,603	12	9

I am directed by their Lordships to authorise you to receive the above sums, and to place the same to the account of imprests and other monies of the Consolidated Fund.

The Comptroller-general, Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

(6.)

Treasury Chambers, 5 April 1854.

My Lord,

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to inform your Lordship that they have had under their consideration your letters of the 13th and 16th January 1854, upon the subject of the issue of original Exchequer Bills for supply services. Treasury to Comptroller general, 5 April 1854.

On a careful reconsideration as to whom the duty should devolve upon of carrying such bills from the Exchequer to the Bank, my Lords are confirmed in the opinion they expressed in their minute of the 27th December last. In looking to the principle which should decide this question, my Lords continue to make the same distinction between the case of the usual exchange of Exchequer Bills and that of a new issue, and to regard the latter as analogous to the transmission of monies or other securities to the Bank or the Government account.

My Lords are not insensible that there is some risk attending the transmission of Exchequer Bills, as of monies, to the Bank; but they do not consider that that risk, such as it is, can fairly, as matter of principle, be devolved on the Bank, which only acts in the matter as the agent, employed by the Government for its convenience and accommodation.

My Lords are, however, not disposed to take the same view of the extent of the risk as the Comptroller of the Exchequer appears to do, and they will be quite satisfied with the security afforded by the means adopted by your Lordship in December last; for though it is true that the accounts are large, and that the securities are payable to bearer, yet it must be quite obvious that, even in the highly improbable event of a forcible extraction of such securities on their way from the Exchequer to the Bank, it would be immediately known, and the circulation of a single Bill would be rendered impossible.

The only other part of your Lordship's letter which appears to require observation is that which refers to the appropriation of any premium which may be obtained upon the issue of such Exchequer Bills, upon which subject your Lordship has entirely misunderstood the scope of their Lordships' observations in their minute of 27th December 1853.

Your Lordship enters into a long argument, in order to show that it is consistent with principle and practice that the amount of such premiums should be accounted for and paid into the Exchequer. That is a point which was never doubted by my Lords, but which, on the contrary, was fully admitted in their said minute, when they stated that such premiums would be accounted for in the same manner as other profits which might arise. But what their Lordships contended for, and still continue to maintain, was, that this accounting is a matter between their Lordships and Parliament, and not with your Lordship's office.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Right honourable
the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

(7.)

Exchequer, 7 April 1854.

My Lords,

I HAVE to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 5th instant, written in reply to mine of the 13th and 16th January last. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 7 April 1854.

I proceed to reply to it, so far as relates to the transmission to the Bank of Supply Bills completed and fit for circulation, payable to the bearer. I shall not repeat my expostulation against allowing such bills to leave this office without my first obtaining a receipt from the party to whom they are delivered, or point out the inconsistency of transmitting, as your Lordships direct, bills required to be kept, even while in this office, in a vaulted room, and in an iron safe, and under the custody of three public servants: on this your Lordships have decided. After considering the objections, I felt it to be my duty to urge, and in a question which fully lies within your Lordships' province, I entirely submit to your authority.

But I must disclaim all responsibility for any risk or accident which may arise from this mode of proceeding.

Not having heard from your Lordships for nearly three months after my communication, I had directed the Bank to send for the bill according to the precedent of the 11th February 1840, to which they had raised no objection whatever; but on receiving your Lordships' last letter, I have recalled that direction, and I shall transmit the bill as now instructed by your Lordships.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

To the Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Appendix, No. 9.

(8.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 7 April 1854.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 7 April 1854.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 5th instant, written in reply to my communication of the 13th and 16th of last January, and it becomes my duty to make some remarks on the important question on the premiums which may be obtained by the sale of Exchequer Bills, and the mode in which such premiums or interests is required by law to be applied.

This is a point lying wholly within the statutable duties of my office, on which I should much regret there should be any difference of opinion between your Lordships and myself. It is a matter rather of appropriation than of accounts, and depends upon that fundamental principle for the enforcement of which I am responsible to both Houses of Parliament, and to them alone, namely, to allow no issues of money under any circumstances beyond the sums by law appointed. From this duty I can by no means disengage myself, even if I could consider myself at liberty to do so, nor could even the high authority of your Lordships release me from the express obligation of the statute constituting my office.

The principle at issue is most simple.

I shall assume that your Lordships, by a warrant, direct and authorise me to issue 10 Exchequer Bills of 1,000 l. each, for a service of 10,000 l. voted by the House of Commons. If the premiums obtained on the sale of these bills, are paid back into the Consolidated Fund, I become a party to an unauthorised issue so far as the value of the Exchequer Bills is in excess above the vote; this I should consider to be contrary to law, unless the excess be paid into the Exchequer; and in the precedents which I laid before your Lordships, I was enabled to show to your Lordships that it would be no less contrary to authority and to the practice of the Treasury and of the Exchequer in former times.

In your Lordships' letter of the 11th January 1853, your Lordships informed me "that you are distinctly of opinion that the Comptroller-general can only deal with these Exchequer Bills as at par, and that any consideration of premium or discount is only a question between the Treasury Board and Parliament, and to be accounted for in the same manner as other profits or deficiencies." I considered this distinctly to negative my construction of the duty which I endeavoured to perform in preventing any excess or unauthorised funds from being placed even at your Lordships' disposal, and I felt bound to support my judgment by distinct reference to precedents strictly in point. This was done in my letter of the 16th January.

On the 31st January I received your Lordships' letter informing me that your Lordships, having obtained an account from the Bank showing the profits which had accrued on the sale of these Exchequer Bills, had been pleased to direct that two sums of 5,011 l. 6 s., and 8,085 l. 18 s. 4 d., the amount of such profits, should be paid in to the credit of the Exchequer accounts. This was, in fact, adopting fully the principle for which I had contended, adhering to the just rule of appropriation, and was also in strict conformity with the precedents laid down by your Lordships' predecessors in office. I considered the matter to be thus satisfactorily disposed of. I heard nothing more from 31st January to the 5th April.

It is with great regret that I perceive the points again raised by your Lordships' last letter, if indeed I understand it rightly. It is true that your Lordships state, that the propriety of the payments of the amount of premium received on these Exchequer Bills into the Exchequer was never doubted by your Lordships; but your Lordships conclude by stating that you continued, and still continue, to "contend that this accounting is a matter between your Lordships and Parliament, and not with the Office of the Exchequer." I am at a loss to reconcile these two statements.

But your Lordships will perceive that, unless it be admitted that, as a matter of principle and right, the amount of such premium is to be paid into the Exchequer accounts, so as to prevent any application of public money in excess of the specified vote, I shall be compelled to resort to some other mode for computing the issues in Exchequer Bills that would be more complicated and inconvenient. I entertain some expectation, however, that the obligation of repaying the amount of such extra receipts to the Exchequer will not be controverted, but will be adopted and acted upon as by Mr. Wilson's letter of the 31st January last, in which case no further difficulty or embarrassment can arise.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

To the Lords of the Treasury.

(9.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 3 July 1854.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 3 July 1854.

AT the approach of the close of the quarter's accounts, I feel it my duty to bring under your Lordships' notice the circumstances attending the issue of 1,750,000 l. Exchequer Bills applied for supply services under the 17 Vict. c. 3.

These

These issues have been made as follows:—

			£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
1854: April	7	Army	250,000	–	–
,,	–	Navy	200,000	–	–
,,	–	Ordnance	50,000	–	–
						500,000	–	–
,,	17	Army	100,000	–	–
,,	–	Navy	100,000	–	–
,,	–	Ordnance	50,000	–	–
						250,000	–	–
,,	22	Army	—
,,	–	Navy	200,000	–	–
,,	–	Ordnance	50,000	–	–
						250,000	–	–
May	6	Army	100,000	–	–
,,	–	Navy	100,000	–	–
,,	–	Ordnance	50,000	–	–
						250,000	–	–
June	9	Army	180,000	–	–
,,	–	Navy	53,700	–	–
,,	–	Exchequer Bills	266,300	–
						500,000	–	–
					£.	1,750,000	–	–

These several issues of Exchequer Bills are placed to the accounts of the several supply votes for which they have been issued, taking their value at par; any amount which may have been realised by disposing of these bills at a premium, would, consequently, be an excess above the Vote, the Royal Order, and the Treasury Warrant, as well as beyond the issuing Letter, and, consequently, ought to be repaid to the Exchequer account according to the precedents acted upon by the Right hon. Sir R. Lushington and W. Hill, Esq., Secretaries to your Lordships' Board, 28th July 1826, and on the 14th November 1826, as also by the Right hon. Joseph Planta and William Hill, Esq., 6th November 1827, by the letter of the Auditor to this department, 28th November 1829, and more recently by your Lordships, on the 31st January 1854, when two sums of 5,011 l. 6 s. and 8,085 l. 18 s. 4 d. were repaid to the Exchequer account, and dealt with as imprest and other monies of the Consolidated Fund.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

To the Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(10.)

Treasury Chambers, 20 July 1854.

My Lord,

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, in reply to your letter of the 3d instant, that if any profit had been realized by the sale of the Exchequer Bills, to which your said communication has reference, my Lords would have caused the same to be paid to the credit of the public, in conformity with the practice which they have invariably followed in such cases. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 20 July 1854.

I have to state, that my Lords must repeat to your Lordship their opinion, that, under the Acts for the regulation of the Exchequer, your duties in regard to the issue of Credits cease when you have made those issues, in obedience to the provisions of the Acts by which they are authorized; that my Lords cannot admit that by the Exchequer Regulation Act, or any other enactment, you are invested with authority to call for accounts of the disposal of Exchequer Bills issued by you to a public accountant, under the directions of this Board; that this duty is imposed by law upon the Commissioners for auditing the Public Accounts, who are invested with full powers to enforce the rendering of accounts by all public accountants to whom credits in money or Exchequer Bills may be granted, and to examine and allow such accounts, and that such powers would be wholly inconsistent with the duties and functions of the Exchequer.

I have to add, that if your Lordship correctly sets forth the issues made by you in Exchequer Bills to the Paymaster-general, or to any other public accountant, in your imprest certificates rendered to the Audit Board, my Lords have no reason to doubt that proper steps will be taken by that Board to require the production to them of such accounts of the disposal of the bills as will enable them to satisfy themselves that the profit on them has been duly accounted for.

I have, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

Appendix, No. 9.

(11.)

Gentlemen, Exchequer, 24 July 1854.

* * * * * * * * * *

Comptroller-general to Audit Board, 24 July 1854 (transmitting Quarterly Accounts; extract.)

You will also perceive that by the last page of these accounts, 1,750,000 l. has been made out by me, under 17 Vict. c. 3, and issued by the direction of the Treasury for specified supply services. As a matter of principle in relation to the Exchequer accounts of the sums set forth, of 630,000 l. for the Army, 353,700 l. for the Navy, 200,000 l. for Ordnance, are charged as on account of the Vote of Parliament, as at their nominal and par value, but, by the rate of the Bills, produce a greater sum by the receipt of a premium, there will be an excess beyond the Vote placed in the hands of the Paymaster to the amount of that premium; if sold at a discount, the operation would be opposite in its effects, and a lesser amount than the Vote would be issued. On this subject I beg to refer you to the correspondence between your predecessors and the late Grosvenor Bedford, Esq., acting for Lord Grenville, then Auditor of the Exchequer, dated 28 October and 21 November 1829.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts,
&c. &c. &c.

(12.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 8 August 1854.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 8 Aug. 1854.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 20th July, on the subject of the opinion I had communicated to your Lordships on the 3d of that month, to the effect, "that any amount which might have been realized by disposing of the Exchequer Bills for 1,750,000 l. issued for supply services ought to be repaid to the Exchequer Account, according to precedent and usage."

As your Lordships inform me, in your letter of the 20th, that "if any profit had been realized by the sale of these Exchequer Bills, your Lordships would have caused the same to be paid to the credit of the public, in conformity with the practice which they have invariably followed in such cases," this question is now closed as affecting the 1,750,000 l.

Perceiving with satisfaction that there is no difference of opinion between your Lordships and myself on the subject of the obligation of repaying to the public account any profits arising from the sale of Exchequer Bills, I need only respectfully refer your Lordships to my letter of the 16th January, which states my view of the law and usage regulating the department, in reply to the concluding observations with which you had favoured me.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

To the Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 38.)

Legality of Issues of £.1,750,000 before Commencement of Financial Year.

(Immediate.)

My dear Lord, Downing-street, 21 March 1854.

Chancellor of the Exchequer to Comptroller-general, 21 March 1854.

I FIND from Mr. Anderson that he has seen Mr. Ottey, and that he learns that there is some doubt on your Lordship's mind as to the legality of any issue from the 1,750,000 l. of Exchequer bills to be authorised by the Bill now in the House of Lords before the new financial year begins.

We have already been obliged to send money abroad (with the due formalities previously gone through), the expenditure of which belongs to 1854-55, and it is highly necessary that I should have the means of meeting those demands, should it seem fit, by appropriations of these Exchequer bills.

If therefore your Lordship entertains such a doubt, will you kindly supply me, at your earliest convenience, with the grounds on which it rests, that the matter may be put in course to be cleared up.

I remain, &c.
(signed) W. E. Gladstone.

The Lord Monteagle,
&c. &c. &c.

My dear Sir, Exchequer, 22 March 1854.

Comptroller-general to Chancellor of Exchequer, 22 March 1854.

I proceed to reply to your note of yesterday.

You inform me that in a conversation between Mr. Anderson and Mr. Ottey, the latter had stated that "There are some doubts in my mind as to the legality of any issue from the "1,750,000 l. to be authorised by the Bill now before the House of Lords, before the new "financial year begins."

I was

Appendix, No. 9.

I was not aware of any communication between the gentlemen you have named till I received your note, but if you will do me the favour of referring to my letter to yourself of the 8th March you will find that on receiving from you a copy of the resolution of the House of Commons, I wrote to you as follows:

"As I understand the resolution, and can from thence infer the provisions of the Act of "Parliament you mean to introduce, these Bills will all be applicable to the service of "1854–55, and therefore will not be issuable till after the 31st March. Should auxiliary "help be required in the meanwhile to support the revenue, I have a sufficient number of "Consolidated Fund bills prepared chargeable on future growing produce to meet that "case."

I did not hear from you from the 8th to the 21st, and had consequently no reason whatever to anticipate any doubt on your part with respect to what I considered to be almost a self-evident maxim repeatedly enforced at the Exchequer.

The Bill is now before me, and it is limited by its title to raising 1,750,000 l. by Exchequer Bills for the service of the year 1854.

Since 1832, when, for the purpose of altering the commencement of the financial year from the 1st of January to the 1st April by voting five quarters at the outset and passing the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 104, for regulating the period of rendering the public accounts and the Appropriation Act of the same year, c. 126, the whole financial administration, votes in supply, and votes in ways and means, has been governed on the principle then introduced. The year 1854 therefore commences 1 April 1854.

The Exchequer bills now voted are therefore legally issuable only for the purposes of the year from 1 April 1854 to 31 March 1855.

You will find this principle laid down in my correspondence with the Treasury in March 1853 and in the other cases referred to in that correspondence.

I have given you this explanation, though it might have been in the present instance sufficient to state that on receiving your letter of the 3d instant I gave immediate orders to make every preparation to avoid delay. I have therefore been acting before the Exchequer Bill Act has received the Royal Assent, and in anticipation of the Treasury warrant. But even under these circumstances I do not expect to have the bills of 1,750,000 l. completed before the 1st April.

I do not quite understand your statement that you have been obliged to send money abroad for expenditure of 1854–55 "the due formalities being previously gone through." No Exchequer warrant either has or in my mind could be granted to that effect.

The Exchequer balances on Saturday, I find, stood at about 2,400,000 l. and the Consolidated Fund bills issued amounted to 790,000 l.

I am prepared for the final issue of Exchequer bonds, but though the statutable power of issue will cease, it may be expedient to preserve the plates and paper, as I have no doubt that we shall be called on to replace worn or effaced bonds by the substitution of new ones.

Always, &c.
(signed) Monteagle.

To the Chancellor of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

(Extract.)

Exchequer, 4 April 1854.

Memorandum.—The 1,750,000 l. Exchequer bills are all prepared for completion, when the date and the rate of interest are communicated by the Treasury to the Exchequer.

Comptroller-general to Chancellor of Exchequer, 4 April 1854.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

(No. 39.)

Discontinuance of Quarterly Consolidated Fund Treasury Warrant.

(1.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 1 August 1854.

I beg to call your Lordships' attention to an omission, I presume unintentional, which has occurred in your Lordships' department, and which will require to be rectified, in your Lordships' judgment, I doubt not, as it does in mine.

Comptroller-General to Treasury, 1 August 1854.

The quarterly warrant from the Lords of the Treasury to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, authorising and requiring me to apply the sums charged upon the Consolidated Fund agreeably to Act of Parliament, and which warrant is issued under 57 Geo. 3, cap. 48, and is signed by your Lordships, has been invariably transmitted to the Comptroller till the April and July quarters of the present year; and the unbroken series of such documents form part of the records of the Exchequer. The two last accounts, however, for April and July have not yet been furnished to me.

Appendix, No. 9.

I feel confident that your Lordships will give orders to supply this omission without delay, and will direct that it shall not in future occur, but that this warrant shall be sent into the Exchequer as soon as it is completed by your Lordships.

If there be reason to apprehend any carelessness or irregularity in respect to the issues on account of charges on the Consolidated Fund, the regular preparation and transmission of this warrant, according to the usage and precedent of the Treasury and of the Exchequer, becomes more than ever important, I might add, indispensable.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

To the Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(2.)

My Lord, Whitehall, Treasury Chambers, 3 August 1854.

Treasury to Comptroller-General, 3 August 1854.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you, with reference to your letter of the 1st instant, on the subject of the quarterly warrants for the application of the sums charged on the Consolidated Fund, that their Lordships have at present under their consideration the various authorities sent to the Exchequer from this department; and before they reply to the suggestion conveyed in your letter, their Lordships request that you will explain more particularly the meaning of the words used therein, "And which warrant is issued under the 57 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 6," and that you will inform them, whether, in stating that those warrants are issued under the Act referred to, you formed your opinion either in any degree or exclusively upon the following words of the warrant itself.

"By virtue of the Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 48."

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

To the Right Hon. the Comptroller-general,
Her Majesty's Exchequer.

(3.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 7 August 1854.

Comptroller-General to Treasury, 7 August 1854.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 3d instant, in which, in reference to my communication of the 1st, requesting that your Lordships would be pleased to order the transmission of the quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant to this office, agreeably to the unvaried usage of the Lords of the Treasury from the constitution of the Comptroller's office to the month of April 1854, your Lordships are pleased to request me to explain the meaning of the words used therein, namely, "which warrant is issued under the 57 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 6;" and I have to reply, that these words are copied from the last quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant, addressed to me by your Lordships on the 6th January last, and which is signed Elcho and A. Harvey, being a quorum of your Lordships' Board; and the Act is referred to by them as the authority under which they have acted, and have transmitted the warrant for my guidance and government.

Construction of legal authority.

How dependent on words of warrant.

Your Lordships are also pleased to inquire whether, in stating that these warrants are issued under the Acts referred to, I form my opinion either in any degree or exclusively on the words of the warrant itself.

When I perceive that these identical words are used by your Lordships, not only in the last but in preceding warrants, I do not so entirely disregard your Lordships' judgment in construing your own Act, in a question of routine and usage, as not to be swayed in opinion in some degree. The production of the document in question is that which I consider to be important; and provided it is furnished for my guidance according to the law and invariably antecedent usage, your Lordships' reference to the statute which, in your own judgment, requires this document to be made out and furnished, is of less importance.

Other authority than Consolidated Fund Act.

But your Lordships seem to desire to know whether I consider the obligation to furnish the Comptroller-general with this warrant rests exclusively on the 57th Geo. 3, c. 48. I by no means do so. Again I refer to your Lordships' authority, and to that of your predecessors in office. In some warrants the last Statute only is quoted, but that recites and refers to the 56 Geo. 3, c. 98; and the Statute of Mr. Pitt establishing the Consolidated Fund, 27 Geo. 3, c. 13, is frequently set forth, at times singly, but more frequently in conjunction with the latter Statutes. To all these I beg respectfully to refer your Lordships.

As your Lordships are aware, the earlier records of the Exchequer (indeed, all antecedent to the reconstruction of this office) are now deposited with the Master of the Rolls as records, and I have been unwilling to delay replying to your Lordships' distinct questions, in order to make a general search; but I can inform your Lordships, that up to the present year the duty and obligation on the part of the Treasury to furnish this warrant, and the necessity of the Exchequer to obtain it, has never been brought into question or doubt.

Obligation never before questioned.

This

This I can assure your Lordships, so far as 10 years' experience at the Treasury and in Downing-street, and nearly 15 years in this office, enable me to judge.

Precedents and names.

But, beyond this, the unvaried course of precedent is not only important in itself, but becomes still more so by the names of the parties subscribed to the document in question. In many cases the warrant is not signed by the junior members of the Board only, but by the Chancellor of the Exchequer himself. Thus, in January 1828, July 1829, and July 1830, I find the name of Henry Goulburn; in October 1832 that of Lord Althorp; in 1834 the names of Lord Rosslyn and Lord Ellenborough, acting under the Duke of Wellington; Sir Francis Baring, Sir Charles Wood, and Mr. Spring Rice; and, as representing the Treasury of Sir Robert Peel, in January 1835, I find the signature to this very warrant, referring to its statutable authority under the earlier Act, is that of W. E. Gladstone.

Mr. Brooksbank's authentication.

Nor are the accounts to which this warrant refers, and which I have heard have been described as complicated and absurd, leading to mystification and deception, left without further authentication. They in general bear the initials of the late Mr. Brooksbank, whose great abilities and long experience in the Revenue Room made him an authority referred to by Parliament itself in devising plans for the simplification of the public accounts of the whole empire.

Risk and inconvenience of discontinuance of warrant.

But I should be censurable if I were not, with all respect, to call your Lordships' attention to the risk and inconvenience which must arise if the ancient usage of the Treasury and the Exchequer in regard to these accounts is to be set aside. Not only would a serious impediment be thrown in the way of the execution of my direct functions of control under the Statute establishing this office, for which I am made by law responsible to both Houses of Parliament, but a difficulty, as it seems to me, insuperable would be created to my furnishing your Lordships with the quarterly certificate of deficiency, on the authority of which your Lordships' Warrant for making out Deficiency Bills rests. Your Lordships will please to notice the copy of the certificate, which I enclose, together with an extract from the Treasury Warrant which recites that certificate and is dependent upon it, as the certificate itself is dependent on the Consolidated Fund Account now in question.

(A.) Certificate of deficiency, Consolidated Fund, 5 July 1854.

A very able and experienced public servant, Mr. Dwight, is sent over to the department on each quarter-day from the Treasury; these very accounts, complete as far as relates to Great Britain, with the exception of a few final entries and the official signatures, having been sent over for examination the day before. It is on this document, after its verification, that my certificate of deficiency is made out. It is taken back by Mr. Dwight, and though signed and returned to me at a later period, it is the usage of Your Lordships' Board to antedate the document, so as to give it full authority from the day after the quarter-day. I do not see, therefore, how it would be possible to withhold this document now for the first time without throwing the financial business of the country into inextricable confusion.

(B.) Preamble of Treasury Warrant, (see Exchequer Bill Warrant Book, p. 31).

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(4.)

Treasury Chambers, 29 August 1854.

My Lord,

Treasury to Comptroller-General, 29 August 1854.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you, with reference to your Lordship's letters of the 1st and 7th instant, respecting the non-transmission to your office of the usual quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant, that my Lords, upon finding that you appeared rather to rely on the practice of this department, than upon any separate and direct evidence in support of the opinion that the quarterly warrants are required by law, have further examined the question whether there is any legal foundation for that opinion.

My Lords are unable to find that this is the case; and as they conceive that many just objections may be taken to the form of these warrants, and to the practice of issuing them, they are disposed to discontinue them altogether; but before coming to any decision on the subject, they are anxious to ascertain that no practical inconvenience would result from the discontinuance, and they have accordingly to request that if any observations occur to your Lordship over and above those with which you have already favoured them, you will be good enough to report the same to this Board.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-General
of the Exchequer.

Appendix, No. 9.

(5.)

My Lords, Headingley House, Leeds, 6th September 1854.

Comptroller-General to Treasury, 6 September 1854.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 29th ultimo, written in reply to my communications of the 1st and 7th August, on the subject of the Consolidated Fund Quarterly Warrants of Appropriation. These warrants I take leave to remind your Lordships have been withheld from the Exchequer in the two last quarters, contrary to the official practice which hitherto uniformly prevailed from the first establishment of my department.

In your Lordships' letter of the 29th you are pleased to state that in respect to the obligation of furnishing the warrants in question, I have appeared rather to rely on the practice of the Treasury than on any separate and direct evidence that these warrants are required by law. Your Lordships will do me the favour to remember that the inquiry which you made was not, that I should furnish you with the legal authority for any practice in my own department, but that I should put a legal construction on the usage by which your Lordships' office had, till the present year, been undeviatingly governed. Consequently the case before me was one wholly differing from what would have arisen had I been to justify or trace to a statutable origin any part of my own official conduct; but I most respectfully submit, that in the administration of the affairs of a Government like that under which it is our good fortune to live, the chain of unbroken usage is in itself a high authority, from which it is frequently unsafe, and still more frequently inconvenient, to depart, even assuming that which I shall endeavour to show to your Lordships would be wholly erroneous in the present case, namely, that these warrants are disconnected from my statutable duties. I apprehend it will, on consideration, appear, that those duties cannot be effectually or accurately performed, if in this instance the unvaried course of precedent is set aside and abandoned.

Authority of usage.

Power of Treasury to make regulations for the Exchequer.

As a general principle, it is undeniable that by the 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 6, your Lordships have a right from time to time, by such orders and regulations as you shall see necessary for the safety, economy, and advantage of the public service, to direct what books, accounts, and vouchers shall be kept at the Exchequer, and the forms of the warrants, specifications, and other instruments which, for the purpose of a better carrying into effect the purposes of the Act, it shall be necessary to use at the Treasury or the Exchequer. But two questions are here suggested: (1). Whether the discontinuance of these quarterly warrants comes within the clause, and has been made under any order or regulation of your Lordships; and (2). Whether, on the grounds I am about to state, such order, if regularly made, can be considered by your Lordships as consistent with the duty of carrying into effect the purposes of the Exchequer Act; or indeed, whether it is not wholly inconsistent with the performance of the most important duties with which, by that Act, I am distinctly entrusted.

Discontinuance of warrant not yet directed.

On the first of these points I am now relieved from the apprehension that any order or Minute can as yet have been made by your Lordships to direct or justify the late alteration of practice. Had it been determined by your Lordships that so important a change should take place, I felt confident that it would have been communicated to me for my instruction and government; and I am now rejoiced to learn by your assistant secretary's letter of the 29th ult., that the expediency of discontinuing these warrants is still under your Lordships' consideration, and that, consequently, no final decision can have been pronounced.

As to expediency of discontinuance.

In order to bring before your Lordships the second and more important branch of the subject, namely, the expediency of the change in question, I now proceed to reply to the inquiry with which I have been honoured, and I beg to state in all sincerity, that any opinion of mine which can conduce to the public service is, and shall ever be, at your Lordships' command. I am asked whether in my judgment any practical inconvenience will result from the discontinuance of the Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrants beyond the inconveniences I have already stated in my letters of the 1st and 7th ult. On this subject your Lordships express your desire that I should report. I proceed to do so.

Will be impossible to furnish certificate of deficiency of Consolidated Fund

I need press upon your Lordships' attention the importance of the proceedings completed at the Treasury and at the Exchequer on the quarter-days fixed for financial purposes. Of these duties, one of the most pressing and essential, consists in the ascertainment of the surplus or the deficiency of the revenue and the balance in hand, compared with the demands constituting the charge on the Consolidated Fund. On this result depends, besides many other matters, the amount of Deficiency Bills which may from time to time be required. With respect to the balance in hand, the Exchequer Books and the returns made to me by the Bank and contained up to five o'clock on the quarter day, enable me to judge with entire accuracy. But with relation to the charge on which of course the balance to be provided for must depend, the first information on which I have afterwards to exercise my own official judgment, has been uniformly communicated to me by the Treasury, in the form of the Draft Warrant now under consideration. After careful comparison and examination, where a case of doubt arises the charge is ascertained, is compared with the sum standing to the Exchequer credit, and the Comptroller-general is required to sign a certificate for your Lordships' guidance, declaring the actual balance. It is on this certificate, as recited in your Lordships' subsequent warrant, that the authority for making out Deficiency Bills finally rests. The Quarterly Accounts communicated through the journals of the public, and almost invariably laid before Parliament, depend on the same documents as vouchers for their correctness, nor does it appear to me practicable to withdraw any one of these documents without destroying the evidence on which that correctness can be proved. In reply, therefore, to your Lordships' question respecting the possible inconvenience that may be anticipated from the discontinuance of these Quarterly Warrants, I beg respectfully to report, that I anticipate not only an inconvenience in that event, but from the reasons already stated, an absolute impossibility of performing the functions I have described in the mode and with the check and accuracy hitherto conceived requisite by your Lordships' predecessors, and by the Treasury. In the absence of the vouchers I have described, I must respectfully disclaim any responsibility for the accuracy of the proceeding.

for

As to Consolidated Fund issues. Discontinuance still more objectionable.

But this objection to the proposed change will appear still stronger, and I conceive insurmountable, when I call your Lordships' attention to a further branch of the subject. Hitherto I have only dealt with the total amount charged on the Consolidated Fund, which charge creates a capacity for future issue, when the other statutable requisites shall be subsequently complied with, but which is not in itself, when taken alone, an absolute authority for directing any issue whatever. The mode of sanctioning and making issues remains now to be considered, more especially as connected with the Quarterly Warrant of Appropriation.

Course of practice under Exchequer Act.

This branch of my duty is regulated by s. 13 of the Exchequer Act. Issues for charges on the Consolidated Fund are directed by specific Treasury Warrants to the Comptroller-general, requiring him to accredit the several persons charged in making payments with the sums required, and it is prescribed that every such Treasury Warrant shall contain a reference to the Act or Acts of Parliament by which such sums are charged or appropriated; and the Comptroller, having first satisfied himself that the payments directed are duly authorised by law, shall grant such credits. Your Lordships will observe from these precise and stringent words, what are the duties with which I am intrusted, and which I am bound under my responsibility to Parliament carefully to fulfil. I am bound to see that there exists a legal authority to place a given charge on the Consolidated Fund. I am bound to see that such authority has been legally exercised. I am bound to see that all necessary have been completed in order to justify the payment, and then, but not till then, am I either bound or at liberty to direct the issue. Now the Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant is an essential document, which has hitherto been forwarded to the Comptroller-general by the Treasury, and which is absolutely required to enable him to fulfil adequately the duties so precisely defined in the statute under which he acts, and to withhold this document is to deprive him of the means to comply with the law. This warrant states the charges in detail, for the legality of which this office is made responsible to both Houses, and no such distinct and detailed information as the warrant contains is to be found in the other documents submitted to the Exchequer. If thus the warrant is indispensable to the correct discharge of a statutable duty, I submit to your Lordships whether it can be discontinued consistently with the law.

Quarterly warrant indispensable.

For its detailed information.

Strict production of authorities.

The course of payment made under these heads of charge is so strict, that where grants and patents are required to give effect to statutable powers, however notorious may be the position and functions of the grantee, the patent or other instrument is required to be produced and entered at the Exchequer, copies in extenso being in most cases preserved. Of this I cannot give your Lordships more conclusive proof than by referring to the annuities payable to members of the Royal Family, pensions for civil and military services, and the salaries of Judges of the land.

Warrant necessary to show the amount of charge, when balances remain unissued.

Another matter likewise merits consideration. Instances have occurred, and must occur occasionally, where a charge supposed to be rightly placed on the Consolidated Fund on the quarter day may be shown to have abated or fallen in by death, resignation, or other cause. In such case there remains a balance, which becomes a saving to the public, and which, if issued in error, is repayable to the Exchequer Account. As explanatory of this, I refer your Lordships to the arrangement which I am authorised by the Treasury to make in respect to this class of Irish payments. The Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant affords the means of following up such cases, and fulfilling in this respect the primary object of my functions; namely, the prevention of an appropriation of any sum unauthorised by law, or in excess beyond the sum legally authorised.

Discontinuance of warrant of serious inconvenience, and would render control impracticable.

On these grounds, as well as on those already stated, I have to report that the discontinuance of the warrant in question would not only be productive of serious inconvenience, but would render the execution of my statutable duties wholly impracticable.

In stating this opinion, in obedience to your Lordships' direction, I am bound in duty to add, that I am aware considerable improvements may be devised in respect to this branch of the public service. This subject may well deserve your Lordships' attention, more especially at a moment when, by the Act of the last Session, considerable alterations are about to be made in the payments both of Consolidated Fund and Supply Services. The utmost care and vigilance will, I am fully aware, be given by your Lordships to this important question, and I shall endeavour in like manner accurately to perform my official functions. But much must depend on the mode in which the alterations are first carried into effect.

Present system may be improved.

Exchequer control no clog, but constitutional and legal check.

In conclusion, I take the liberty of respectfully entreating your Lordships to believe, that whilst the control of this office shall not be, nor has it been, exercised as a clog or hindrance to the public service, it shall not be withheld where it is required to fulfil my functions in enforcing, as far as belongs to my functions, a strict adherence to the law. These restraints have at times appeared to superficial inquiries to be burthensome; but to the

Appendix, No. 9.

the larger knowledge and experience of your Lordships, it will be at once manifested that the whole of our Parliamentary system depends upon a system of constitutional checks. Constitutional jealousy, rather than unreserved confidence, forms its basis. It may not be impossible to devise simpler and more authoritative modes of dealing with our national finances; but that advantage may be dearly purchased if procured at the sacrifice of the responsibility to Parliament which is provided by the existing law.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

To the Lord Commissioners of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(6.)

Sir,

Exchequer, 9 October 1854.

Mr. Ottey to Mr. Dwight, 9 October 1854.

I AM directed by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to inform you, in reply to your verbal inquiry of the 6th, that if the Lords of the Treasury will be pleased to transmit to his Lordship the schedule of charges proposed to be put on the Consolidated Fund for the October quarter, with instructions that such schedule should be examined and compared with the books of this department, this shall be done with the utmost promptitude consistent with accuracy. It is, however, assumed that the documents so furnished, and being, in fact, the Consolidated Fund Warrant, never withheld from the Comptroller-general's office till the April and July quarters of the present year, shall be deposited as heretofore with the Comptroller-general as a warrant and a voucher for his proceedings, and also as furnishing him with the means indispensably necessary to examine and control the Exchequer issues according to law.

I am, &c.
(signed) F. F. Ottey.

H. Dwight, Esq., Treasury.

(7.)

MINUTE, 20 October 1854.

CONSOLIDATED FUND WARRANTS.

Comptroller-General's Minute, 20 October 1854.

THE Comptroller-general has already received and acted on the following Treasury authorities, having satisfied himself that they are duly authorised by law.

	Date of Warrant.	Amount Included. £.	s.	d.
3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities 3·5 per Cent. Annuities Long Annuities	11 Oct. 1854	5,822,341	9	4
Bank of England Annuity, 4 Geo. 4, c. 22	„	292,870	–	–
Commissioners National Debt Life and Terminable	„	425,101	5	3
Home Secret Service	„	2,500	–	–
Civil List (the amount for pensions for which the Warrants are not laid before the Exchequer being excluded from the Warrant)	„	96,250 3,867	– 10	– –
Annuities and pensions	„	76,764	13	5

The Warrant for Salaries and Allowances, bearing date the 11th October, and for the sum of 16,366*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.*, has also been received; but as it includes a sum of 375*l.* for the quarter's salary of E. Romilly, as Chairman of the Audit Board, and as the patent registered in this office and issued under and by virtue of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, grants a salary of 1,200*l.* per annum only to Mr. Romilly, and not a salary of 1,500*l.*, as stated in the warrant, the Comptroller-general, not being satisfied that the larger sum is "duly authorised "by law," directs that 75*l.* be deducted from the credit required to be granted. On receiving a reply to his letter to the Treasury on this subject, dated 18 October, the consideration of the question will be resumed.

With

With respect to the following warrants, not yet received, no difficulty is likely to arise beyond the arithmetical comparison to insure correctness in the sum applied for; and when this is done, they may be acted on:

Bank of England Annuity on Capital.
Interest on Exchequer Bonds.
Sinking Fund.
Greek Loan.
Public Works Advance.

In relation to the Warrants for Courts of Justice and Miscellaneous Charges:

As by the alteration of system introduced in the present quarter, under which the ordinary information accustomed to be furnished before the quarter day, by the production of the draft appropriate warrant, has not been supplied, and as no appropriation warrant for these Consolidated Fund charges, though uniformly given to the Comptroller's office since its establishment to the April quarter in the present year, since which it has been refused (see Correspondence), it will be necessary that these two latter warrants should be examined with the same care that has been usual on former occasions, and any case for which a precedent and authority does not appear being specially noticed, as well as the bearing of the Act of the last Session, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, being kept in view, as also the Appropriation Act of the last Session.

As it is of the utmost importance that no delay should take place that can be productive of public inconvenience, this previous examination is to be carried on with as much despatch as is consistent with accuracy, and when completed the whole warrant and its contents will be examined by the Comptroller-general, with the view that he should satisfy himself that the credit required is for services "duly authorised by law, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 13."

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

(8.)

Treasury, 26 October 1854.

My Lord,

Treasury to Comptroller-General, 26 October 1854.

The Paymaster-general having reported to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, that two of the credits ordered by their Lordships yesterday, to place him in funds for the payments of this day were not granted to him until it was too late to make them available for such payments, I am commanded by their Lordships to request that you will inform them of the cause of the delay.

I am desired at the same time to point out to your Lordship that any delay in granting the credits ordered by this Board may be productive of very serious inconvenience to the public service, and that on this occasion the Paymaster-general has only been enabled to meet the drafts upon him by an unexpected payment to his cash account, which supplied the amount necessary to make good the deficiency of funds caused by the stoppage of the credits in question.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

(9.)

Exchequer, 27 October 1854.

My Lords,

Comptroller-General to Treasury, 27 October 1854.

I have the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of yesterday's date, informing me that the Paymaster-general had reported that two of the credits ordered to place him in funds for the payments of the 26th were not granted by me till it was too late to make them available for such payments. Your Lordships are further pleased to request that I should inform you of the cause of the delay.

I proceed to do so.

The delay alluded to is the necessary result of the alteration of practice introduced by your Lordships with respect to the quarterly charges on the Consolidated Fund, and to the mode adopted for meeting those charges; more especially as connected with the withholding of the accustomed general Consolidated Fund Warrants from this office, to which, from its first establishment to the present year, those warrants had been invariably made known and communicated.

I beg respectfully to refer your Lordships to the correspondence noted in the margin, wherein I ventured to anticipate that the course you proposed to take (but which you informed me still remained under consideration) could hardly fail to create very serious public inconvenience.

1. Exchequer Letter, 1 August.
2. Treasury Letter, 3 August.
3. Exchequer Letter, 7 August.
4. Treasury Letter, 29 August.
5. Exchequer Letter, 6 Sept.

Under the former and accustomed system, an opportunity for consideration was secured to the Exchequer immediately before the quarter day (10th October), so as to afford the Comptroller-general the means of satisfying himself of the legality of the several warrants authorising issues from the Consolidated Fund, and thus enabling him subsequently to carry carry your Lordships' Warrant into effect with accuracy and despatch. This preliminary examination might have been completed on the 9th or 10th of October.

Appendix, No. 9.

By the altered practice (for I am still in doubt whether it is even now deliberately and permanently adopted by your Lordships), I was left without any information whatever on this subject, till your Lordships' Warrant for payments for the Courts of Justice and Diplomatic Services and Pensions, bearing date 11th October 1854, were transmitted to me on the 25th instant, that is, 14 days after they purport to have received the sanction of your Lordships' Board.

(Signed) W. E. Gladstone. Alfred Hervey.

On receiving these documents, I lost not a moment in proceeding to a diligent and careful examination of the two warrants in question; I felt that despatch was more requisite, because the services for which a legal provision of funds was thus sought on the 26th, had been due on the 10th, and the high Judicial and Diplomatic Officers interested must either have been left unpaid, or must have been paid out of sums not authorised by law to be so appropriated.

Certain sums were included in each of these warrants which demanded close examination. This examination was proceeded on without delay. The issue was directed by your Lordships to be made on the 26th, leaving me only 24 hours to execute a duty, for which, under the former system, 14 days would have been allowed. Yet on the 26th, the very day fixed by your Lordships for these payments, at the hour of 2 h. 13 m., my warrant was transmitted to the Bank of England, and the Paymaster-general was simultaneously advised that at 2 h. 45 m. he would be put in funds to enable him to pay these services.

I trust I have now shown to your Lordships that the delay in question, such as it was, is solely attributable to the alteration of practice made on the former usage, and to the delay of the warrant at the Treasury for no less than 14 days after the date it bears.

I am quite aware of the necessity of transmitting these warrants without delay, and such has been the practice of my department. No necessity for expedition, more especially where the transmission of warrants is so long delayed, would justify me in acting with incautious precipitation, and in omitting the strict performance of my statutable duty, by satisfying myself that the payment required has been duly authorised by law. This is my primary function, to which all others must be made subservient (4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 13).

I do not quite apprehend the meaning of your Lordships' closing paragraph, in which you refer to unexpected payments to the Cash Account of the Paymaster-general, as having been employed to meet purposes contemplated by these warrants. If such sums were applied to pay the salaries of the Courts of Justice and the Diplomatic Services before the Exchequer Warrants determining the legality of such payments had been obtained, I can hardly reconcile such a course with the provisions of the 4 Will. 4, c. 15.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

To the Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(10.)

Treasury to Comptroller-General, 2 November 1854.

My Lord, Treasury, 2 November 1854.

With reference to the explanation contained in your letter of the 27th ultimo, in which you state, "that the delay in granting the credits to the Paymaster-general on the 26th "October," to which the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury desire me to call your attention in my letter of that day's date, "is the necessary result of the alteration of "practice introduced by their Lordships with respect to the quarterly charges on the Con- "solidated Fund, and to the mode adopted for meeting those charges, more especially as "connected with the withholding of the accustomed general Consolidated Fund Warrants "from your office," I am commanded by their Lordships to acquaint you that it is evident from this explanation that you are under the erroneous impression that the issue of the Quarterly Warrant to which you allude has hitherto preceded the issue of the credits; whereas that document, although bearing date on the first day of the quarter, has never reached you till about six weeks after that date, and long after the actual issue of the credits for the charges included in the Quarterly Warrants. My Lords are therefore totally at a loss to understand how the issue of the credits referred to in their letter of the 26th ultimo can have been delayed by the non-transmission to you of a document which, according to all previous practice, you would not have been in possession of at the date when the credits were ordered.

I am desired to state that, even if the facts were as you appear to imagine, their Lordships cannot admit the propriety of furnishing you with duplicate authorities for the charges on the Consolidated Fund, for the purpose of expediting the issue of credits when required for the public service; and that they are of opinion that the examination of the charges included in their warrants should be conducted solely upon the detailed schedules annexed to the authorities by which the actual credits are sanctioned.

I am commanded further to acquaint you that their Lordships have no desire to limit the time which may be required for the due examination of the warrants which you may receive from them, directing the issue of credits; but that they consider it necessary, for the regular conduct of the public service, that in all cases in which you cannot comply with the requisitions sent to you to grant the credits, at the time stated in their letters of direction, you should should advise them of the necessity for delay, in order that they may make the necessary arrangements to obviate the inconvenience which the postponement of the credits may otherwise occasion.

I am, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

(11.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 3 November 1854.

Comptroller-General to Treasury.

I REGRET much that your Lordships' letter of the 2d November compels me to occupy any portion of your Lordships' time with a reply, but your Lordships will find that you are under an entire misapprehension in respect to the former course of business between the Treasury and Exchequer.

Your Lordships deny that the issue of the Treasury Quarterly Warrant of Appropriation has heretofore preceded the issue of the credits, and you add, that although that warrant bears date the first of the quarter, it never reached me till about six weeks after that date, and long after the issue of the credits; and your Lordships conclude by stating that which would be undeniable, had your Lordships reasoned on the exact facts of the case, "that "you are at a loss to understand how the issue of the credits in question could have been "delayed by the non-transmission to me of a document of which, according to all previous "practice, I should not have been in possession at the date when the credits were "ordered."

Your Lordships have entirely lost sight of what the antecedent practice has been, as reported by me to your Lordships on the 7th August last, in which letter your Lordships will find the following statement:

"A very able and experienced public servant, Mr. Dwight, is sent over to this depart-"ment on each quarter-day from the Treasury; these very accounts complete, as far as "relates to Great Britain, with the exception of a few final entries and the official signa-"tures, having been sent over for examination the day before. It is on this document that my "certificates of deficiency is made out. It is taken back by Mr. Dwight, and though signed "and returned to me at a later period, it is your Lordships' usage to antedate the docu-"ment, so as to give it full force and validity from the quarter-day."

Your Lordships will thus see that, even before the quarter-day, it has been the usage to inform the Exchequer of the particulars of the charge on the Consolidated Fund for which credits would after be demanded, this interval of time being abundantly sufficient to consider here any case on which it was possible that the Comptroller-general should not be satisfied of the legality of the issue.

With respect to the warrants in question, in which your Lordships, I am sorry to observe, seem to consider there was a delay, I must again inform your Lordships that no time whatever was lost in considering and deciding on the legality of the issue; that the issue was directed at 13 minutes after two, on the very day prescribed in your Lordships' letter of direction, and that the Paymaster was simultaneously advised that at 45 minutes after two, on that very day, he would be put in funds at the Bank to the amount of 35,994*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.*, being the sum included in the warrants in question.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

(12.)

My Lord, Treasury, 19 December 1854.

Treasury to Comptroller-General, 19 December 1854.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit for your information a copy of their Lordships' Minute of the 19th instant, on the subject of the discontinuance of the Quarterly Warrant referred to in your letters of the 1st and 7th August and 6th September 1854.

I am, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

The Comptroller-General
of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

(13.)

Read 19th December 1854.

Treasury Minute, 19 December 1854.

MY Lords have under consideration a warrant which it has been the practice to send to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer every quarter, purporting to convey to him their Lordships' authority to appropriate, issue, and apply the quarterly income of the Consolidated Fund. An account prepared in great detail is annexed to this warrant; it contains on one side the net income actually paid into the Exchequer during the past quarter, and, on the other the issues made out of the net income during the same quarter for supply services; it contains, moreover, the charge of the Consolidated Fund for the quarter, consisting partly of actual payments made during the quarter out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, and partly of payments to be made in the following quarter for services charged on the Consolidated Fund on the preceding quarter-day.

Appendix, No. 9.

My Lords have also before them the correspondence which has passed between the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer and this Board in reference to the proposed discontinuance of these documents.

As the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer appears to apprehend that if the warrant and account are discontinued, he will be deprived of authorities and information which he considers necessary for the performance of his duties, My Lords proceed to describe what they apprehend to be the true nature of these documents.

Although the warrant professes to authorise the issues out of the Consolidated Fund, no issue whatever is made under the authority of that document; and nearly the whole of the issues to which it relates are made long before the warrant (which is generally pre-dated about six weeks) reaches the Exchequer.

With respect to the account, which is annexed to the warrant, it is wholly made up from returns which are in the possession of the Exchequer; the receipts are taken from accounts furnished to this Board by the Exchequer from its own records; and as regards the payments separate warrants and directions, in the form prescribed by their Lordships' Minute of the 26th September 1834, founded on the Exchequer Regulation Act, with detailed Schedules to regulate the issues, are transmitted to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, before any issue takes place; while, in fact, this quarterly account is principally a transcript of these schedules. It is clear, therefore, that the authorities and detailed schedules required by the Comptroller-general to enable him to execute his duties, are complete independently of the quarterly warrant and account in question.

(4 Will. 4, c. 15.)

The Comptroller-general having intimated to this Board that this Quarterly Warrant was prescribed by statute, my Lords called upon him to refer them to the Act of Parliament which required them to furnish him with that document. In his reply, dated the 7th August 1854 (annexed to this Minute), he refers them to the Acts 27 Geo. 3, c. 13; 56 Geo. 3, c. 98, and 57 Geo. 3, c. 48.

My Lords have caused the provisions of these Acts to be carefully examined, and they are advised that they do not contain any reference to the warrant in question. Under these circumstances, my Lords considered it right, before coming to a determination to discontinue the transmission of this Quarterly Warrant and account to the Exchequer, to request the Comptroller-general to point out to them any practical inconvenience which could arise from the discontinuance of these documents. My Lords have before them the Comptroller-general's reply, dated 6th September 1854, in which he states that the certificate of deficiency bills required is founded on the quarterly warrant, and that the authority for making out deficiency bills rests on such certificate. It appears to my Lords that the Comptroller-general is under some misapprehension as to the authority for making out deficiency bills, and that he has overlooked the provisions of the Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 6, which prescribes in clear and precise terms the course to be followed by the Treasury and the Exchequer with reference to these bills. The Act makes no mention whatever of any certificate being required from the Exchequer, and my Lords are of opinion that such certificate may safely be dispensed with in future.

The Comptroller-general further states, that he is bound to see that there exists a legal authority to place a given charge on the Consolidated Fund, and that such authority has been legally exercised. As no issue out of the Consolidated Fund can be made until the Comptroller-general has been furnished with the warrants and authorities, and prescribed by the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, these documents afford him the means of satisfying himself that every issue directed by their Lordships is in strict conformity with the Act of Parliament, under the authority of which they may have ordered it, before he issues his warrant to the Bank of England to grant the credit out of which it is to be paid.

The Comptroller-general states, moreover, that he cannot exercise the functions with which he is charged, unless the Quarterly Warrant in question is supplied to him; but he fails in pointing out any instance in which his proper functions are interfered with; nor does he appear to have due regard to the fact, that the whole of the issues for supply services, and by far the largest portion of those for Consolidated Fund Services, have invariably been made by him before the warrant to which he refers has ever reached him.

My Lords have only to add, that if the Comptroller general is of opinion that the special warrants required by the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, by which they authorise him to grant Exchequer credits can be improved, they are ready to take into consideration any suggestions for amending them which he may bring under their notice; but they cannot sanction the continuance of the objectionable practice of granting pre-dated, and, as it appears to them, fictitious authorities for issues of public money, which have been previously authorised and made in strict conformity with the regulations and forms prescribed by law.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer for his information.

(signed) J. Wilson.

(14.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 30 December 1854.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 19th instant respecting the discontinuance of the Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant of appropriation and issue, referred to in my letters of the 1st and 7th August and the 6th September. I have also to acknowledge the copy of a Treasury Minute of the 19th instant on the same subject. Comptroller-General to Treasury, 30 December 1854.

I should have confined my reply exclusively to the laying before your Lordships some suggestions for the improvement and simplification of the present form of special warrants of issue, which your Lordships express your readiness to take into consideration, but that there appear some important misapprehensions of fact contained in your Lordships' Minute. Misapprehensions of fact in Treasury Minute.

These may have arisen from the imperfect manner in which I expressed myself, or partly from the weight and importance of your Lordships' other functions. But it becomes absolutely necessary to remove them, with a view to the just comprehension of the subject of this correspondence. To this duty I shall, in the first instance, apply myself.

Your Lordships do me the honour to recite the purport of my former correspondence with your Board, but this is done with some omissions and some mistakes, which I am bound respectfully to notice. As to former correspondence.

In bringing under your Lordships' consideration the withdrawal and withholding in April 1854 of the Quarterly Warrant, I originally dealt with the change as a possible result of inadvertence, no official announcement having been given to me by your Lordships of any such change as made, or even contemplated; nor do I even now collect from the words of your Lordships' Minute of the 19th December, in which, for the first time, you communicate to me your opinion, that the official authority of your Lordships was ever given to this change till the issue of your Lordships' Minute of the 19th December, though the warrants had been withheld from the April quarter preceding. No order or authority is stated to have been given by your Lordships antecedently; none, at least, was communicated to me, which, had the change been made under the 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 6, must have been the case. It is on that section that I consider your Lordships' power on the subject to rest. Warrant discontinued without Treasury authority

Your Lordships seem to consider, that in referring to the 56 & 57 Geo. 3, as well as to Mr. Pitt's Act of the 27 Geo. 3, c. 13, as the authority for the issue of the Treasury Quarterly Warrant, I expressed an opinion that it was exclusively on these statutes that the administration of this department in this respect depended. This was by no means the case. Your Lordships required from me the authority upon which these Treasury Warrants were issued, and I referred you to these statutes, as cited by the Treasury, and by your Lordships' present Board, as their authority. I referred you to the Treasury practice since the first passing of the 57 Geo. 3; but at the same time, in my letter of the 6th September, I distinctly brought before your Lordships the unquestionable fact, that the usages which had existed in the ancient Exchequer were maintained and preserved by law in the Comptroller-general's Office, and were obligatory on me. On the subject of the authority of usage in this office, as continued and confirmed by the Statute 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 3, I take the liberty most respectfully of referring your Lordships to my letter of the 31st October, to which I have not as yet been favoured with any reply. Warrant required not only by law, but by usage.

In your Lordships' Minute of the 19th instant, you are pleased to refer, not only to the warrant setting forth the charge on the Consolidated Fund, but to subsidiary accounts furnished heretofore with that warrant, and formed for the most part on transcript of documents in the possession of the Exchequer itself. If your Lordships will condescend to refer to the whole of my past correspondence, you will find that the question of these accounts has never been adverted to by me, nor even by your Lordships; and that it is now introduced for the first time in the Minute of the 19th of December, though, as I humbly submit, it is wholly irrelevant to the real question at issue. I have respectfully entreated your Lordships to continue to furnish me with the information which I have not, which your Lordships alone can give, and which has been hitherto invariably given to my predecessors. I attach no importance to a transcript of that which I myself possess, but to that which I can only obtain from your Lordships, and without which, I beg to repeat it, the accustomed duties of this office, as regulated by statute and by usage, cannot be effectually or accurately performed. Reference to accounts annexed to Warrant already possessed by Exchequer wholly irrelevant.

I have looked back to the usage from the time of Lord Grenville to the present. I find that invariably the charge on the Consolidated Fund has been compared in this office with the available funds of the Exchequer; that the balance has been invariably struck in this department; that the Exchequer certificate has been as invariably issued to the Treasury, and has been uniformly recited by the Treasury in its Deficiency Bills Quarterly Warrant. More conclusive evidence of custom cannot well be shown. It is supported by still more ancient usage, so far as regards striking and certifying the balance at the Exchequer, but was continued on the passing of the 57 Geo. 3, c. 48, the Act under which the Deficiency Bills are made out; and it has been ever since continued and sanctioned, both by the separate and the joint acts of the Treasury and the Exchequer, during 37 successive years. The change now directed by your Lordships sweeps away the whole of this antecedent usage, and renders the performance of duties which I consider of the first importance utterly impossible. Former usage at Exchequer, swept away, and Comptroller's duties rendered impossible.

Principal Exchequer control set aside.

But I beg leave to call your Lordships' attention likewise to the principle which is at issue, as well as to the usage and authority which it is proposed to set aside. Unless I am put in possession by your Lordships of what is the charge on the Consolidated Fund before making out the deficiency bills, I am unable to exercise any judgment whatever with respect to the legality of the deficiency bills warrant brought before me. I can only obey, blindly, or absolutely resist, without having the means afforded me which have been afforded to my predecessors, enabling me to judge whether the warrant is justified by law. The precautionary control which has hitherto been invariably exercised by the Exchequer, and adopted and approved of by the Treasury, is now for the first time set aside in a manner subversive of an usage unbroken and unquestioned, and continued by express statute; and this change is made in a matter of fundamental importance to the administration of the finances of the Empire. It is made also without even the suggestion, that any inconvenience has ever resulted from an adherence to the ancient practice.

Check of amount of deficiency bill abolished against all proceedings.

By the change the public are left without any security whatever, with respect to the amount of deficiency bills issued beyond the mere declaration of one executive department of the Government, whilst under the practice sanctioned by the authority of Lord Grenville, and that of his successors, and by the practice and acquiescence of Lord Liverpool, Mr. Canning, Lord Ripon, the Duke of Wellington, Sir Robert Peel, Lord Melbourne, Lord John Russell, the Earl of Derby, and the Earl of Aberdeen, successively first Lords of the Treasury, the declaration of the Treasury was checked and controlled by the constitutional officer, appointed specially to guard against the possibility of abuse or negligence.

Knowledge of charge requisite for Exchequer to grant certificate of deficiency.

I have thus shown to your Lordships, that by unvaried usage a knowledge of the charge on the Consolidated Fund has been hitherto communicated to this department, and that it is required in order to enable me to grant the certificate, which by an usage equally invariable has hitherto been furnished, and which has likewise been recited in, and made the ground-work and foundation of, the Treasury Warrants for making out deficiency bills.

When no deficiency, Exchequer uncertain of charge.

But the practice is equally essential in cases where no deficiency bills are required, as in such case if the information I require is withheld, the real and bonâ fide charge on the Consolidated Fund must be left wholly uncertain and unknown to the Exchequer, until the quarter has expired, and the issues out of sums charged at the quarter or payable out of growing produce, may be left confused and indeterminate, and may be continued without check.

As to issues being made before warrant reaches Exchequer.

In respect to my farther argument, which went to prove the necessity for the production of the warrant setting forth in detail the quarterly charges on the Consolidated Fund, and submitting to your Lordships that its suppression deprived me of the means of satisfying myself that the demands of the Treasury for credits were made according to law, and ought therefore to be complied with by me, your Lordships are pleased to observe that this cannot be the case, "as the issues in question are made long before the warrant reached the Ex-"chequer." I fear I must have failed to impress on the minds of your Lordships the actual facts of the case, or that those facts must have escaped your attention or memory, or the mistake into which you have been led would have been avoided. The real course of practice was explained in my letter of the 7th August and 3d November 1854. In both these letters I informed your Lordships that this warrant, though not as yet signed or closed, was invariably communicated to the Exchequer by a most able and trustworthy officer of the Treasury on or before quarter-day, and was examined and compared, and that on this comparison, and founded upon it, the declaration of balance was made by the Comptroller-general, and was adopted in the Treasury Warrant. So far is it, therefore, from being an accurate statement that "the issues to which the warrant relates were made long before the warrant "reached the Exchequer," the fact is, that under the accustomed usage the warrant was produced, was compared, and examined before the day on which one single issue was made. It is, therefore, an entire misapprehension of the facts of the case to imagine that "the "larger portion of the issues for Consolidated Fund Services have been invariably made "before the warrant in question reached the Exchequer." On the question of the usage of your Lordships' department, practised not only by former but by the present Board of Treasury, of taking, signing, completing and pre-dating the warrants, I shall have occasion to observe hereafter.

Not so; invariably communicated previously, and compared.

Comptroller prevented from executing his duties.

The Minute of the 19th of December states that the Comptroller-general has "failed to "show how he is prevented from executing his duties by reason of the absence of the "quarterly warrants." I humbly beg your Lordships' indulgence while I recal your attention to the facts of the case. On the 6th of September I respectfully informed your Lordships that "without this warrant it would be impossible for me to strike the quarter's "balance, nor could the Treasury Warrant for Deficiency Bills issue, and that the result "would be the impossibility of performing my functions with the accuracy hitherto con-"sidered requisite." I added, that "I must therefore decline all future responsibility for "the correctness of the proceeding." Such was my anticipation, and it has been borne out by the results. Deprived of the possibility of performing my accustomed duty, I was compelled to withhold the ordinary Exchequer certificate; I was compelled to send in my quarterly account to the officer of the Treasury, the National Debt Office, and the Bank of England, in an incomplete state, adding an explanatory note that this was done in consequence of the want of the information hitherto invariably furnished for my guidance. The same explanation must likewise appear appended to the annual account to be furnished to both Houses of Parliament. I hope this statement may, on consideration, satisfy your Lordships that it can no longer be asserted "that the Comptroller-general has failed to show how "he is prevented from executing his functions by reason of the absence of the quarterly "warrant,"

"warrant," which had invariably been "furnished to his predecessors for their government." But further, the change precluded your Lordships from performing your duties in the accustomed manner. Being necessarily deprived of the Exchequer certificate of balance, it became indispensable that you should altogether vary your form of warrant for making out Deficiency Bills; and for the first time since the enactment of the 57 Geo. 3, the amount of Deficiency Bills has been determined by the unchecked arbitrium of the Treasury, in place of being the result of an account compared and checked by an independent Parliamentary officer.

And Treasury also.

The Minute of the 19th December seems to assume that the quarterly warrants contain nothing but what is included in the special warrants of issue subsequently transmitted, and at a time sufficiently early to enable the Comptroller-general to examine and to decide on the legality of the payments for which credits are required. The fact is, however, otherwise. Cases will be found in which sums are given in detail in the quarterly warrant, enabling their respective legality to be examined, which are given in gross in the issuing warrant. The issuing warrant also is frequently accompanied by your Lordships' direction for its immediate execution, by the issue of the credits demanded, so that a practical examination of its details becomes difficult, if not impossible. It is, therefore, inaccurate to suppose that, either in respect to its substance or to the time allowed for the performance of the duty of examination, the special issuing warrant, in its present form and mode of issue, can be accepted as a substitute for the quarterly warrant of appropriation and issue now withheld.

Quarterly Warrant different from special issuing Warrant.

In reference to the past practice of the Treasury in furnishing the Comptroller-general with the Quarterly Warrant produced on the quarter-day, though unsigned, and therefore incomplete, and, after the examination of its contents, taking it back to the Treasury, to be afterwards returned and deposited duly executed, your Lordships are pleased to inform me "that you cannot sanction the issue of pre-dated and fictitious Warrants." This communication not only seems to contain a severe condemnation of the practice of all Boards of Treasury, from the passing of the Deficiency Bills Act in 1817 to the month of April 1854, but it also may render some distinct orders from your Lordships, or some alteration of practice in other questions, absolutely necessary. It may perhaps be doubtful whether, in strict law, a document produced under the authority of the Government, and acted on by themselves, and as a guidance to others, and afterwards taken back into the possession of the proper department, and returned at a future time signed and dated as of a prior date, does not take effect from that day, by relation whether the signature would not be taken to have been received nunc pro tunc, and, where no deceit or fraud was or could be suspected, whether such a document could be fairly described as "fictitious." As one long concerned in the management of public affairs in this country, I am convinced that your Lordships will feel that I only perform my duty in respectfully protesting against a suggestion that casts a deliberate censure on all who have been, during a considerable part of the last four reigns, engaged in the service of the Crown; if this practice is to be condemned and set aside as "fictitious," the principle must be carried, I apprehend, much further; and various public instruments which come before me, bearing a date differing from that of their actual execution, stated to be executed at places where the parties executing them were not, and claiming authorities they do not legally possess, must likewise be treated as "fictitious," and ought to be set aside as irregular by me. I suggest to your Lordships the expediency of inquiring whether, if these quarterly warrants are to be condemned as "fictitious," it will be justifiable to continue the present mode of proceeding for the Civil List of Her Majesty, or the payment of the dividends.

Objection to "pre-dated and fictitious" Warrants.

Without your Lordships' special instruction, I should be most unwilling to apply a principle that would produce much confusion in the public service; but I cannot but apprehend that such a course would be a necessary logical consequence of the condemnation affixed by your Lordships' high authority to the issue of the quarterly warrants from 1817 to April 1854, which is now designated as "fictitious" in your Lordships' Minute.

I have now (and I fear at very considerable length) brought under your Lordships' notice the points on which I am compelled most respectfully to differ from the high authority of your Lordships' judgment. I do so because, acting under a special Parliamentary responsibility, I feel it but due to myself, and to the functions with which I am entrusted, to record the grounds of my opinion. Solicitous in all cases, where it can rightfully be done, to forward the public service, by giving effect to your Lordships' wishes, and to attend to all lawful exercise of authority, I feel it equally necessary to free myself from all responsibility for deviation from established usage, an adherence to which seems to me required by law and by our Parliamentary constitution.

Comptroller's vindication of difference with Treasury.

I have the honour of enclosing, on a separate paper, the suggestions for improving and simplifying the present system, which your Lordships express your readiness to take into consideration.

Suggestions for improving system.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury.

Appendix, No. 9.

(15.)

Issue of Charges on the Consolidated Fund.

Memorandum for Consideration.

Memorandum of Comptroller-general, 1 January 1855, enclosed in letter of 30 December 1854.

In my letter to the Treasury, 6th September 1854, whilst reporting that the discontinuance of the Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant would not only be productive of serious inconvenience, but that it would render the execution of the statutable duties of the Comptroller-general wholly impossible, I added, that I was aware that considerable improvements might be devised in respect to this branch of the public service.

In the Treasury Minute of the 19th December 1854, it is stated that "if the Comptroller-"General is of opinion that the special ('issuing') warrants required by the Act of 4 Will. 4, "c. 15, by which they authorise him to grant Exchequer credits, can be improved, they "are ready to take into consideration any suggestion for amending them which he may bring "under their notice."

A more simple and effective process suggested.

I now proceed to lay before the Treasury the suggestions which the experience of 24 years, 14 of which have been spent in this office, enable me to make, and which I am convinced may not only bring to a close the controversy which has for a considerable time existed between the two departments, but which will secure to each the most effective means for performing its official duty, and will, at the same time, greatly simplify, abridge, and facilitate the mode of discharging the several functions, without the loss of any existing check or protection against error or mistake.

For English payments only.

The observations I am about to make are, in the first instance, applicable to English payments only, without reference either to Irish charges on the Consolidated Fund, or the charges transferred by the Act of last Session from Scotch gross revenue to the Consolidated Fund. These questions will be separately dealt with hereafter.

Former system operose and complicated.

The system which prevailed to April 1854, from the passing of the 57 Geo. 3, c. 48, whilst by the issue of the Quarterly Consolidated Fund Warrant it provided adequately and efficiently for certain public objects of the utmost importance, did so in a most complicated and operose manner. To explain my views, I refer willingly to the Treasury Minute of the 19th December 1854. It is there correctly stated that accounts have been hitherto stated and transcribed, accompanying the Consolidated Fund Warrant, and deposited with the Exchequer, showing on one side the net income paid into the Exchequer during the past quarter, and on the other the issues made out of the net income during the same quarter for supply services, and containing, moreover, the charge of the Consolidated Fund for the same quarter, consisting partly of actual payments already made out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, and partly of payments to be made in the following quarter for services charged on the Consolidated Fund on the preceding quarter-day. The Minute states that the account is made up from Returns which are in the possession of the Exchequer, the receipts being taken from accounts furnished by the Exchequer to the Treasury.

Duplication of official labour unnecessary.

It is quite clear that a duplication of official labour and record, by which documents already in the possession of the Exchequer are again required to be transcribed and transmitted from the Treasury, is an unnecessary waste of time and of labour, and may, without any inconvenience to the public, be discontinued. Therefore, nothing should continue to be given or required by the Treasury or Exchequer in this branch of the public service, but that which the latter has not within its own records which is necessary for the discharge of its proper functions.

The Minute also states that the Quarterly Warrant is principally a transcript of the special schedules annexed to the Issuing Warrants. If these documents were entirely and not principally identical, it is evident that, in this instance also business was required to be done twice over with considerable increased official and clerical labour, and without any corresponding benefit to the public service.

Objects to be attained; discontinuance of unnecessary labour.

Assuming, therefore, as the objects to be attained, 1st, that the Treasury should be freed from the responsibility and labour of furnishing to the Exchequer that which the Exchequer itself possesses and can refer to; and, secondly, that a duplication of the same work should be discontinued, where they are not required by some clear necessity; I shall proceed to show how these objects can be attained without the sacrifice of any constitutional check, and with a security for greater despatch and accuracy in both departments.

Reference to practice in Irish and Scotch charges.

I must here be permitted to refer to the system for many years practised in respect to the Consolidated Fund charges in Ireland, and lately introduced with great advantage in relation to the Scotch payments formerly made out of gross revenue, and now placed on the Consolidated Fund. I am strengthened in my judgment when I find that the system I am disposed to recommend to the Treasury rests on two experiments which have been tried, and which have succeeded.

Similar Warrant recommended for English charges.

I should propose that all the charges on the Consolidated Fund which are contained in the quarterly issuing warrant, as affecting the issues in the ensuing quarter, should be made up at the Treasury some few days before the quarter day; that, as far as possible, they should be in printed schedules, the variations only from time to time, whether by omission of some charges or the addition of others, being inserted in MS.; that these schedules should be appended to a Treasury warrant for the appropriation and issue, according to Treasury directions hereafter to be given, of the total amount of these quarterly charges on the Consolidated Fund in the form now adopted in the warrants for the Irish charges. The warrant should be transmitted to the Exchequer two or three days before the quarter-day, or about the same period hitherto allowed for the comparison of the accounts brought over from the Treasury by Mr. Dwight. This warrant, constituting practically the necessary information respecting the charge on the Consolidated Fund, after being examined at the Exchequer, would enable the Comptroller-general to strike the balance between the amount of the charge and of the income, fixing the amount of deficiency bills required for the ensuing quarter, of which the usual certificate should be given. Appendix, No 9.

on

By this arrangement time would be afforded to the Exchequer to examine these schedules; and this being done by anticipation before the quarter-day, no delay could possibly arise in the immediate preparation of credits when the Treasury letters of direction were received. The double labour of preparing the quarterly appropriation warrant would be altogether avoided; the accounts, duplicates of those in the possession of the Exchequer, would be dispensed with altogether; the clerical labour of the Treasury would, I should think, be diminished by 9-10ths of its present amount; a check effective for all purposes would be maintained, and this without the abandonment of any one practice required for the public service, and without doing more than applying to the English payments that which has long been practised in relation to Ireland, and has been more recently acted on in Scotland. Satisfactory results.

If the principles here submitted are adopted, the mode of carrying them into effect could be arranged in a few hours; and I have no hesitation in stating that a far greater security would be obtained against abuse, against delay, and against controversy, than by any other plan that I have as yet had occasion to consider.

I need not add, that if these recommendations were adopted, I should most willingly lend my best assistance in showing how they could be carried into immediate effect.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

Exchequer, 1 January 1855.

(16.)

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 3 March 1855.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to transmit herewith, for your Lordships' information, the copy of a Minute of their Lordships on the subject of their discontinuance of a duplicate Treasury Warrant for the issue of money from the Consolidated Fund. Treasury to Comptroller-General, 3 March 1855.

I am, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

The Right Honourable
The Comptroller-General of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

(17.)

Read 27th February 1855.

MY Lords have under consideration a letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, dated 30 December 1854, on the subject of the Minute of this Board, dated the 19th December 1854, directing the discontinuance of a duplicate Treasury Warrant for the issue of money from the Consolidated Fund. Treasury Minute, 27 February 1855.

Although my Lords are unwilling to prolong a correspondence which they had hoped that their Minute of the 19th December last would have closed, they cannot refrain from pointing out to the Comptroller-general the misapprehension under which he appears to be labouring with respect to the control which he is required to exercise over the acts of the Board.

It appears that the Comptroller-general, not satisfied with exercising that control over the issue of credits which the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, assigns to him, maintains that he is a constitutional officer appointed specially to guard against the possibility of "abuse or negligence" on the part of this Board; and that even in a matter of such simple routine as the preparation of an account by which the excess of the charge of the Consolidated Fund beyond the quarterly income is ascertained, the amount of such excess ought not to be determined by the unchecked arbitration of this Board, but that it should be the result of an account compared and checked by an independent Parliamentary officer; and moreover, that not only is the duty of making out and issuing Deficiency Bills vested in him, but that his certificate is the groundwork and foundation of the Treasury authority itself, under which such bills are prepared.

These opinions are distinctly expressed in the following passages of the Comptroller-general's letter of the 30th December 1854. In that letter he states, in reference to the discontinuance of the duplicate warrant referred to, "By this change the public are left "without any security whatever with respect to the amount of Deficiency Bills issued, "beyond the mere declaration of one executive department of the Government, whilst "under the practice sanctioned by Lord Grenville," and the other ministry, "the declaration

Appendix, No. 9.

" of the Treasury was checked and controlled by the constitutional officer appointed spe" cially to guard against the possibility of abuse or negligence."

And again: " For the first time since the enactment of the 57 Geo. 3, the amount of " Deficiency Bills has been determined by the unchecked arbitration of the Treasury, in " place of being the result of an account compared and checked by an independent Parlia" mentary officer."

In the same letter he states further, " The certificate of the Comptroller-general is the " ground-work and foundation of the Treasury Warrant for making out the Deficiency
" Bills."

It will be a sufficient answer to these statements to set forth at length the clause of the Act of the 57 Geo. 3d, in which authority is given to issue Deficiency Bills; but before they do so, my Lords think it right to state that the Comptroller-general, in alleging that the public are left without any security whatever, with respect to the amount of Deficiency Bills issued, beyond the mere declaration of this Board, has overlooked the uniform practice of the Exchequer, according to which the Deficiency Bills are issued, not upon the receipt of the Deficiency Bills Warrant, but upon the separate payment warrants sent to him for the interest of the debt, and other services charged upon the Consolidated Fund, and that the Deficiency Bills Warrant is not of itself a sufficient authority for the issue of such Bills.

The 6th clause of the Deficiency Bills Act, which clearly defines the powers and duties of the Treasury and the Exchequer in reference to these bills, is as follows:

" Be it therefore enacted, that if upon making up the accounts of the income and charge
" of the said Consolidated Fund in Great Britain or Ireland respectively for the quarters
" ending on the 5th day of April, the 5th day of July, the 10th day of October, or the " 5th day of January in any year, it shall appear to the Commissioners of his Majesty's " Treasury that the produce of the said fund is not sufficient to defray the charges there-
" upon in Great Britain or in Ireland respectively, then and in such case it shall and may " be lawful for the Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or any three or more of them " for the time being, from time to time, by warrant under their hands to cause or direct any " number of Exchequer bills to be made out at the receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer in " Great Britain, for such sum or sums of money as shall be sufficient to make up such " deficiency in Great Britain or Ireland respectively; and such Exchequer bills shall be " made out in the same or like manner, form and order, and according to the same or like
" rules and directions as are directed and prescribed in and by an Act made in the 48th
" year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled, 'An Act for regulating the issuing and
" paying off of Exchequer bills.'"

But the Comptroller-general endeavours to justify the continuance of the duplicate Consolidated Fund Warrant by reference to the usage of the ancient Exchequer. In his letter of 30th December 1854, he states in my letter of the 6th September 1854, "I " distinctly brought before your Lordships the unquestionable fact, that the usages which
" had existed in the ancient Exchequer were maintained and preserved by law."

My Lords cannot, however, admit that it was the intention of those who framed the Act 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 15, to maintain and preserve the usages which existed in the ancient Exchequer. In the report upon which that Act was founded, the Commissioners state:
" We have observed that nearly all the forms and practices now in force may be traced to
" very remote periods, and that notwithstanding the extreme changes and improvements
" which experience and civilisation have so generally introduced into pecuniary transac-
" tions, the forms of the Exchequer have undergone little or no amendment or alteration.
" On considering, therefore, on the one hand, what are or ought to be the legitimate func" tions of this department, and, on the other, the variety and perplexity of forms and
" checks now in use, and the number of individuals employed under the existing establish" ment, we have come without hesitation to the conclusion that a much more efficient and " economical system than that now employed may be safely and advantageously intro-
" duced." There are other passages in the same report which clearly prove that the object of the Commissioners was not to continue and confirm previous usage, but to simplify the forms of public business, and economise the public time.

My Lords have only to remark with reference to the suggestions which the Comptroller-general has favoured them with, for facilitating the examination of the quarterly Schedules in his department, that they will endeavour to forward the schedules to the Exchequer at as early a date as possible, consistently with the due examination of them in their office, and that after the expiration of the present quarter they will cause them to be reprinted, and sent to him for revision; some of the Irish schedules will be sent to him shortly for the same purpose. But my Lords wish it to be clearly understood that while they are desirous of adopting any suggestions which his Lordship may offer for facilitating the examination of the charges included in the quarterly shedules, it is not their intention to revive obsolete and ancient practices, which it was the object of the Royal Commissioners and of the Act of 1834 to amend and simplify.

(18.)

My Lords, Exchequer, 20 March 1855.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of the 3d March, enclosing the Treasury Minute of the 27th February, written in reply to my letter of the 30th December 1854. Comptroller-General to Treasury, 20 March 1855.

I should have answered your Lordships' communication with more despatch, but from causes connected with the duties of this department, and from the political changes which have occurred in the Board of Treasury itself, the new Treasury warrant having only been transmitted to me for entry and registration at the Exchequer on the 12th instant, it was difficult or inexpedient to do so. Exchequer control by record of patents.

Your Lordships are pleased to animadvert on some supposed misapprehension on my part respecting the control which I consider it to be my duty to exercise for the purpose of guarding, as a constitutional officer, against the possibility of abuse or negligence on the part of your Lordships. Animadversion on Exchequer control.

It might be inferred from these words that I was so imprudent and ill-advised as to presume to claim or to exercise some novel or unprecedented authority over the proceedings of your Lordships. Such, however, is the very reverse of the case. I have only sought to fulfil the duties which I found established in this office more than 15 years ago, which I find to have been practised since the first formation of the department, which have been invariably concurred in by every succeeding Treasury Board that has since existed, including that with which I was for many years connected as Chancellor of the Exchequer, and which are strictly in accordance with law and usage, and cannot be set aside without prejudice to the public service. So far from venturing to impose on your Lordships any new restraints on the discharge of your high functions, I only seek to continue the former practice, which has been sanctioned by experience as well as by authority.

I also respectfully beg leave to remind your Lordships, that so far from maintaining the necessity of duplicate warrants, of which you complain, I have, in my memorandum of the 1st of January, pointed out how all that is really required, in order to preserve the constitutional check of this department, could be attained without the abandonment of one single precautionary measure which my duties and the public service require, and by the adoption of which the necessity of all duplicate warrants would be superseded. Duplicate warrants unnecessary.

Your Lordships state that, not contented with any control over credits; and I maintain that it is my duty as a constitutional officer to guard against the possibility of abuse or negligence on the part of the Treasury. If this observation is limited to matters immediately connected with my department, and going no further than the functions of the Exchequer, I am prepared to adopt and justify the assertion, that in relation to my own functions, it is my duty to guard against any abuse or negligence which from any cause may appear on documents brought before me for my direction or government. This, by your Lordships' predecessors, has been recognised as not only consistent with my duty, but as most important for their protection. Of this I cannot give your Lordships a more direct example than a late one on the 3d of March. Your Lordships were pleased to suggest that the specification papers by which the whole receipt of the revenue at the Exchequer is regulated should be dispensed with. I pointed out that this was, in fact, the setting aside of an Act of Parliament, and that I could not legally carry it into effect, even on the high authority of your Lordships. The Treasury acquiesced in this decision, supported as it was by the opinion of the law officers, given several years back; and your Lordships' original instructions are most prudently abandoned. Had they been persevered in, your Lordships must see that it would have been my duty to refuse obeying your commands. Another very conclusive example will be found in reference to the Minute for the regulation of the Consolidated Pay Office, in 1849: that Minute was adopted by your Lordships' predecessors in December 1848; and it was passed, printed, and distributed to the several Government departments. I took exception to certain parts of it, as contrary to law, and affording facilities for the application of public monies in a manner at variance with their just appropriation, and the enactments of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15. The objectionable Minute was withdrawn; it was revised, corrected, and, in a form considerably improved, was adopted and laid before Parliament in the subsequent month of March. In another instance, a sum of 25,050*l.*, which had very long been continued on the public account, and returned to Parliament as "Exchequer Bills outstanding," was shown by me not to represent outstanding Exchequer Bills in any respect, but to have been a mode adopted for settling an imperfect account. The error was in consequence corrected; and in this, as in other cases I have specified, I acted with the entire concurrence and approval of the Treasury, and, as I believe, likewise in conformity with my official duty. I shall continue to do so, not considering my functions limited to credits only. Examples. Specification papers. Pay Office Minute. Outstanding Exchequer Bills.

Your Lordships seem to consider, likewise, that I am in error in assuming that it is my duty to certify what you designate as being so simple a matter as the account made out quarterly, showing the excess of charge on the Consolidated Fund, by which the amount of Deficiency Bills is regulated. You seem to consider it somewhat presumptuous that I should suggest that this Exchequer certificate is the groundwork and foundation of the Treasury authority, and that the abandonment of that security leaves the public to the unreserved arbitrium of the high department of the Treasury only. My Lords, from the date of the first issue of Deficiency Bills, the certificate of the Exchequer was not only required by your Lordships, but was recited in your Lordships' warrant as its foundation and authority. Your Lordships have been pleased to withhold the information uniformly furnished to the Exchequer, Hitherto uniformly required.

Appendix, No. 9.

Exchequer, on which that certificate was founded; the certificate has necessarily been abandoned, and I have been constrained to return my accounts in an imperfect state to your Lordships, to the Bank, and to the Commissioners for the National Debt; adding, however, a memorandum in these cases, that I disclaimed all responsibility for the result. Your Lordships will thus see that what you appear disposed to object to, as an undue encroachment on my part, in this respect was only a maintenance of the invariable practice of the Treasury, which affirmed in its own warrant that the certificate of the Exchequer was the foundation on which the amount of Deficiency Bills rested, and the voucher by which the correctness of that amount was ascertained; as a matter of fact, it is therefore undeniable that the check is now withdrawn, and an instrument, formerly supported by the authority of an independent constitutional officer, now rests exclusively on your Lordships' decision. I may remind your Lordships that the effect of this change has been to produce errors in two quarterly accounts—an event, I believe, unprecedented; and though those errors were trivial in amount, they were sufficient to prove the inexpediency of what I may be permitted to call an unwise departure from invariable usage and precedent.

Consequences of abandonment.

Errors produced.

I annex copies of the form of Deficiency Bill Warrant, adopted uniformly till the late change, as well as a copy of that now introduced. Your Lordships, by a mere inspection, will perceive that what is considered in the Minute of 27th of February as a presumptuous assumption of authority by me was the old and invariable practice of your predecessors till the year 1854, and that the alteration made has entirely removed the previously existing constitutional check.

Copies of former and altered warrants appended.

It is quite true that the 57 Geo. 3, s. 6, does empower your Lordships, "on ascertaining "that the produce of the Consolidated Fund is insufficient to defray the charges thereon, "to direct the issue of the deficiency bills required, but as a correlative precedent." The making up the accounts of the Consolidated Fund is expressly directed; and by the former practice, now set aside, the production of the Exchequer certificate was required by your Lordships' predecessors for this operation.

57 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 6.

If the simpler form and practice are adopted as recommended in my memorandum of the 1st of January, and which I collect is likely to be the case, the safe and constitutional usage may still be adhered to, and yet the duplicate warrants of which your Lordships complain may be set aside without any inconvenience.

Suggestions in Mem., p. 28.

But your Lordships, I deeply regret, proceed again to raise an argument which I had ventured to hope had been disposed of conclusively in my former correspondence, and in which, from your Lordships' silence from the month of December 1854 to the 3d March 1855, I had been led to hope you acquiesced. The point affects the whole principle of this office, and if admitted would, in my judgment—I say it earnestly but most respectfully—deprive me of the means of performing the functions assigned to me by the Legislature. I allude to the authority of usage in this department. Any attempt by your Lordships to set aside all the authority of usage in the Exchequer would, to the best of my judgment, amount to the assumption of a legislative authority on your part, and would produce infinite confusion and uncertainty; I am, therefore, constrained, with the utmost deference to your Lordships, to entreat your Lordships to re-consider the opinion you seem disposed to adopt, but which I cannot but resist by all legitimate means, till either a court of justice or the authority of both Houses, to whom I am responsible, shall determine the question. I beg to refer your Lordships to my letters of the date set forth in the margin on this subject, but shall only add some additional facts which seem to me important.* But I must first guard myself against the supposition suggested in your Lordships' Minute. It is not only far from my intention to suggest that the ancient, complex, expensive, and inapplicable regulations of the middle ages should be revived or continued—such a proposition would only deserve to be treated as equally absurd and contrary to law. The antiquated practice of early times, the operose transactions of the three ancient departments, are swept away by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, together with the Roman numerals, cancelled bank notes, the Latin entries, the debentures, privy seals, and wooden tallies. A simple and economical system is produced, by which, in place of six great offices, either sinecures or executed by deputy, assisted by 68 subordinate clerks, messengers, &c., at an annual expense of 43,014 l., the whole functions are performed by myself and my able assistant, Sir Edward Ryan, with 11 clerks and 5 subordinate office keepers, watchmen, and messengers, entailing a charge of no more than 7,393 l. The simplicity and expeditious punctuality with which all is completed will best be shown in the fact that your Lordships have never had occasion to complain that the executive functions of the Exchequer have ever been left in arrear for one day. Those middle-age formalities have ceased to exist, because they are abolished by statute, as being contrary to or inconsistent with the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15. But the usages not being inconsistent with that statute are preserved and continued by the express conditions of that statute itself; and it neither rests with even the high authority of your Lordships, nor yet with me, to set them aside. It is, therefore, wholly foreign from my wish, or my sense of duty, to seek, as your Lordships seem to imagine, to "revive obsolete and ancient practices;" I contend for no usages which have not been acted on at the Exchequer and the Treasury during the reign of Her present Majesty, and up to the year 1854; no one of which usages come either under the words or meaning of the passages in the Commissioners' Report of 1831, to which you are pleased to refer me, or tend to create expense, delay, or complicity. This question is so simple, and its solution so very clear, that I feel persuaded your Lordships cannot hesitate with respect to the judgment you will be called on to pronounce. I shall refer you shortly to the leading but conclusive principles, which seem not only to affect but to decide and dispose of the whole question.

Exchequer usage.

Cannot be dispensed with by legislative authority.

Which Comptroller must resist till a court of justice or Parliament otherwise determines.

* 7 August 1854, 6 September 1854, and 30 December 1854.

The

The s. 4 (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15), enacts that all the powers and authorities "now vested "in the Auditor of the Exchequer or Clerk of the Pells, either BY LAW OR USAGE, shall "from and after commencement of this Act, be transferred and vested in the said Comptroller, subject to the provisions of this Act; except only so far as any of the said powers "and authorities are or shall be by this Act controlled, diminished, or varied." Confirmed by Exchequer Act.

It therefore appears to me too clear to be doubted or denied, that in all cases where any power or authority, whether originating in law or usage, can be proved to have existed, and been vested in the Auditor or Clerk of the Pells, on 11th October 1834, are by law transferred to and vested in the Comptroller-general, unless controlled, diminished, or varied by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15. The question therefore to be decided, where cases arise in which this principle is involved is, was the particular power or authority possessed by the Auditor or Clerk of the Pells in the ancient Exchequer? and if it was, has it been controlled, diminished, or varied by the 4 & 5 Will. 4? Unless the first question be answered in the negative, and the second in the affirmative, the usage is still in force, is binding on all parties, and possesses a statutable force from which nothing but a legislative authority can discharge any of the parties concerned. If the Act is not within the exception, it comes within the statutable rule.

On these grounds I must still differ from your Lordships in your denial of the force of all usage and custom as regulating my functions. I shall only add in conclusion, that I have never been so ill advised as to contend that any usage at variance with the 4 & 5 Will. 4, has any legal force or authority whatever. Comptroller maintains force of usage.

I am, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

To the Lords of the Treasury.

(No. 40.)

Mr. Romilly's Salary suspended till Patent produced; involving Exchequer Control.

Exchequer, 9 October 1854.

My Lords,

REFERRING to your Assistant-secretary's letter of direction of the 7th instant, desiring me to issue a credit of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d. to Lord Stanley of Alderley, being the balance remaining due on account of 48,612 l. 6 s. 1 d. included in your Lordships' warrant for salaries and allowances for the quarter ended 5 July 1854, I have to report as follows:— Comptroller-general to Treasury, 9 October 1854.

This sum of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d. includes a sum of 375 l., being the quarter's salary of Edward Romilly, esq., as chairman of the Audit Board, and as his patent in the latter capacity has not as yet been produced to this department, it is contrary to the existing usage, until that has been done, that the chairman's salary of 375 l. should be issued. I have consequently been constrained to limit the credit to the lesser sum of 1,015 l. 15 s. 2 d., the balance of 375 l. being issuable hereafter on compliance with the accustomed form.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-General.

To the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Tresury.

Treasury, 13 October 1854.

My Lord,

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, in which you inform their Lordships that you have been constrained to limit a credit of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d., ordered by their assistant-secretary's letter of direction, dated the 7th instant, and to suspend the issue of a sum of 375 l., being the amount of a quarter's salary to the chairman of the Audit Board, in consequence of the non-production, at the Exchequer, by that officer, of his patent of appointment; and I am to inform your Lordships that the credits referred to did not include, as you have inferred, the salary of the chairman of the Audit Board, but that it was required for the payment of the compensations due to the Universities of Aberdeen and Glasgow, and to Sion College, for loss of books, under the Copyright Act. Treasury to Comptroller-general, 13 October 1854.

The salary of the chairman of the Audit Board, for the quarter to the 30th June last, was provided for in the credit granted by your Lordship on the 8th July last; my Lords therefore request that the sum of 375 l., which you have deducted from the credit ordered on the 7th instant, may now be issued, to enable the Paymaster-general to pay the compensations in question.

I am commanded, at the same time, to acquaint your Lordship, that as the right which you have assumed, of stopping the salary of a public officer, after it has been investigated, admitted, and ordered for payment by their Lordships, is one which is inconsistent with the authority of this Board, and the exercise of which may lead to great inconvenience to the public service. Their Lordships have been led to examine the Act of Parliament under which which your office is constituted, with the view of discovering whether the step which you have taken is justified by any authority conferred upon you by that Act, as their Lordships are decidedly of opinion that the exercise of such a right as you claim cannot be justified by mere custom, but that it should rest upon the clearest evidence that such authority is conferred upon you by law.

Appendix, No. 9.

My Lords have examined the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, and they consider that it does not confer upon the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer any such powers.

The 13th clause of the Act provides, that in all cases of grants by Parliament, charged on the Consolidated Fund, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of the Treasury to authorise and require the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to accredit the several persons whose duty it may be to pay such charges with the sums requisite for that purpose, and that the Comptroller-general, having first satisfied himself that such payments are duly authorised by law, shall direct the Bank of England to grant credits to the officer whose duty it shall be to make the payment.

The warrant for the salaries charged on the Consolidated Fund, for the quarter to the 5th July last, included the salaries of the Commissioners for auditing the Public Accounts, at the rates fixed by Act of Parliament for those officers; it would be clearly within the line of the Comptroller-general's duties to suspend the issue of the salaries of that Board, if a larger number of Commissioners, or if higher rates of salary than the Act authorised, had been included in their Lordships' warrant; but the number of Commissioners and the rates of salary having been strictly in accordance with those sanctioned by Parliament, their Lordships are disposed to consider that it was no part of the Comptroller-general's duty to inquire by whom those offices were held, and that it belongs to their Lordships to register warrants of appointment before they issue their authority to the Paymaster-general to pay the salaries to the persons entitled to them.

Their Lordships apprehend that the usage to which you refer existed under the old constitution of the Exchequer, when the payment of salaries, allowances, and other charges, was made in detail at the Exchequer; and they consider that it was perfectly consistent with the duty of an office of payment, responsible for paying the salaries to the proper persons entitled to require the production of warrants of appointment, which were necessary vouchers to the accounts of such payments; but by the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 15, the duty of payment was removed from the Exchequer, and assigned to a Paymaster, who was made subject to the control of this Board, and the books of the office of the Paymaster were, by that Act, made books of record; it appears therefore to their Lordships that there are no grounds for continuing the old practice of registering warrants of appointment at the Exchequer.

I am further directed to acquaint you, that their Lordships have felt it their duty to call upon you to reconsider the authority under which you claim the right of suspending the salary of a public functionary, under the plea that the party has failed to comply with a custom which appears to their Lordships not only to be wholly unnecessary, but, so far as they are aware, unsupported by legal sanction; and I am directed, at the same time, to add, that if their Lordships have overlooked any Act of Parliament which confers upon you such powers, they request that you will call their attention to it.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) James Wilson.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 31 October 1854.

My Lords, Exchequer, 31 October 1854.

In my letter of the 18th instant I stated, that the obligation of continuing the established and legal usage of the Exchequer, by requiring the production and registration, at this office, of patents, warrants, and all instruments under which were erected rights to receive salaries, pensions, annuities, or other emoluments, was so important as to require special and most serious consideration. I had also the honour of informing your Lordships, that after such an interval of time as was required to review the whole subject, I doubted not that I should be enabled to bring before you reasons and authorities abundantly sufficient to prove that the change of system contemplated by your Lordships was inconsistent with authority, with express statute law, and with constitutional principle.

I now proceed to perform a duty cast upon me, the more stringently by reason of your Lordships' desire that I should reconsider the judgment which I had already pronounced in favour of adhering strictly to the practice which I found established when appointed to this office, and from which I see no reason stated by your Lordships to justify me in departing. I must, however, be permitted to state, that it is with the utmost reluctance that I differ at any time from your Lordships. I have felt the same regret, under similar circumstances, in relation to former Boards of Treasury; but where the law casts upon me a specific duty, and imposes on me a distinct responsibility of acting on my own independent conviction of what the law demands, I have no choice but to carry those convictions into effect in all my official proceedings, subject to my responsibility to the two Houses of Parliament. When the office which I have had the honour of holding for upwards of 15 years was first constituted, doubts were expressed in the House of Commons, "whether "any single individual would be able to resist the strong pressure occasionally brought "into play against him whenever he put his views of what was right in opposition to the "Executive Government." Whilst not only prepared but anxious, in all cases, to forward the public service by all legitimate means, I trust I may never be found wanting in asserting asserting the rights of this department, and performing the duties assigned to me by the Legislature, where an absolute control and responsibility is vested in me by law. The cases can, I trust, be but rare in which it will be my fate to differ from your Lordships, but it is in those cases exclusively in which I am bound to act with decision, though with unfeigned respect, towards the Board of Treasury.

Duty of Comptroller.

The duty with which I am charged by Statute is to prevent an issue from the Exchequer account at the Bank of England, for any purpose which I am not satisfied is duly authorised by law; and, unless first so satisfied, it is my duty to refuse my warrant for the issue in question, though it may be required by your Lordships' authority, or by an authority still higher, that of the Royal Sign Manual. It is by the right thus absolutely vested in me, that I can alone enforce an adherence to that Parliamentary appropriation of the public revenue, for the guardianship of which my office was mainly constituted, and for the unflinching exercise of which guardianship I am subject to a special responsibility, under the Exchequer Act, 4 & 5 Wm. 4, c. 15.

Exercise of Comptroller's authority.

I have declined issuing the credit for the payment of an official salary, on the ground that I am not satisfied by the evidence before me that this salary is duly authorised by law. Your Lordships inform me "that my stopping the salary of a public officer after it has "been investigated, admitted, and ordered for payment by the Treasury, is inconsistent "with the authority of that Board, and may lead to great inconvenience to the public "service." Your Lordships proceed to state that "such a right as I claim cannot be "justified by mere custom, but should rest on the clearest evidence that such authority is "conferred on me by law, and that having examined the Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15) constituting my office, your Lordships are of opinion that it does not confer on the 'Comptroller-general any such power." It is on this question that the Treasury and the Exchequer are now at issue; and it is a question of such extreme importance, that it cannot be allowed to continue doubtful and indeterminate.

Independently of Treasury.

I have, therefore, deducted a sum from a warrant of your Lordships, on the express ground that I am not satisfied that such payment is duly authorised by law; and I deny that the "previous investigation, admission, or order of such salary by the Treasury," relieves me from the necessity of acting on my own convictions of duty and of obligation. If, as your Lordships assume, in taking this course, I have overpast or violated my duty, it is of course open to you to take such steps as the contingency may demand.

Only his own judgment under Exchequer Act.

I respectfully entreat your Lordships to reconsider the principle which I have quoted as laid down in the Treasury letter before me. You will find, upon reviewing it, that it amounts to an absolute repeal of the Exchequer Act. If the examination and order of the Treasury be sufficient to preclude the exercise of my own judgment respecting the lawfulness of any issue applied for, then the whole force of the §§11, 12, and 13 of the Exchequer Act is annihilated; for those enactments distinctly require not that I should be satisfied, as of a matter of fact, that your Lordships have "examined, admitted, and "ordered" any particular payment, but that I should be first satisfied, as a matter of individual judgment, that such particular payment is duly authorised by law. I feel bound, as a public officer, charged with these special duties, respectfully to decline acting on the principle affirmed by your Lordships, being bound to resist any attempts to defeat or modify the Act which regulates my office, except made by Parliamentary authority.

Principle of control requires production of patents, &c.

I now turn from the consideration of the great principle which your Lordships have, for the first time, brought into doubt, to the particular case out of which it has arisen, and on which a decision is likewise urgently called for. Your Lordships are of opinion that I am not justified in requiring a strict compliance with the ancient and customary regulations by which all patents, warrants, and other instruments authorising the several parties to receive money payments, provided by Exchequer Warrants, are produced and registered in the Comptroller's office; and you intimate that, without the production of such patent or other instrument, I am bound to direct the payment by the mere authority of your Lordships' warrant. In the manner in which your Lordships express yourselves on this subject, you not only infer but express a strong opinion that this usage must be shown as resting on a distinct enactment, and that custom and precedent are inapplicable to the case.

Though I shall be able to suggest reasons founded on a just construction of the Statute Law, which are sufficient to demonstrate the necessity of producing the documents in question, I must, however, entreat your Lordships' indulgence whilst I proceed to state grounds why it is impossible to disregard the evidence of antecedent usage in this office; and, therefore, why I am bound wholly to dissent from the contrary opinion so strongly expressed by your Lordships.

Exchequer usage,

Confirmed by Exchequer Act.

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 3, "all the powers and authorities vested in the auditor of the "Exchequer or the clerk of the pells, either by law or usage, are transferred to and vested "in the Comptroller-general, subject to the provisions of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, except so far "as by the Act itself they are controlled, diminished, or varied." Thus, so far is it from being maintainable, it seems to be assumed by your Lordships that usage should be altogether excluded in considering the question at issue; usage, on the contrary, is expressly continued and confirmed by statute, unless in the excepted cases specifically set forth.

It remains, however, to be shown, first, what was the former usage, and how it was interpreted and applied antecedently to the enactment of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, and up to the present time; and, second, that so far is such usage from being controlled, diminished, "or varied" by the Act, the maintenance and enforcement of the ancient but uninterrupted usage is indispensably necessary to give meaning or effect to the modern enactment.

1. In

Powers of Exchequer by antecedent usage in recording Parents, &c.,

1. In the former Exchequer, all instruments of appointment involving money issues, such as those under consideration, were not only produced and recorded, but this obligation was twice repeated. They were recorded in the office of the auditor, who had, by virtue of his office, as I have by mine, an unlimited power of refusing his sanction to any issue which he considered to be contrary to law. The same instruments were again produced and recorded by the clerk of the pells, who also had, by his office, as I likewise have by mine, an unlimited discretion of stopping an issue if he declined to record the instrument produced on the ground of its illegality. Such was the usage of this department from the earliest times, as shown by the practice in the two ancient offices; and that usage, with all its attendant powers and authorities, is transferred to me by the statute regulating my office, and by Her Majesty's patent appointing me to that office. In order to ensure the fearless exercise of these functions in controlling the Acts of the Ministers of the Crown, the auditor and clerk of the pells were appointed for life. For the same purpose the tenure of my office, like that of the judges and auditors, is during good behaviour, and my responsibility to Parliament is made the same as that of judicial functionaries.

transferred to Comptroller.

Evidence of Exchequer usage in recording Patents, &c.

Your Lordships may, however, justly ask for further evidence than a mere general statement, before you adopt the conclusions to which I seek to lead you. I therefore proceed to refer you to authorities of the most conclusive kind, which, having been found satisfactory by the Legislature, will not be undervalued by your Lordships: "The entry in "the official books of the auditor of grants, such as sign manual warrants, letters patent, "and every other document by which any salary, allowance, or pension, may be perma- "nently or periodically made payable at the Exchequer, is performed verbatim from the "originals." Such is the evidence of Mr. Grosvenor Bedford, the late experienced and learned deputy of Lord Granville. The usage which prevailed in the office of the Clerk of the Pells, is described with equal distinctness by the Right Honourable H. Ellis. "All "patents, constitutions, appointments, and sign manual warrants, are entered in the patent "book verbatim, and a record made on each, to which the Clerk of the Pells affixes his "signature."

Mr. Bedford.

Right Hon. H. Ellis.

Evidence of legality of Exchequer usage.

The legal authority consequent on these proceedings in the two ancient offices referred to, and the force and effect of the usage of producing and recording these written instruments, is also set forth by the same witnesses: "The auditor is bound to execute the com- "mands of a superior authority in so far only as of his own knowledge he is convinced of "their legality, and to remonstrate against, and even ultimately to resist, when that legality "is not apparent. This obligation and these conditions were annexed to the tenure of his "office, at the earliest date to which its existence can be traced" (Bedford). In respect to the pells, the evidence is equally decisive. "No money can be issued by the Tellers "without the record and sanction of the Clerk of the Pells, and no such record can be "affixed to a Treasury document without first ascertaining that the same is in conformity "with the law. The Clerk of the Pells would be personally responsible for any record by "which an illegal issue of the public money had taken place" (Ellis).

Mr. Bedford.

Right Hon. H. Ellis.

Exchequer Commission, 1831.

It was on this and on similar evidence that the Royal Commission of 1831, of which Lord John Russell, Sir James Graham, General Sir James Kemp, Sir Francis Baring, the Right honourable Edward Ellice, together with other persons of high authority, since deceased, felt warranted in reporting that "the Exchequer was armed with the power of denying its "sanction to any demands upon it, from whatever minister or department it may be made, "unless they are found in accordance with the determination of the Legislature. From its "earliest constitution it has been looked upon as a check upon the Lord High Treasurer."

Evidence of continuance of Exchequer powers to Comptroller.

That it was not contemplated in any respect to limit or abridge these constitutional powers by the new system then recommended and carried into effect by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, is manifest from the following observations of the Commission: "We are of opinion that "the most effectual restraint upon the Crown and its Ministers should be preserved and "maintained in any plan for reforming the existing system, and that no appropriation of "the funds received into the Exchequer shall take place without such sanction as shall be "a real guarantee for the legality of the appropriation."

Founded on these principles, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, was passed, and by section 3 all the powers and authorities vested in "the Auditor and Clerk of the Pells, either by law or "usage," were transferred to the Comptroller-general, and by sections 11, 12, 13, he is precluded from granting his warrant, notwithstanding the command of the Sovereign and the responsible signature of your Lordships, "till he shall first have satisfied himself that "the payments directed are duly authorised by law." The same power and authority formerly exercised by the Auditor and Clerk of the Pells is thus vested in the Comptroller-general; the latter is bound to satisfy his own mind of the legality of the order before he issues his credit in favour of the Paymaster-general, as his predecessors were bound to satisfy themselves before directing payment through the Tellers; and to justify the performance of the same duties, the same evidence should be required and ought to be produced. The original patent or instrument of grant formed the foundation of that evidence, and was produced at the Exchequer and registered. It has been produced up to the present time; the ancient usage of the department has been confirmed and perpetuated by statute, and I therefore respectfully but firmly submit that an adherence to that usage is indispensable to justify my warrants of issue, or to give them a legal validity.

Record of Patents, &c. at Exchequer,

2. Your Lordships seem, however, disposed to think that because a separate office of payment is now established, the custom of producing and registering these instruments of grant

grant is no longer required, and may be set aside. This supposition I shall proceed to show is untenable. I may, in the first place, remark that neither the Auditor nor the Clerk of the Pells were officers for payment. Their functions, like my own, were to control and sanction orders for payments afterwards made by the Tellers, and it is remarkable that in the Tellers' department the instruments in question were not produced or examined. The production and examination were confined to the offices of control, and I have shown that it is the authority of those departments of control which is by statute transferred to me with all its powers and incidents.

notwithstanding transfer of payments to Paymaster-general.

Independently of this observation, though what I have stated appears to me conclusive in itself, I think I can satisfy your Lordships that under the express provisions of the sections 11, 12, 13, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, it would be wholly impossible to set aside the present regulations for producing and recording grants and appointments, if it is meant that the duty of the Comptroller-general is to be effectually performed, and the intentions of Parliament are to be realised.

Record of Patents, &c. necessary under Exchequer Act,

I have shown by a reference to the direct words of the statute, that Exchequer warrants sanctioning issues can only be signed legally when the Comptroller-general is satisfied that the issues required are sanctioned by law. When an Act of Parliament gives to the Crown a power to appoint a public servant to an office, or to grant a salary, annuity, or pension of the class under consideration, this power is exercised by some written instrument of appointment. Without such appointment or grant, the issue of salary would not be legally payable, and if not legally payable, would not be legally issuable by the Exchequer. The legality of the issue must therefore be proved by the production of the legal instrument of appointment, and till that production takes place, evidence of which is preserved in the books of this office, made records by statute (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 16) neither the Act of Parliament, enabling the Crown to appoint or grant, nor your Lordships' warrant, directing payment, will supply the complete evidence justifying the Comptroller-general in issuing his warrant. He cannot, therefore, be excused if he dispenses with that check against unauthorised payments, which from the earliest times has been uniformly required. There are some cases, it is true, where appointment takes place without any written instrument of appointment, and to these obviously the preceding observations do not apply.

to sanction issues.

The functions and prerogatives of the Crown in these respects are frequently exercised within the limits of the statutable authority, though they cannot legally exceed it. For example, the Crown need not necessarily grant the amount of pensions authorised by law; but the Exchequer issues must by law be confined to the amount actually granted. The Crown may be authorised to appoint a specified number of Commissioners to fill a certain office, but it may be lawful that a lesser number should be named. It is the number who are named, and not the number who might be named, who are entitled to the emoluments of office; and for that lesser number only is the Exchequer warranted to provide. In proof of the actual fact of the appointment, and of the assigned salary, the instrument of grant is required to be produced and registered in this department. As a further example, your Lordships are aware that the amount of retired official pensions is not uniformly filled up; therefore the existing grants of such pensions are produced and registered to justify the amount required in your Lordships' warrants. Cases have arisen in which the salaries granted to high judicial functionaries have been fixed below their statutable amounts. This again, can only be shown by the production of the patent. Annuities and ordinary pensions are sometimes granted subject to conditions; some are suspended for a time; others made payable in certain specified events only. The legality of these payments, and consequently of the warrants directing the issues, depends on the performance or occurrence of these conditions. I therefore most respectfully submit to your Lordships that, if I am bound to satisfy myself of the legality of an issue, the evidence which has hitherto been produced both to me and to my predecessors, cannot be withheld, consistently with the legal interpretation or the obvious import of the 4 & 5 Will. 4. Without the continuance of the established usage in this respect, I shall be utterly unable to fulfil those functions which are described by the Commissioners of 1831 to be, "to prevent the appropriation of the public money, except according to the direction of Parliament." A statute may enable Her Majesty to appoint certain officers with certain salaries; but it is by the production of the instrument of appointment that I obtain official knowledge of the appointments made and the salaries assigned, and without that official knowledge I am not legally justified in acting, by signing a warrant to the Bank.

As evidence of exercise of authority of Crown.

Having now, I trust, shown how the practice which your Lordships seem inclined to abandon, forms an integral part of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, ss. 4, 11, 12, 13, it becomes my duty to remove from the minds of your Lordships the supposition that the production and registration of patents and warrants is merely "an old practice" connected with the unreformed Exchequer. On this subject I may refer to the patents of your own Board. Without going beyond the existence of my office, your Lordships will find that the Treasury patents in the successive Governments of Lord Grey, Lord Melbourne, the Duke of Wellington, Sir R. Peel, Lord John Russell, the Earl of Derby, and the Earl of Aberdeen have all been produced and registered. Even where the change in a single Junior Lord renders the issue of a renewed patent necessary (as when at a late period Mr. Fortescue was named in the room of Mr. John Sadleir), the same course was properly pursued. This, which is the latest precedent, was most properly accompanied by the following direction, contained in your Lordships' letter of 13th March 1854, by which I was instructed to "record the patent in the office of the Comptroller-general." The patents of the Comptrollers-general and the warrants appointing the Assistant-comptrollers are in like manner recorded. Grants of diplomatic and of official pensions are also produced and entered. But perhaps the strongest instances that can adduced are those of the learned persons who now occupy, or have occupied, the Bench both in equity and law. The present Lord Chancellor, on three separate occasions, as Baron of the Exchequer, Vice-Chancellor and Lord Justice of Appeal, the Master of the Rolls; the Lord Justices Knight-Bruce and George Turner, the Vice-Chancellors; Lord Chief Justice Campbell and Jervis; Chief Baron Pollock, and all the Puisne Judges; men not very likely to lend themselves to an unauthorised or illegal usage, have all produced their patents, without which the Exchequer would not have considered these distinguished magistrates entitled to receive their salaries. The retired allowances granted to Lords Brougham, Lyndhurst, Truro, St. Leonards, and Blackburn, as well as similar grants to Common Law Judges, are subjected to the same invariable rule. Such is also the case with respect to the military and naval pensions of Wellington, Nelson, Rodney, Duncan, granted before the passing of the 4 & 5 Will. 4. The annuities to the Royal Family, to His Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Duchesses of Kent, Gloucester, Cambridge, were all so produced and recorded before they were made payable or paid; and your Lordships will doubtless recollect that recourse was had to this office to discover, from the terms of the original grant registered here, what was the legal import of the grant to her late Majesty Queen Adelaide.

Evidence of continuance of Record of Patents, &c. by Comptroller.

Treasury Patents.

Appendix, No. 9.

Judges,

Military and Naval Pensions.

Royal Family.

Recapitulation of argument.

Your Lordships will be pleased to bear in mind that I have cited these numerous cases, however important they may be, not as constituting conclusive evidence of usage if they stood alone. But I have shown you the original usages of the Exchequer; I have shown you the transfer and perpetuation of those usages to my office by statute; I have shown you that without the maintenance of such usages my duties as Comptroller-general cannot be performed, and I then tender to your Lordships a succession of most authoritative cases to show you, from indisputable facts, the construction put upon the law by invariably concurring and contemporary usage.

Record of Patents, &c. directed by Treasury.

But the case does not rest here. It is my duty, before I close, to appeal to one further authority, which I trust your Lordships will receive with the same respect which I most unaffectedly feel. I appeal to the authority of the Treasury itself, and to the instructions issued by that department to assist me in the performance of my duties. That authority, your Lordships will perceive, fully adopts and confirms the principles on which I consider it to be my duty to act.

Evidence on Civil List Pensions.

I shall only refer to recent cases. By the arrangements made at the accession of Her Majesty, the grant of pensions chargeable on the Civil List was placed on a new footing, the grant of pensions within a maximum amount of 1,200 l. being authorised to be granted annually by Sign-manual warrant. These pensions formed a distinct kind of charge, differing in many respects from the antecedent grants made in previous reigns. For a time the sum granted was returned to the Exchequer as a gross sum; but this irregularity having been adverted to, was instantly corrected by a Minute dated the 24th December 1850, and which was issued with the special signature of Sir Charles Wood, then Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Minute is appended in full to this letter, and it is only necessary here to call your Lordships' particular attention to the following extract:—"The fifth class of the "Civil List (pensions), under which the issues for pensions are charged, necessarily fluc- "tuates in amount, and in order that the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer should "exercise a proper control over the appropriation of that branch of the Civil List, it appears "to my Lords to be desirable that he should have sufficient cognisance of the grants made "under the Act. Their Lordships therefore desire that a list may be prepared and certified "by the auditor of the Civil List, of the several pensions which have been heretofore "granted by Her Majesty, and are now in force; and that the same be transmitted to the "Comptroller-general for his guidance in respect to amounts of the quarterly charges on "the Consolidated Fund for the payment thereof, and they further desire that any warrants "passed by Her Majesty for the further grant of Civil List Pensions, may be recorded at the "Exchequer Office before any provision is made for payment in respect thereof." Signed, C. Wood.

Record strictly practised.

This regulation has since been strictly carried into effect, and payments have been suspended more than once, with your Lordships' cognisance, until the warrants have been produced. From the want of the new Queen's warrants of grant at the very last quarter-day, your Lordships acted on this principle, and suspended your warrant for issue till the warrants of grant were signed, transmitted, and recorded. This last form was complied with at so late a period as on the 30th instant, yesterday last.

Irish payments.

The Irish finances were not originally brought under the review of the Comptroller-general, and when this was done, and a Paymaster of Civil Services appointed for Ireland, a protracted examination of accounts, and the correction of a loose and defective system, required much time and labour. No production or registration of original grants seems to have existed in Ireland as at the Exchequer here. I made the discovery of a most extraordinary case of irregularity in which the salary of a deceased public officer was continued as a charge on the Consolidated Fund, not only after his death, but after the abolition of his office. I reported this fact, and stated to your Lordships that even if the death vacancy had had been legally filled up, "I should not feel myself authorised to put such a charge on "the Consolidated Fund, without an official knowledge of the fact and date of the new "appointment." I refer your Lordships to the official correspondence appended to this letter (8th April 1851, 13th June 1851, and 11th August and 17th September of the same year). I made the following recommendation respecting grants of office or payments of salary:— "I have to submit to your Lordships the propriety in "point of law, that your Lordships' minute, letter, or "warrant, should be communicated here contemporaneously with its transmission to Ireland. It would then "be entered on the records of this office, and I should thus "obtain an effective check on the correctness of the "schedules of quarterly charges, which is now wanting." This recommendation was made in respect to Ireland only as the correct system was already enforced in England, and was reported by me to the Treasury in the following words:—"When a charge is placed on the Consolidated Fund in England, even in cases "where the fact is notorious, as, for example, an annuity granted by Her Majesty to a "Member of the Royal Family under express statute, the patent or other instrument is pro-"duced, entered, and copied in this department, and is thus made the foundation of subsequent charges and issues." The Treasury had no difficulty in carrying into effect my recommendation, and by Sir C. Trevelyan's letter, 17th September 1851, I was requested to give directions "that all warrants, letters, and other instruments, authorising charges to be "made on the Consolidated Fund, may be entered in my office immediately on their being sent "to me from the Treasury, and that a note of such entry may be made on the instrument." This letter transmitted to me your Lordships' Minute of the 12th September, which is appended to this letter; and which after directing that the amount of savings on the Consolidated Fund in Ireland should be reported to me, "to enable me to check the propriety "and legality of the charge which may appear in the schedules when they come before me," informs me further that all such warrants and instruments of issue shall be transmitted to me for record at the Exchequer, and concludes by these remarkable words: "In case any "warrant, letter, or other instrument, authorising charge on the Consolidated Fund, shall "be transmitted to the Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland, on the face of which it shall "not appear that it has been entered at the Exchequer, he will return the same to the office, "in order that it may be so entered." The Minute concludes by a requisition to the Treasury officers in all its departments, to carry the preceding regulations into effect.

APPENDICES.

(A.) 1. Treasury Letter, 6 Jan. 1851.
2. Treasury Minute, 24 Dec. 1850.
(B.) 1. Comptroller-general to Paymaster Civil Services, 8 April 1851.
2. Paymaster Civil Services Reply, 10 April 1851.
3. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 8 April 1851.
4. Treasury in reply, 13 June 1851.
(C.) 1. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 11 Aug. 1851.
2. Treasury Reply, 17 Sept. 1851.
3. Treasury Minute, 12 Sept. 1851.
(D.) 1. Treasury Letter, 29 March 1852.
(E.) 1. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 25 Sept. 1854.
2. Treasury Reply, 28 Sept. 1854.
(F.) Precis of Correspondence, Oct. Nov. and Dec. 1851. Salaries of Assistant Barristers, Ireland.

Scotch Changes.

On a late occasion, when the Scotch Schedules were for the first time transferred to the Consolidated Fund, I recommended that the system in force in Ireland should, as the best check, be adopted in Scotland likewise; and this I consider to be done by your Lordships' reply of the 28th September last.

Conclusion.

I have now reconsidered most carefully my former judgment, agreeably to your Lordships' instructions, and have pointed out, in perhaps too great detail, but not greater than the paramount importance of the question demands, why I feel it my duty to dissent from the principles laid down in your Lordships' letter of the 13th instant. It appears to me that I could not assent to those principles, without a violation of my strict official duty, without becoming party to an attempt to modify or repeal the statute law of the land by the authority of a department, and without forgetting my responsibility to both Houses of Parliament.

Record of Patents, &c. indispensable to Exchequer function, and cannot be dispensed with except by authority of Parliament.

I, therefore, adhere to my conviction, that if I find a charge of any kind on a Treasury Warrant, of the legality of which I am not myself satisfied, it is my bounden duty to suspend the issue of that charge till I shall be so satisfied, and that in respect to such charges the transmission and registration at the Exchequer of the instruments of appointment by the immemorial usages in the Auditors and Clerk of the Pells offices, perpetuated and transferred to me by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, and adopted by your Lordships' predecessors and by yourselves up to the date of the Treasury letter of the 13th instant, is indispensable to the due execution of my functions, cannot be set aside but by the authority of Parliament, and is therefore obligatory on me.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

To the Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

Exchequer, 1 January 1855.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 1 January 1855

My Lords,

I TAKE the liberty most respectfully of calling your Lordships' attention to my letter of the 31st October, respecting the salary of Mr. Romilly, as a member of the Board of Audit, and the two most important questions therein brought under discussion; namely, the necessity of producing and registering in this office patents, warrants, and other instruments analogous to those constituting the Board of Audit, and the duty and authority of the Comptroller-general to suspend the payment of a salary, in case he is not satisfied of the legality of the order he has received.

Appendix, No. 9.

The near approach of the quarterly issues, when this case, or others of a similar description, may be brought under consideration, renders it of importance that your Lordships' decision should be pronounced and communicated.

I feel it right to call your Lordships' attention to the fact, that since the doubts have been suggested respecting the registry in this office of patents, and similar instruments authorising money grants, as in the case of Mr. Romilly, the following instruments have been forwarded to me by your Lordships' authority for entry and registration, thus confirming the principle which I took the liberty of laying down :

23 October 1854, Pension Mrs. Montague.
23 October 1854, Pension Daughters Mrs. W. Nelson Ward.
23 October 1854, Mrs. Moore.
18 November 1854, D. D. Heath.
21 October 1854, Lieutenant-colonel Sheil, Diplomatic Allowance.
21 December 1854, Sir G. Hamilton Seymour.

As also the following charges created on the 11th August 1854, pursuant to Orders in Council.

	£.	s.	d.
R. K. Douglas - - - - - - - - -	511	14	8
Joseph Holl - - - - - - - - - -	140	14	4

The Lords of the Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

My Lords, Exchequer, 9 January 1855.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 9 January 1855.

I HAVE the honour of acknowledging your Lordships' warrant of the 6th January, and letter of direction of the 8th, authorising a credit of 14,967 l. 17 s. 1 d.

This includes the salary of Mr. Romilly, as Chairman of the Board of Audit, at 1,500 l. per annum; but as the patent appointing Mr. Romilly, which is now before me, only grants a salary of 1,200 l. per annum to Mr. Romilly, I am constrained to suspend the issue, and to deduct the sum of 75 l. from this warrant, that sum being in excess of the legal authority for issue now copied and recorded in this department.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

COPY of TREASURY MINUTE, dated 6th March 1855.

Treasury Minute, 6 March 1855.

MY LORDS have before them a letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, dated 31st October 1854, in reply to a letter from this Board, dated the 13th October 1854.

Before my Lords proceed to comment upon the Comptroller-general's letter, they deem it necessary to set forth the circumstances which have led to the correspondence.

By a Royal Warrant, dated 20th April 1854, Mr. E. Romilly, previously a Commissioner of the Audit Board, was appointed Chairman of that Board on the retirement of Sir William Herries, and became entitled to the addition of 300 l. a year to his previous salary of 1,200*l.*, in accordance with the provisions of the Act 46 Geo. 3, c. 141.

On the 8th July 1854 a Treasury Warrant, dated the 6th July, was sent to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, authorising the issue of a credit for the payment of the several salaries charged on the Consolidated Fund, for the quarter ended 5th July. In that warrant the appointment of Mr. Romilly as Chairman of the Audit Board, and the date from which it took effect, were certified to the Comptroller-general under the signatures of two members of this Board.

Between the 8th July and 30th August 1854, the Comptroller-general gave to the Paymaster-general the several credits required for the payment of the salaries, with the exception of a sum of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d., being the amount payable to certain universities for loss of books under the Copyright Act, which my Lords had not included in their issuing letters.

On the 7th October 1854, my Lords directed this sum of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d. to be issued to the Paymaster-general, and on the 9th October the Comptroller-general informed this Board that, as this sum included 375 l. for the salary of the Chairman of the Audit Board, he had limited the issue to 1,015 l. 15 s. 2 d., on the ground that Mr. Romilly had not complied with the accustomed form in regard to the production of his patent at the Exchequer.

Upon a representation from the Board, dated 13th October 1854, informing the Comptroller-general that he had granted the credit for Mr. Romilly's salary on the 8th July previously, and that the whole sum of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d. was for compensations payable to Scotch universities, the Comptroller-general, on the 19th October, issued the sum which he had under a misapprehension withheld on the 9th.

On

On the 19th October a warrant was transmitted to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, directing the issue of the credit for the salaries charged on the Consolidated Fund for the quarter to the 10th October, in which Mr. Romilly's quarterly salary was included as in the warrant of the preceding quarter. On this occasion the Comptroller-general stopped the issue of 75 l. only out of the credit ordered, instead of 375 l., having discovered the error he had committed on the previous occasion in stopping the whole amount of Mr. Romilly's salary.

My Lords will only observe in reference to these proceedings, that the course pursued by the Comptroller-general has been somewhat irregular. In the first place, if it was right to stop the credit for Mr. Romilly's salary, it should have been done on the 8th July, when the first issue was made for the salary of the quarter to the 5th July. Secondly, The Comptroller-general was not warranted in stopping the credit of 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d. ordered on the 7th October for the payment of the Scotch universities, as no part of it was required to pay the salary of Mr. Romilly. Thirdly, He was also irregular in stopping the whole amount of the salary assigned to the Chairman of the Audit Board, inasmuch as he has admitted in his letter of the 20th October, that 75 l. only was the sum which he was authorised to withhold. Fourthly, The Comptroller-general was also under a misconception in concluding that the additional salary to Mr. Romilly was granted by letters patent, such addition having on this and previous occasions been authorised by Royal Warrant.

My Lords being of opinion that the form of registering such instruments at the Exchequer was wholly unnecessary for any purpose of control or check, that the practice was one which had originated under a totally different mode of conducting the public business, when the Exchequer itself was the office of payment, and that there was no express direction in the Exchequer Regulation Act which would interfere with the adoption of a more simple regulation, and being convinced moreover that the right which the Comptroller-general claimed of stopping the salaries of public functionaries on a mere question of form, although they might be in strict accordance with the amounts authorised by Act of Parliament, was calculated to lead to great inconvenience to the public service, my Lords considered it their duty to call upon the Comptroller-general to reconsider the authority under which he acted. My Lords proceed to take into consideration the Comptroller-general's reply, dated 31 October 1854.

My Lords do not consider it necessary to make any other remark upon the lengthened statements in that letter, which are intended to prove that the practice of registering warrants of appointment in the Exchequer is of old standing, and that it existed under the old constitution of the Exchequer when it was the office of payment, inasmuch as my Lords did not dispute the existence of the practice, but only questioned the necessity for continuing it.

The Comptroller-general states that he has declined issuing the credit for Mr. Romilly's salary, on the ground that he is not "satisfied" by the evidence before him that the salary is duly authorised by law.

Upon this my Lords have only to repeat that the Act 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, authorises the payment of 1,500 l. a year to the Chairman of the Audit Board, and that Mr. Romilly's appointment to that office has been certified to the Comptroller-general, in a warrant dated the 6th July 1854, under the signatures of two members of this Board.

Moreover, as the salary is the same as that which the Comptroller-general has invariably issued for that office, they cannot understand why he should entertain any doubt that it is authorised by law. The production of a further document (the warrant of appointment), which also emanates from this Board, could answer no other purpose than that of unnecessarily multiplying the forms of public business, without adding in the smallest degree to the security of the public. My Lords are of opinion that as the Comptroller-general is not responsible for the individual payments which are conducted under the authority of Parliament in another office, nor for the audit of such payments, which Parliament has also specially provided for in another department, the production of such vouchers at the Exchequer is wholly unnecessary. The Comptroller-general might with quite as much reason call for proof of life before he advanced the money required to pay annuities and pensions, he might ask for evidence as to the issues directed for the payment of the interest of the debt, the stock cancelled by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt by the Sinking Fund, by interest of donations and bequests, and by annuities granted. For all these large issues the Comptroller-general accepts the warrant of this Board, and he does not require the production of other vouchers to satisfy him that the charge is authorised by law.

The detailed examination of such changes of payment is assigned by Parliament to the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts, to whom the vouchers in support of them are produced.

His Lordship states that it is impossible to disregard the evidence of antecedent usage in his office, and that "usage" is expressly continued and confirmed by the Act of 1834, regulating the Exchequer; and he quotes, in support of his views, the Report of the Commission upon which that Act was founded.

My Lords find, however, on reference to that Report, that the Commissioners expressly recommended the simplification of the Exchequer forms, which is all that my Lords have been desirous of accomplishing; and that the Commissioners never contemplated the continuance of those forms which belonged to the old Exchequer, when it was an office of payment.

As my Lords, in their Minute of the 2d instant, have fully commented on a similar argument used by the Comptroller-general in his letter of the 30th December 1854, in reference to the form of issuing duplicate Consolidated Fund Warrants, they need not pursue the subject here.

Appendix, No. 9.

My Lords do not doubt that the Comptroller-general will agree with them in considering that multiplied records of the same instruments in different offices are not required for the protection of the public.

Taking, as an example, patents of appointments, full or abbreviated entries of which are made in the Patent Office, the Home Office, the Treasury, and the Audit Office, my Lords cannot admit the necessity for making further copies in extenso in the Exchequer. All these records may, no doubt, be justified by the ancient usage of each department; but my Lords would fail in their duty to the public if they did not make an effort to reduce them to the number indispensably required for the safe conduct of the public business; and they consider that where appointments are certified to the Comptroller-general in the issuing warrants under the signatures of two members of this Board, the transmission of patents and warrants of appointment to and from the Exchequer, with the attendant registry of letters in both offices, may be safely dispensed with; and they rely with confidence on the cordial co-operation of his Lordship in establishing this arrangement for the future.

Transmit copy of this Minute to the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer for his information.

(signed) J. Wilson.

My Lords, Exchequer, 22 March 1855.

Comptroller-General to Treasury, 22 March 1855.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordships' letter of the 6th March, enclosing the Treasury Minute of the same date, written in reply to my letter of the 31st October 1854.

The subject to which it relates, namely, the production and registration at this office of patents, warrants, and other instruments, whereby many charges become payable, is of the utmost importance as regulating the functions of my department. I respectfully contend for the maintenance of the invariable practice of this department, not only on the grounds of expediency, but of strict legal obligation. Your Lordships appear to claim a power by your own authority of setting this aside; I contend that I possess by law, as vested in me, the powers and authorities of the late Auditor and Clerk of the Pells, save so far as they are controlled, diminished, or varied by the Exchequer Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 4; this your Lordships controvert as strongly as I very respectfully affirm. This issue I presumed to resist upwards of four months back, during which time the practice of the Exchequer has been in conformity with my view of the law, and has been acquiesced in by your Lordships, and if I am now compelled again to resume the subject, and to trouble you again with a reference to arguments and authorities which seem to me final, binding my judgment absolutely, it is because your Lordships have in your Minute of the 6th instant reopened, and compelled a reconsideration of the question.

Comptroller's powers, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15.

Exchequer usage.

In my letters of the 31st October, as well as in that of the 20th instant, I have dealt with the question of usage as guiding me in my official duties; to those letters I respectfully refer your Lordships, to avoid the necessity of repeating the arguments I there urged, and to which I shall adhere, unless it be shown by a legal decision, or by the authority of Parliament, that I am in error in seeking to maintain the regulations, not merely of the ancient Exchequer, but as confirmed and enforced by the Act remodelling and constituting my office (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15), by the necessity and expediency of the case, and by the repeated Minutes of the Treasury, passed since the 11th October 1834.

Applied to Record of Patents, &c.

I shall now pass by the general question of the force and authority of usage, and shall apply myself exclusively to the question of the production and registration at the Exchequer of Patents, Warrants, and other instruments creating rights of money payments, for which I humbly contend, and which your Lordships have denied in the following words:

"My Lords being of opinion, that the form of registering such instruments at the "Exchequer was (1.) wholly unnecessary for any purpose of control or check; that the "practice (2.) was one which had originated under a totally different mode of conducting "the public business when the Exchequer was the office of payments, and that there is no "express direction (3.) in the Exchequer Regulations Act, which would interfere with the "adoption of a more simple regulation, &c. &c., * * My Lords consider that where "appointments (4.) are certified to the Comptroller-general in the issuing warrants under "the signatures of two members of this Board, the transmission of patents and warrants of "appointment to and from the Exchequer, with the registry of letters in both offices, may "be safely (5.) dispensed with."

Permit me, my Lords, in all humility, to make a few remarks on the principles laid down in this Minute, which appear to me erroneous in fact and in law.

Production of Patents, &c., absolutely necessary for Exchequer control.

(1.) I respectfully contend that the production of these patents, &c., according to immemorial usage, is absolutely necessary for the purposes of control and of check. Accept as an example, the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, for the establishment of the Auditors. By that, varied by subsequent statutes, the number of the Auditors is fixed. The mode of their appointment and of making the grant of their salaries, is fixed by the statute; in both cases it is to be by patent. Nor is this a matter of form, but of substance. These officers are to be named during good behaviour, and the appointment by patent is therefore specifically set forth to secure them in the permanence of office and of emoluments. A revocable instrument would be not only inconsistent with, but contrary to, law. Hitherto that patent, as well as all patents for the highest judicial appointments, have been produced and registered here before before payments are sanctioned at the Exchequer. Before I can give effect to your Lordships' issuing warrant, I must be satisfied that the party to whom the payment is to be made is entitled to receive it; that is, that the law has been complied with, by his appointment by patent granting the salary, not exceeding the specified legal amount. In this case your Lordships will see that the production of the patent, according to the established usage, is absolutely necessary to enable me to exercise my powers of check and control. On this ground, I consider the ancient usage must be adhered to. Your Lordships' warrant for payment, though conclusive after the warrant has been produced and registered, is, before the completion of that essential form, insufficient and inconclusive. I therefore cannot abandon the accustomed usage. Appendix, No. 9.

(2.) Your Lordships state that the practice of producing and registering such patents, warrants, &c., originated in times when the Exchequer was the office of payment, which at present is not the case. I humbly submit that the real question is not the origin of this usage, but its present force and authority. But your Lordships will be pleased to remember that in the ancient Exchequer these instruments were produced and registered, not at the Tellers' office of payment, but with the Auditors and Clerk of the Pells, the officers of control. It is for the purpose of checking and controlling the issues, and precluding the possibility of an issue contrary to law, that these instruments were produced and registered with the Auditors and Clerk of the Pells. The powers and authorities of the Auditor and Clerk of the Pells are now by statute transferred to and invested in me (4 & 5 Will. c. 15, s. 4.) I require the production of these instruments to satisfy me that a given issue is demanded according to law, the Auditor and Clerk of Pells required them for the same purpose; and I therefore hold that their production cannot now be dispensed with. Practice in old Exchequer.

(3.) Your Lordships state that there is no express authority in the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, which interferes with the adoption of a simpler form, and you propose to effect this by substituting for the primary and conclusive evidence of the Royal Patent of Appointment a warrant of payment under the hands of two members of your Lordships' Board; from which not only I am bound to infer the appointment, but to conclude that it has been made modo et formâ to give it full legal validity. Though eager to adopt the views of your Lordships, where I can do so according to my sense of the plain meaning of the law, I cannot do so in an instance where you are disposed to recommend the discontinuance of primary and the substitution of secondary evidence. Authority of Exchequer Act. Primary, not secondary, evidence required.

(4) and (5.) Your Lordships might direct the payment of a specified sum to an auditor; but if that auditor be not appointed, and his salary granted by patent, the issue would be contrary to law, and, as such, ought to be withheld by me. Of these facts your Lordships' warrant for payment is no evidence at all, unless indeed your Lordships' official statement is to supersede all the authorities with which I am charged, and for which my office was constituted.

But your Lordships must indulge me with your attention somewhat further, in order that I may prove to you conclusively that the practice which, I contend, it would not be lawful to abandon, comes under the express authority of the Exchequer Act. Contrary to the opinion your Lordships have expressed, I beg to call your Lordships' further attention to the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 28, an Act referred to in the Report of the Royal Commissioners of 1831. That statute was passed "for the better observation of the course anciently used in the "receipt of the Exchequer, and the good, sure and regular methods established, enacted or "appointed to be observed and kept by the respective officers and ministers of the said "receipt, in all matters concerning receipts, payments or other business to be there "transacted or performed." This, your Lordships will see, is a statute confirming and perpetuating what, a century and a half back, was the ancient usage of the Exchequer. In this statute your Lordships will find the following words:—"The said Auditors of the "Exchequer shall from time to time duly enroll all Letters Patent and Letters of Privy "Seal for issuing the King's treasures, and shall keep entries of them in books to be pro"vided and fairly written;" and the said Clerk of the Pells shall also from time to time "duly enroll or record all Letters Patent and Letters of Privy Seal for issuing the King's "Treasures." Old Exchequer Act, 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 28.

This statute does not create, but confirms the course "anciently used" in the Exchequer, by which Letters Patent were entered and enrolled.

This subject was again considered in 1800, as appears from the First Report on the Public Records (ordered to be printed, 13 March 1801), pp. 127. 131. Record Report, 1800.

Return from Auditors. "He enters Patents, Privy Seals, Sign Manuals and other "Instruments appointing issues to be made from the Exchequer." Amongst the books in the auditor's possession are the "Patent books from the year 1619 to the present time."

(signed) Robert Jennings.

Return from the Clerk of the Pells:

"Patents, Constitutions, Sign Manuals, Privy Seals and other Instruments connected "with the receipt or issue of the Exchequer, are recorded in vellum books, and preserved "in the Pells-office." "The Record of Patents, &c., and of such other instruments as "under the Great or Privy Seal authorise the issue of money, are in regular series from the "time of Queen Elizabeth."

(signed) Ed. Roberts, Dep. Clk. Pells.

This

Appendix, No. 9.

Report of Finance Committee, 1807.

This usage was invariable and unchanged at the time of the Report on the Exchequer in 1831. The Commissioners had before them the Report of the Finance Committee (20 July 1797). In A. pp. A. 4, p. 28, the duty of the Clerk of the Pells is described as follows:

"He enters and records all the Letters Patent, Privy Seals, Signs Manual, Treasury "Warrants, or other Instruments by which issues of money are authorised to be made in "the Exchequer, and it is his duty to check each issue when transmitted to him by the "Auditor, and to withhold the record, without which the teller cannot make payment until "he has satisfied himself that such issue is duly authorised."

(signed) E. Roberts, Dep. Clk. Pells.

Duty of Auditor.

A. 5, pa. 29.

"In his office are entered all Letters Patent, Privy Seals, and Signs Manual, Treasury "Warrants, &c., directing the issue of money, as also of all instruments entitling the dif- "ferent persons to receive same, and it is his duty to take care that none are paid without "the proper authorities."

(signed) R. Jennings, 1st Clk. Exch.

B. 1, pa. 51.

Report of Exchequer Commission, 1831.

In the Auditor's office the Clerk of the Registers and Issues regularly enters patents, appointments, resignations and grants of places of all kinds. "The evidence of the Right "honourable Sir H. Ellis, as Clerk of the Pells, and of Mr. Grosvenor Bedford, as Deputy "Auditor to the late Lord Grenville, will be found in the proceedings, before the Royal "Commission of 1831, and has been recited in my letter to your Lordships, 31st October "1854 (1), to which I beg leave respectfully to refer you, only extracting the following "important passages."

The learned and accurate Mr. Bedford states, "The entry in the official books of the "Auditor of Grants, such as Sign Manual Warrants, Letters Patent and every other document "by which any salary, allowance or pension may periodically or permanently be made pay- "able at the Exchequer, is performed verbatim from the originals;" and Sir H. Ellis adds to the like effect, "All Patents, Constitutions, Appointments, Sign Manual Warrants are entered "in the Patent Book, verbatim, and a record made on each, to which the clerk of the "Pells affixes his signature." I have thus demonstrated to your Lordships what has been the unvaried usage from the reigns of the Tudors to the year 1834. I have shown your Lordships what has been the usage especially in the offices of the late Auditor and Clerk of the Pells.

Recapitulates usage.

I show you by section 4, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, all powers and authorities possessed or exercised, either by law or usage, are now transferred to and vested in me, unless inconsistent with that Act. I point out to you that the usage in question is strictly in conformity with that Act, and I respectfully inform you, that unless it be adhered to, my duties of control cannot be performed, nor the legality of the issues I am called on to make be ascertained, nor the intentions of the Legislature be realised (4 & 5 Will. 4). It is, however, suggested, as I have already stated, that the production and record of these instruments at the Exchequer may be safely dispensed with, because the Exchequer is no longer an office of payment. Your Lordships will, however, remember that these instruments were never produced or registered at the Teller's Office, which was the office of payment, but with the Auditor and Clerk of the Pells, who, like myself, were officers of check and control. They, as I now am, were bound to refuse the issue or the sanction of any Treasury demand of the legality of which their minds were not satisfied.

These original documents were required to satisfy the ancient check and controlling officer, and they are equally essential, and indeed indispensable, to satisfy me.

Exchequer practice since 1834.

The propriety and justice of this decision will be put beyond dispute by a reference to the practice since October 1834, the period of the enactment of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15. Had this practice of producing and registering patents and similar instruments depended on the ancient law only, or on the fact that the payments were made at the Exchequer, it would follow that it would have been discontinued by your Lordships' authority, and by mine.

Examples.

Treasury Boards.

Royal Annuities.

The contrary is the case, patents, warrants and signs manual have continued to be produced and registered to the present moment. The latest example is the patent appointing Viscount Palmerston First Lord of the Treasury, Sir George Cornewall Lewis Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord Duncan, Lord Monck and Mr. Fortescue, Junior Lords. From the highest instances of the exercise of the authority of the Crown in the cases of the Royal annuities to the late Queen Dowager, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, to the smallest pension on the Civil List, the same usage has been adopted uniformly.

Judges.

It has received the sanction of the highest judges in law and equity to the present time, who have themselves complied with the usage of the Exchequer in their own cases, which if they had not done, I should not have felt myself at liberty to issue their salaries.

It is not, then, for an obolete usage that I contend, it is for one continued to the year 1855. It is not for a usage unsupported by evidence, but one which has been traced to the usage of Elizabeth.

It is not a usage unsupported by the statute law, for it is recognised and confirmed in the statute of Will. 3, and transferred to and vested in me by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 4.

It

It is a usage adopted also, and extended to all minor cases in different parts of the united empire by your Lordships' minutes of later dates, all subsequently to the enactment of the existing Exchequer Regulating Act. I refer especially to Sir C. Wood's minute, 24 December 1850, and Sir C. Trevelyan's letter of 17 September 1851, and the antecedent minute, 12 September 1851, and to the Treasury letter on the Scotch cases, 28 September 1854.

I might very easily refer to the various occasions on which, probably from press of business and necessity of despatch, your Lordships' minutes have been found irregular, and incapable of being carried into effect; but as these must be as well known and familiar to your Lordships as to myself, I abstain from doing so, unless your Lordships should desire the list to be made out and brought before you. It is quite sufficient to prove that the substitution of a mere warrant of payment in the room of the letters patent, signs manual, and warrants of appointment, would deprive the public of a security against irregular issues, which, under the present legal system of the Exchequer, is provided.

Should your Lordships consider that I have misinterpreted the statute under which I act, or overstepped the authority confided to me, there are obvious methods for bringing the question to issue; and in such case I should suggest, that, in order to enable the Houses of Parliament, to whom I am made responsible, to judge how far my duties to them have been performed, the whole of this correspondence should be presented both to the Lords and Commons.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury.

Exchequer, 23 March 1855.

My Lords,

In my two letters of the 20th and 22d instant, I have dealt with the two grave questions which your Lordships have raised, and on which it is my fortune to differ absolutely, though most respectfully, from the principles laid down in your Lordships' minutes of the 27th February and 6th March. I allude to the legal force of the accustomed usage in this department, and to the necessity of producing and registering at the Exchequer letters patent and instruments of grant.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 23 March 1855.

For greater clearness, I have reserved for this separate letter the question respecting Mr. Romilly's appointment as Chairman of the Board of Audit, and his increased salary, as discussed in your Lordships' minute of the 6th March, a question I cannot pass over without an apparent disrespect to your Lordships, which I should much regret to evince.

I shall not repeat any of the arguments urged in my letters of the 20th and 22d, which, however, involve the principle of Mr. Romilly's case. For the present I shall only add some observations which apply to it specifically.

I hold registered in this office an appointment, by letters patent, of Edward Romilly, Esq., as a member of the Board of Audit, at a salary of 1,200*l.* This patent bears date 19th February 1836. I have another patent for the appointment of Colonel Maberly, dated 9th day of May 1854, in which the appointment of Mr. Romilly is stated, continued at the same salary of 1,200*l.* This is the latest Audit-office patent.

On the July 1854, I received a Treasury warrant for payment, signed by two Lords of the Treasury, including Mr. Romilly's salary among other charges on the Consolidated Fund. The mention made of Mr. Romilly is as follows:—

"Edward Romilly, Esq., chairman, 1,500 l. per annum." £.375 per quarter.

On that occasion the Treasury clerk attending to compare the charges on the Consolidated Fund was required to produce the appointment of Mr. Romilly as chairman, with a salary of 1,500*l.* per annum. He stated, in reply, that the instrument of appointment was in the possession of the Treasury, and should be transmitted subsequently. On this engagement, which there was every reason to believe would be fulfilled, the charge of 375*l.* for the quarter's salary was agreed on.

Though more than once the instrument has been applied for, it has not been produced.

No other document, showing either the specific appointment as chairman, or the increase of salary from 1,200*l.* to 1,500*l.* a year, has been laid before the Exchequer; but the quarterly warrants for payment transmitted in the months of October and January have included the larger sum as payable to Mr. Romilly, under the designation of chairman.

The warrant including Mr. Romilly's salary is one of a much larger amount, extending to 48,612*l.* 6*s.* 1*d.*, comprehending not only the salaries of the Auditors, but those of the Mint Department, of the Speaker, the Inclosure Commissioners, the Commissioners of the National Debt, compensation to the Scotch Universities, &c., &c., &c. The issuing letters from the Treasury on which credits were issued on account of the warrant did not recite to which of these specific heads of charge the issues were applied, but a sum was still left in my hands unissued of 1,390*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* more than sufficient to cover the 375*l.* of increased salary of Mr. Romilly, for which no authority had been produced, though frequently pressed for, as I have already stated.

When this balance of 1,390*l.* was asked for, I felt it right to bring what I considered to be an irregularity to immediate issue, and I suspended accordingly a sum equal to 375*l.*, the quarter's salary. I was informed by your Lordships that Mr. Romilly's full salary had been already paid, though the authorities that have been required to sanction that payment had had not been communicated to the Exchequer, as promised to be done; and that the 1,390 l. 15 s. 2 d. then required was a compensation for the Scotch Universities, with which the point in controversy had no concern.

Appendix, No. 9.

I of course issued that credit without delay, being aware that it would be open to me to raise the same question effectually in the next quarter.

This I have accordingly done, and considered that in doing so I complied with my strict duty. Such are the facts of the case. I proceed to consider the law.

The Auditors are appointed under the 46 Geo. 3, c. 145, with important duties of inquiry, as well as of a judicial character.

By section 1 the Crown is authorised by letters patent, under the Great Seal, to appoint the Auditors, who shall hold their office during good behaviour.

By section 2 the Crown may by such letters patent grant to the persons named the following salaries and allowances: to the person first named, who shall be chairman, a salary of 1,500 l., and the Commissioners a salary of 1,200 l. each.

I have in my possession a copy of the original patent appointing Mr. Romilly, dated 19th day of February 1836, and assigning to him a salary of 1,200 l.

I have also in my possession a patent appointing Colonel Maberly an Auditor, at a salary of 1,200 l., and reciting Mr. Romilly's appointment, at a salary of 1,200 l. likewise

No instrument of appointment as chairman, or no instrument granting a higher salary than 1,200 l. has been produced, though frequently required.

Your Lordships will see on reflection that mere Treasury warrants for payment cannot be justly taken as instruments of appointment, If they were once admitted, your Lordships' warrant would be put forward as of equal force with letters patent under the Great Seal, and as claiming equal authority. Your warrant might in the same way supersede the Royal Sign Manual, an Order in Council by Her Majesty, or similar instruments. It cannot even be rightly designated as a certificate of appointment. It is a warrant of payment and no more; and of the legality and validity of that warrant the law directed me to satisfy myself before making or directing the issue.

Your Lordships are pleased, however, to inform me for the first time on the 6th March, that the additional salary has been granted to Mr. Romilly by a Royal warrant, and not by letters patent. Since the objection to this payment was first made your Lordships are aware that the existence of such a Royal warrant was never signified to me, still less had been tendered or produced in support of Mr. Romilly's claim. Your Lordships state it was a misconception of mine to suppose that the grant was by letters patent, and I was willing to assume, till informed to the contrary, that the law had been complied with, but if the grant has been made otherwise it is evidence that the law has been set aside; nor is this a matter of indifference. The principle of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, was to secure the judicial independence of the Auditors. For this purpose the Act requires that they shall be appointed by patent under the Great Seal, that they shall hold for life, and that their salaries shall likewise be granted to them by such letters patent. I need not point out to your Lordships' experience and high intelligence the difference of title conveyed by letters patent under the Great Seal and a mere warrant. If it be lawful to grant the 300 l. additional salary to Mr. Romilly by a lower and less assured title than that wisely directed by the statute law, the whole of his salary and the salaries of his colleagues might be so granted, and striking at the security and independence which it was the policy of the law to establish. Indeed, the same course might be taken and justified in respect to other salaries in which the grant is now legally set forth in the patents of appointments, or indeed to justify the substitution of a warrant of appointment for the patent.

I therefore respectfully submit that having before me the record of letters patent, granting to Mr. Romilly the salary of 1,200 l., and no more, it is not competent to me to grant a credit on the Consolidated Fund for the higher sum of 1,500 l. until some sufficient authority is produced, in conformity with the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, to grant the sum of 1,500 l. annually.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

The Lords of the Treasury.

Mr. Romilly to Comptroller-general. 13 June 1855.

My Lord, Audit Office, 13 June 1855.

In accordance with the direction of a Treasury Letter of yesterday's date, I beg leave to transmit my patent as one of the Commissioners of Audit, and the Royal Warrant by which I was appointed Chairman of the Board.

I have, &c.
(signed) E. Romilly.

The Right Hon. the Lord Monteagle,
&c. &c. &c.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 14 June 1855.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 14 June 1855.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to state to you, with reference to the subject of your letter of the 23d of March last, that Mr. Romilly has been requested to transmit to your Lordship the patent by which he is appointed a Commissioner of Audit, as well as the warrant under the sign manual, in virtue of which the additional salary of 300 l. a year, granted by the provisions of the Act of 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, is payable to him as Chairman of the Board; and I am to request that your Lordship will inform the Lords Commissioners whether you have any further observations to offer on the insufficiency of the warrant under the sign manual, by which, according to established usage, the additional salary in question has been granted, in order that they be submitted for the opinion of the law officers of the Crown. Appendix, No. 9.

to

I am, &c.

The Right Hon. the Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer. (signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

Exchequer, 20 June 1855.

My Lords,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Lordships' letter of the 14th instant, in reply to my communication of the 23d March, on the subject of Mr. Romilly's appointment, and the grant of his additional salary of 300 l., as Chairman of the Board of Audit. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 20 June 1855.

I have also to report to your Lordships that agreeably to your Lordships' request, Mr. E. Romilly has transmitted to me the patent under which he was originally appointed Commissioner of the Board of Audit, together with the sign manual warrant appointing him Chairman of the Board, and granting him an additional salary of 300 l., under the provisions of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, ss. 3 and 6.

The patent, bearing date the 19th of February 1836, had already been produced, examined and registered in this department on the 10th March 1836, agreeably to the uniform usage; the sign manual warrant, dated 20th day of April 1854, is now, for the first time, brought under my consideration. It has been examined and entered at the Exchequer in the accustomed manner.

Your Lordships do me the honour of expressing your desire that I should inform you whether I have any further observations to offer on the insufficiency of the warrant under the sign manual, appointing Mr. Romilly as chairman, and granting to him the additional salary of 300 l., in order that such observations may be submitted for the opinion of the law officers.

In reply, I beg leave to state what is the view I have taken of the true construction of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, and of the two sections, 3 and 6, which govern this case.

By the section 2 the appointment of the Commissioners and their tenure of office is regulated, the first being by letters patent, and the second during good behaviour. By section 3, the Crown is empowered "by such letters patent" to grant to the Commissioners certain specified salaries, that is to say, "to the person first named, who shall be chairman, "1,500 l., and to the other Commissioners 1,200 l. per annum," each. The section 6 must, however, be considered in conjunction with the sections already cited. It provides for the case of the vacancy in the office of chairman by death, resignation, or avoidance, and empowers the Crown from time to time to nominate and appoint such other of the said Commissioners as the Sovereign shall select to be chairman, and to grant to such chairman a salary of 1,500 l. in the whole. Such are the enactments.

The facts are few and simple; Mr. Romilly was appointed a junior Commissioner of Audit by letters patent, dated 19th day of February 1836, assigning to him a salary of 1,200 l., the enactments of the section 2 and section 3 being thus strictly complied with. By a Royal sign manual warrant, dated 20th April 1854, and countersigned by Lord Aberdeen and Mr. Chichester Fortescue, it is recited that a vacancy in the office of chairman of the Board of Audit had taken place by the resignation of Sir William Herries, and that Her Majesty had been pleased to nominate Mr. Romilly to such office of chairman, and to grant to him a yearly salary of 300 l. "which sum shall be paid at the same "time, and in the same and like manner as his salary of 1,200 l. granted by the letters "patent," previously recited, and which had been entered and examined in this office.

The inquiry which your Lordships make from me raises the question, whether this appointment of Mr. Romilly is such as to comply with the enactment of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 141, so as to warrant me in raising a charge on the Consolidated Fund.

There could be no possible doubt on the subject if the new grant had been made by letters patent in the precise terms of the section 3. It would be a manifest departure from the whole object and policy of the Act if the additional salary of 300 l. granted by the Sign Manual Warrant was held by any title less permanent than that of 1,200 l. granted by the letters patent. The independence of the officer who held during good behaviour, would obviously have been affected by such mode of appointment; but on considering the words of the Royal Sign Manual Warrant, now for the first time laid before me, it appears that the provision making the salary of 300 l. payable "at the same time, and in the same and like manner," with the salary granted by the patent therein set forth and recited, conveys to Mr. Romilly the same title to both, and that the grant, though not by patent, nor stated expressly to be made during good behaviour, may rightly be construed as so granted and held.

On this ground I consider the appointment and grant to justify the charge on the Consolidated Fund, and all future issues. Should your Lordships, however, differ from me, and consider the grant as held not permanently and during good behaviour, but as held during pleasure, and liable to revocation, it would be expedient to submit this letter for the opinion of the law officers, and in the event that they should doubt the regularity of the grant of 300 l., it might be necessary to direct the issue of a patent under the Great Seal, a course for which, as I have already stated, I see no necessity.

I have, &c.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury. (signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

My Lord,

Appendix, No. 9.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 25 June 1855.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 25 June 1855.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, with reference to your letter of the 20th instant, that as you are of opinion that a Royal Warrant is a sufficient authority for the issue of the additional salary of 300 l. a year to the Chairman of the Audit Board, and as my Lords concur in that opinion, they have desired that the usual letter of direction for the issue of 75 l. to Mr. E. Romilly for the quarter to 31st March last, may be forthwith sent to you.

I have, &c.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. (signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

(No. 41.)

Issue suspended for P. Shaw's Salary.

Exchequer to Comptroller-general, 27 December 1854.

My Lords, Exchequer, 27 December 1854.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your Assistant Secretary's letter of yesterday's date, desiring me to authorise the issue out of the general fund of the Exchequer of a sum of 27,516 l. 17 s. 2 d., for the payment of certain charges on the Consolidated Fund included in your Lordships' warrant of the same date, and particularised in the Schedule from the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Department, also transmitted to me by your Lordships.

The charges have been carefully examined in this department, and are correct, and warranted by law, with the exception of one single payment, which stands in need of further explanation. I allude to the payment of 216 l. 6 s. 1 d. to Mr. Patrick Shaw, Sheriff of Chancery, whose annual salary is stated to be 500 l. under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 72, and the sum of 216 l. 6 s. 1 d. is stated in the Schedule to be payable to the 31st December 1854.

But by your Lordships' warrant of the 21st September 1854, a sum of 267 l. 8 s. 7 d. was authorised for Mr. Patrick Shaw, stated to include arrears due to 1st July 1854; and by your Lordships' subsequent warrant, dated 28 November 1854, a further sum of 407 l. 8 s. 7 d. at 400 l. per annum, from June 1853, was also authorised. If then by these two warrants of September and November the preceding arrears were paid, it is not explained how 216 l. 6 s. 1 d. can be payable on the quarter to 31st December 1854.

Requesting further information on this point, I have issued a credit for 27,300 l. 11 s. 1 d., suspending the issue of 216 l. 6 s. 1 d. from the warrant of 27,516 l. 17 s. 2 d. till the information necessary to authorise it is produced.

I have, &c.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury. (signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 13 February 1855.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 13 February 1855.

I AM commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordship, with reference to your letter of the 27th December last, on the subject of the arrears of salary due to Mr. Patrick Shaw, Sheriff of Chancery in Scotland, that the explanation received from the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer in Scotland, of the charge on the Consolidated Fund for the quarters, ending 30th September and December 1854, for the above salary is as follows, viz.:

1st. That on the passing of the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 72, on the 31st July 1854, for the future regulation of the office of Sheriff in Chancery, the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer considered that the issues previously made to him, on account of that officer's salary, and which had not been paid to him, were cancelled, and that he therefore retained the amount (407 l. 8 s. 7 d.), intending to remit the same to the Exchequer, with other unappropriated monies.

Upon this understanding Mr. Henderson made provision in his schedule for the quarters to the 30th September and 31st December 1854, for the following sums, in conformity with the provisions of the Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 72, viz.:

	£.	s.	d.
Arrears due to 30 June 1853, at 400 l. per annum -	7	8	7
Ditto - 31 March 1854, less 240 l. paid out of fees.	60	–	–
Quarter to 30 June 1854 - - - - -	100	–	–
Ditto - 30 September 1854 - - - -	100	–	–
Ditto - 31 December 1854 - - - -	100	–	–
Arrears of additional 100 l. granted by the Act, from 1 November 1853 to 31 December 1854.	116	6	1
£.	483	14	8

I have to state that my Lords have, however, informed the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, that the issues made prior to the passing of the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 72, should not be retained by him until he remits other unappropriated monies, but that the sum of 407 l. 8 s. 7 d. should be specially remitted to the Exchequer.

To Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

I have, &c.

(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

(No. 42.)

Appendix, No. 9.

PRECIS of CORRESPONDENCE on Royal Order, dated previously to passing of Act, and their Illegal Correction.

Corr. Book 9, p. 80	6 March 1855 -	- Comptroller-general to Mr. Wilson.	- - Returns four Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants issued for excess of expenditure, Navy, &c. 1855, all dated five days before Ways and Means Act received the Royal Assent. Irregular to make issues upon them under other Ways and Means, which are applicable only to Votes of last Session; loses no time that mistake may be remedied as soon as possible.
- -	7 „ „ -	- Mr. Wilson to Comptroller-general.	- - Agrees objections are valid. Royal warrants will be returned as soon as corrected.
- p. 81	8 „ „ -	- Comptroller-general to Mr. Wilson.	- - Sorry to give additional trouble in any matter of financial usage. Errors in date of Royal Orders are corrected by erasure with a knife, of 27 Feb. and substitution of 6 March. By Treasury Regulations, errors, when properly corrected, require authentication by Secretary's initials; but consequences might be serious if these led to alteration of an instrument affecting its legal validity, after Sign Manual and counter-signatures have been affixed. Refers to similar case in 1841, under Sir R. Peel, consequent on opinion of law officers, when new Royal Order and Treasury Warrant were prepared, reciting the error (see Corr. Book 2, p. 325), also to same course under Lord Derby; Corr. Book 7, p. 197; advises its adoption now.
- 9, p. 84	9 March 1855 -	- Mr. Wilson to Comptroller-general.	- - Understands the corrected Royal Orders should be authenticated by Secretary's initials, or new Orders obtained; former course consistent with precedent, and will be much preferable; if new Royal Orders absolutely necessary, must be obtained at some inconvenience.
- p. 85	- „ „ -	- Comptroller-general to Mr. Wilson.	- - Initials of Secretary sufficient for Treasury Warrant, but as to Royal Order, strongly recommends precedents in Sir R. Peel's and Lord Derby's Government to be adhered to; as Chancellor of Exchequer, should never have ventured on possibility of altering Sign Manual Warrant after the Royal Signature had been affixed; believes the Act wholly illegal, and noticeable as such.
- p. 104	10 „ „ -	- Treasury to Comptroller-general.	- - Transmitting four new Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants.

(No. 43.)

Discrepancy in Payments on Account of London Bridge.

Exchequer, 5 May 1856.

Comptroller-general to Chamberlain of London, 5 May 1856.

Sir,

WITH reference to your letter, dated 29 April 1856, requesting to be furnished with the usual certificates of acquittance for payment into the Exchequer of the two sums of 6,000 l. due 1st December 1855, and 4,150 l. due 1st March 1856, I have to inform you that the "certificates of acquittance" heretofore prepared by this department in acknowledgment of monies paid to the Exchequer account at the Bank of England, have ceased to be furnished to all persons making such payments under the authority of a Treasury Minute, dated 25th September 1855, founded on the Act of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 96, s. 1. At the same time I am led to remark, that there is a material discrepancy between the period (viz. 3d December last),

Appendix, No. 9.

last), at which you state the payment of 6,000 l. to have been made at the Bank of England, and the date at which it appears to have been placed to the Exchequer account, and I have therefore to request you will inform me to what account and by what authority you made such payment other than in conformity with the bonds given in respect of the advances for rebuilding London Bridge. In a statement of the "Particulars of sums paid "over by the Paymaster-general to the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank "of England, on 24th December 1855," appears the following and only transaction in the account in question:—

"Rebuilding London Bridge, 7 Geo. 4, c. 40, viz.: Chamberlain of the "city of London, interest on loan of 146,000 l., half year to 10th "October 1855 - - - - - - - - - £. 2,725. 6. 8."

Again, in a similar statement of payments made on the 12*th March* 1856, to my account at the Bank of England, appears the sum of 6,000 l., being the aggregate of repayments on account of rebuilding London Bridge due at the periods ranging from the 26th October 1855 to the 3d January last, and which has been usually paid into the Exchequer in the first week in December. The payment of 4,150 l. had already been made to the Exchequer account by "Receivable Order" granted by the Treasury, and dated "Treasury Chambers, "3d March 1856" on the 5th of that month, describing the several sums due in the usual manner under the arrangement of 13th February 1835, alluded to in your letter.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Sir John Key, Bart.
&c. &c.

Chamberlain of London to Comptroller-general, 10 May 1856.

My Lord, Chamber of London, Guildhall, 10 May 1856.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 5 May 1856, in which reference is made to a discrepancy between the period (3 December 1855) at which the payment of 6,000 l. was made by me at the Bank of England, and the date at which it appears on the Exchequer account; and in reply thereto, beg to state that I am unable to account for such discrepancy. The payment in question was made by me at the Bank of England at the period above specified, in the usual manner, with the exception that in lieu of receiving the usual certificate from your Lordships' department for payment into the Bank of England, I was furnished with a receivable order from the department of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general, which alteration, I was informed, was in conformity with a Treasury Minute founded on Act of Parliament. I will add that one of the usual forms, containing a specification of particulars, was left at the Treasury, previously to the receivable order being transmitted to me.

With reference to the sum stated in your letter to have been paid over by Her Majesty's Paymaster-general to Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, on the 4th December 1855, on account of the Chamberlain of London, I beg to inform you that no such sum was paid by me into the Bank of England at that date; I may state, however, that the sum corresponds with the aggregate of two sums of 1,362 l. 13 s. 4 d. each, paid by me to the Bank of England on the 14th July and the 16th October 1855 respectively, under receivable orders from Her Majesty's Paymaster-general, being for interest on the sums of 116,000 l. and 30,000 l. charged upon the London Bridge Approaches Fund, by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods, &c., pursuant to Act 13 & 14 Vict. c. 103.

I have, &c.
(signed) John Key, Chamberlain.

The Right Honourable Lord Monteagle,
Comptroller-general of Her Majesty's Exchequer,
&c. &c. &c.

Chamberlain of London to Comptroller-general, 7 June 1856.

My Lord, Chamber of London, Guildhall, 7 June 1856.

IT having been intimated to my clerk that a renewed application to your Lordship, with reference to the certificates of acquittance of payments to Her Majesty's Exchequer, usually furnished from your department, would meet with further consideration, I have the honour to refer you to my letter, dated the 29th April last, and to request the favour of your Lordship furnishing me with certificates of acquittance of the payments therein described, made by me on behalf of the Corporation of the City of London, to the credit of Her Majesty's Exchequer, on the 3d December and 5th March last.

I have, &c.
(signed) John Key, Chamberlain.

The Right Honourable Lord Monteagle,
&c. &c. &c.

Appendix, No. 10.

DISCREPANCIES, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the FINANCE ACCOUNTS, between those Accounts and the EXCHEQUER BOOKS. Appendix, No. 10.

INVARIABLY, till 5 April 1854, certain Accounts were called for from the Exchequer by the Treasury, to form a portion of the annual Finance Accounts.

In the Finance Accounts of 1853–4, the following Accounts were so made up at the Exchequer, for the year ended 5 January 1854, as in all former years:

No. 41, p. 54.	Monies received into the Exchequer on account of Hereditary Revenues.
No. 42, p. 54.	„	„	Surplus Fees of Public Offices, &c. (Great Britain).
No. 43, p. 56.	„	„	Ditto - - - - - - - - - (Ireland).
No. 44, p. 56.	„	„	East India Company, for Retired Pay, &c. of Her Majesty's Forces in India.
No. 45, p. 57.	„	„	Imprest Monies repaid by Public Accountants, and other Public Monies (Great Britain).
No. 46, p. 58.	„	„	Ditto - (Ireland).
No. 47, p. 58.	„	„	Bank of England, and Sums issued from the Exchequer to the Bank of England, on account of Unclaimed Dividends, showing the balance.

These Accounts were all Exchequer Accounts, dated from the Exchequer, and signed by the Comptroller-general. They were called for annually by Treasury letter; were transmitted to the Treasury, and presented in MS. to Parliament amongst the other Finance Accounts. When printed, proofs were sent to the Exchequer from the Treasury for correction.

This usual course was also pursued in respect to the Finance Accounts for the quarter ended 5 April 1854, made up at the alteration of the period of these Accounts, and to which it is unnecessary further to allude.

Since the 5th April 1854, no such Accounts have been so called for by the Treasury from the Exchequer, nor has any intimation been given by the Treasury that the usual practice would be discontinued. But in the Finance Accounts for the year ended 31 March 1855, an Account appears containing similar information to that in the seven Exchequer Accounts, in addition to other receipts. This Account is dated from the Treasury and signed by the Secretary, and is headed, "An Account of 'Miscellaneous Receipts' paid into the Exchequer in the year ended 31 March 1855, under the heads hereafter mentioned." Extracts from the Finance Accounts ending 31 March 1855, are appended, marked in Italics, so as to show an alteration of the several items, as they are recorded in the Exchequer books, and according to the "actual payments into the Exchequer," by which the various discrepancies will be at once seen. In several cases discrepancies appear in the description of these receipts, in others, in the head to which they are carried; and the general result is, as shown also in the Abstract, that there is a total discrepancy between the amounts received under the several heads of account. For the sake of comparison two Exchequer Accounts are also appended, showing the sums received on account of Surplus Fees of Public Offices, and of Imprest Monies repaid, &c. These Accounts may be compared with the Finance Accounts to March 1855, p. 34 to 38. See pp. 766 to 769.

It should be observed that the heads of Account, to which the several receipts are carried at the Exchequer, have been specially directed by the Lords of the Treasury, who are empowered under s. 6 of the Exchequer Act, to make such regulations as they shall see necessary. The Comptroller-general has no discretion in the matter, but is bound to obey the Treasury directions. His certificates furnished weekly to the Treasury, show in detail the several receipts under their respective heads, and his Quarterly Accounts show the amounts received under those heads, not only for the quarter but for the year.

In page 39 of the Finance Accounts, 1854–5, also appended, appears (No. 27) an Account of Repayments of Advances, &c. This has never appeared strictly as an Exchequer Account, although the several particulars contained in it have been always stated in the weekly and quarterly accounts furnished to the Treasury. The corrections in Italics show the errors in this account, as rendered by the Treasury.

No. 26.—AN ACCOUNT of "Miscelaneous Receipts" paid into the Exchequer in the Year ended the 31st March 1855, under the Heads after-mentioned.

SERVICE.	AMOUNTS.	TOTAL.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Duties on Offices and Pensions; viz.:
On the Duties of One Shilling in the Pound - - -	200 – 1
„ „ Sixpence in the Pound - - - -	81 11 5
„ „ Four Shillings in the Pound - - -	2,038 17 2
		2,320 8 8
Small Branches of the Hereditary Revenues; viz.:
John Wilkin, Esq., Receiver of Hereditary Revenues, per Act 1 Vict. c. 2 - - - - - - - - - - -	7,700 – –
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, Scotland; Fines and Forfeitures of the Justiciary and Sheriffs' Courts in Scotland - - - - - - - - -	902 8 5
Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, from the Lagan Navigation Company, Rent-charge reserved to the Crown, per Act (Local and Personal) 6 & 7 Vict. c. 104 - - -	300 – –
		8,902 8 5
Fees of Public Offices; viz.:
ENGLAND:
Commissioners for regulating the Offices of the House of Commons; Balance on account of Fees, &c., of the House Commons, under Act 12 & 13 Vict. c. 72 - - - - -	58,251 1 –
P. Smith, Chief Clerk; Fees received at the Colonial Office -	1 11 6
H. J. Knyvett, ditto „ „ Home Office -	991 – 8
J. B. Lennard, ditto „ „ Council Office -	218 – –
F. S. Thomas, Secretary; „ „ Public Record Office, under Act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94 - - - - - -	760 8 –
H. W. Sanders; Fees levied on Irish Instruments at the Home Office - - - - - - - - - - - -	18 18 –
Whitmarsh F. ~~Whitworth~~, Registrar of Joint Stock Companies; Fees received under Act 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110 - - - - - -	1,425 13 8
G. Graham, Registrar-general of Births, &c.; Fees received under Acts 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 92 - -	601 12 6
C. Johnston, Registrar of Designs; Fees received under Acts 5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 65, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 104	166 13 4
Ushers of the Court of Queen's Bench; Fees received under Acts 11 Geo. 4, c. , and 1 Will. 4, c. 58 - - - - -	113 – 7
P. H. Pepys, Secretary of Presentations to Lord Chancellor; Fees received under Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87 - - -	226 5 6
N. J. Senior, Secretary of Commissions to Lord Chancellor; Fees received under Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87 - - -	610 1 7
H. Edgell, Clerk of Assigns, &c. Clerk of Assize on the Norfolk Circuit; Fees received under Acts 11 Geo. 4, c. , and 1 Will. 4, c. 58 - - - - - - - - - - - -	1 8 6
C. Romilly, Clerk of the Crown in Chancery; Fees received in the Hanaper Office for the Master of the Rolls, under Acts 7 Will. 4, c. , and 1 Vict. c. 46 - - - - - -	22 16 –
F. G. Abbott, Clerk; Fees received in the Petty Bag Office for the Master of the Rolls, under same Acts - - -	23 – –
F. S. Banks, Registrar; Fees received for the Registration of acknowledgments of Deeds by Married Women, under Act 13 & 14 Vict. c. 75 - - - - - - - - - -	1,243 13 2
Paymaster-general; Fees received on Licenses granted by Lunacy Commissioners - - - - - - - - -	922 7 6
Paymaster-general; Salaries formerly payable to Officers of the late Marshalsea, under Act 5 Vict. Sess. 2, c. 22 - -	461 5 –
Masters of the Court of Exchequer; Payments in reduction of the Balance of a Debt due to the Crown by Mr. R. B. Adderley, on his account of Fees received - - - - -	150 – –
Total, England - - - (Carried forward) - £.	66,208 16 6	11,222 17 1

No. 26.—Account of Miscellaneous Receipts paid into the Exchequer, &c.—continued.

SERVICE.		AMOUNTS.	TOTAL.
		£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Brought forward - - -		66,208 16 6	11,222 17 1
Omitted here and transferred to page 763—(See A.) - - -		1,500 - -	. . . . .	See p. 763.
Fees of Public Offices—continued.
SCOTLAND:
Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer.—Fees received under Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 64; viz.:
	£. s. d.
In the Office of the Director and Clerk of Her Majesty's Chancery in Scotland - - -	623 13 9
In the Department of Keeper of the Register of Seisins, &c. at Edinburgh - - - - -	~~4,642 16 2~~	. . . . .	. . . . .	B. £.4,724 17 7 (See p. 763.)
In the Department of Lord Clerk Register of Scotland - - - - - - - - -	2,273 9 9
In the Department of Sheriff's Clerk, Edinburgh, under Act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 119 - - - - -	3,933 13 9
Total, Scotland - - -		~~11,473 13 5~~	. . . . .	11,555 14 10
IRELAND:
W. H. Hardinge, Senior Clerk; Fees received in the Record Department of the Paymaster of Civil Services - - - - - - - -	32 16 2
T. M'Kenna, Clerk of the Council; Fees received	329 4 4
Ditto - - - ditto - - - Fees received in the Chief Secretary's Office - - -	553 15 11
M. O'Connell, Registrar of Deeds, &c.; Balance of Fees received under Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 87	1,056 5 1
A. B. Cane, Receiver of Constabulary; Annuity payable to the Consolidated Fund from "Counties Fines and Penalties Account," under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 78 - - - - -	500 - -
A. Lyle, Master in Chancery; Annuity payable to the Consolidated Fund from the "County Treasurer's Fee Fund," same Act - -	500 - -
Messrs. Hawkins and Keatinge, Joint Deputy Registrars of the Prerogative Court of Ireland; Balance of Fees received under Act 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 44 - - - - - -	1,792 12 4
J. Nagle, Clerk of the Crown; Fees received at the Court of Queen's Bench, under Act 2 Will. 4, c. 48, s. 11 - - - - - - - -	8 - 3
Y. Dawson, Clerk of Appearances in the Court of Chancery, Ireland; Fees formerly payable to the Lord Chancellor on Writs heretofore issued out of the Cursitor's Office, under Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 116 - - - - -	- 5 7
T. M'Kenna, Clerk of the Council; Fees formerly payable to the Lord Chancellor on Patents issued under the Great Seal of Ireland - -	24 8 -
Total, Ireland - - -		4,797 7 8	~~82,479 17 7~~	84,061 19 -
	Carried forward - - - £.		~~93,702 14 8~~

No. 26.—Account of Miscellaneous Receipts paid into the Exchequer, &c.—continued.

SERVICE.	AMOUNTS. £. s. d.	TOTAL. £. s. d.
Brought forward - - -	- - -	~~93,702 14 8~~
Trustees of the King of the Belgians (the Amount repaid into the Exchequer, for the use of the Consolidated Fund, out of the Annuity granted to Prince Leopold) - - - - -	- - -	33,500 - -
Unclaimed Dividends received - - - - - - -	- - -	61,044 17 5
Old Stores and Extra Receipts, Naval and Military Departments; viz.:
Army Extra Receipts - - - -	63,313 5 6
Navy Old Stores and other Extra Receipts	135,922 11 -
Ordnance Extra Receipts - - -	179,339 9 -
Sale of Commissariat Stores - - -	5,361 15 8
Net Profit on transactions connected with raising money for the supply of the Commissariat Chest - - - -	209 5 7	384,146 6 9
Extra Receipts of Civil Departments:
Commissioners of Works, Extra Receipts in the Office of Works, and Old Building Materials sold - - - - - -	1,265 8 11
Ditto, Extra Receipts on account of Royal Parks, &c., under Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 42 -	395 17 5
Ditto, produce of the Sale of Materials of a Building called the Glossop Dale Universal School - - - - - - -	165 8 1
Comptroller of the Stationery Office, proceeds of the Sale of Acts of Parliament, Books, Waste Paper, &c. - - - -	5,333 11 -
F. S. Thomas, Secretary, &c., on account of Sales of Record Publications - - -	229 4 10
Paymaster-general, amount received at Marlborough House for Sales of Examples, &c. to Schools of Art; for Sales of Catalogues, &c., and admission to the Museum and Library - - - - - - -	~~1,931 12 5~~	(100 l. too much) 1,831 12 5
Paymaster-general, Bill of Exchange received from the Portuguese Government for the Contingent Expenses of the Mixed Commission Court for the Suppression of the Slave Trade - - - - - -	674 5 1
Ditto, Balance of Convict Earnings and Prisoners' private Cash Fund - - -	893 15 -
Proceeds of Surplus Provisions and Clothing out of Convict Ships - - -	18,623 6 2
G. Taylor, Secretary to the Copyhold Inclosure and Tithe Commissioners, Sums received for Searches, Extracts, &c. - -	1,919 14 9
Inclosure Commissioners, Repayment of Inclosure Expenses received under Act 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, s. 130 - - - - - -	3,295 3 8
Ditto, Repayment of Drainage Expenses received under Acts 9 & 10 Vict. c. 101, s. 46, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 31 - - -	5,686 3 7
Paymaster-general, gain by exchange and per-centage received on Payments made by him at Hanover - - - -	752 8 10
Ditto, Rents of Lands in the Channel Islands purchased for Harbours of Refuge - -	1,272 17 -
		~~42,438 16 9~~
Income of London, Edinburgh and Dublin Gazettes, viz.:
F. Watts, Superintendent, Gross Revenue of the London Gazette - - -	10,478 11 3
Ditto, per Paymaster-general, ditto - -	7,856 8 8
Total, London Gazette - - -	18,334 19 11
W. H. Laurie, Keeper, &c., on account of the Edinburgh Gazette - - - -	~~1,267 7 9~~	(100 l. too little) 1,367 7 9
A. Thom, Printer, &c., on account of the Dublin Gazette - - - - - -	894 - 3
		~~20,496 7 11~~
Carried forward - - -	- - -	~~635,329 3 6~~

All formerly carried to Imprest Monies, &c., by Treasury direction.

No. 26.—Account of Miscellaneous Receipts paid into the Exchequer, &c.—continued.

SERVICE.	AMOUNTS. £. s. d.	TOTAL. £. s. d.
Brought forward		~~635,329 3 6~~
Superannuation Fund Abatements, under Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24; viz.:
ENGLAND:
Paymaster-general, from Salaries of the Civil Departments of the Navy	4,836 11 7		Paid into the Exchequer, as Army, Navy and Ordnance Extra Receipts, &c. (Imprest Monies, &c.)
Ditto ditto ditto Army	1,739 18 11
Ditto ditto ditto Ordnance	4,575 5 11
Ditto ditto ditto Commissariat	134 2 –
Ditto ditto of Civil Services	12,356 2 3		Imprest Monies, &c.
Ditto ditto of Colonial and Consular Officers	372 7 11
J. B. Lennard, Chief Clerk, ditto of the Council Office	124 3 5
C. Johnson, Registrar ditto Designs Office	18 12 11
Total, England	24,157 4 11
SCOTLAND:
~~Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer~~:
~~From Salaries in the Department of the Keeper of the Register of Seisins in Edinburgh~~	~~82 1 5~~		B. Surplus Fees. (See p. 761.)
IRELAND:
Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland:	£. s. d.
From Salaries in the Office of the Paymaster of Civil Services	897 9 –
Ditto ditto Chief Secretary	– 10 –
Ditto ditto Commissioners of Public Works	935 14 –
Ditto ditto Receiver of Constabulary	654 8 1		Imprest Monies, &c.
Ditto ditto Receiver of Dublin Police	135 8 4
Ditto ditto Registrar of Deeds	322 1 9
Total, Ireland	2,945 11 2
		27,184 17 6
Contribution from the East India Company for Retired Pay, Pensions, &c., in respect of Her Majesty's Forces serving or having served in India, per Act 4 Geo. 4, c. 71		60,000 – –
Contributions towards the Salaries of Official Referees, under Acts 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84, and 9 Vict. c. 5; viz.:
From the Chamberlain of the City of London	100 – –
„ C. P. Allen, Treasurer of Middlesex	1,000 – –
„ J. Mercer, Treasurer of Kent	80 – –
„ E. Kerrick, Treasurer of Surrey	320 – –
		1,500 – –	A. Surplus Fees. See pa. 761.
Savings on Grants of Parliament, &c., and Over-Issues Repaid; viz.:
ENGLAND:
Paymaster-general, Balance on Annuities and Pensions, Courts of Justice and Civil List, 5th Class, &c., repaid to Exchequer	~~1,480 5 6~~		wrong, should be 1,480 5 5
Paymaster-general, Balance of Vote for Temporary Houses of Parliament	2 3 9
G. B. Airy, Balance of Funds for National Standards of Length and Weight	51 1 5
Paymaster-general, difference between Compensation awarded to Mr. John James, for loss of Office in the Court of Hemlingford, and Sum paid to his Representatives	4 12 7
Total, England	~~1,538 3 3~~ 1,538 3 2
SCOTLAND:
Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer.—Sum over-imprested for payment to Mr. Patrick Shaw, Sheriff of Chancery, on the Judicial Establishment of Scotland	407 8 7		Imprest Monies, &c.
IRELAND:
Paymaster of Civil Services, Balance on Annuities and Pensions, Courts of Justice and Miscellaneous Services, repaid to the Exchequer	£. s. d. 819 4 4
Paymaster of Civil Services, amount received from W. H. Hopper, Secretary to the Central Board of Health, Balance due on his Audited Account	4 8 –
Total Ireland	823 12 4
		~~2,769 4 3~~ 2,769 4 1
Carried forward		~~729,783 5 3~~ 726,783 5 1

No. 26.—Account of Miscellaneous Receipts paid into the Exchequer, &c.—continued.

	SERVICE.	AMOUNTS. £. s. d.	TOTAL. £. s. d.
	Brought forward	- - -	~~726,783 5 2~~ 726,783 5 1
	Conscience Money; viz.
	ENGLAND:
	Money remitted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer by sundry Persons unknown, for Conscience-sake	1,890 1 3
	Paymaster-General, Retribution to the British Government paid into the Commissariat Chest at Malta	5 - -
	Total, England £.	1,895 1 3
	IRELAND:
	Rev. M. Barlow, Curate of the Roman-Catholic Chapel, Francis-street, Dublin, Conscience Money received by him	- 10 -
			1,895 11 3
Imprest Monies, &c.	Various Casual Receipts; viz.:
	ENGLAND:
	Bank of England, Amount of a Lottery Ticket issued per Act 24 Geo. 2, c. 2, but never claimed, transferred by the South Sea Company, with Interest from 1751	1,989 8 -
	Paymaster-General, Net Profit on Sale of Exchequer Bills between the 1st April and 31st December 1854	758 3 4
	Lords of the Treasury, Interest on Sum advanced from the Consolidated Fund to pay Dividend on Guaranteed Jamaica Loan, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 130	1 10 3
	Total, England £.	2,749 1 7
	IRELAND:
	Commissioners of Public Works, Amount received for Sale of a portion of Ground at Dunmore Harbour	150 - -
			2,899 1 7
		£.	~~731,577 18 - 6~~ 731,577 17 11

ABSTRACT as made out at Treasury.

		GREAT BRITAIN. £. s. d.	IRELAND. £. s. d.	UNITED KINGDOM. £. s. d.
	Duties on Offices and Pensions	2,320 8 8	- - -	2,320 8 8
	Small Branches of the Hereditary Revenue	8,602 8 5	300 - -	8,902 8 5
	Fees of Public Offices	77,682 9 11	4,797 7 8	82,479 17 7
	Trustees of the King of the Belgians	33,500 - -	- - -	33,500 - -
	Unclaimed Dividends received	61,044 17 5	- - -	61,044 17 5
	Old Stores and Extra Receipts, Naval and Military Departments	384,146 6 9	- - -	384,146 6 9
New Head.	Extra Receipts, Civil Departments	42,438 16 9	- - -	42,438 16 9
Ditto.	Income of London, Edinburgh and Dublin Gazettes	19,602 7 8	894 - 3	20,496 7 11
Ditto.	Superannuation Fund Abatements	24,239 6 4	2,945 11 2	27,184 17 6
Ditto.	Contribution from East India Company, Retired Pay, &c.	60,000 - -	- - -	60,000 - -
Ditto.	Contributions towards Salaries of Official Referees	1,500 - -	- - -	1,500 - -
Ditto.	Savings on Grants of Parliament, &c., and Over-Issues Repaid	1,945 11 10	823 12 4	2,769 4 2
Ditto.	Conscience Money	1,895 1 3	- 10 -	1,895 11 3
Ditto.	Various casual Receipts	2,749 1 7	150 - -	2,899 1 7
	£.	721,666 16 7	9,911 1 5	731,577 18 -

Treasury Chambers,
30 June 1855.

JAMES WILSON.

Exchequer Abstract—from Exchequer Receipts.

	GREAT BRITAIN. £. s. d.	IRELAND. £. s. d.	UNITED KINGDOM. £. s. d.
Pensions, Offices, &c.	2,320 8 8	- - -	2,320 8 8
Hereditary Revenues	8,602 8 5	300 - -	8,902 8 5
Surplus Fees	79,264 11 4	4,797 7 8	84,061 19 -
Unclaimed Dividends received	61,044 17 5	- - -	61,044 17 5
East India Company	60,000 - -	- - -	60,000 - -
Imprest Monies, &c. (including Army, Navy and Ordnance, Extra Receipts, 414,673 l. 18 s. 2 d., Trustees of the King of the Belgians, 33,500 l., &c.)	510,434 10 8	4,813 13 9	515,248 4 5
£.	721,666 16 6	9,911 1 5	731,577 17 11

No. 27.—REPAYMENT OF ADVANCES made out of the CONSOLIDATED FUND for Purchase of BULLION, and for LOCAL WORKS and IMPROVEMENTS in Great Britain and Ireland, during the Year ended 31st March 1855.

		£.	s.	d.
BULLION purchased by the Master of the Mint for Coinage	per Act 7 W. 4, c. 9	300,000	–	–
CONSTABULARY POLICE, Ireland	6 W. 4, c. 13, and 11 V. c. 2	30,540	17	9
DRAINAGE ADVANCES, Great Britain	9 & 10 V. c. 101, and 13 & 14 V. c. 31	130,457	19	11
DRAINAGE ANNUITIES	12 & 13 V. c. 60	15,581	–	9
DRAINAGE AWARDS	10 V. c. 10, 11 & 12 V. c. 106, and 12 & 13 V. c. 60	288	18	–
DUNLEARY HARBOUR	56 G. 3, c. 62, and 1 G. 4, c. 69	5,923	19	8
COUNTY GAOLS, Ireland	50 G. 3, c. 103, and 7 G. 4, c. 74	9,694	4	11
GLASGOW and CARLISLE ROADS, Rent of an Inn at Beatlock	56 G. 3, c. 83*	43	15	10	* Local and Personal.
HOLYHEAD ROADS	†7 G. 4, c. 76	783	13	6	†6 G. 4, c. 100, and
Ditto	9 G. 4, c. 75	200	–	–
MENAI and CONWAY BRIDGES	4 & 5 W. 4, c. 66, and 7 & 8 V. c. 65	2,290	11	4
REBUILDING LONDON BRIDGE	7 G. 4, c. 40	21,550	–	–
LUNATIC ASYLUMS, Building and Support, Ireland	1 & 2 G. 4, c. 33, and 6 G. 4, c. 54	50,289	6	3
METROPOLIS IMPROVEMENTS	10 V. c. 18	158,356	3	6
,, INTERMENTS	14 & 15 V. c. 89, and 15 & 16 V. c. 85	7,000	–	–
NORTHERN LIGHTHOUSES	54 G. 3, c. 136	250	–	–
PUBLIC WORKS LOAN FUND, Great Britain	5 V. s. 2, c. 9, 9 & 10 V. c. 80, and 14 & 15 V. c. 23	255,755	13	8
Ditto Ireland	6 & 7 V. c. 44, 9 & 10 V. c. 85, and 14 & 15 V. c. 51	28,144	3	–
Ditto Employment of the Poor, Ireland	57 G. 3, c. 34 and 124	6,504	14	11
Ditto	6 G. 4, c. 35	11,424	17	9
Ditto (Exchequer Bills)	1 & 2 W. 4, c. 33	4,992	14	6
Ditto	9 V. c. 2, and 9 & 10 V. c. 78	5,176	16	9
Ditto (Labour-Rate Arrears)	9 & 10 V. c. 107, 10 & 11 V. c. 87, and 11 & 12 V. c. 51	102	9	3
Ditto Loans Repayment Account, Consolidated Annuities	13 V. c. 14	26,000	–	–
Ditto Land Improvement, Ireland	10 V. c. 32	95,453	17	4
Roads and Bridges, &c., Ireland	45 G. 3, c. 43, 6 G. 4, c. 101, 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 33, 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 91, and 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 116	15,123	18	10
Royal Exchange, Dublin	45 G. 3, c. 18, and ~~54 G. 3, c. 129~~	730	4	–	3 & 4 W. 4, c. 50.
Shannon River, Improvement of	2 & 3 V. c. 61, and 10 & 11 V. c. 74	8,949	1	1
South Wales Turnpike Trust	7 & 8 V. c. 91	11,906	17	11
Valuation of Lands, Ireland	7 G. 4, c. 62, 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 84, ~~and 11 & 12 V. c. 22~~	25,839	17	9
West India Relief, viz.:
Tobago Relief	~~7 G. 4, c. 62, and 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 84~~	4,571	9	2	. . . 11 & 12 V. c. 22.
Trinidad Loan, Principal and Interest	11 & 12 V. c. 22	15,457	16	1
West India Islands (Exchequer Bills Loan)	~~11 & 12 V. c. 22~~	29,411	5	9	. . . 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 125, &c.
Antigua, St. Kitts, &c., Relief Fund	~~6 G. 4, c. 128~~	~~1,480 7 8~~			6 & 7 V. c. 63, &c. £. 10,918 – –
		60,358	11	–
		~~50,920 18 8~~
Wide Streets, &c., Dublin	6 G. 4, c. 128	1,480	7	8
TOTAL REPAYMENTS to the CONSOLIDATED FUND	£.	1,291,194	16	10

AN ACCOUNT of all IMPREST MONIES repaid by Public Accountants, and other PUBLIC MONIES paid into the EXCHEQUER in the Year ended 31st March 1855, made out at Exchequer as Accounts of Receipts at Exchequer (Great Britain).

	£.	s.	d.
The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, produce of six Mexican Bonds of 500 l. each, transmitted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer by a person unknown, as Conscience Money	683	16	3
The Governor and Company of the Bank of England, received by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, being Conscience Money paid by a person unknown for the payment of a Debt long due to the Nation	1,206	5	–
Francis Watts, Esq., Superintendent, on account of the Gross Income of the "London Gazette" £. 8,653 s. 2 d. 3
Elizabeth Watts, Executrix of the above, Balance due by the late Editor of the "London Gazette" 1,825 9 –
The Paymaster-General, Sums derived from the sale of Gazettes and from Advertisements received between 13th September 1854 and 28th February 1855 7,856 8 8
	18,334	19	11
W. H. Laurie, Esq., Keeper, &c., of the "Edinburgh Gazette," Amount due for the Half-year ended 30th December 1853	1,367	7	9
Inclosure Commissioners, Repayment of Inclosure Expenses received from 1st March to 30th November 1854 inclusive, per Act 8 & 9 Vic. c. 118, s. 130	3,295	3	8
Inclosure Commissioners, Repayment of Drainage Expenses received in same time, per Acts 9 & 10 Vic. c. 101, s. 46, and 13 & 14 Vic. c. 31	5,686	3	7
F. S. Thomas, Secretary, &c. on account of Sales of Record Publications, &c., for the year ended 31st December 1853	229	4	10
Comptroller of the Stationery Office, Proceeds of the Sale of Acts of Parliament sold in Dublin, Sales of Waste Paper, Old Stores, &c.	5,333	11	–
Geo. Taylor, Accountant to the Copyhold Inclosure and Tithe Commission, Sums received for Searches, Extracts and Tracings, &c.	1,919	14	9
G. B. Airy, Astronomer Royal, Balance of Funds placed in his hands as Chairman of the Committee for superintending the Construction of National Standards of Length and Weight	51	1	5
Bank of England, Amount of a Lottery Ticket issued per Act 24 Geo. 2, c. 2, but never claimed or converted into Stock, transferred by the South Sea Company £. 490 s. – d. –
Interest on the said 490 l. Lottery Ticket, unclaimed for 102 years 1,499 8 –
	1,989	8	–
The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, Interest on the Sum advanced on 2d July 1853, to pay the Half-year's Dividend on the Guaranteed Loan for Jamaica, per Act 11 & 12 Vic. c. 130	1	10	3
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B., the Sum over-imprested for payment of Mr. Patrick Shaw, Sheriff of Chancery, on the Judicial Establishment (Scotland), for the Quarter to 30th June 1854	407	8	7
By the PAYMASTER-GENERAL.
Proceeds of a Bill received from the Portuguese Government on account of the Contingent Expenses of the Mixed Commission for Suppression of the Slave Trade	674	5	1
Proceeds of the Sale of the Materials of a Building erected for the purpose of a School in Derbyshire, called "The Glossop Dale Universal School"	165	8	1
Rents of Lands in the Channel Islands purchased on account of the Harbours of Refuge	1,272	17	–
Carried forward £.	42,618	5	2

Account of all Imprest Monies repaid by Public Accountants, &c.—continued.

	£.	s.	d.
Brought forward - - -	42,618	5	2
By the Paymaster-General—continued.
Balance remaining on 31st March 1854, to the credit of the "Convicts' Earnings and Prisoners' Private Cash Fund" - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	893	15	–
Difference between the Compensation awarded to Mr. John James, for loss of Office as an Officer of the Court of Hemlingford, and the Sum paid to his Representatives - - - - -	4	12	7
Net Profit on Sale of Exchequer Bills, between 1st April and 31st December 1854 - - -	758	3	4
Retribution to the British Government, paid into the Commissariat Chest at Malta - - -	5	–	–
Balances of sundry Services; viz., Annuities and Pensions, Courts of Justice, &c. - - -	1,480	5	5
Receipts in Department of Practical Art, Marlborough House,; viz., Sales of Examples and Medals, Admission to Museum, Library and Public Lectures, Fees, &c. - - - - - -	1,831	12	5
On behalf of the First Commissioner of Works, &c., Balance on account of Vote for Temporary Houses of Parliament - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	2	3	9
On behalf of the Commissioners of Works, &c., Extra Receipts in Office of Works; viz., Old Building Materials sold (of "Public Buildings," &c.) - - - - - - - - -	1,265	8	11
On behalf of the Commissioners of Works, &c., Extra Receipts on account of Royal Parks, &c., per Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 42, s. 25 - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	395	17	5
Abatements from Salaries, &c., per Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24.
The Paymaster-general, for Miscellaneous Civil Services - - - - - 12,356 2 3
The Paymaster-general, from Colonial and Consular Officers at Hong Kong - 372 7 11
The Paymaster-general, for Commissariat Services - - - - - - 134 2 –
Clement Johnson, Registrar of Designs - - - - - - - - - 18 12 11
J. B. Lennard, Chief Clerk, Council Office - - - - - - - - 124 3 5
	13,005	8	6
£.	62,260	12	6
By the Paymaster-General.
Army Extra Receipts, brought to Account - - - - - - - - 65,053 4 5
Navy Old Store and Extra Receipts - - - - - - - - - 140,759 2 7
Ordnance, Extra Receipts - - - - - - - - - - - 183,914 14 11
Gain by Exchange, and per-centage received on Payments at Hanover - - 752 8 10
Amount realized in the year 1852–53, from the Sale of Commissariat Stores - 5,361 15 8
Sale of Surplus Provisions, Clothing, &c., ex Convict Ships - - - - 18,623 6 2
Net Profit realized in the year 1852–53, on transactions connected with raising Money for supply of the Commissariat Chests - - - - - - - 209 5 7
	414,673	18	2
The Trustees of the King of the Belgians - - - - - - - - - - -	33,500	–	–
Total - - - £.	510,434	10	8

Compare with Exchequer Accounts, 1855.)

Exchequer, } Comptroller-general.

No. .—AN ACCOUNT of the Sums of Money received into the Exchequer in the Year ended 31st March 1855, on account of Surplus Fees of Public Offices, &c., made out at Exchequer as Accounts of Receipts (Great Britain).

	Act.	Cap.	£.	s.	d.
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B., Surplus Fees received from the Director and Clerk of Her Majesty's Chancery in Scotland - -	-	-	623	13	9
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B., Surplus Fees received in the Office of Keeper of the Register of Seisins, &c., at Edinburgh - -	57 G. 3, and 17 & 18 V.,	64 94	4,724	17	7
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B., Surplus Fees received in the Department of the Lord Clerk Register, &c., in Scotland - - -	-	-	2,273	9	9
Ushers of the Court of Queen's Bench, Surplus Fees for the year 1853 - -	11 G. 4 and 1 W. 4,	58	113	-	7
Harry Edgell, Esq., Clerk of Assize, &c., on the Norfolk Circuit, Surplus Fees for the year 1853 - - - - - - - - - - - - -			1	8	6
George Graham, Registrar-General of Births, &c., Amount of Fees received to 31st March 1855, viz., per Act 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86 - - £. 370 - -
„ 3 & 4 Vict. c. 92 - - 231 12 6
	-	-	601	12	6
C. Romilly, Esq., Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, Fees received in the Hanaper Office - - - - - - For the use of the Master of the Rolls	7 W. 4 and 1 V.,	46	22	16	-
F. G. Abbott, Esq., Clerk of the Petty Bag, Fees received in the Petty Bag Office in Chancery - - - - - -			23	-	-
F. S. Thomas, Secretary, &c., on account of Fees received at the Public Record Office, &c. - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	1 & 2 V.,	94	760	8	-
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B., Fees of the Departments of Sheriff Clerks in Scotland - - - - - - - - - -	1 & 2 V.,	119	3,933	13	9
The Paymaster-General, Salaries formerly payable to Officers of the late Marshalsea, &c. - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	5 V., Sess. 2,	22	461	5	-
Clement Johnson, Registrar of Designs, Surplus Fees received in the Quarter ended 31st March 1854 - - - - - - - - - - - -	5 & 6 V., 6 & 7 „ 13 & 14 „	100 65 104	166	13	4
Francis Whitmarsh, Registrar, Balance of Fees received in the Office for Registration of Joint Stock Companies, to 31st March 1854 - - - - -	7 & 8 V.	110	1,425	13	8
Treasurer of Middlesex - - - - - Contributions towards the Salaries of the Official Referees, &c., payable under the Acts - - - - - - -	-	-	1,000	-	-
Treasurer of Kent - - - - -	7 & 8 V., and	84	80	-	-
Treasurer of Surrey - - - - -	9 V.,	5	320	-	-
Chamberlain of the City of London - -	-	-	100	-	-
The Paymaster-General, Fees on Licences granted by the Lunacy Commissioners - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -	8 & 9 V.,	100	922	7	6
Commissioners for regulating the Offices of the House of Commons, Balance of Fees, &c., of the House of Commons, to 31st December 1854 - - -	12 & 13 V.,	72	58,251	1	-
J. S. Bankes, Registrar, Surplus of Fees for the Registration of Acknowledgments of Deeds by Married Women, for the year to 31st December 1854 -	13 & 14 V.,	75	1,243	13	2
Carried forward - - - £.			77,048	14	1

Account of the Sums of Money received into the Exchequer—continued.

	Act.	Cap.	£.	s.	d.
Brought forward	-	-	77,048	14	1
P. H. Pepys, Esq., Secretary of Presentations to the Lord Chancellor, Fees received from 10 October 1853 to 12 October 1854 - - - - - -	15 & 16 V.	87	226	5	6
N. J. Senior, Esq., Secretary of Commissions to the Lord Chancellor, Fees received from 5 April 1853 to 10 October 1854 - - - - - - -	15 & 16 V.	87	610	1	7
H. J. Knyvett, Esq., Chief Clerk, Produce of the Home Office Fee Fund for the year ended 31 December 1854 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -			991	–	8
P. Smith, Esq., Chief Clerk, Fees received in the Colonial Office, in the Three Quarters ended 31 March 1854 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -			1	11	6
J. B. Lennard, Chief Clerk, Fees received in the Council Office, in the Half-year ended 5 April 1854 - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -			218	–	–
H. W. Sanders, Esq., Proceeds of Fees levied upon Irish Instruments at the Home Office - -			18	18	–
Masters of the Court of Exchequer, Payments in reduction of the Balance of a Debt due to the Crown by Mr. R. B. Adderley, on the final audit of his Account - - - - - -			150	–	–
Total - - - £.			79,264	11	4

Surplus Fees.

Compare with Exchequer Account, ending 31 March 1855 - - - £. 79,264. 11. 4.

Compare Finance Accounts 1855, p. 34.

Exchequer,

Comptroller-General.

Appendix, No. 11.

(A.)

EXPLANATION.—Civil Contingency Vote.—Evidence, Question 2734.

CIVIL CONTINGENCIES.

	Amount Voted.	Amount authorised to be issued by Royal Orders.	Balance Unissued from the Exchequer at close of Financial Year.	Amount Issued from the Exchequer, and Date of last Issue.		Amount Expended as shown by Parliamentary Papers.		Amount Expended beyond the Sum issued from the Exchequer for the Year.	Balance of Vote not yet accounted for to Parliament.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.		£. s. d.	Session and No.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
1845–6 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	22,469 5 7	100,000 – –	30 April 1846 -	85,454 4 8	1846 No. 204 -	- - -	14,545 15 4
1846–7 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	- - -	100,000 – –	5 Aug. 1846 -	113,642 16 11	1847 No. 216 -	13,642 16 11	—
1847–8 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	10,000 – –	100,000 – –	4 May 1848 -	93,415 16 4	1848 No. 284 -	- - -	6,584 3 8
1848–9 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	29,100 – –	100,000 – –	1 May 1849 -	73,600 1 2	1849 No. 270 -	- - -	26,399 18 10
1849–50 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	26,100 – –	100,000 – –	22 June 1850 -	51,653 6 5	1850 No. 258 -	- - -	48,346 13 7
1850–1 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	89,600 – –	100,000 – –	31 Jan. 1852 -	65,371 18 10	1851 No. 160 -	- - -	34,628 1 2
1851–2 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	67,600 – –	100,000 – –	31 Mar. 1853 -	89,675 14 5	1852 No. 239 -	- - -	10,324 5 7
1852–3 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	88,600 – –	100,000 – –	8 May 1854 -	79,823 3 4	1853 No. 262 -	- - -	20,176 16 8
1853–4 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	7 Nov. 1854 -	70,361 8 6	1854 No. 173 -	- - -	29,638 11 6
1854–5 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	61,916 – –	100,000 – –	7 June 1856 -	73,118 7 11	1855 No. 157 -	- - -	26,881 12 1
1855–6 - -	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	100,000 – –	40,000 – –	9 June 1856 -	83,891 4 2	1856 No. 91 -	43,891 4 2	—
								57,534 1 1	217,525 18 5
									57,534 1 1
								£.	159,991 17 4

RUSSIAN DUTCH LOAN, 1832.

(C.)

CASE

As to the Legality of further Issues from the Exchequer for payment of Dividends on the Russian Loan, by virtue of the Act of 55 Geo. 3, c. 115, and Opinion of Crown Lawyers.

The following is a copy of a Letter, and the statement enclosed therein, from Lord Grenville, the Auditor of the Exchequer, to the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury:

Auditor's Office, Exchequer,
3 January 1832.

My Lords,

Some doubts having occurred in this office respecting the legality of any issue which might henceforth be directed by your Lordships to be made from the Exchequer, for any fresh payments of dividends on the Russian Loan, by virtue of the Act 55 Geo. 3, c. 115, I think it my duty herewith to enclose a statement which has been there prepared of the grounds of those doubts, such as they have been laid before me, and I humbly request that your Lordships will be pleased to obtain for me the opinion of His Majesty's law servants, whether under the circumstances there stated, I shall legally be justified in executing, as far as depends on me, any such directions; and that your Lordships will also be pleased, in a case so highly important to the public faith, and to the interests of the State, to give me such special directions as you may judge fit for my conduct in any part of this business in which it shall appear that any legal discretion does really rest with me.

I have, &c.
(signed) Grenville.

The Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

Auditor's Office, Exchequer,
2 January 1832.

By the Act 55 Geo. 3, chap. 115, provision under a Convention, signed on the 19 May 1815, between His Majesty on the one part, and the King of the Netherlands and the Emperor of Russia on the other, is made for payment by His Majesty of the interest on a certain portion of "the Russian Loan made in Holland, together with an annual payment "for the liquidation of the same, which payments are specially made chargeable on the "Consolidated Fund of Great Britain, so long as the same should be payable conformably to the tenor of His Majesty's engagements, as specified in the said Convention, "but to cease and determine should the possession and sovereignty of the Belgic Provinces "at any time pass or be severed from the dominions of His Majesty the King of the Netherlands previous to the complete liquidation of the same."

On the 6th of December last His Majesty announced to Parliament the separation of the States of Holland and Belgium, and virtually the accession of the King of Belgium to a separate throne.

Doubts arise in the office of the Auditor of the Exchequer as to the propriety or legality of continuing henceforth to make issues there for payment of the above-mentioned dividend and sinking fund, under the existing circumstances, which are so definitely and specifically provided for in the terms of the Convention, which form the preamble of the Act of 55 Geo. 3, chap. 115.

The following is a copy of a further Letter from Lord Grenville on the same subject:

Drossmore, 18 January 1832.

Sir,

I have the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 4th instant, in which, in reference to the important matter which I have thought it my duty to submit to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, you acquaint me that, on the 19th July last, the opinion of the King's Advocate and Attorney and Solicitor-general was taken on that subject; but you add, that their Lordships, in compliance with my desire, will submit my letter, and the memorandum therein inclosed, to the law officers of the Crown, and that as soon as their opinion is received the same shall be submitted to me.

By a letter which I have received on the 14th instant, from the first clerk in the Auditors' Office, I am informed that the Warrant and Order for a large issue of money on that account, which instruments were under their Lordships' direction prepared in the usual course of office, and transmitted from thence to the Treasury on the 5th December last, were returned to him on the 13th instant from the Treasury, without being preceded or accompanied by any fresh opinion on the subject from His Majesty's law servants.

The present judgment of those learned persons on this matter I am the more anxious to obtain, because the opinion which you state them to have given upon it to the Treasury in July last, whatever may have been its import, can only have related to the case as it then stood, little less than six months ago. The doubts now entertained on the subject have arisen arisen at a much later period, and rest much, as their Lordships will have observed, on circumstances of very recent date.

Appendix, No. 11.

I was not indeed myself apprised of those doubts till the beginning of the present year. It was then only that an officer of much experience and knowledge of the business of the Exchequer laid before me, as was his duty, his strong apprehensions that, in the actual state of the case, any further issues which should thenceforth be made on this account would be illegal.

This statement, whatever might have been my previous impressions on the subject, claimed my instant and serious attention, and I took, without a moment's delay, the obvious and regular course upon it.

I respectfully submitted the whole matter to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, and humbly requested from them such lights as they might think proper to furnish to me for the government of my conduct in a case of such high public importance.

Since I did so, I have not ceased to apply my own mind sedulously and anxiously to the consideration of the subject, but before I take any further steps whatever in relation to it, their Lordships, I am confident, will not deem it improper that I should wait until I have the benefit of that high legal advice upon it which they have condescended to give me reason to expect.

(signed) Grenville.

T. Spring Rice, Esq.

The Lords of His Majesty's Treasury have directed these communications from Lord Grenville to be brought under the immediate consideration of the King's Advocate, and the Attorney and Solicitor-general for their opinion upon the point in question.

OPINION.

The 55 Geo. 3 is to be considered merely as a Parliamentary recognition of the Treaty concluded between Great Britain, Russia, and Holland, which it enables His Majesty to carry into effect by making the necessary advances. The question, therefore, turns wholly upon the true construction of the Treaty.

After carefully examining the provisions of the Treaty itself, taken in connexion with the attending circumstances, and the negotiations which preceded it, we came to the conclusion, which we still think unquestionably just, that the events which have taken place do not release the country from the obligation to advance the payments guaranteed.

We are of opinion that the separation between Holland and Belgium effected by internal arrangements, which this country sanctioned and recommended by her direct interference, cannot, within the words and spirit of the Treaty, absolve Great Britain from this pecuniary engagement. We have no doubt that the public faith of this country stands distinctly pledged to its fulfilment.

We are, consequently, of opinion that the Act does authorise the Auditor of the Exchequer to advance the funds required for making good the stipulated payments as they become due.

Doctors' Commons,
24 January 1832.

(signed) Herbert Jenner.

Lincoln's Inn, 24 Jan. 1832.

T. Denman.
Wm. Horne.

Lord Grenville to Treasury.

Sir, Exchequer, 25 January 1832.

I have had the honour to receive your letter, of yesterday's date, with its inclosure; and I request that you will lay before the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury my respectful thanks for the information which they have been pleased to supply to me on this important matter.

The statute 55 Geo. 3, c. 115 is the document on which the question must turn, in so far as relates to my conduct. That is the authority to which I am bound to conform myself. But I am fully satisfied, that its true construction depends (as his Majesty's law servants have stated) on that of the treaty which it recites, and for the execution of which it was made. Where then must that construction be determined? The officers of the Exchequer cannot interpret the King's engagements with his allies, or pronounce how they are affected by subsequent events, and negotiations. We have here no knowledge of the facts, no cognizance of the principles which govern such decisions. All that is officially known to me on the subject is that the legal and political authorities, to whom the consideration of these high matters properly belongs, have advised his Majesty to consider himself as still bound, in maintenance of the national good faith, to continue these payments. And, as far as my humble judgment extends, I trust I cannot err in determining, under these circumstances, to discharge my own more limited duty, by obeying as before their Lordships' orders in this behalf.

I have, &c.

Thomas Spring Rice, Esq.

(signed) Grenville.

(D.)

MINUTE, 22 December 1848, and Amendments made thereon, in consequence of the Letters from the Exchequer.

ORIGINAL MINUTE.

§ 4. THE course to be followed preparatory to the issue of credits on the Exchequer in favour of the Paymaster-general is pointed out in their Lordships' Minute of the 26th September 1834, for the regulation of the Office of the Receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

§ 6. The Exchequer credits to the Paymaster-general will be granted on special applications, to be made by him to their Lordships.

§ 7. By the 11th section of the Act 4 Will. 4, cap. 15, Royal Orders are required to empower the Lords of the Treasury to direct the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to grant credits for the various services voted by Parliament, upon which Treasury Warrants and Letters are founded, as required by the 12th section of the same Act. Issues charged on the Consolidated Fund are made upon Treasury Warrants, without Royal Orders, as authorised by the 13th section of the Act.

§ 8. These regulations will continue to be strictly observed; and no other alteration appears to their Lordships to be necessary in the Orders heretofore issued than to grant to the Paymaster-general the credits which have hitherto been granted to the Paymaster of Civil Services, and to the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills.

MINUTE Amended in consequence of Lord Monteagle's Letter of the 16th January 1849.

§ 4. THE course to be followed preparatory to the issue of credits on the Exchequer in favour of the Paymaster-general is pointed out by the 4th Will. 4, cap. 15, for the regulation of the Exchequer, and in their Lordships' Minute of the 26th September 1834, issued in pursuance thereof.

§ 6. The directions for Exchequer credits to the Paymaster-general will be founded on special applications, to be made by him to their Lordships.

§ 7. By the 11th section of the Act 4 Will. 4, cap. 15, Royal Orders are required to empower the Lords of the Treasury to direct the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to grant credits for the various services voted by Parliament, upon which Treasury Warrants and Letters are founded, as required by the 12th section of the same Act. Issues charged on the Consolidated Fund are made by credits given upon Treasury Warrants, but without Royal Orders, as authorised by the 13th section of the Act.

§ 8. These regulations will continue to be strictly observed; and the only alteration which appears to their Lordships to be necessary in the Orders heretofore in force is, that the credits which have hitherto been granted to the Paymaster of Civil Services, and to the Paymasters of Exchequer Bills, shall for the future be granted to the Paymaster-general.

Papers, P. 90.

Compare Trevelyan's Minute, 1848, P. 60, p. 12, 13.

"The Paymaster-general and Paymaster "of Civil Services habitually use money be- "longing to one head of service in making "advances for other services in the ordinary "transaction of the daily business of their "respective departments."

FURTHER Addition made in consequence of Lord Monteagle's Letter.

"WHILE by these arrangements the con- "stitutional check exercised by the Comp- "troller-general of the Exchequer on the "issue of the public money under the 4th "& 5th Will. 4, cap. 15, will in all respects "be maintained, the regulations which their "Lordships prescribe for the Paymaster- "general's Office will afford this Board a "FURTHER control over the expenditure in "detail, which will enable their Lordships to "ensure that no payment is made on the "order of any Department beyond the "amount of the specific grant of Parlia- "ment legally applicable thereto."

Appendix, No. 12.

Appendix, No. 12.

PAPERS relating to the Establishment of the Exchequer, and the Business transacted.

Extract from Sixth Report of Commissioners of Public Accounts, dated 9 February 1782.

Page 29. "The Act enjoins us a still further duty; it commands us 'to report such regulations "'as in our judgment shall appear expedient to be established, in order that the duties, "'taxes, and monies granted, received, and appropriated for the public service of the king-"'dom, may hereafter be received and issued in the manner the most beneficial and advan-"'tageous to the public.'"

* * * * * * * *

Page 30. "An office of the highest antiquity that has subsisted for ages, under its present form, "that has the receipt and custody of the public treasure, upon the due administration of "which depends the national credit and safety of the realm; an office of such a description "is entitled to the utmost respect, and alterations in its establishment should be well weighed "and proposed with caution and diffidence. But as a change in the manners, customs, and, "above all, in the finances of this nation, since the origin of this office, together with "peculiar circumstances of the times, may render regulations necessary, we have judged "it a part of our duty to examine into the receipt of the Exchequer, with a view to "economical reform."

* * * * * * * *

Page 32. "Judging then, as we must do, solely by the rule of public frugality, and supposing the "nation to stand in need of every practicable retrenchment, and consequently to require "the reduction of every useless and expensive office, we are led necessarily to conclude, "that as the public service receives no assistance or advantage from the labours of the "tellers, and the public treasure will find a considerable increase from their emoluments, "the public interest requires their number should be reduced."

Extract from Report of Committee on Miscellaneous Expenditure, 1848.

Report, p. 17.—Comptroller of the Exchequer.

Page xvii. "The Committee have examined into the establishment of the Comptroller-general of "the Exchequer, and do not find any extravagant amount of persons or payment."

* * * * * * * *

Lord Monteagle's Evidence, 14 April 1848.

Page 203. 2626. Chairman.] With respect to the clerical establishment, you do not think it is superfluous?—No; on the contrary. The clerical establishment was fixed in the year 1834; since the year 1834, the business in the year 1837 has been increased, by the addition of the Irish business, I should think, about 30 or 40 per cent. in point of labour and responsibility; it is carried on with the same establishment which was originally fixed for the smaller amount of duty; and which establishment, I think, altogether costs from about 8,000 l. to 9,000 l. a year, and discharges the whole of the functions which previously cost the public 44,000 l. a year, and 68 public servants.

My Lords, Exchequer, 17 March 1848.

I HAVE the honour to enclose for your Lordships the estimate for this department for the current year, having reconsidered it. Comptroller-general to Treasury, 17 March 1848.

The establishment was, as your Lordships are aware, constituted by the Treasury in 1834, on the authority and recommendation of the Commissioners of Accounts, adopted by the 4 Will. 4, c. 15.

The former establishment of the Exchequer comprised 68 officers, receiving salaries of 44,489 l.

The present number of clerks under me are 12, and the assistant comptroller. The average expense of the department, including contingencies, messengers, and office expenses, does not exceed from 8,000 l. to 9,000 l.

Not only are all the duties of the former Exchequer performed for the lesser sum, and with the reduced establishment, but in the year 1837, by the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 83, and your Lordships' minutes issued thereon, the whole of the receipts and expenditure of Ireland was brought under the review and control of this department. This augmented to a considerable degree the labour and the responsibility, and this, I am happy to say, was done without any greater increase of establishment than an augmentation of salary to the chief clerk of 100 l.

Since then I have suggested to your Lordships, and you have carried into effect, the reduction of two watchmen in 1844; and in the present year, on the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Carruthers, I recommended that his successor should commence at 100 l. rather than 150 l. per annum.

I shall not fail in a similar manner to call your Lordships' attention, from time to time, to any reduction of expenditure which can be made with due regard to the public service.

In order to enable your Lordships to judge of the increased duty produced by the annexation to this department of the Irish accounts, I beg to refer you to the Sessional Paper, No. 658, 1847, p. 3, by which you will perceive that the proportion between the English and Irish business stood as follows, for the period included in that Return:

English credits - - - - - - - -	1,197
Irish transfers - - - - - - - -	436
English acquittances - - - - - - -	1,085
Irish acquittances - - - - - - - -	314

The Irish business was, as I have already informed your Lordships, added to this department somewhat more than two years after the constitution and salaries had been fixed.

The only heavy charge of a contingent nature is that for the preparation and printing of Exchequer bills. From the precautionary measures which I have at various times suggested to your Lordships' adoption in this service, and the mode in which the duty is performed, the amount is taken at 650 l., and cannot, at the present, be estimated at a lower sum.

Any further information which I am able to furnish is wholly at your Lordships' commands.

The Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle.

A RETURN of the Number and Amount of PUBLIC BILLS that have been issued under the Head of EXCHEQUER BILLS, under the Authority of Her Majesty's Comptroller-general, since the date of the last Return, the 19th day of February 1845; distinguishing the Amount of each particular Issue, the Place and Period, and by whom each Issue was signed; stating the Number of Days during which the Comptroller-general was in Attendance in the discharge of his Official Duties, and if Absent, at what Periods; and during such Absence, under what particular Authority, Power, and Signature, each Issue was then made.

AN ACCOUNT of all EXCHEQUER BILLS signed by Lord Monteagle, Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and by Arthur Eden, Esq., Assistant Comptroller, from 1 January 1845 to 15 June 1847.

SIGNED BY LORD MONTEAGLE.						SIGNED BY ARTHUR EDEN, ESQ.
Date.	Number.	Value.				Date.	Number.	Value.
1845:		£.	s.	d.		1845:		£.	s.	d.
6 January	44	1,398,000	–	–		1 January	2	100,000	–	–
7 —	20	191,000	–	–		4 —	15	15,000	–	–
11 —	3	20,929	7	6		6 March	474	47,400	–	–
18 —	9	93,000	–	–		7 —	750	75,000	–	–
25 —	5	170,000	–	–		8 —	750	75,000	–	–
1 February	2	60,000	–	–		10 —	750	75,000	–	–
22 —	8	48,000	–	–		11 —	808	204,000	–	–
1 March	16	8,000	–	–		12 —	750	375,000	–	–
5 —	874	874,000	–	–		13 —	750	375,000	–	–
6 —	750	750,000	–	–		14 —	704	140,800	–	–
7 —	750	750,000	–	–		15 —	751	112,700	–	–
8 —	750	750,000	–	–		12 April	4	30,529	4	3
10 —	750	750,000	–	–		19 —	4	17,000	–	–
11 —	750	750,000	–	–		26 —	5	90,000	–	–
12 —	750	750,000	–	–		3 May	4	80,000	–	–
13 —	750	750,000	–	–		10 —	3	30,000	–	–
14 —	750	750,000	–	–		16 —	22	35,000	–	–
15 —	671	671,000	–	–		31 —	4	80,000	–	–
29 —	4	115,000	–	–		3 June	750	75,000	–	–
7 April	55	2,300,000	–	–		4 —	750	75,000	–	–
8 —	31	180,000	–	–		5 —	750	75,000	–	–
3 June	750	750,000	–	–		6 —	750	75,000	–	–
4 —	750	750,000	–	–		7 —	750	75,000	–	–
5 —	750	750,000	–	–		9 —	1,500	825,000	–	–
6 —	750	750,000	–	–		10 —	1,500	1,025,000	–	–
7 —	750	750,000	–	–		11 —	1,500	1,125,000	–	–
19 —	16	87,000	–	–		12 —	1,500	1,125,000	–	–
4 July	4	40,000	–	–		13 —	1,500	525,000	–	–
7 —	33	1,285,000	–	–		14 —	1,267	523,600	–	–
8 —	6	220,000	–	–		6 September	4	120,000	–	–
12 —	8	20,000	–	–		26 —	3	105,000	–	–
19 —	2	50,432	3	11		3 October	4	115,000	–	–
26 —	10	219,000	–	–		20 —	16	800,000	–	–
16 August	4	120,000	–	–
13 December	27	2,700	–	–
16 —	20	20,000	–	–
31 —	8	29,885	–	10
TOTAL in Year ended 31 December 1845	11,630	17,972,946	12	3		- - - -	19,094	8,621,029	4	3

Signed by Lord Monteagle.					Signed by Arthur Eden, Esq.
Date.		Number.	Value.		Date.		Number.	Value.
1846:			£.	s. d.	1846:			£.	s. d.
6 January		8	280,000	– –	5 March		500	50,000	– –
4 March		750	750,000	– –	6 —		750	75,000	– –
5 —		750	750,000	– –	7 —		750	75,000	– –
6 —		750	750,000	– –	9 —		750	75,000	– –
7 —		750	750,000	– –	10 —		750	175,000	– –
9 —		750	750,000	– –	11 —		750	375,000	– –
10 —		500	500,000	– –	12 —		750	375,000	– –
11 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –	13 —		750	150,000	– –
12 —		750	750,000	– –	14 —		687	116,900	– –
13 —		500	500,000	– –	18 April		16	550,799	19 3
14 —		1,065	1,065,000	– –
27 —		1	291	8 10	9 May		4	35,000	– –
					30 —		2	20,000	– –
2 April		8	8,000	– –
6 —		37	1,413,000	– –	2 June		1,500	450,000	– –
8 —		7	212,000	– –	3 —		1,500	450,000	– –
25 —		3	15,000	– –	4 —		1,500	450,000	– –
					5 —		750	275,000	– –
2 May		8	105,000	– –	6 —		500	50,000	– –
					8 —		500	50,000	– –
5 June		750	750,000	– –	9 —		500	50,000	– –
6 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –	10 —		500	50,000	– –
8 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –	11 —		500	75,000	– –
9 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –	12 —		500	100,000	– –
10 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –	13 —		774	128,400	– –
11 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –
12 —		1,000	1,000,000	– –	24 July		10	129,344	6 6
13 —		390	390,000	– –
15 —		8	400,000	– –	1 September		2	100,000	– –
20 —		5	103,000	– –
					14 December		20	727,483	11 11
6 July		13	570,000	– –
Total in Year ended 31 December 1846		14,803	17,811,291	8 10	–		15,515	5,157,927	17 8
1847:			£.	s. d.	1847:			£.	s. d.
3 March		860	860,000	– –	4 March		574	57,400	– –
4 —		750	750,000	– –	5 —		750	75,000	– –
5 —		750	750,000	– –	6 —		750	75,000	– –
6 —		750	750,000	– –	8 —		750	75,000	– –
8 —		750	750,000	– –	9 —		696	148,000	– –
9 —		750	750,000	– –	10 —		750	375,000	– –
10 —		750	750,000	– –	11 —		750	375,000	– –
11 —		750	750,000	– –	12 —		706	141,200	– –
12 —		750	750,000	– –	13 —		573	107,500	– –
13 —		582	582,000	– –
					6 April		9	285,000	– –
3 April		78	2,000,000	– –	7 —		7	190,000	– –
					17 —		2	60,000	– –
1 May		1	10,000	– –	8 May		4	105,960	8 8
22 —		3	150,000	– –
29 —		3	16,000	– –	1 June		750	75,000	– –
					2 —		750	75,000	– –
1 June		750	750,000	– –	3 —		750	75,000	– –
2 —		750	750,000	– –	4 —		750	75,000	– –
3 —		750	750,000	– –	5 —		750	75,000	– –
5 —		1,500	1,500,000	– –	7 —		750	75,000	– –
7 —		750	750,000	– –	8 —		750	275,000	– –
8 —		750	750,000	– –	9 —		750	375,000	– –
9 —		750	750,000	– –	10 —		750	375,000	– –
10 —		750	750,000	– –	11 —		750	375,000	– –
12 —		1,323	498,200	– –	12 —		338	40,200	– –
Total from 1 Jan. to 15 June 1847		15,600	16,866,200	– –	–		14,159	3,960,260	8 8

GENERAL ABSTRACT.

	Exchequer Bills signed by Comptroller-general.		Exchequer Bills signed by Assistant Comptroller.
	Number.	Amount.	Number.	Amount.
		£. s. d.		£. s. d.
Total Bills signed from 1st January 1842 to 31st December 1844 (See Parliamentary Papers, No. 220, of Sess. 1844, and No. 166, of Sess. 1845) - - - - - - - - -	51,963	104,353,034 7 9	43,943	23,240,733 3 3
By Lord Monteagle and Mr. Eden, from 1st January 1845 to 31st December 1845 - -	11,630	17,972,946 12 3	19,094	8,621,029 4 3
From 1st January 1846 to 31st December 1846 - - - - - - - - -	14,803	17,811,291 8 10	15,515	5,157,927 17 8
From 1st January 1847 to 15th June 1847 -	15,600	16,866,200 – –	14,159	3,960,260 8 8
Total Bills signed from 1st January 1845 to 15th June 1847 - - - - - -	42,033	52,650,438 1 1	48,768	17,739,217 10 7
Total Bills signed from 1st January 1842 to 15th June 1847 - - - - - -	93,996	157,003,472 8 10	92,711	40,979,950 13 10
Total Bills signed from 1st January 1842 to 15th June 1847, by the Comptroller-general and by the Assistant Comptroller - - - - - - - -			186,707	197,983,423 2 8

AN ACCOUNT of the Number of Exchequer Bills, Credits, Acquittances, Irish Transfers, and Irish Acquittances, signed by the Comptroller-general and by the Assistant Comptroller, from 1st January 1845 to 15th June 1847.

DATE.	Signed by Comptroller-general.					Signed by Assistant Comptroller.
	Exchequer Bills.	Credits.	Acquittances.	Irish Transfers.	Irish Acquittances.	Exchequer Bills.	Credits.	Acquittances.	Irish Transfers.	Irish Acquittances.
1845:
January and February	91	149	151	52	51	17	20	15	9	–
March and April -	7,651	200	177	65	60	6,500	8	–	4	–
May and June - -	3,766	90	72	36	30	12,550	74	79	20	14
July and August -	67	152	104	43	42	–	66	68	28	12
September and October	–	–	–	–	–	27	206	167	73	42
November and December	55	101	79	33	19	–	77	76	29	24
Total in Year ended 31 December 1845	11,630	692	583	229	202	19,094	451	405	163	92
1846:
January and February	8	135	139	58	34	–	22	19	7	11
March and April -	7,621	178	140	44	45	6,453	32	46	15	16
May and June - -	7,161	137	121	46	28	9,030	38	40	13	13
July and August -	13	95	113	44	37	10	88	56	26	25
September and October	–	–	–	–	–	2	209	147	80	34
November and December	–	45	21	10	8	20	125	138	41	34
Total in Year ended 31 December 1846	14,803	590	534	202	152	15,515	514	446	182	131
1847:
January and February	–	76	60	27	4	–	91	92	38	38
March and April -	7,520	126	86	39	11	6,317	82	95	37	42
May and to 15 June -	8,080	94	80	36	32	7,842	59	47	16	11
Total from 1 Jan. to 15 June 1847 -	15,600	296	226	102	47	14,159	232	234	91	91
Total from 1 Jan. 1845 to 15 June 1847 - - -	42,033	1,578	1,343	533	401	48,768	1,197	1,085	436	314

AN ACCOUNT of the Number and Amount of ROYAL ORDERS and TREASURY WARRANTS Examined and Controlled by the Comptroller-general, and by the Assistant Comptroller, from 1 January 1845 to 15 June 1847.

DATE.	CONTROLLING OFFICER.	ROYAL ORDERS.		TREASURY WARRANTS.
		Number.	Amount.	Number.	Amount.
			£. s. d.		£. s. d.
In the year ended 31st December 1845 - -	Comptroller-general -	121	30,573,076 – –	270	89,651,797 14 1
	Assistant Comptroller -	18	6,392,689 – –	113	19,285,258 13 –
In the year ended 31st December 1846 - -	Comptroller-general -	90	29,612,421 – –	221	70,639,573 10 5
	Assistant Comptroller -	29	8,826,423 6 10	144	40,542,670 5 11
From 1st January 1847 to 15th June 1847 -	Comptroller-general -	18	5,530,479 – –	74	33,807,911 1 8
	Assistant Comptroller -	12	11,930,642 6 9	78	29,754,047 6 11
TOTAL from 1st Jan. 1845 to 15th June 1847 -	Comptroller-general -	229	65,715,976 – –	565	194,099,282 6 2
	Assistant Comptroller -	59	27,149,754 13 7	335	89,581,976 5 10

AN ACCOUNT of the Number and Amount of EXCHEQUER BILLS signed by the Comptroller-general and by the Assistant Comptroller, and of the Number of Days on which the Bills were signed, from 1 January 1845 to 15 June 1847.

DATE.	OFFICER SIGNING.	EXCHEQUER BILLS.		Days on which the Bills were Signed.
		Number.	Amount.
			£. s. d.
In the year ended 31st December 1845	Comptroller-general - -	11,630	17,972,946 12 3	37 days.
	Assistant Comptroller - -	19,094	8,621,029 4 3	33 –
In the year ended 31st December 1846	Comptroller-general - -	14,803	17,811,291 8 10	28 –
	Assistant Comptroller - -	15,515	5,157,927 18 8	26 –
From 1st January to 15th June 1847	Comptroller-general - -	15,600	16,866,200 – –	23 –
	Assistant Comptroller -	14,159	3,960,260 8 8	24 –
TOTAL from 1st January 1845 to 15th June 1847 - - -	Comptroller-general - -	42,033	52,650,438 1 1	88 –
	Assistant Comptroller - -	48,768	17,739,217 11 7	83 –

The Exchequer Bills contained in this Account were made out, signed, and issued by the Comptroller-general and Assistant Comptroller, under the general powers and authorities of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 66; 48 Geo. 3, c. 1; 57 Geo. 3, c. 48; 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 125; 3 Vict. c. 10; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 63; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 87; 7 Vict. c. 14; 8 Vict. c. 23; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 129; 9 Vict. c. 15; and 10 Vict. c. 19; the Annual Ways and Means Acts; and the Treasury Warrants issued in pursuance thereof.

By the Order of the House of Commons the period of each Exchequer Bill is called for; but the "period" of each issue being an ambiguous term, it may refer to the date of signature, the date of the Bills, the date at which the several Bills are delivered by the Comptroller-general to the persons duly authorised to receive them, or the period for which each Bill is current bearing interest, and before it is exchangeable for money or duties. On the latter supposition, the Return is as follows:

All Supply Bills, exchanged in March and June annually, are payable 12 months after date.

The Deficiency Bills are payable out of the growing produce of the current quarter.

The Exchequer Bills (Public Works), per 3 Vict. c. 10, are payable 12 months after date.

The Exchequer Bills (West India Relief), per 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 125, are payable 12 months after date.

The Exchequer Bills (West India Relief), per 6 & 7 Vict. c. 63, are payable within three years from the date.

If by the word "period" is meant the period of signature, that information is given in the preceding Account.

If

If by the word "period" is meant the time at which the Bills are delivered to the parties authorised to receive them, the following Account will give the information required, so far as relates to the several deliveries of Supply Exchequer Bills to the Paymasters, from the 1st January 1845 to the present time.

Date of Bills, and of Delivery to Paymasters.	Number of Bills.	Amount of Bills.	Of which there were Signed				Attendance of Comptroller-general.
			By Comptroller-general.		By Assistant Comptroller.
			Number.	Amount.	Number.	Amount.
		£.		£.		£.
18 March 1845 - -	14,032	9,024,900	7,545	7,545,000	6,487	1,479,900	In attendance.
17 June — - - -	16,259	9,269,600	3,750	3,750,000	12,509	5,519,600	In attendance.
17 March 1846 - -	14,002	9,031,900	7,565	7,565,000	6,437	1,466,900	In attendance.
16 June — - - -	16,164	9,268,400	7,140	7,140,000	9,024	2,128,400	In attendance.
16 March 1847 - -	13,741	8,871,100	7,442	7,442,000	6,299	1,429,100	In attendance.
15 June — - - -	15,911	9,138,400	8,073	7,248,200	7,838	1,890,200	In attendance.
Total Supply Bills issued from 1 January 1845 -	90,109	54,604,300	41,515	40,690,200	48,594	13,914,100

The following Account will in like manner show the Date of the Quarterly Issues of Deficiency Bills to the Bank of England for the same time.

Date of Bills, and of Issue to the Bank of England.	Number of Bills.	Amount of Bills.	By whom Signed.	Attendance of Comptroller-general at time of Issue.
		£. s. d.
6 January 1845 - -	44	1,398,000 - -	Comptroller-general - -	In attendance.
7 April — - -	55	2,300,000 - -	Comptroller-general - -	In attendance.
7 July — - -	33	1,285,000 - -	Comptroller-general - -	In attendance.
20 October — - -	16	800,000 - -	Assistant Comptroller - -	Not in attendance.
6 January 1846 - -	8	280,000 - -	Comptroller-general - -	In attendance.
6 April — - -	37	1,413,000 - -	Comptroller-general - -	In attendance.
6 July — - -	13	570,000 - -	Comptroller-general - -	In attendance.
14 Dec. — - -	20	727,483 11 11	Assistant Comptroller - -	Not in attendance.
6 April 1847 - -	78 9	2,000,000 - - 285,000 - -	Comptroller-general - - Assistant Comptroller - -	Not in attendance.
Total Quarterly Issues from 1 January 1845 -	313	11,058,483 11 11

The dates of the issues and deliveries of the Miscellaneous Bills are not added to these Accounts, but the dates of signatures are all included in the first Account.

In the year 1845 the Comptroller-general attended at his office for 195 days; he was absent during the same year 116 days. In the year 1846 he attended for 181 days, and was absent 130 days. Since the 1st January 1847 he has attended 102 days, and has been absent 38 days.

The 90,801 Exchequer Bills, of the value of 70,389,655*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*, included in the first Account, have been all made out, sealed, and signed at the Exchequer, Whitehall Yard; all, with the exception of some Miscellaneous Bills, being printed, and the mechanical numbering completed at the office of Messrs. Perkins, Bacon & Petch, under the inspection of the Superintendent of Printing, and according to regulations introduced by the present Comptroller-general, and sanctioned by the Treasury. All the Exchequer Bills have been signed by the Comptroller-general and the Assistant Comptroller, as shown in the preceding Accounts, under the authority of the Acts 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 66, and of the several Warrants directing such Bills to be made out. These authorities apply to the whole number of Exchequer Bills made out, whether during the Comptroller-general's attendance or in his absence.

Exchequer, 15 June 1847.

Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 12.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 1 January 1850.

My Lords, Exchequer, 1 January 1850.

In reply to your secretary's letter of the 29th October, relative to the estimates for this office, I can assure your Lordships that I shall be sincerely desirous of lending my best assistance to any economical reduction which may be made, consistently with the interests of the public service.

Were it not for the peculiarities of the duty ere, as connected with Exchequer bills, their preparation, signature, and issue, I think so. e reductions might be made. But the system adopted for the security of the public, as r commended by me and sanctioned by the Treasury, has worked so well that I should be reluctant to overturn or disturb it, and certainly should not propose on my own responsibility to do so.

I have suggested on former occasions that if the Weights and Measures Department was disconnected from the Exchequer, and placed at the Mint, as an executive department, some slight saving might by possibility be made. But I apprehend that for the most part it would rather be a transfer than a saving of expense, and the trial of the Pyx must of course be continued independently of the Mint, on which department it acts as a check.

I have since my appointment recommended to your Lordships the reduction of two out of four watchmen, and one out of four messengers; and I should suggest that before either of the two next vacancies in the offices of junior clerks are filled up, the Comptroller-general should be called on to examine and report to your Lordships on the possibility of reducing the number.

The power of doing this would much depend on the efficacy of the establishment at the time; I have every reason to feel satisfied with the zeal and accuracy of the gentlemen acting under me.

The contingent expenses have been carefully revised and reduced. If the Exchequer bill operations be excluded from the contingencies, the sum estimated for other purposes is but 300 l.

The preparation of Exchequer bills costs the public for paper-making £. 400

Superintendence of ditto - - - - - - - -	30
Engraving and Printing - - - - - - - -	180
Superintendent - - - - - - - - -	30
Counterfoils - - - - - - - - -	10
	£. 650

This is a considerable sum; but if we adhere to our present system, I do not see how it can safely be reduced.

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

P.S.—Since writing the above, I have read the report of the Commission on the Mint, and have considered their observation, p. 15–16, in relation to the transfer of the Weights and Measures Department from this office to the Mint; and it seems to me that whilst the change, as I have already stated, will be a doubtful economy, the objections urged by the Commissioners to such a proposal seem to be unanswerable.

Comptroller-general to Treasury, 17 September 1850.

My Lords, Derwent Island, Keswick, 17 Sept. 1850.

I did myself the honour of reporting verbally to your assistant-secretary the vacancy occasioned in this office by the unexpected death of Mr. Charles Barratt.

* * * * * * * * * * *

I requested Sir C. Trevelyan, at the same time, to submit to your Lordships the expediency of not filling up the vacancy thus produced, as I was desirous, in completion of the recommendation which I had already made to your Lordships, and of the instructions which I had received from your Board, to make a further reduction in the expenses of this office, provided it could be effected without prejudice to the public service, and without injustice to the persons now employed.

After full consideration, I have the honour of submitting to your Lordships an arrangement by which an immediate saving may be made, and the number of clerks may be reduced from seven to six, which will be the result of not filling up the vacancy of junior clerk, but filling up Mr. Barratt's by a promotion within the office of the clerks next in succession.

* * * * * * * * * * *

I have, &c.
(signed) Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Treasury to Comptroller-general, 1 October 1850.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 1 October 1850.

I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint your Lordships, with reference to your letter of the 17th instant, that my Lords are pleased to approve of the arrangements which you propose to make in your office in consequence of the death of Mr. Charles Barratt, the second clerk therein.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. E. Trevelyan.

The Comptroller-general of the Exchequer.

Appendix, No. 12.

F. F. Ottey, to Comptroller-general, 14 February 1854. (Enclosed in Letter to Treasury of the same date.)

My Lord, Exchequer, 14 February 1854.

According to your Lordship's directions to inquire in the several departments in this office, and to consider if the request to which you allude as made from the Treasury, for the services of one of the junior clerks in the Exchequer, for the next two months to assist in the business of the Treasury, I have received from Mr. Frederick, the accountant, from Mr. Chisholm, the senior clerk in the Exchequer Bill-office, and from Mr. Woodfall, who is in superintendence of the department for the entry of warrants and credits, and for Parliamentary accounts, their opinion that it would not only be extremely inconvenient to dispense with the services of any one of the clerks of the office at the present period of the year, when the most important duties of the office are performed, but that it would materially interfere with the due execution of those duties.

I have, &c.

The Lord Monteagle, &c., &c. (signed) F. F. Ottey, Chief Clerk.

Comptroller-general to Sir C. E. Trevelyan, 14 February 1854.

My Dear Sir, Exchequer, 14 February 1854.

I received a note from Mr. Stephenson, inquiring whether I could spare a clerk from this department for some time, to assist in the Treasury. I immediately directed an examination into the state of the business; and I much fear that, at this moment, when we are preparing for the exchange of Exchequer bills, and the arrangement of the annual accounts for Parliament, it would be impossible, without risk, to part with a clerk. You remember that, on my recommendation, you have already reduced the establishment by one clerk. After the 9th of June I think I could help you, provided the new functions respecting the revenue payments do not render some reconstruction of the department advisable.

I enclose you the Reports of my chief clerk.

I am, &c.,

Sir C. E. Trevelyan, K.C.B., &c., &c., &c. (signed) Monteagle.

ESTABLISHMENT OF EXCHEQUER.

	1832.		1847.		1856.
	Number of Persons.	Salaries.	Number of Persons.	Salaries.	Number of Persons.	Salaries.
		£. s. d.		£.		£. s. d.
Chief officers - -	6	16,200 – –	1	2,000	1	2,000 – –
Deputies and principal clerk - - -	5	5,200 – –	1*	1,000	1*	1,000 – –
Clerks - - - -	42	18,803 18 1	12†	3,985	11†	3,840 – –
	53	40,203 18 1	14	6,985	13	6,840 – –
Messenger, &c. - -	21	2,525 – –	7	661	5	540 – –
Total - - - £.	74	42,728 18 1	21	7,646	18	7,380 – –
Saving - - - -					56	35,348 18 1
					74	42,728 18 1
Total Saving in 22 years, from 1834 to 1856 - - - £.						777,675 17 10

* This refers to the Assistant-Comptroller.

† Including three clerks in the Exchequer Bill Department, and two in the Department of Weights and Measures.

Exchequer, 26 June 1856.

To the Honourable the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled, Appendix, No. 12.

The Petition of the undermentioned Clerks in the Office of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer,

Showeth,

That your petitioners humbly beg to refer to the new scale of superannuation allowances proposed in the Bill now before Parliament, to be granted to civil officers appointed previously to 5th August 1829.

That your petitioners were all so appointed, and that the new, as compared with the present scale, would, in the event of their superannuation, tend to inflict a considerable loss upon them.

That this loss would be as follows:

After 35 years' service (or other quinquennial periods) a loss equal to $\frac{4}{60}$ of their salaries.

„ 36 years' service = $\frac{3}{60}$ „

„ 37 „ „ = $\frac{2}{60}$ „

„ 38 „ „ = $\frac{1}{60}$ „

That it is true that after 39 years' service (or the year before the completion of any quinquennial period) the amount of superannuation allowance would appear to be the same under both scales; still, even in this case, the benefit of a near prospect of a further addition of $\frac{1}{12}$, under the present scale, would be lost to your petitioners.

That this diminution, equal to $\frac{1}{15}$ or 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ l. per cent. of the amount of salary, at the quinquennial periods when retirement from office usually occurs, would inflict a still greater loss per cent. calculated upon the amount of superannuation allowance under the present scale; and that this loss per cent. would increase in inverse proportion to the length of service. Thus the actual loss to your petitioners would be, after 45 years' service, about 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ l. per cent., and after 30 years' service it would be 10 l. per cent., and so on.

That if one of your petitioners, the chief clerk, were superannuated at the present time under the proposed scale, he would sustain a loss of not less than 60 l. per annum as compared with the present scale; and that the loss to your other petitioners, under similar circumstances, though actually less in amount, would in reality be still more severely felt by them.

That on the abolition of the ancient Exchequer in 1834, a large number of its officers were compelled to retire on the full amounts of superannuation allowances by the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24, to be allowed to persons who had entered the public service previously to 5th August 1829. It would act, therefore, as a severe disappointment to your petitioners, in the event of their retirement from the office, to feel that, after 20 years' more service, they should be superannuated on a lower scale of allowance than their colleagues of former days.

That this reduction in the scale of their superannuation allowances, established in the year 1834, after close investigation, is uncalled for and the more severe at the present time, when it is generally admitted that any change in the remuneration of civil officers should rather be framed for their benefit than for their disadvantage.

That there are special circumstances in the case of your petitioners, which add considerably to the hardship of the prospective loss which the proposed measure would inflict upon them.

First. The reductions which have been made in the Exchequer since their first appointments, from which your petitioners have lost the benefit of that promotion to higher office to which they stood in succession, and of more liberal remuneration for their services, which they had every prospect of attaining on appointment to their original office. 1.—Reductions in the Office.

The reductions made in 1834, both in the number of clerks and scale of salaries, will be seen by the following comparison of the present establishment of the Exchequer (exclusive of juniors) with those of the late auditor of the Exchequer and Clerk of the Pells, to which offices your petitioners were all originally appointed.

Appendix, No. 12.

PRESENT ESTABLISHMENT of the EXCHEQUER.

Principal Office.	Minimum Salary.	Annual Increase.	Maximum Salary.	Present Salary.	Years since attaining Maximum.	Years in present Seats.	Total Length of Service.	Age next Birthday.
	£.	£.	£.	£.			Years.
F. F. Ottey, chief clerk	800	20	900	900	7 $\frac{8}{12}$	12 $\frac{8}{12}$	45	61
G. S. Frederick, accountant - -	500	10	550	550	7 $\frac{8}{12}$	12 $\frac{8}{12}$	32 $\frac{1}{12}$	51
E. Welch, 1st clerk -	250	10	300	300	8 $\frac{8}{12}$	12 $\frac{8}{12}$	31	48
H. T. Woodfall, 2d ditto	200	10	300	300	5 $\frac{8}{12}$	5 $\frac{8}{12}$	27 $\frac{0}{12}$	48
Exchequer Bill Issuing Office:
H. W. Chisholm, senior clerk - - -	500	10	550	550	8 $\frac{8}{12}$	13 $\frac{8}{12}$	31 $\frac{0}{12}$	47
J. K. Blake, 1st assistant	200	10	250	250	$\frac{8}{12}$	5 $\frac{8}{12}$	26 $\frac{0}{12}$	47
Weights and Measures' Department:
J. Bowen, superintendent - - -	300	10	400	400	9 $\frac{8}{12}$	20 $\frac{8}{12}$	29 $\frac{0}{12}$	49

Establishment of Auditor of the Exchequer, previously to 1834.

——	——	Minimum per Annum.	Annual Increase per Annum.	Maximum per Annum.
		£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Principal office - - -	Chief clerk - -	- - -	- - -	1,200 - -
	Clerk of debentures -	- - -	- - -	900 - -
	Clerk of issues - -	- - -	- - -	750 - -
	Clerk of cash book -	500 - -	20 - -	700 - -
	Three assistant clerks	250 - -	15 - -	450 - -
Exchequer Bill Department -	Senior clerk - -	500 - -	20 - -	700 - -
	Assistant - -	250 - -	15 - -	450 - -
Tally Writers' ditto - -	Senior clerk - -	500 - -	20 - -	700 - -
	Assistant - - -	250 - -	15 - -	500 - -
Examiners - - - -	Senior clerk - -	500 - -	20 - -	700 - -
	Assistant - - -	250 - -	15 - -	450 - -

Establishment of Pells Office (Reduced Scale, commencing 31st July 1823).

——	——	Minimum perAnnum.	Annual Increase per Annum.	Maximum per Annum.
		£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Principal office - - -	- Clerk of exitus and receiver of fees.	- - -	- - -	950 - -
	Clerk of introitus -	- - -	- - -	900 - -
	Clerk of declarations	500 - -	10 - -	600 - -
	Clerk of patents -	400 - -	10 - -	500 - -
	Clerk of debentures -	300 - -	10 - -	400 - -
	Clerk of cash book -	200 - -	10 - -	300 - -

2.—Very slow promotion.

2dly. Upon the constitution of the new Exchequer in 1834, your petitioners were all specially selected from the former establishment. But they were much more of one age than would otherwise have been the case, and their promotion in the present Exchequer has been thereby much delayed, as compared with what might have been expected in the ordinary course.

This delay of promotion affects some of your petitioners the more severely, as a great and unusual difference exists between the salaries of the several grades.

The slowness of promotion in this department is strongly evidenced by the following facts:—

That

That amongst your petitioners the one who has served the least number of years, viz. 26 ¾ years, has only yet attained the first step above the grade of junior clerks, and that his salary did not exceed 200 l. per annum till after twenty-one years' service; and, Appendix, No. 12.

That the clerk next below him in seniority (who was not appointed till immediately after 4th August 1829), is still in the grade of junior clerks, after twenty-six years' service, notwithstanding that he has obtained every promotion that has been open to him, and that he is only now in the fourth year of the enjoyment of his maximum salary of 200 l. per annum, from which both the Superannuation Tax and Income Tax are deducted.

3dly. The very reduced scale of salaries in the present establishment of the Exchequer, with the exception alone of that of the chief clerk. 3.—Unusually low salaries.

Your petitioners very respectfully but earnestly beg to be permitted to draw your special attention to this last allegation, as the amount of salary is an important part of the question, and it is acknowledged that the remuneration of the Civil Service is partly by salary and partly by Superannuation allowance. It is, in fact, the amount of salary which regulates the amount of their prospective Superannuation allowance.

These salaries were fixed in 1834, when the new Exchequer was established in accordance with the recommendations of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, who made their first and only report upon the Exchequer in 1831. At that period the spirit of economical reform was at its height, and your petitioners have always painfully felt that it was carried out with unusual severity in this department, upon which it first fell.

Although many onerous and responsible duties have been added to this department since 1834, no additional remuneration has been granted, with the exception of the alteration of the annual increase from 5 l., as originally fixed, to 10 l., and the addition of 100 l. a year to the salary of the chief clerk. These occurred in 1837, at the period when the Irish Exchequer was annexed to this department.

On various occasions, representations have been made to the authorities at the Treasury on the subject of the remuneration of your petitioners in individual cases, and of the inadequacy of their salaries; and on the 11th June and 15th August 1855, the whole subject was brought before the Treasury Board, when the Comptroller-general "most conscientiously recommended the favourable attention" of the case of your petitioners, "was confident that their Lordships would be pleased to consider these most disastrous cases," and "with an earnest desire that their Lordships may consider them favourably."

On these occasions the Comptroller-general also "bore the strongest and most willing testimony to the zeal, ability, and accuracy with which these gentlemen have discharged their functions, and the readiness with which they have applied themselves to any extraordinary labour which the public service has cast upon them," and "to the increased labour of the department, as well as the precision with which these increased and increasing duties are performed." He also added, "that even if their Lordships should be of opinion that the present scale should be maintained hereafter, there is still strong claim in justice on behalf of the present clerks, from the great peculiarity of their position, as compared with that of their successors."

Their Lordships, however were pleased, on the 16th October last, to express "their regret that they could not at present entertain the applications."

The reduced scale of salaries in the Exchequer, as compared with the salaries in analogous departments of the public service, is shown by the following Table:—

	Chief Clerk.	Accountant, or similar Special Officer.	Senior Clerks, &c.	Assistants.
	£. £.	£. £.	£. £.	£. £.
Board of Trade	— — — —	1 at 500 — 1 at 800 to 1,000 1 at 800 — 1 at 600 to 800 1 at 600 to 1,000 2 at 500 to 800	6 at 300 to 600	9 at 300 to 500
Audit Office (Secretary)	1 at 800 to 1,000	1 at 600 to 800	10 at 500 to 600 1 at 400 to 550 16 at 400 to 500	21 at 300 to 350
Council Office	1 at 900 —	1 at 1,000 — 1 at 500 —	1 at 700 —	1 at 550 —
Admiralty	1 at 1,000 —	1 at 1,000 —	10 at 600 to 850	12 at 350 to 550
Home Office	1 at 950 —	1 at 720 — 1 at 540 —	4 at 600 to 800	4 at 350 to 545
Foreign Office	1 at 1,250 —	1 at 800 — 1 at 600 to 800 1 at 300 to 500	7 at 700 to 1,000	16 at 350 to 545 1 at 200 to 500
War Department	1 at 1,000 to 1,250	— — — —	3 at 600 to 1,000	4 at 350 to 545
Colonial Office	1 at 1,000 —	1 at 1,000 — 1 at 800 —	5 at 600 to 1,000	5 at 350 to 545
Treasury (Principal)	4 at 1,100 to 1,500	1 at 600 to 800	7 at 600 to 800	15 at 300 to 500 1 at 350 to 450
Treasury (Chief)	2 at 1,000 —
Exchequer	1 at 800 to 900	1 at 500 to 550	1 at 500 to 550 1 at 300 to 400	2 at 200 to 300 1 at 200 to 250

Appendix, No. 12.

That under these special circumstances as regards the disadvantages they have laboured under from reduction in the office, slowness of promotion, and unusually low salaries, your petitioners humbly entreat that they may not at least have a further loss in their prospects inflicted upon them by a measure brought forward professedly to benefit the Civil Service, and to remedy acknowledged grievances.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

(signed) F. F. Ottey, Chief Clerk.
G. S. Frederick, Accountant.
E. Welch, 1st Clerk.
H. T. Woodfall, 2d ditto.
H. W. Chisholm, Senior Clerk, Exchequer Bill Department.
J. K. Blake, 1st Assistant ditto.
J. Bowen, Superintendent of Weights and Measures.

Exchequer, 5 March 1856.

RETURN of the Number of Royal Orders, Treasury Warrants, Letters of Direction, and Comptroller-general's Warrants, Specification Papers, and Acquittances received by or issued from the Exchequer in the year 1841; specifying the Value under each Head of Service, and distinguishing Great Britain from Ireland.

	GREAT BRITAIN.		IRELAND.
	Number.	Value.	Number.	Value.
		£.		£.
Royal Orders	111	40,601,000	27	396,000
Treasury Warrants	217	58,900,000	152	2,055,000
Letters of direction from the Treasury	1,101	40,794,000	362	2,267,000
Comptroller-general's warrants by credit or transfer (including 20,469,100 l. exchange of Exchequer Bills)	1,325	95,171,000	427	3,874,000
Specifications for revenue	1,720	73,781,000	—	—
Acquittances on receipt of revenue	908	73,781,000	335	3,967,000

Exchequer, 24 February 1842.

Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 12.

STATEMENT of ACCOUNTS made out Periodically in the Office of the Comptroller-general; viz.

	GREAT BRITAIN. Number.	IRELAND. Number.
Annual accounts to Parliament, showing the amount of all monies received, of all Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants, and of the credits and transfers, the payments by the Bank of England, and the balances remaining	2 (Und Kingdom.)
Annual accounts of imprest monies	2	–
" surplus fees	2	–
" hereditary revenues	2	–
" unclaimed dividends	2	–
" money paid by East India Company	2	–
Annual accounts to the Treasury of the receipts and expenditure, showing also the balances at the beginning and ending of the year (with six Appendices)	1 (Und Kingdom.)
Annual and quarterly accounts of revenue	4	4
Quarterly accounts of revenue	4	4
Weekly " "	208 (Und Kingdom.)
Weekly certificates	52 (Und Kingdom.)
Quarterly accounts of advances out of Consolidated Fund	4	4
" miscellaneous services	4	4
" imprest monies	4	4
" repayments of advances	4	4
" income and charge, Consolidated Fund	36	–
Annual account of increase and diminution of establishment	3	–
" estimate of salaries, &c.	2	–
Quarterly accounts to the Audit Office; viz.—
Payments into the Exchequer	4	4
Comptroller-general's credits and transfers	4	4

Exchequer, 24 February 1842.

Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

AN ACCOUNT of the Number of Credits, Acquittances, Irish Transfers, and Irish Acquittances, signed by the Comptroller-general and by the Assistant Comptroller of the Exchequer, in each Year from 1842; showing also the Number and Amount of all Exchequer Bills and Exchequer Bonds signed, and of all Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants controlled at the Exchequer in the same Periods.

YEAR.	Credits.	Acquittances.	Irish Transfers.	Irish Acquittances.	Royal Orders.		Treasury Warrants.		Exchequer Bills.		Exchequer Bonds.
					No.	Amount.	No.	Amount.	No.	Amount.	No.	Amount.
						£.		£.		£.		£.
1842	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	32,655	44,262,476	—	—
1843	1,279	1,000	429	313	–	–	–	–	32,113	48,296,657	—	—
1844	1,184	971	434	307	141	46,133,928	387	136,292,421	31,138	35,014,633	—	—
1845	1,143	988	392	294	139	36,965,765	383	108,937,056	30,724	26,593,975	—	—
1846	1,104	980	384	283	119	38,438,844	365	111,182,243	30,318	22,969,219	—	—
1847	1,183	977	405	287	144	31,755,959	389	87,706,125	29,799	22,273,400	—	—
1848	1,271	988	407	303	190	41,864,050	424	101,541,622	29,325	22,235,184	—	—
1849	1,280	1,049	425	399	130	38,793,634	393	92,584,626	29,067	19,016,285	—	—
1850	1,163	1,089	409	400	141	34,602,102	360	78,767,095	28,828	17,828,042	—	—
1851	1,155	1,098	376	392	124	46,020,801	315	111,180,990	28,948	19,224,791	—	—
1852	1,174	1,121	369	426	132	38,268,696	314	96,751,946	28,915	21,021,415	—	—
1853	1,160	1,146	381	413	126	40,815,256	317	114,858,202	28,514	25,089,754	524	408,900
1854	1,295	1,305	380	433	107	55,246,586	351	156,624,742	28,540	40,002,485	22,654	6,009,400
1855	1,455	1,228	427	384	214	91,811,111	369	178,981,985	32,444	31,825,117	—	—

Exchequer, 30 June 1856.

Appendix, No. 13.

Appendix, No. 13. PAPERS delivered in by the Right Honourable the Lord Monteagle of Brandon, 3 July 1856.

LIST OF BOOKS—EXCHEQUER.

Accountant.

Journal, Dr. and Cr., Weekly.—Dr. 1st. Balances brought forward.

2d. Abstract daily of revenue received during the week.

Cr. Entry of daily credits and transfers issued by the Comptroller-general to the Banks of England and Ireland, showing in detail the issues during the week, under each head of account, the ways and means applicable to them, and the balances at the close of the week at the respective banks.

Ledger.—Distinct accounts opened with Banks of England and Ireland, credits and transfers entered as they are granted and posted from the journal, daily payments as they are made from the Exchequer accounts at the Bank of England under each head of service.

Cash Book, Dr. and Cr.—Abstract from the journal of receipt and issues, in order to show readily from day to day the available balance of money.

Ways and Means, and Supply Book.—Account of the several amounts of ways and means granted by Acts of Parliament, and of all issues for supply services under votes of Parliament out of each grant, showing at all times the state of the balance on each grant.

Cash Papers.—Showing a weekly balance of the several funds at the Banks of England and Ireland, as appropriated at the Exchequer to their several periods quarterly, on the Consolidated Fund, Civil List, &c.

Consolidated Fund Charge, Great Britain.—Statement in detail of the charges made quarterly on the Consolidated Fund under Acts of Parliament.

Income and Expenditure Account, Dr. and Cr.—Statement of the income of Great Britain and Ireland under their respective heads of revenue for the year, made up at the termination of each quarter.

The issues for Consolidated Fund charges and supply services under their several heads with their total amount, shewing the excess either of income or expenditure.

Bank Balance Book.—Showing the state of the balances at the Bank of England at the commencement of the week on credits issued by the Comptroller-general, the credits issued within the week and the payments by the Bank of England, and the balances at the Bank of England on each particular account at the close of the week.

Weekly Certificate.—An account made up weekly and transmitted to the Treasury, of all receipts and issues during the week, with an abstract account showing the state of the balances on the several funds at the Banks of England and Ireland, as appropriated at the Exchequer.

Civil List Book.—An account of the amounts appropriated to each class quarterly of the Civil List, and of the issues on each class, showing the balances made up weekly.

Daily Receipt Book.—Shows at every opening columns for each day of the week, the items of receipt, being entered on the same line from day to day, and added together by cross casting, appear in the final column as the totals on each head, and supply the requisite information for preparing the income side of the weekly certificate to the Treasury, as also the amounts necessary for making up the weekly account book.

Weekly

Weekly Account Book.—Contains the amount in totals of each week's head of receipt, and its progressive increase throughout the quarter; from this book is prepared the account of revenue, showing the weekly and progressive amount of receipts.

Quarterly Account Book.—States the amount on each head of receipt brought to account during the quarter.

Yearly Account Book.—Shows at the termination of each quarter, the amount of the four quarterly totals of each head of receipt as above, producing the amount for the year stated in the annual account rendered to Parliament by Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, and in accounts transmitted to the Treasury quarterly.

Four similar books are kept for the Irish revenue.

Audit Account Book.—Shows an exact copy of each account of revenue, which is sent to the Audit-office, now monthly, under the direction of Treasury Minute of 25 September 1855, founded on the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 96. Previously to October 1855, the audit account was transmitted quarterly as directed by the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 23.

Irish Audit Account Book.—The account of revenue arising in Ireland, which is made up quarterly for the Commissioners of Audit.

Book of Entry of Specification Papers (now of Revenue Certificates and Receivable Orders, &c., substituted for them by Treasury Minute of 25 September 1855).—Contains day by day a detailed entry of each item of receipt, by whom paid in, on what account, &c., and is the record of all sums received into the Exchequer.

Account Book.—Shows quarterly the details of the amounts received on certain classes of payments into the Exchequer, viz.: "Repayments of Advances," Imprest Monies, &c., Surplus Fees, Hereditary Revenues, and other public monies; and up to 31st March 1854 supplied to the Treasury a portion of the annual finance accounts signed by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, and embodied in the yearly accounts presented to both Houses of Parliament pursuant to Acts 42 Geo. 3, c. 70, and 56 Geo. 3, c. 98. Quarterly statements of "Repayments of Advances," and "Imprest Monies, &c.," are prepared for the Treasury from this book.

Irish Account Book.—Answers a similar purpose.

Posting Book of Payments into the Exchequer.—Is of the nature of a ledger; from the daily receipt book is posted to it every item of receipt under its proper head of account, which, being added up at the end of each month and quarter, affords a ready means of preparing and checking the audit account.

Waste Supply Book.—Shows the date of every vote of money granted by Resolution of the House of Commons, the date of every Royal order for the issue of the same, the day on which each such Royal order is received at the Exchequer, and the date of its being issued upon for the first time.

Entry Book of Certificates: "Antigua, St. Kitts, Nevis, Dominica, and Montserrat Relief Fund," by Act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 63, &c.—Certificates given by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to parties having payments to make at the Bank of England on account of loans advanced under the Act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 63, &c., are required by the 8th section of the above Act, after payment has been made, to be brought to the Exchequer for entry in a book "provided and kept for that purpose," as a record of the fact.

Credit Book, Great Britain.—Full entry of daily issues, stating authorities by Royal order or Treasury warrant, by resolution of House of Commons or Act of Parliament, amount previously issued, and balance remaining, and the ways and means applicable. From this book the credits are posted into the Audit and Parliamentary Account Book, for the purpose of compiling those quarterly and annual accounts, as well as those to the Treasury.

Transfer Book, Ireland.—A similar book applicable to Ireland.

Royal Order and Treasury Warrant Book, Great Britain, Ireland.—For the entry of Royal orders and Treasury warrants acted on by the Exchequer.

Treasury Issuing Letter Book, Great Britain, Ireland.—Entry of the substance of directions for credits or transfers granted by the Exchequer.

Audit and Parliamentary Account Book, Great Britain, Ireland.—The credits and Bank payments thereout (for Great Britain), and transfers, Ireland, are posted into these books, and the Royal orders and Treasury warrants upon which they are founded. From these books are made up the credits and transfers accounts for the Audit-office, for the annual Parliamentary accounts, and for the quarterly Treasury accounts.

Audit Account Entry Book, Great Britain, Ireland.—For the entry of the quarterly accounts of credits and payments thereout, and of transfers rendered to the Audit-office.

Appendix, No. 13.

General Account Book.—For the entry of annual Parliamentary account, returns called for by Parliament, accounts rendered to the Treasury, &c.

Patent Book.—Authorities for charges on Consolidated Fund, appointments of Judges, and other public officers, &c.

Paymaster-General's Letter Book.—Stating the credits in his favour forwarded to the Bank.

Letter Book for other Accountants.—Of the like nature.

Weekly Revenue Account Book.—Comparative statement of revenue weekly and quarterly forwarded to the Treasury and to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Abstract ditto.—An abstract form of the above.

Minute Book.—Comptroller-general's orders respecting official arrangements.

Registry Book.—Brief statement of all incoming letters with reference to entries, &c.

Correspondence Book.—All correspondence on public business.

Attendance Book.—Each officer signs daily.

Waste Book.—Of credits, for the use of the chief clerk.

Exchequer Bill Issuing Department.

The following books are kept in this department:

Exchequer Bills:

Warrant Book.—In which are recorded all Treasury warrants, and all accounts relating to Exchequer bills.

Issuing Book.—On parchment, containing a record of every amount of Exchequer bills authorised to be made out; of the amounts apportioned to the several denominations of bills; of every issue of bills, showing the date, to whom issued, the amount and number of each denomination, with the numbers of the bills, the total amount issued, and remaining to be issued, also vouched by the signature of the officer who delivers the bills, and showing by whom the acknowledgment of the receipt of the bills is signed.

The six following books recording the preparation of Exchequer Bills, viz.:

Paper Book on Parchment.—A record of every order for the manufacture of Exchequer bill paper; its delivery to the Exchequer and at the printers; with the stock remaining in hand.

Printer's Order Book on Parchment.—A record of every order to print Exchequer bills; and of the execution of the order, attested by the Accountant's signature.

Printer's Book on Parchment.—A record of the quantity of paper delivered to the printer; of the quantity printed or unprinted in their hands at the close of each day; and of its delivery at the Exchequer. This book also contains a record of the steel dies, plates, &c., used for printing Exchequer bills.

Printed Paper Book on Parchment.—A record of all printed forms of Exchequer bills delivered at the Exchequer by the printers; of the number completed for issue; and the balance remaining in stock; and of the destruction of useless or cancelled printed forms.

Counterfoil and Register Book on Parchment.—A record of all counterfoils of Exchequer bills, as well as of registers or second counterfoils; showing at once in whose custody they have been placed from their original separation from the bills till they are destroyed, when no longer serviceable, under the authority of a Treasury warrant.

Signing Book on Vellum and in Duplicate.—A record made at the time of the signature of every Exchequer bill; showing the description of bills signed, and the date when signed; vouched by the signatures of the Comptroller-general or the Assistant Comptroller, by whom the bills are signed, of the Clerk of the Issuing-office in whose presence they are signed and to whom they are delivered, and of the Chief Clerk, who are jointly responsible for the custody of the bills until they are issued.

Weekly

Weekly Certificate Book.—Containing an entry of the account of Exchequer bills at the close of every week, transmitted to the Treasury. This account is continued in the same form as in the old Exchequer, and a copy of it will be seen appended to the Report on the Exchequer in 1831, page 111 (Appendix to Return, No. 2 F.) It shows the amount authorised to be raised under each Act, when payable, the rate of interest, with the total amount issued, and remaining to be issued; the amount outstanding at the close of the previous week, the amount issued in the week (the details of which are shown in an Appendix), the amount paid off in the week, and the balance outstanding at the close of the week. The amount paid off is ascertained by a certificate from the Paymaster-general's office, received weekly at the Exchequer, and which is preserved in the Paymaster's Certificate Book.

Comptroller's Delivery Warrant Book:

No. 1. For Deficiency Bills.

No. 2. For Supply Bills (including Consolidated Fund Bills).

This book contains an entry of every warrant, signed by the Comptroller-general or Assistant Comptroller, delivered with each issue of Exchequer bills. It is addressed to the person or persons to whom the bills are issued, and it recites the authority under which they are made out and issued, the service to which they are to be applied, and specifies the particulars of the bills.

Exchequer Bonds:

For the preparation and issue of Exchequer bonds, in pursuance of the Treasury warrant of 22d July 1853, and the Comptroller-general's Minute of 30th July following, similar books are kept to those in use for Exchequer bills. They are as follows:

Warrant and Issue Book,
Paper Book,
Printers' Book,
Printed Stock Book,
Counterfoil Book,
} On parchment.

Signing Book, on vellum.

The numerous letters and minutes required in the course of preparation both of Exchequer bills and Exchequer bonds, are entered in the General Correspondence Book and Minute Book of the Exchequer. The original letters received are preserved amongst the registered papers, an index of which, according to the date of their receipt, is kept in the registry book.

Weights and Measures Office.

List of Indentures containing Entries of the numbers of the Indentures, to whom granted, a description of the Weights and Measures, when they were taken in or received, names of the Places in which they are required for use.

Minutes of Verification.—Entries of the dates when the weights and measures are found correct.

General Register.—Entries of the numbers of indentures, date when executed, names of places, &c., names of persons (custody), and a description of the weights and measures.

Fee Book.—Entries of numbers of indentures, names of makers or agents, place, &c., and amount of fee paid.

Special Register.—Entries of verifications of the decimal troy weights (per 16 Vict., c. 29), with the particulars stated, as in the general register.

Waste Book.—Notes or minutes connected with the verification of the decimal weights.

Letter Book.—The correspondence is entered in the General Correspondence Books of the Comptroller-general.

Counterparts of the indentures of verification arranged in a rack, or pigeon-holes, according to their numbers.

Appendix, No. 13.

Mr. Masterman's Suggestions on altering system of exchanging Exchequer Bills, Mr. Anderson's Observations, and Comptroller-General's Report.

Chancellor of Exchequer to Comptroller-general, 17 May 1853.

Dear Lord Monteagle, Falconhurst, Kent, 17 May 1853.

Will you kindly look at the enclosed paper of suggestions by Mr. Masterman, and comments by Mr. Anderson, with respect to the presentation annually of Exchequer bills, and the payment of the interest upon them. It is not distinctly stated, but I conclude, as matter of course, that it is not meant to alter the maturity of the bills at 12 months. At your convenience you will perhaps kindly let me know in what light these suggestions strike you.

I am, &c.
(signed) W. E. Gladstone.

Exchequer Bills.

Mr. Masterman's Suggestions, with Observations thereon by Mr. Anderson.

1st. That the practice of annually exchanging Exchequer bills should be discontinued.

Observation.—The practice of calling in annually one set of Exchequer bills, for the purpose of issuing another set, similar in all respects but the date, appears to me to be a clumsy expedient, attended with unnecessary risk to the public, with inconvenience to the holders, and may, I think, be advantageously discontinued. The risk to the public consists in allowing the Pay-office to handle, every year, nearly 18,000,000 of old bills, and the same amount of new bills, all payable to the bearer. The inconvenience to the holders arises from their being deprived of their securities for at least a week on each of the two exchanges of Exchequer bills. When the business of paying off the Exchequer bills was transferred to this office, in 1848, I felt this detention of the bills to be so strong an objection, that I altered the whole system adopted by the late Exchequer Bill-office, and succeeded in reducing the period required for the exchange from a fortnight to a week.

The mode suggested by Mr. Masterman, of presenting the bills at the Pay-office on claiming the half-yearly interest, in order that the interest may be indorsed on the back of each bill, would continue the prominent defects of the present system, as to risk to the public, and inconvenience to the holders. I think both might be obviated by the following simple arrangement: the Exchequer bill might be prepared, say for five years or more, with 10 or more coupons attached to it, one of which might be cut off every half year, and be presented at the Pay-office for payment of the interest due. The holder might retain his security, and the Pay-office would have a voucher for the interest paid.

2d Suggestion.—That the interest of Exchequer bills should be paid half-yearly, instead of annually, as at present; and that the holders should be at liberty to present their bills for the payment of interest on any day after a full half year's interest had become due.

Observation.—I see no objection to the payment of the interest of Exchequer bills half yearly instead of annually, and the holders should, I think, be at liberty to present their bills (or their coupons) on any day after the interest had become payable.*

3d Suggestion.—That each half year's interest, when paid, should be indorsed on the back of each bill, and that the bill should be returned to the holder.

Observation.—The half-yearly interest might be indorsed, as suggested, on the back of each bill, but, for the reasons already given, the coupon would be a more desirable mode of settling the interest, and it would, moreover, provide a voucher, which would be entirely satisfactory to the Audit Board on the examination of the Paymaster-general's accounts.

30 April 1853. W. G. A.

Comptroller's Observations on Mr. Masterman's Suggestions and Mr. Anderson's Remarks, for altering present system of exchanging Exchequer Bills.

The suggestions of Mr. Masterman, and the observations of Mr. Anderson, rather treat of the mechanical mode of dealing with Exchequer bills than of the more important question of the principles on which an unfunded or floating debt depends; yet the former subject, as compared with the latter one, is but as the dust of the balance, nor can the two questions be separated in answering Mr. Gladstone's inquiries.

Both Mr. Masterman and Mr. Anderson seem to concur in an opinion, that the present system of an annual exchange of Exchequer bills should be discontinued; and Mr. Anderson suggests that the bills should be issued "for five years or more, with 10 or more certificates or coupons, for interest, attached to each." To me this appears one of the most formidable propositions that could be made, and one utterly subversive of the principles on which the unfunded debt of England has hitherto rested or ought to rest.

The

* From this it would appear that Mr. Anderson contemplated a payment on demand of all bills come to 12 months' maturity.—Monteagle.

The direct economical advantage of the use of Exchequer bills, in its simplest result, is the means which it affords to the State of borrowing a given sum at a much lower rate of interest than can be done by permanent annuities. At the present time, when the Three per cents. scarcely exceed par, the interest on Exchequer bills would appear to be no more than half that amount.

This, though the most evident advantage, is, however, one of the least recommendations of the system. In a country where above 50,000,000 l. annually are required for the public service, where the income in a succession of years cannot escape from vicissitudes, and where European politics or colonial exigencies abundantly prove that sudden and considerable demands on the Exchequer must be provided for, above all, when the principles on which the House of Commons has for many years acted forbid the expectation of any large and permanent excess of income over expenditure, an unfunded debt is a resource which is essential to the public credit and to the public service in all ways. It is thus that an unexpected emergency can best be met. That emergency past away or overcome, the debt it has occasioned may then be most easily provided for. Or even assuming the worst alternative, and supposing a necessity that such Exchequer bills should afterwards be funded, the temporary borrowing on bills may be, in a time of peril, at a high rate of interest, paid for a short time, whilst the period of funding may be wisely selected when the market is favourable. In the first hypothesis the increase of the funded debt is altogether avoided; in the second, its permanent burthen is reduced to its lowest term.

But these advantages can only be secured by a judicious administration of that part of our financial system which requires the greatest discretion and caution.

The Exchequer bill market is of all others the most sensitive; the present amount of 18,000,000 l. is probably at the command of less than 400 holders. It offers the most immediate resource in times of exigency, both as an article of sale and of pledge for loans. The Exchequer bills are also used by the Bank in acting on the circulation and the exchanges, and any step taken by the Government that can throw a disfavour or discredit on these securities will be fatal to their use when most required.

It is probably from this cause that Parliament has intrusted the Treasury, in relation to these securities alone, with the extraordinary power of raising the interest to the extent of threefold its present amount; this power is exercised even during the continuance of existing contracts between the State and the public creditor. The absolute necessity of keeping up the buoyancy of these securities can alone justify so extraordinary a power.

It is from the same reason that it has been the uniform policy of successive Governments to avoid any excess of issue. When the present amount of the unfunded debt is compared with the Exchequer bills, the Navy bills, the Sugar bills, &c., during the war, it is only wonderful how, even during a Bank suspension, so vast an amount of bills could have been accepted by the public and maintained in circulation. From these dangers the State has now escaped, but it should be remembered to what we have owed and still owe our safety.

Convertibility, certain and at a time fixed, is our first and best security. An Exchequer bill is but the promissory note of the State at 12 months, then payable in gold at 3 l. 17 s. 10½ d. the ounce, to the value of the security held. A further safeguard is provided by making Exchequer bills receivable in taxes when come to maturity. These principles were carried still further a century and a half back, and considering that the denomination of Exchequer bills issued was then as low as 20 l., 10 l., and 5 l., the precaution was necessary. The original Exchequer bills of Charles Montagu (Halifax), were in the reign of William 3, made payable on demand, the convertibility being thus immediate.

The annual presentation of the bills for payment is the inevitable incident of a twelvemonth's security. The acceptance of new bills, as an alternative, at the holder's option, constitutes a wholly new contract, which the State has the power of rendering more acceptable to the holders, or more advantageous to the public, by raising or lowering the interest, by funding, or by paying off.

The facility which the State possesses by law of buying Exchequer bills out of sinking fund monies, and of funding those bills according to the past average state of the market, may often be of the highest importance, and should not be overlooked.

I have dwelt on these considerations because, if they are entitled to weight, the proposal of substituting for securities payable annually bills that would run "for five years or more" would seem wholly indefensible.

I doubt whether 100 l. of the present Exchequer bills would be exchanged for such securities, except at a difference of interest entailing a heavy loss to the public.

I doubt whether a substitution of securities payable in five years, in place of 12 months, would not be felt as a serious blow to public credit. If in the course of a branch of trade, the ordinary rule of payment has been by 31 day bills, a proposal to substitute bills at 91 days, or six months, would be fatal to the merchant who proposed it.

I feel satisfied that securities at so long a date as five years would fail in affording the relief and confidence to mercantile credit in time of exigency which is now afforded by an Exchequer bill; neither do I apprehend that such securities would be available to the Bank in times of adverse exchanges, but would rather lie on hand, like the dead weight annuity under similar circumstances.

The yearly presentation of the bills constitutes the outward and visible proof of their convertibility. A postponement for five years would give a formidable shock to opinion. If, indeed, it is intended, though not expressed, that at any period within the five years money may still be demanded, I apprehend much uncertainty and irregularity would be the inevitable result to the Government.

Appendix, No. 13.

The inconvenience to the holders of parting with their securities for a few days, cannot be held of any importance when the premium at which these bills circulate is considered, so long as their amount is kept within due bounds, and the interest is not depressed unnaturally as compared with the state of the money market.

The expediency of issuing coupons for interest for "five years or more" need not be discussed, if the preceding observations have shown the danger of issuing securities at so long a date; besides which, as such coupons would require to be filled up when issued, it would be somewhat difficult to provide for possible variations of interest. Mr. Masterman's proposal to indorse the receipt of interest on the bill itself, though the original practice in the reign of William the Third, would seem to unite every possible disadvantage. The holder would still have to part with his security for a shorter or a longer time, and the uncertainty of the times at which these demands for interest might be made could hardly fail to be inconvenient and perplexing to the Government.

At present, at the exchange, an issue is made to the Paymaster-general for payment of interest. If these demands came in occasionally, it would be a temptation to resort to a practice which I consider equally contrary to law and to the constitution; the payment of expenditure in any branch out of any funds but those specially appropriated, and issued for such head of service from the Exchequer.

The recommendation of half-yearly payments of interest seems to me disposed of by the rate of premium which these securities bear, under all ordinary circumstances, in the market. Whilst I consider it fatal to take any step unnecessarily to depress these securities in the public market, I see no necessity for introducing a practice, hitherto unknown and uncalled for, adding to their value.

In a former part of this paper I omitted to state that Mr. Masterman's proposal of the receipt of interest on the back of the bill would either render a second separate voucher necessary for the one payment, or would prevent the possibility of closing the Paymaster's accounts till the bill itself was delivered up and cancelled.

The observations of Mr. Anderson call the Chancellor of the Exchequer's attention to the risk attendant on the manipulation of 18,000,000 l. of securities, complete in all respects, and payable to bearer. From the precautions I have felt it indispensable to adopt at the Exchequer in the preparation of these bills whilst in an incomplete state, and before they can pass into circulation, I conceive the risk at the Pay-office to be infinitely greater than mine; but I am not aware of the precautionary measures adopted in that department, though I fully assent to the extreme importance of the question raised.

For the reasons I have given, as well as many more that could be added, I dissent altogether from either of the proposals submitted to my consideration.

(signed) Monteagle,
Comptroller-general.

Roehampton, 21 May 1853.

My dear Lord, Downing-street, 21 May 1853.

I THANK you very much for your Memorandum on Mr. Masterman's and Mr. Anderson's suggestions. Would you kindly send me back the paper to which it refers?

I found the ambiguity to which you refer in Mr. Anderson's statement of his meaning; but I assumed his intention to be, that the bill should be capable of presentation for payment at the expiration of each 12 months, as now, but should run on from one yearly period to another, in the event of not being so presented.

This, I think, is a construction to which you have not adverted. I at once and entirely agree with you in repudiating either the change of the 12 months' into a five years' bill, or the notion of making the bills presentable for payment at any moment between the end of the first year and that of the fifth; but I doubt whether Mr. Anderson meant to make either of these suggestions.

I do not think I understand the application of the underlined passage in your memorandum to the subject of the payment of Exchequer bills.

Believe me, &c.
(signed) W. E. Gladstone.

The Lord Monteagle.

Comptroller-general to Chancellor of Exchequer.

My dear Sir, Exchequer, 23 May 1853.

I RETURN the paper of observations as you wish.

Your construction of Mr. Anderson's meaning is much more rational than either of the other alternatives, but it is not patent from the memorandum itself.

My underlined passage opens a question of the greatest importance, but I reserve it till you are free from your budget discussions, when I shall be prepared to bring before you one of the most important questions connected with the practical administration of our finances which you can be called upon to consider.

(signed) Monteagle.

The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone,
&c. &c.

P.S.—If you refer to a passage in Mr. Anderson's letter, in which he states that the "holders should be at liberty to present their bills on any day after the interest had become payable," you will see that he seems to exclude your hypothesis of a payment at fixed annual periods only.

DELAYS IN PAYMENTS MADE THROUGH PAYMASTER-GENERAL.

OBSERVATIONS on some of the PAYMENTS included in the sum of £. 187,445. 18. 3., placed to the Account of Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, by the Paymaster-general, on 24 December 1855.

STATEMENT of the Paymaster-General.	OBSERVATIONS.
Fees and fines received at the Metropolitan Police Courts, per Acts 2 & 3 Vict., c. 71, and 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94.	A Treasury letter, dated 12 January 1855, states "that the Paymaster-general has "been instructed to pay to the Exchequer "Account at the Bank of England, "Quarterly, the Fees, Fines, &c., of Police "Courts, received under the provisions of "the Act 2 & 3 Vict., c. 71." The only previous payment was made by the Paymaster-general, on 3 April 1855, part of which was described as being for the quarter ended 31 March 1855, since which period it will be seen more than eight months have elapsed; and the third sum appears to be only in part payment of the quarter for which it is due.

In quarter ended	£.	s.	d.
31 March 1855 - - -	2,684	18	9
30 June „ - - -	2,789	7	5
30 Sept. „ (in part) -	61	9	1
	£. 5,535	15	3

The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer.—N. B. viz., Collection of Fee Fund, Court of Session.

	£.	s.	d.
Quarter 31 August 1855 -	1,344	–	–
Lord Clerk Register, 30 June 1855 - -	1,114	6	4
Keeper of the Signet, 30 June 1855 - -	65	4	7
Keeper of the Register of Seisins, 30 June 1855 -	2,021	15	6
Director of Chancery, 30 June 1855 - -	698	10	3

per Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 64.

The previous payments on these accounts were made since the passing of the Act 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94, under the provisions of that Act, in addition to those of the 57 Geo. 3, c. 64, (and with the exception of five of the same kind by the Paymaster-general, on 1 October 1855,) direct to the Exchequer Account, by the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer.

N. B. In the present instance the latter Act is omitted.

For contributions towards salaries of official referees, under Acts 7 & 8 Vict., c. 84, and 9 Vict., c. 5, per J. Mercer, Treasurer of Kent, from December 1853 to 30 June 1855, 120 l.

All former payments of this description, viz., by the Treasurer of Middlesex, Treasurer of Surrey, and the Chamberlain of the City of London, were made by the parties from whom such contributions are due, direct to the Exchequer Account, at the Bank of England, under the provisions of the Act 9 Vict., c. 5, s. 6; this transfer of account was not announced to the Comptroller-general, and in passing this sum through the books of the Paymaster-general, the Treasury appear to have speedily abandoned their intentions announced by the Minute of 25 September 1855, which assumed that "Receivable Orders" would be given to those parties who had formerly made payments on Specification Papers.

Appendix, No. 13.

Statement of the Paymaster-general.	Observations.
Gross revenue of the "London Gazette," from 23 June to 23 November 1855, 6,354 l. 1 s. 5 d.	Till the death of Mr. Watts, late superintendent of the "London Gazette," the payments were made by him direct to the Exchequer Account; by Treasury letter, dated 20 September 1854, the Exchequer was informed that the Paymaster-general "had been instructed to make the payments "on account of the 'London Gazette,' "at the close of each month, to the account "of the Comptroller-general of the Ex-"chequer;" the last previous payment was made on 12 July 1855, as the receipts of the preceding month, from which it may be seen that the instructions on this subject had been neglected for more than eight months.
Holyhead Roads. Interest of Loans, viz., Shrewsbury and Holyhead Roads, viz., St. Albans and South Mimms Trust Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 100.	It should be stated that these payments are made on behalf of the Commissioners of Works, &c., as directed by Treasury letter of 6 September 1853.
	In these cases there is no statement that they are made on behalf of the Commissioners of Works.
	Under the system of receivable order, the Comptroller-general had no power of raising this objection.

	£.	s.	d.
Loan of 4,000 l., in part of principal	81	13	3
Interest of 446 l. 19 s. 8 d., balance of principal to 6 October 1855	9	2	–
	90	15	3
Interest on account of loan of 14,000 l., 7 Geo. 4, c. 76	51	13	9
	142	9	–
Shifnal District, on account of interest of loan of 5,500 l., per Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 75	200	–	–
	£. 342	9	–

Rebuilding London Bridge, 7 Geo. 4, c. 40; Chamberlain of the City of London; interest on loan of 146,000 l., half year, to 10 October, 2,725 l. 6 s. 8 d.

(Information which has lately reached this department, shows that the above sum of 2,725 l. 6 s. 8 d., received and reported by the Paymaster-general, as London Bridge Repayments, per Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 40, should have been stated as "London Bridge Ap-"proaches Fund," per Act 16 Vict., c. 18. Also, that the sum of 6,000 l. had been paid to the Paymaster-general, on 3 December 1855, but not carried to the Account of the Exchequer till 12 March 1856, more than three months after.)

The payment of this sum, 2,725 l. 6 s. 8 d., appears to be altogether erroneous and irregular; under an arrangement sanctioned by the Treasury in February 1835, for the payment of all such sums becoming due on bonds (at different dates throughout the year) within the current quarter, to be made on the first day of March, June, September, and December in every year, the whole sums due up to 8 October 1855 had been received into the Exchequer, and no such money could be payable into this office at the date referred to. A sum of 6,000 l., under the arrangement above-mentioned, would be due on 1 December 1855, but has not reached the Exchequer at the date of this memorandum. All payments by the Chamberlain of the City of London, previous to 1 October 1855, were made direct to the Exchequer Account.

	£.	s.	d.
Metropolis Improvements, 16 Vict., c. 18	1,610	4	9
Ditto, London Bridge Approaches Fund, 16 Vict., c. 18	33,041	10	6
Metropolis Interments: Brompton Cemetery, 14 & 15 Vict., c. 89, and 15 & 16 Vict., c. 85	4,000	–	–

– – All these payments should be stated to be made on behalf of the Commissioners of Works, &c. as above.

Assuming

Appendix, No. 13.

Assuming on the one hand that the sums specified in the Paymaster-general's Statement of 24 December 1855 (a copy of which is appended hereto, No. 1), were all the monies then in his hands directed by the Treasury to be paid over to the Exchequer Account, it would appear that several periodical receipts had not been tendered with their accustomed regularity; on the other hand, it may be presumed from the usual punctuality with which they have heretofore generally been paid to the Exchequer Account (by means of Specification Papers), some unexplained delay has occurred in their transit to the Comptroller-general's account at the Bank, contrary to the principle intended to be enforced by the reconstruction of this department in 1834; when one of the great advantages expected to be gained, was a more sure and speedy receipt of all monies composing the Public Revenue. Some of the payments that appear to have been interrupted in their progress to the Exchequer are those made by

The Accountant of the Copyhold, &c. Commission, formerly brought to account monthly under Treasury directions; last payment 20 October 1855, for the month of September.

The Secretaries of Presentations, and of Commissions to the Lord Chancellor; fees to be paid by them into the Exchequer half-yearly, by 25 section of Act 15 & 16 Vict., c. 87; last payments in April 1855.

The Secretary, &c. of the Public Record Office. Fees directed by the Act 1 & 2 Vict., c. 94, s. 10, to be paid monthly to the credit of the Exchequer; last payment 4 October 1855, for September previous.

The Treasurer of Middlesex - -
The Treasurer of Surrey - - -
The Treasurer of Kent - - -
The Chamberlain of the City of London - - - - - -

Half-yearly payments, due June and December, under the Act 9 Vict., c. 5, s. 6; last received, for June 1855.

The "London Gazette" receipts, noticed above.

Exchequer, 1 March 1856.

The Statement of the Particulars of the Sum of £. 207,773. 1. 1. paid over to the Account of Her Majesty's Exchequer, by the Paymaster-general, on 12 March 1856, confirms, in a great measure, the correctness of the foregoing Observations, inasmuch as there appear in detail payments on all the accounts adverted to, viz.:

	£.	s.	d.
Accountant to the Copyhold, &c. Commission; sums received in quarter to 31 December 1855 - - - - - - - - - - - -	522	6	–
Secretary of Presentations - - To the Lord Chancellor; fees to 10 October 1855	187	19	–
Secretary of Commissions - - To the Lord Chancellor; fees to 10 October 1855	211	14	5
Secretary of Public Record Office, &c.: fees for the quarter, to 31 December 1855 - - - - - - - - - - - - -	115	3	6
The Treasurer of Middlesex - Contributions to salaries of official referees, &c. under the Act 9 Vict., c. 5, s. 6; half-yearly payments, due December 1855	500	–	–
The Treasurer of Surrey - Contributions to salaries of official referees, &c. under the Act 9 Vict., c. 5, s. 6; half-yearly payments, due December 1855	160	–	–
The Treasurer of Kent - - Contributions to salaries of official referees, &c. under the Act 9 Vict., c. 5, s. 6; half-yearly payments, due December 1855	40	–	–
The Chamberlain of City of London - - - - Contributions to salaries of official referees, &c. under the Act 9 Vict., c. 5, s. 6; half-yearly payments, due December 1855	50	–	–
The "London Gazette" receipts, from 24 November 1855 to 19 February 1856	4,211	11	9
The Chamberlain of the City of London; rebuilding London Bridge, per Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 40, due first week in December 1855 - - - - -	6,000	–	–
This sum of 6,000 l. had been paid to the account of the Paymaster-general, on 3 December 1855, but not carried to the Exchequer Account till 12 March 1856.
Fees received, per H. Knyvett, chief clerk, Home-office, quarter to 31 December 1855 - - - - - - - - - - - -	280	11	–
Fees received upon Irish Instruments, &c. quarter to 31 December 1855 -	4	14	6
Per Secretary of National Gallery, received for Catalogues, 13 August to 30 September 1855 - - - - - - - - - - - -	23	13	7

A Copy of the Statement above referred to is appended, No. 2.

Appendix, No. 13.

No. 1.

PARTICULARS of the SUM of £. 187,445. 18. 3. Paid over by the Paymaster-General to the Account of Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, on the 24th December 1855.

	£.	s.	d.
SURPLUS FEES of PUBLIC OFFICES:
Fees and fines received at the Metropolitan Police Courts, per Acts 2 & 3 Vict., c. 71, and 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94:
In quarter ended 31 March 1855	2,684	18	9
„ 30 June 1855	2,789	7	5
„ 30 September 1855 (in part)	61	9	1
	5,535	15	3
Fees received on Licenses granted by Lunacy Commissioners, per Acts 8 & 9 Vict., c 100, and 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94,—Half-year to 30 June 1855	286	–	–
Fees on Weights and Measures received at Her Majesty's Exchequer from 10 October 1852 to 30 June 1855	170	4	–
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B.; viz.,—
Collection of Fee Fund, Court of Session, quarter 31 August 1855	1,344	–	–
Lord Clerk Register „ 30 June 1855	1,114	6	4
Keeper of the Signet „ 30 June 1855	65	4	7
Keeper of the Register of Seisins „ 30 June 1855	2,021	15	6
Director of Chancery „ 30 June 1855	698	10	3
HEREDITARY REVENUES:
Fines and forfeitures of Justiciary and Sheriffs Courts, for the half-year to 31 August 1855	552	7	10
SURPLUS FEES of PUBLIC OFFICES:
Salaries formerly payable to officers of the late Marshalsea, for the quarter to 30 September 1855, per Act 5 Vict., sess. 2, c. 22	153	15	–
For contributions towards salaries of Official Referees, under Acts 7 & 8 Vict., c. 84, and 9 Vict., c. 5, per J. Mercer, Treasurer for Kent, from December 1853 to 30 June 1855	120	–	–
IMPREST and other MONIES:	£.	s.	d.
Army extra receipts - for quarter to 30 Sept. 1855	13,709	7	10
Navy old store and extra receipts „ 30 Sept. 1855	52,049	17	2
Ordnance extra receipts „ 30 Sept. 1855	27,031	–	2
				92,790 5 2
Extra receipts and value of the productive labour of prisoners in Convict Establishments at Home, for year ended 31 March 1855	17,581	1	3
By Commissioners of Works, &c.; viz.—
Proceeds of sale of old public building materials, per Act 14 & 15 Vict., c. 42, year ended 31 March 1855	1,187	18	3
Proceeds of sale of old materials from the Houses of Parliament, per Act 14 & 15 Vict., c. 42, year ended 31 March 1855	307	5	4
Royal Parks, grazing rents, &c., year ended 31 March 1855	6,693	18	11
Sums received for leases, &c., year ended 31 March 1855	690	10	5
Gain by exchange and per-centage received on Paymaster-General's payments at Hanover, 1 July to 31 October 1855	209	15	4
General Board of Health, expenses of preliminary inquiries, repaid per 11 & 12 Vict., c. 63, s. 11	1,133	16	9
				27,804 6 3
Carried forward £.				182,656 10 2

Appendix, No. 13.

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Brought forward - - - £.				132,656	10	2
Imprest and other Monies—continued:
Gross Revenue of the "London Gazette" from 23 June to 23 November 1855 - - - - - - - - - - - - - -				6,354	1	5
Superannuation Fund Abatements, under Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24:
From Salaries of the Civil Departments, quarter 30 September 1855; viz.—
Army - - - - - - - - - - -	334	16	2
Navy - - - - - - - - - - -	1,531	8	4
Ordnance - - - - - - - - - -	1,188	8	11
Commissariat - - - - - - - - - -	33	15	–
Miscellaneous Civil Services - - - - - -	2,962	12	6
				6,051	–	11
Surplus Balance of Vote, New Houses of Parliament, 1853–4 - - -				1	1	10
Debt due to the Public by Lieutenant Morgan, R. M., as Colonial Storekeeper in Western Australia, retained from arrears of half-pay due to him - - - - - - - - - - - - - -				620	19	8
Repayment of Advances:
Holyhead Roads, Interest of Loans; viz.:
Shrewsbury and Holyhead Roads; viz.—
	£.	s.	d.
St. Albans and South Mimms Trust Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 100, Loan of 4,000 l. in part of principal - -	81	13	3
Interest of 446 l. 9 s. 8 d., balance of principal to 6 October 1855 - - - - - - - -	9	2	–
	90	15	3
Interest on account of loan of 14,000 l., per Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 76 - - - - - - - -	51	13	9
	142	9	–
Shifnal District: on account of interest of loan of 5,500 l., per Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 75 - - - -	200	–	–
	342	9	–
Rebuilding London Bridge, 7 Geo. 4, c. 40, viz.—
Chamberlain of the city of London, interest on loan of 146,000 l., half-year to 10 October 1855 - -	2,725	6	8
Metropolis Improvements,—
Balance of rents for quarter to 30 September 1855, per Act 16 Vict., c. 18 - - - - - - -	1,610	4	9
Surplus of London Bridge Approaches Fund, quarter to 10 October 1855, per Act 16 Vict., c. 18 - -	33,041	10	6
Metropolis Interments,—
Brompton Cemetery, in part of cash balance, per Acts 14 & 15 Vict., c. 89, and 15 & 16 Vict., c. 85 -	4,000	–	–
Glasgow and Carlisle Roads,—
One year's net rent of the Inn at Beatock, to 15 May 1855, per Act 56 Geo. 3, c. 83 - - - -	42	13	4
				41,762	4	3
Total - - - £.				187,445	18	3

No. 2.

PARTICULARS of the SUM of £. 207,773. 1. 1. paid over by the Paymaster-General to the Account of Her Majesty's Exchequer on the 12th day of March 1856.

	£.	s.	d.
1. HEREDITARY REVENUES:
Fines and Forfeitures of Justiciary and Sheriffs Courts, from 31st August to 13th December 1855	161	12	5
2. SURPLUS FEES of PUBLIC OFFICES:
Fees, fines, and penalties received at the Metropolitan Police Courts in the quarter ended 30th September 1855, per Acts 2 & 3 Vict., c. 71, and 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94	2,898	5	11
Fees received per P. H. Pepys, as Secretary of Presentations to the Lord Chancellor, from the 6th April to the 10th October 1855, per Act 15 & 16 Vict., c. 87.	187	19	–
Ditto, as Clerk and Deputy Clerk of ditto, from the 22d May to 10 October 1855, per Act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 84	77	14	6
Ditto, per N. S. Senior, Secretary of Commissions to the Lord Chancellor, from 5 April to 10 October 1855, per Act 15 & 16 Vict., c. 87	211	14	5
Fees received on Licenses granted by Lunacy Commissioners, per Acts 8 & 9 Vict., c. 100, and 17 & 18 Vict., c. 94; half-year to 31st December 1855	877	17	6
Fees on Weights and Measures received at Her Majesty's Exchequer in the quarter to 30th September 1855	9	18	6
The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, N. B.; viz.—
Fees drawn by Sheriffs' Clerks, half-year to 30th September 1855, per Act 1 & 2 Vict., c. 119	3,301	17	10
Fee Fund Court of Session, quarter to 30th November 1855, per Act 50 Geo. 3, c. 112	874	9	10
Keeper of Register of Hornings, half-year to 30th September 1855 (Per Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 64)	709	7	7
Keeper of the Signet, quarter to 30th September 1855 (Per Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 64)	895	10	–
Keeper of Register of Seisins, quarter to 30th September 1855 (Per Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 64)	1,968	5	–
Director of Chancery, quarter to 30th September 1855 (Per Act 57 Geo. 3, c. 64)	398	15	7
	8,148	5	10
Salaries formerly payable to Officers of the late Marshalsea, for the quarter to 31st December 1855, per Act 5 Vict., sess. 2, c. 22	153	15	–
Contributions towards Salaries of Official Referees, under Act 7 & 8 Vict., c. 84, and 9 Vict., c. 5; viz.:
Per C. P. Allen, Treasurer of Middlesex, half-year to 31st December 1855	500	–	–
Per E. Kerrick, Treasurer of Surrey, half-year to 31st December 1855	160	–	–
Per Chamberlain of the City of London, half-year to 31st December 1855	50	–	–
Per J. Mercer, Treasurer of Kent, half-year to 31st December 1855	40	–	–
	750	–	–
Fees received per Registrar-General of Births, &c., quarter to 31st December 1855, per Act 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, 80 l. 1 s.; per Act 3 & 4 Vict., c. 92, 48 l. 4 s. 6 d.	128	5	6
Fees received per S. Thomas, Secretary Public Record Office, quarter to 31st December 1855, per Act 1 & 2 Vict., c. 94	115	3	6
Fees received per P. Smith, Chief Clerk Colonial Office, in January 1856	7	13	6
Fees received per H. Knyvett, Chief Clerk Home Office, quarter to 31st December 1855	280	11	–
Fees received per H. Knyvett, Chief Clerk Home Office, upon Irish Instruments, &c., quarter to 31st December 1855	4	14	6
Carried forward £.	14,013	11	1

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Brought forward - - -				14,013	11	1
3. IMPREST and other MONIES:
Army Extra Receipts for quarter to 31st December 1855	349	19	3
Navy Old Store and extra Receipts for quarter to 31st December 1855 - - - - - - - -	65,671	13	7
Ordnance extra Receipts for quarter to 31st Dec. 1855	71,999	17	9
				138,021	10	7
Per Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, Scotland, earnings of convicts in the General Prison of Perth, from 1st April to 31st Dec. 1855				443	9	11
Per Secretary of the National Gallery, received for Catalogues, 13th August to 30th September 1855 - - - - - - - - -				23	13	7
Per George Taylor, Accountant to Copyhold Inclosure and Tithe Commission, received for searches, extracts, and tracings, quarter to 31 Dec. 1855				522	6	–
Per F. S. Thomas, Secretary of Record Office, for publications in 1855 -				78	7	–
Per F. M'Gedy, Gross Revenue of "London Gazette" from 24th November 1855 to 19th February 1856 - - - - - - - - -				4,211	11	9
General Board of Health, Expenses of preliminary Inquiries repaid, per Act 11 & 12 Vict., c. 63, s. 11 - - - - - - - - -				1,284	9	3
Superannuation Fund Abatements, under Act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24, viz.:
From Salaries of the Civil Departments, Army - -	314	3	2
" " " Navy - -	1,432	19	2
" " " Ordnance -	1,342	16	5
" " " Commissariat	39	18	5
" " Miscellaneous Civil Services	3,258	10	–
				6,388	7	2
Gain by exchange and per-centage received on the Paymaster-General's payments at Hanover, in December 1855 and January 1856 - -				170	8	4
				165,157	14	8
4. REPAYMENTS of ADVANCES:
Interest on advances for re-building London-bridge, per Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 40:
On 40,000 l. due 26th October 1855 - - - -	1,000	–	–
" 30,000 l. due 8th November 1855 - - -	750	–	–
" 40,000 l. due 29th November 1855 - - -	1,000	–	–
" 50,000 l. due 3d December 1855 - - - -	1,250	–	–
" 30,000 l. due 21st December 1855 - - -	750	–	–
" 50,000 l. due 3d January 1856 - - - -	1,250	–	–
Per Chamberlain of London - - -	6,000	–	–
Metropolis Improvements, surplus of London-bridge Approaches Fund, quarter to 5th January 1856, per Act 16 Vict. c. 18 - - - - - - -	35,899	4	10
Metropolis Improvements, Rents for quarter to 31st December 1855, per Act 16 Vict. c. 18 - - -	450	14	1
Holyhead Roads: Principal and Interest of Loans, viz.:
Stratford and Dunchurch Trust: Principal - - - - - - £. 241	4	7
" Interest from 3d January to 28th December 1855 - - - - 24	2	11
(per Act 7 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 44)	265	7	6
				42,615	6	5
TOTAL - - - £.				207,773	1	1

Appendix, No. 14.

A RETURN, from the 1st of April 1854 to the 1st of April 1856, of ADVANCES made for any Services not Voted by Parliament or Sanctioned by Statute, stating Date of such Advances, Purpose, from what Funds Advanced, and when Repaid.

SERVICE.	DATE.	PURPOSE.	AMOUNT.	From what Funds Advanced.	WHEN REPAID.
			£. s. d.
Foreign Department -	18 April to 6 June 1854 -	Salaries, &c. -	3,135 12 5	General balance	20 June 1854 From the Grant for 1854-5.
Ditto - - -	7 April to 23 May 1855	- ditto -	11,157 1 7	- - ditto -	14 June 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Lord Privy Seal - -	4 April to 4 May 1854 -	- ditto -	114 6 4	- - ditto -	26 June 1854 - ditto - ditto 1854-5.
Ditto - - - -	7 April to 30 April 1855	- ditto -	89 6 4	- - ditto -	23 June 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Commissioners of Works	19 April to 9 June 1855 -	- ditto -	943 - 5	- - ditto -	30 June 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Printing and Stationery	2 Feb. to 31 Mar. 1856 -	Paper for cartridges.	36,063 1 6	- - ditto -	31 April 1856 - ditto - ditto 1856-7.
Law Charges, &c., Treasury.	13 Jan. to 31 Mar. 1855 -	Prosecutions -	5,103 1 5	Civil Contingencies and general balance.	4,644 l. 3 s. 7 d. of this amount was advanced from Civil Contingencies, and the whole repaid on the 26th of June 1855 from the grant for law charges for 1855-6.
Ditto - - -	2 April to 26 May 1855	- ditto -	4,973 16 8	General balance	26 June 1855 From the Grant for 1855-6.
Scientific Works - -	30 Nov. 1854 to 31 July 1855.	Expenses -	1,138 8 -	- - ditto -	20 Aug. 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Consuls Abroad - -	5 May to 18 July 1854 -	Salaries and expenses.	16,485 10 9	- - ditto -	19 July 1854 - ditto - ditto 1854-5.
Ditto - - -	3 May to 18 July 1855 -	- ditto -	17,923 19 3	- - ditto -	19 July 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Ministers Abroad -	6 April to 19 June 1854	Extraordinary expenses.	7,162 12 3	- - ditto -	19 July 1854 - ditto - ditto 1854-5.
Ditto - - -	4 April to 22 July 1855	- ditto -	3,500 18 -	- - ditto -	28 July 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Ditto - - -	25 Feb. to 26 Mar. 1856 -	- ditto -	2,035 5 2	- - ditto -	28 May 1856 - ditto - ditto 1856-7.
Labuan - - -	1 April 1854 to 4 April 1855.	Expenses -	1,564 1 7 (including 564 l. 1 s. 7 d. prior to April 1854).	- - ditto -	- - - Not yet repaid.
General Board of Health	2 April to 11 Aug. 1855	- ditto -	2,991 6 6	- - ditto -	13 Aug. 1855 From the Grant for 1855-6.
Charity Commission -	4 April to 21 July 1855	Salaries and expenses.	2,968 5 6	- - ditto -	13 Aug. 1855 - ditto - ditto 1855-6.
Legal Charges, &c., formerly charged on the Consolidated Fund, but now a voted Service.	23 May and 26 July 1855	- ditto -	33,594 7 7	- - ditto -	31 July 1855 From the Grant for Constabulary, Ireland, for 1855-6.
Miscellaneous Charges, formerly charged on the Consolidated Fund, but now a voted Service.	12 June to 17 Oct. 1855 -	Miscellaneous	8,589 8 10	- - ditto -	31 Oct. 1855 From the Grant for Reciprocity Dues, for 1855-6.

Note.—The whole of these advances might have been made from Civil Contingencies, the available balance on that account having been at all times sufficient for the purpose.

As regards the great Services, there was only one case wherein it was found necessary to anticipate a Supplementary Grant. In 1855-6, before the Expenditure of the Ordnance and War Offices was combined in the same Estimate, the interchange of duties between the two Departments, and the consequent intermixture of funds, made it so difficult to say how far the short-coming of the Ordnance might not have been caused by the amalgamation then in operation, that it was thought right to have temporary recourse to Army Funds to carry on the service of the Ordnance from the 19th February 1856, until the amount of the Supplementary Estimate for 1,346,023 l., presented to The House on the 8th February 1856, should be Voted. The amount advanced, viz., 832,936 l. 17 s., was repaid on the 11th March 1856.

ADVANCES for SERVICES for which no WAYS and MEANS have been provided, stating Date of such Advance, Purpose, from what Funds advanced, and when repaid.

Except in so far as the foregoing cases of overdrawn accounts may be considered as coming within this category, the Pay Office has no knowledge of this having been done.

ADVANCES for SERVICES for which no ROYAL ORDER or TREASURY WARRANT has been issued, stating Date of such Advance, Purpose, from what Funds advanced, and when repaid.

Same observation as above.

Paymaster-General's Office,
4 July 1856.

Appendix, No. 15.

ACCOUNT of the CASH BALANCES at the Credit of the several VOTES of Parliament, and other Accounts in the Paymaster-general's Books, on the 31st March 1856.

		OVERDRAWN.	IN CREDIT.
		£. s. d.	£. s. d.
CIVIL LIST	Class I. Privy Purse	—	—
	Class II. Household Account. Salaries, &c., Officers of State, &c.	- - -	7,937 11 10
	Class III. Household Account. Expenses - - - ditto - -	- - -	42,215 2 5
	Class IV. Household Account. Contributions to Charities, &c. -	- - -	2,100 - -
	Class V. Pensions per Act 1 Vict. c. 2. Quarter to 30 Sept. 1853 - -	- - -	116 17 -
	Class V. Pensions per Act 1 Vict. c. 2. „ 31 Dec. 1854 - -	- - -	9 15 8
	Class V. Pensions per Act 1 Vict. c. 2. „ 30 June 1855 - -	- - -	27 15 1
	Class V. Pensions per Act 1 Vict. c. 2. „ 30 Sept. „ - -	- - -	18 15 -
	Class V. Pensions per Act 1 Vict. c. 2. „ 31 Dec. „ - -	- - -	35 12 -
	Class VI. Household Account (unappropriated moneys) - - - - -	- - -	7,177 13 9
	Savings on the Civil List - - - - -	- - -	1,980 9 4
ANNUITIES AND PENSIONS	Quarter ended 5 July 1854 - - - -	- 7 7	—
	„ 10 Oct. „ - - - -	- - -	15 5 5
	„ 5 Jan. 1855 - - - -	- - -	197 4 7
	„ 31 Mar. „ - - - -	- - -	310 6 8
	„ 30 June „ - - - -	- - -	128 5 -
	„ 30 Sept. „ - - - -	- - -	342 14 -
	„ 31 Dec. „ - - - -	- - -	798 19 5
SUNDRY SALARIES AND ALLOWANCES - - -	Quarter ended 5 April 1854 - - - -	- - -	342 13 3
	„ 5 July „ - - - -	- - -	510 17 1
	„ 10 Oct. „ - - - -	- - -	79 10 -
	„ 5 Jan. 1855 - - - -	- - -	3 17 10
	„ 31 Mar. „ - - - -	- - -	2,356 19 2
	„ 30 June „ - - - -	- - -	529 11 7
	„ 30 Sept. „ - - - -	- - -	72 10 -
	„ 31 Dec. „ - - - -	- - -	605 14 9
COURTS OF JUSTICE - -	Quarter ended 5 July 1854 - - - -	- - -	32 2 2
	„ 5 Jan. 1855 - - - -	- - -	12 6 9
	„ 31 Mar. „ - - - -	- - -	551 16 -
	„ 30 June „ - - - -	- - -	214 18 9
	„ 30 Sept. „ - - - -	- - -	2,150 1 2
	„ 31 Dec. „ - - - -	- - -
DIPLOMATIC SALARIES -	Quarter ended 5 April 1853 - - - -	- - -	362 10 -
	„ 5 July 1854 - - - -	- - -	43 19 1
	„ 30 Sept. 1855 - - - -	- - -	61 2 6
DIPLOMATIC PENSIONS -	Quarter ended 31 Mar. 1855 - - - -	- - -	263 6 4
	„ 30 June „ - - - -	- - -	107 19 10
	„ 30 Sept. „ - - - -	- - -	114 1 11
	„ 31 Dec. „ - - - -	- - -	402 - -
MISCELLANEOUS CHARGES	Quarter ended 10 Oct. 1851 - - - -	- - -	61 8 8
	„ 31 Dec. 1855 - - - -	- - -	10 17 3
Unappropriated Civil List, Will. 4 - - - - - - - - - -		- - -	4 16 3
Income Tax on foregoing Accounts, not yet paid over - - - - -		- - -	282 6 9
CLASS I. PUBLIC WORKS AND BUILDINGS.	Public Walks - - - - - - -	- - -	2,462 10 -
	Public Buildings and Royal Palaces (Works, &c.)	- - -	15,908 12 4
	Royal Parks, &c. - - - („)	- - -	5,776 12 8
	Ordnance Office, Pall Mall - - („)	- - -	1,480 17 7
	Buckingham Palace - - - („)	- - -	367 14 6
	Stationery Office - - - - („)	- - -	843 3 10
	New Houses of Parliament - - („)	- - -	11,173 1 5
	Ditto - - - - - (Treasury)	—	—
	Isle of Man, Courts of Law - - (Works, &c.)	- - -	2,574 2 9
	Repository for Public Records - („)	- - -	373 15 -
	Holyhead Harbour, Roads, &c. - („)	- - -	323 14 -
	Ditto - - - - - (Treasury)	- - -	1,890 3 10
	Harbours of Refuge, Holyhead - (Works, &c.)	- - -	665 4 7
	Ditto - - - - Portland - („)	- - -	228 - 10
	Harbours of Refuge - - - (Treasury)	- - -	2,962 5 11
	Port Patrick Harbour - - - („)	- - -	- 6 -

(continued)

		OVERDRAWN.			IN CREDIT.
		£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
CLASS II. Salaries, &c., Public Departments.	Two Houses of Parliament	-	-	-	16,176	10	-
	Treasury	-	-	-	7,533	13	9
	Home Department	-	-	-	5,980	9	6
	Foreign - ditto	-	-	-	12,449	4	6
	Colonial - ditto	-	-	-	7,877	18	1
	Privy Council Office and Board of Trade	-	-	-	5,969	12	6
	Lord Privy Seal	-	-	-	476	6	2
	Paymaster-General's Office	-	-	-	2,123	1	10
	Exchequer	-	-	-	782	7	-
	Commissioners of Works, &c. (Works)	-	-	-	1,375	18	8
	Ditto - - - Woods, &c.		—			—
	Public Records and State Paper Office	-	-	-	2,089	4	8
	Ecclesiastical Commissioners, England	-	-	-	1,510	14	8
	Poor Law Commissioners, &c.	-	-	-	17,345	6	-
	Mint, including Coinage, &c.		—			—
	Inspectors, &c. of Factories	-	-	-	3,287	6	1
	Civil Branch of Queen's, &c. Remembrancer's Offices, Scotland		—			—
	Commissioners of Audit	-	-	-	3,726	10	10
	Copyhold Inclosures and Tithe Commission	-	-	-	2,245	2	7
	Ditto, Expenses under Inclosure and Drainage Acts	-	-	-	3,991	3	11
	General Register Office, England and Wales	-	-	-	1,546	6	10
	Registrar General of Births, &c., Scotland	-	-	-	130	2	9
	National Debt Office		—			—
	Public Works Loan Commission	-	-	-	7	1	6
	West Indian Islands Relief Commission		—			—
	Commissioners in Lunacy	-	-	-	277	19	8
	Office of Metropolitan Buildings, &c.	-	-	-	750	-	-
	General Superintendent of Roads, South Wales	-	-	-	305	19	7
	Registrar of Friendly Societies in England	-	-	-	670	5	11
	Secret Service	-	-	-	47	8	-
	Printing and Stationery	36,063	1	6		—
	Irish Office, London	-	-	-	286	18	3
CLASS III. Law and Justice.	Law Charges and Mint Prosecutions, Treasury	-	-	-	2,269	11	7
	Prosecutions formerly paid out of County Rates	-	-	-	3,600	14	6
	Chancery, Crown Office Expenses		—			—
	Queen's Bench - - „		—			—
	„ &c. Deficiency of Fee Fund		—			—
	Sheriffs, &c. Expenses, and Exchequer Q. L. T. R., London	-	-	-	906	13	8
	Registrar of High Court of Admiralty		—			—
	Insolvent Debtors' Court		—			—
	Treasurers' Salaries, County Courts	-	-	-	887	10	-
	Police Courts' Salaries, &c.		—			—
	Metropolitan Police Salaries, &c.		—			—
	Queen's Prison, Salaries, &c.	-	-	-	225	10	-
	Lord Advocate and Solicitor-general's Salaries - Scotland		—			—
	Expenses of Prosecutions by Lord Advocate „		—			—
	Court of Sessions' Salaries, &c. „	-	-	-	311	13	3
	„ Justiciary „ „		—			—
	Legal Branch, Queen's, &c., Remembrancer's Salaries „		—			—
	Sheriffs' and Procurators Fiscal, &c., Salaries „		—			—
	Procurators Fiscal Salaries „		—			—
	Sheriffs' Clerks' Salaries „		—			—
	Expenses in matters of Tithes, &c. „		—			—
	General Register House, Edinburgh, Salaries „	-	-	-	443	1	6
	Commissary Clerk, Edinburgh, Salaries, &c. „		—			—
	Prisons, &c., General Superintendence	-	-	-	2,826	12	7
	„ Convict Establishments, &c., at Home	-	-	-	15,997	8	11
	„ Maintenance in County Gaols, &c.	-	-	-	12,605	9	7
	„ Transportation	-	-	-	3,756	-	8
	„ Convict Establishments, Colonies	-	-	-	4,169	18	5
	Prosecutions, &c., Scotland	-	-	-	37	5	5
CLASS IV. Education, Science, and Art.	Public Education, Great Britain	-	-	-	18,314	10	11
	Board of Trade, Department of Practical Art, Schools of Design, and Geological Survey &c.	-	-	-	7,860	18	3
	British Museum	-	-	-	4,000	-	-
	„ Buildings (Works, &c.)	-	-	-	8,108	13	-
	Nelson Monument („)	-	-	-	329	1	10
	Scientific Works and Experiments		—			—
	Geological Survey (Works, &c.)	-	-	-	480	5	10
	National Gallery	-	-	-	915	8	9

		OVERDRAWN.			IN CREDIT.
		£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
CLASS V. Colonial, Consular, and other Foreign Services.	Bermudas	-	-	-	711	2	4
	Clergy in North America and Bahamas	-	-	-	104	5	7
	Indian Department, Canada	-	-	-	273	11	9
	Governors, &c., West Indies and Prince Edward's Island	-	-	-	3,727	12	–
	Justices, West Indies and Mauritius	-	-	-	1,088	3	11
	Western Coast of Africa	-	-	-	297	2	3
	St. Helena	-	-	-	1,152	–	–
	Western Australia and Port Essington	-	-	-	—
	New Zealand	-	-	-	10,947	13	11
	Heligoland	-	-	-	286	15	2
	Falkland Islands	-	-	-	1,488	3	9
	Hong Kong	-	-	-	726	19	11
	Labuan	1,564	1	7	—
	Emigration	-	-	-	1,279	13	6
	Distressed Emigrants in Canada	-	-	-	—
	Captured Negroes	-	-	-	1,593	6	3
	Commission for Suppression of Slave Trade	-	-	-	2,855	2	1
	Consuls Abroad, including Ports in China	-	-	-	1,769	8	2
	Ministers Abroad, Extraordinary Expenses	2,035	5	2	—
CLASS VI. Superannuations and Charities.	Superannuation and Retired Allowances	-	-	-	4,167	17	6
	Toulonese and Corsican Emigrants, American Loyalists, &c.	-	-	-	400	7	7
	Polish Refugees and Distressed Spaniards	-	-	-	861	7	8
	Miscellaneous Charges, formerly Civil List	-	-	-	1,426	15	11
CLASS VII. Special and Temporary Objects.	Medals, Army and Navy	-	-	-	1,253	3	6
	Militia and Volunteers, Canada	-	-	-	—
	General Board of Health	-	-	-	4,699	12	6
	Lighthouses Abroad	-	-	-	6,551	9	2
	Ambassador's Residence, Constantinople (Works, &c.)	-	-	-	1,262	9	4
	„ „ Madrid („)	-	-	-	1	–	4
	„ „ Paris („)	-	-	-	119	18	–
	British Consulate Buildings, Constantinople („)	-	-	-	51	16	7
	Chelsea Bridge („)	-	-	-	1,458	8	10
	„ Embankment („)	-	-	-	669	12	–
	Battersea Park („)	-	-	-	3,685	12	9
	Duchy of Cornwall New Office („)	-	-	-	1,409	14	5
	British Protestant Cemetery, Madrid („)	-	-	-	39	1	10
	Downing Street Buildings („)	-	-	-	6,001	3	4
	Embassy Chapel, Constantinople	-	-	-	762	15	6
	Australian Expedition	-	-	-	715	8	4
	Menai Straits Navigation	-	-	-	—
	Merchant Seamen's Pension Fund	-	-	-	1,055	7	10
	Mercantile Marine and Steam Navigation Acts	-	-	-	—
	Corrupt Practices at Elections	-	-	-	553	16	6
	Patent Law Amendment Act	-	-	-	1,972	6	–
	Charity Commission, England	-	-	-	3,494	11	7
	Statute Law Commission	-	-	-	644	5	5
	Joint Stock Companies' Registration	-	-	-	—
	Agricultural Statistics	-	-	-	730	1	5
	Fishery Board, Scotland	-	2	–	—
	Trustees of Manufactures, Scotland	-	-	-	—
	Census of the Population	-	-	-	1,440	2	8
	Funeral of the late Duke of Wellington	-	-	-	24,866	4	1
	Universal Exhibition, Paris	-	-	-	962	13	–
	Commissioners of Highland Roads, &c.	-	-	-	5,000	–	–
	Bounties on Slaves	-	-	-	997	–	–
	Reciprocity Treaties, Dues on Foreign Vessels	-	-	-	—
	Revising Barristers	-	-	-	142	16	–
	Corn Returns, Inspectors' Salaries	74	15	–	—
	Quarantine Expenses	-	-	-	841	14	7
	Army and Navy Medals	-	-	-	—
	United States' Claimants	-	-	-	1,851	–	6
	British Seamen Abroad, Relief of	-	-	-	833	19	3
	Metropolis Interment Act	-	-	-	—
	Galleries of Art, Edinburgh	-	-	-	—
	Cape of Good Hope	-	-	-	—
	Supp^{y} Estimate, V. 1. (Salaries, &c. not Legal)	-	-	-	2,897	1	7
	„ V. 2. (Legal Salaries)	-	-	-	25,141	11	7
	„ V. 3. (Miscellaneous Charges)	-	-	-	2,459	–	10
	Kensington Gore (Purchase of Land)	-	-	-	1,000	–	–
	„ (Museum)	-	-	-	1,045	12	–
	War Department	-	-	-	1,162	16	4

(continued)

	OVERDRAWN.			IN CREDIT.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Civil Contingencies	8,097	13	–	—
Income Tax on foregoing Accounts not yet paid over	-	-	-	2,200	5	9
Canada Guaranteed Loan Sinking Fund		—		—
County Courts' Fund	-	-	-	752	18	1
Effects of deceased British Subjects	-	-	-	3,586	7	5
Exchequer Fees		—		—
French Claims		6	9	4	—
French Indemnity	-	-	-	4,660	3	5
Highland Education	-	-	-	1,534	11	6
Irish Reproductive Loan Fund	-	-	-	736	3	5
Knights of Malta	-	-	-	141	5	–
Persian Embassy	-	-	-	17,711	14	2
Slave Compensation	-	-	-	1,036	8	3
Ditto Reserve Fund	-	-	-	686	10	9
Superannuation Fund payable to Exchequer		—		—
Metropolis Improvements, General Account (Works, &c.)	-	-	-	2,586	10	5
„ Spitalfields Extension „	-	-	-	4,915	–	3
London Bridge Approaches Fund „		—		—
Menai and Conway Bridges, Tolls Account „	-	-	-	2,193	16	8
Loans, &c., Shrewsbury, &c., Roads „		—		—
Westminster Improvements „	-	-	-	1,774	6	2
Department of Works, Miscellaneous Accounts „	-	-	-	6,208	19	10
New Inland Revenue Office „	-	-	-	26,504	15	9
Brompton Cemetery „	-	-	-	1,832	9	9
Pimlico Improvements „	-	-	-	2,861	4	3
Southwark „ „	-	-	-	2,222	7	1
Westminster New Bridge „	-	-	-	27,505	1	2
Royal Military Asylum, Chelsea „	-	-	-	2,928	8	1
Fee Fund Account of the Superior Courts of Law	-	-	-	30,671	5	4
Nelson Fund Account		—		—
General Board of Health, Ordnance Survey	-	-	-	4,336	6	9
Crown's Nominee Account	-	-	-	33,525	18	4
Suspense Accounts	-	-	-	1,829	2	–
Wages and Effects of deceased Merchant Seamen	-	-	-	30,952	4	1
Compensation to Owner of the Highlander	-	-	-	587	6	7
Bermuda, Sales of Crown Lands		—		—
Mercantile Marine Fund	-	-	-	85,300	18	1
Nautical Schools	-	-	-	1,481	13	9
Registrar of Joint Stock Companies	-	-	-	2,792	14	3
London Gazette		—		—
Admiralty Court, Deposit Fund	-	-	-	55,413	3	11
Police Courts: Fees, &c.		—		—
Lunacy Commissioners: Fees, &c.		—		—
Remittances from Scotland (Surplus Fees)		—		—
Moneys payable to Exchequer	-	-	-	53,959	15	4
Copyhold and Tithe Commission (Deposit Account)	-	-	-	36,000	–	–
Exchequer Bills, Interest	-	-	-	6,845	8	11
Ditto - - Principal	-	-	-	100	–	–
Income Tax on foregoing Accounts not yet paid over	-	-	-	122	19	9
Army	-	-	-	577,857	2	9
Commissariat Chest	642,021	14	9	—
Navy	-	-	-	775,720	11	5
Naval Prize Account	-	-	-	67,226	3	8
Patriotic Fund	-	-	-	4,016	6	11
£.	689,863	9	11	2,332,878	7	3
	£. 1,643,014	17	4

BALANCES AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

	£.	s.	d.
Exchequer Credits	1,465,384	11	–
Cash Account	126,827	2	9
Drawing Account	36,645	5	5
Bill Account	10,141	11	3
Patriotic Fund	4,016	6	11
£.	1,643,014	17	4

Appendix, No. 16.

AN ACCOUNT of BALANCES of VOTES unissued from the Exchequer on the 31st March 1856. Appendix, No. 16.

	Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1853.			Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1854.			Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1855.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Army	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,389,532	-	-
Navy	-	-	-	-	-	-	329,013	-	-
Customs Department - Salaries, &c.	-	-	-	35,507	3	7	230,696	8	1
Ditto - Coast Guard - ditto	-	-	-	48,509	8	4	145,308	15	3
Inland Revenue Department ditto	-	-	-	5,993	6	9	462,135	13	2
Inland Revenue Police, Ireland	-	-	-	-	-	-	17,725	2	-
Post Office, Salaries and Expenses	-	-	-	45,758	13	-	469,137	14	11
Public Buildings	-	-	-	-	-	-	32,952	-	-
Royal Parks	-	-	-	-	-	-	14,544	-	-
Buildings, Houses of Parliament	-	-	-	-	-	-	20,209	-	-
Repository for Public Records	-	-	-	3,000	-	-	6,000	-	-
Holyhead Harbour	-	-	-	-	-	-	17,610	6	5
Harbours of Refuge	-	-	-	-	-	-	138,000	-	-
Portpatrick Harbour	269	12	2	-	-	-	375	-	-
Two Houses of Parliament - Salaries, &c.	-	-	-	-	-	-	52,140	-	-
Treasury ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	8,400	-	-
Home Office ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	7,595	-	-
Colonial Office ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	9,897	-	-
Privy Council Office ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	12,733	-	-
Paymaster-general's Office ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	4,211	-	-
Comptroller-general of the Exchequer ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,814	-	-
Public Records ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	9,098	-	-
Poor Law Commissioners ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	149,083	-	-
Inspectors of Factories ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,530	-	-
Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office, in Scotland ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,498	13	8
Audit Office ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,421	-	-
General Register Office, England and Wales ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,500	-	-
West India Islands Relief Commission ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	500	-	-
Commissioners in Lunacy, Expenses of Office	-	-	-	-	-	-	220	-	-
Secret Services	-	-	-	-	-	-	10,646	4	-
County Rates	-	-	-	-	-	-	160,000	-	-
Crown Office, Queen's Bench	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,743	19	4
Sheriffs' Expenses	-	-	-	-	-	-	14,900	-	-
Registry of the Admiralty	-	-	-	1,700	-	-	1,500	-	-
Insolvent Debtors' Court	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,890	-	-
Treasurers of County Courts	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,350	-	-
Metropolitan Police Courts	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,392	12	7
Metropolitan Police Expenses	-	-	-	-	-	-	31,030	9	9
Queen's Prison	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,214	2	9
Criminal Prosecutions, Scotland	-	-	-	-	-	-	7,755	-	-
Legal Branch: Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, Scotland	-	-	-	-	-	-	256	16	1
Sheriffs' Prosecutions, &c., Scotland	-	-	-	-	-	-	57,000	-	-
Expenses in Matters of Tithes, Scotland	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,150	-	-

(continued)

Appendix, No. 16.

	Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1853.			Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1854.			Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1855.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Superintendence of Prisons	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,622	6	8
Prisons and Convict Establishments	-	-	-	-	-	-	165,200	8	11
Maintenance of Prisoners	-	-	-	-	-	-	140,324	-	-
Convict Establishments in the Colonies	-	-	-	-	-	-	135,938	9	-
Transportation of Convicts	-	-	-	54,144	18	6	59,405	-	-
Public Education, Great Britain	-	-	-	-	-	-	41,921	-	-
London University	-	-	-	2,830	-	-	3,858	-	-
Departments of Science and Art, &c.	-	-	-	17,333	6	7	14,504	14	4
Universities, Scotland	-	-	-	-	-	-	4,155	10	2
British Museum Buildings	-	-	-	-	-	-	27,520	-	-
National Gallery	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,696	-	-
Scientific Works, &c.	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,503	10	9
Civil Establishment, Bermuda	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,501	-	-
Clergy, North America	-	-	-	2,547	-	-	7,397	-	-
Indian Department, Canada	-	-	-	4,438	-	-	7,010	-	-
West India Governors	2,544	4	6	-	-	-	20,728	-	-
Special Justices, West Indies	-	-	-	-	-	-	24,750	-	-
Western Coast of Africa	-	-	-	961	12	8	9,130	-	-
Civil Establishment, St. Helena	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,557	-	-
„ Heligoland	-	-	-	-	-	-	976	-	-
„ Falkland Islands	-	-	-	-	-	-	100	-	-
„ Hong Kong	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,800	-	-
Emigration Expenses	-	-	-	-	-	-	11,720	-	-
Destitute Emigrants, Canada	-	-	-	-	-	-	10,500	-	-
Support of Captured Negroes	-	-	-	-	-	-	10,000	-	-
Suppression of Slave Trade	-	-	-	6,250	-	-	11,250	-	-
Bounties on Slaves	-	-	-	-	-	-	8,000	-	-
Consular Services	-	-	-	-	-	-	13,084	7	-
Superannuations, &c.	-	-	-	-	-	-	41,776	16	9
Toulonese and Corsican Emigrants	-	-	-	1,061	-	-	2,270	-	-
Refuge for the Destitute	-	-	-	-	-	-	325	-	-
Polish Refugees, &c.	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,200	-	-
Miscellaneous Charges, formerly on Civil List	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,371	-	-
Patent Law Amendment Act Expenses	-	-	-	-	-	-	11,215	-	-
Statute Law Commission	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,711	-	-
Registration of Joint Stock Companies	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,270	-	-
Merchant Seamen's Fund	-	-	-	-	-	-	36,115	-	-
Battersea Park	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,500	-	-
Chelsea Embankment	-	-	-	21,000	-	-	25,000	-	-
Lighthouses Abroad	-	-	-	-	-	-	10,700	-	-
Agricultural Statistics	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,800	-	-
Board of Fisheries, Scotland	-	-	-	-	-	-	3,424	13	10
Reciprocity Dues	-	-	-	-	-	-	35,338	4	9
Inspectors of Corn Returns	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,528	7	1
British Consulate Buildings, Constantinople	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,752	-	-
British Embassy Chapel, Constantinople	-	-	-	959	6	11	—
Buildings, Courts of Law, Isle of Man	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,550	-	-
Iron Doors for Record Repository	-	-	-	-	-	-	9,000	-	-
Site of New Foreign Office	-	-	-	-	-	-	29,000	-	-
American Claimants	-	-	-	-	-	-	12,131	-	-
Distressed British Seamen Abroad	-	-	-	-	-	-	13,000	-	-
Pall Mall and Green Park Improvements	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,800	-	-
Monument to Sir John Franklin and others	-	-	-	-	-	-	400	-	-
Crimean Medals	-	-	-	-	-	-	80,000	-	-
Museum at Kensington Gore	-	-	-	-	-	-	11,000	-	-
Civil Contingencies	-	-	-	16,916	-	-	100,000	-	-
Purchase of Land at Kensington Gore	-	-	-	19,000	-	-	—

Appendix, No. 16.

	Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1853.	Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1854.	Balance of Amount Voted, A° 1855.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Accommodation for Stationery Office	- - -	2,500 - -	—
Corrupt Practices at Elections	14,000 - -	—	—
Salaries, &c. of Departments other than Legal	- - -	8,096 9 9	—
Universal Exhibition at Paris	- - -	10,747 8 7	—
Secretary of State for War Department	- - -	5,023 7 1	—
Statue of King Charles the First	- - -	960 - -	—
Australian Expedition	- - -	3,072 - 7	—
New Zealand	5,090 - -	—	—
Mercantile Marine and Steam Navigation Act	25,750 - -	—	—
Continental Electric Telegraph	30,000 - -	—	—
Certain Officers in Scotland, Salaries	- - -	26 19 8	—
Law Charges, Scotland	- - -	74,955 - -	—
Duchy of Cornwall Office, New Buildings	- - -	2,069 1 -	—
Public Buildings, Ireland	- - -	9,012 7 -	15,687 - -
Kingstown Harbour	- - -	- - -	2,246 - -
Household of Lord Lieutenant	- - -	- - -	3,235 19 3
Chief Secretary's Office, Ireland	- - -	- - -	13,682 - -
Paymaster of Civil Services' Office, Ireland	- - -	- - -	640 10 11
Board of Public Works, Ireland	- - -	- - -	10,789 - -
General Registry Office, Dublin	- - -	- - -	1,166 4 7
Law Charges, Ireland	- - -	7,450 17 9	51,720 - -
Court of Queen's Bench, Ireland - Salaries	- - -	- - -	294 19 -
,, Exchequer, Ireland - ditto	- - -	- - -	71 2 1
,, Common Pleas, Ireland - ditto	- - -	- - -	214 15 1
Registration of Judgments, Ireland	- - -	- - -	177 - -
Insolvent Debtors' Court, Ireland	- - -	- - -	331 17 9
Metropolitan Police, Dublin	- - -	- - -	3,000 - -
Constabulary Force, Ireland	- - -	- - -	20,165 15 9
Four Courts Marshalsea Prison, Ireland	- - -	- - -	64 18 6
National Education, Ireland	- - -	- - -	88,200 - -
Queen's Colleges, Ireland	- - -	- - -	4,687 - -
Queen's University, Ireland	- - -	- - -	500 - -
Royal Irish Academy	- - -	- - -	23 11 2
Belfast Academical Institution	- - -	- - -	784 4 1
House of Industry, Dublin	- - -	- - -	5,059 - -
Female Orphan House, Dublin	- - -	- - -	300 - -
Nonconforming Ministers, Ireland	- - -	- - -	2,303 18 -
Concordatum Fund, Ireland	- - -	- - -	974 2 8
Incumbered Estates Commission	- - -	- - -	70 12 3
Publication of Ancient Laws, Ireland	- - -	- - -	400 - -
Process Servers in Ireland	- - -	- - -	4,848 - -
National Gallery, Dublin	- - -	- - -	3,000 - -
Foundling Hospital, Dublin	- - -	284 2 9	1,295 - -
High Court of Delegates, Ireland	- - -	- - -	100 10 -
TOTALS £.	77,653 16 8	412,107 10 6	6,280,072 8 4

Exchequer, 14 June 1856.

Monteagle, Comptroller-general.

Appendix, No. 17.

A RETURN of the VOTES under the Head of MISCELLANEOUS ESTIMATES, specifying each on which there is a Surplus of Money Voted, and setting forth the different Years in which the Accumulation of unexpended but appropriated Money has arisen.

HEADS OF SERVICE.	Amount of the Vote for the Year.	Unissued in the Exchequer on 31 March 1856.	In the Hands of the Paymaster-General, and of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, on 31 March 1856.
Year 1841-42.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Public Walks	10,000 – –	– – –	2,462 10 –
Year 1849-50.
Nelson Monument	2,800 – –	– – –	329 1 10
Year 1850-51.
Ordnance Office, Pall Mall	22,000 – –	– – –	1,480 17 7
Isle of Man, Courts of Law	– – –	– – –	2,574 2 9
		£.	4,055 – 4
Year 1851-52.
New Zealand	20,000 – –	– – –	947 13 11
Year 1852-53.
New Zealand	10,000 – –	– – –	10,000 – –
Census of the Population	40,200 – –	– – –	1,440 2 8
Ambassador's House, Madrid	783 – –	– – –	1 – 4
		£.	11,441 3 –
Year 1853-54.
Geological Survey	44,476 – –	– – –	480 5 10
Port Patrick Harbour	2,556 – –	*269 12 2	– 6 –
Irish Office, London	1,130 – –	– – –	286 18 3
Royal Dublin Society	2,500 – –	– – –	2,500 – –
Indian Department, Canada	12,151 – –	*2,544 4 6	—
New Zealand	5,090 – –	*5,090 – –	—
Captured Negroes	20,000 – –	– – –	1,593 6 3
Lighthouses Abroad	10,930 – –	– – –	6,551 9 2
Chelsea Bridge	5,500 – –	– – –	1,458 8 10
Mercantile Marine and Steam Navigation Act	25,750 – –	*25,750 – –	—
Corrupt Practices at Elections	30,000 – –	*14,000 – –	553 16 6
Electric Telegraph, Continental	30,000 – –	*30,000 – –	—
Funeral of the late Duke of Wellington	80,000 – –	– – –	24,866 4 1
	£.	77,653 16 8	38,290 14 11
Year 1854-55.
Civil Contingencies	100,000 – –	16,916 – –	1,083 7 11
Buckingham Palace	19,437 – –	– – –	367 14 6
Stationery Office, Works and Fittings	10,000 – –	2,500 – –	843 3 10
Public Record Repository	10,000 – –	3,000 – –	—
Port Patrick Harbour	676 – –	676 – –	—
Public Works, Ireland	26,118 – –	*9,012 7 –	—
Offices, &c., in Scotland	1,700 – –	*26 19 8	—
Chief Secretary's Office, Ireland	16,744 – –	– – –	878 16 10
Law Charges, Scotland	92,455 – –	*74,955 – –	37 5 5
Law Charges, Ireland	55,470 – –	7,450 17 9	2,250 9 2

* These sums have been surrendered as savings since the 31st March.

HEADS OF SERVICE.	Amount of the Vote for the Year.	Unissued in the Exchequer on 31 March 1856.	In the Hands of the Paymaster-General, and of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, on 31 March 1856.
Year 1854–55—continued.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Transportation of Convicts	92,765 – –	54,144 18 6	3,756 – 8
Department of Practical Art	79,845 – –	*17,333 6 7	—
University of London	3,875 – –	2,830 – –	—
British Museum Buildings	101,142 – –	- - -	8,108 13 –
Clergy, North America	7,547 – –	2,547 – –	104 5 7
Indian Department, Canada	9,438 – –	4,438 – –	273 11 9
Justices, West Indies	28,875 – –	961 12 8	1,088 3 11
Heligoland	976 – –	- - -	286 15 2
Hong Kong	4,400 – –	- - -	726 19 11
Support of Captured Negroes	20,000 – –	20,000 – –	—
Suppression of Slave Trade	11,250 – –	6,250 – –	2,855 2 1
Toulonese and Corsican Emigrants	2,561 – –	1,061 – –	400 7 7
Foundling Hospital, Dublin	1,352 – –	284 2 9	—
Chelsea Embankment	35,000 – –	21,000 – –	669 12 –
Lighthouses Abroad	10,900 – –	10,900 – –	—
Ambassador's Residence, Paris	3,393 – –	- - -	119 18 –
British Consulate Buildings, Constantinople	10,000 – –	- - -	51 16 7
Chapel, Constantinople	2,055 – –	959 6 11	762 15 6
British Protestant Cemetery, Madrid	1,400 – –	- - -	39 1 10
Museum for Royal Society, Dublin	2,500 – –	2,500 – –	—
Land at Kensington Gore	27,500 – –	19,000 – –	1,000 – –
Exploration of Australia	5,000 – –	3,072 – 7	715 8 4
Suitors' Fund, Admiralty Court	25,000 – –	1,700 – –	—
Monuments, Westminster Abbey	2,500 – –	2,500 – –	—
Statue of Charles I. at Charing Cross	1,000 – –	960 – –	—
Secretary of State for War	17,000 – –	5,023 7 1	1,162 16 4
Duchy of Cornwall Office	16,889 – –	2,069 1 –	1,409 14 5
Exhibition at Paris	50,000 – –	10,747 8 7	962 13 –
Customs, Salaries, &c.	840,785 – –	* 35,507 3 7	—
Customs, Coast Guard	479,320 – –	* 48,509 8 4	—
Inland Revenue, Salaries, &c.	1,154,594 – –	* 5,993 6 9	—
Post Office, Salaries, &c.	1,525,335 – –	* 45,758 13 –	—
Salaries, &c., formerly on Consolidated Fund	149,859 – –	* 8,096 9 9	2,897 1 7
Legal Salaries - - - ditto	849,402 – –	- - -	25,141 11 7
Miscellaneous Charges - ditto	109,634 – –	- - -	2,459 – 10
	£.	448,683 10 6	60,452 7 4
Year 1855–56.
Civil Contingencies	100,000 – –	† 100,000 – –	—
Royal Palaces and Public Buildings	154,952 – –	32,952 – –	15,908 12 4
Royal Parks, Pleasure Gardens, &c.	69,544 – –	14,544 – –	5,776 12 8
New Houses of Parliament	122,209 – –	20,209 – –	11,173 1 5
General Repository of Public Records	6,000 – –	6,000 – –	373 15 –
Holyhead Harbour, &c.	122,841 – –	17,610 6 5	2,213 17 10
Harbours of Refuge	234,000 – –	138,000 – –	3,855 11 4
Port Patrick Harbour	375 – –	375 – –	—
Public Buildings, Ireland	30,963 – –	‡ 15,687 – –	276 – –
Kingstown Harbour	5,876 – –	2,246 – –	—
Two Houses of Parliament Salaries	82,140 – –	52,140 – –	16,176 10 –
Treasury ditto	54,400 – –	8,400 – –	7,533 13 9
Home Department ditto	27,595 – –	7,595 – –	5,980 9 6
Foreign - ditto ditto	83,849 – –	- - -	12,449 4 6
Colonial - ditto ditto	35,897 – –	9,897 – –	7,877 18 1
Privy Council Office and Board of Trade ditto	75,733 – –	12,733 – –	5,969 12 6
Lord Privy Seal ditto	2,700 – –	- - -	476 6 2
Paymaster-General's Office ditto	25,211 – –	4,211 – –	2,123 1 10
Exchequer ditto	7,314 – –	3,814 – –	782 7 –
Office of Works, &c. ditto	21,595 – –	- - -	1,375 18 8
Public Records and State Paper Office ditto	14,098 – –	9,098 – –	2,089 4 8
Poor Law Commissioners ditto	205,383 – –	149,083 – –	17,685 19 –
Inspectors of Factories, &c. ditto	15,530 – –	3,530 – –	3,287 6 1
Exchequer and Offices, Scotland ditto	5,156 – –	1,498 13 8	—
Household of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland ditto	6,431 – –	3,235 19 3	1,411 8 4
Chief Secretary, Ireland ditto	17,032 – –	13,682 – –	3,350 – –
Paymaster of Civil Services, Ireland ditto	6,889 – –	640 10 11	544 8 –
Board of Public Works, Ireland ditto	22,789 – –	10,789 – –	—
Audit Office ditto	46,421 – –	5,421 – –	3,726 10 10

(continued)

* These sums have been surrendered as savings since the 31st March. † 60,000 l. of this sum has been surrendered as a saving since 31st March.

‡ Of this sum 6,692 l. 9 s. 4 d. has been surrendered as a saving since 31st March.

HEADS OF SERVICE.	Amount of the Vote for the Year.	Unissued in the Exchequer on 31 March 1856.	In the Hands of the Paymaster-General, and of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, on 31 March 1856.
Year 1855-56—continued.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Copyhold Inclosure and Tithe Commission - - Salaries	16,270 – –	- - -	2,245 2 7
Ditto - - ditto - - ditto - Imprest Expenses	12,190 – –	- - -	3,991 3 11
General Register Office, England - - - Salaries	42,500 – –	5,500 – –	1,546 6 10
Ditto - ditto - Scotland - - - ditto	5,715 – –	- - -	130 2 9
Ditto - ditto - Ireland - - - ditto	3,768 – –	1,166 4 7	411 3 10
Public Works Loan Commissioners - - - ditto	3,260 – –	- - -	7 1 6
West India Relief Commission - - - - ditto	1,570 – –	500 – –	—
Commissioners in Lunacy - - - Contingent Expenses	820 – –	220 – –	277 19 8
Office of Metropolitan Buildings - - - - -	3,000 – –	- - -	750 – –
General Superintendent of Roads, South Wales - - -	984 – –	- - -	305 19 7
Registrar of Friendly Societies in England - - - -	1,610 – –	- - -	670 5 11
Secret Service - - - - - - - - -	32,000 – –	10,646 4 –	47 8 –
Printing and Stationery - - - - - - - -	360,470 – –	- - -	3 6 3
Law Charges and Mint Prosecutions - - - - -	35,941 – –	- - -	2,269 11 7
Prosecutions, formerly County Rates - - - - -	250,000 – –	160,000 – –	3,600 14 6
Queen's Bench, Crown Office - - - - - -	2,050 – –	1,743 19 4	—
Exchequer, Queen's, and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer -	15,900 – –	14,900 – –	906 13 8
Registrar of Admiralty Court - - - - - - -	6,000 – –	1,500 – –	—
Insolvent Debtors' Court - - - - - - - -	8,415 – –	3,890 – –	—
County Courts, Treasurers' Salaries - - - - -	13,850 – –	2,350 – –	887 10 –
Police Courts, Metropolis - - - - - - -	23,254 – –	3,392 12 7	—
Metropolitan Police - - - - - - - - -	101,218 – –	31,030 9 9	—
Queen's Prison - - - - - - - - -	4,226 – –	1,214 2 9	225 10 –
Prosecutions, Lord Advocate, Scotland - - - -	7,755 – –	7,755 – –	—
Court of Sessions, Scotland - - - - Salaries	17,526 – –	- - -	311 13 3
Exchequer, Legal Branch, Scotland - - - - -	1,593 – –	256 16 1	—
Sheriffs, &c., Criminal Prosecutions, Scotland - - -	57,000 – –	57,000 – –	—
Expenses in matters of Tithes, &c., Scotland - - -	2,250 – –	2,150 – –	—
General Register House, Edinburgh - - - - -	11,166 – –	- - -	443 1 6
Law Charges, Ireland - - - - - - - -	51,720 – –	51,720 – –	—
Court of Chancery, Ireland - Salaries and Expenses	1,294 – –	- - -	284 11 4
Court of Queen's Bench, Ireland - - ditto - -	1,338 – –	294 19 –	95 9 10
Court of Common Pleas, Ireland - - ditto - -	1,311 – –	214 15 1	71 5 10
Court of Exchequer, Ireland - - - ditto - -	1,320 – –	71 2 1	102 17 2
Taxing Officer of Law Courts, Ireland - - - -	200 – –	- - -	50 – –
Registrar to the Judges, Ireland - - - - -	5,232 – –	- - -	2,409 6 6
Registrar of Judgments, Ireland - - - Salaries	1,906 – –	177 – –	170 10 –
High Court of Delegates, Fees to Advocates, Ireland - -	300 – –	100 10 –	—
Insolvent Debtors Courts, Ireland - Salaries and Expenses	3,146 – –	331 17 9	702 9 9
Clerk of Court of Errors, Ireland - - - Salary	267 – –	- - -	66 16 –
Police Justices, Dublin - - - - - Salaries	1,600 – –	- - -	400 – –
Dublin Police - - - - - - - - - -	31,000 – –	3,000 – –	—
Constabulary Police, Ireland - - - - - - -	638,511 – –	20,165 15 9	48,327 14 1
Four Courts, Marshalsea, Ireland - Salaries and Expenses	1,942 – –	64 18 6	388 – –
Prisons, Superintendence - - - - - - -	18,770 – –	1,622 6 8	2,826 12 7
Ditto Establishments at Home - - - - -	375,479 – –	165,200 8 11	17,820 17 1
Ditto Maintenance in County Gaols, &c. - - -	166,174 – –	140,324 – –	12,605 9 7
Ditto Transportation - - - - - - - -	59,405 – –	59,405 – –	—
Ditto Convict Establishments, Colonies - - - -	297,621 – –	135,938 9 –	4,169 18 5
Education, Great Britain - - - - - - -	396,921 – –	41,921 – –	18,314 10 11
Ditto - Ireland - - - - - - - -	215,200 – –	88,200 – –	—
Commissioners of Education, Ireland - Official Expenses	605 – –	- - -	154 10 –
Board of Trade, Science and Art - - - - -	79,364 – –	14,504 14 4	7,860 18 3
University of London - - - - - - -	3,858 – –	3,858 – –	—
Universities, &c., in Scotland - - - - - -	7,952 – –	4,155 10 2	—
Queen's University, in Ireland - - - - - -	2,366 – –	500 – –	—
Queen's Colleges, Ireland - - - - - - -	9,552 – –	4,687 – –	278 15 5
Royal Irish Academy - - - - - - - -	647 – –	23 11 2	123 8 10
Belfast Theological Professors - - - - - -	2,600 – –	784 4 1	537 10 –
British Museum Buildings - - - - - - -	27,520 – –	27,520 – –	—
Ditto - - Purchases - - - - - - -	4,000 – –	- - -	* 4,000 – –
National Gallery - - - - - - - -	17,696 – –	3,696 – –	915 8 9
Scientific Works and Experiments - - - - - -	6,409 – –	3,503 10 9	—
Bermudas - - - - - - - - - -	4,050 – –	1,501 – –	711 2 4
Clergy, North America - - - - - - - -	7,397 – –	7,397 – –	—
Indian Department, Canada - - - - - - -	7,010 – –	7,010 – –	—
Governors, West Indies, &c. - - - - - - -	24,728 – –	20,728 – –	3,727 12 –
Justices - ditto - - - - - - - -	24,750 – –	24,750 – –	—
Western Coast of Africa - - - - - - - -	10,630 – –	9,130 – –	297 2 3

* 3,981 l. 16 s. due to Civil Contingencies.

HEADS OF SERVICE.	Amount of the Vote for the Year.	Unissued in the Exchequer on 31 March 1856.	In the Hands of the Paymaster-General, and of the Paymaster of Civil Services in Ireland, on 31 March 1856.
Year 1855-56—continued.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
St. Helena	11,057 – –	2,557 – –	1,152 – –
Heligoland	976 – –	976 – –	—
Falkland Islands	2,807 – –	100 – –	1,488 3 9
Hong Kong	3,800 – –	3,800 – –	—
Emigration	16,720 – –	11,720 – –	1,279 13 6
Emigrants in Canada	10,500 – –	10,500 – –	—
Captured Negroes	10,000 – –	10,000 – –	—
Commissioners, Slave Trade Suppression	11,250 – –	11,250 – –	—
Consuls Abroad	157,669 – –	13,084 7 –	1,769 8 2
Superannuations	138,609 – –	41,776 16 9	11,847 5 9
Toulonese and Corsican Emigrants	2,270 – –	2,270 – –	—
Refuge for the Destitute	325 – –	325 – –	—
Polish Refugees and Distressed Spaniards	4,200 – –	1,200 – –	861 7 8
Miscellaneous Charges, formerly Civil List	4,371 – –	2,371 – –	1,426 15 11
Public Infirmaries, Ireland	2,985 – –	- - -	490 8 8
Foundling Hospital, Dublin	1,295 – –	1,295 – –	—
House of Industry, Dublin	11,790 – –	5,059 – –	2 – –
Female Orphan House, Dublin	500 – –	300 – –	—
Dissenting Ministers, Ireland	38,953 – –	2,303 18 –	50 19 9
Concordatum Fund, Ireland	6,384 – –	974 2 8	370 5 3
General Board of Health	10,945 – –	- - -	4,699 12 6
Ecclesiastical Commissioners	3,498 – –	- - -	1,510 14 8
Charity Commissioners, England	12,390 – –	- - -	3,494 11 7
Patent Law Amendment Act	22,572 – –	11,215 – –	2,622 6 –
Statute Law Commissioners	3,711 – –	2,711 – –	644 5 5
Incumbered Estates Commission, Ireland	15,480 – –	70 12 3	3,933 10 1
Brehon Laws Commissioners, Ireland	900 – –	400 – –	—
Process Servers, Ireland	9,000 – –	4,848 – –	—
Joint Stock Company Registration	2,270 – –	2,270 – –	—
Merchant Seamen's Fund, Pensions	69,115 – –	36,115 – –	1,055 7 10
Battersea Park	25,500 – –	5,500 – –	3,685 12 9
Chelsea Embankment	25,000 – –	25,000 – –	—
Lighthouses Abroad	10,700 – –	10,700 – –	—
Agricultural Statistics	10,300 – –	5,800 – –	730 1 5
Fishery Board, Scotland	14,000 – –	3,424 13 10	—
Commissioners of Highland Roads and Bridges	5,000 – –	- - -	5,000 – –
Bounties on Slaves	12,000 – –	8,000 – –	997 – –
Dues under Treaties of Reciprocity	68,500 – –	35,338 4 9	—
Revising Barristers	17,850 – –	- - -	142 16 –
Inspectors of Corn Returns	3,800 – –	1,528 7 1	—
Quarantine Expenses	3,600 – –	- - -	841 14 7
British Consulate Buildings, Constantinople	5,752 – –	5,752 – –	—
Ambassador's Residence, Constantinople	4,578 – –	- - -	1,262 9 4
Building Courts of Law, Isle of Man	1,550 – –	1,550 – –	—
Public Records Repository, Iron Doors	9,000 – –	9,000 – –	—
Downing-street Buildings	40,000 – –	29,000 – –	6,001 3 4
Army and Navy Medals	132,500 – –	80,000 – –	1,253 3 6
United States Claimants	68,131 – –	12,131 – –	1,851 – 6
British Seamen Abroad, Relief	17,000 – –	13,000 – –	833 19 3
National Gallery, Ireland	3,000 – –	3,000 – –	—
Cape of Good Hope, Employment of Native Tribes	40,000 – –	20,000 – –	—
Pall Mall to Green Park, Continuation	5,800 – –	5,800 – –	—
Monument to Sir John Franklin	800 – –	400 – –	—
Museum at Kensington Gore	15,000 – –	11,000 – –	1,045 12 –
Customs, Salaries, &c.	835,182 – –	230,696 8 1	—
Ditto - Coast Guard	483,238 – –	145,308 15 3	—
Inland Revenue, Salaries	1,365,950 – –	462,135 13 2	—
Ditto - Revenue Police	62,720 – –	17,725 2 –	—
Post Office, Salaries, &c.	1,638,861 – –	469,137 14 11	—
	£.	3,581,527 8 4	341,204 10 11

Appendix, No. 17.

ABSTRACT of the AMOUNT of UNEXPENDED BALANCES on the several VOTES for MISCELLANEOUS SERVICES, on the 31st March 1856.

YEARS.	Unexpended Balances on 31st March 1856.		TOTALS.
	In the Exchequer.	In the Pay Offices.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Voted in 1841-42 - - - -	- - -	2,462 - -	2,462 - -
„ 1849-50 - - - -	- - -	329 1 10	329 1 10
„ 1850-51 - - - -	- - -	4,055 - 4	4,055 - 4
„ 1851-52 - - - -	- - -	947 13 11	947 13 11
„ 1852-53 - - - -	- - -	11,441 3 -	11,441 3 -
„ 1853-54 - - - -	77,653 16 8	38,290 14 11	115,944 11 7
Deduct savings surrendered since 31st March - - - -	77,653 16 8	- - -	77,653 16 8
	—	38,290 14 11	38,290 14 11
Voted in 1854-55 - - - -	448,683 10 6	60,452 7 4	509,135 17 10
Deduct savings - - - -	245,192 14 8	- - -	245,192 14 8
	203,490 15 10	60,452 7 4	263,943 3 2
Voted in 1855-56 - - - -	3,581,527 8 4	341,204 10 11	3,922,731 19 3
Deduct savings - - - -	66,692 9 4	- - -	66,692 9 4
	3,514,834 19 -	341,204 10 11	3,856,039 9 11
NET TOTAL, after abating Savings surrendered since the 31st March 1856 - - - - £.	3,718,325 14 10	459,182 12 3	4,177,508 7 1

Treasury, 18 June 1856.

James Wilson.

Appendix, No. 18.

AN ACCOUNT of the SUM remaining in the EXCHEQUER, &c., on 31 March 1856, on Account of CIVIL CONTINGENCIES. Appendix, No. 18.

	£.	s.	d.
Balance in the Exchequer, being the Amount remaining unissued out of the Vote for 1854–5	16,916	–	–
Balance in the Exchequer, being the Amount voted for the Year 1855–6 (unissued)	100,000	–	–
Balance in the Bank of Ireland	1,083	7	11
£.	117,999	7	11
Less,— Advanced by Paymaster-general (same date)	8,097	13	–
TOTAL £.	109,901	14	11

Appendix, No. 19.

PAPER delivered in by the Assistant Paymaster-General, 4 July 1856. Appendix, No. 19.

BALANCES on the MISCELLANEOUS DEPOSIT FUNDS in the hands of the Paymaster-General on 31 March 1856.

		£.	s.	d.
County Courts Fund (surplus fees and suitors' money)	Under the control of the Treasury.	752	18	1
Effects of deceased British subjects	ditto	3,586	7	5
French Indemnity	ditto	4,660	3	5
Highland Education (dividends on stock)	ditto	1,534	11	6
Irish Reproductive Loan Fund (dividends on stock)	ditto	736	3	5
Knights of Malta (balance of money supplied by the colony for the pensions of the knights).		141	5	–
Persian Embassy (from the East India Company, for the expenses of the embassy).		17,711	14	2
Slave Compensation (dividends on stock)	Treasury	1,036	8	3
Slave Compensation Reserve Fund (dividends on stock)	ditto	686	10	9
Metropolis Improvements, General Account	Commissioners of Works.	2,586	10	5
Metropolis Improvements, Spitalfields Extension	ditto	4,915	–	3
Menai and Conway Bridges (tolls)	ditto	2,193	16	8
Westminster Improvements	ditto	1,774	6	2
Miscellaneous Account (sundry works)	ditto	6,208	19	10
New Inland Revenue Office	ditto	26,504	15	9
Brompton Cemetery (burial fees)	ditto	1,832	9	9
Pimlico Improvements	ditto	2,861	4	3
Southwark Improvements	ditto	2,222	7	1
Westminster New Bridge	ditto	27,505	1	2
Royal Military Asylum, Chelsea	ditto	2,928	8	1
Fee Fund Account of the Superior Courts of Law	Treasury	30,671	5	4
General Board of Health (expenses of surveys repayable to Ordnance).	ditto	4,336	6	9
Crown's Nominee Account	ditto	33,525	18	4
Suspense Account (various small sums held until decided to whom payable).	ditto	1,829	2	–
Wages and effects of deceased merchant seamen	Board of Trade	30,952	4	1
Compensation to owners of the "Highlander," remitted by the French Government.	Treasury	587	6	7
Mercantile Marine Fund	Board of Trade	85,300	18	1
Nautical schools	ditto	1,481	13	9
Registrar of Joint-stock Companies (fees)	ditto	2,722	14	3
Admiralty Court Deposit Fund (surplus balances of suitors' monies).	Treasury	55,413	3	11
Monies payable to Exchequer	ditto	53,959	15	4
Copyhold and Tithe Commission Deposit Account	ditto	36,000	–	–

Paymaster-General's Office, 4 July 1856.

Appendix, No. 20.

Appendix, No. 20. AN ACCOUNT of all MONIES received by the Paymaster-General, except such as were drawn from the Exchequer, or were Repayments of MONIES issued for Services from the Exchequer; Date of such Receipts, and Dates of Payment into the Exchequer, when so paid, for the Year 1855-6; viz.—

CASH RECEIPTS and TRANSFERS in 1855-6 Payable to EXCHEQUER.

Date of Receipt or Transfer.	SERVICES.	Cash Receipts.	Transfers.	Date of Payment to Exchequer.
		£. s. d.	£. s. d.
15 Oct. 1855	Hereditary Revenues - - -	- - -	552 7 10	24 Dec. 1855
26 Dec. „	- ditto - - - - -	- - -	161 12 5	12 Mar. 1856
27 Mar. 1856	- ditto - - - - -	- - -	206 11 3	18 June „
	SURPLUS FEES OF PUBLIC OFFICES:
3 Aug. 1855	Police Courts - - - - -	2,684 18 9	- - -	24 Dec. 1855
26 Oct. „	- ditto - - - - -	2,850 16 6	- - -	„ „
31 Dec. „	- ditto - - - - -	2,898 5 11	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
15 May „	Lunacy Commissioners - - -	128 — —	- - -	24 Dec. 1855
12 July „	- ditto - - - - -	158 — —	- - -	„ „
18 Dec. „	- ditto - - - - -	134 10 —	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
23 Feb. 1856	- ditto - - - - -	743 7 6	- - -	„ „
4 April 1855	Exchequer - - - - -	13 18 6	- - -	24 Dec. 1855
30 June „	- ditto - - - - -	11 16 —	- - -	„ „
28 Sept. „	- ditto - - - - -	22 8 —	- - -	„ „
31 Dec. „	- ditto - - - - -	9 18 6	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
29 Mar. 1856	- ditto - - - - -	4 8 —	- - -	18 June „
26 May 1855	Scotland, per Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer.	- - -	1,301 3 2	1 Oct. 1855
„ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- - -	2,490 11 5	„ „
„ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- - -	552 14 1	„ „
25 June „	- - ditto - - - - -	- - -	9,933 5 3	„ „
26 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - -	- - -	5,243 16 8	24 Dec. „
26 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - -	- - -	8,148 5 10	12 Mar. 1856
27 Mar. 1856	- - ditto - - - - -	- - -	7,668 7 2	18 June „
14 Nov. 1855	Contributions for Salaries of Official Referees.	120 — —	- - -	12 Mar. „
3 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - -	50 — —	- - -	„ „
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	500 — —	- - -	„ „
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	160 — —	- - -	„ „
7 Feb. 1856	- - ditto - - - - -	40 — —	- - -	„ „
14 Dec. 1855	Secretary of Presentations to Lord Chancellor.	265 13 6	- - -	„ „
3 Jan. 1856	Secretary of Commissions to Lord Chancellor.	211 14 5	- - -	„ „
10 „ „	Record Office - - - - -	115 3 6	- - -	„ „
11 „ „	Home Office - - - - -	280 11 —	- - -	„ „
29 Feb. „	- ditto - - - - -	4 14 6	- - -	„ „
16 Jan. „	Colonial Office - - - -	7 13 6	- - -	„ „
12 Mar. „	- ditto - - - - -	7 13 6	- - -	18 June „
11 „ „	Crown Office - - - -	12 2 —	- - -	„ „
31 Dec. 1855	General Register Office - - -	128 5 6	- - -	12 Mar. „
29 Feb. 1856	Salaries of late Marshalsea - -	- - -	153 15 —	„ „
2 April 1855	Gross Revenue of "London Gazette" -	283 5 7	- - -	12 May 1855
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	161 1 3	- - -	„ „
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	187 19 11	- - -	„ „
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	284 5 9	- - -	„ „
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	287 10 9	- - -	„ „
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	303 18 2	- - -	„ „
7 May „	- - ditto - - - - -	451 13 11	- - -	21 June „
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	369 8 3	- - -	„ „
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	283 1 8	- - -	„ „
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	282 15 3	- - -	„ „
4 June „	- - ditto - - - - -	360 5 1	- - -	12 July „
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	310 6 6	- - -	„ „

Date of Receipt or Transfer.	SERVICES.	Cash Receipts. £. s. d.	Transfers.	Date of Payment to Exchequer.
20 June 1855	Gross Revenue of "London Gazette" -	367 5 11	- - -	12 July 1855
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	337 8 4	- - -	„ „
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	121 1 7	- - -	„ „
5 July „	- - ditto - - - - -	173 - 6	- - -	24 Dec. „
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	326 10 1	- - -	„ „
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	298 4 6	- - -	„ „
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	313 11 10	- - -	„ „
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	20 - -	- - -	„ „
2 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - -	232 5 5	- - -	„ „
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	172 8 3	- - -	„ „
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	185 18 10	- - -	„ „
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	334 17 1	- - -	„ „
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	128 7 2	- - -	„ „
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	247 1 5	- - -	„ „
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	97 14 4	- - -	„ „
5 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - -	242 5 5	- - -	„ „
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	232 14 11	- - -	„ „
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	222 4 8	- - -	„ „
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	185 16 -	- - -	„ „
4 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - -	216 8 2	- - -	„ „
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	767 9 10	- - -	„ „
2 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - -	247 7 10	- - -	„ „
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	314 6 5	- - -	„ „
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	287 11 8	- - -	„ „
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	313 6 1	- - -	„ „
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	844 11 -	- - -	„ „
7 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - -	542 18 6	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	333 9 8	- - -	„ „
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	322 18 -	- - -	„ „
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	252 6 7	- - -	„ „
4 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - -	305 19 6	- - -	„ „
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	181 1 11	- - -	„ „
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	173 1 1	- - -	„ „
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	299 17 2	- - -	„ „
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	335 8 3	- - -	„ „
5 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - -	388 13 7	- - -	„ „
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	272 7 11	- - -	„ „
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	245 10 8	- - -	„ „
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	303 5 9	- - -	„ „
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	254 13 2	- - -	„ „
7 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - -	262 9 9	- - -	18 June „
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	162 12 3	- - -	„ „
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	219 14 6	- - -	„ „
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	293 17 -	- - -	„ „
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	160 3 3	- - -	„ „
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	139 13 8	- - -	„ „
18 May 1855	General Board of Health: Expenses of Preliminary Inquiries.	35 16 8	- - -	24 Dec. 1855
21 July „	- - ditto - - - - -	19 16 6	- - -	„ „
4 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - -	18 17 8	- - -	„ „
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	17 10 2	- - -	„ „
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	35 13 9	- - -	„ „
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	14 - 5	- - -	„ „
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	17 18 7	- - -	„ „
12 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - -	22 11 9	- - -	„ „
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	22 4 2	- - -	„ „
6 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - -	24 4 1	- - -	„ „
8 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - -	11 12 -	- - -	„ „
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	12 6 7	- - -	„ „
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	8 14 5	- - -	„ „
3 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - -	22 5 9	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	19 17 7	- - -	„ „
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	203 16 10	- - -	„ „
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	57 11 8	- - -	„ „
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	35 14 6	- - -	„ „
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	16 11 4	- - -	„ „
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	82 4 2	- - -	„ „
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	107 17 -	- - -	„ „
11 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - -	55 8 6	- - -	„ „
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	23 13 -	- - -	„ „
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	38 5 11	- - -	„ „
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	14 1 2	- - -	„ „
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	26 11 8	- - -	„ „
5 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - -	28 15 8	- - -	„ „
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	82 16 10	- - -	„ „

(continued)

Appendix, No. 20.

Date of Receipt or Transfer.	SERVICES.	Cash Receipts. £.	s.	d.	Transfers. £.	s.	d.	Date of Payment to Exchequer.
9 Feb. 1856	General Board of Health: Expenses of Preliminary Inquiries.	157	9	2	-	-	-	12 Mar. 1856
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	36	5	4	-	-	-	„	„
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	59	14	5	-	-	-	„	„
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	215	8	9	-	-	-	„	„
12 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	11	4	8	-	-	-	18 June	„
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	186	6	1	-	-	-	„	„
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	69	7	6	-	-	-	„	„
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	78	8	3	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	24	14	7	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	Conscience Money - - -	-	-	-	8	-	-	„	„
30 Jan. „	Record Office (Publications) - -	78	7	-	-	-	-	12 Mar.	„
21 „ „	Copyhold and Tithe Commission (Searches, &c.)	522	6	-	-	-	-	„	„
26 Dec. 1855	Convict Earnings (Scotland) - -	-	-	-	443	9	11	„	„
31 „ „	National Gallery (Catalogues) -	-	-	-	23	13	7	„	„
April - „	Gain by Exchange at Hanover -	203	9	11	-	-	-	31 May 1855
May - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	3	12	4	-	-	-	31 Aug.	„
June - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	1	17	8	-	-	-	„	„
July - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	152	15	10	-	-	-	„	„
Aug. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	3	14	-	-	-	-	24 Dec.	„
Sept. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	1	6	10	-	-	-	„	„
Oct. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	201	12	10	-	-	-	„	„
Nov. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	3	1	8	-	-	-	„	„
Dec. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	9	6	-	-	-	12 Mar. 1856
Jan. - 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	169	18	10	-	-	-	„	„
Feb. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	3	10	4	-	-	-	Will be paid over in Aug. 1856.
Mar. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	1	6	11	-	-	-
13 April 1855	Superannuation Abatements - -	44	-	-	-	-	-	31 May 1855
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	70	8	8	-	-	-	„	„
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	18	8	3	-	-	-	„	„
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	2,215	2	3	„	„
2 May „	- - ditto - - - - - -	39	15	-	-	-	-	„	„
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	99	18	10	-	-	-	„	„
9 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	7	17	4	-	-	-	31 Aug.	„
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	44	5	-	„	„
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	42	14	10	-	-	-	„	„
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	31	11	3	30	„
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	25	15	-	31	„
10 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	58	13	3	-	-	-	„	„
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	18	8	3	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	2,349	14	10	„	„
3 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	279	12	11	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	21	3	4	24 Dec.	„
26 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	22	17	6	„	„
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	59	10	-	„	„
1 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	42	15	1	-	-	-	„	„
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	18	8	3	-	-	-	„	„
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	530	12	11	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	2,479	14	3	„	„
21 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	39	15	-	-	-	-	„	„
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	58	14	9	-	-	-	„	„
19 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	25	15	-	-	-	-	12 Mar. 1856
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	407	17	7	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	39	18	5	„	„
17 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	59	5	6	-	-	-	„	„
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	18	8	3	-	-	-	„	„
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	64	10	-	-	-	-	„	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	2,682	13	8	„	„
29 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	1,342	16	5	„	„
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	314	3	2	„	„
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	1,432	19	2	„	„
31 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	228	4	9	-	-	-	18 June	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	-	-	-	2,187	6	11	„	„
29 Feb. „	Extra Receipts, Army - - -	-	-	-	349	19	3	12 Mar.	„
29 „ „	- - ditto - Navy - - -	-	-	-	65,671	13	7	„	„
29 „ „	- - ditto - Ordnance - -	-	-	-	71,999	17	9	„	„
31 Mar. „	- - ditto - Commissariat -	-	-	-	41,467	13	3	18 June	„
31 „ „	- - ditto - Public Dapartments	-	-	-	518	3	9	„	„

Less 277*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.*, returned to one of the contributors.

In addition to the foregoing Extra Receipts, which were mere transfers of account, the undermentioned Cash Receipts and Transfers were passed to the credit of the respective departments on orders received from those departments, and were payable to the Exchequer, under the provisions of the Treasury Minute of 2 May 1848; but as they form part of larger sums paid to the Exchequer quarterly upon orders from the departments concerned, embracing the receipts of their sub-accountants, the Paymaster-general has no means of identifying the separate sums received by him in the gross payments made to the Exchequer upon such orders."

Date of Receipt or Transfer.	SERVICES.	Cash Receipts. £. s. d.	Transfers. £. s. d.	Date of Payment to Exchequer.
April - 1855	Extra Receipts, Army - -	49 14 8	—
June - „	- ditto - ditto - -	379 1 1	—
Sept. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	8,341 15 –	—
Feb. - 1856	- ditto - ditto - -	263 17 8	—
Mar. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	8,738 10 –	35,896 10 5
April - 1855	Extra Receipts, Navy - -	2,387 16 11	5,364 14 3
May - „	- ditto - ditto - -	1,658 5 6	239 16 6
June - „	- ditto - ditto - -	794 – 1	1,775 19 4
July - „	- ditto - ditto - -	704 10 10	193 11 3
Aug. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	4,375 7 1	198 12 5
Sept. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	197 17 3	5,366 5 10
Oct. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	1,177 8 3	322 13 2
Nov. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	877 6 9	11,943 13 10
Dec. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	1,312 3 3	27,054 2 10
Jan. - 1856	- ditto - ditto - -	1,943 4 6	708 1 11
Feb. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	1,710 3 1	137 12 –
Mar. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	614 12 7	77 8 3
April - 1855	Extra Receipts, Ordnance - -	447 10 –	—
May - „	- ditto - ditto - -	2,848 11 9	26,849 15 8
June - „	- ditto - ditto - -	306 19 3	60 5 –
July - „	- ditto - ditto - -	937 12 8	137 9 –
Aug. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	197 – 2	2,620 – –
Sept. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	3,621 15 4	—
Oct. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	147 3 9	96 1 9
Nov. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	15,779 13 11	—
Dec. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	3,082 5 2	—
Jan. - 1856	- ditto - ditto - -	165 5 9	119 18 2
Feb. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	638 15 11	89 – 5
Mar. - „	- ditto - ditto - -	819 2 4	8,251 8 5
3 Dec. 1855	Interest on Advances for rebuilding London Bridge.	6,000 – –	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
24 April „	London Bridge Approaches Fund	1,374 16 8	- - -	28 May 1855
17 May „	- ditto - - - - -	29,343 15 4	- - -	„ „
14 July „	- ditto - - - - -	1,362 13 4	- - -	24 Dec. „
13 Aug. „	- ditto - - - - -	34,840 2 1	- - -	15 Aug. „
16 Oct. „	- ditto - - - - -	1,362 13 4	- - -	24 Dec. „
1 Dec. „	- ditto - - - - -	33,041 10 6	- - -	„ „
15 Jan. 1856	- ditto - - - - -	1,362 13 4	- - -	12 Mar. 1856
27 Feb. „	- ditto - - - - -	34,536 11 6	- - -	„ „
19 July 1855	Glasgow and Carlisle Roads (Rents)	42 13 4	- - -	24 Dec. 1855
31 Jan. 1856	Metropolis Improvements (Rents)	- - -	450 14 1	12 Mar. 1856
31 „ „	Holyhead Roads (Interest) - -	- - -	265 7 6	„ „
31 Mar. „	- ditto - - - - -	- - -	35 18 10	18 June „
31 „ „	- ditto - - - - -	- - -	6 14 5	„ „
	£. 7,000,000 raised under the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 130; viz.
	Exchequer Bills:
21 Aug. 1855	Proceeds of £. 1,000,000 - -	1,002,500 – –	- - -	21 Aug. 1855
28 „ „	- ditto - 1,500,000 - -	1,503,750 – –	- - -	28 „ „
29 „ „	- ditto - 200,000 - -	200,500 – –	- - -	29 „ „
25 Oct. „	- ditto - 300,000 - -	301,625 – –	- - -	25 Oct. „
26 Dec. „	- ditto - 500,000 - -	505,937 10 –	- - -	26 Dec. „
9 Jan. 1856	- ditto - 500,000 - -	506,666 13 4	- - -	9 Jan. 1856
21 „ „	- ditto - 500,000 - -	507,291 13 4	- - -	21 „ „
29 „ „	- ditto - 500,000 - -	507,708 6 8	- - -	29 „ „
14 Feb. „	- ditto - 500,000 - -	508,541 13 4	- - -	14 Feb. „
16 „ „	- ditto - 500,000 - -	508,645 16 8	- - -	16 „ „
	Exchequer Bonds:
2 Jan. „	Proceeds of £. 500,000 - -	491,511 19 8	- - -	2 Jan. „
21 „ „	- ditto - 500,000 - -	492,422 18 10	- - -	21 „ „

Appendix, No. 20.

Cash Receipts in 1855–6 Not Payable to Exchequer.

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount. £.	s.	d.
11 April 1855	Canada Guaranteed Loan Sinking Fund	Under the Control of the Treasury.	6,768	18	9
13 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	6,882	10	11
31 May „	County Courts Fund	ditto	1,000	–	–
20 June „	ditto	ditto	1,000	–	–
28 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,500	–	–
8 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	2,000	–	–
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,000	–	–
1 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	2,500	–	–
10 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	500	–	–
6 Dec. „	ditto	ditto	500	–	–
26 „ „	ditto	ditto	500	–	–
24 April „	Effects of deceased British Subjects	ditto	216	19	8
5 May „	ditto	ditto	5	–	3
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	6	8	4
31 July „	ditto	ditto	60	18	11
29 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	70	5	–
7 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	28	2	8
13 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	48	8	11
5 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	281	1	1
14 „ „	ditto	ditto	2	18	8
7 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	130	12	3
5 Feb. „	ditto	ditto	35	8	4
10 Mar. „	ditto	ditto	55	11	–
17 „ „	ditto	ditto	179	16	5
12 June 1855	French Claims	ditto	43	5	3
9 July „	Highland Education	ditto	369	19	11
9 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	369	19	11
11 April 1855	Irish Reproductive Loan Fund	ditto	112	19	5
6 June „	ditto	ditto	6	19	11
13 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	119	19	4
18 Mar. 1856	ditto	ditto	543	18	–
13 Aug. „	Pensions of Knights of Malta	Colony	450	–	–
30 June 1855	Persian Embassy, defrayed by the East India Company.		3,000	–	–
29 Sept. „	ditto		3,000	–	–
22 Dec. „	ditto		3,000	–	–
31 Mar. 1856	ditto		3,000	–	–
11 May 1855	Metropolis Improvements: General Account.	Commissioners of Works	368	–	2
12 June „	ditto	ditto	416	18	10
14 July „	ditto	ditto	1,139	8	1
10 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	561	5	5
12 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	9	8	3
10 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	14	19	11
7 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	489	11	1
5 Dec. „	ditto	ditto	122	7	4
3 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	129	12	5
24 „ „	ditto	ditto	200	–	–
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	57	17	9
8 Feb. „	ditto	ditto	108	14	5
11 Mar. „	ditto	ditto	53	16	4
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,385	8	9
11 May 1855	Metropolis Improvements: Spitalfields Extension.	ditto	43	15	11
12 June „	ditto	ditto	3,753	12	9
14 July „	ditto	ditto	–	5	–
5 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	100	–	–
8 „ „	ditto	ditto	231	8	–
27 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	94	–	2
3 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	32	1	3
8 Feb. „	ditto	ditto	112	14	3
11 Mar. „	ditto	ditto	23	6	7
25 April 1855	Menai and Conway Bridges: Tolls	ditto	197	14	4
8 June „	ditto	ditto	24	15	1
12 „ „	ditto	ditto	122	8	4
26 „ „	ditto	ditto	144	13	8
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	238	10	3
30 July „	ditto	ditto	211	10	7
23 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	201	11	5

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£. s. d.
20 Sept. 1855	Menai and Conway Bridges: Tolls -	Commissioners of Works	242 17 11
26 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	266 14 1
22 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	175 7 11
5 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	121 6 7
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	151 1 10
28 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	134 19 5
18 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	99 2 2
20 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	108 15 4
18 July 1855	Loans, &c., Shrewsbury and Holyhead Roads.	- - ditto - - -	550 15 10
9 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	210 15 –
3 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	200 – –
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	100 – –
5 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	97 6 1
3 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	474 8 10
15 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	6 14 5
27 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	43 – 4
26 June 1855	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	93 16 9
5 April „	Miscellaneous Works Accounts - -	- - ditto - - -	6,000 – –
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	10 – –
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	15 8 5
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	124 7 –
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	355 9 5
11 May „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	18 – 3
7 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	95 18 8
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	29 14 9
9 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	61 8 11
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	3 5 10
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	5,820 16 9
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	297 12 1
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	252 4 4
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	750 – –
10 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	20 18 10
12 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	14 17 4
13 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	15 8 5
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	8,077 7 6
9 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	315 – –
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	825 19 –
17 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	3,569 14 3
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	1,168 4 6
9 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	61 8 11
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	1,435 – 7
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	127 6 –
8 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	43 17 3
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	177 1 10
3 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	69 15 10
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	3,860 18 1
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	248 2 11
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	200 – –
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	3,440 12 9
18 Jan. „	New Inland Revenue Office - -	- - ditto - - -	30,000 – –
4 April 1855	Brompton Cemetery - - -	- - ditto - - -	192 5 5
3 May „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	755 8 6
5 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	658 9 –
5 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	590 16 6
4 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	610 2 9
6 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	565 11 6
4 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	378 9 10
5 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	500 6 –
5 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	568 4 –
5 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	645 13 8
6 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	665 14 6
5 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	535 7 6
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	1 17 6
11 May 1855	Pimlico Improvements - -	- - ditto - - -	9 9 11
30 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	2,260 – 1
14 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	35 9 3
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	182 17 5
10 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	46 17 5
10 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	96 11 1
7 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	28 4 10
3 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	64 18 11
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	23 18 1
3 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	10 18 8

(continued)

Appendix, No. 20.

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£.	s.	d.
8 Feb. 1856	Pimlico Improvements	Commissioners of Works	128	16	8
11 Mar. „	ditto	ditto	82	18	7
18 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,094	–	–
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	42	19	10
12 June 1855	Southwark Improvements	ditto	619	4	–
18 Mar. 1856	ditto	ditto	2,196	14	–
18 April 1855	Westminster New Bridge	ditto	9,012	10	–
5 June „	ditto	ditto	228	6	9
7 „ „	ditto	ditto	5,726	–	–
29 „ „	ditto	ditto	17,480	–	–
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	5,424	–	–
11 July „	ditto	ditto	147	8	2
12 „ „	ditto	ditto	30	2	4
14 „ „	ditto	ditto	5	19	11
17 „ „	ditto	ditto	3,862	–	–
25 „ „	ditto	ditto	800	–	–
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	510	–	–
4 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	259	1	–
11 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,872	–	–
14 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,144	–	–
18 „ „	ditto	ditto	700	–	–
23 „ „	ditto	ditto	904	–	–
28 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,040	–	–
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	3,376	–	–
3 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	293	17	10
10 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,798	–	–
13 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,546	–	–
10 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	454	18	8
11 „ „	ditto	ditto	480	–	–
23 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,008	–	–
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	936	–	–
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,000	–	–
1 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	5,725	11	9
5 „ „	ditto	ditto	26	1	10
16 „ „	ditto	ditto	17	3	10
22 „ „	ditto	ditto	2	6	7
6 Dec. „	ditto	ditto	562	13	10
15 „ „	ditto	ditto	29	11	8
9 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	147	8	2
24 „ „	ditto	ditto	141	18	8
7 Feb. „	ditto	ditto	434	7	5
1 Mar. „	ditto	ditto	1,173	7	3
11 „ „	ditto	ditto	426	–	–
10 April 1855	Fee Fund of the Superior Courts of Law	Treasury	467	18	6
11 „ „	ditto	ditto	365	18	8
13 „ „	ditto	ditto	281	13	2
14 „ „	ditt	ditto	844	10	9
16 „ „	ditto	ditto	409	9	6
18 „ „	ditto	ditto	745	4	1
19 „ „	ditto	ditto	403	2	–
23 „ „	ditt	ditto	52	3	6
24 „ „	ditto	ditto	280	12	5
25 „ „	ditto	ditto	116	10	6
5 May „	ditto	ditto	632	3	9
14 „ „	ditto	ditto	820	9	8
16 „ „	ditto	ditto	3,786	5	8
24 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,939	4	4
5 June „	ditto	ditto	67	7	6
6 „ „	ditto	ditto	86	8	10
7 „ „	ditto	ditto	126	13	2
8 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,672	9	3
9 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,123	12	7
12 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,240	1	6
27 „ „	ditto	ditto	164	11	6
13 July „	ditto	ditto	258	18	8
14 „ „	ditto	ditto	143	18	6
4 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	450	–	–
15 „ „	ditto	ditto	3,950	8	2
3 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	2,766	–	5
22 „ „	ditto	ditto	340	13	–
28 „ „	ditto	ditto	237	2	4
4 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	896	10	3
9 „ „	ditto	ditto	314	4	4

Appendix, No. 20.

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount. £. s. d.
19 Oct. 1855	Fee Fund of the Superior Courts of Law	Treasury	757 15 10
20 „ „	ditto	ditto	420 19 –
25 „ „	ditto	ditto	372 3 3
26 „ „	ditto	ditto	854 13 4
27 „ „	ditto	ditto	272 16 10
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	279 1 5
15 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	127 – 10
1 Dec. „	ditto	ditto	119 17 7
20 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,180 5 –
21 „ „	ditto	ditto	685 10 –
22 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,615 – –
24 „ „	ditto	ditto	152 17 6
1 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	94 2 11
2 „ „	ditto	ditto	45 4 6
5 „ „	ditto	ditto	171 13 –
11 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,418 16 2
12 „ „	ditto	ditto	49 6 8
15 „ „	ditto	ditto	26 4 2
25 „ „	ditto	ditto	93 2 9
7 Feb. „	ditto	ditto	375 14 11
27 „ „	ditto	ditto	3,601 6 11
23 Aug. 1855	General Board of Health (Ordnance Surveys).	ditto	335 12 6
28 „ „	ditto	ditto	330 14 6
8 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	63 1 11
31 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	623 15 7
22 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	705 12 11
19 Dec. „	ditto	ditto	496 10 5
4 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	197 18 3
12 „ „	ditto	ditto	151 12 6
25 „ „	ditto	ditto	397 13 9
6 Feb. „	ditto	ditto	593 3 7
27 Mar. „	ditto	ditto	440 10 10
3 April 1855	Crown's Nominee Account	ditto	84 5 7
12 „ „	ditto	ditto	171 19 9
13 „ „	ditto	ditto	50 17 10
14 „ „	ditto	ditto	423 16 3
16 „ „	ditto	ditto	200 – –
20 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,329 15 2
26 „ „	ditto	ditto	110 9 9
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	75 13 8
3 May „	ditto	ditto	201 10 4
5 „ „	ditto	ditto	80 2 8
8 „ „	ditto	ditto	378 14 –
9 „ „	ditto	ditto	460 – 7
15 „ „	ditto	ditto	199 3 5
22 „ „	ditto	ditto	227 3 3
25 May „	ditto	ditto	17 19 11
4 June „	ditto	ditto	53 19 10
8 „ „	ditto	ditto	72 9 10
16 „ „	ditto	ditto	700 – –
18 „ „	ditto	ditto	5 2 8
28 „ „	ditto	ditto	42 16 11
30 „ „	ditto	ditto	238 13 2
2 July „	ditto	ditto	160 – 4
17 „ „	ditto	ditto	14 4 6
19 „ „	ditto	ditto	147 11 7
23 „ „	ditto	ditto	32 14 –
25 „ „	ditto	ditto	826 11 3
28 „ „	ditto	ditto	145 19 5
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	46 1 3
23 Aug. „	ditto	ditto	2,276 14 –
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	9 19 9
5 Sept. „	ditto	ditto	61 9 3
13 Oct. „	ditto	ditto	608 16 11
26 „ „	ditto	ditto	395 8 9
10 Nov. „	ditto	ditto	9,660 8 9
26 Dec. „	ditto	ditto	54,218 – –
27 „ „	ditto	ditto	273 1 4
31 „ „	ditto	ditto	2,225 11 11
1 Jan. 1856	ditto	ditto	88 5 1
18 „ „	ditto	ditto	1,053 12 2
19 „ „	ditto	ditto	666 9 2
21 „ „	ditto	ditto	361 6 3

(continued)

Appendix, No. 20.

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£.	s.	d.
30 Jan. 1856	Crown's Nominee Account - -	Treasury - - -	2	2	–
8 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	459	15	1
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	250	7	8
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	160	12	3
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3,863	17	6
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,052	–	10
4 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,168	16	–
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	226	1	8
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	667	4	10
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	92	18	3
4 April 1855	Wages and Effects of Deceased Merchant Seamen.	Board of Trade - -	2	16	6
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	18	10	5
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	162	18	10
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	20	16	3
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,191	14	6
4 May „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	97	16	3
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	–	18	–
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	22	18	2
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	15	12	10
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	34	11	6
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	17	18	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	102	18	9
1 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	9	15	–
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1	5	1
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	18	10	3
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	62	8	10
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	16	6	9
12 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	6	5	10
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	25	18	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3	4	11
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	31	13	11
18 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2	14	4
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	6	12	10
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	81	15	2
18 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	13	5	6
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	18	1	6
4 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2	11	6
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	22	19	11
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10	9	6
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	41	18	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	31	7	1
8 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	119	19	10
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	140	8	5
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	49	11	10
19 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	4	4	5
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	15	1	8
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	6,153	18	1
1 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	39	5	7
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	13	14	2
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	233	12	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	85	12	9
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	–	15	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	121	7	5
1 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	62	4	9
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	22	9	2
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	22	13	7
4 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	32	1	9
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	177	10	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	–	–	6
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3	12	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	20	5	2
4 June 1855	Suspense Accounts: Jersey Domain -	Treasury - - -	366	–	9
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - ditto - -	- ditto - - -	33	19	3
15 „ „	- - ditto - - Patents of Invention.	- ditto - - -	26	–	6
11 Jan. 1856	Suspense Accounts; St. Catherine's Harbour.	- ditto - - -	380	17	6
9 July 1855	Sales of Crown Lands, Bermuda -	- - - - -	16	5	3
31 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - - - -	–	13	1
9 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - - - -	16	5	3

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£.	s.	d.
4 April 1855	Mercantile Marine Fund - - -	Board of Trade - -	650	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,051	15	2
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,399	17	6
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	16	18	3
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	442	–	9
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	139	–	3
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	98	16	6
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	29	15	2
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	30	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	34	10	4
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	33	8	6
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	20	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	27	–	4
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	76	12	5
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3,000	–	–
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	57	5	2
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	54	8	2
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,030	–	–
1 May „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	405	19	1
4 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,800	–	–
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	145	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	968	18	10
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	530	–	–
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	315	16	6
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,000	–	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,720	–	–
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	200	–	–
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	109	12	1
1 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,000	–	–
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	280	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	110	–	–
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	5,302	3	10
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	600	–	–
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,283	6	4
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,000	–	–
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,100	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,500	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,000	–	–
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,020	–	–
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	250	–	–
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,000	–	–
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3,000	–	–
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	250	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,500	–	–
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	18,456	3	1
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,050	–	–
1 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -
2 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,982	14	3
3 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	565	–	–
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,378	18	3
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	588	6	2
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	23	15	5
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	158	–	–
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	8,089	7	4
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	125	18	11
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,000	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,000	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	135	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,000	–	–
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	317	12	2
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,000	–	–
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	55	–	–
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	40	–	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	59	16	8
2 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,013	9	1
3 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,038	9	1
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,355	19	8
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,689	1	6
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	740	–	–
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	662	4	11
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	12,396	19	3

(continued)

Appendix, No. 20.

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£.	s.	d.
11 Aug. 1855	Mercantile Marine Fund - - -	Board of Trade - -	160	–	–
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	140	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,500	–	–
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,500	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	214	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	500	–	–
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	330	–	–
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,950	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,000	–	–
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	6	2	11
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10	–	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	947	–	–
1 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,050	–	–
3 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	250	18	–
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	300	–	–
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,837	19	3
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	12,400	–	–
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	175	–	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	185	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	250	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	400	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	646	–	–
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,969	15	7
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,598	4	9
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	30	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	13,270	–	–
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	390	–	–
4 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	138	–	–
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,686	12	11
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	301	10	8
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3,018	7	10
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	726	14	3
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	83	15	–
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,219	7	1
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,372	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,500	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	150	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	152	13	5
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	13,500	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	270	–	–
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	270	–	–
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	200	–	–
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	260	2	6
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	800	–	–
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	240	–	–
2 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,963	–	–
3 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	768	8	3
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,650	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	830	–	–
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	270	6	6
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	120	–	–
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,700	–	–
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	300	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,150	–	–
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,000	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,226	8	6
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	160	–	–
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,060	–	–
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	123	–	–
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,100	–	–
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	30	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,200	–	–
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	551	–	–
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,200	–	–
3 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	380	–	–
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	170	–	–
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	11,631	16	11
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	280	–	–

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£.	s.	d.
13 Dec. 1855	Mercantile Marine Fund - - -	Board of Trade - -	104	–	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,512	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,592	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	750	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	40	–	5
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	12,150	–	–
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	238	–	–
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,000	11	4
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	320	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	880	–	–
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	850	–	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,925	–	–
1 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,000	–	–
2 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	72	3	5
3 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	48	3	8
4 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	922	9	7
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	754	19	4
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	108	5	5
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	109	6	5
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	299	8	5
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,178	–	–
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	450	–	–
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	253	11	8
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	82	14	8
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	12,200	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	104	1	3
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	705	2	11
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	86	10	1
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	400	–	–
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,417	14	2
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	490	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,748	11	10
30 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	750	–	–
1 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	17,650	–	–
2 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	3,468	16	6
4 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	150	–	–
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	500	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,335	–	1
8 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	75	2	6
9 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	235	–	–
11 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
12 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	50	–	–
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,400	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	370	–	–
16 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,140	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	65	–	–
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	70	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,000	–	–
21 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	250	–	–
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	8,115	–	–
23 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	150	–	–
25 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	159	–	–
27 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	830	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	73	3	2
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	498	7	6
1 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,211	11	1
3 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	35	–	–
4 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	105	–	–
5 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	207	14	3
6 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	380	–	–
7 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,370	–	–
10 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	400	–	–
13 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	100	–	–
14 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,370	–	–
15 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	149	–	–
17 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	750	–	–
18 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,532	12	10
19 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	215	–	–
20 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	500	–	–
22 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,925	–	–
24 „ „	- - ditto - - - - -	- ditto - - -	348	–	–

(continued)

Appendix, No. 20.

Date of Receipt.	SERVICES.		Amount.
			£.	s.	d.
25 Mar. 1856	Mercantile Marine Fund - - -	Board of Trade - -	231	–	–
26 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	540	–	–
28 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	9,990	7	11
29 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	370	–	–
14 April 1855	Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies (Fees).	- ditto - - -	501	19	4
23 May „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	278	18	8
23 June „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	321	18	2
20 July „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	182	11	10
13 Aug. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	312	12	10
19 Sept. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	328	15	–
13 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	240	9	–
14 Nov. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	402	12	10
21 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	348	12	–
21 Jan. 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	277	5	–
26 Feb. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	834	8	8
20 Mar. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	630	10	–
13 Sept. 1855	Admiralty Court Deposit Fund - -	Treasury - - -	6,000	–	–
5 Oct. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,000	–	–
21 Dec. „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,000	–	–
31 „ „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,000	–	–
6 Feb. 1856	Copyhold and Tithe Commission Deposit Account.	- ditto - - -	36,000	–	–
June - 1855	Army Prize - - - - -	Secretary-at-War -	191	11	3
July - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	799	8	16
Aug. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	57	2	–
Jan. - 1856	- ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	856	10	10
April - 1855	Drouly Annuities - - - -	- - ditto - - -	166	1	1
Oct. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	166	1	1
July - „	Chelsea Property and Legacy Fund -	- - ditto - - -	111	18	3
Aug. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	171	11	–
Jan. - 1856	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	111	18	3
Mar. - „	- - ditto - - - - - -	- - ditto - - -	53	16	2
April - 1855	Naval Prize - - - - -	Admiralty - - -	7,913	2	6
May - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	8,516	6	9
June - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	595	19	1
July - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,781	7	11
Aug. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,629	4	6
Sept. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,809	18	7
Oct. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	329	13	8
Nov. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	5,778	14	9
Dec. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	8,193	16	4
Jan. - 1856	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	10,893	16	4
Feb. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	1,630	–	–
Mar. - „	- ditto - - - - - -	- ditto - - -	2,059	–	5

Paymaster-General's Office,
July 1856.

Appendix, No. 21.

PAYMASTER-GENERAL'S BALANCES at the Close of each Day on all his Bank Accounts, in the Three Months ended 30 June 1838; also, Balances on the Accounts of the PAYMASTER-GENERAL OF THE FORCES and of the TREASURER OF THE NAVY on each Day of the corresponding Three Months of the Year 1836.

DATE.	Exchequer Credit Account.	Cash Account.	Drawing Account.	Bill Account.	TOTALS.	Naval Prize and other Appropriated Balances.	Balances in two of the Separate Offices. DATE.	Paymaster of the Forces.	Treasurer of the Navy.
1838:	£.	£.	£.	£.	£	£.	1836:	£.	£.
April 2	38,112	1,156	10,458	7,475	57,201	19,437	April 2	78,142	28,963
„ 3	58,062	1,159	19,005	4,124	82,350	19,437	„ 4	157,299	130,988
„ 4	25,062	2,122	1,530	3,425	32,139	21,355	„ 5	153,975	99,122
„ 5	58,062	2,471	9,231	4,352	74,116	22,855	„ 6	145,678	79,713
„ 6	243,118	2,487	4,323	3,981	253,909	22,855	„ 7	139,424	70,226
„ 7	198,118	153	5,697	5,711	209,679	22,855	„ 8	126,927	60,751
„ 9	77,118	248	3,548	92,340	173,254	22,855	„ 9	122,073	50,480
„ 10	50,118	668	6,479	10,262	67,527	22,855	„ 11	119,887	35,829
„ 11	8,118	1,595	2,179	12,290	24,182	22,855	„ 12	113,993	83,506
„ 12	4,118	1,783	5,789	27,755	39,445	22,855	„ 13	112,426	60,768
„ 14	16,118	1,957	3,586	7,288	28,949	22,855	„ 14	103,540	53,132
„ 16	15,118	2,137	12,259	7,351	36,865	22,855	„ 16	78,124	25,592
„ 17	25,118	2,178	3,782	18,411	49,489	22,855	„ 18	159,631	49,656
„ 18	20,118	2,631	3,614	3,778	30,141	22,855	„ 19	153,735	43,552
„ 19	36,021	9,947	2,288	2,662	50,918	22,855	„ 15	101,701	42,786
„ 20	41,021	10,010	6,924	15,106	73,061	22,855	„ 20	139,636	77,948
„ 21	28,021	510	5,734	6,068	40,333	22,855	„ 21	124,870	51,452
„ 23	8,021	852	7,970	18,471	35,314	22,855	„ 22	89,043	28,144
„ 24	10,021	856	8,336	17,979	37,192	22,855	„ 23	104,515	103,605
„ 25	12,021	959	7,162	16,123	36,265	22,855	„ 25	91,310	93,680
„ 26	9,021	1,460	7,687	12,986	31,154	22,855	„ 26	74,342	70,082
„ 27	5,000	1,493	4,598	24,912	36,003	22,855	„ 27	60,448	60,396
„ 28	3,000	622	5,151	15,552	24,325	22,855	„ 28	32,633	53,099
„ 30	3,000	932	7,956	23,609	35,497	21,916	„ 29	89,814	40,765
							„ 30	87,294	16,518
May 1	- -	6,796	9,430	19,968	36,194	21,916	May 2	73,442	43,492
„ 2	10,000	8,208	867	9,892	28,967	21,916	„ 3	62,301	34,603
„ 3	10,000	356	6,837	15,117	32,310	21,916	„ 4	46,571	20,267
„ 4	10,000	2,311	9,202	9,889	31,402	22,916	„ 5	13,867	76,790
„ 5	10,000	2,552	8,027	9,110	29,689	22,916	„ 6	65,895	65,954
„ 7	7,000	304	5,282	9,908	22,494	22,916	„ 7	55,253	57,366
„ 8	- -	481	3,755	13,260	17,496	22,916	„ 9	17,466	48,337
„ 9	10,000	481	10,469	6,259	27,209	22,916	„ 10	12,262	41,306
„ 10	20,000	1,243	5,712	11,659	38,614	22,916	„ 11	41,781	22,003
„ 11	5,000	1,547	7,206	18,986	32,739	22,916	„ 12	25,598	59,469
„ 12	9,000	597	3,558	15,020	28,175	22,916	„ 13	24,027	51,873
„ 14	- -	730	3,413	19,008	23,151	22,922	„ 14	158,036	49,005
„ 15	10,000	1,066	7,172	6,289	24,527	23,365	„ 16	170,031	44,788
„ 16	5,000	8,921	3,772	10,665	28,358	23,365	„ 17	166,508	37,242
„ 17	- -	9,021	9,760	7,177	25,958	23,365	„ 18	162,325	29,612
„ 18	- -	1,463	3,754	18,229	23,386	23,365	„ 19	150,174	58,424
„ 19	- -	130	3,666	6,055	9,851	23,365	„ 20	168,901	50,795
„ 21	- -	131	- -	5,316	5,447	23,371	„ 21	162,187	42,782
„ 22	4,000	2,179	2,070	6,599	14,848	23,371	„ 23	159,315	38,392
„ 23	5,000	808	3,164	14,840	23,812	23,371	„ 24	156,968	34,972
„ 24	5,000	966	5,411	5,835	17,212	23,371	„ 25	150,506	61,843
„ 25	10,000	977	3,024	6,879	20,880	23,371	„ 26	147,250	60,173
„ 26	8,000	977	1,864	6,256	17,097	23,371	„ 27	154,713	46,435
„ 28	- -	1,119	4,653	10,446	16,218	23,371	„ 28	153,408	—
„ 29	- -	1,672	- -	7,991	9,663	23,371	„ 30	130,004	34,248
„ 30	7,000	1,832	1,178	6,887	16,897	23,371	„ 31	133,050	60,793
„ 31	7,000	693	968	9,694	18,355	23,584
June 1	15,000	5,114	1,037	6,154	27,305	23,584	June 1	40,872	61,684
„ 2	10,000	5,396	5,795	5,557	26,748	23,584	„ 2	64,939	41,587
„ 4	8,000	397	4,848	6,090	19,335	23,584	„ 3	57,967	32,885
„ 5	11,000	1,089	7,014	5,553	24,647	23,584	„ 4	59,259	26,710
„ 6	13,000	1,109	375	6,230	20,714	23,901	„ 6	54,231	59,099

(continued)

DATE.	Exchequer Credit Account.	Cash Account.	Drawing Account.	Bill Account.	Totals.	Naval Prize and other Appropriated Balances.	Balances in two of the separate Offices. DATE.	Paymaster of the Forces.	Treasurer of the Navy.
1838:	£.	£.	£.	£.	£.	£.	1836:	£.	£.
June 7	5,000	1,199	4,416	5,512	16,127	23,901	June 7	42,354	45,797
„ 8	8,000	2,014	2,577	5,870	18,461	23,901	„ 8	41,444	39,560
„ 9	5,000	2,020	4,929	6,001	17,950	24,290	„ 9	60,943	36,165
„ 11	10,000	2,689	3,976	7,490	24,155	24,290	„ 10	56,690	32,712
„ 12	8,000	714	2,692	7,576	18,982	24,290	„ 11	54,973	57,920
„ 13	5,000	1,038	2,649	7,727	16,414	24,330	„ 13	62,649	44,210
„ 14	5,000	8,515	3,830	6,397	23,742	24,330	„ 14	55,306	36,965
„ 15	7,000	31,190	6,892	6,925	52,007	24,330	„ 15	45,362	81,818
„ 16	5,000	12,190	608	7,553	25,351	24,330	„ 16	128,517	64,560
„ 18	6,000	240	3,515	6,514	16,269	24,330	„ 17	126,656	56,699
„ 19	4,000	522	3,916	6,274	14,712	24,330	„ 18	67,735	41,880
„ 20	17,000	3,036	1,157	6,980	28,173	24,330	„ 20	54,970	74,969
„ 21	15,000	3,230	2,659	6,542	27,431	24,330	„ 21	141,610	37,873
„ 22	- -	3,859	2,024	12,041	17,924	24,330	„ 22	106,270	54,217
„ 23	4,000	30,112	2,051	4,717	40,880	24,330	„ 23	106,337	42,453
„ 25	- -	572	2,507	7,179	10,258	36,987	„ 24	141,478	36,374
„ 26	12,000	615	7,714	6,675	27,004	37,277	„ 25	124,302	70,035
„ 27	12,000	641	4,499	5,703	22,843	37,277	„ 27	115,506	61,393
„ 29	17,650	700	3,865	6,852	29,067	37,277	„ 28	115,481	32,222
„ 30	17,000	817	6,659	8,571	33,047	32,466	„ 29	140,131	69,009
							„ 30	232,066	72,831
	1,363,275	226,896	371,704	817,928	2,779,803	1,825,484		7,820,347	3,993,344
			Average Daily Balances - - -		£. 36,576		- - - -		£. 101,563 £. 52,544

Appendix, No. 22.

Appendix, No. 22.

PAPER delivered in by Ernest Albert Hoffay, Esq., 23 June 1856.

(Copy.)

Sir, Bank of England, 8 February 1849.

I have the honour to transmit herewith a statement, respecting some proposed alterarations in the mode of managing the banking business of this establishment, which I request you will have the goodness to lay before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, with the view of obtaining their concurrence to such of the alterations as apply to the management of the Government accounts.

I have, &c.,
(signed) M. Marshall,
Chief Cashier.

Sir Charles E. Trevelyan, K.C.B.,
&c. &c. &c.

Statement.

The Bank for some time past has been engaged in altering its system of drawing accounts, with the view of facilitating the despatch of business, and of establishing more efficient checks against error. The shortening of the hours of business in the City has made the former more than ever necessary; and the great increase in the business of the cash department, which deals with the public, and its gradual conformity to modern banking practices, has rendered the old mode of check by a separate department, in which all all the detail was repeated, unwieldly and almost inoperative, as a safeguard against error. This separate check department has therefore been abolished, and more efficient checks introduced, and perfect accounts made up, in the cash department itself.

The new accounts have now been in operation for more than 12 months in the office for private accounts, and have been partially introduced into the office in which the Government accounts are kept, but have not yet been adapted to meet the present requirements of the Treasury and of the Exchequer, because it is hoped that the Lords of the Treasury will take into consideration whether the numerous credit accounts raised for the several miscellaneous grants may not be dispensed with. The Bank are compelled to raise these separate credit accounts, to make the detailed returns required by the Treasury and the Exchequer, which, when made, derive no authority from the Bank, inasmuch as the data upon which they are founded originate with the Government accountants and the grantees, and not with the Bank and the grantees.

In addition to these returns, it appears to be considered a part of the duty of the Bank to guard against the overdrawing of the particular money grants by any mistake of the Government accountant to whose department the disbursement of them belongs. In paying drafts upon a private account, the Bank pay-clerk is guided as much by the credit of the drawer, as by his knowledge of the actual state of the account; and the average number of references to the ledger in paying such drafts is about one in eight; but in paying drafts against the Exchequer credits, it is not only the state of the account of the Government department, from which the draft is issued, that he has to consider, for he has to refer as well to the credit established under the particular grant, and post there at once every draft he pays. This is a serious hindrance to the despatch of business.

Again, a draft upon a private account requires only three entries, whilst one against a Government credit requires eight, and under the old system of accounts 11 entries.

It is submitted that each paying department of the Government might easily, and with many advantages, establish such efficient checks within itself as would render the separate account now kept by the Bank of every particular money grant as useless as it is inconvenient. The Bank would then confine itself to its own province in relation to the Pay-offices of the Government, and deal with them as a banker deals with a merchant; keeping only with each department simple debit and credit accounts, of cash received, and cash paid, adding only such particulars to each entry as would enable the Government accountant to identify it with the corresponding entry in his books.

When the Bank enters upon the secondary question of the appropriation of money, and keeps accounts of particular sums set aside for specific services, it exceeds the limits of its proper duties as a mere keeper of cash, and enters the province of the Government accountant, the duties of which, in relation to these credits, it is not in a condition to fulfil.

These latter remarks are offered as merely suggestive of what, for the utmost despatch of business, should be the position of the Bank in its relation to the various pay-offices of the Government; and the Bank trust that the Government will afford them the facility of carrying out their new system of accounts, by not requiring from them returns which are foreign to their duties as bankers, and which do not appear to be prescribed by Act of Parliament.

(signed) M. Marshall,
Chief Cashier.

Bank of England, 8 February 1849.

Appendix, No. 23.

PAPER delivered in by W. G. Anderson, Esq., 7 July 1856.

Mr. Brooksbank, Chief Clerk of the Financial Division of the Treasury, to Mr. Litchfield, Senior Clerk.

30 January 1849.

Appendix, No. 23.

To explain fully the grounds upon which I was led to observe that my first impression on reading the Minute of the 22d December, was that it went too far, and that my last impression was that it did not go far enough, would lead to a lengthy epistle; but I will state my view in as few words as I am able.

On the first perusal of the Minute, I saw that all the Exchequer check and control was gone, but on looking to the Treasury sanction given to Sir Henry Parnell on the 28th March 1838, I saw that the Exchequer check and control was, at that time, rendered nugatory, by sanctioning the blending of the credits for army, navy, and ordnance, after they were given.

This sanction applies to about 17 millions out of 20 or 21 millions of supplies, and it was given with respect to the three services about which Parliament has always been the most jealous.

This being so, and the new principle having existed for ten years, and having been fully explained to Parliament seven years ago, in the return moved for by Sir Henry Parnell, and printed in 1841 (No. 359, page 60), the question appeared to me to be very limited; viz., Whether the same principle should be extended to the three or four millions of miscellaneous supply services? The conclusion seemed to me to be irresistible.

But the next consideration that occurred was, that after having transferred the check and control from the Exchequer to the Pay Office, the whole machinery of "credits" introduced by Parnell and Bowring, after the newest French fashion, became useless.

The two progenitors seem however to have since discountenanced their offspring. Parnell first broke credits down, with the sanction of the Treasury, as applicable to Army, Navy, and Ordnance, and Dr. Bowring, in the course of last Session, was reported to have expressed an opinion favourable to the Pay Office system of account, and unfavourable to that of the Exchequer, which (though his own child) he condemned as useless; and I think he was nearly right, according to the present system. But the fault was in the alterations made by him and Parnell in the outline of the duties of the old Exchequer, which combined (under Lord Grenville) receipts on the one hand and payments on the other (the introitus and the exitus) in one account. But by the alterations we now have two accounts instead of one, and neither of them perfect and satisfactory. The first is—

THE EXCHEQUER:

Dr.	Cr.
To Exchequer Credits. Received.	By Payments To Army Navy, &c., &c.

The second is—

THE PAY OFFICE:

Dr.	Cr.
To Exchequer Credits. Received.	By Payments To Army Navy, &c., &c.

Now instead of two accounts, there should be one only; viz.—

THE EXCHEQUER:

Dr.	Cr.
To Receipts.	By Payments. (Not Credits).

I come therefore to the conclusion, that either the Pay Office should be united to the Exchequer, or the Exchequer to the Pay Office, and that the basis of our accounts should be again, as formerly, payments, and not credits.

I had

I had a conversation on this very point with Mr. Edward Ellice, when he was Secretary at the Treasury, and one of Parnell's Commission for reporting on the Exchequer, but they all insisted on credits, and not payments, as the basis of our accounts. Appendix, No. 23.

This was the result of theory, without sufficient practical knowledge. The latter has been since gained, and is now upsetting theory.

You may show this note, if you like, to Sir Charles Trevelyan, as I understand the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer has expressed some objections to the system described in the Minute of the 22d December, though it is founded on, and is only an extension of, the principle sanctioned by the Treasury Minute of March 1838, when he was Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Appendix, No. 24.

COPY of a LETTER from Monsieur de Marescalchi to Viscount Palmerston, the original Copy of which was returned to the Treasury, in Audit Board's Report of 28th March 1851, No. 225. Appendix, No. 24.

My Lord, Londres, le 7 Mars 1851.

LE Conseil d'État récemment chargé par le Gouvernement de la République de préparer un projet de loi relatif à l'organisation de la Cour des Comptes, vient d'exprimer, à Monsieur le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères, le désir d'avoir quelque renseignemens sur la composition, les fonctions, et les formes de procéder de l'Audit Office, et de connaître bien exactement les attributions de cette cour.

M. Brenier m'invite en conséquence à transmettre à votre Excellence l'expression de ce désir, et à réclamer de son obligeance la communication de tous les documens qui pourraient faciliter le travail dont il s'agit. Le Conseil d'État désirerait particulièrement savoir :

1°. Si les membres de l'Audit Office sont inamovibles.

2°. Quel est leur nombre.

3°. S'ils se bornent à préparer le jugement définitif des comptes en recette et en dépense qui leur sont soumis, ou si, au contraire, ils prononcent en dernier ressort et comme juges sur la question des comptables.

4°. Si tous les comptables publics ressortissent à l'Audit Office.

5° S'il a le droit de rendre des déclarations de conformité analogues à celle de la Cour des Comptes de France, de signaler les abus, et de présenter dans un rapport public des vues de réforme et d'amélioration.

6° Si ses décisions sont exécutoires, e dans quelles formes.

7° Si enfin, comme en Belgique, son intervention peut avoir pour objet de contrôler directement, ou indirectement, l'ordonnancement des dépenses publiques avant que le paiement en soit effectué, a l'effet d'en assurer la regularité dans les limites des allocations budgetaires.

J'espére, my Lord, que Votre Excellence voudra bien me mettre à même de satisfaire le plus tôt possible au vœu qui vient d'exprimer Monsieur le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères.

Je saisis, &c.
(signed) De Marescalchi.

Son Excellence
Le Vicomte Palmerston.

Appendix, No. 25.

Appendix, No. 25.

REPORT from Commissioners of Audit, with Schedule of Documents referred to.

REPORT of the Audit Office on the Functions of the Commissioners of Audit, and their Mode of Proceeding.

Audit Office, Somerset House,
London, 16 April 1851.

My Lords,

We beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. G. Cornewall Lewis's letter of the 25th ultimo, with which was transmitted a copy of a communication which had been addressed to Viscount Palmerston by the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, requesting information as to the organisation, duties, and powers of the Audit Office. We were requested by Mr. C. Lewis to return the enclosure, together with such information upon the subject thereof as would enable Her Majesty's Government to supply to Monsieur de Marescalchi the information which he is desirous of obtaining for the use of the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordships' desire, we proceed to answer, in the order laid down, the several questions contained in Monsieur de Marescalchi's letter, this appearing to us the best mode of complying, with as little delay as possible, with the request preferred by the French Government respecting the organisation, duties, and powers of our office.

1st. Whether the members of the Audit Office are irremovable?

The members of the Audit Office consist of a Board of Commissioners and of subordinate officers; and although the latter are removable at the pleasure of the Government, or of the Commissioners, the former are not.

The Commissioners are appointed for life; the patent appointing them is drawn up in the same form as that of the Common Law Judges, the tenure being during good behaviour (or quamdiu se bene gesserint), under Act 25 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 4; and it is only by a joint address to the Crown from both Houses of Parliament that they can be removed by the Sovereign from their situations.

As a consequence of this tenure of office, their salaries do not come annually under the consideration of Parliament for the purpose of being voted, but are paid out of the Consolidated Fund, in the same manner as the salaries of the Judges of the land, their independence being thus confirmed.

The subordinate officers of the Audit Office are also paid out of the Consolidated Fund; but they are removable, under Treasury regulation, by the Commissioners themselves for misconduct, or by the Government for the convenience of the service, or other reasons. The exercise, however, of the discretion of the Commissioners in dismissing any of their officers might be the subject of appeal to the Treasury.

2d. Their number?

The establishment of the Audit Office consists of a Board of six Commissioners, one of whom is appointed chairman, with an increase of salary in that capacity; one Secretary, 11 Inspectors, and 96 Examiners, of whom one is a book-keeper.

There are also 23 Supernumerary and Temporary Examiners.

The above are the numbers of the Audit Office, as established in this country. In addition, however, to these, there are auditors appointed in most of the Crown colonies, i. e., in the colonies in which a Legislative Assembly has not been established. These officers are appointed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and it is to them that the accounts of those colonies are, in the first instance, rendered for examination, and by them the documents and vouchers appertaining to the accounts are authenticated, previously to their being transmitted to this country for final audit by the Audit Board.

In the accounts so investigated by the colonial auditors, the re-examination of the castings, computations, and other portions of such accounts, may, under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 53 Geo. 3, c. 150, be dispensed with, at the discretion of the Commissioners of Audit, when the accounts come to be finally disposed of by them.

3d. Whether they confine themselves to preparing the final decision on accounts of receipts and expenditure submitted to them, or whether, on the contrary, they pronounce without appeal as judges upon the transactions of accountants?

The Commissioners prepare, for the consideration of the Lords of the Treasury, their statements of the receipts and expenditure of the accounts which are submitted to them, and do not decide without appeal as judges upon the pecuniary transactions of accountants.

Nevertheless,

Appendix, No. 25.

Nevertheless, in the preparation of these accounts the Commissioners of Audit are free and unfettered, save by the provisions of the statutes under which their Board is constituted. It is not competent for the Lords of the Treasury, or for any other department of the State, to issue directions as to the mode in which accounts are to be examined by the Audit Board, or as to the proofs which may be deemed necessary.

Soon after the constitution of the office on its present footing, in 1807, the Lords of the Treasury gave to the Commissioners of Audit directions as to the mode in which a certain account should be examined. This drew forth a Report from the auditors, a copy of which we beg leave to enclose, in which the principles regulating the proceedings of the Audit Board were laid down; and the Treasury, in reply, acquiesced in the views so taken. 29 January 1807.

On entering upon their office, the Commissioners individually take an oath, in the presence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that they will faithfully, impartially, and truly execute the several powers and trusts vested in them by Act 25 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 4. And by section 9 they are empowered to require the production of any books, documents, or other papers whatsoever, and to call before them and examine persons upon oath, with a view of enabling them to pursue their investigations, and finally to put upon record their opinion as to the sums which should be allowed or disallowed to the accountant's credit.

With respect to the sums to be allowed to the accountant's credit, the decision of the auditors is final. They are to decide whether the payments are duly authorised and vouched, and if they are of opinion that they are so, the Treasury cannot direct them to disallow them. With respect, on the other hand, to sums disallowed by the auditors, the case is different. Here, according to long practice, an appeal lies to the Treasury, who are empowered to direct, if they think fit, by a warrant signed by two Lords of the Treasury, that for all such sums, or any of them, credit should be allowed to the accountant, such directions appearing on the face of the account as the act of the Treasury, and not of the auditors.

In some cases, however, viz., where money has been lost, by default or otherwise, it is considered necessary that a warrant under the sign manual of the Sovereign should be obtained to give allowance for the same, as, all grants of money by Parliament being made to the Sovereign, the consent of the Sovereign is considered necessary in such cases. It is not competent for the auditors to allow sums to the accountants' credit unless they are duly authorised and duly vouched; if they are not duly authorised, that is, if an authority given previous to payment by the competent officer or department be not produced by the accountant in support of the charge, the auditors are bound by Act 25 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 11, to disallow the same; but upon a special statement of the matter from the auditors, the Lords of the Treasury are competent, by warrant signed by two of them, to remove the disallowance.

The authority must be a previous one. If an accountant takes credit for a payment without such previous authority, and, on being apprised of the omission by the auditors, should himself refer the matter to the Treasury, and obtain from that department a sanction for the payment made otherwise than by warrant, the auditors would still be bound to disallow the amount, and place upon record that such an authority as the Act requires has not been produced, leaving it for the Treasury to remove the disallowance by a warrant on the state of the account, should they think fit. If, again, any sum be not duly vouched, the auditors, by Act 53 Geo. 3, c. 150, s. 4, cannot allow the same, but they may, by pointing out the deficiency in a note or memorandum upon the account, recommend allowance of the sum, and the Treasury may thereupon allow the expenditure. It may further be observed, that in almost all cases in which an accountant appeals to the Treasury against a disallowance made by the auditors, the Treasury, before deciding on such appeal, again refer the matter for the consideration of the auditors, for any observation they may have to make on the subject.

It has been thought necessary to go into the above details for the purpose of showing how far the decisions of the auditors may be considered as final.

4th. Whether all public accountants are amenable to the Audit Office.

According to practice, all public accountants, i.e., all persons to whom issues of public money have been made, are not amenable to the jurisdiction of the Audit Office. It has, however, been the policy of late years to concentrate as much as possible the public accomptability of the country, to diminish the number of paymasters, and to transfer to the Audit Office the examination and audit of the accounts of several large services, which had hitherto been examined by separate auditors.

Thus, the duties of the Commissioners for West India accounts, of the Colonial Audit Office, of the auditors of public accounts in Ireland, of the auditor of Land Revenue, of the comptrollers of Army Accounts, of the auditor of the Excise Accounts, have all been incorporated with the Audit Office, and the several public accountants formerly amenable to these respective offices are now placed under the control of the Commissioners of Audit. A list of the accounts now rendered to the Audit Office is hereto appended.

There are two modes by which persons, to whom issues of public money have been made, are rendered amenable to the Audit Office.

Parliament either specially directs that accounts for particular services shall be rendered to the Audit Office, or leaves to the discretion of the Lords of the Treasury to direct by whom the accounts shall be audited.

In the latter case it is the general practice of the Treasury to transmit them to the Audit Office for examination and audit. The ordinary course pursued by the Treasury is to direct the issue of money "with account," thus necessarily bringing the expenditure under the control of the Audit Office. It has also been the practice of the Treasury to direct the issue of money "without account," or "without account other than such as may be required by their Appendix, No. 25. their Lordships," thereby exempting the accountants to whom such issues are made from any control by this Board.

Moreover, in the absence of any legislative directions to the contrary, the Treasury exercise their discretion whether the issues shall be accounted for to this Board or not; and although the Treasury may have decided that any particular account should be examined and audited by the Commissioners of Audit, they can at any time reconsider that decision.

It has also been not unusual for the Treasury to refer to the Audit Office for examination accounts which consist principally, and in some cases wholly, of monies derived from private sources. These relate chiefly to services carried on in Ireland, consisting principally of charitable institutions. Such accounts, when rendered to the Audit Office, are to be dealt with in the same way as all other public accounts under their control. With respect to accountants who are not amenable to the Audit Office, in addition to those persons to whom the Treasury has issued money without account, there are several large departments, such as the Army, Navy and Ordnance, the detailed examination of whose accounts is carried on by themselves.

Parliament has, however, directed that the Commissioners of Audit shall annually lay before it a comparison of the sums granted for those services, under particular heads, with the sums expended; but this subject will be more particularly referred to hereafter.

5th. Whether it is empowered to pronounce declarations of conformity, "similar to those of the French Court of Accounts, to point out abuses, and to present in a public report any view of reform or improvement."

With respect to the particular nature of the duties imposed by Parliament upon the Commissioners of Audit with reference to the accounts of the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Commissariat Services, the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, together with the last accounts laid before Parliament in conformity therewith, are herewith transmitted, as the best mode of affording the means of making a comparison of the declaration appended to the accounts by the Commissioners of Audit, with the detailed and more elaborate certificate or declaration of the Court of Accounts.

It is apprehended that the whole of the receipts and expenditure of France is brought under the review of the Court of Accounts, and, by their annual Report under that of the Legislature and the public, in one statement, certifying to the correctness of such receipts and expenditure, and how far both are in accordance with the legislative enactments of the country relating thereto.

No such general system has as yet been adopted in England, nor could the Commissioners of Audit lay before Parliament an audited balance-sheet similar to that annually submitted to the Legislative Chamber of France, and in which a comparison is made between the whole of the expenditure and the sums voted for the entire service; unless, first, the whole of the gross revenue arising from the taxes were paid into the Exchequer; second, unless the principles already adopted with respect to Naval and Military Departments were extended to all other services: at the same time it is to be observed, that the principle has on more than one occasion been affirmed in Parliament, that the gross receipts should be paid into the Exchequer; and the principle of instituting a comparison between the Votes of Parliament, and the sums expended under those Votes on the faith of the Commissioners of Audit, which was, in the case of the Naval accounts, first adopted in 1832–3, by Act 2 Will. 4, c. 40, has since, in 1846, been extended by Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, to the departments of the War Office, Ordnance and Commissariat. It is further to be observed, that the Lords of the Treasury, "with the view of making a more effectual provision for the due and proper examination and audit of the public accounts of the Kingdom," directed the Commissioners of Audit, on 13th April 1849, to prepare a Bill for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, and of Parliament.

This Bill has accordingly been prepared, and a copy is herewith transmitted.

After what has been stated, it is scarcely necessary to observe, that the Commissioners of Audit have no opportunity of pointing out to Parliament irregularities and abuses in the public accounts, or of submitting in a public report the views they may entertain of reform, with the exception of such as may affect the accounts of the four services already adverted to, and that within the limits prescribed by the Act; and they consider themselves precluded from making any observations which may in any way interfere with the administration of the executive departments. At the same time the Commissioners of Audit do consider it part of their duty to submit to the Lords of the Treasury their views on the subject of public accounts.

In illustration of this, it may be observed, that in November 1848 it occurred to the Commissioners of Audit that it would greatly tend to increase the regularity of the service, and expedite the labour of examining the accounts, if a system of monthly (instead of annual) accounts were adopted, these monthly accounts consisting of the record in the order of date of each day's pecuniary transactions; and the Lords of the Treasury at once concurred in the suggestion, and gave every facility for its adoption, and that system since 1st April 1849 has been in general force throughout the service, and with much public advantage.

6. Whether its decisions are binding, and under what formalities?

The decisions of the Commissioners are of two kinds; first, those which are instrumental towards the examination of accounts; and, second, those which are subsequent to the audit, or, at all events, to any final decision being come to respecting the pecuniary liability of persons to whom public money has been imprested.

1. It

1. It has been said in a former part of this Report, that the Auditors have the power of calling before them, and examining upon oath, any one whose evidence may be considered necessary for the due investigation of the accounts under their control. If such persons, after having been duly summoned by precept under the hands of three of the Commissioners, should refuse or neglect to obey such precept, they are liable to fine, and consequently to imprisonment; but it is only by application to the Court of Exchequer, through the law officers of the Crown, that this penalty can be enforced, and the decision of the Commissioners of Audit maintained.

2. Any person to whom public money has been imprested, and who refuses to account for the same, is subject to similar penalties, and his property made liable; and the amount is recoverable through the Court of Exchequer, on the application of the Commissioners of Audit.

Any person, again, who lays claim to and retains in his hands sums of money to which he is not entitled, is liable to prosecution previous to the audit of the account. A case of recent date may be cited in which a public functionary retained in his hands the amount of certain fees which, according to the Treasury arrangements fixing his salary and emoluments, should have been brought to credit. The Commissioners of Audit applied to the Treasury to ascertain whether any alteration had been made by their Lordships in their arrangement with the officer, and, on receiving an answer in the negative, the Commissioners of Audit at once proceeded to take legal steps for the recovery of the amount due. In this, as in all similar cases, the Treasury would, no doubt, have the power of stopping the proceedings of the Commissioners of Audit; but such instances have been very rare.

Subsequent to the audit of an account by the Commissioners of Audit, the account is sent to the Treasury for their consideration, is warranted for approval by their Lordships, then prepared for declaration, and again signed by three of the Commissioners of Audit previously to its being laid before the Chancellor of the Exchequer for his signature, which is termed "declaration." The account, on being thus declared to by this high functionary of the Court of Exchequer, becomes at once evidence in that court; and, if any balance remains due upon that account on the termination of the accountant's pecuniary responsibility, it must be paid and discharged according to the course of Her Majesty's Exchequer, together with five per cent. interest from the date of the audit; and payment is enforced by the Court of Exchequer on the application of the Commissioners of Audit.

The formality of declaring accounts before the Chancellor of the Exchequer is dispensed with in the case of Colonial Accounts and of some others, and in these cases the Commissioners of Audit have, by the provisions of 2 Will. 4, c. 26, the power of passing these accounts after they have been considered and warranted by the Treasury; and the accounts thus passed have the same validity and effect as if they had been declared.

In the event of any proceedings instituted by the Commissioners of Audit for the recovery of such balances being controlled, suspended, or prevented by the authority of Her Majesty, it is provided by Act 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 54, that a statement should be presented to both Houses of Parliament, exhibiting the course that had been adopted.

The above examples have been cited as the best means of affording some indication of the mode in which the decisions of the Audit Office are enforced, and of the line of demarcation which is drawn between the authority exercised by the Commissioners of Audit, the Lords of the Treasury, and the Court of Exchequer.

The aforegoing observations have reference to the ordinary accounts examined and audited by the Commissioners of Audit. With respect to the Appropriation Audit of the voted Expenditure of the Naval and Military Departments, which has already been adverted to, the decisions of the Commissioners of Audit can only be enforced by Parliament, as their authority extends no further than reporting and publishing their observations to Parliament, leaving them to be there dealt with as may be thought fit.

7th, and lastly. If its intervention is intended, as in Belgium, directly or indirectly to control the authorizing of public expenditure previously to the payment being actually made, with a view to secure its regularity within the limits assigned by the Budget?

It is no part of the duty of the Commissioners of Audit to control, directly or indirectly, the authorizing of public expenditure previous to payment, with a view of ensuring regularity within the limits assigned by the Appropriation Act.

This particular duty devolves upon the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer; he is intended to act on behalf of the House of Commons as a check upon the Treasury, and to see that the issues of public money made by Royal or Treasury Warrants out of the Exchequer are not misappropriated from one head of service to another, and do not exceed the sum granted by Parliament under any particular head. And under the 23d section of 4 Will. 4, c. 15, an annual statement is rendered to Parliament of the receipts into and payments out of the Exchequer; but that account is not rendered to nor examined by the Commissioners of Audit, nor is it subjected to any other independent check; Parliament relies upon the faith of the statement of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, that the issues made by him are in accordance with the Royal and Treasury Warrants; that those warrants do not contravene the directions of Parliament, as shown by the Votes and the provisions of the Appropriation Act. But he has no means of ascertaining that the expenditure has been actually incurred in the manner directed by Parliament. The issues, when once made out of the Exchequer, and transferred to the account of the Paymaster-general, are subject to any directions the Lords of the Treasury may think fit to give respecting them, and are thus placed beyond the cognizance of the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer, nor is it within the province of the Audit Board to investigate their due appropriation.

Appendix, No. 25.

appropriation. That officer, however, although appointed by the Crown, holds his appointment, like the Commissioners of Audit, for life, and is therefore independent of the Government for the time being.

The only checks which the Commissioners of Audit exercise over the expenditure under the particular heads of the Appropriation Act, is subsequent to payment. This check is limited, as has already been observed, to the Military and Naval Services, and the control that the Commissioners of Audit possess is, in the cases of those departments, to point out to the Treasury and to Parliament all those instances in which the directions of Parliament may not have been strictly complied with. In the case of the Accounts of the Military and Naval Departments the Commissioners of Audit cannot, during the course of their examination, i. e., of the comparison which they institute between the votes and the payments, call in question or object to the due authorities or orders under which the expenditure has been incurred, or interfere in any way with the course of the Executive in those departments.

Having thus given a slight, and we fear an imperfect sketch of the composition, functions, and form of proceeding of the Audit Office, as indicated by the series of questions contained in Monsieur de Marescalchi's letter to Viscount Palmerston, it only remains to advert to the documents, the transmission of which is requested, as further illustrative of this subject.

The draft Bill before referred to recapitulates the several Acts of Parliament which at present regulate our proceedings, and which will be accessible to the French Government in the Statutes at Large.

Your Lordships' warrant of establishment of 1st June 1849 shows the composition of the office, and the nature of the control exercised by your Lordships over the internal regulation of the office. The general regulations for the guidance of the officers of the Audit Office are also enclosed; and the Commissariat and Colonial instructions drawn up by this Board, or with their assistance, and issued under your Lordships' directions, will illustrate the forms and mode adopted in the examination of the accounts to which they relate. With respect to the accounts for other services, a rough draft of instructions is at present before your Lordships for consideration and sanction; and the instructions issued by the War Office, the Lords of the Admiralty, and the Board of Ordnance, for the guidance of their several accountants, can, if your Lordships think fit, be obtained from those departments, and transmitted to the French Government, with those which more immediately relate to our office.

We have, &c.
(signed) W. L. Herries.
Henry Arbuthnot.
Edward Romilly.
A. Grant.
Charles Ross.
R. Vaughan Davis.

To the Lords Commissioners of
Her Majesty's Treasury,
&c. &c. &c.

SCHEDULE of DOCUMENTS referred to in the accompanying Report from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 16 April 1851, No. 274.

1st. Copy of a Letter from Monsieur Marescalchi to Viscount Palmerston, dated 7 March 1851.

2d. Copy of a Report from the Commissioners of Audit to the Lords of the Treasury, dated 29 January 1807.

3d. List of Accounts rendered to the Audit Office for Audit.

4th. Copy of Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92.

5th. Copy of an Account of the Naval Receipt and Expenditure for the year 1849-50, with the Reports of the Commissioners of Audit thereon.

6th. Copies of the Accounts of Army, Commissariat, and Ordnance Receipt and Expenditure for the year 1848-49, with Reports of the Commissioners of Audit thereon.

7th. Detailed Accounts of Receipt and Expenditure for Navy, Army, Commissariat, and Ordnance Services, for the year to 31st March 1849.

8th. Draft Bill to consolidate and extend the Powers and Authorities of the Commissioners for auditing the Public Accounts.

9th. Warrant of the Lords of the Treasury, dated 1 June 1849, for the Regulation and Conduct of the Business of the Audit Office, and its Establishment.

10th. General Instructions for the Officers employed under the Commissioners for auditing the Public Accounts.

Appendix, No. 26.

REPORT from the COMMISSIONERS of AUDIT, dated 29 January 1807. Appendix, No. 26.

My Lords, Audit Office, 29 January 1807.

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Vansittart's letter, dated the 16th instant, transmitting to us the Report of the Comptrollers of Army Accounts, dated on the 15th instant, upon the referred memorial of Lieutenant-general Hewett, barrackmaster-general, relative to the mode of examining and finally passing his accounts; and acquainting us that your Lordships approve of the said report, and direct this Board to proceed in examining General Hewett's accounts in conformity thereto.

We think it necessary to premise that prior to the above communication of Mr. Vansittart we had made our report to your Lordships, dated on the 16th instant, upon the subject of the same memorial of General Hewett. We beg leave to refer your Lordships to the contents of that report; and further, to represent that, although we expressed no opinion with respect to General Hewett's proposal of a particular scheme of instructions to be given to this Board for facilitating the audit of his accounts, yet we did not omit to take that part of the memorial into our full and deliberate consideration. We were decidedly of opinion that those proposals were not less exceptionable in principle than they were unusual in point of form, and we were fully prepared to have so reported them to your Lordships. But in the meantime General Hewett having personally applied to us, and being apprised of our opinion on the subject of his memorial, we consented to enter into a regular examination of his accounts, which we have since been proceeding upon according to the established rules of this office. Conceiving General Hewett to have acquiesced in this arrangement, and having experienced from him every readiness to give us full information on the subject of his accounts, we stated these facts in our report to your Lordships, and purposely forbore from expressing any opinion upon that part of his memorial which we considered as most objectionable; partly from a desire of avoiding any observations that might have the appearance of harshness or personality towards a respectable individual, but principally because we felt the greatest reluctance to agitate, or even to suggest any question not absolutely necessary concerning the nature, extent, and limits of your Lordships' authority to instruct this Board as to the discharge of their official duties.

We sincerely lament that we are now under the necessity of entering in some degree upon this embarrassing but most important discussion. Your Lordships direct us by Mr. Vansittart's letter, in conformity to the Report of the Comptrollers of Army Accounts, to admit in our examination of General Hewett's accounts certain preliminary propositions which they appear to have adopted with very little variation from the suggestions of General Hewett's memorial. We beg leave to represent that the admission of these propositions will, as it appears to us, materially affect and alter the course of our examination of General Hewett's accounts; that it will confine this Board to particular modes of inquiry in some cases, and exclude all inquiry in others; and that it will essentially interfere with the due investigation of the accounts according to the rules and practice of this office. After the most deliberate and anxious consideration, we are most humbly of opinion, that we should not be justified in admitting these propositions, and with all due deference for the authority and judgment of your Lordships, we shall now proceed to state the grounds and reasons upon which this opinion is founded.

The official duties which we are sworn faithfully, impartially and truly to execute, according to the best of our skill and knowledge, are shortly and emphatically described by the Act of the 25th of his present Majesty, c. 52, by which the Board was originally constituted. We are enjoined by that Act "to try and examine the several accounts and vouchers which shall be transmitted to us from time to time, and upon trial and examination thereof to make full, just and perfect accounts." To the performance of this duty, which is entirely strict in its nature, it is obviously essential that we should have proof satisfactory to our own judgments of the authority of each expenditure, the reasonableness of the charge (in cases where it can conveniently be ascertained), and the fact of payment. It is further essential that we should be entirely free and unfettered both as to the proofs we may require, and our manner of reasoning upon those proofs; we are directed in all cases to require "vouchers or other satisfactory evidence;" but it must be obvious to your Lordships that the question of what is satisfactory evidence is extremely different in different cases; and that is a point which in its own nature is incapable of being defined by any precise rule or previous instructions. The party who "tries and examines the account," must exercise his own judgment, and form his own conclusions in each particular case. We, therefore, humbly conceive that it would be inconsistent with the public trust reposed in us, to bind ourselves by any previous admission or engagement that might interfere with that full and free investigation which is the first and most important of our duties.

We beg leave further to represent that the propositions, which we are required to admit, are avowedly framed in order to protect the accountant against the legal effects of an acknowledged departure from instructions given under his Majesty's Sign Manual, and against a consequent want of authority for many of his articles of expenditure, yet it is material to observe that the question of authority for expenditure is that which, above all others,

Appendix, No. 26.

others, requires the greatest vigilance, and in which we have the least discretion. The Act of the Legislature, to which we have referred, expressly declares that, "in auditing and examining the public accounts, the Commissioners shall allow such articles of expenditure only as the accountants shall have been duly authorised to incur, unless upon a special statement of the matter to the Lords of the Treasury, they shall be directed to make further or other allowances to the accountants by warrant under the hands of the Lords of the Treasury, or any three of them."

25 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 11.

The ancient and established forms of office have always been resorted to as good evidence of law. The mode of stating an account in this office (which is of the nature of a public record), contains, in our apprehension, a clear proof of the strictness and severity of our official duty in the audit of accounts, as contradistinguished from that discretionary power which is constitutionally entrusted to the higher departments of the state. In all cases in which payments surcharged or objected to by this office have been allowed by subsequent authority, it appears upon the face of the account what is the precise authority under which each allowance is made, whether it be an order of the Court of Exchequer to dispense with the production of vouchers, a Sign Manual Warrant of the Treasury, or other documents; the account thus stated exhibits the real nature of the transaction, and affords the means of immediately ascertaining what is the final result of the account, according to the strict examination of this office; and in what respect that result is varied by the discretionary indulgence exercised towards the accountant by the superior departments of Government. It can hardly be necessary to observe that if a different practice was to prevail, if this Board was to relax its rules of examination in consequence of instructions from your Lordships or from any other authority, great uncertainty and irregularity would ensue. It could not in that case be ascertained by inspection of a public account in what manner or upon what principles, and with what degree of rigour or laxity the account had been audited. It would be possible under such a system to show great indulgence, and make large allowances to a public accountant, which would nowhere appear upon the face of his account, and for which there would be no efficient responsibility; above all, a principle of laxity would be introduced into the proceedings and practice of this office, which would impair its functions and might gradually destroy its utility.

Treasury Warrant, dated 9 Oct. 1806.

If we had found such a practice existing in this office we should have thought it our duty, under the original instructions with which we have been honoured by your Lordships, to report such a practice as requiring immediate amendment, considering an irregular and fallacious mode of examining and passing accounts as one of the greatest of public abuses. But we have the satisfaction of stating to your Lordships that the mode of examination established in this office appears to us to possess the full advantage of that uniformity, arising from adherence to fixed rules, which we consider as essential and indispensable to such a system.

By Letters Patent, dated 11 Sept. 1806.

We are aware that by the statute of the 25 Geo. 3, c. 52, to which we have already referred, this Board is expressly made subject "to the same control to which the auditors of the imprest were then subject or liable by law, usage, or custom;" and that by the letters patent of our appointment we are authorised and directed to "audit and determine accounts by and with the advice, authority, and consent of the Lords of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer." But we humbly conceive that the words "authority and advice" used in His Majesty's patent must be qualified and explained by reference to the nature of our public duty, and the usage and practice of this office. According to this principle of construction we understand by these words, authority exercised, and advice communicated to us by your Lordships, in furtherance, not in relaxation of the official duty prescribed to us by the Legislature, and in order to promote and assist the object and end of our appointment, the due examination of the public accounts. We shall at all times feel it our duty to pay the most strict and willing obedience to any directions of your Lordships which may relate to our official arrangements, the due course of our proceedings, and the exercise of our public duties, and in general to all other instructions which do not operate as an immediate restraint upon the free exercise of our judgments in examining the public accounts. But we most humbly protest against being bound by your Lordships' instructions, either as to the general rules by which accounts are examined, or the manner of auditing any particular account. In forming our opinion upon this important subject, our inquiries have naturally been directed towards the records and proceedings of the late Board, established in the year 1785, and to the usage and practice of the Auditors of the Imprest, to whom the late Board succeeded with additional duties and a great enlargement of authority. We have endeavoured to ascertain this practice, both from our own researches and the information of our oldest and most experienced officers. We beg leave to assure your Lordships (and we consider this circumstance as being nearly decisive of the question of law) that we have discovered no trace or memorial of any case in which the Lords of the Treasury have exercised any authority over this office, analogous to that which appears to be exercised by your Lordships upon the present occasion. We find it to be the universal opinion and understanding of our most experienced officers, that the authority to which we allude has no just foundation; and we have the greater confidence in this opinion, as it appears to us to be entirely consonant to every principle of reason and public expediency. As the result of our inquiries upon this subject we now beg leave to state, that His Majesty (as we apprehend) by the advice of his responsible ministers, either issues money without account, or discharges a party from accounting altogether; that in cases where an account is rendered His Majesty or your Lordships may allow to any extent surcharges made by this office; but that neither His Majesty nor any authority, except that of the Legislature, can either either alter the general rules of accounting in this office, or authorise a relaxation of those rules in favour of a particular accountant.

Such being our humble opinion of the state of the law upon this subject, we beg leave further to represent that in case we had been satisfied of the legal existence of the power now exercised by your Lordships, we should still have had great doubts as to the expediency of its exercise in this particular case. These doubts have been so strongly impressed upon our minds by our view of General Hewett's accounts, that we are induced to trespass still further upon the time of your Lordships by pointing out the several inconveniences which, as it appears to us, would probably result from adopting the course of examination recommended by the Comptrollers of Army Accounts.

In the observations which we are about to make, we beg leave to be understood as speaking without the least prejudice to the case of General Hewett. We think it our duty to state that his accounts appear to have been kept with great regularity, and bear every appearance of fairness. We concur in the opinion expressed by the Comptrollers, who state by their report, "That they have no reason to suppose, and do not believe, that General Hewett has been guilty of malversation or gross negligence." But General Hewett is known to this office only in his character of a public accountant, and every person in that situation, against whom nothing has been proved, is equally entitled to the favourable opinion of this Board. We can by no means think that either this opinion or the apparent regularity of his accounts ought to exempt General Hewett from the operation of established rules, or from that complete and satisfactory investigation of his accounts, to which the public is entitled, and which the regular course of law has provided.

We shall proceed as shortly as possible to state to your Lordships the reasons why any relaxation of ordinary rules would, in our opinion, be highly inexpedient in the particular case of the Barrack Accounts. The recommendation of the Comptrollers extends to the whole of General Hewett's accounts up to the close of his service. We shall confine our observations to the accounts of the year 1805, which are now under investigation, the accounts of 1806 not being yet delivered. By the accounts to which we now refer, it appears that the expenditure of the year 1805 for this service amounted to 496,237*l.* 6*s.* 7*d.*, and that during the course of the year advances upon account were made to the builders under contracts of General De Lancey to the amount of 626,596*l.* 5*s.* Among the different payments of which this latter sum is composed, 171,298*l.* appear to have been paid to one builder, 117,720*l.* to another, and different sums from 10,000*l.* to 40,000*l.* to others. We beg leave to call your Lordships' most serious attention to the great amount of this expenditure, to the new and unprecedented nature of the service in question, to the great abuses which have been discovered in that service, and to the very important circumstance that no barrack account has yet been examined by this office, and that consequently we are at present without any experience to direct us in such an examination. We shall feel it it to be our duty, under these circumstances, most attentively and anxiously to consider in what manner these important accounts can be most effectually investigated; and in pursuing this inquiry we shall have recourse, not only to the information of our most experienced officers, but probably also to that of the Commissioners who have been specially appointed for examining General De Lancey's accounts. We are very apprehensive, both from the nature of the service and the magnitude of the expenditure, that any examination of these accounts which can take place in this office must be far from perfect or satisfactory, and that we shall probably be able to do little more than avail ourselves of the different practical checks which the transactions themselves furnish, and apply those checks in a very strict and rigorous investigation of the accounts. Being so deeply impressed with the difficulties and importance of the present case, we trust that we may be allowed to express our doubts whether there is an occasion upon which it is expedient or reasonable to limit the inquiries, and compromise the duties of this Board by a course of proceeding which, at least, must be acknowledged to be unusual and without precedent.

We trust, also, that we shall be pardoned by your Lordships if we further remark, that peculiar inconvenience might very probably result from the general and indefinite terms in which the instructions for auditing these accounts are expressed. We are required to admit, as preliminary to our examination of the accounts, certain propositions of the most general nature, and expressed in the most general terms, of which it is quite impossible for us at present to ascertain the extent or foresee all the consequences. We observe that General Hewett, by his memorial of the 25th November 1806, has thought proper to assert in a confident and somewhat peremptory tone, "that it is the decided conviction of all those in the Barrack Office, who alone (as he states) are able to form a complete judgment on the subject, that there is no other practicable mode of examining his accounts than that which he has suggested." We trust, however, that the opinion of this Board upon a subject within its own cognisance and jurisdiction will have due credit with your Lordships, when we state it to be our sincere apprehension that, by admitting the several points in question, we should in no degree facilitate, but, on the contrary, greatly embarrass the examination of these accounts. Several of the propositions are by no means very clearly expressed, and those which seem now to be clear may probably, in their application to particular cases, be found to be extremely ambiguous. A new cause of difficulty will thus be introduced into the examination of these accounts, and questions may be expected to arise between the accountant and this office how far a particular case is within the basis of examination established by the instructions, and recourse must on such occasions be had to your Lordships to decide between the parties upon the disputed points.

It is a much more serious objection that such general propositions are always extremely hazardous, hazardous, because it is impossible to foresee to what extent they may be carried in their practical application; and we beg leave to add, that we apprehend them to be contrary to the established usage of His Majesty's Government in these cases. We conceive that it is extremely unusual, and by no means an approved practice, to show any favour towards a party in respect of his public account, before the account in question has undergone some degree of examination. After the account has been examined, and the objection has been stated, or the surcharge made, the accountant applies for relief to your Lordships, stating a given case, and specifying the particular grounds of the objection or surcharge. Two obvious advantages attend this practice: 1st. That the circumstances of the case, together with the exact nature and whole extent of the accountant's claim, are clearly and distinctly understood. 2dly. That your Lordships have important means of information with respect to the accountant's conduct, in consequence of the previous examination of his accounts in this office. We see no circumstances in General Hewett's case by which he is in any respect distinguished from other public accountants, except the great expenditure and complicated nature of his service; these circumstances which General Hewett relies upon as entitling him to peculiar indulgence appear to us to have a direct contrary tendency.

Appendix, No. 26.

We have stated by our former report on General Hewett's memorial that in case General Hewett has deviated from his official instructions with the knowledge and acquiescence of His Majesty's Government, it will be an act of justice towards him to give an express sanction for such deviation. We beg leave now to add, that in case your Lordships shall be satisfied that General Hewett, in deviating from instructions upon his own opinion, has acted with a due regard to the interest of the public, and of the service with which he was intrusted, it may, perhaps, be fit and reasonable, under all the circumstances, that there should be a precise and definite sanction for such parts of General Hewett's conduct as may appear to be entitled to favourable consideration, of which sanction he may have the benefit in passing his accounts in this office. But we humbly submit to your Lordships, whether it is reasonable or expedient as a preliminary step, and prior to any adequate examination of his accounts, to release General Hewett from any of those responsibilities to which he has rendered himself liable by his public engagements. We make all due allowances for the feelings of an individual who is about to embark on a remote service, whilst he is responsible to so large an amount; but we must be permitted to observe that the responsibility of which he complains is one which he voluntarily incurred, and for which he has received what he must have considered as an adequate compensation. We cannot admit that the personal inconvenience or peculiar situation of any individual ought to interfere with those rules which have been wisely established for the safety of the public revenue.

We have now stated our opinions to your Lordships at great length with regard, both to the legal effect, and also to the propriety and expediency of the instructions communicated to this Board by Mr. Vansittart's letter. If we shall be fortunate enough to satisfy your Lordships upon either of these points, there can be no necessity for any further agitation of the present question. If the arguments which we have humbly offered to your Lordships shall fail of producing this effect, we beg leave to submit whether it may not be fit and expedient that a case should be immediately laid before the law officers of the Crown for their opinion upon the question of law.

For the present we shall proceed upon General Hewett's accounts with all convenient despatch, adhering strictly to those rules of examination which we find established and practised in this office. If it shall appear in the course of this examination that there is any occasion upon which the authority of your Lordships may be conveniently and usefully exerted, in order to facilitate the passing of General Hewett's accounts, we shall do ourselves the honour of immediately representing the same to your Lordships.

We offer no apology to your Lordships for the great length of this discussion, humbly conceiving that the importance of the general principle, and the magnitude of the particular case, will be our sufficient justification. If, however, in the course of our remarks, any expressions may have escaped us which may not appear to have been duly considered, we humbly rely upon your Lordships' candour that you will attribute such expressions to an earnestness arising from our sense of public duty, and not to any want of that deference and respect to which your Lordships, upon all occasions, are so justly entitled.

We have, &c.

(signed) Wm. Mackworth Praed.
C. W. Rouse Boughton.
Rd. Dawkins.
Ch. Moore.
Jno. Sargent.
Jno. Anstey.
Jno. Whishaw.
Ph. Deare.
L. Jenkins.

Appendix, No. 27.

PAPERS delivered in by Edward Romilly, Esq., and Charles Macaulay, Esq., 14 July 1856.

SERVICES included in the Estimates for Miscellaneous Civil Services for 1855–6, which are not examined in the Audit Office.

CLASS I.

PUBLIC WORKS AND BUILDINGS.

5. Holyhead Harbour, Roads, &c.
7. Port Patrick Harbour.

CLASS II.

SALARIES, ETC. OF PUBLIC DEPARTMENTS.

1. Two Houses of Parliament.
2. Treasury.
3. Secretary of State, Home Department.
4. Ditto, Foreign ditto.
5. Ditto, Colonial ditto.
6. Privy Council Office, Office of Trade, &c.
7. Lord Privy Seal.
13. Poor Law Schoolmasters.
    Poor Law Medical Relief.
15. Inspectors of Factories, &c.
29. West India Relief Commissioners.
30. Lunacy Commissioners' Expenses.
31. Superintendent of Roads, South Wales.
32. Registrar of Friendly Societies.
    Metropolitan Buildings Office.

CLASS III.

LAW AND JUSTICE.

England.

2. Prosecutions at Assizes and Quarter Sessions (formerly defrayed from County Rates).
3. Chancery; Crown Office Expenses.
5. Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer; Deficiency of Fee Fund.
12. Queen's Prison; Salaries and Expenses.

Scotland.

13. Lord Advocate and Solicitor General; Salaries.
14. Court of Sessions; Salaries and Expenses.
15. Court of Justiciary; Salaries and Expenses.
16. Expenses of Prosecutions carried on under authority of the Lord Advocate.
17. Exchequer, Legal Branch; Salaries and Expenses.
18. Sheriffs and Procurators Fiscal not paid by Salaries, and Expenses of Prosecutions in Sheriff Courts.
19. Procurators Fiscal; Salaries.
20. Sheriffs' Clerks; Salaries.
21. Expenses in matters of Tithes.
23. Commissary Clerk, Edinburgh; Salaries and Expenses.

Ireland.

24. Law Charges and Criminal Prosecutions.

Ireland—continued.

25. Court of Chancery; Salaries and Expenses.
26. Court of Queen's Bench ditto.
27. Court of Common Pleas ditto.
28. Court of Exchequer ditto.
29. Taxing Officers of Law Courts; ditto.
30. Registrars to the Judges; Salaries.
31. Consolidated Writ Office; ditto.
32. Registrar of Judgments; Salaries and Expenses.
33. High Court of Delegates; Fees to Advocates.
34. Insolvent Debtors' Court; Salaries and Expenses.
35. Clerk of Court of Errors; Salary.
36. Police Justices of Dublin; Salaries.

CLASS IV.

EDUCATION, SCIENCE, AND ART.

1. Public Education, Great Britain.
5. Universities, &c., in Scotland.
10. Belfast Theological Professors, &c.
11. British Museum (Establishment).
    Ditto (Purchases).
13. Scientific Works and Experiments.
14. Royal Geographical Society.
15. Royal Society.

CLASS V.

COLONIAL, CONSULAR, AND OTHER FOREIGN SERVICES.

North America.

1. Bermudas.
2. Clergy, North America.

West Indies.

4. Governors and others, West Indies.
5. Justices, West Indies.

14. Ministers at Foreign Courts; Extraordinary Expenses.

CLASS VI.

SUPERANNUATIONS AND CHARITIES.

3. Vaccine Establishment.
4. Refuge for the Destitute.
5. Polish Refugees and Distressed Spaniards.

CLASS VII.

MISCELLANEOUS, SPECIAL, AND TEMPORARY OBJECTS.

2. Ecclesiastical Commissioners.
3. Charity Commissioners (England).
4. Statute Law Commission.
5. Civil Service Commission.

(continued)

Appendix, No. 27.

MISCELLANEOUS, ETC.—continued.

7. Patent Office (Salaries, &c.).
9. Trustees of Manufactures (Scotland).
11. Bounties on Slaves.
12. Brehon Laws (Ireland); Publication Expenses.
13. Process Servers (Ireland); Expenses.
14. Merchant Seamen's Fund.
17. Local Dues under Treaties of Reciprocity.
18. Inspectors of Corn Returns.
20. Quarantine Expenses.
21. Revising Barristers (England and Wales).
22. Police at the Camp (Aldershott).
23. Burial Grounds Inspection (Expenses).
27. Carisbrook Castle (Isle of Wight) Repairs.
32. Spurn Point (River Humber) Works.

MISCELLANEOUS, ETC.—continued.

33. Menai Navigation.
34. Professors at Cambridge.
37. National Gallery (Ireland).
39. Australia Expedition.
40. Monument at Scutari.

CLASS VIII.

3. Agricultural Statistics.
4. British Historical Portrait Gallery.
8. Clerk of Justiciary (Scotland); Compensation for Surrender of Rights.

Civil Contingencies.

SUMMARY, 1855-6.

	£.
Examined in the Audit Office	9,184,500
Not examined in the Audit Office	2,081,197
Portion only examined in the Audit Office	63,695
Total Estimate for Civil Services	£. 11,329,392

ARMY ESTIMATES, 1855-6.

Effectives	11,764,921
Non-effectives	1,956,237
Total	£. 13,721,158

INDEX

TO REPORT

FROM THE

SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PUBLIC MONIES.

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed,
21 July 1856.

375—I.

ANALYSIS OF INDEX.

ALPHABETICAL and CLASSIFIED LIST of the PRINCIPAL HEADINGS in the following INDEX, with the Paging at which they will be respectively found.

ACCOUNTS: PAGE

I. Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat:

1. Lapse of Time (13 Months) before Final Preparation: Necessity thereof 1
2. Question as to the Expediency of a less complete Annual Account - - 2
3. More detailed Accounts recommended for Presentation - - - - 2
4. Presentation of separate Accounts for each Service - - - - 2
5. Inexpediency of Departure from the Plan of Naval Accounts - - 2
6. Consolidation recommended of the Books of the Ordnance and War Office - - - - - - - 2

II. Navy:

1. Lapse of Time (8 Months) before Final Preparation - - - - 2
2. Successful Working of the System of Accounts - - - - - 3

III. Exchequer:

1. Recommendations in 1831 of the Commissioners of Public Accounts - 3
2. False Principle of Account; Interference with the Pay Office and Treasury - - - - - 3
3. Defence of the System by the Comptroller-general - - - - 3

IV. Pay Office:

1. Reference to Treasury Regulations in 1834, 1836, and 1848 - - - 3
2. Objections to the System and Practice of Account - - - - - 4
3. Evidence in favour of the System - 4

V. Generally:

1. Recommendations in 1831 of the Commissioners of Public Accounts - 4
2. Improved Accounts of late Years - 4
3. Approval of Book-keeping by Double Entry - - - - - - - 4
4. Increased Check advisable in regard to the several Departments - - 4

Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office) - - - 6
Appropriation - - - - - - - - 17
Audit - - - - - - - - - 25
Balances, 7 - - - - - - - - 31
Brooksbank, The late Mr. - - - - - - 32
Exchequer, 9, 14, 15 - - - - - - 46
Finance Accounts - - - - - - - 50
Pay Office - - - - - - - - 77
Sargent, Mr. - - - - - - - - 94
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96
Woods and Forests, Office of, 4. - - - - 105
Works, Office of - - - - - - - 106

ACQUITTANCE (EXCHEQUER):

1. Statement by the Comptroller-general, in Disapproval of the Discontinuance of this Form - - - - - - - - 5

ACQUITTANCE (EXCHEQUER)—continued. PAGE

2. Explanatory Statement on the part of the Treasury - - - - - - - 5
3. Suggestion in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831 - 5
4. Directions in Treasury Minutes of September 1834 and September 1855 - - 5

Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15 - - - - - - - - 6
Exchequer - - - - - - - - 43

Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office) - - - - 6
Pay Office - - - - - - - - 77

APPROPRIATION:

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer:

1. Generally as to the illegal and highly reprehensible Practice of the Treasury and Pay Office - - - 17
2. Proof of the Practice of Misappropriation - - - - - - 18
3. Instances of attempted Misappropriation and of Exchequer Control - 19
4. Opinion as to the practicability of strict Appropriation in the Pay Office - - - - - - - 19
5. Exchequer Memorandum of 1854 - 19
6. Practice of the Exchequer in issuing for the Army, Navy, and Ordnance 19

II. Evidence on the part of the Treasury and Pay Office:

1. Question as to the correctness, legally, of Lord Monteagle's views - - 20
2. Impracticability of strict Appropriation in the Pay Office - - - 20
3. Inadequacy of the Exchequer as a Means of Ensuring Appropriation - 20
4. Instances, in 1852, of Departure from Appropriation, so termed; explanation thereof - - - - - - 21
5. Improved Regulations generally since 1830 - - - - - - - 21
6. Amended System, suggested by Mr. Anderson - - - - - 21

Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office) - - - 6
Audit - - - - - - - - - 25
Balances - - - - - - - - - 29
Control - - - - - - - - - 38
Co-operation - - - - - - - - 40
Exchequer - - - - - - - - - 43
Foreign Expenditure - - - - - - 52
Imprests, &c. - - - - - - - - 55
Parliamentary Control - - - - - 76
Pay Office - - - - - - - - 77
Treasury, 2 - - - - - - - - 97
Unappropriated Votes - - - - - - 100
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100
Ways and Means - - - - - - - 103
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104
Woods and Forests, Office of - - - - 105

Army:

I. Accounts: PAGE

1. As to the Time taken in their Preparation - - - - - - - 21
2. As to the Presentation of a different Form of Accounts - - - - 22
3. Inexpediency of Departure from the Navy System - - - - - 22
4. Recommended Consolidation of the Army and Ordnance Books - - 22

II. Audit of Accounts:

1. Generally as to the System of Appropriation Audit - - - - - 22
2. Disadvantage of a Transfer of the Detailed Audit to the Audit Office 23
3. Transfer recently of the Detailed Audit of certain Services to the War Department - - - - - - 23
4. As to the Detailed Audit now conducted by the Department - - 23

III. Other Evidence generally:

1. As to the general Check upon Expenditure - - - - - - 24
2. Extraordinary Expenses - - - 24
3. Non-effective Services - - - 24
4. Vote for 1855–56; Balance Unexpended - - - - - - 24
5. Extra Receipts since 1848 - - 24

Appropriation, 1. 6. - - - - - - - 17
Audit, 1. 2. - - - - - - - - 25
Commissariat - - - - - - - - 35
Commissariat Chest Account - - - - 35
Estimates - - - - - - - - - 42
Imprests, &c. - - - - - - - - 55
Militia - - - - - - - - - 59
Pay Office - - - - - - - - 77
Prize Money - - - - - - - - 86
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96
Unappropriated Votes - - - - - 100
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100

Audit:

1. Efficiency of a proper System of Audit as a Check upon Expenditure - - - 25
2. Importance of direct Reports to Parliament by the Audit Board - - - - 25
3. Practice in the Event of Differences between the Audit Office and the Treasury, or the Departments - - - - - - 26
4. Means of Procuring in due Time the Accounts for Audit; Suggestions hereon - 26
5. Inadequacy of any System of Audit as a Check upon Expenditure - - - 26
6. Recommended Audit of the Miscellaneous and Civil Services, and of all Treasury Accounts - - - - - - - 26
7. Practice in regard to the Appropriation Audit of the Army and Navy Accounts - 26
8. Reports by the Appropriation Auditors to the Board - - - - - - - 27
9. Question as to the Appropriation Audit of Expenditure authorised by the Minister for War - - - - - - - 27
10. Disadvantage on the whole of Transferring the Detailed Audit of Army Accounts to the Audit Office - - - - - - 28
11. Transfer recently of the Detailed Audit of certain Services to the War Department - 28
12. Staff of the Audit Office; their Mode of Appointment and of Payment - - - 28
13. Present State of the Business of the Office - 29
14. Generally as to the Accounts subject to Audit, and as to the Functions of the Board - 29

Army, II. 4. - - - - - - - - 23
Commissariat - - - - - - - - 35

Audit—continued. PAGE

Commissariat Chest Account - - - - 35
Exchequer, 8. 9. - - - - - - - 46
Fireworks (Celebration of Peace) - - - - 51
Foreign Expenditure - - - - - - - 52
Imprests, &c. - - - - - - - - 55
Old Stores (Navy), 2 - - - - - - 75
Pay Office, II. 7. 8. - - - - - - - 83
Salaries and Allowances - - - - - 94
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96
Treasury, 1. 5. - - - - - - - - 96
Turkish Embassy - - - - - - - 99
Turkish Government (Advance from) - - - 99
Unappropriated Votes - - - - - - 100
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104
Woods and Forests, Office of, 4. - - - - 105
Works, Office of - - - - - - - 106

Balances:

1. Inexpediency of large Balances in the Hands of the Paymaster-general - - - 29
2. Importance of strict Appropriation rather than small Balances - - - - - 30
3. Unduly large Balances necessary to carry out strict Appropriation in the Pay Office - 30
4. Means by which Balances may be kept low whilst Appropriation is adhered to - - 30
5. Balances of late Years, and previously to the Consolidation of the Pay Office; Doubt as to any great Reduction - - - 30
6. Considerable Reduction consequent on the Consolidation - - - - - - 31
7. Discrepancy between the Exchequer and Treasury Accounts - - - - 31
8. Detailed Return as to the Pay Office Balances 31 March 1856 - - - - - - 31

Appropriation - - - - - - - - 17
Exchequer - - - - - - - - - 43
Pay Office - - - - - - - - - 77
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100

Bank of England - - - - - - - - 31
Acquittance (Exchequer) - - - - - - 5
Exchequer Bills, 2. - - - - - - - 49
Receipts (Exchequer) - - - - - - - 87

Brooksbank, the late Mr. - - - - - - 32

Civil Contingencies - - - - - - - - 33
Balances, 4. - - - - - - - - 30

Civil Services - - - - - - - - - 34
Appropriation - - - - - - - - 17
Exchequer - - - - - - - - - 43
Miscellaneous Services - - - - - - 59
Pay Office - - - - - - - - - 77
Treasury - - - - - - - - - 96
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100

Collection of Revenue - - - - - - - 34
Drawbacks - - - - - - - - - 42
Gross Revenue - - - - - - - - 52

Commissariat - - - - - - - - - 35
Accounts, 1. - - - - - - - - - 1
Army - - - - - - - - - - 21
Commissariat Chest Account - - - - 35

Commissariat Chest Account - - - - - - 35
Balances, 2. - - - - - - - - 29
Convict Service - - - - - - - - 39
East India Company - - - - - - - 42
Foreign Expenditure - - - - - - - 52
Imprests, &c. - - - - - - - - 55

Consolidated Fund - - - - - - - - 36
Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - - 37
Miscellaneous Services - - - - - - 59
Treasury - - - - - - - - - 96

Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - - 37

CONSOLIDATED FUND WARRANT: PAGE

1. Evidence in strong Disapproval of the Discontinurnce of the Warrant, as furnished to the Exchequer - - - - - 37
2. Evidence explanatory of its Discontinuance by the Treasury - - - - - 38
3. Official Correspondence on the Subject - 38

Deficiency Bills - - - - - - - - 40

Control - - - - - - - - - 38
Accounts - - - - - - - - 1
Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92 - - - - - 6
Appropriation, I. 3.; II. 3. - - - - 17
Audit - - - - - - - - 25
Collection of Revenue - - - - - - 34
Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - 37
Deficiency Bills - - - - - - - 40
Departments - - - - - - - 41
Excess of Grants - - - - - - 43
Exchequer - - - - - - - - 43
Exchequer Bills - - - - - - - 49
Finance Accounts - - - - - - 50
Gross Revenue - - - - - - - 52
Individual Control - - - - - - 56
Instrument of Appointment - - - - - 56
Issues (Exchequer) - - - - - - 57
Old Stores (Navy) - - - - - - 74
Parliamentary Control - - - - - 76
Pay Office - - - - - - - 77
Premiums on Exchequer Bills - - - - 85
Publicity - - - - - - - - 87
Receivers-general - - - - - - 88
Redemption of Pensions - - - - - 88
Royal Orders - - - - - - - 93
Salaries and Allowances - - - - - 94
Superannuations and Pensions - - - - 95
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96
Treasury - - - - - - - - 96
Turkish Government (Advance from) - - - 99
Unappropriated Votes - - - - - - 100
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104
Woods and Forests, Office of - - - - 105
Works, Office of - - - - - - - 106

Creation of Debt - - - - - - - - 40
Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - 37

Deficiency Bills - - - - - - - - 40
Consolidated Fund Warrant - - - - 37

Departments - - - - - - - - - 41
Accounts - - - - - - - - - 1
Army - - - - - - - - - 21
Audit - - - - - - - - - 25
Exchequer - - - - - - - - - 43
Imprests, &c. - - - - - - - - 55
Navy - - - - - - - - - 73
Ordnance - - - - - - - - - 75
Pay Office - - - - - - - - - 77
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96
Treasury - - - - - - - - - 96

Drawbacks - - - - - - - - - 42
Collection of Revenue - - - - - - 34

Estimates - - - - - - - - - 42
Monthly Estimates - - - - - - - 73
Treasury - - - - - - - - - 96
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100
Votes of Parliament - - - - - - 103
Woods and Forests, Office of, 3. - - - - 105

Excess of Grants - - - - - - - - 43
Adjustments of Accounts (Pay Office) - - - 6
Appropriation I. 2.; II. 1. - - - - - 17
Exchequer, 3. 4. - - - - - - - 44

EXCHEQUER: PAGE

1. Antiquity and Origin of the Control of the Exchequer over the Treasury - - - 43
2. Functions and Duties vested in the Department - - - - - - - - - 43
3. Instances of Exchequer Control: Importance of its Continuance - - - - - 44
4. Uselessness, practically, of the Functions of the Department - - - - - - 45
5. Advantage if the Control were transferred to the Treasury - - - - - - 45
6. False Principle of Account; Interference with the Treasury and Pay Office - - 45
7. Evidence in Defence of the System of Accounts - - - - - - - - 46
8. Objection to an Audit by the Exchequer of the Pay Office Accounts - - - - 46
9. Expediency of subjecting the Exchequer Accounts to the Audit Board - - - 46
10. Suggested Parliamentary Inspection, or Annual Reports to Parliament - - - 46
11. Limited Amount of Office Business, and unduly large Establishment and Salaries - 46
12. Evidence in Correction of the foregoing Statement - - - - - - - 47
13. Statement as to a Transfer of the Weights and Measures Department - - - 47
14. Papers and Returns relative to the Business Establishment and Salaries - - - 47
15. Recommendations by the Public Accounts Commissioners in 1831 - - - 48
16. Recommendations by the late Mr. Brooksbank - - - - - - - - 48

Acquittance (Exchequer) - - - - - 5
Act 4, Will. 4, c. 15 - - - - - - 6
Appropriation - - - - - - - - 17
Balances - - - - - - - - - 29
Bank of England - - - - - - - 31
Civil Contingencies - - - - - - 33
Collection of Revenue - - - - - - 34
Consolidated Fund - - - - - - - 36
Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - 37
Consolidated Fund Warrant - - - - - 37
Control - - - - - - - - - 38
Co-operation - - - - - - - - 40
Custody of Public Monies - - - - - 40
Deficiency Bills - - - - - - - 40
Exchequer Bills - - - - - - - 49
Foreign Expenditure - - - - - - 52
Forms and Documents - - - - - - 52
France - - - - - - - - - 52
Gross Revenue - - - - - - - - 52
Instrument of Appointment - - - - - 56
Ireland - - - - - - - - - 57
Issues (Exchequer) - - - - - - 57
Kensington Gore Estate - - - - - 57
Legality - - - - - - - - - 58
Parliamentary Control - - - - - - 76
Pay Office - - - - - - - - 77
Premium on Exchequer Bills - - - - 85
Receipts (Exchequer) - - - - - - 87
Redemption of Pensions - - - - - 88
Repayments to Exchequer - - - - - 89
Royal Orders - - - - - - - - 93
Transfers (Exchequer) - - - - - - 96
Treasury - - - - - - - - - 96
Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104
Woods and Forests, Office of, 1. - - - - 105
Works, Office of - - - - - - - 106

EXCHEQUER BILLS:

1. Generally as to the present System of Preparation, Issue, &c. - - - - - - 49
2. As to the Issue being undertaken by the Treasury - - - - - - - 49

Creation of Debt - - - - - - - 40
Premiums on Exchequer Bills - - - - 85

Finance Accounts: PAGE

1. Great Disadvantage in the late Presentation of the Accounts - 50
2. Discrepancies consequent on the new Mode of Preparation by the Treasury - 50
3. Improvement if the Accounts were made up to January - 51
4. Question as to the Expediency of a Preliminary Account for Nine Months - 51
5. Statement on the part of the Treasury - 51

Accounts - 1
Redemption of Pensions, 4. - 89
Statistical Account - 95

Foreign Expenditure - 52
Commissariat Chest Account - 35

France - 52

Gross Revenue - 52
Collection of Revenue - 34
Redemption of Pensions - 88
Superannuations and Pensions - 95

Imprests, &c. - 55
Commissariat Chest Account - 35
Foreign Expenditure - 52
Navy, 4. 6. - 73
Repayment of Loans - 89
Transfers between Departments - 96
Unappropriated Votes - 100

Inland Revenue - 56
Collection of Revenue - 34
Drawbacks - 42
Gross Revenue - 52
Redemption of Pensions - 88

Instrument of Appointment - 56
Queen Dowager's Annuity - 87

Ireland - 57

Issues (Exchequer) - 57
Appropriation - 17
Audit - 25
Balances - 29
Control - 38
Exchequer - 43
Legality - 58
Pay Office - 77
Royal Orders - 93
Treasury - 96

Kensington Gore Estate - 57

Legality - 58
Appropriation - 17
Exchequer - 43
Pay Office - 77
Treasury - 96

Miscellaneous Services - 59
Audit, 6. - 26
Consolidated Fund - 37
Estimates - 43
Unexpended Balances - 100

Navy:

1. Excellent System of Naval Accounts - 73
2. Time taken in their Preparation - 73
3. System of Audit - 73
4. Mode of Repayment to the Paymaster-general - 73
5. Vote for 1855-56 - 74
6. Other Evidence generally - 74

Appropriation, 1. 6. - 19
Audit, 1. 2. 7. - 25
Estimates - 42
Old Stores (Navy) - 74
Pay Office - 77
Prize Money - 86
Stores - 95
Transfers between Departments - 96
Turkish Government (Advance from) - 99
Unexpended Balances - 100

Old Stores (Navy): PAGE

1. Present Practice of Repayment objected to - 74
2. Evidence in Approval of the Practice - 75
3. Return for the Years 1848-55 - 75

Ordnance - 76
Accounts, I. - 1
Army - 21
Estimates - 42
Fireworks (Celebration of Peace) - 51
Transfers between Departments - 96

Parliamentary Control - 76
Accounts - 1
Appropriation - 17
Audit - 25
Collection of Revenue - 34
Control - 38
Creation of Debt - 40
Exchequer - 43
Exchequer Bills, 2. - 49
Finance Accounts - 50
Pay Office - 77
Redemption of Pensions - 88
Superannuations and Pensions - 95
Treasury - 96
Unexpended Balances - 100
Woods and Forests, Office of - 105

Pay Office:

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer:

1. Proof of Misappropriation in the Practice of the Office - 77
2. Illegality, and Violation of the Constitution, in departure from the Principle of Appropriation - 78
3. Exceptions taken to the System of Accounts - 79
4. Strong objection to the Working of the Cash Account; Amendment suggested - 79
5. Consolidation of the Pay Offices; Disadvantage in some respects - 79
6. Exemption of Individuals from any corrupt Misappropriation - 80
7. Improved System if there were but one common Balance, strictly administered - 80

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office:

1. General Practice explained; Impracticability of strict Appropriation - 80
2. Belief as to the Legality of the Practice - 81
3. Operation through means of four distinct Accounts - 81
4. Defence of the System on which the Accounts are kept - 82
5. Working of the Cash Account explained; Inexpediency of Alteration 82
6. Consolidation of the Pay Offices and consequent Advantages - 82
7. System of Audit - 83
8. Objection to an Audit by the Exchequer - 83
9. Office of Paymaster-general; Amendment suggested - 83
10. Checks against Fraud, or undue Misappropriation - 83
11. Suggestions for an improved System generally - 84

III. Regulations as laid down in Treasury Minutes - 84

Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office) - 6
Appropriation - 17
Army - 21
Balances - 29
Brooksbank, The late Mr. - 32

PAY OFFICE—continued. PAGE

Consolidated Fund - - - - - - 36
Control - - - - - - - - 38
Deposits (Pay Office) - - - - - - 41
Excess of Grants - - - - - - 43
Exchequer - - - - - - - 43
Imprests, &c. - - - - - - - 55
Miscellaneous Services - - - - - 59
Navy - - - - - - - - 73
Old Stores (Navy) - - - - - - 74
Parliamentary Control - - - - - 76
Parnell, Sir Henry - - - - - - 76
Royal Orders - - - - - - - 93
Sargent, Mr. - - - - - - - 94
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96
Treasury - - - - - - - - 96
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104

PREMIUMS ON EXCHEQUER BILLS:

1. Comments on the Course pursued hereon by the Treasury - - - - - - 85
2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury - 85
3. Correspondence between the Treasury and Exchequer - - - - - - - 86

Receipts (Exchequer) - - - - - - - 87
Acquittance (Exchequer) - - - - - - 5
Bank of England - - - - - - - 31
Exchequer - - - - - - - - 43
Gross Revenue - - - - - - - - 52
Income - - - - - - - - - 56
Miscellaneous Receipts - - - - - 59
Old Stores (Navy) - - - - - - 74
Pay Office I. 4; II. 5. 11. - - - - - 77
Receivers-general - - - - - - 88
Woods and Forests, Office of, 1 - - - - 105

REDEMPTION OF PENSIONS:

1. Strong Objection to the recent Payment of 213,000*l.*, without the direct Sanction of Parliament - - - - - - - 88
2. Precedents of Redemption, without Parliamentary Authority - - - - - 88
3. Precedents in which Parliamentary Sanction was required - - - - - - 89
4. Lapse of Time before the recent Redemptions would come before Parliament - 89
5. Evidence in Explanation and Approval of the Course adopted by the Treasury - 89

Royal Orders - - - - - - - - - 93

Salaries and Allowances - - - - - - 94
Instrument of Appointment - - - - - 56
Judges' Salaries - - - - - - - 57
Law and Justice - - - - - - - 58
Mahony, P. K. (The late) - - - - - 59
Superannuations and Pensions - - - - 95
Transfers between Departments - - - - 96

TREASURY:

1. General Powers and Duties - - - - 96
2. General Practice in authorising Expenditure 97
3. Treasury Warrants - - - - - 97
4. Responsibility of the Board - - - - 98
5. Recommended Audit of Accounts - - - 98
6. Importance of Control by Parliament or the Exchequer - - - - - - - 98
7. Recommended Increase of Power in the Board - - - - - - - - 98

Accounts - - - - - - - - - 1
Acquittance (Exchequer) - - - - - 5

TREASURY—continued. PAGE

Appropriation - - - - - - - 17
Audit, 3. 6. - - - - - - - 26
Balances - - - - - - - - 29
Civil Contingencies - - - - - - 33
Civil Services - - - - - - - 34
Commissariat - - - - - - - 35
Consolidated Fund - - - - - - 36
Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - 37
Consolidated Fund Warrant - - - - 37
Control - - - - - - - - 38
Co-operation - - - - - - - 40
Creation of Debt - - - - - - 40
Deficiency Bills - - - - - - - 40
Establishments of Departments - - - - 42
Estimates - - - - - - - - 42
Exchequer - - - - - - - - 43
Exchequer Bills - - - - - - - 49
Finance Accounts - - - - - - 50
Instrument of Appointment - - - - - 56
Miscellaneous Services - - - - - 59
Navy, 5. 6. - - - - - - - 74
Parliamentary Control - - - - - 76
Pay Office - - - - - - - 77
Premiums on Exchequer Bills - - - - 85
Redemption of Pensions - - - - - 88
Royal Orders - - - - - - - 93
Salaries and Allowances - - - - - 94
Unappropriated Votes - - - - - 100
Unexpended Balances - - - - - 100
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104
Woods and Forests, Office of - - - - 105
Works, Office of - - - - - - 106

Unappropriated Votes - - - - - - 100

Unexpended Balances - - - - - - 100
Appropriation, II. 2 - - - - - - 20
Civil Contingencies - - - - - - 33
New Zealand - - - - - - - 74
Public Walks - - - - - - - 87
Re-Votes - - - - - - - - 90
Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses) - - 104

Ways and Means - - - - - - - 103
Appropriation - - - - - - - 17
Consolidated Fund - - - - - - 36
Deficiency Bills - - - - - - - 40
Exchequer - - - - - - - - 43
Pay Office - - - - - - - - 77
Treasury - - - - - - - - 96
Ways and Means Bills - - - - - 104

WELLINGTON, DUKE OF (FUNERAL EXPENSES):

1. Statement and Complaint hereon by the Comptroller-general - - - - - 104
2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury - 104
3. Nature of the Audit of the Expenditure - 104

WOODS AND FORESTS, OFFICE OF:

1. Mode of Payment to the Exchequer; Amount paid - - - - - - - - 105
2. General Conduct of the Department; Nature of the Check upon Expenditure - - 105
3. Expediency, if practicable, of Estimates of Expenditure - - - - - - 105
4. Audit of Accounts; considerable Arrear hereon - - - - - - - 105

I N D E X.

[N. B.—In this Index the Figures following the Names of the Witnesses refer to the Questions in the Evidence, and those following App. p. to the Paging of the Appendix.]

A.

ACCOUNTS:

I. Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat:
1. Lapse of Time (Thirteen Months) before final Preparation; Necessity thereof.
2. Question as to the expediency of a less complete Annual Account.
3. More detailed Accounts recommended for Presentation.
4. Presentation of separate Accounts for each Service.
5. Inexpediency of Departure from the Plan of Naval Accounts.
6. Consolidation recommended of the Books of the Ordnance and War Office.

II. Navy:
1. Lapse of Time (Eight Months) before final Preparation.
2. Successful Working of the System of Accounts.

III. Exchequer:
1. Recommendations in 1831 of the Commissioners of Public Accounts.
2. False Principle of Account; Interference with the Pay Office and Treasury.
3. Defence of the System by the Comptroller-general.

IV. Pay Office:
1. Reference to Treasury Regulations in 1834, 1836, and 1848.
2. Objections to the System and Practice of Account.
3. Evidence in favour of the System.

V. Generally:
1. Recommendations in 1831 of the Commissioners of Public Accounts.
2. Improved Accounts of late Years.
3. Approval of Book-keeping by Double Entry.
4. Increased Check advisable in regard to the several Departments.

I. Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat:

1. Lapse of Time (Thirteen Months) before final Preparation; Necessity thereof:

Longer time allowed for the preparation of the army, ordnance, and commissariat accounts than for the naval accounts, Anderson 2085——Impossibility of a finally appropriated army account immediately after the termination of the year, ib. 2085, 2086.

Impracticability of navy or army accounts being made up under different heads until all the imprest accounts for foreign and home expenditure have been adjusted, Haffay 2516. 2519. 2558-2561——Considerable lapse of time before any misappropriation of the army or navy vote would, as now accounted for, appear before Parliament, ib. 2678-2685.

The army, ordnance, and commissariat accounts occupy altogether thirteen months in their collection and preparation before they come to the Audit Board, Vine 3662, 3663. 3931. 3947——Reasons why the army accounts cannot be laid before Parliament till thirteen months after the close of the year, though the navy accounts are presented after a lapse of eight months, ib. 3903, 3904. 3947-3982——The detailed account, accompanied by a balance sheet, is presented about a month later than the abstract account, ib. 3930——The army account for the year 1855-56 has not yet (10 July) been sent to the Audit Office, but will be ready in a few days; this is an exceptional delay, ib. 3931-3946. 3944——As being the first year of the war, some delay in the preparation of the accounts has been unavoidable, ib. 3933-3935. 3970.

In ordinary years the army accounts are always laid before Parliament some time before 1 June, or about thirteen months and a half after the termination of the service, Vine 3936-3940——The presentation of the accounts does not take place till the Estimates for the current year have been voted, ib. 3937, 3938. 3960, 3961——The army accounts not only comprise very few final payments, but are considerably more numerous than the navy accounts, Vine 3949. 3970-3980——Nine-tenths of the army expenditure is through paymasters and accountants, there being few final payments in the first instance, ib. 3949. 3977-3979.

ACCOUNTS—continued.

I. Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat—continued.

1. Lapse of Time (Thirteen Months) before final Preparation, &c.—continued.

Examination to the effect that the accounts are now transmitted from abroad with as much despatch as possible, Vine 3952 et seq.——Exertion necessary at the War Office to complete the accounts within the given time of thirteen months, ib. 3952. 3955. 3962——Obstacles to the accounts from New Zealand being transmitted in less time than at present, ib. 3957. 3965-3967.

The final army account for 1854-55 has just come in (10 July 1856), Anderson 4196.

The accounts at the foreign stations are closed one month after each quarter, Hollings 4583, 4584——As a rule, the accounts from abroad up to 31 March arrive at the War Office by the end of October, ib. 4585-4588——During the war the home and foreign accounts were of a very heavy character, and have not been received until an unusually late period, ib. 4589——The accounts occupy about seven months in transmission to the War department, and six months in their preparation before they are sent to the Audit Board, ib. 4591-4593. 4614-4616.

Evidence to the effect that without a largely increased staff the complete examination and preparation of the accounts in the War Office cannot be accomplished in less than six months, Hollings 4594 et seq.——Efforts made to complete the examination at the earliest possible period, ib. 4594. 4597. 4608——Reference to a peculiarly heavy account for the London recruiting service; this account was not received in the War Office till twelve months after its date, ib. 4599. 4618-4622.

2. Question as to the expediency of a less complete Annual Account:

A provisional account made up as closely as possible, as well as the final account, might, if deemed advisable, easily be prepared, Anderson 2086, 2087——Inexpediency of making up the army account for Parliament at the end of the financial year, or within the same period as the navy account, inasmuch as the accuracy and value of the account would be destroyed, Vine 3904-3906. 3912-3919. 3941-3943. 4067-4081——Illustration, as shown by the Ordnance service, of the incorrectness of annual accounts, unless due time be allowed for correction and preparation, ib. 4067-4074.

3. More detailed Accounts recommended for Presentation:

Suggestions with a view to the army and navy accounts as now laid before Parliament, under the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, being rendered in a detailed form, instead of in their present concise shape, Hoffay 2636-2638, 2648-2651.

4. Presentation of separate Accounts for each Service:

Separate accounts will be rendered of the army, ordnance, and commissariat, Vine 3944, 3945.

5. Inexpediency of Departure from the Plan of Naval Accounts:

With regard to the variation in the form of the abstract books of the army accounts, the same has rendered the audit more difficult, though not less accurate, Vine 3826-3848. 3852-3856.——Witness, who laid the foundation of the naval ledger, some twenty-five years ago, is strongly opposed to any departure by the war department from the plan of naval accounts, Anderson 4142-4150——Originally the books in the War department, as framed by witness, were precisely similar to the naval books, ib. 4145, 4146.

6. Consolidation recommended of the Books of the Ordnance and War Office:

Concurrence in objections to separate books and accounts for the army at the Horse Guards and the ordnance at Pall Mall; importance of an immediate fusion of accounts under one roof, Vine 3860-3888——In the year 1856-57, a consolidation of the books of the army and ordnance is peculiarly desirable, as the consolidation of the departments then commences, ib. 3946——It is very desirable that but one set of books should be kept for the ordnance and army, as consolidated services, Anderson 4151-4154.

II. Navy:

1. Lapse of Time (Eight Months) before final Preparation:

Explanation as to the time taken in the preparation and before the presentation of the naval accounts, Anderson 2055-2060, 2085-2087——Lapse of about two years before any transaction taking place in June appears before Parliament in the naval account, ib. 2055-2060——The navy are allowed eight months for the preparation of their account, ib. 2055. 2085; Vine 3666, 3667. 3947——Much greater facilities for getting in the navy than the army accounts, and for getting them ready sooner, Vine 3903, 3904. 3947 et seq.

2. Successful

Report, 1856—continued.

ACCOUNTS—continued.

II. Navy—continued.

2. Successful Working of the System of Accounts:

Great efficiency of the navy accounts during the war, in consequence of the improved system of late years, Anderson 1304——Inexpediency of any variation in the form of navy accounts, the system being at present quite perfect, Vine 3852–3856——Successful conduct and audit of the naval accounts, without delay, during the war, ib. 3852–3855. 3890——The system is capable of any expansion, ib. 3852. 3910, 3911.

III. Exchequer:

1. Recommendations, in 1831, of the Commissioners of Public Accounts:

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831 as to the system of record and account suitable for the new arrangements of the Exchequer, App. p. 466——Recommendation that the system of double entry be introduced for keeping the accounts, ib.——Recommendation that the Exchequer periodically make up accounts and send the same to the Treasury, ib.——Recommendation that the ledger should be balanced monthly, ib.

Recommendation of the Commissioners that annual accounts be made of all revenue received, all monies paid into the Bank of England, &c., and to what services the expenditure has been applied, App. p. 466——Recommendation that the credits given to the Exchequer for different years should, to prevent obscurity, be kept separately, ib. ——Recommendation that all credits for expenditure given to the Exchequer be cancelled after nine months, if not applied for, ib.

2. False Principle of Account; Interference with the Pay Office and Treasury:

Objectionable principle in the twenty-fourth clause of the Exchequer Regulation Act, that the Treasury accounts of expenditure shall be founded upon Exchequer credits, and not upon actual payments, Anderson 1402——Faulty system, whereby Exchequer credits are considered by the Exchequer as final issues or payments, though not actually such, ib. 1551–1553. 1603——Defective principle of the twenty-fourth clause of the Act further adverted to with reference to Exchequer credits, ib. 1553–1555. 1603——Illustration of the expediency of altering the system of making up the public accounts from credits, instead of from actual payments, ib. 1603.

False principle upon which, notwithstanding recent improvements, the Treasury accounts are obliged to be formed on account of the necessity of adherence to the Exchequer system of accounts, Anderson 1800 et seq.——The whole principle of double entry cannot be properly adopted on account of the necessity of adhering to the Exchequer basis of account, ib. 1801, 1802——Further evidence to the effect that the Exchequer system of treating as a payment every credit or transfer to the account of the Paymaster-general is decidedly objectionable, and leads to much misrepresentation, ib. 1807–1841——Confusion of accounts shown by the Exchequer issue and expenditure of 1,400,000 l. at the end of March, whereas the expenditure really took place in the following quarter; how this might be amended, ib. 1824–1827. 1833, 1834. 1840–1851.

Uselessness to the Treasury, in making up the annual accounts, of the accounts furnished by the Exchequer; pending inquiry in the matter, Anderson 2238——The specific credit system necessitates the keeping of two distinct sets of accounts at the Pay Office, one to show how the vote is going in credit, and the other to show how it is going in expenditure, Hoffay 2583, 2584; Anderson 3518–3526——Different mode of account necessary if the payments to the cash accounts were at once transferred to the Exchequer, Hoffay 2596–2609——Inconvenience and uselessness of the system in the Pay-office of splitting up the cash account in order to square exactly with the Exchequer system of credits for specific heads of service, Anderson 3516–3528.

3. Defence of the System by the Comptroller-General:

Impression that Mr. Anderson does not complain that the Exchequer system of accounts is imperfect, but that it clashes with the different system of the Pay Office, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 3287, 3288——Perfect system of double entry pursued at the Exchequer, ib. 3287——Impracticability of keeping the Exchequer accounts on a different system, or of treating the issues other than as payments, ib. 3288, 3289. 3297–3300——Adherence to the principle of appropriation far outweighs the advantage of a greater simplicity of accounts, ib. 3285, 3286——Opinion that the Exchequer system of account does not necessarily prevent the paymaster from keeping his accounts in the form most approved by him, ib. 3289–3296.

IV. Pay Office:

1. Reference to Treasury Regulations in 1834, 1836, and 1848:

Regulation in Treasury Minute of September 1834 in regard to the cash account and the Exchequer credit account, App. p. 476, 477.

Report, 1856—continued.

Accounts—continued.

IV. Pay Office—continued.

1. Reference to Treasury Regulations in 1834, 1836, and 1848—continued.

Sundry regulations in Treasury Minute of 19 August 1836, App. p. 491-499——Further regulations for the guidance of the office and for the conduct of the accounts in Minute of 19 November 1836, ib. 499-501.

Directions in detail in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848 relative to the accounts of the Exchequer and Pay Office, App. p. 511, et seq.——Recommendation in Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848 that the whole of the accounts be kept by double entry, ib. 527.

2. Objections to the System and Practice of Account:

Confusion of accounts through the consolidation of the Pay-offices, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 575, 576——Equal necessity of separate accounts under one as under three paymasters, ib. 3092.

Review by Lord Monteagle, in his Memorandum of 1854, of the general system of the Exchequer and Pay Office, with suggestions as to the proper mode of keeping the accounts, App. p. 537, et seq.——Statement in the Memorandum that there is a total absence of all conformity between the actual payments and the Exchequer accounts, consequent on following the principle of the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, ib. 543.

Statement in the Memorandum of 1854 as to the errors of account that have arisen through the non-adherence to the principle of appropriation, App. p. 545——Appendix to the memorandum in elucidation of Lord Monteagle's statements therein, ib. 547-552.

3. Evidence in favour of the System:

Very perfect system of accounts in the Pay Office; the most approved form of double entry is applied, Anderson 1260-1269. 1354——Witness has never known a single item go to the wrong account, ib. 1263——Reference to and examination upon the Paymaster's books, in which the payments are recorded after they are made, ib. 3368 et seq.——Explanation that the branch accounts, as in the Paymaster's books, do not appear in the account at the Bank, and are not controlled by the Exchequer, ib. 3511-3516.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson as to the multiplied risks and increase of labour if the plan proposed in the Exchequer Memorandum of 1854 were adopted, App. p. 559——Statement by Mr. Anderson that the errors pointed out in Lord Monteagle's Memorandum did not exist in the Pay Office books, ib.

V. Generally:

1. Recommendations, in 1831, of the Commissioners of Public Accounts:

Reasons given by the Commissioners in the First Report of 1831 for recommending the adoption of the commercial system of book-keeping, App. p. 466——Statement as to the great merit of the double-entry system, ib.——Reference to the excellent working in France of the system of double entry, ib. 467——Perfect security in the system against default, &c., ib.——Statement that the Treasury Minute of 14 July 1829 recognises the plan of double entry, ib.

Recommendation of the Commissioners that the particulars of all transactions be recorded in auxiliary books, whereby all ledger entries would be concentrated, App. p. 467——The Commissioners consider that the system of book-keeping by double entry is the foundation of all improvement, ib.——Also that the best security for the correctness of accounts will be found in a good system of keeping them, ib. 470.

2. Improved Accounts of late Years:

Very objectionable system formerly of subdivision of public monies, and multiplicity of balances, adverted to as having arisen merely through defective forms of accounts, Anderson 1297——Remarks by Mr. Anderson in 1854 as to the great extent to which public accounts have been simplified since 1830, App. p. 553.

Statement, in Treasury Minute of 2 March 1855, as to the improved daily and weekly accounts to be rendered by the Banks of England and Ireland, App. p. 583-586.

3. Approval of Book-keeping by Double Entry:

Sundry passages in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831 in favour of the system of double entry, App. p. 466, 467.

Regulations, in Treasury Minutes of September 1834, August 1836, May 1837, and December 1848, in favour of the system of book-keeping by double entry, App. p. 476. 489. 492.

4. Increased Check advisable in regard to the several Departments:

Any imperfection in the naval or military departmental form of accounts does not come within the interference of the Audit Board, Vine 3849, 3850——Each department should

Report, 1856—continued.

Accounts—continued.

V. Generally—continued.

4. Increased Check advisable in regard to the several Departments—continued.

should receive instructions from the Treasury as to the mode of keeping its accounts, Anderson 4150——Statement as to the power of the Audit Board to compel the accountant to give in the required information in due time; suggested increased power by means of a system of fines and of publicity, Romilly 4294. 4366-4371. 4551-4554.

See also Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office). Appropriation. Audit. Balances, 7. Brooksbank, The late Mr. Exchequer, 9. 14, 15. Finance Accounts. Pay Office. Sargent, Mr. Transfers between Departments. Woods and Forests, Office of, 4. Works, Office of.

Accumulation of Balances. See Balances.

Acquittance (Exchequer):

1. Statement by the Comptroller-general in disapproval of the Discontinuance of this Form.
2. Explanatory Statement on the part of the Treasury.
3. Suggestion in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831.
4. Directions in Treasury Minutes of September 1834 and September 1855.

1. Statement by the Comptroller-general in disapproval of the Discontinuance of this Form:

Explanation as to the form of acquittance given till recently by the Exchequer on the receipt of monies; one of these forms handed in, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 13, 14. 3107—— Disadvantage under the present system in the acquittance being dispensed with, ib. 14——The acquittance might be restored without any possible inconvenience, with some advantage to the public, and a clear benefit to the accountant, ib.

Further explanation as to the acquittance formerly given by witness to any party paying money into the account of the Exchequer at the Bank of England, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 469-471——Examination as to the practical utility of this acquittance, inasmuch as the party paying the money gets a receipt from the Bank; reasons, nevertheless, in favour of a direct acquittance from witness, ib. 471-487——The acquittance is in fact a check upon witness's accounts, ib. 477. 484——The Irish payments are all upon acquittance, ib. 482——Some of the parties paying have complained of being deprived of the acquittance, ib. 484.

Reference to a letter on the part of the corporation of the city of London to witness, dated 29 April 1856, with respect to certain sums paid to the credit of the Exchequer at the Bank of England, and requesting to be furnished with the usual certificates of acquittance, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 489.

Advantage in case of private payments of the Exchequer acquittance over that given by the Bank, the former being a more explanatory discharge, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3107-3109. 3114-3119——The bank receipt merely states the sum in gross, without particulars as to dates or items, ib. 3107. 3116-3119——The bank receipt is a full acquittance in the case of revenue payments, and is in such cases an improvement on the Exchequer form, ib. 3107. 3112 3114——Question as to witness not being still compellable by law to give these acquittances if required, ib. 3107. 3110-3112——Doubt whether the power of the Treasury to make regulations in respect to the Exchequer acquittance would enable them to dispense with the document altogether; by a new law, however, they have the latter power, ib. 3107. 3110-3112.

2. Explanatory Statement on the part of the Treasury:

Reasons for the discontinuance of the Exchequer acquittance or receipts given to Receivers-general; it was useless, inasmuch as the final acquittance is necessarily given by the Audit Board, Anderson 2234-2237——The Exchequer acquittance was in fact merely an intermediate voucher to the Board of Audit, ib. 2234.

3. Suggestion in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831:

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, of the course to be pursued in paying in money, and the legal discharge for such payment, App. p. 460.

4. Directions in Treasury Minutes of September 1834 and September 1855:

Form of acquittance as approved by the Treasury in Minute of September 1834, App. p. 484——Treasury Minute, dated 25 September 1855, relating to Exchequer acquittances and specifications, ib. 587, 588——Statement in the Minute as to the power of the Treasury to make regulations, ib. 587——Reference in the Minute as to the object of acquittances, ib. 588.

Report, 1856—continued.

Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15. The Act of 1834 may be considered the governing statute which now regulates the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 4, 5——The duties formerly vested in the Auditors of the Exchequer and Clerk of the Pells were, by the Act of 1834, continued provisionally, and transferred to the office of Comptroller, ib. 5——Foundation of the Act of 1834 upon the Report of the Commission on the Exchequer in 1831, ib. 6——Improved arrangements generally under the Act of 1834, as recommended by the Commissioners of 1831, ib. 986, 987——Exceptions in which the Act did not adopt the recommendations of the Commissioners, ib. 988, 989. 1009–1013.

Treasury Minute, dated 26 September 1834, for the regulation of the Exchequer, in accordance with the provisions of the Act, App. p. 471–484.——See also Exchequer.

Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92. Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, as to the control which has been providad by the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, independently of the Exchequer control, over the issue of the public monies, App. p. 509.

Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94. Treasury Minutes, dated 22 August 1854, for carrying into effect the provisions of the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, App. p. 578–582——Treasury Minute of 24 November 1854, prescribing further arrangements for giving effect to the Act, ib. 582, 583.

Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office). Care is taken that every account of the Paymaster-general is, if possible, in credit at the close of the month, Anderson 1593——In the event of the account being overdrawn, the advance is adjusted on the following day, or on the next issue, ib. 1733. 1994, 1995.

Any excess of payment over the daily Exchequer credit is always set right at the end of the month, but is not adjusted on the following day unless the sum in excess be material, Hoffay 2456–2467——There would be no difficulty in adjusting within a day or two any issue in excess of a particular credit, ib. 2472–2476——When overdrawn, the account might always be adjusted the next day, but when underdrawn, not until further orders for payment come in, ib. 2488–2492——Practice not to allow the variation between the credit and expenditure to extend to any very considerable amount, ib. 2579–2581.

Doubt as to the advances from one service to another being rectified so regularly as stated by Mr. Hoffay, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2830——Question as to the expediency of a law sanctioning transfers from one service to another for a day or any specified limited period; this, however, would be perfectly consistent with Exchequer control, ib. 2833–2841. 2888, 2889——The present system is one of unauthorised advances and of rectification of accounts, ib. 2907 et seq.——Further objections to the system of adjustment and rectification of accounts, more especially with reference to the possibility thereby of payments in excess of votes, ib. 3093–3100.

Impracticability in some cases of procuring Exchequer credits before the end of the month in order to cover advances, Anderson 3454, 3455——Circumstance of most of the civil claims being only finally settled annually upon the preparation by the Audit Board of the annual accounts of the Commissariat Chest, ib. 3490–3495——Saving through the non-adjustment on the following day in the case of payment beyond the issue with regard to miscellaneous services, ib. 3598, 3599. 3659, 3660——Analysis of the ordnance and navy accounts in 1856, showing the extent to which overdrawn, and the period in each case before adjustment, ib. 3601–3616.——See also Pay Office.

Admiralty. See Navy.

Advances. See Civil Contingencies. Collection of Revenue. Commissariat Chest Account. Foreign Expenditure. Imprests, &c. Pay Office, I. 4. II. 5. Repayments (Exchequer). Transfers between Departments. Turkish Government (Advance from). Unappropriated Votes. Ways and Means.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Has been, since April 1854, principal clerk in charge of the financial business of the Treasury, 931, 932——Had previously been, from 1838 to 1854, assistant-paymaster, 933–936——Was in the Navy Office from the year 1825 till that department was consolidated with the Admiralty, 937, 938.

Definition of the objects of the finance system, as the security of the public money, the utmost simplicity of management, and the greatest economy in the employment of the public balances, 939——Best attainment of these objects by placing the finances under one undivided control and responsibility, 940——General enumeration of the branches of public revenue and of the other receipts making up the aggregate in the Exchequer, 941.

Issue of money for the Consolidated Fund charges, on the authority of the Act under which the grants are made, 942——Issue of money for the supply services from the Consolidated Fund, through the medium of Ways and Means Acts, 942–945. 958. 964, 965——In the Appropriation Act the votes of supply are set out in detail, and the Ways and Means made applicable to the votes, 943–946.

Sundry charges to which money paid into the Consolidated Fund is applicable, 947——The interest upon the public debt is a prior charge upon the whole balance of the Fund,

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Fund, 947–949——Exhaustion, on the last day of each quarter, of the Exchequer, with reference to the Consolidated Fund charges adverted to, as showing the necessity of putting the Paymaster in a condition to meet the expenditure of the first ten or fourteen days of the ensuing quarter; alternative otherwise, 948–956.

Practice, as first adopted in the year 1855-56, to pass all public monies into the Consolidated Fund, 957-960. 963. 1013, 1014.——Combined system of quarterly and annual accounts of the supply services, 961, 962——The supply charges, as regulated by the Ways and Means Acts, vary from year to year, 964, 965. 967——The Consolidated Fund charges are permanent, 966——Twofold system of Treasury warrants, one to the Exchequer for issue, and one to the Paymaster-general for distribution, in the case of the fixed charges on the Consolidated Fund, 968-982. 998. 1001.

Limit to the duties of the Exchequer by the Act of 1834, as founded upon the Report of the Commissioners of Account in 1831, 983–990——Fiction, previously to 1834, of paying the money into the Exchequer instead of the Bank of England, 983–986——Improved arrangements generally under the Act of 1834, as recommended by the Commissioners of 1831; 686, 687——Exceptions in which the Act did not adopt the recommendations of the Commissioners, 988, 989. 1009–1013.

Definition of the functions of the Exchequer; the custody and issue of the public monies is now simply a matter of account with the Bank, 990–997. 1030–1046. 1171, 1172——Duty of the Comptroller-general to see that the issues for Consolidated Fund services are authorised by Act of Parliament, 998, 999. 1007——Duty also of the Comptroller-general to see that the issues upon supply services do not exceed the amount voted, 998. 1000. 1007——After the issue is made, the Comptroller has no further authority, 998. 1007. 1030–1046. 1070–1075. 1171, 1172.

Form of proceeding, through means of a Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, in regard to the issue by the Exchequer for supply services, 1001–1006——Practice more especially with reference to Royal Orders, and the limitation of the number; approval thereof, 1001–1006.

Want of information or mistake on the part of The House of Lords, which resulted in charges for superannuations and pensions being still left by Mr. Gladstone's Act of 1834 upon the gross revenue, 1014—— Justification, on several grounds, of the payment in 1856, of 213,000 l. in redemption of hereditary pensions without the authority of Parliament, 1015.

Duplicate account received at the Treasury of payments of revenue into the Bank, 1016. ——Proof of payment required by the Audit Office as regards naval and military expenditure, but not as regards the miscellaneous service, 1017, 1018. 1020——Witness really sees no practical check which is attained by the Exchequer, 1019. 1030–1046——The only practical check upon the expenditure is after the money has been applied, 1020. 1058–1062——The Treasury should be the department of check; its control is far more efficient than any which the Exchequer can exercise, 1021 et seq. 1171–1198.

Difficulty of exercising a perfect control in regard to the yearly issue for the great departments not exceeding the yearly vote, 1022. 1029. 1047. 1068——Simple machinery suggested for preventing the issue by the Treasury being in excess of the amount granted by Parliament, 1023–1028——A concurrent audit, as established in the great departments, affords the best system of check, 1027. 1058–1062——The system of concurrent audit should be extended to the Treasury, 1028——Inefficiency of the Exchequer control, inasmuch as though it prevents an undue issue, it does not in any way extend to the final appropriation, 1030–1046. 1055, 1056. 1070–1075.

Absence of discretion in the Paymaster to pay the money in his hands, otherwise than for the special service for which issued to him, 1043. 1045——General control by the Treasury over the expenditure by the departments, 1043. 1173–1194——Power of the departments to whom the money is issued by the Paymaster to appropriate if otherwise than as in the first instance specified, 1046–1049——Necessary irregularity frequently in the mode of exhaustion of grants, by reason of the foreign expenditure, 1047–1051 ——Sufficiency, however, of the present audit check, as regards the detailed appropriation in the whole of the naval and military departments, 1049–1054. 1058–1062.

Circumstance of the Commission of 1831 having recommended some further restraint on the Crown and the Ministers as to the legal appropriation of the public monies, 1055–1057. 1084 — This restraint is best exercised at the time of and after payment, 1058–1062——Positive malversation if the Treasury had directed the payment of a clearly excessive sum on redemption of the pensions commuted in 1856; 1063 — Further reference to the Royal Order, as being a very necessary legal form, though it interposes no actual check, 1064–1067.

Difficulty of a correct daily estimate by the Paymaster, of the services or claims to be met on the following day, 1068——General practice in regard to the daily application of the money by the Paymaster, 1068. 1076——Necessary departure from the strict provisions of the Act in regard to the issue from the drawing account of monies for services for for which there is no Exchequer credit, but which are sanctioned by vote, 1069–1080. 1095–1097——Propriety of considering the Exchequer and Pay-office balances as one in the application of the money, 1068, 1069. 1080.

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Instances have occurred of issues of public money in anticipation of votes of Parliament, 1081–1083——How far the system of several Paymasters in 1831 was any greater security for the appropriation of funds to the particular services than the present system of a Paymaster-general, 1085–1089——Efficiency of the audit control, though no check upon an excess of expenditure in the first instance, 1090–1093. 1113–1116——Bar to an efficient Exchequer check on account of the impossibility of appropriation at the time of issue, 1094–1097.

Explanation to the effect that the gross revenue does practically come into the Exchequer, though the charges of collection are previously locally defrayed, 1098–1106——Expediency of certain drawbacks and repayments not being included in the gross revenue proper, 1107–1112——A concurrent audit and the Treasury check afford adequate security without the Exchequer control, 1113–1116——Legal authority of the Treasury to supply the surplus of one vote to make good the deficiency of another, 1117–1119.

Practice in regard to receipts for navy stores; how dealt with respectively by the Admiralty, the Paymaster-general, and the Exchequer, 1120–1129——Transfer by the Treasury to the Exchequer of 860,000 l., as the surplus not required for civil services, within the last two years, 1130, 1131——Defect in the non-application of an appropriation audit to the miscellaneous votes, 1132–1134——Necessary reliance hitherto upon the fidelity of the Treasury in regard to the repayment of the surplus of civil votes to the Exchequer, 1135, 1136.

Modes of application of the Civil Contingencies Fund, 1138. 1161. 1163——Accumulation of 100,000 l. in the Exchequer, as unissued out of the Civil Contingencies, on account of savings on the vote of late years, 1139–1156——Issue out of the Civil Contingencies Fund to the Paymaster in order to cover certain charges under-estimated, 1149–1152——Powers of the Treasury to dispose of the surplus of the Civil Contingencies as they think fit; all final charges on the fund being accounted for to Parliament, 1157–1170.

Duty of the Treasury to control those departments through which the expenditure is conducted, 1173–1194——Responsibility of the departments in regard to expenditure in detail, 1173. 1176–1178——Necessity of all Estimates being sanctioned by the Treasury before they are submitted to The House, 1175. 1179–1181——Important function of the Treasury to see that means are forthcoming to meet the expenditure of the several departments, 1181–1183. 1195–1198——Duty also of the Treasury to exercise a general control in regard to receipts of revenue, 1186–1194.

[Second Examination.]—System at the time of the report of 1831, whereby the public payments were conducted in a great number of offices, 1199——Sundry disadvantages of the old system of paymasters, contrasted with the very important improvements effected by the consolidation of the offices, 1200–1228. 1297–1306——Uniform tendency, since the report of 1831, to the principle of consolidation, 1202–1206——Considerable benefits which have resulted during the war from the consolidation of the Pay Offices, 1214–1220. 1304.

Beneficial result of the consolidation, as shown by the establishment of the Commissariat chest account, 1225–1228——Explanation as to the four distinct accounts upon which the Pay Office operates for the purpose of carrying on its pecuniary transactions, 1229 et seq.——Working of the Exchequer credit account, as regards the daily credits given by the Exchequer and the supply of the drawing account, 1229. 1236–1246——Constitution and working of the cash account explained; it comprises all sums which are paid to the Paymaster-general, other than through the Exchequer, 1229. 1247 et seq., 1317–1332.

The Exchequer credit account and the cash account can only be operated upon by writes-off; practice hereon, 1229–1233. 1333——The really working accounts are the drawing account and the bill account, 1229——Supply of the drawing account from the credit account by the Assistant Paymaster-general, 1229–1233. 1333. 1342–1348——Supply and operation of the bill account, 1229. 1317–1319——Several and efficient checks against fraud or unauthorised payments out of the drawing account, 1229–1241. 1333–1348.

Very large sum passing through the cash account in the shape of transfers between the services, 1247–1256. 1261 et seq. 1317–1332——Reference to a payment in advance by the Turkish Government to the credit of the navy, on account of purchases through the Admiralty, 1247. 1257–1259——Further explanation of the practice in regard to repayments through the cash account on account of navy stores, 1247. 1253–1256. 1323–1332——Repayment through the cash account of expenditure by the army department, in recruiting for the East India Company's service, 1249–1252. 1320–1322.

Very perfect system of accounts in the Pay Office; the most approved form of double entry entry is adopted, 1260–1269. 1354——Distinction as between repayments to the cash account and payments into the Exchequer, 1270–1284——Departmental audit, without direct Parliamentary cognisance, in the case of repayments or transfers through the cash account, 1274–1276. 1320. 1376–1384——Absence of Parliamentary cognisance in regard to the transaction between the Admiralty and the Turkish Government, 1274–1276. 1376–1384——System of exhaustion of the account before the Exchequer credits are drawn upon, 1277–1282——Result of the general system that the whole of the public monies not required for the service of the day remain in the custody of the Exchequer, 1278–1282.

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

It is considered by the Treasury, that the monies when in the hands of the Paymaster, are applicable to all claims having a credit on the votes, 1285 et seq.——Illustration of the impracticability of an issue from the Exchequer for each vote, each issue to be applicable only to the special purpose for which made, 1286–1292. 1317–1319. 1355–1357——Explanation as to a large issue by the Exchequer in March 1856 having been required in order to repay advances out of the commissariat chest for convict services, 1288–1291.

The system of keeping the cash in the banking accounts in one common fund, is perfectly consistent with the annual Appropriation Act, though inconsistent with Lord Monteagle's interpretation of the Act of 1834, 1293–1296——Very objectionable system formerly of subdivision of public monies and multiplicity of balances adverted to as having arisen mainly through defective forms of accounts, 1297.

Commission appointed by Parliament in 1780, to inquire into the undue accumulation of balances, 1297. 1298——Extracts from sundry reports of these Commissioners, showing the strong views expressed therein in favour of a consolidation of balances into one common fund, as now adopted, 1298, 1299. 1305. 1307——Objections made by the Commissioners of 1780 to the system which then existed in the pay offices, 1299——Salutary amendments suggested by the Commissioners in the office of treasurer of the navy, ib.

Advantage if the Exchequer or the Treasury issued from a common fund and only charged the votes with the sums actually supplied, 1308——Opinion that the Exchequer might safely and advantageously be dispensed with altogether, and that the Treasury might issue the money directly from an account in its name at the Bank, 1309–1316. 1349–1353. 1361–1363. 1386. 1402–1406——Further statement as to the absence of security or check on the mode in which the Exchequer makes issues to the pay office, 1311. 1353.

Instances of misappropriation without the knowledge of the Exchequer, 1357, 1366——Practical difficulty in the way of any useful Exchequer control over the application or final appropriation, 1357–1365——The control of the Exchequer is, in fact, a delusion, which should not be continued, 1361–1363——Inexpediency of constituting the Comptroller an auditor of expenditure, 1364, 1365——Effectual control by means of a sound system of accounts and a general audit, 1366——How far necessary, if the Exchequer be abolished, to provide any check upon undue issues and upon dissolution of Parliament in the event of the supplies not being voted, 1367–1372——Some substitute for the Exchequer check upon issues might doubtless be found if considered necessary, 1367–1372.

The paymaster sends his accounts monthly, with all his vouchers, to the Audit Office, 1373——Statement showing that the pay office is not an office in which a daily concurrent audit could be advantageously introduced, 1374——Distinction between the Treasury cash account and the departmental appropriation account of the expenditure for naval and military services, 1374, 1375——This distinction was lost sight of in the Exchequer Regulation Act, 1374——Further reference to the necessary payment through the pay office of large sums which are appropriated, not to the votes, but to the general account, 1375.

Main importance of an effectual control after payment adverted to, 1385, 1406——Advantage if Parliament were to strengthen and place more confidence in the controlling department of Government, 1386. 1411, 1412——Limited degree to which the Treasury is a department of expenditure, 1387——Expediency of an appropriation audit as regards the miscellaneous services; suggestions hereon, 1389–1393. 1396. 1408–1410. 1419–1430——Also as regards the civil contingencies, 1390–1393. 1419–1430——Control of the audit over the Commissariat Chest account, 1394, 1395.

Necessary alteration in the practice of Parliament in regard to the period of voting the Miscellaneous Estimates before Government can prepare a general account of the miscellaneous services, as of the army and navy services, 1397–1401. 1409. 1419–1427——Frequent instances of votes for miscellaneous or civil services being obtained long before the money is paid away, 1398–1401——Explanation and approval of the system in France, whereby the finance department manages the whole system of payment just as the Treasury might manage it in this country, 1402–1407.

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Objectionable principle in the 24th clause of the Exchequer Regulation Act, that the Treasury accounts of expenditure shall be founded upon Exchequer credits and not upon actual payments, 1402——Recommended increased check by the Board of Audit over the Treasury simultaneously with the abolition of the control of the Exchequer, 1408–1412. 1428–1430——Practice previously to 1832, whereby payments for the army, navy, and ordnance were constantly made considerably in advance of the votes of Parliament; partial amendment since that period, 1413–1418.

The voting of the Miscellaneous Estimates before Easter would admit of a system of appropriation within the year as in the case of the army, navy, &c.; difficulties hereon, 1419–1430. 1445–1448—— Advantage if there were a consolidation of the miscellaneous votes consistently with the fullest information being given to The House, 1427–1430. 1434–1438. 1449–1455—— If the Exchequer were abolished, the preparation and issue of Exchequer bills should rest with the Treasury, as recommended by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831; 1431–1433.

Recommendation that all the departments, as well as the army and navy, should return into the Exchequer all sums unexpended at the close of the financial year, 1439–1441 —— Re-votes should be taken for the items not met in the financial year, even though the same should unduly augment the number of votes, 1440, 1441. 1445–1448. 1450, 1451——Further statement that the gross revenue being in the main paid into the Exchequer does not afford a practical check upon expenditure, 1442, 1443——Explanation of the sums issued in advance by the Paymaster-general under the general term of "imprests," 1444——Belief that there are some unexpended miscellaneous votes since 1841; 1452.

[Third Examination.]—All the charges for the collection and management of the revenue are voted, 1456——With the exception of drawbacks, all expenditure by the revenue department should be voted, and should be duly audited and accounted for to Parliament, 1457–1465——Practice in regard to balances being kept back by the revenue departments in order to provide for drawbacks, 1466–1469.

Special orders given by the Treasury under which sufficient sums were kept by the revenue departments, in order to provide the large sum necessary for the redemption of pensions as effected in 1856; 1469——The Comptroller-general could not have known anything of the retention of these sums, nor could Parliament, previously to the Treasury return stating that the transaction had been effected, 1470–1476——With respect to the payment in 1853 out of the Excise, it appeared in the finance accounts for the year, which came into the hands of Members about June 1854; 1477–1481.

Impracticability of consolidating balances which are operated upon by different departments, 1482, 1483——Necessary application of the money issued to receivers-general to the special service or department for which issued, 1484–1488——Nature of the distinction in France between the receivers and payers of public money, 1489, 1490. 1493—— Approval of the objection to the same party authorising payments who holds the money in charge, 1490–1492.

Payment quarterly to the Exchequer of the sums received by the Admiralty for old stores, 1494, 1495——Advice given to the comptroller of revenue payments to his account, he having no check in regard to the correctness of the amount, 1496–1501—— Sufficiency of the departmental check for securing due payment by the paymaster to the Exchequer, 1502–1505.

Explanation of the practice in the case of old stores, &c., to the effect that no monies are retained by the department which ought to go to the Exchequer, 1506–1514—— Practice, in the event of sales of muskets, &c., to a foreign government, with respect to the operation of the Exchequer, 1508–1512—— Practice in the event of the use of old materials as part of a contract for repairs or buildings, 1513–1517——System of net profit or loss as regards bills drawn on account of the Commissariat Chest Fund, 1518–1520——Invariable payment to the Exchequer of the premiums on bills drawn for the commissariat supply abroad, 1519.

Very few payments into the Exchequer by parties not paying through the Paymaster-general, 1521. 1523——Payment through the Paymaster-general of the interest on the Sardinian loan, 1521, 1522——Repayments by the East India Company for advances by the different departments do not go into the Exchequer, 1524–1526——Payments made to the East India Company with reference to the China war; unsettled claim of Government hereon, 1527–1530.

Explanation as to the Office of Works paying their receipts to the Paymaster-general instead of direct to the Exchequer, 1531–1536——Direct payment by the Woods and Forests, they having an independent account at the Bank, 1537, 1538——Constitution and application of the capital account of the Woods and Forests, 1539, 1540.

Further statement relative to the payment in advance of 150,000 l. by the Turkish Government, and to the ad interim control exercised over its expenditure, without the cognisance of the Exchequer or of Parliament, 1541–1550. 1710–1716. 1852–1861—— Liability

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Liability of the advanced sum of 150,000 l. to be drawn, temporarily, from the drawing account for any service for which payable from the account, 1545–1548. 1861——The control or disposal of the money rested with the Admiralty rather than the Treasury, 1548 1549. 1852–1861.

Faulty system whereby Exchequer credits are considered by the Exchequer as final issues or payments, though not actually such, 1551–1553. 1603——Defective principle of the 24th clause of the Act further adverted to with reference to Exchequer credits, 1553–1555. 1603——Obstacles to the whole of the monies in the Exchequer being retained on the general account till the actual payments are made, 1555–1575——Objection to any large general balance at the control of the paymaster, 1556–1563.

Unduly large balance required if the paymaster were bound to carry out the principle of appropriation, 1563–1576——The credits now granted to the paymaster rarely exceed the amount of his daily payments, 1563——Further statement as to the issues when once written into the drawing account being applicable, indiscriminately, to any sources which are called for on that day, 1577–1579. 1586–1590——Explanation relative to the issue from the Exchequer of 80,000 l. for the funeral of the Duke of Wellington; admission that the credit was issued on wrong information, and at an earlier period than was required, 1580–1590.

With respect to the Miscellaneous Estimates the issues for the various services are written into the drawing account on the days on which applied for, 1591, 1592——Care is taken that every account is in credit at the close of the month, 1593——Explanation relative to some outstanding balances in the Pay Office, 1594–1603——Outstanding balance of 2,400 l. on account of a vote for public walks adverted to 1595——Reference to a balance or deposit in the hands of the paymaster, in respect of which it is considered that the colony of New Zealand has some claim, 1596–1599.

Further evidence as to the check which would exist upon misappropriation and upon a dissolution of Parliament in the event of the several supplies not being voted and of the Exchequer being abolished, 1604 et seq.——Bar to monies issued for the army being unduly applied to the navy or any other service during the dissolution, 1605–1625. 1715, 1716——Practice of the paymaster not to issue money for any service that has not a credit in the Exchequer, 1606–1611.

Question as to the power or probability of the Treasury directing issues not sanctioned by Parliament before dissolution, 1607–1632——Doubt as to the paymaster making an illegal issue at the bidding of the Treasury, 1613–1619. 1626–1628——Lord Monteagle considers the practice in regard to issues and appropriation to be wrong, but witness considers that the defect lies in the law, 1629–1634——Adherence by the Treasury as closely as possible to the provisions of the Act, 1635.

Statement as to the opinion of the law officers of the Crown not having been taken as requested by Lord Monteagle upon the questions at variance between him and the Treasury, 1636–1638. 1738——Compliance of the Comptroller-general, and, as witness considers, of the Treasury, with the terms of the Regulation Act, 1639–1643. 1647. 1727–1735——The real question in dispute is, whether the practice of the pay office follows up the principle of the Act; belief that it does as far as possible; 1643. 1727–1735——If Lord Monteagle's interpretation of the law be right, the practice of the pay office is not legal, 1638. 1734–1742——Adherence by the Treasury to the provisions of the Appropriation Act, 1639. 1643. 1727.

Consideration of the documents and forms that might be dispensed with, as stated by Sir C. Trevelyan in his paper of 1848, and of the saving of public time and money thereby, supposing the Exchequer to be abolished, 1649–1683——Disadvantage through the necessity of anticipating by a day the period for supplying the paymaster with funds; this would not be necessary if the Treasury made the issues directly; 1683–1690.

Issue formerly in gross sums to the paymaster of the forces, and to the treasurers of the ordnance and of the navy, the issue in each case being distinct, 1691–1693——Less detailed supervision account in the pay offices formerly than at present in regard to the army or navy expenditure, 1693–1699——System of concurrent audit now adopted in the case of the navy accounts, the effective audit being conducted by the accountant-general of the navy, 1699–1703——Objections to the proposition that the Exchequer should exercise the functions of audit in the office of the paymaster-general, 1704 et seq.——Opinion that in the case of the advance by the Turkish Government, the House of Commons would be responsible for it in the event of its mal-appropriation, 1713, 1714.

Cognizance of Parliament in regard to the law and practice of appropriation not being in strict conformity, 1729–1732——Reference to the Treasury Minute of December 1848 as directing a check upon issues, which witness maintains has as far as possible been carried out, 1729–1732——Further statement as to the impracticability of fully carrying out the rules of appropriation in the pay office, 1733 et seq.——Practice in regard to payments out of the Commissariat Chest Fund for services abroad further adverted to, as showing that nothing is known of the detailed appropriation at the time of issue from the pay office, 1735. 1743–1750.

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Advances are made to all the imprest accounts at home as well as abroad, during peace as well as war, 1745——The imprests to the several subordinate paymasters ultimately become chargeable to the vote of the service for which issued, 1745–1749——Practice in regard to the allocation and repayment of the monies advanced out of the Commissariat Chest Fund, 1749, 1750.

Necessary resort to the army grants in order to provide funds to meet from day to day the drafts drawn upon the fund from abroad, 1749, 1750——In time of peace the Commissariat Chest Account might always be kept in credit on the paymaster's books but for the large arrear on account of the recruiting for the East India Company, 1751——Question as to the advantage of making the departments pay up in advance to the commissariat account instead of at the close of the month, 1752–1761.

Explanation of the mode of account in the event of an advance from one department to another, as from the ordnance to the navy, 1762–1764——With regard to advances by collectors of revenue they are made specifically under the Act, 1765, 1766——In the case of sums paid to the paymaster's cash account, as by the East India Company, they are not at any time so large as to cause inconvenience, 1767–1776.

The Exchequer communicates only with the Treasury and the Bank of England, 1777——The business of the Exchequer is so small, that, irrespectively of the issue of Exchequer bills, and the custody of weights and measures, one, or at the outside, two clerks might do it all, 1778–1781. 1796——Practice of the Exchequer in regard to the preparation of Exchequer bills, 1781–1783——Improvement if Exchequer bills were prepared by the Treasury, or, rather, by the Bank of England, 1784–1789——The small department in the Exchequer with reference to weights and measures might more properly be transferred to the Mint, 1790, 1791.

The Comptroller-general has a salary of 2,000 l. a year, fixed on the Consolidated Fund by the Exchequer Act, 1792–1794——The assistant-comptroller has 1,000 l. a year, fixed on the votes, 1794, 1795——Salaries of the clerks, 1795——In salaries alone the establishment costs more than 7,000 l. a year, ib.——There are also the usual incidental expenses of a separate building, 1797.

Former constitution of the Exchequer adverted to as showing the origin of the control exercised over the Treasury accounts, 1798–1800——False principle upon which, notwithstanding recent improvements, the Treasury accounts are obliged to be formed on account of the necessity of adherence to the Exchequer system of accounts, 1800 et seq.——Further evidence to the effect that the Exchequer system of treating as a payment every credit or transfer to the account of the Paymaster-general is decidedly objectionable, and leads to much misrepresentation, 1807–1841.

Cause of the difference between the Exchequer and Treasury balances of income and expenditure, 1820–1822——Confusion of accounts shown by the Exchequer issue, as expenditure, of 1,400,000 l. at the end of March, whereas the expenditure really took place in the following quarter; how this might be amended, 1824–1827. 1833, 1834. 1840–1851——With regard to issues by the Paymaster-general, they are not final payments, and can only be shown by the departmental appropriation accounts, 1828–1832. 1842–1847.

Objection to voting the drawbacks, though there would be no practical difficulty in doing so, 1862——Average yearly amount of the drawbacks in the Customs, Inland Revenue, and Post-office, 1863——Money for the drawbacks is not actually retained by the departments, 1864——The payments are duly accounted for in detail, and go before the Audit Board, 1865, 1866——Varying amount of the drawbacks, as shown by the drawback on malt, which will be an actual payment of money, 1867, 1868.

[Fourth Examination.]—Further reference to the estimates of the Woods and Forests, to the effect that they should include the gross revenue and the gross expenditure, 1869–1874——Control of the Treasury over the capital fund of the Woods and Forests, 1875.

Opinion further expressed, as to the adequacy of two clerks to transact the main portion of the duties of the Exchequer, 1876–1880. 1887——Explanation as to the Treasury not having taken steps to reduce the Exchequer establishment within proper limits, 1881–1895——Nature of the check exercised by the Treasury in regard to the estimates of departments with reference to the establishment charges, 1881–1889——General inquiry contemplated by the Treasury ever since the issue of Lord Monteagle's memorandum, 1886.

Evidence in explanation and defence of the introduction of the sum of 213,000 l., for redemption of pensions, into the return of gross revenue of the Excise and Post-office, and of its deduction as expenditure, 1896–1926——On account of the largeness of the amount, an exception was made to the general practice, 1901. 1906. 1922–1926——Further defence of the course adopted by Government in commuting these pensions, more especially

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

especially as Mr. Gladstone gave distinct notice to The House, on introducing his Bill, that negotiations for their redemption were in an advanced state, 1727–1936. 2013–2021.

Question as to the expediency of transferring the redemption of pensions to the Consolidated Fund, 1937, 1938——Reference to the resignation by Lord Camden of a large amount of fees to which he was entitled as Teller of the Exchequer; this was a very different case from that of a hereditary pension, 1939–1949——Further evidence in favour of the issues and payments being made by the Treasury and Pay-office, without the intervention of the Exchequer, 1950 et seq.

Consideration of the power of the Treasury in regard to control and expenditure in the event of the Exchequer being abolished, 1952 et seq.——Constitution of the Treasury adverted to with reference to the parties responsible, 1956–1962——Reference to the responsibility of the Paymaster-general, notwithstanding that his duties are mainly performed by deputies, 1963–1969——Responsibility of the Minister for War for the proper expenditure of certain army supplies according to vote, 1971–1979——Sanction of the Treasury required in regard to deviation from the Army Estimates as to buildings, &c., 1973. 1979–1982.

Control of the Paymaster-general's cash accounts by the departments to which the cash belongs, 1983——Approval of the Pay Office receiving not only the small sums of revenue which it now receives, but the revenue generally, 1984–1987——Further opinion as to the responsibility, in equity, of The House of Commons in the matter of the advance by the Turkish Government, 1988–1990.

The temporary employment by the Paymaster of monies drawn for one purpose for other purposes which have credits in the Exchequer cannot be called a misappropriation, 1993–1995——General practice of the Pay Office hereon further adverted to, 1994–1998——Practice to apply money for the Civil Services to the particular service for which voted, 1996–1998——Regulations in regard to old stores further adverted to; the term comprises new stores which are not wanted, 1999, 2000.

Further evidence opposed to the proposition that a clerk from the Exchequer Office should attend in the Pay Office as a check upon the Paymaster and as a means of Exchequer audit, 2004, et seq.——Undue assumption of functions which properly belong to the Audit Board if the Exchequer were to interfere with detailed expenditure, 2008, et seq.——Further approval of the present audit as the most stringent of all checks, 2012. 2037. 2071–2081.

Publicity and responsibility to Parliament from a check far more efficient than any the Comptroller-general could exercise, 2013–2021. 2071–2081——If the comptroller were empowered to interfere after issue, he would, in fact, be lord over the whole of the public departments, 2022–2025——The checks in the Pay-office are at present as perfect as they can be, 2027–2032. 2044——Effective and complete Exchequer control can only be obtained by retrograde legislation, 2038–2040——Witness concurs with Lord Monteagle, that there should be an improved control of public monies, but differs from him as to the mode of improvement, 2041, 2042.

With reference to the issue for the Duke of Wellington's funeral, not a sixpence was applied, in a final sense, to other services, though temporarily it was so applied, 2046–2049——Absence of advantage, as regards information to Parliament, if an Exchequer audit clerk had had some control in the Pay-office in the matter of the issue for the Duke of Wellington's funeral, or of the advance by the Turkish Government, 2048–2066——Time taken in the preparation and before the presentation of the naval accounts, 2055–2060. 2085–2087.

Further recommendation that the system of audit, as already established for the naval and military services, be extended to the civil contingencies and the whole of the Miscellaneous Estimates, 2067–2081. 2084——All unexpended balances should annually be brought in detail before Parliament, 2067–2083. 2084——Independent, as well as certain and simple character of the audit check, 2072–2079——Expediency of the audit after final expenditure, else the check is not final or reliable, 2076.

A special report by the Audit Board in the event of undue misappropriation would be far preferable to an increased Exchequer control, 2080, 2081. 2121. 2125, 2126——With an effectual audit, the functions of the Exchequer may well be obliterated, 2082——Longer time allowed for the preparation of the Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat Accounts than for the Naval Accounts, 2085——Impossibility of a finally appropriated army account immediately after the termination of the year, 2085, 2086——A provisional account made up as closely as possible, as well as the final account, might easily be prepared, 2086, 2087.

Exercise of Treasury power in regard to directing certain Admiralty expenditure to be made without account, 2088, 2089——Authority given by the Treasury without direct Parliamentary sanction for the transfer of the Commissariat accounts to the local audit at the War Department, 2090–2094——This transfer was in consequence of the consolidation of the Commissariat with the War Department, 2092. 2115, 2116. 2137, 2138——

 Explanation

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Explanation as to the reference to the Treasury in the event of a difference between the Audit Board and the Admiralty, as to classification of items, &c., 2095–2100

Impracticability of improving the present audit of naval accounts, the object being to give security to Parliament that the accounts presented are correct, 2101–2103. 2113, 2114——Authority of the Admiralty, as of other departments, to carry out expenditure as voted without the direct interference of the Board of Audit, 2101–2114——Explanatory statement as to the control now exercised by the Audit Board in the matter of the Commissariat accounts; opinion that it cannot be improved, or made more independent of the War-office, 2115–2136.

Further reference to the original constitution of the Exchequer, and to the change about the time of the restoration, which led to the Finance department being vested mainly in the Treasury, subject to a certain Exchequer control in regard to issues, 2139–2146——Since 1834 the Exchequer has ceased to receive any actual money payment, and has become merely an office of account, 2147–2153.

Further explanation as to the extent to which the Treasury is at present a department of expenditure, 2154–2164——The great functions of the Treasury are not expenditure, but the control of expenditure, 2154–2164——Misconception in regard to the practice of the Pay-office, under which Lord Monteagle wrote the Exchequer memorandum, 2165. 2258–2260——The legal question raised by the Comptroller-general had reference entirely to the practice of the Pay-office in dealing with their floating balance, and not to the practice of the Treasury, 2165–2168. 2254–2256.

Waste of public money if the Paymaster-general were to be provided with unlimited balances in order to carry out a strict appropriation, 2168–2171——Greater facility and inducement to commit fraud if, instead of the present comparatively small balance, the Pay-office were entrusted with a very large amount, 2171–2185——The Paymaster-general takes no part in the detailed execution of the duties of the Pay-office, and is only consulted in the event of departure from the settled regulations, 2186–2192. 2209, 2210——Improvement if the duties of Paymaster-general were vested in some permanent official, such as the Assistant Paymaster-general, 2193, 2194. 2211, 2212——Casual attendance of the Paymaster-general, he having other important public duties to attend to, 2193, 2194. 2212——He is not a paid officer, 2195.

Further statement that all estimates are submitted to the Treasury before they are laid on the table of the House, 2196. 2202, 2203——The Army and Navy Estimates, before coming to the Treasury, are regulated by previous communication between the heads of those services and the Government, 2196–2208——The Miscellaneous Estimates for Civil Services are prepared at the Treasury, returns being obtained from the various departments, 2196. 2203.

Payment by the Paymaster-general of portion of the army expenditure, on the authority of Royal Warrants, 2213, 2214——Practice of the Pay-office, &c., in regard to imprests to the agents of regiments, 2213——Payment of the Navy Services according to regulations laid down by Act of Parliament, 2215——Practice in dealing with imprest payments for the navy, ib.——Uniform system in all the departments with reference to the mode in which they are brought to account for imprests, 2216——Foundation of the Treasury balance-sheet upon entries made in the books from the audited accounts, 2217.

Explanatory statement with reference to the discontinuance by the Treasury of the quarterly, or Consolidated Fund Warrant, as formerly furnished to the Exchequer, 2218–2226——Accidental circumstance which led to the delay in the presentation of the finance accounts for the year 1854–55; 2227——Necessary dependence of the Treasury upon the departments for the completion of the accounts, 2228——Recommendation that the account be broken up, and that its main features be presented at the earliest possible period of the Session, 2228–2233.

Explanation as to the discontinuance of the Exchequer acquittance, or receipt given to receivers-general; it was useless, inasmuch as the final acquittance is necessarily given by the Audit Board, 2234–2237——Uselessness to the Treasury, in making up their annual accounts, of the accounts furnished by the Exchequer; pending inquiry in the matter, 2238——Explanatory statement of the course taken by the Treasury with reference to the payment to the Exchequer of the premiums on Exchequer bills; inaccuracy of Lord Monteagle's evidence hereon, 2239–2253.

Statement as to its having been for some time the determination of the Treasury to refer the whole question between them and Lord Monteagle to a Royal Commission, 2256–2262——The practice of the Pay-office as complained of by Lord Monteagle in 1848 really commenced in 1836; 2258–2260——System of revenue collection and payment in France further adverted to, as showing, from Dr. Bowring's Reports, the employment of collectors as payers, 2263——Circumstance of Sir Henry Parnell and Dr. Bowring having ultimately admitted that the system of Exchequer credits had not answered their expectations, 2263.

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

(Fifth Examination.) Reference to the Pay-office books, in which the payments are recorded after they are made, 3368——Further evidence relative to the issue of 80,000 l. for the Duke of Wellington's funeral, and to the course adopted with reference to the unexpended balance of 24,000 l.; 3369–3390——Practice when a civil service credit is once drawn to keep it for that particular service, though the balance unexpended goes into the general balances, and is lent to other services, 3375–3381. 3391, 3392. 3398. 3412.

The Paymaster's accounts, as in the case of the Duke of Wellington's funeral, are sent monthly to the Audit Office, 3381–3384——It is not at present considered the duty of the Audit Board to look to the appropriation of the miscellaneous votes, 3385–3388——Custom generally, in paying the consolidated fund charges, to pay out of the general balance, and to ask for special credits as required, 3391——Monthly accounts are rendered by the Pay-office to the Treasury, showing the receipts and payments, and the balances to the credit of the several services, 3393–3396.

Practice on closing the annual accounts of the naval or military expenditure, to return any surplus to the Exchequer, by deducting a similar amount from the funds of that service in the Exchequer for the following year, 3397 et seq.——The surplus is at once declared available as ways and means, 3397. 3422–3426——In the Civil Services the balances have hitherto been carried on for many years as running accounts, 3398. 3412——When there is any undue surplus from Civil Service votes the Treasury cancel the same and direct the Exchequer to set it aside, ib.

The Exchequer accounts cannot be considered to take cognizance of the surplus sums returned from army or navy services, 3399–3404. 3413–3419. 3427——Check upon the Treasury drawing out of the Exchequer the balance from a former year as well as the entire sum voted for the ensuing year, 3405–3411——The surplus balance acts pro tanto as a reduction of the grant for the ensuing year, but is not considered in the framing of the Parliamentary estimates, 3420–3431.

The first class of the Civil List is generally paid out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund; that is, the privy purse, 3432, 3433——Particulars as to the amount and dates of payment in 1852 under the several classes and services embraced in the Consolidated Fund charges as compared with the amount and date of issue from the Exchequer, 3434 et seq.——Explanation of the lapse of time between the first payment in April 1852 for annuities and pensions and the corresponding credit from the Exchequer, 3437, 3438——Issue at this period of ways and means bills, there having been very little money in the Exchequer, 3438.

Statement as to the miscellaneous charges paid out of the Consolidated Fund for 1852; the first payment was on 6 April, and the Exchequer credit on 28 April, 3442–3447——Separate account kept at the Pay-office of each of the miscellaneous votes, 3448——Amount and date respectively of payment and of issue in April 1852 under the head of Public Buildings and Royal Palaces, 3449, 3450——Payments and issue on account of royal parks adverted, to as showing that the Exchequer credit was overdrawn in April and May, 3450–3453.

Impracticability in some cases of procuring Exchequer credits before the end of the month, in order to cover advances, 3454, 3455——Overdrawal of the Treasury account for a few days in April 1852, 3456–3458——Sundry other instances in 1822, in April and following months, of accounts being overdrawn in anticipation of Exchequer credits, 3459 et seq.——All those services the accounts of which were overdrawn beyond the Exchequer issue, had credits in the Exchequer, and in no instance were overdrawn in excess of the vote of Parliament, 3461–3464. 3513. 3576, 3577.

Statement as to there having been an unnecessarily large balance to the credit of "Establishment of Prisons at Home" in April 1852, 3469–3481——Payments and credit in 1852, under the head of "Transportation of Convicts"; explanation as to the accounts having been overdrawn on account of transfers to the navy, 3483–3488——Further explanation as to a sum of 340,000 l. having been drawn on 31 March 1856, to make a payment to the Commissariat chest for advances made abroad for the expense of convicts in the colonies, 3489–3495——Circumstance of most of the civil claims being only finally settled annually upon the preparation by the Audit Board of the annual account of the Commissariat chest, 3490–3495.

Explanation that the branch accounts, as in the Paymaster's books, do not appear in the account at the Bank, and are not controlled by the Exchequer, 3511–3516——Inconvenience and uselessness of the system in the Pay-office of splitting up the cash account in order to square exactly with the Exchequer system of credits for specific heads of service, 3516–3528——The appropriation should be against the annual votes and not against the daily credit, 3516, 3517. 3532 et seq.——Two out of three sets of accounts are rendered necessary by the Exchequer credit account, 3518–3526.

Doubt as to the correctness of Lord Monteagle's opinion that he cannot legally issue money for the service of the year before 1 April, 3520——Disturbing cause in 1852, which rendered the issues unusually late in April, 3529. 3596, 3597——Claims upon the Pay-office come come from all quarters in different shapes, as well as by personal application, 3530, 3531 ——The Exchequer issue to the paymaster should be made for the estimated aggregate amount of the daily payments, and should come out of the general votes, 3532 et seq. ——The appropriation in anticipation of payments should be done away with, and should be founded on the actual payments, 3532. 3536. 3593.

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

At the close of each day the actual appropriation should be charged against the votes upon the actual issues, subject to a system of concurrent audit, 3532-3537——This plan might be adopted without disturbing the existence of the Exchequer, 3532. 3588—— Mode of dealing with repayments from one account to another under the simplified system of account proposed by witness, 3538-3540——Evidence to the effect that under the proposed system of aggregate issue and daily concurrent audit there would be at least as much security as at present against over payment or improper application, 3541 et seq.

Absence at present of an efficient Exchequer check upon undue application in the Pay-office, 3542-3557——Question as to the possession of remedy by the Exchequer in the event of the daily account showing that money had been paid on an exhausted vote, 3571-3575. 3580-3584——Remedy in the Exchequer, if excesses were charged on the Civil Contingencies, 3573. 3575. 3583——There would be no necessity to overdraw any accounts of the Paymaster were allowed to have an unlimited balance, 3579.

The system recommended by witness in regard to the civil service is similar to that which, for more than twenty years, has worked well and safely in the case of the naval and military services, 3589-3595——Saving through the non-adjustment on the following day in the case of payment beyond the issue with regard to miscellaneous services, 3598, 3599. 3659, 3660——Disadvantage in drawing on the Exchequer when the Paymaster has large balances in hand, 3598, 3599.

Analysis of the Ordnance account in April 1852, showing the extent to which overdrawn, and the period in each case before adjustment, 3601-3608——Similar evidence relative to the navy account, 3609-3616——Last year the War departments took their votes separately, but expended them unitedly, 3616-3618. 3639——Any excess of the aggregate of these votes would only be made known to Parliament when the final accounts are presented, 3618. 3623. 3634-3636——Difficulties, through exchange of services, which have prevented strict appropriation of these votes in the Pay-office, 3619-3626——Nature of the daily audit to which the votes in question have been subjected, 3625-3632.

The aggregate balances on the Pay-office accounts are agreed daily with the balance in the Bank of England, 3637, 3638——Transfer in 1855-56, to the army services, of a vote of 3,813,000 l. for the embodied militia, 3639——Explanation as to a considerable portion, or more than a million, of this vote not having been drawn from the Exchequer, or expended at the close of the financial year, 3640-3644. 3648-3651——Reference to the non-expenditure during the year of a considerable portion of the total of the army vote, 3645-3648.

Further statement with reference to the reduction of balances consequent on the consolidation of the Pay-offices; under similar circumstances the whole of the services can now be carried on with quite as little money as was formerly required for one of the great services, such as the navy, 3652-3658. and App. p. 829, 830——As explanatory of the general views of Mr. Brooksbank, witness delivers in a letter from him to Mr. Lichfield, senior clerk of the financial department of the Treasury, dated 30 January 1849; 3660. and App. p. 832, 833.

[Sixth Examination.]—Correction of former evidence (Q. 3438), that the want of money in the Exchequer was the reason of the delay in April 1852 in obtaining Exchequer credits for certain Consolidated Fund Services and Civil Services, 4108——The real cause of not drawing on the Exchequer was that the paymaster had a considerable balance in hand on deposited accounts and the cash account, which it was incumbent on him in the first instance to exhaust, 4108-4111. 4115, 4116.

Increase of late years in the deposit accounts, 4109, 4110——Obstacle to the payment of deposits into the bank, as most probably interest would not be allowed upon them, 4112-4114——Unusually large issue to the Pay-office for Consolidated Fund charges at the close of the first quarter in 1852; 4115——No issue from the Consolidated Fund for the quarter can take place before the 5th of the month, 4116.

Ways and Means Bills are issued direct to the bank from the Exchequer, 4117-4119 ——The ordinary supply bills are issued to the Paymaster; custody of these whilst at the Pay-office, and previous to their issue from the Exchequer, 4120-4123——Explanation relative to the advance or payment of 1,564 l. for Labuan in 1854-55 after the discontinuance of the vote; understanding that it will be repaid out of colonial monies, 4124-4135——Regulations under which a sum of 53,959 l., payable to the Exchequer, has been held over in the pay-office till the end of the quarter ensuing to that in which received, 4136-4141.

Witness,

Report, 1856—continued.

Anderson, William George. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Witness, who laid the foundation of the naval ledger some twenty-five years ago, is strongly opposed to any departure by the War department from the plan of naval accounts, 4142-4150———Originally the books in the War department, as framed by witness, were precisely similar to the naval books, 4145, 4146———Each department should receive instructions from the Treasury as to the mode of keeping its accounts, 4150———It is very desirable that but one set of books should be kept for the ordnance and army, as consolidated services, 4151–4154.

Reference to the views of Mr. Brooksbank, as entirely coinciding with those of witness in favour of simpler accounts in the pay-office, and of taking payments instead of credit as the basis of account, 4155–4158, 4162-4164———Further evidence in favour of dispensing with the Exchequer, and of substituting a more perfect Parliamentary control through the medium of a concurrent audit, 4159 et seq.

There would be no difficulty in extending the audit to the paymaster's cash account, 4160———The general mode in which that account is dealt with by the paymaster should not be disturbed, ib.———Circumstance of the French having found it necessary, at a very early period of their reforms, to lay down the principle of payments and not credits as the basis of their accounts, 4162.

Importance of the Treasury being visited with a far greater check than at present in regard to the issue of payments on the demands of the departments, 4165-4187———The Treasury should have a daily return from the pay-office of the payments made out of the annual vote, 4167–4170———Manner in which the control of the Treasury should be brought to bear in the event of the pay office returns showing an undue rate of issue to any department, 4170–4178. 4187.

Assumption that all the departments must be thoroughly subordinate to the Treasury, 4179, 4180. 4184———Propriety of constant communication from the Audit Board to Parliament, 4182——Circumstance of the ordnance having been forced to take two supplemental estimates last year in addition to the vote, 4187, 4190–4194———Explanation as to the application of the vote of credit for 3,000,000 l. in the past year, 4188-4199 ———A separate account of the application of this vote will in due time be prepared by the Audit Board, 4199.

Anderson, Mr. Circumstance of Mr. Anderson bearing, in his instrument of appointment, the title of confidential adviser to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3010, 3011.

Memorandum by Sir C. Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, dated 1 February 1853, on the mode of providing for the expenses of the collection of the revenue, App. p. 565–570.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, dated 27 March 1854, on the Exchequer Memorandum put forth by Lord Monteagle, App. p. 553–561.

Annuities and Pensions. Explanation of the lapse of time between the first payment by the Paymaster-general in April 1852, under the heading of "Annuities and Pensions," and the corresponding credit from the Exchequer, Anderson 3437, 3438.

APPROPRIATION:

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer:

1. Generally as to the illegal and highly reprehensible Practice of the Treasury and Pay Office.
2. Proof of the Practice of Misappropriation.
3. Instances of attempted Misappropriation, and of Exchequer Control.
4. Opinion as to the practicability of strict Appropriation in the Pay Office.
5. Exchequer Memorandum of 1854.
6. Practice of the Exchequer in issuing for the Army, Navy, and Ordnance.

II. Evidence on the part of the Treasury and Pay Office:

1. Question as to the correctness, legally, of Lord Monteagle's views.
2. Impracticability of strict Appropriation in the Pay Office.
3. Inadequacy of the Exchequer as a means of ensuring Appropriation.
4. Instances in 1852 of departure from Appropriation, so termed; Explanation thereof.
5. Improved Regulations generally since 1830.
6. Amended system suggested by Mr. Anderson.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer:

1. Generally as to the illegal and highly reprehensible Practice of the Treasury and Pay Office:

Illegality of payments out of the Exchequer, unless made by a direct vote of Parliament, or charged by Act of Parliament upon the Consolidated Fund, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 108, 109——High misdemeanor of the Treasury or Paymaster-general if,

Report, 1856—continued.

APPROPRIATION—continued.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer—continued.

1. Generally as to the illegal and highly reprehensible Practice, &c.—cont^d.

after having obtained money from the Exchequer for any one specific purpose, they apply it to another, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 558-561. 563. 566-570——Upon constitutional grounds, it is very objectionable that large unappropriated sums, on account of old stores, &c., should remain for any time in the hands of the paymaster, with a power in the Treasury to deal with them as they choose for the time being, ib. 580. 585, 586. 604-608——Legal question between witness and the Treasury in regard to his authority with respect to the specific appropriation of revenues after they have left his hands, ib. 608.

The question of time at which any issue may be directed frequently forms the essence of the legality of the Act, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 861 et seq. 2766. 2772. 2860. 2868. 2890——The violation by the Treasury and Pay-office of the principle of appropriation is a violation of the law and of the constitution of England, ib. 2772. 2777, 2778. 2784——Further arguments that the constitutional and legal principle of appropriation is directly violated by the use of monies issued under one head of service for the purpose of another service, ib. 2778 et seq.——Willingness of witness to submit the question between the Treasury and the Exchequer to the law officers of the Crown, and to abide by the result, ib. 2778. 2820, 2821.

Strong confirmation of the principle of appropriation in the amended Treasury Minute of December 1848, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 2783——Reference to the 11th and other clauses of the Act of 4 Will. 4, as clearly directing the Treasury and the paymaster to apply the credits issued for the votes of Parliament to the purposes for which they were issued, and to none other, ib. 2784, 2785. 2814-2817——By the term "misappropriation" witness has never attributed pecuniary corruption or malappropriation for private purposes, ib. 2789. 2802. 2819——Misappropriation consists in paying without authority, or doing an illegal act, to be made legal by a subsequent proceeding, ib. 2803. 2812 et seq.

Departure form the provisions of the Exchequer Act, even though an advance from the navy supplies to meet the army deficiency may always be remedied within a month, and generally within forty-eight hours, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2829-2832——Further evidence as to the practice of the pay-office being not only illegal but a frustration of the check invested by Parliament in the Exchequer, ib. 2888-2894. 2897——Unquestionable departure from the law in the appropriation, out of the common balance, for the several purposes of the army and navy, ib. 2899. 2907 et sep.——Excess of Parliamentary authority, if not of the Parliamentary vote, in making payments without special Exchequer credits, ib. 2909 et seq.——Necessity of a Royal order, or Treasury warrant, and an Exchequre issue before money can legally be applied to any particular service voted, ib. 2910 et seq.

Illegality in the civil service being made applicable to the three great services, or to the payment of charges on the Consolidated Fund before the payment of such charges has received a legal sanction from the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2915-2920——Expediency of the issuing warrant being submitted to the Exchequer for examination and approval, and of the credit being issued before the actual payment takes place, ib. 2917-2921——Reiteration of former opinion as to the illegality of the practice of the pay-office, ib. 3045 et seq.——As a general principle, the paymaster cannot or ought not, save out of the Civil Contingencies or the Commissariat Chest account, to pay anything on the miscellaneous votes, unless from the monies issued specifically for the purpose, ib. 3059-3063.

Strong opinion expressed by Lord Monteagle in his memorandum of 1854, that the Treasury Minute of 1848 was irreconcilable with constitutional principle and statute law, App. p. 537 et seq.

2. Proof of the Practice of Misappropriation:

Witness has known monies to remain for months and years in the hands of the paymaster, employed probably for purposes other than were intended, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 599. 611-613——Abandonment by the Treasury in the early part of 1854, of the constitutional principle a appropriation, ib. 847——Refusal of witness in 1841 and 1852 to sanction issues directed by Royal warrants, to remedy the errors in which a governing warrant was subsequently passed, ib. 861, 885. 919 et seq. and App. p. 652-663. 699-703.

Reference to the admission by Sir C. Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson that money belonging to one head of service, is habitually used for another service, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2774. 2778. 2783, 2784. 2787. 2821, 2822. 2897——The fact of the paymaster not issuing money in excess of the vote, is no proof that he does not misappropriate, ib. 2812. 2828——Use interchangeably of army, navy, and ordnance funds adverted to, ib. 2897 Avowal by Sir C. Trevelyan. Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Hoffay, of the practice of using the funds of the army, navy, and ordnance interchangeably, ib. 2898——Confirmation of statements in the Exchequer Memorandum of 1854, relative to different modes of misappropriation, ib. 2939-2967.

So

Report, 1856—continued.

APPROPRIATION—continued.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer—continued.

2. Proof of the Practice of Misappropriation—continued.

So long as the paymaster's drawing account and bill account are fed from any other source than the Exchequer, there is a liability to departure from the principle of appropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2968, 2969——The irregularity greatly depends upon the length of time to which monies are in the hands of the paymaster without being strictly appropriated, ib. 2969——The systematic attempt to escape from the control of the Exchequer Act and the Appropriation Act dates mainly from 1852; instances of this, ib. 3077–3083.

Statement by Lord Monteagle, in his Memorandum of 1854, as to the application of the public revenue without due authority, and possibly to purposes wholly unsanctioned by law, App. p. 536 et seq.——Statement in the memorandum, that the principle of specific appropriation is habitually and systematically endangered, or actually set aside by the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, ib. 542.

3. Instances of attempted Misappropriation and of Exchequer Control:

Explanation in detail, relative to a long list of cases of attempted departure from the principle of appropriation, showing the exercise of Exchequer control in the matter, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 860 et seq.

Explanatory statement with reference to the strict adherence by witness in 1841 to the intention of Parliament in dividing the votes for miscellaneous supplies between two appropriations, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 861 et seq.——Refusal of witness in this matter to act in accordance with Royal orders and Treasury warrants, directing an indiscriminate issue, without reference to the time, as in the Appropriation Act, ib. 861——Confirmation by the law officers of the Crown of the views adopted by witness, ib.——Eventually a governing warrant was prepared at witness's suggestion, and acted upon, ib. 861. 912–920.

Importance of the control exercised by witness in the case which occurred in 1841, though as regards the actual amount of the issue at the disposal of the Treasury the check did not apply, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 862 et seq.——Want of ways and means to cover the supply in the mode asked for by the Treasury in this case, ib. 864. 866. 870, 871. 907–911.

Distinct votes in separate Appropriation Acts in regard to the Army Estimates in 1841 adverted to, as clearly calling for a strict adherence to the principle of appropriation; examination in defence of witness's mode of action in the matter, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 867 et seq.

Further evidence as to the confirmation by the law officers of the Crown, in 1841, of witness's views on the question of appropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2766–2770——Importance, in principle, of the control exercised by witness over the Treasury in the matter, ib. 2766. 2770——Argument that, whatever be the intention of the Appropriation Acts of 1841, it was inoperative on witness to administer them in the sense laid down by the law officers, ib. 2767–2770.

Correspondence relative to numerous cases of attempted misappropriation, showing the control exercised by the Exchequer, App. p. 648 et seq.

Sundry papers in elucidation of this case in 1841, and of the difference thereon between the Exchequer and the Treasury, App. p. 652 et seq.——Case for the opinion of the law officers, ib. 653, 654——Copy of the opinion of the law officers, ib. 660.

4. Opinion as to the Practicability of strict Appropriation in the Pay Office:

Facility of the practice of appropriation when there were separate paymasters for the great services, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2804——Equal facility of appropriation under one as under three paymasters, ib. 2833.

5. Exchequer Memorandum of 1854.

Explanation of the origin of the Exchequer Memorandum, dated February 1854, laid by witness before Mr. Gladstone, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 847——Copy of letter, dated 16 February 1854, accompanying this memorandum, and urging the importance of the strictest system of administration and Parliamentary appropriation, ib.——Sundry parties to whom witness sent copies of the memorandum, ib.——Witness fully adheres to the general views expressed by him in the memorandum of 1854, with reference to the doctrine of appropriation, ib. 847, 848. 2771, 2772. 2777.

Examination in confirmation of statements in the memorandum, as to the sundry different ways in which payments may be made in violation of the intentions of Parliament and the Exchequer control, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2939–2967.

Copy of the memorandum, App. p. 536–553.

6. Practice of the Exchequer in issuing for the Army, Navy and Ordnance:

Circumstance under which witness considered himself justified in issuing indiscriminately to the three great services the amount of their respective votes without inquiring

Report, 1856—continued.

APPROPRIATION—continued.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer—continued.

6. Practice of the Exchequer in issuing for the Army, &c.—continued.

inquiring into a specific appropriation of the sub-votes, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 3053-3055——Reference before he did so to the opinion of the law officers, ib. 3053; and App. p. 678——Case submitted for the opinion of the law officers, App. p. 678-681 ——Opinion of the law officers that it is not necessary to have a distinct and separate Royal order for each separate vote for army services, ib. 681.

II. Evidence on the Part of the Treasury and Pay Office:

1. Question as to the correctness, legally, of Lord Monteagle's views:

In the Appropriation Act the votes of supply aae set out in detail, and the ways and means made applicable to the votes, Anderson 943-946——The system of keeping the cash in the banking accounts in one common fund is perfectly consistent with the annual Appropriation Act though inconsistent with Lord Monteagle's interpretation of the Act of 1834, ib. 1293-1296——Doubt as to the correctness of Lord Monteagle's opinion that he cannot legally issue money for the service of the year before the 1st of April, ib. 1520——Lord Monteagle considers the practice in regard to issues and appropriation to be wrong, but witness considers that the defect lies in the law, ib. 1629-1634.

The real question in dispute is, whether the practice of the Pay-office follows up the principle of the Act; belief that it does as far as possible, Anderson 1643. 1727-1735 ——If Lord Monteagle's interpretation of the law be right, the practice of the Pay-office is not legal, ib. 1638. 1734-1742——Adherence, by the Treasury, to the provisions of the Appropriation Act, ib. 1639. 1643. 1727——The temporary employment by the Paymaster of monies drawn for one purpose, for other purposes which have credits in the Exchequer, cannot be called a misappropriation, ib. 1993-1995——The fact of the vote being reported, is considered by the Pay-office in the same light as an appropriation act, Hoffay 2629-2632.

2. Impracticability of strict Appropriation in the Pay Office:

Difficulty of a correct daily estimate by the Paymaster, of the services or claims to be met on the following day, Anderson 1068——Propriety of considering the Exchequer and Pay-office balances as one in the appropriation of the money, ib. 1068, 1069. 1080 ——Necessary departure from the strict provisions of the Act, in regard to the issue from the drawing account of monies for services for which there is no Exchequer credit, but which are sanctioned by vote, ib. 1069-1080. 1095-1097——Doubt as to greater facility for appropriation when there were several paymasters, ib. 1085-1089.

Further reference to the necessary payment through the Pay-office, of large sums which are appropriated, not to the votes, but to the general account, Anderson 1375——Illustration of the impracticability of an issue from the Exchequer for each vote, each issue to be applicable only to the special purpose for which made, ib. 1286-1292. 1317-1319. 1355-1357——Necessary application of the money issued to the Receiver-general to the special service or department for which issued, ib. 1484-1488——Obstacle to the whole of the monies in the Exchequer being retained on the general account till the actual payments are made, ib. 1555-1575.

Further statement as to the issues when once written into the drawing account, being applicable indiscriminately to any services which are called for on that day, Anderson 1577-1579. 1586-1590——Impracticability of fully carrying out the principle of appropriation in the Pay-office, further contended, ib. 1733 et seq.——It would not do to refuse payment because a wrong estimate had been made, ib. 1733. 1994——General practice of the Pay-office in regard to the temporary employment for one purpose, of monies drawn for another service, ib. 1994-1998——The practice of the Pay-office as complained of by Lord Monteagle, really commenced in 1836, ib. 2258-2260.

Impossibility of accurately estimating the amount that may be required on the following day in regard to the certain charges on the Consolidated Fund, Hoffay 2502-2506. 2581.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in his Memorandum of 1854 as to the Paymaster-general's demands being limited to the sums required for his daily payments, and as to the impracticability of strict appropriation, App. p. 555, 556.

3. Inadequacy of the Exchequer as a means of ensuring Appropriation:

Evidence to the effect that the Exchequer can exercise no practical check whatever upon the final appropriation, Anderson 1019. 1030-1046, Hoffay 2707, 2708——Inefficiency of the Exchequer control inasmuch as though it prevents an undue issue, it does not in any way extend to the final appropriation, Anderson 1030-1046. 1055, 1056. 1070-1075——Bar to an efficient Exchequer check, on ancount of the impossibility of appropriation at the time of issue, ib. 1094-1097——Practical difficulty in the way of useful Exchequer control over the application or final appropriation, ib. 1357-1365.

Statement

Report, 1856—continued.

APPROPRIATION—continued.

II. Evidence on the part of the Treasury, and Pay Office.—continued.]

3. Inadequacy of the Exchequer as a means of ensuring Appropriation—cont^d.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, that the office of Comptroller-general of the Exchequer by no means increases the security for the due appropriation of the public money, App. p. 508.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in 1854, as to the impracticability of Exchequer control over the appropriation, App. p. 555–558.

4. Instances, in 1852, of Departure from Appropriation, so termed; Explanation thereof:

Particulars relative to sundry instances, in 1852, in April and in following months, of accounts being overdrawn in anticipation of Exchequer credits, Anderson 3434 et seq.——All those services, the accounts of which were overdrawn beyond the Exchequer issue, had credits in the Exchequer, and in no instance were overdrawn in excess of the vote of Parliament, ib. 3461–3464. 3513. 3516. 3567. 3577——Disturbing cause, in 1852, which rendered the issues unusually late in April, ib. 3529. 3596. 3597——The real cause of not drawing on the Exchequer more promptly was, that the Paymaster had a considerable balance in hand on deposited accounts and the cash account, which was incumbent on him in the first instance to exhaust, ib. 4108–4111. 4115, 4116.

5. Improved Regulations generally since 1830:

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in his reply to Lord Monteagle's Memorandum of 1854, as to the improvements introduced since 1830, in regard to the constitutional control and legal appropriation of the public monies, App. p. 553.

6. Amended System suggested by Mr. Anderson:

The appropriation should be against the annual vote, and not against the daily credit, Anderson 3516, 3517. 3532 et seq.——The appropriation in anticipation of payments should be done away with, and should be founded on the actual payments, ib. 3532. 3556. 3593——At the close of each day the actual appropriation should be charged against the votes upon the actual issues, subject to a system of concurrent audit, ib. 3532–3537——This plan might be adopted without disturbing the existence of the Exchequer, ib. 3532. 3588——Under the proposed system of aggregate issue and daily concurrent audit, there would be at least as much security as at present against over-payment or improper application, ib. 3541 et seq.

See also Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office). Audit. Balances. Control. Co-operation. Exchequer. Foreign Expenditure. Imprests. Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Treasury, 2. Unappropriated Votes. Unexpended Balances. Ways and Means. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses). Woods and Forests, Office of.

Appropriation Audit. See Audit.

ARMY:

I. Accounts:

1. As to the Time taken in their Preparation.
2. As to the Presentation of a different Form of Accounts.
3. Inexpediency of Departure from the Navy System.
4. Recommended Consolidation of the Army and Ordnance Books.

II. Audit of Accounts:

1. Generally, as to the System of Appropriation Audit.
2. Disadvantage of a Transfer of the detailed Audit to the Audit-office.
3. Transfer recently of the detailed Adult of certain Services to the War Department.
4. As to the detailed Audit now conducted by the Department.

III. Other Evidence generally:

1. As to the general Check upon Expenditure.
2. Extraordinary Expenses.
3. Non-effective Services.
4. Vote for 1855-56; Balance unexpended.
5. Extra Receipts since 1848.

I. Accounts:

1. As to the Time taken in their Preparation:

One year is allowed to collect the accounts from all parts of the world to examine them, and record them; and one month for their preparation for Parliament, Vine 3662. 3963, 3964; Hollings 4583–4591——Evidence explanatory of the necessity of so considerable

Report, 1856—continued.

ARMY—continued.

I. Accounts—continued.

1. As to the Time taken in their Preparation—continued.

considerable a period before the accounts are received from abroad, and are prepared and audited at home, Anderson 2085, 2086; Hoffay 2516. 2519. 2558-2561; Vine 3903, 3904. 3933-3982; Hollings 4594, et seq.

2. As to the Presentation of a different Form of Accounts:

A provisional account made up as closely as possible, as well as the final accounts, might, if deemed advisable, be easily prepared, Anderson 2086, 2087——Suggestion with a view to the army and navy accounts as now laid before Parliament under the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, being rendered in a detailed form, instead of in their present detailed shape, Hoffay 2636-2638. 2648-2651——Inexpediency of making up the army account for Parliament at the end of the financial year, or within the same period as the navy account, inasmuch as the accuracy and value of the accounts would be destroyed, Vine 3904-3906. 3912-3919. 3941-3943. 4067-4081.

3. Inexpediency of Departure from the Navy System:

With regard to the variation in the form of the abstract books of the army accounts, the same has rendered the audit more difficult, though not less accurate, Vine 3826-3848——Witness, who laid the foundation of the naval ledger, some twenty-five years ago, is strongly opposed to any departure by the War Department from the plan of naval accounts, Anderson 4142-4150——Originally the books in the War Department, as any framed by witness, were precisely similar to the naval books, ib. 4145, 4146.

4. Recommended Consolidation of the Army and Ordnance Books:

Concurrence in objections to separate books and accounts for the army at the Horse Guards and the Ordnance at Pall Mall; importance of an immediate fusion of accounts under one roof, Vine 3860-3888——In the year 1856-57 a consolidation of the books of the Army and Ordnance is peculiarly desirable, as the consolidation of the departments then commences, ib. 3946——It is very desirable that but one set of books should be kept for the Ordnance and Army as consolidated services, Anderson 4151-4154.

II. Audit of Accounts:

1. Generally as to the System of Appropriation Audit:

Explanation of the detailed system adopted by the Audit-office in their examination of the army accounts; care taken that proper heads of accounts are observed, Vine 3305 et seq., 3712 et seq.; Anderson 3625-3632; Romilly 4374, 4375. 4533-4539. 4577-4580; Macaulay 4513. 4565——Check upon incorrect entries being made in the books, and ticked off as correct by the officers of the department, Vine 3719-3728. 3764-3768——The objections raised by the audit officers are generally against the entry of charges under wrong heads, and are always made in writing, ib. 3729-3733.

Nature of the record or check, which shows that the accounts of the departments have been audited up to a given point and date, and by particular officers, Vine 3734-3755——The monthly report shows the date to which the audit has extended, ib. 3734. 3736. 3754——Statement as to the audit officers not making any memoranda, or recording their signatures in the books of the department, ib. 3737. 3749——Dependence necessarily on the good faith of the officer deputed by the Board to audit the departmental accounts, ib. 3756-3763——Until the final accounts are made out, the auditors cannot say or report whether any particular vote for the army is exceeded, ib. 3778-3785.

Duty of the appropriation audit of the army and navy accounts to see that the sums are posted under the proper heads of the votes, and to report thereon, Romilly 4374, 4375——Expediency of an independent audit in the matter of all expenditure affected by rules emanating from the Treasury or from Parliament, ib. 4389-4393——Impossibility of an adequate check by means merely of an appropriation audit, ib. 4392, 4393——Means of furnishing information with respect to objections raised by the Audit-office examiners of naval or military accounts; no special query book is kept, Romilly and Macaulay 4500-4503.

Further evidence in explanation of the appropriation audit, as carried out at the Admiralty and War-office by the inspectors and clerks of the Audit-office, Romilly 4533-4539. 4564. 4577-4580——Statement as to the Commissioners of Audit vouching for the correctness of those accounts, though their officers have not inquired into the detailed expenditure, ib. 4531. 4541-4545.

Memorandum by Mr. Romilly, dated 24 July 1856, showing distinctly what the duties are which the auditors are called upon to perform in regard to the army and navy accounts, and the way in which they are performed, Ev. p. 441-443.

Care taken by the Audit Board officer attached to the War Department that there is full evidence of a complete examination by the officers of the department, Macaulay 4513. 4565; Hollings 4601. 4640. 4645-4647——Power of the independent Audit officer to inspect

Report, 1856—continued.

Army—continued.

II. Audit of Accounts—continued.

1. Generally as to the System of Appropriation Audit—continued.

inspect vouchers; as a rule, he does not, and in fact could not do so, Hollings 4601, 4602——Statement to the effect that the auditor is bound to notice any departure from the terms of the Appropriation Act, ib. 4635, 4636——Harmonious working of the War-office and Audit Board, ib. 4368, 4369——There is but one audit clerk permanently attached to the department, the audit inspector paying only occasional visits, ib. 4646.

Manner in which the auditor's reports in the departments are reported to the Audit Board and acted upon, Hoffay 2710–2712——Any payment which did not appear to be properly chargeable against the vote would be represented to the Audit Board, Vine 3309. 3316——The Audit Board would have no action unless improper payments are represented by their officers, ib. 3318——Practice of the Audit Board to report irregularities to the Treasury unless they are at once corrected by the department, ib. 3621. 3695–5697. 3772–3777——Monthly reports made to the Audit Board by their inspector at the War-office, ib. 3714. 3734——Report by this officer direct to the Audit Board, Romilly 4215——Steps taken before any item questioned by the auditor is referred to the Audit Board, Hollings 4637.

Doubt whether the Board of Audit will feel justified in putting in the paymaster's books the expenditure for army effectives and non-effectives, on the proposed certificate of the Secretary of State for War, Romilly 4381, 4382. 4386, 4387——Under the contemplated arrangement, the Secretary of State will in fact be the auditor of the non-effectives and part of the effectives, ib. 4382——Opinion that an independent detailed audit is not necessary with respect to that portion of the army expenditure which depends entirely upon rules emanating from the head of the department, ib. 4388–4390——There is no Treasury check upon irregular payments being made on the sanction of the War Minister, Hollings 4630–4633——Check upon such payments through the intervention of the auditor and inspector from the Audit Board, ib. 4634–4637.

2. Disadvantage of a Transfer of the detailed Audit to the Audit-office:

Inconvenience and delay if the army accounts were audited at the Audit-office, Vine 3715–3718——Advantage in some respect if there were a more searching appropriation audit at the War-office; on the whole, however, the change is not desirable, ib. 3823–3825. 3857, 3858.

More efficient check if the army and navy accounts were to be sent to the Audit-office, Romilly 4425. 4430——This check, however, would involve increased delay and expense, ib. 4429. 4430——A detailed audit by the Audit-office should extend to such portion only of the naval or military expenditure as may be regulated by the rules of Parliament or of the Treasury, and not of the Secretary of War, ib. 4431. 4452——Reasons opposed to a detailed audit of the main portion of the accounts or expenditure of the naval and military departments, ib. 4431. 4445–4452. 4456–4462.

Large increase of staff required if a detailed audit of these accounts were undertaken by the Audit-office, Macaulay 4566–4568——Inexpediency generally of a detailed examination by the Audit-office, instead of by the naval and military departments, ib. 4566. 4568——Immense delay before the accounts could be finally completed, if there were a second detailed audit, Romilly and Macaulay 4569–4575.

3. Transfer recently of the detailed Audit of certain Services to the War Department:

Evidence explanatory of the removal of the detailed audit of certain accounts besides that of the Commissariat from the Audit-office to the War-office, Vine 3788–3822. 4057–4066——Transfer of the non-effectives of the army to the War-office detailed audit, ib. 3791–3793; Romilly 4379–4381——Transfer from the detailed audit of the Audit-office of portion of the accounts of the effective services of the army, Vine 3794–3801. 3810. 3816–3819; Romilly 4382——As regards the pensions and half-pay, the detailed audit was till lately conducted by the Audit-office, Macaulay 4453, 4454.

4. As to the detailed Audit now conducted by the Department:

The detailed audit of the army and navy accounts is at present conducted entirely by the departments, independently of the Audit Board, Romilly 4023–4027. 4032–4034. 4504 et seq. 4563. 4576——Respects in which it may be considered that the War-office has as great an interest as the Audit-office in carrying out a correct detailed audit, ib. 5417–4529. 4532.

Comparatively inexperienced examiners at present in the War Department, Hollings 4606. 4613——Arrear in the examination consequent upon the war, ib. 4606. 4613. 4616——Number of clerks now engaged as examiners at the Horse Guards and Pall Mall, ib. 4617——The examiner would not consider it his duty to refuse to pass any payment ordered by the Secretary-at-War, even though inconsistent with the Treasury Regulations, ib. 4627–4629. 4632——Illustration of the minute examination to which accounts are subjected by the auditors of the department, ib. 4640–4644.

Report, 1856—continued.

ARMY—continued.

III. Other Evidence generally:

1. As to the general Check upon Expenditure:

Responsibility of the Minister for War for the proper expenditure of certain army supplies according to vote, Anderson 1971–1979——Sanction of the Treasury required in regard to deviations from the Army Estimates as to buildings, &c., ib. 1973. 1979–1982——Parliamentary check upon the expenditure through the War Minister; check also through the Audit Board, ib. 1975–1979——Payment by the Paymaster-general of portion of the army expenditure on the authority of Royal warrants, ib. 2213, 2214——Practice of the Pay-office, &c. in regard to interests to the agents of regiments, ib. 2213.

Excess of expenditure over the Army vote for 1847–48, Hoffay 2514——Payment by the Paymaster-general merely as bankers so long as anything remains to the credit of any vote, ib. 2516. 2519–2532. 2538——Last year the War Departments took their votes separately, but expended them unitedly, Anderson 3616–3618. 3639——Any excess of the aggregate of these votes would only be made known to Parliament when the final accounts are presented, ib. 3618. 3628. 3634–3636——Difficulties, through exchange of services, which have prevented strict appropriation of these votes in the Pay-office, ib. 3619–3626——Separate accounts will be rendered of the Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat, Vine 3944, 3945.

Question as to the propriety of a supplemental vote for the army for 1855–56, as well as for the navy, instead of the former being fed by the vote of credit, Vine 4026. 4039–4056——With regard to the army services, the Appropriation Act states, in the first place, that there shall be so much granted, and then subdivides the amounts under the different votes, ib. 4107——There is no large deficit on the final army account for 1854–55, Anderson 4196.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, in 1831, of the manner in which money is issued by the Exchequer for the use of the army, App. p. 462——Directions in Treasury Minute of August 1836 relative to the issues by the paymaster for the army, ib. 492 et seq.——Regulations in Treasury Minute of August 1836 in regard to payments for army services, Ireland, ib. 493, 494.

Correspondence between the Comptroller of the Exchequer and the Treasury in 1842, on the legality of consolidating army votes in one Royal Order, with case and opinions thereon of the law officers of the Crown, App. p. 678–681.

2. Extraordinary Expenses:

Account showing that the Army Extraordinaries have ceased altogether since 1832, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 229——Memorandum by Mr. Anderson, dated in 1840, relative to the account of Army Extraordinaries, App. p. 589.

Gross payments and receipts of Army Extraordinaries, from 1 April 1833, when the annual vote was discontinued, till 1838, App. p. 590——Abstract showing the excess of payments above receipts in the years 1834–38, ib.

Royal warrant, dated 27 June 1847, to apply sums applicable to extraordinary expenses of the army, pursuant to Treasury warrants, App. p. 608.

3. Non-effective Services:

Payment upon Royal warrant of the non-effective army services, Anderson 2214——Transfer from the Audit Office of the detailed audit of the non-effective services of the army, Vine 3791–3793; Romilly 4379–4381——The army non-effectives for 1855–56 not subject to a detailed Audit-office check, amount to 1,956,237 l., Romilly 4455, and App. p. 844.

Recommendation in the Treasury Minute of 22d December 1848 as to the modes of paying army non-effective services, App. p. 515. 526.

4. Vote for 1855–56; Balance unexpended:

Reference to the non-expenditure during the year of a considerable portion of the total of the army vote, Anderson 3645–3648——The whole of the vote was 18,789,532 l., ib. 3645——The total issue from the Exchequer was 17,395,059 l., ib. 3646——Balance of about a million in the Exchequer to the credit of the army at the close of the year 1854–55, ib. 3647——The total amount unexpended at the end of the year was 2,389,532 l., a large portion of which will probably revert to the Exchequer, ib. 3648.

5. Extra Receipts since 1848:

Statement showing the sums received on account of extra receipts (Army, Ordnance, and Commissariat) for each year since 1848, with the payments made on such accounts to the Exchequer or Pay-office during the same period; total payments to the Exchequer of 1,955,699 l. 15 s. 2 d.; App. p. 630.

Return

Report, 1856—continued.

Army—continued.

III. Other Evidence generally—5. Extra Receipts since 1848—continued.

Return containing particulars relative to the extra receipts for Army, Navy, and Ordnance in 1855 and 1856, App. p. 818, 819.

See also Appropriation, 1. 6. Audit, 1, 2. Commissariat. Commissariat Chest Account. Estimates. Imprests, &c. Militia. Pay Office. Prize Money. Transfers between Departments. Unappropriated Votes. Unexpended Balances.

Arterial Drainage, Ireland. Statement for the years 1849–55 of sums due, paid, and outstanding under this head, App. p. 622.

Assistant Barristers' Salaries, Ireland. Correspondence between the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer and the Treasury in 1851 with respect to a suspended issue for the salaries of assistant barristers in Ireland, App. p. 693–697.

Audit:

1. Efficiency of a proper System of Audit as a Check upon Expenditure.
2. Importance of direct Reports to Parliament by the Audit Board.
3. Practice in the event of Differences between the Audit Office and the Treasury, or the Departments.
4. Means of procuring in due time the Accounts for Audit; Suggestions hereon.
5. Inadequacy of any System of Audit as a Check upon Expenditure.
6. Recommended Audit of the Miscellaneous and Civil Services, and of all Treasury Accounts.
7. Practice in regard to the Appropriation Audit of the Army and Navy Accounts.
8. Reports by the Appropriation Auditors to the Board.
9. Question as to the Appropriation Audit of Expenditure authorised by the Minister for War.
10. Disadvantage on the whole of transferring the Detailed Audit of Army Accounts to the Audit Office.
11. Transfer recently of the Detailed Audit of certain Services to the War Department.
12. Staff of the Audit Office: their Mode of Appointment and of Payment.
13. Present State of the Business of the Office.
14. Generally as to the Accounts subject to Audit, and as to the Functions of the Board.

1. Efficiency of a proper System of Audit as a Check upon Expenditure:

The only practical check upon the expenditure is after the money has been applied, Anderson 1020. 1058–1062. 1385. 1406——Sufficiency of the present audit check as regards the detailed appropriation in the whole of the navy and military departments, ib. 1049–1054. 1058–1062——Restraint generally is best exercised at the time of and after payment, ib. 1058–1062——A concurrent audit, as established in the great departments, affords the best system of check, ib. 1027. 1058–1062.

Efficiency of the audit control, though no check upon an excess of expenditure in the first instance, Anderson 1090–1093. 1113–1116——With an effectual audit, the functions of the Exchequer may well be obliterated, Anderson 1113–1116. 2082, 4159 et seq.; Hoffay 2727–2733——Effectual control by means of a sound system of accounts and a general audit, Anderson 1366——An effectual audit is the most stringent of all checks, ib. 2012. 2037. 2071–2081——Independent as well as certain and simple character of the audit check, ib. 2072–2079——Expediency of the audit after final expenditure; else the check is not final or reliable, ib. 2076.

Adequacy of the powers of the Audit Board as a check upon expenditure by the naval and military departments, Hoffay 2513. 2516–2518. 2640, 2941. 2652——Power of the auditor to see that no expenditure which should appear in the year is postponed, ib. 2641–2647——Power of the Board to see that the expenditure takes place under the proper head of account, ib. 2641——Opinion that the Board offers as independent a check as the Exchequer does, ib. 2727–2733——Efficient check through means of the detailed accounts laid before Parliament, upon the due appropriation of any large sums voted for army clothing, stores, &c., Vine 3920-3930.

2. Importance of direct Reports to Parliament by the Audit Board:

A special report by the Audit Board in the event of undue misappropriation would be far preferable to an increased Exchequer control, Anderson 2080, 2081. 2121. 2125, 2126.

Circumstance of the audited naval and military accounts being laid before Parliament by the Treasury instead of the Audit Board; the report should be made directly by the latter body, Romilly 4398–4401——Main importance of a power in the Board to report directly and as often as they please, ib. 4399——Explanation as to, and disapproval of, the repeal of that portion of Sir J. Graham's Act of 1832 which directed that the navy accounts be laid before Parliament direct by the auditors, ib. 4400, 4401. 4435–4438.

Report, 1856—continued.

AUDIT—continued.

3. Practice in the event of Differences between the Audit Office and the Treasury, or the Departments:

Explanation as to the reference to the Treasury in the event of a difference between the Audit Board and the Admiralty as to the classification of items, &c., Anderson 2095–2100——Check of the Audit Board in the event of the Treasury directing the payment of naval money into Civil Contingencies, or any other fund; probability of the Audit-office opposing undue Treasury orders adverted to hereon, Hoffay 2312, 2313. 2386–2398. 2423–2426——Support generally of the Audit Board by the Treasury in the event of a dispute with any department, Hoffay 2401–2403. 2410, 2411; Romilly 4467——Instance of the Treasury having decided with the Board against the Admiralty, and of the latter refusing to obey the Treasury, Hoffay 2411–2419——The Treasury have always supported the Board in their views of their Parliamentary duty and responsibility, Vine 3693.

Exoneration of the Paymaster by the Audit-office if he proceeded in accordance with Treasury directions, Romilly 4259–4261——Probable interposition of the Audit Board in the event of the Treasury giving orders contrary to law, ib. 4261–4265——Explanatory statement relative to a case in which the Treasury concurred with the auditors against the Admiralty; the latter did not act contrary to any expressed opinion of the Treasury, ib. 4562.

4. Means of procuring in due time the Accounts for Audit; Suggestions hereon:

Nature of the power vested in the Audit Board in order to compel ordinary accountants to furnish the required information, Romilly 4294. 4366–4368——Power, in disuse, of the Board to compel the rendering of accounts by the imposition of fines, ib. 4368.

Suggestion that the accountant be liable to fines for delay in rendering their accounts, Romilly 4369, 4370. 4551——Opinion that a system of reports to Parliament is the best means of ensuring punctual rendering of the accounts of the great departments, ib. 4371. 4551.

Further evidence and suggestions with a view to the prevention of delay on the part of accountants in sending in their accounts, Romilly 4551, 4552——It is contemplated by the Audit-office to issue regulations for colonial accountants, ib. 4553, 4554.

5. Inadequacy of any System of Audit as a Check upon Expenditure:

Practical insufficiency of the audit check on account of the delay before the accounts are rendered to Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3121——Defects of the audit system is comprising the correction rather than the prevention of misapplication, ib.——Doubt whether the extension of the audit system to the Civil Votes would be an effective check, ib. 3136.

6. Recommended Audit of the Miscellaneous and Civil Services, and of all Treasury Accounts:

Opinion strongly in favour of extending the system of detailed audit to the Civil Contingencies and Miscellaneous Services generally, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 447, 448. 819–835. 843–846——Concurrence in Mr. Romilly's views that there should be an independent audit in the case of the Treasury accounts and of all votes taken by the Treasury, ib. 828–834.

Proof of payment required by the Audit-office as regards naval and military expenditure, but not as regards the miscellaneous service, Anderson 1017, 1018. 1020——Decided improvement if the whole of the miscellaneous votes and civil expenditure were subject to the same system of audit as the naval and military expenditure, Anderson 2067–2081. 2084; Romilly 4394, 4395——Recommendation that the system of appropriation audit be extended to the whole of the miscellaneous and civil services, and to the transactions of the Treasury, Hoffay 2635, 2636. 2653 et seq.

Objection to an examination of the miscellaneous expenditure by placing an officer from the Audit Board at the Treasury for the purpose, Romilly 4396–4398——Importance of the audit of the miscellaneous accounts taking place at the Audit-office, ib. 4399.

Remarks by Mr. Romilly in 1850 as to the appropriation of miscellaneous votes not being under the control of Audit Board, App. p. 562——Opinion then expressed by him that audit of appropriation should be extended to all branches of expenditure, ib.

7. Practice in regard to the Appropriation Audit of the Army and Navy Accounts:

System of concurrent audit now adopted in the case of the Navy accounts, an effective audit being conducted by the Accountant-general, Anderson 1699–1703——Impracticability of improving the present audit of naval accounts, the object being to give security to Parliament that the accounts presented are correct, ib. 2101–2103. 2113, 2114.

Strict examination by the officer who checks the navy and military accounts, in order to see that the vouchers are in every respect sufficient to warrant their being carried as final payments on account of the vote, Vine 3305; Macaulay 4513. 4565——Due cognizance taken of each original entry until it is finally recorded in the annual account laid laid before Parliament, Vine 3305——Argument that it is not the duty of the Audit Board to interfere with the expenditure of the departments, other than so long as the services are provided for in the estimates, and are accounted for under proper heads, ib. 3306-3327. 3679-3690——Reference to the practice, whereby, previously to Sir J. Graham's Bill, the naval accounts were audited entirely by their own department, ib. 3331-3333.

Report, 1856—continued.

AUDIT—continued.

7. Practice in regard to the Appropriation Audit, &c.—continued.

Nature of the daily audit to which the army votes have been subjected, Anderson 3625-3632——Further explanation of the detailed system adopted by the Audit-office in their examination of the army accounts, Vine 3712 et seq.——Check upon incorrect entries being made in the books, and ticked off as correct by the officers of the department, ib. 3719-3728. 3764-3768——The objections raised by the audit officers are generally against the entry of charges under wrong heads, and are always made in writing, ib. 3729-3733.

Nature of the record or check which shows that the accounts of the departments have been audited up to a given point and date, and by particular officers, Vine 3734-3755——The monthly report shows the date to which the audit has extended, ib. 3734. 3736. 3754——Statement as to the audit officers not making any memoranda, or recording their signatures in the books of the department, ib. 3737-3749——Dependence necessarily on the good faith of the officer deputed by the Board to audit the departmental accounts, ib. 3756-3763——Until the final accounts are made out, the auditors cannot say or report whether any particular vote for the army is exceeded, ib. 3778-3785.

Duty of the appropriation audit of the army and navy accounts to see that the sums are posted under the proper heads of the votes, and to report thereon, Romilly 4374, 4375——Impossibility of an adequate check by means merely of an appropriation audit, ib. 4392, 4393——Danger in placing Audit-office officials at the Treasury, lest they become unduly influenced by that department, ib. 4399——Means of furnishing information with respect to objections raised by the Audit-office examiners of naval or military account ; no special query book is kept, Romilly and Macaulay 4500-4503.

Further evidence in explanation of the appropriation audit as carried out at the Admiralty and War-office by the inspectors and clerks of the Audit-office, Romilly 4533-4539. 4564. 4577-4580——Statement as to the Commissioners of audit vouching for the correctness of those accounts, though their officers have not inquired into the detailed expenditure, Romilly 4531. 4541-4545; Macaulay 4564, 4565.

Memorandum by Mr. Romilly, dated 24 July 1856, showing distinctly what the duties are which the auditors are called upon to perform in regard to the army and navy accounts, and the way in which they are performed, Ev. p. 441-443.

Care taken by the Audit Board officer attached to the War Department that there is full evidence of a complete examination by the officers of the department, Macaulay 4513. 4565; Hollings 4601. 4640. 4645-4647——Power of the independent audit officer to inspect vouchers; as a rule he does not, and in fact could not do so; Hollings 4601, 4602——Statement to the effect that the auditor is bound to notice any departure from the terms of the Appropriation Act, ib. 4635, 4636——Harmonious working of the War-office and Audit Board, ib. 4638, 4639——There is but one audit clerk permanently attached to the department, the audit inspector paying only occasional visits, ib. 4646.

Remarks by Mr. Romilly, in 1850, as to the audit of the naval accounts being, under the Bill of 1832, superintended by the Board of Audit, App. p. 562.

8. Reports by the Appropriation Auditors to the Board:

Manner in which the auditors' reports in the departments are reported to the Audit Board and acted upon, Hoffay 2710-2712——Any payments which did not appear to be properly chargeable against the vote would be represented to the Audit Board, Vine 3309. 3316——The Audit Board would have no action unless improper payments are represented by their officers, ib. 3318——Practice of the Audit Board to report irregularities to the Treasury unless they are at once corrected by the department, ib. 3691. 3695-3697. 3772-3777.

Monthly report made to the Audit Board by their inspector at the War-office, Vine 3714. 3734——Report by this officer direct to the Audit Board, Romilly 4215——Steps taken before any item questioned by the auditor is referred to the Audit Board, Hollings 4637.

9. Question as to the Appropriation Audit of Expenditure authorised by the Minister for War:

Doubt whether the Board of Audit will feel justified in passing in the paymasters' books the expenditure for army effectives and non-effectives, on the proposed certificate of the Secretary of State for War, Romilly 4381, 4382. 4386, 4387——Under the contemplated arrangement, the Secretary of State will in fact be the auditor of the non-effectives and part of the effectives, ib. 4382——Opinion that an independent detailed audit audit is not necessary with respect to that portion of the army expenditure which depends entirely upon rules emanating from the head of the department, Romilly 4388–4390.

Report, 1856—continued.

AUDIT—continued.

9. Question as to the Appropriation Audit of Expenditure, &c.—continued.

There is no Treasury check upon irregular payments being made on the sanction of the War Minister, Hollings 4630–4633——Check upon such payments through the intervention of the auditor and inspector from the Audit Board, ib. 4634–4637.

10. Disadvantage on the whole of transferring the Detailed Audit of Army Accounts to the Audit Office:

Inconvenience and delay if the army accounts were audited at the Audit-office, Vine 3715–3718——Advantage in some respects if there were a more searching appropriation audit at the War-office; on the whole, however, the change is not desirable, ib. 3823–3825. 3857, 3858.

The detailed audit of the army and navy accounts is at present conducted entirely by the departments, independently of the Audit Board, Romilly 4023–4027. 4032–4034. 4504 et seq. 4563. 4576——Expediency of an independent audit in the matter of all expenditure affected by rules emanating from the Treasury or from Parliament, ib. 4389–4393. 4407. 4431——More efficient check if the army and navy accounts were to be sent to the Audit-office, ib. 4425. 4430——This check, however, would involve increased delay and expense, ib. 4429, 4430.

A detailed audit by the Audit-office should extend to such portion only of the naval or military expenditure as may be regulated by the rules of Parliament or of the Treasury, and not of the Secretary of War, Romilly 4431. 4452——Reasons opposed to a detailed audit of the main portion of the accounts or expenditure of the naval and military departments, ib. 4431. 4445–4452. 4456–4462——Duty of the accountant-general of the navy to check anything wrong in the detailed audit, Romilly and Macaulay 4509——Respects in which it may be considered that the War-office has as great an interest as the Audit-office in carrying out a correct detailed audit, Romilly 4517–4529. 4532.

Large increase of staff required if a detailed audit of these accounts were undertaken by the Audit-office, Macaulay 4566–4568——Inexpediency generally of a detailed examination by the Audit-office instead of by the naval and military departments, ib. 4566. 4568——Immense delay before the accounts could be finally completed if there were a second detailed audit, Romilly and Macaulay 4569–4575.

11. Transfer recently of the Detailed Audit of certain Services to the War Department:

Examination relative to the removal by the Treasury of the detailed audit of the Commissariat service; precedent for this course which was adopted in consequence of the consolidation of the Commissariat with the War department, Anderson 2091 et seq.; Vine 3330. 3360. 3788–3793; Romilly 4377, 4378. 4385. 4463–4466——Evidence explanatory of the removal of the detailed audit of certain accounts, besides that of the commissariat, from the Audit-office to the War-office, Vine 3788–3822. 4057–4066——Transfer of the non-effectives of the army to the War-office detailed audit, Vine 3791–3793; Romilly 4379–4381——Transfer from the detailed audit of the Audit-office of portion of the accounts of the effective services of the army, Vine 3794–3801. 3810. 3816. 3819; Romilly 4382——As regards the pensions and half-pay, the detailed audit was, till lately conducted by the Audit-office, Macaulay 4453, 4454.

12. Staff of the Audit Office; their Mode of Appointment, and of Payment:

Witness has been inspector of naval and military accounts under the Commissioners of Audit since March 1854, Vine 3301, 3302——Was previously, for twenty-one years, book-keeper in the Audit-office, ib. 3303, 3304——The Audit-office comprises inspectors, senior examiners, junior examiners, and assistants, ib. 3759——Witness has been Commissioner of Audit since the beginning of 1836, and Chairman of the Board since May 1854, Romilly 4200–4202——Witness has been secretary to the Board since March 1854, Macaulay 4203.

Tenure of the Audit Board during good behaviour, Romilly 4204——Appointment of the Board by the Treasury, ib. 4205——Payment of the salaries of the Commissioners out of the Consolidated Fund, ib. 4206.

The officers of the Board hold during the usual tenure, and their salaries are voted by Act of Parliament, Romilly 4207, 4208——Power of the Board to dismiss any of their officers, ib. 4208, 4209——Direct appointment by the Treasury of the officer who inspects the accounts of the army and navy, ib. 4210–4214. 4398, 4399. 4544——Before interfering with the appointment of this inspector, the Board would doubtless feel bound to refer the question to the Treasury, ib. 4216——The officers under the inspector at the Admiralty and War-office are placed there by the Board, and are removable at pleasure, ib. 4217, 4218.

Expediency of the Audit-office inspector of the naval and military accounts being appointed and removable by the Board of Audit instead of by the Treasury, Romilly 4398,

Report, 1856—continued.

AUDIT—continued.

12. Staff of the Audit Office; their Mode of Appointment, &c.—continued.

4398, 4399——Improvement if the salaries of the subordinate officers of the Board were paid out of the Consolidated Fund, Romilly 4399.

Statement in Treasury Minute of 22 August 1854, as to the salary list of the Audit Office, and the authority for payment, App. p. 580.

13. Present State of the Business of the Office:

Considerable extent to which the army and navy accounts for 1855–56, have been audited though the finally audited account cannot be ascertained till all the accounts from foreign stations, &c. are rendered, Vine 3889–3902——The audits of the public accounts generally is infinitely closer than it used to be, Romilly, 4441–4444——Some accounts seemingly much in arrear of final audit are by no means in arrear of efficient examination, ib. 4443, 4444——Delay in the business of the Audit-office partly through the insufficiency of the staff, ib. 4552, 4553——Delay in consequence of the heavy accounts owing to the war, ib. 4552.

14. Generally as to the Accounts subject to Audit, and as to Functions of the Board:

Mention of several departments, the accounts of which are not audited by the office; the amount involved is not large, Romilly 4220. 4231–4233, and App. p. 843, 844——Under the head of Miscellaneous Votes, there are somewhat under 100 accounts not audited by the office, Romilly 4220, 4221——Out of the Miscellaneous Estimates and the Revenue Estimates for 1855–56, about 9,000,000*l.* is finally examined in the Audit-office, and about 2,000,000*l.* is not so examined, ib. 4221–4223.

Power of the Treasury to send certain accounts to be audited or reported upon by the Audit Board, Romilly 4224——The large number, and the most important accounts come to the office under Act of Parliament, ib. 4229, 4330——The majority of the accounts sent by the Treasury come monthly to the office, ib. 4270——Most of the accounts that come by Act of Parliament are sent annually, ib. 4271——Considerable quantity of unexpected business sometimes thrown on the office by the Treasury, ib. 4555.

Course of action of the Audit-office from the commencement of the audit of any account, until it is finally closed by being declared before the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Romilly 4235–4240——With regard to those of the Miscellaneous Estimates which are examined by the Audit Board, the accounts themselves are audited independently of the Paymaster-general's account, ib. 4251——The Audit-office do not compare the expenditure with the votes, except where directed by Act of Parliament so to do, ib. 4274——Until the Act of Sir J. Graham, it was not considered that the functions of the office had anything to do with Parliament, ib. 4457——Origin of the Board in the transfer to it from the Exchequer of the functions of auditors of imprests, ib. 4530, 4531.

Report from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 16 April 1851, as to their functions and general mode of proceeding, App. p. 834–838.

Report from the Commissioners of Audit, dated 29 January 1807, relative to the auditing the accounts of General Hewett; definition therein of the general duties of the Board, App. p. 839–842.

See also Army II. 4. Commissariat. Commissariat Chest Account. Exchequer, 8, 9. Fireworks (Celebration of Peace). Foreign Expenditure. Imprests, &c. Old Stores (Navy), 2. Pay-office, 7, 8. Salaries and Allowances. Transfers between Departments. Treasury, 1, 5. Turkish Embassy. Turkish Government (Advance from). Unappropriated Votes. Wellington, Duke of, (Funeral Expenses). Woods and Forests, Office of, 4. Works, Office of.

Authority for Expenditure. See Exchequer. Pay Office. Royal Orders. Treasury.

B.

BALANCES:

1. Inexpediency of large Balances in the hands of the Paymaster-general.
2. Importance of strict Appropriation rather than of small Balances.
3. Unduly large Balances necessary to carry out strict Appropriation in the Pay Office.
4. Means by which Balances may be kept low whilst Appropriation is adhered to.
5. Balances of late Years, and previously to the Consolidation of the Pay Office; doubt as to any great Reduction.
6. Considerable Reduction consequent on the Consolidation.
7. Discrepancy between the Exchequer and Treasury Accounts.
8. Detailed Return as to the Pay Office Balances on 31 March 1856.

1. Inexpediency of large Balances in the hands of the Paymaster-general:

Reference to the Commission appointed by Parliament in 1780 to inquire into the undue accumulation of balances, Anderson 1297, 1298——Extracts from sundry reports of these Commissioners

Report, 1856—continued.

BALANCES—continued.

1. Inexpediency of large Balances in the hands of the Paymaster-general—continued.

Commissioners, showing the strong views expressed therein in favour of a consolidation of balances into one common fund, as now adopted, Anderson 1298, 1299. 1305. 1307——Objections made by the Commissioners of 1780 to the system which then existed in the Pay-offices, ib. 1299.

Witness strongly objects to any large general balance at the control of the Paymaster, Anderson 1556-1563——If the Paymaster were bound to carry out strictly the principle of appropriation, there would be an unduly large balance required, and a consequent waste of public money, Anderson 1563–1576. 2040. 2045. 2168–2183 ; Hoffay 2498. 2502–2507.

Statements in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that by abolishing certain complicated arrangements in the Exchequer, unemployed balances would become available, App. p. 460.

Recommendation in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, that balances should be kept as low as possible, App. p. 512.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in 1854, as to the inexpediency of multiplying balances, App. p. 559.

2. Importance of strict Appropriation rather than of small Balances :

Less evil of an excess of balance than of misappropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2832. 2842–2846——Disadvantage of an increase of balances further adverted to, as nothing in comparison with the importance of the maintenance of the principle of appropriation, ib. 2901.

3. Unduly large Balances necessary to carry out strict Appropriation in the Pay Office :

Very inexpedient accumulation of balances, as formerly, if appropriation be so strictly carried out as advocated by Lord Monteagle, Anderson 1563–1576. 2040. 2045. 2168–2183 ——Waste of the public money, if the Paymaster-general were to be provided with unlimited balances, in order to carry out a strict appropriation, ib. 2168–2171—— Doubt if a million sterling would enable the Paymaster to keep all his balances in credit under a strict appropriation, ib. 2177.

Lord Monteagle's mistaken principle of appropriation involves a very undue accumulation of balances, Hoffay 2498. 2502-2507——There would be no necessity to overdraw any accounts if the Paymaster were allowed to have an unlimited balance, Anderson 3579——Disadvantage in drawing on the Exchequer when the Paymaster has large balances in hand, ib. 3598. 3999.

4. Means by which Balances may be kept low whilst Appropriation is adhered to :

Belief that strict appropriation would not involve the necessity of unusually large balances, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2786. 2804–2811. 2844–2846——As an amendment to the present illegal practice of misappropriation, witness suggests that the Paymaster need have but one common balance, provided that the sums drawn from it are appropriated rightly, ib. 2786. 2788. 2793-2795——Practicability consistently with Exchequer control, of the Paymaster keeping a drawing account with a single balance, ib. 2895, 2896——Further evidence as to the practicability and advantage of a single drawing account, provided the monies paid into it are kept under the heads of the separate services, and there be no excess of issue in any shape, ib. 2900–2906.

Facilities of aid from the Commissariat Chest, and the Civil Contingencies adverted to, as showing that under a strict system of appropriation it would not be necessary for the Paymaster always to keep balances on every separate vote, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3066–3076——Opportunity of the Treasury or Pay-office to obtain Exchequer credits in a few hours, ib. 3066.

5. Balances of late Years, and previously to the Consolidation of the Pay Office : doubt as to any great Reduction :

Statement of the balances of Exchequer credits in the hands of the Paymaster-general at the close of each financial year, from 1850 to 1856, and of the number of heads of accounts to which the balances in each year were applicable, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 576. 706——Credit of 1,465,384 l. to the Paymaster's account on the 31 March 1856, ib. 576. 706——Examination (on the part of the Treasury) showing how far there may have been special reasons for a very large balance in the hands of the Paymaster on 31 March 1856, ib 709-732——Reference to the Exchequer balances of income on the evening of the 31 March, as being entirely applicable to the public dividends, ib. 710–712. 719–723.

Unduly large balance in the hands of the Paymaster in anterior years, as well as in 1856, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 712——Amount of Paymaster's balances in 1854, 1855, and 1856, ib.——Detailed accounts of the unusually large balance on 31 March 1856

BALANCES—continued.

5. Balances of late Years, &c.—continued.

1856, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 712——How far the practice of the Treasury to keep the Paymaster's balance as low as possible on Exchequer credits, ib. 725-727——How far the practice also for the Paymaster's drawing account to be fed from day to day from the cash account of the Exchequer credit account, 728-732.

Statement showing that the amount of balances of Exchequer credits, on the 4 July 1835, and 5 April 1836, before the consolidation of the pay offices, were respectively 533,495*l.* and 412,647*l.*, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2786. 2844-2846——Further reference to particular balances in the hands of the Paymaster for several years, ib. 2847-2849.

Account of the balances in the hands of the Paymaster of the Forces, at the close of quarters in 1835 and 1836, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3106——Also of the balances in the hands of the Treasurer of the Navy, at the close of the same quarters, ib.——Also of the balances in the hands of the Treasurer of the Ordnance, at the close of the same quarters, ib.

Detailed statement of the Paymaster-general's balances, at the close of each day, on all his bank accounts, in the three months dated 30 June 1838; also balances on the accounts of the Paymaster-general of the Forces and of the Treasurer of the Navy, on each day of the corresponding three months of the year 1836, App. p. 829, 830.

6. Considerable Reduction, consequent on the Consolidation:

Much larger accumulation of balances formerly, on account of the great subdivision of accounts, Anderson 1200. 1209. 1214. 1297; and App. p. 507——Impracticability of consolidating balances which are operated upon by different departments, ib. 1482, 1483——The credits now granted to the Paymaster rarely exceed the amount of his daily payments, ib. 1563——In the case of sums paid to the Paymaster's cash account, as by the East India Company, they are not at any time so large as to cause inconvenience, ib. 1767-1776——Balances, respectively of 60,000*l.*, 103,000*l.*, and 64,000*l.* on the hands of the Paymaster at the end of three successive weeks in April 1856, ib. 2172.

Further statement with reference to the reduction of balances consequent upon the consolidation of the Pay-offices; under similar circumstances the whole of the service can now be carried on with quite as little money as was formerly required for one of the great services, such as the navy, Anderson 3652-3658; and App. p. 829, 830.

Statement showing that the average Pay-office balance, at the close of each day in the second quarter of 1838, was only 36,750*l.* for the whole service, Anderson 3652. 3655, 3656——Average daily balance of 101,000*l.* in the hands of the Paymaster of the Forces, for the quarter preceding the consolidation of the Pay-offices in 1836, ib. 3652, 3653——Average daily balance of 52,000*l.*, in the hands of the Treasurer of the Navy, during the same quarter, ib. 3652-3657.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, as to the necessary balances of the Paymaster of Civil Services, occasioned by his numerous separate accounts, App. p. 507, 508.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in 1854, as to present balances being kept as low as possible, App. p. 559.

7. Discrepancy between the Exchequer and Treasury Accounts:

Examination with respect to the relative amounts of the balances of the Exchequer account and the Exchequer credit account at the Banks of England and Ireland, and of the same balances given by the Treasury; probable explanation hereon, as to discrepancies in the Treasury account, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 340-380——Accuracy in the balances of the Exchequer account, the sums being vouched for by the actual certificates of the Bank, ib. 353. 355. 358. 362-366.

Different system of account adverted to, in explanation of the difference between the Exchequer and Treasury balances of income and expenditure, Anderson 1820-1822.

8. Detailed Return as to the Pay-office Balances on 31 March 1856:

Amount of the cash balances to the credit of the several votes of Parliament, and other accounts in the Paymaster-general's books on 31 March 1856; total of 1,643,014*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*, between the overdrawn amounts and the amounts in credit, App. p. 803-806.

See also Appropriation. Exchequer. Pay Office. Unexpended Balances.

Bank of England. Practice, as regards receipt, &c., when revenue payments are made to the Bank, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 13, 14. 469-487——Detailed accounts received by witness from the Bank, ib. 3125——Objection made by witness, in 1846, against an endeavour of the Bank of England to consolidate the accounts; conformity of the Bank to witness's views, ib. 3125. 3194. 3196; and App. p. 683——Further evidence with reference to the detailed account kept by the Bank, in the case of Exchequer credits; justification of the requirements of the Exchequer in this matter, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3193-3199.

Report, 1856—continued.

Bank of England—continued.

Necessary exemption by Parliament of the Bank from the provisions of the Act of Will. 4, in regard to Loans and Ways and Means Acts, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3241.

The aggregate balances on the Pay-office accounts are agreed daily with the balance in the Bank of England, Anderson 3637, 3638.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, of the mode adopted by the Exchequer in the daily settlement with the Bank, App. p. 457——Resolution in the Report that the present system pursued in the daily settlement of the Exchequer with the Bank, is unfit to be continued, ib.——Recommendation also in the Report that all revenues should be paid directly to the Bank, ib. 459—— Statement in the Report as to the great security that will be derived by the payment of all public monies into the Bank; the manner of receipt will also be simplified thereby, ib. 469.

Regulation in Treasury Minute of September 1834 as to the payment to the Bank of England of monies remaining in the Exchequer on 11 October 1834, App. p. 471, 472.

Directions in Treasury Minute of 2 March 1855, with respect to daily and weekly returns by the Bank as to transfer to the Exchequer account, App. p. 583–586.

Letter from Mr. Marshall, chief cashier of the Bank, to Sir C. E. Trevelyan, dated 8 February 1849, relative to a proposed alteration in the mode of managing the bank business, App. p. 830, 831.

See also Acquittance (Exchequer). Exchequer Bills, 2. Receipts (Exchequer).

Bathurst, Henry Thomas Dundas. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Inspects the accounts of the departments of Woods and Forests, and of Works and Public Buildings on behalf of the Board of Audit, 4304——There has been much difficulty in procuring the necessary information on which to base an audit of these accounts, 4305——The information required in the case of the Board of Works consists of the want of authorities for expenditure, and of the vouchers or bills of particulars and receipts, 4306–4316. 4327–4332. 4359–4362——The Treasury consider that an audit inspection was unnecessary in the case of certain work carried out by, and already examined in the Department of Works since 1851; 4309–4316. 4330–4336. 4351, 4352.

The last year in which the Woods and Forests' accounts was finally audited was the year ending 31 March 1848; 4317–4326. 4343——The accounts for each year have been subjected to examination in detail, though not to a final audit, 4318. 4320. 4347. 4353–4358——There has been no difficulty with respect to the audit of charges upon the land revenue, 4323, 4324. 4330, 4331——The want of vouchers refers more especially to the period between 1848 and 1851; 4325. 4328, 4329. 4339. 4363–4365.

The authority for payments is the Treasury warrant or letter sanctioning certain expenditure; this authority is not questioned by the Audit Board, but its production is deemed necessary, 4327. 4337–4342——Since 1851 the Board of Works has been a separate department, and it is for this department only that bills of particulars are wanted, 4327–4329. 4361, 4362——The vouchers previously to 1851 are likely for the most part to be produced, 4344–4346——The delay in not finally auditing the accounts for later years is a consequence of the earlier accounts not being audited, and of the balances not being brought forward, 4347–4349. 4359. 4363–4365.

Book-keeping. See Accounts.

Bowring, Dr. Dr. Bowring eventually came to the conclusion that the system of Exchequer credits had not answered his expectations, Anderson 2264.

British Museum. Statement as to the Paymaster's account of the "British Museum" having been overdrawn in May and June 1852, Anderson 3500.

Brooksbank, The late Mr. With regard to the Treasury accounts as conducted till recently, witness is surprised at Mr. Anderson's objection to a system carried out for so long a period by so able and so trustworthy a public servant as Mr. Brooksbank, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3292.

As explanatory of the general views of Mr. Brooksbank, witness delivers a letter from him to Mr. Lichfield, senior clerk of the financial department of the Treasury, dated 29 January 1849, Anderson 3660, and App. p. 832, 833——The views of Mr. Brooksbank entirely coincides with those of witness in favour of simple accounts in the Pay-office, and of taking payments instead of credits as the basis of accounts, Anderson 4155–4158. 4162–4164.

Passage in the letter to Mr. Litchfield, "that either the Exchequer should be united to the Pay-office or the Pay-office to the Exchequer, and that the basis of our accounts should be again, as formerly, payments and not credits," App. p. 832.

C.

Camden, Lord. Reference to the resignation by Lord Camden of a large amount of fees to which he was entitled as Teller of the Exchequer; this was a very different case from a hereditary pension, Anderson 1939-1949.

Campbell, Lord, Salary of. Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 24 June 1850, as to irregularity in payment of Lord Campbell's salary, App. p. 684.

Cash Account (Pay-office). See Pay-office, I. 4, II. 5.

Cashel and Shillelagh Union (Ireland). Minute of the Comptroller of the Exchequer, dated 14 January 1851, as to erroneous repayment by treasurer of Cashel and Shillelagh Union, App. p. 687.

Census. Statement as to the payments and Exchequer credits in regard to the Paymasters' account of "census of the population," in April, May and June 1852, Anderson 3506–3510.

Chancery, Court of. Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts as to salaries and expenses are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Charity Commission. Paper showing that the accounts of the Commission are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Cheques. Statement in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848 with regard to the issuing of cheques by the Paymaster-general; security afforded; App. p. 513——Recommendation in the Minute that cheques never be signed or counter-signed, ib.

Chinese War. Payments made to the East India Company with reference to the China war; unsettled claim of Government hereon, Anderson 1527–1530.

Civil Contingencies. Account showing that the Civil Contingencies have since 1830 diminished from what was an average of 230,000 l. a year to 100,000 l. a year, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 229——Belief that very regularly the whole of the Civil Contingencies vote has been drawn out of the Exchequer, ib. 751, 752——Considerable reduction of late years in the vote for Civil Contingencies, ib. 751. 761.

Doubt as to what has become of the surplus over the expenditure in recent years; belief that no surplus or balance has been left in the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 753–762——If there had been a saving on the vote in any year, the estimate for the following year should have been reduced by a similar amount, ib. 755, 760.

The Civil Contingencies vote includes final payments, and is partly made up of advances and repayments, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 765-767. 809-815. 821, 822. 841——It is a very convenient and necessary part of the financial service of the country, ib. 765. 812–814. 835–838. 842–845——Inexpediency of any large reduction of the vote, ib. 809-817. 835-845——Belief that the Civil Contingencies' account as kept at the Treasury is a very strict and accurate one, ib. 818. 825, 826——Approval of an augmentation of the vote, if necessary, for the enforcement of strict appropriation, ib. 846.

Modes of application of the Civil Contingencies fund, Anderson 1138. 1161. 1163——Use of the fund for services for which advances may be required, ib. 1138——Accumulation of 100,000 l. in the Exchequer as unissued out of Civil Contingencies on account of savings on the vote of late years, ib. 1139–1156——Issue out of the fund to the Paymaster in order to cover certain charges under-estimated, ib. 1149–1152——Power of the Treasury to dispose of the surplus of the Civil Contingencies as they think fit, all final charges on the fund being accounted for to Parliament, ib. 1157–1170——The vote is entirely at the disposal of the Treasury, upon requisitions for various services, ib. 2154, 2155.

Explanatory statement (with reference to former evidence, Q. 751), to the effect that at the close of the year 1855-56, there was a sum of 100,000 l. in the Exchequer to the credit of the Civil Contingencies vote, the same being a balance from former years, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2734, and App. p. 770——Legitimacy of advances from the Civil Contingences for any civil expense if coming within the scope of the Exchequer credit, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3101–3105.

Remedy of the Exchequer if excesses were charged on the Civil Contingencies, Anderson 3573. 3575. 3583.

Account of the sum remaining in the Exchequer, &c. on 31 March 1856, on account of Civil Contingencies, App. p. 815.

Doubt as to any necessity for a larger vote for Civil Contingencies if placed under the supervision of the Audit Board, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 765——Impression that the account is not under the control of the Board of Audit, but is subject entirely to the Treasury, ib. 819–830——The Civil Contingencies, as separate accounts, are not audited at the Audit Office, Romilly 4234, 4476——Recommendation that the system of audit be extended to the Civil Contingencies and the whole of the Miscellaneous Estimates, Right

Report, 1856—continued.

Civil Contingencies—continued.

Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 819 et seq.; Anderson 1390–1393. 1419–1430. 2067–2081. 2084. 3589–3595; Romilly 4394–4399.

Return showing that of an unissued sum of 100,000 l. on 31 March 1856, 60,000 l. has since been surrendered as savings, App. p. 811.

See also Balances, 4.

Civil List. Explanation as to the Civil List expenditure for the last year having amounted to 396,457 l. 10 s., whereas the amount of the Parliamentary grant is only 385,000 l. Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 922–926——Reference to the power of Her Majesty under the Civil List Act, to grant pensions every year to the amount of 1,200 l., ib. 923–925——Some savings from former years had been allowed to remain in the Exchequer, ib. 926——Not one farthing has been unduly issued from the Exchequer, ib.

Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 23 March 1842, as to the Civil List issues for the quarter differing from the charge, App. p. 674.

Letter from the Comptroller-general to Sir A. Y. Spearman, dated 18 December 1850, as to the form of warrant for Civil List savings, App. p. 685, 686.

Civil Service Commission. Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 845.

Civil Services. Expediency of an appropriation audit as regards the whole of the civil Services, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 819 et seq.; Anderson 1390–1393. 1419–1430. 2067–2081. 2084; Romilly 4394–4399——The system of audit recommended by witness in regard to the civil service is similar to that which for more than twenty years has worked well and safely in the case of the naval and military services, Anderson 3589–3595.

Transfer by the Treasury to the Exchequer of 860,000 l. as the surplus not required for civil services within the last two years, Anderson 1130, 1131——Necessary reliance hitherto upon the fidelity of the Treasury in regard to the repayment of the surplus of civil votes to the Exchequer, ib. 1135, 1136——Practice to apply money for the civil services to the particular service for which voted, ib. 1996–1998.

The issues on the civil services have always been kept distinct in the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3056.

See also Appropriation. Exchequer. Miscellaneous Services. Pay Office. Treasury. Unexpended Balances.

Coast Guard. Return showing the amount of each vote for the years ending 31 March 1855 and 1856, the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and the date when drawn by the accountants from the Exchequer account, showing also the payment of certain consequent amounts into the Exchequer account, under the same heads of revenue, App. p. 631, 632.

Collection of Revenue. Under the new system a vote is taken for the expense of collection, and the payment out of the gross revenue is in the nature of an advance, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 16–18. 39——Inconvenience and expense of local remittances to London, and then of remittances back again to cover the local expenditure, ib. 16. 33–40——This arrangement takes place by transfer and not by actual issue of money, ib. 16——The system now adopted, though a complicated one, and involving three operations instead of one, comes very near the result of paying the gross amount into the Exchequer, and paying out by vote, ib. 16, 17. 39.

Paper delivered in by Lord Monteagle relative to votes for Revenue departments in 1855 and 1856, showing the amount of each vote, the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and the dates when drawn by the accountants from the Exchequer account; also the date and amount of repayment immediately succeeding the issue, Ev. p. 5, 6.

Approval of the principle that the expenses of the revenue be the subject of estimate, and of Parliamentary control, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 37. 40——The system of local payments would seem, under the Act of 1854, to be dispensed with, but such is not the case, nor was such the intention of the Act, ib. 39. 52–54——Check exercised by the Treasury upon any excess of the payments out of gross revenue, over the sum voted by Parliament for expense of collection, ib. 190–206——Control by Parliamentary vote in regard to the payment of expenses of collection, ib. 18. 39. 191–205.

Statement, that all the charges for the collection and management of the revenue are voted, Anderson 1456——With regard to advances by collectors of revenue, they are made specifically under the Act, ib. 1765, 1766.

Explanation as to the remarks in the Exchequer Memorandum of 1854, relative to increased Exchequer control, with reference to the charges for collection of revenue, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2773——The system of defraying the charges of collection has, in some respects, made the Exchequer a perfect farce and a nullity, ib. 2773.

Memorandum by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, dated 1 February 1853, on the

Report, 1856—continued.

Collection of Revenue—continued.

the mode of providing for the expenses of the collection of the revenue, App. p. 565–570——Suggestions in this Memorandum as to the detailed course to be adopted for the payment of the expenses of collection, ib. 569.

Direction in Treasury Minute of 22 August 1854, that charges of collection be paid as before, out of the revenue collected on the spot, App. p. 578——Directions in this minute, that payments be made by the revenue departments, either at head quarters, or through their local collectors, ib.

See also Drawbacks. Gross Revenue.

Colonial Expenditure. See Foreign Expenditure.

Commissariat. Authority given by the Treasury, without direct Parliamentary sanction for the transfer of the Commissariat Accounts to the local audit at the War department, Anderson 2091–2094——This transfer was in consequence of the consolidation of the Commissariat with the War department, ib. 2092. 2115, 2116. 2137, 2138.

Explanatory statement as to the control now exercised by the Audit Board in the matter of the Commissariat accounts; opinion that it cannot be improved or made more independent of the War-office, Anderson 2115–2136——Difficulty in letting the War-office clerks who conduct the audit, be responsible and subordinate to the Audit Board, instead of to the War Minister, ib. 2117–2128——The Audit Board have their officers in the War department, watching from day to day the preparation of the accounts, ib. 2119. 2122. 2127–2130——The consolidation of the Commissariat with the War department, which led to a transfer of audit, was made under pressure from Parliament, ib. 2137, 2138.

Particulars as to the accounts of the Commissariat and other services having been transferred by recent arrangement from the detailed audit at the Audit-office, to that at the War-office, Vine 3328–3330. 3788–3822——Equally effective audit of the Commissariat accounts at the War-office as when the audit took place at the Audit-office, ib. 3328. 3330. 3334–3336——Principle followed in transferring the audit of the Commissariat accounts to the War-office, ib. 3330. 3360.

The detailed examination of the cheques drawn for the payment of the Commissariat services takes place at the War-office instead of at the Audit Board, the latter merely seeing that there is proper authority for the several payments, Vine 3352–3367——Nature of the payments which have been transferred to the detailed audit at the War-office, ib. 3788–3790——Doubt as to there having been any inconvenience through the previous audit at the Audit-office, ib. 3805–3808——Equal control of the Audit Board as in the case of the army and navy accounts, ib. 4060.

With regard to the Commissariat expenditure, the transfer of the detailed audit to the War department is in accordance with the entire practice of the army audit, Romilly 4377, 4378. 4463–4466——The detailed audit of the Commissariat service may in fact now be dealt with in the same way as the audit of any other vote taken by the Secretary of State for War, ib. 4385——Doubt as to any quicker audit of the accounts since the transfer to the War department, ib. 4556–4560.

Excess of issue on the Commissariat vote for 1847–48, Hoffay 2514.

There is a large deficit on the Commissariat account for 1854–55, Anderson 4196.

See also Accounts, 1. Army. Commissariat Chest Account.

Commissariat Chest Account. Public usefulness of this account, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 766. 812–814——Analogy between it and the Civil Contingencies as regards advances and repayments, ib. 766——Alternative as regards separate balances, if the Commissariat Chest Account were overdrawn; the latter contingency, however, should be guarded against, ib. 3070–3075.

The transfer of large sums to the Commissariat Chests for foreign expenditure is like a transfer to a sub-exchequer, and cannot always be appropriated at the time of issue, Anderson 1022. 1047. 1095——Control of the Audit Board over the accounts, ib. 1394, 1395——System of net profit or loss as regards bills drawn on the account, ib. 1518–1520——Invariable payments to the Exchequer of the premiums on bills drawn for the Commissariat supply abroad, ib. 1519.

Practice generally in regard to the allocation and repayment of the monies advanced out of the Commissariat Chest fund, Anderson 1749, 1750——Necessary resort to the army grants, in order to provide funds to meet, from day to day, the drafts drawn upon the fund from abroad, ib. 1749, 1750——Question as to the advantage of making the departments pay up in advance to the Commissariat account, instead of at the close of the month, ib. 1752–1761.

Explanation of the course of examination by the Audit-office with regard to the Commissariat Chest account, Vine 3337–3353. 3359–3367——The Commissariat Chest is merely a banking account, consisting of receipts and payments on account of other services, ib. 3337–3342——Separation, at the Audit-office, of the cheques drawn by each department, and subsequent claim of the amount from the department; considerable labour involved therein, Vine 3342-3351——The account embraces the whole of the banking abroad, and amounts to about 11,000,000 l., ib. 3789.

Report, 1856—continued.

Commissariat Chest Account—continued.

The whole of the extraordinary expenses of the war are conducted through the Commissariat Chest account, Anderson 4188——The rate of credit for 1855-56 will mainly be required for excess in the Commissariat account, ib. 4188, 4189. 4195, 4196.

Regulations in Treasury Minute of August 1836 relative to the payment of Commissariat advances, App. p. 495.

Directions in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848 as to the authorities for payment of Commissariat effective and non-effective services, App. p. 516——Statement in this Minute as to the nature of the Commissariat Chest account, ib. 516——Statement in the Minute as to the available fund at the credit of the Chest, ib. 517, 518——Directions in the Minute as to the acceptance of Treasury bills drawn by officers in charge of the Commissariat, ib. 518.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in 1854 as to the regulation of the Chest account, and the payment for services in the colonies, App. p. 553-556.

Sundry papers containing detailed information relative to the account, App. p. 589-613——Estimate of the probable state of the account at home and abroad, on the 31 March 1841, ib. 591——Treasury Minute, dated 3 October 1845, directing the preparation of an account, showing all the sums paid into or out of the Commissariat Chest in 1846-47, and of the assets and liabilities of the Chest at the close of the year, ib. 592, 593——Report of the Commissioners of Audit, dated 15 December 1848, transmitting the account in question, ib. 594——Treasury Minute, 29 December 1848, approving of the amended account of the transactions of the Commissariat Chest for the year 1846-47, ib. 595.

Extract from the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, for the government of the office of Her Majesty's Paymaster-general, prescribing an arrangement for the more speedy repayment of the advances made out of the Commissariat Chests, App. p. 595.

Account showing all the sums which have been received into the Chest, and which have been paid out of the same, between the 1 April 1846 and 31 March 1847, App. p. 596-603.

An Account showing the liabilities and assets of the Chest, on the 31 March 1847, App. p. 604, 605.

Explanatory statement of the cash balance in the Chest, on 31 March 1847, App. p. 606, 607.

Royal Warrants, dated 16 June 1849, for the regulation of the account, App. p. 609.

Memorandum by Sir C. Trevelyan, dated 5 February 1851, with remarks upon it, dated 14 June 1854, App. p. 609-611.

Note and Memorandum by Mr. Anderson, in July 1851, respecting the balances of the Account, App. p. 612——Draft of Bill (14 Vict. 1851) for limiting and regulating the fund, App. p. 613.

See also Balances, 4. Convict Service. East India Company. Foreign Expenditure. Imprests, &c.

Commutation of Pensions. See Redemption of Pensions.

Comptroller-general of the Exchequer. See Exchequer. Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord (Analysis of his Evidence).

Consolidated Fund. A charge on the Consolidated Fund secures only a knowledge of the transaction, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 439——Issue of money for the Consolidated Fund charges on the authority of the Act under which the grants are made, Anderson 942——Sundry charges to which money paid into the Consolidated Fund is applicable, ib. 947.

Exhaustion on the last day of each quarter of the Exhequer with reference to the Consolidated Fund charge adverted to, as showing the necessity of putting the Paymaster in a condition to meet the expenditure of the first 10 or 14 days of the ensuing quarter, Anderson 948-956——Unless such provision were made there would be a liability of stoppage of payment, ib. 952.

Practice, as first adopted in the year 1855-56, to pass all public monies into the Consolidated Fund, Anderson 957-960. 963. 1013, 1014——The Consolidated Fund charges are permanent, ib. 966——Duty of the Comptroller-general to see that the issues for Consolidated Fund services are authorized by Act of Parliament, ib. 998, 999. 1007.

Question at issue between witness and the Treasury, as to the right to suspend the payment of charges in Treasury warrants on the Consolidated Fund, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2936——There are many charges on the Fund which witness has struck off, or the payment of which he has suspended, ib. 2936, 2937.

Statement

Report, 1856—continued.

Consolidated Fund—continued.

Statement showing the inacuracy of Mr. Anderson's evidence (Q. 948, 952) as to the exhaustion of the Consolidated Fund at the end of the quarter; large surplus balances on the fund at the end of 13 different quarters in the years 1847–1853, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3001–3010——Possible injury to the public credit, through the statement of Mr. Anderson, as to the necessity of provision at the end of the quarter, and the alternative otherwise, ib. 3001–3010.

Custom, generally, in paying the Consolidated Fund charges, to pay out of the general balance, and to ask for special credits as required, Anderson 3391——Particulars as to the amount and dates of payments in the second quarter of 1852, under the several classes and services embraced in the Consolidated Fund charges, as compared with the amount and date of issue from the Exchequer, ib. 3434, et seq.——Issue at this period of Ways and Means Bills, there having been very little money in the Exchequer, ib. 3438——Statement as to the miscellaneous charges paid out of the Consolidated Fund for 1852; the first payment was on the 6th April, and the Exchequer credit on the 28th April, ib. 3442–3447.

Correction of former evidence (Q. 3438), that the want of money in the Exchequer was the reason of the delay in April 1852, in obtaining Exchequer credits for certain consolidated services and civil services; real cause of such delay in the fact of the Paymaster having a considerable balance in hand, Anderson 4108——Unusually large issue to the Pay-office of Consolidated Fund charges at the close of the first quarter in 1852, ib. 4115——No issue from the Consolidated Fund for the quarter can take place before the 5th of the month, ib. 4116.

Remarks by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, in 1853, as to the necessity of a revision of services charged on the Consolidated Fund, App. p. 750.

See also Consolidated Fund Bills. Miscellaneous Services. Treasury.

Consolidated Fund Bills. Consideration of the nature of the check on the part of the Exchequer, upon the issue of Consolidated Fund Bills by the Treasury, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3213, et seq.——Consolidated Fund Bills are, in fact, only deficiency bills, charged upon the quarter next ensuing, and create but a temporary debt, ib. 3214, 3215——Check upon the issue of Consolidated Fund Bills, inasmuch as they constitute charges on the revenue of the quarter next ensuing, ib. 3218–3223. 3243. 3248. 3266. 3267.

Examination in disapproval of the power of creation by Government of a funded debt, by exchanging the Consolidated Fund Bills held by the Commissioners of Savings Banks for Consols, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3222–3230. 3242, et seq.——Witness, as Comptroller-general, had no authority in this matter, but he has in common with many others strongly objected to the practice, ib. 3225–3234. 3242. 3254–3258——The creation of debt by the issue of Consolidated Fund Bills should only take place, if at all, under proper restriction, and in case of exigencies, ib. 3235, 3236. 3278–3283——Less objection to the funding of the ordinary Supply Exchequer Bills than of the Consolidated Fund Bills, ib. 3246–3249.

Consolidated Fund Warrant:

1. Evidence in strong disapproval of the discontinuance of the Warrant, as furnished to the Exchequer.
2. Evidence explanatory of its Discontinuance by the Treasury.
3. Official Correspondence on the subject.

1. Evidence in strong disapproval of the discontinuance of the Warrant, as furnished to the Exchequer:

Comments on the act of the Treasury in withholding from witness the information contained in the quarterly warrant for charges on the Consolidated Fund, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 624–626. 676–686——Importance of the power of issuing deficiency bills adverted to in connexion with the withdrawal of the check formerly exercised by witness in regard to the issue warrant, ib. 676——Examination as to the usefulness of the check in question, ib. 678–682.

Intention of the Exchequer Act to vest this check in witness, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 683–686——Copy of the former warrant, before the change made on the 5th July 1854, for the issue of Deficiency Bills, ib. 705——Copy of the new warrant, after the change on the 10th October 1854, ib.——Comments on the incompleteness of the account now rendered through the change in the warrant, ib. 705, 706——Account, as furnished by the comptroller-general, of the income of, and charge upon the Consolidated Fund, on the quarter ended 31 March 1855, and 31 March 1856; incompleteness since the discontinuance of the warrant, ib.

Discontinuance of the Deficiency Bill Warrant specially adverted to as an irregularity attempted in recent years, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3078.

Report, 1856—continued.

Consolidated Fund Warrant—continued.

2. Evidence Explanatory of its Discontinuance by the Treasury:

Explanatory statement with reference to the discontinuance by the Treasury of the quarterly, or Consolidated Fund Warrant, as formerly furnished to the Exchequer, Anderson 2218–2226——Details entered into in the document without its affording additional information, or being of any use to the Comptroller-general, ib. 2218–2225——Considerable office labour, and waste of public time in the preparation of this document, ib. 2218. 2225—— The warrant was not discontinued till the Treasury had duly considered and decided against Lord Monteagle's views as to its practical utility, ib. 2218.

3. Official Correspondence on the subject:

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury in 1854–55, with respect to the discontinuance of the warrant, and its necessity for Exchequer control, App. p. 723–741.

Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 7 August 1854, setting forth the legal authority for the furnishing of the warrant, and adducing sundry precedents on the subject, as showing that the obligation to supply the information was never before questioned, App. p. 724, 725——Remarks in this letter on the risk and inconvenience of discontinuing the warrant, ib. 725.

Letter from the Treasury, dated 29th August 1854, in reply to the foregoing, requesting further proof of the inconvenience of the warrant, before its final discontinuance, App. p. 725.

Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 6 September 1854, referring further to the obligation on the Treasury to furnish the warrant, and containing sundry arguments in proof of the usefulness of the document, and the inexpediency of its discontinuance, App. p. 726–728.

Reference in the foregoing letter to the propriety of certain amendments in the practice in regard to the warrant, App. p. 726.

Minute by the Comptroller-general, dated 20 October 1854, relative to the suspension of issues as a consequence of the discontinuance of the Consolidated Fund Warrant, App. p. 728, 729——Letter from the Comptroller to the Treasury, dated 27 October 1854, in explanation and justification of the course taken by him in delaying to grant certain issues directed by the Treasury, ib. 729, 730.

Letter from the Treasury to the Comptroller, dated 2 November 1854, and reply thereto, dated 3 November 1854, upon the question whether the warrant has preceded or followed the issue of the Exchequer credit, App. p. 730, 731——Complaint in the Treasury letter of 2 November, of unnecessary delay on the part of the Exchequer in making some issues, and explanation in the Exchequer letter of 3 November, to the effect that there was no delay whatever in the matter, ib.

Treasury Minute of 29 December 1854, directing the discontinuance of the warrant, and assigning reasons for such course, App. p. 731, 732.

Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 30 December, reviewing the course taken by the latter, denying their authority to discontinue the warrant, and repeating arguments in proof of the usefulness of the document to the Exchequer, App. p. 733–735.

Suggestions by the Comptroller-general for the alteration and improvement of the practice in regard to the warrant to be furnished to the Exchequer, App. p. 736, 737.

Treasury Minute of 27 February 1855, commenting on the course adopted by the Comptroller-general, in endeavouring to exercise a control over the Treasury, on the ground, more especially, of usage and precedent, App. p. 737, 738——Further reasons adduced in this Minute in support of the discontinuance of the warrant, ib.

Letter, in conclusion of the correspondence, from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 20 March 1855, defending the exercise of Exchequer control, as a guard against the possibility of abuse or negligence on the part of the Treasury, App. p. 739–741——Justification, in the foregoing letter, of the adherence to usage and precedent in the matter of the warrant in question, ib.

See also Deficiency Bills.

Consolidation of Pay Offices. See Pay Office, I. 5, II. 6.

Constabulary, Ireland. Correspondence between the Comptroller of the Exchequer and the Treasury, in 1851, in respect to an issue for constabulary expenses, Ireland, App. p. 689, 690.

Control. General definition of the duties of control vested in the Comptroller-general, in regard to the receipt and issue of public money, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 6–8. 154–157. 207–209——The Comptroller-general controls merely the amount of issues as appropriated appropriated by Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 603. 606. 617–619. 931 et seq. ——Main importance of Parliamentary control over the expenditure of the public monies, ib. 548–558. 586–608.

Report, 1856—continued.

Control—continued.

Witness produces a long list of specific cases of Exchequer control over the Treasury, and gives explanations thereon, as showing his exercise of the principle of Parliamentary appropriation, Right Hon Lord Monteagle, 860 et seq; and App. p. 648 et seq. —— Essential check interposed by witness in 1841, and on subsequent occasions, in not issuing, save for the service of the time laid down in the Appropriation Acts, ib. 861 et seq.——Above 200 instances of control are included in the cases alluded to in 1841 and 1852, ib. 888. 928——By an examination of the list produced by witness the Committee can best judge of the most important instances of control, ib. 889. 921. 927–930 ——The most important check exercised by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer is in the way of prevention, ib. 929.

Witness really sees no practical check which is attained by the Exchequer, Anderson 1019. 1030–1046——A concurrent audit and the Treasury check afford adequate security, without the Exchequer control, Anderson 1020. 1048 et seq.; 1113–1116. 1309 et seq., 2071–2081. 4159 et seq.; Hoffay 2727–2733——Inoperativeness of the Exchequer control, save in special cases, Anderson 1030–1046; Hoffay 2707, 2708——Statement hereon by Sir C. Trevelyan, in 1848, App. p. 509, 510——All estimates must be sanctioned by the Treasury before they are submitted to the House, Anderson 1175. 1179–1181. 2196. 2202, 2203——Sole control of the Executive Government over the revenue until it reaches the Exchequer, ib. 1954–1962—— Effective and complete Exchequer control can only be attained by retrograde legislation, ib. 2038–2040——Witness concurs with Lord Monteagle that there should be an improved control of public monies, but differs from him as to the mode of improvement, ib. 2041, 2042.

Nullity to a certain extent of the Exchequer, if the practices of the Pay-office be sanctioned by Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2773. 2833–2841——In a written rather than a oral shape witness could best elucidate his opinions as to best means of controlling the payment of the public monies, ib. 3120. 3128——Argument that the advantages derivable from Exchequer control far outweigh the advantages that would result from the abolition of the Exchequer and the simplification of accounts, and possible economy consequent thereon, ib. 3284–3286.

Importance of a check through an independent body in the case of all particular directions laid down by Parliament, Romilly 4389. 4393. 4407. 4431.

Definition of the functions of the Exchequer as laid down in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in October 1831, App. p. 455 et seq.——Statement in the Report as to the present practice of control exercised over the application of public money, ib. 461.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan in 1848 that a correct system of accounts, and not a multiplicity of checks, is the real security, App. p. 510.

Copy of Lord Monteagle's memorandum of 1854; strong exceptions taken therein to the practice of the Pay-office as inconsistent with the control vested by the Legislature in the Comptroller-general over the issue and appropriation of the public monies, App. p. 536–552.

Remarks by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson in 1853 as to the inconsistent regulations in the present system of financial control of the expenditure of departments, App. p. 570.

Comments in Treasury Minute of 27 February 1855 upon the course adopted by the Comptroller of the Exchequer in endeavouring to control the Treasury in the matter of the Consolidated Fund Warrant, App. p. 737, 738.

Justification by the Comptroller-general, in letter to the Treasury of 20 March 1855, of the exercise of Exchequer control as a guard against the possibility of abuse or negligence on the part of the Treasury, App. p. 739–741.

See also Accounts. Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92. Appropriation, I. 3, II. 3. Audit. Collection of Revenue. Consolidated Fund Bills. Creation of Debt. Deficiency Bills. Departments. Excess of Grants. Exchequer. Exchequer Bills. Finance Accounts. Gross Revenue. Individual Control. Instrument of Appointment. Issues (Exchequer). Old Stores (Navy). Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Premiums on Exchequer Bills. Publicity. Receivers-general. Salaries and Allowances. Redemption of Pensions. Royal Orders. Superannuations and Pensions. Transfers between Departments. Treasury. Turkish Government (Advance from). Unappropriated Votes. Unexpended Balances. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses). Woods and Forests, Office of. Works, Office of.

Convict Service. Explanation required in regard to the transfer on 28 and 29 March last of 364,384 l. 11 s. from the Exchequer account to the Paymaster's account for the convict service, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 714. 724–729.

Report, 1856—continued.

Convict Service—continued.

Explanation as to the large issue by the Exchequer in March 1857 having been required, in order to repay advances out of the Commissariat Chest for convict services, Anderson 1288–1291.

Payments and credits in 1852 under the head of "Transportation of Convicts;" explanation as to the account having been overdrawn in consequence of transfers to the Navy, Anderson 3483–3488.

Further explanation also as to the sum of 340,000 l. having been drawn on 31 March 1856 to make a payment to the Commissariat Chest for advances made abroad for the expense of convicts in the colonies, Anderson 3489–3495.

Co-operation. Earnestness and co-operation necessary on the part of the Treasury and the Exchequer as a means of preventing misappropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3090——Advantage of co-operation between the Exchequer and the Audit Office, ib. 3122——Main importance of co-operation between the Treasury and the Exchequer, ib. 3123.

Courts of Justice. See Law and Justice.

Cowper, Lord (Redemption of Pensions). See Redemption of Pensions, 2. 3.

Creation of Debt. Belief that the Parliament or the public would never tolerate an uncontrolled power in the executive government to create debt, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3212. 3230. 3237——Considerable danger of power in the executive to sell out savings bank stock to purchase Exchequer Bills, and then to convert those bills into funded debt, ib. 3222–3230. 3242 et seq. 3281–3283——Evidence condemnatory of the power of the Government, without the previous sanction of Parliament, to fund Consolidated Fund Bills, ib. 3225 et seq.——Either by the issue of Exchequer Bills, or the creation of stock, Government should not have uncontrolled power to raise money, ib. 3250 et seq.——Improvements if the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, s. 50, were amended so as to limit the power of issuing bills to the issue of ordinary supply bills, ib. 3257–3278.

See also Consolidated Fund Bills.

Credits. See Accounts, III. Balances. Bowring, Dr. Brooksbank, the late Mr. Exchequer. France. Issues (Exchequer). Pay-office, I. 1. 2.; II. 1. 2. 3. 4. Transfers (Exchequer).

Crown Lands. See Woods and Forests, Office of.

Custody of Public Monies. Function of the Exchequer in regard to what is termed the safe custody of the public monies, Anderson 995–1000.

Custom House, Liverpool. Payment of 175,000 l. out of gross revenue for custom-house buildings in Liverpool, adverted to as a payment which should have had direct Parliamentary sanction, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 142–144.

Customs. Evidence of Mr. Beaumont, as set forth in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, showing the fiction by which payment of the taxes to the Exchequer is made, and exhibiting in detail the manner in which the business is carried on, App. p. 457 et seq.

Return showing the gross income of the customs, distinguishing the total sums received, the sums paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purpose for which paid, and the authority for such payment, and the net sum paid into the Exchequer for the years 1854–55 and 1855–56, App. p. 623.

Return showing the amount of each vote for the years ending March 1855 and 1856, for salaries, &c., the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and date when drawn by the accountant from the Exchequer account, showing also the payment of certain consequent amounts into the Exchequer account under the same heads of revenue, App. p. 631, 632.

D.

Daily Application to Exchequer. The form of daily application must still be continued supposing the Exchequer to be abolished, Anderson 1670.——See also Pay-office, II. 1.

Debt. See Creation of Debt.

Deficiency Bills. Receipt at times by the Exchequer in the shape of loans from the Bank of England on deficiency bills, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 620——Object of the issue of deficiency bills, 620, 621.

Explanation of the practice of account formerly in settling the amount of deficiency bills that would be required; joint action of the Exchequer and the Treasury, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 621, 622. 676–686——Change of practice in 1854 whereby, contrary to witness's remonstances, now repeated, his check in regard to the amount of deficiency bills bills was entirely withdrawn, and the matter left to the sole arbitrament of the Treasury, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 623-626. 676-686——The abolition of witness's control was contrary to all former precedent and usage, ib. 625. 683——Opportunities of witness, independently of the Treasury, for knowing the amount of the charges on the Consolidated Fund, in respect of which deficiency bills may be issued, ib. 679, 680.

Report, 1856—continued.

Deficiency Bills—continued.

Practice to exhaust the Exchequer on the last day of each quarter with reference to the Consolidated Fund charge; consequent issue necessarily of deficiency bills, Anderson 948-956——Advantage of a large balance at the Exchequer account as saving the interest on deficiency bills, ib. 1557.

Evidence in explanation of the discontinuance of the Consolidated Fund warrant, furnished till lately to the Exchequer, Anderson 2218-2226——Authority of the Treasury to issue deficiency bills without reference to the Comptroller of the Exchequer, ib. 2218. 2226.

Number of occasions on which deficiency bills have been issued at the end of the quarter in past years; on thirteen occasions, since 1846, they have not been required, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3001-3009——Circumstance of witness signing deficiency bills, though not cognizant of the state of the quarterly deficiency, ib. 3208-3211——Doubt whether the present mode of issuing deficiency bills to the Bank is in conformity with the law, ib. 3210——Check upon the undue issue of deficiency bills, inasmuch as they constitute charges on the revenue of the ensuing quarter, ib. 3268.

Correspondence between the Exchequer and the Treasury in February 1835, with respect to excessive naval credits, and the effect of deficiency bills, App. p. 649.

Correspondence between the Exchequer and the Treasury on the subject of the discontinuance of the quarterly warrant, App. p. 723-741.

Account containing sundry particulars relative to the issue of deficiency bills in the years 1845-47, App. p. 780.

See also Consolidated Fund Warrant.

Departments. General control by the Treasury over the expenditure by the departments, Anderson 1021. 1043. 1173-1194. 1387——Responsibility of the departments in regard to expenditure in detail, ib. 1046-1049. 1173. 1176-1178——Power of the department to whom the money is issued by the paymaster to appropriate it otherwise than as in the first instance specified, ib. 1046-1049.——Distinction between the Treasury cash account and the departmental appropriation account of the expenditure for naval and military services, ib. 1374, 1375——This distinction was lost sight of in the Exchequer Regulation Act, ib. 1374——Control of the Paymaster-general's cash accounts by the departments to which the cash belongs, ib. 1983.

It is not part of the duty of the audit officer to question the propriety of the payments of the departments so long as they are entered under proper heads, Vine 3306-3327. 3679-3690; Romilly 4374, 4375; Macaulay 4513. 4565——Efficient check, through the Audit Board and the Treasury, upon irregularity in the application of money in any department, Vine 3691-3694——Any additional expenditure in excess of the vote is increased on the responsibility of the department, ib. 4021, 4022. 4036-4038.

Importance of the Treasury being vested with a far greater check than at present in regard to the issue of payments on the demands of the departments, Anderson 4165-4187——Assumption that all the departments must be thoroughly subordinate to the Treasury, ib. 4179, 4180. 4184.

See also Accounts: Army. Audit. Exchequer. Imprests, &c. Navy. Ordnance. Pay Office. Transfers between Departments. Treasury.

Deposits, Pay Office. Reference to various miscellaneous funds as deposits in the hands of the paymaster for a time, Hoffay 2351-2354——Increase of late years in the deposit accounts, Anderson 4109, 4110——Obstacle to the payment of deposits into the Bank, as most probably interest would not be allowed on them, ib. 4112-4114.

Account of balances in the Miscellaneous Deposit Funds in the hands of the Paymaster-general on the 31st March 1856, App. p. 815.

Diplomatic Service. The first payment from the Consolidated Fund charges for diplomatic services, in May 1852, was 3,212 l. on 7th May, and the Exchequer credit was not till the 20th May, for 32,000 l., Anderson 3440, 3441——Statement as to the paymaster's account of "Consuls abroad" having been overdrawn on different occasions in 1852, ib. 3503-3506.

Statement in Treasury Minute of 22d December 1848 as to the authority for the payment of salaries, &c. of the diplomatic service, App. p. 521.

Letter from the Comptroller of the Exchequer to the Treasury in January 1840, with respect to excessive charge for diplomatic services, App. p. 650.

Report, 1856—continued.

Dividends. Reliance, to a certain extent, by witness upon Treasury information in regard to the amount paid by the Bank of England in dividends to the public; check exercised by witness, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 687-694. 706——The interest upon the public debt is a prior charge upon the whole balance of the Consolidated Fund, Anderson 947-949——Prohibition upon the issue from the balance for public dividends being made for other purposes than the payment of those dividends, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 2877, 2878.

Double Entry. See Accounts, V. 1. 3.

Drawbacks. Difficulty of estimates in the case of some payments in the shape of drawbacks from the Excise revenue, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 440-442.

Expediency of certain drawbacks and repayments not being included in the gross revenue proper, Anderson 1107-1112——Practice in regard to balances being kept back by the revenue departments in order to provide for drawbacks, ib. 1466-1469——Objection to voting the drawbacks, though there would be no practical difficulty in doing so, ib. 1862——It would swell the revenue and also the expenditure beyond the legitimate amount, ib.

Average yearly amount of the drawbacks in the Customs, Inland Revenue, and Post-office, Anderson 1863——Money for the drawbacks is not actually returned by the departments, ib. 1864——The payments are duly accounted for in detail, and go before the Audit Board, ib. 1865, 1866——Varying amount of the drawbacks, as shown by the drawback on malt, which will be an actual payment of money, ib. 1867, 1868.

See also Collection of Revenue.

E.

East India Company. Direct payment to the Exchequer in the case of receipts from the East India Company, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 505, 506——Repayment through the Paymaster-general's cash account of expenditure by the Army Department in recruiting for the East India Company's service, Anderson 1249-1252. 1320-1322——The sum as repaid by the East India Company does not appear upon the Army Estimates, ib. 1320-1322——Repayments by the East India Company for advances by the different departments do not go into the Exchequer, ib. 1524-1526——In time of peace the Commissariat Chest Account might always be kept in credit on the paymaster's books but for the large arrear on account of the recruiting service of the East India Company, ib. 1751.

Ecclesiastical Commission.—Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Education. The Treasury exercise no control in regard to the expenditure under the head of education, Anderson 2154——Statement as to the paymaster's account of "Public Education" having been overdrawn in April 1852 and following months, ib. 3495-3499.

Papers delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts relative to public education, science, and art are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Effective Services. Recommendation in the Treasury Minute of 22d December 1848, as to the modes of paying effective services generally, App. p. 525.

Ellis, Mr. Remarks by Mr. Ellis, formerly clerk of the Rolls, as to the proper functions of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 6.

Emigration. Circumstance of the paymaster's account of "Emigration" having been overdrawn for four months in 1852, Anderson 3501-3503.

Establishments of Departments. Nature of the check exercised by the Treasury in regard to the estimates of departments with reference to the establishment charges, Anderson 1881-1889.

Principle and practice of the Treasury, when witness was connected with it, to make due investigation into the Miscellaneous Estimates and the establishments demanded by the several departments, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3170-3174—— Responsibility of the Treasury in regard to all revisions of establishment, ib. 3174.

See also Exchequer, II. 12. 14. Pay Office, II. 6. III.

Estimates. Great importance of the estimates being presented as early as possible after the assembling of Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 381. 386.

All estimates are submitted to the Treasury before they are laid on the table of The House, Anderson 1175. 1179-1181. 2196. 2202, 2203—— The Army and Navy Estimates, before coming to the Treasury, are regulated by previous communication between the heads of those services and the Government, ib. 2196-2208——The Miscellaneous Estimates for Civil Services are prepared at the Treasury, returns being obtained from the various departments, ib. 2196. 2203.

Communication

Report, 1856—continued.

Estimates—continued.

Communication formerly between the Treasury and the heads of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance, with respect to the preparation of the estimates of those services, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3174.

See also Monthly Estimates. Treasury. Unexpended Balances. Votes of Parliament. Woods and Forests, Office of, 3.

Excess of Grants. Difficulty of exercising a perfect control in regard to the yearly issue for the great departments not exceeding the yearly vote, Anderson 1022. 1029. 1047. 1068——Simple machinery suggested for preventing the issue by the Treasury being in excess of the amount granted by Parliament, ib. 1023–1028.

Impossibility of checking at the Pay-office any excess of the votes for the great services, Hoffay 2512–2520——Check through the Audit Board upon excessive amounts being drawn on the great service votes, ib. 2513. 2516–2518——Excess of expenditure over the votes for the great services in 1848, ib. 2514. 2566, 2567.

Necessity of the Paymaster resorting to Exchequer credits for an ensuing year, in order to meet excess of expenditure, as for the Navy, during the current or past year, Vine 4082–4106.

Direction in the Treasury Minute of 22d December 1848, that no payments be made in excess of grants of Parliament, App. p. 512.

Direction in Minute of 22d August 1854, that excess of expenditure beyond the grants should and can be avoided, App. p. 579——Direction in the Minute, that excess of expenditure beyond the grants be submitted to Parliament, and a special vote taken for it, ib.

See also Adjustment of Accounts (Pay-office). Appropriation I. 2. II. 1. Exchequer 3. 4.

EXCHEQUER:

1. Antiquity and Origin of the Control of the Exchequer over the Treasury.
2. Functions and Duties vested in the Department.
3. Instances of Exchequer Control; Importance of its Continuance.
4. Uselessness, practically, of the Functions of the Department.
5. Advantage if the Control were transferred to the Treasury.
6. False principle of Account; Interference with the Treasury and Pay Office.
7. Evidence in defence of the System of Accounts.
8. Objection to an Audit by the Exchequer of the Pay Office Accounts.
9. Expediency of subjecting the Exchequer Accounts to the Audit Board.
10. Suggested Parliamentary Inspection, or Annual Report to Parliament.
11. Limited Amount of Office Business, and unduly large Establishment and Salaries.
12. Evidence in correction of the foregoing Statement.
13. Statement as to a Transfer of the Weights and Measures Department.
14. Papers and Returns relative to the Business, Establishment, and Salaries.
15. Recommendations by the Public Accounts Commissioners in 1831.
16. Recommendations by the late Mr. Brooksbank.

1. Antiquity and Origin of the Control of the Exchequer over the Treasury:

Former constitution of the Exchequer adverted to, as showing the origin of the control exercised over the Treasury accounts, Anderson 1798–1800——Separation of the Treasury from the Exchequer after the Restoration, ib. 1798, 1799.

Further reference to the original constitution of the Exchequer, and to the change about the time of the Restoration, which led to the finance department being vested mainly in the Treasury, subject to a certain Exchequer control in regard to issues, Anderson 2139–2146.

Reference to Mr. Hallam, Mr. Black, and others, as far better authorities than Mr. Anderson or witness upon the antiquity of the Exchequer, and of its control over Government, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2779–2781.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, on the separation of the Exchequer from the Treasury after the Restoration, App. p. 508.

Antiquity of the office adverted to in the Sixth Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1782, App. p. 774.

2. Functions and Duties vested in the Department:

Witness was appointed Comptroller-general of the Exchequer at the close of the year 1839, under the Bill of 1834, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 1–3——The Act of 1834 transferred to the Comptroller-general the duties formerly vested in the auditor of the Exchequer and clerk of the pells, ib. 5——Direct control of witness as regards all monies when once paid into the Exchequer, ib. 6–8. 154–157. 207–209——Absence of check check by witness with respect to payments out of revenue before it is paid into the Exchequer; he has, in fact, no cognizance of such payments, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 19–26. 30, 31. 154–159. 190–209——Circumstance of witness having no cognizance of the actual monies paid to the Receiver-generals of Excise, &c., ib. 27–29. 450, 451—— He has no cognizance whatever of what has previously been deducted or paid out of gross revenue, ib. 154–159. 190–209.

Report, 1856—continued.

EXCHEQUER—continued.

2. Functions and Duties vested in the Department—continued.

Cognizance of witness of operations upon Exchequer credit accounts transferred to the name of the Paymaster-general, though as regards the expenditure thereof he has no control, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 562–572——The application of unappropriated funds is out of the jurisdiction of the Exchequer, ib. 603——The Comptroller-general controls merely the amount of issues as appropriated by Parliament, ib. 603–606. 617–619. 631 et seq.——When money is once transferred from the Exchequer to the Paymaster, witness's functions cease, ib. 605, 606——Limitation, in fact, of witness's power to checking the issues, ib. 603–606. 617–619. 631 et seq. 3121. 3123–3126.

Definition of the functions of the Exchequer, as laid down in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in October 1831, App. p. 455 et seq.

Directions in Treasury Minute of 26 September for the regulation of the Exchequer in accordance with the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, App. p. 471 et seq.

3. Instances of Exchequer Control; Importance of its Continuance:

Witness produces a long list of specific cases of Exchequer control over the Treasury, and gives explanations thereon, as showing his exercise of the principle of Parliamentary appropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 860 et seq. and App. p. 633 et seq.—— Explanatory statement with reference to the strict adherence by witness, in 1841, to the intention of Parliament in dividing the votes for miscellaneous supplies between two appropriations, ib. 861 et seq.——Refusal of witness in this matter to act in accordance with the Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants, directing an indiscriminate issue without reference to the time, as in the Appropriation Act, ib. 861——Confirmation by the two officers of the Crown of the views adopted by witness, ib.——Eventually a governing warrant was prepared at witness's suggestion and acted upon, ib. 861. 912–920.

Above 200 instances of control are included in cases of control in 1841 and 1852, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 888. 928——By an examination of the list produced by witness, the Committee can best judge of the most important instances of control, ib. 889. 921. 927–930——The most important check exercised by the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer is in the way of prevention, ib. 929.

Nullity to a certain extent of the Exchequer if the practices of the Pay-office be sanctioned by Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2773. 2833–2841——Modification of the original Treasury Minute of 1848 adverted to as a most important instance of the control of the Exchequer, ib. 2786——The Exchequer Act is consistent with the due execution of all the functions of a pay-office, ib. 2888, 2889.

Witness delivers in a paper (Ev. p. 298) showing the amendments made in the Minute of December 1848 in consequence of witness's representations, ib. 2897.

The evils referred to in witness's memorandum as hypothetical have since arisen, and have been subjected to the check of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2957——The whole effect of witness's evidence is, that there should be Parliamentary control (through means of the Exchequer), and not merely ministerial responsibility, ib. 2970——Argument that the advantage derivable from Exchequer control far outweighs the advantages that would result from the abolition of the Exchequer and the simplification of accounts, and possible economy consequent thereon, ib. 3284–3286.

Copy of Lord Monteagle's memorandum of 1854; strong exceptions taken therein to the practice of the Pay-office, as inconsistant with the control vested by the Legislature in the Comptroller-general over the issue and appropriation of the public monies, App. p. 536–552.

Drafts of warrants, minutes, and other instruments, submitted by the Treasury for the Comptroller-general's consideration in the years 1840–55; amendments through the Comptroller's representations, App. p. 642, 643.

Copies of correspondence appended to cases of control exercised at the Exchequer, App. p. 648 et seq.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury, in June and July 1852, relative to the issue of Royal orders, which the former holds to be irregular, and declines to comply with, no ways and means remaining unappropriated, App. p. 699–703.

Letter from the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the Comptroller-general, on 21 March 1854, and reply of the latter on 22 March, as to the issue of 1,750,000 l., before the commencement of the financial year; statement by the latter as to the illegality of any such issue, App. p. 722.

Amendments

Report, 1856—continued.

EXCHEQUER—continued.

3. Instances of Exchequer Control, &c.—continued.

Amendments made in Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, in consequence of the letters from the Exchequer, App. p. 773.

4. Uselessness, practically, of the Functions of the Department:

Limit to the duties of the Exchequer by the Act of 1834, as founded upon the report of the Commissioners of Account in 1831, Anderson 983–990——After the issue is made the Comptroller has no further authority, ib. 998. 1007. 1030–1046. 1070–1075. 1171, 1172——Witness really sees no practical check which is attained by the Exchequer, ib. 1019. 1030–1046——Inefficiency of the Exchequer control, inasmuch as though it prevents an undue issue, it does not in any way extend to the final appropriation, ib. 1030–1046. 1055, 1056. 1070–1075.

Further statement as to the absence of security or check on the mode in which the Exchequer makes issues to the Pay-office, Anderson 1311. 1353——Practical difficulty in the way of useful Exchequer control over the application or final appropriation, ib. 1357–1365——Instances of misappropriation without the knowledge of the Exchequer, ib. 1357. 1366—— The control of the Exchequer is in fact a delusion which should not be continued, ib. 1361–1363——The Exchequer merely leads to an additional operation of every issue, which materially retards and embarrasses the proper course of public business, ib. 1361. 1386.

Effective and complete Exchequer control can only be attained by retrograde legislation, Anderson 2038–2040——Inoperativeness of Exchequer control save in special cases, Hoffay 2707, 2708——Absence of any efficient Exchequer check upon undue application in the Pay-office, Anderson 3542–3557——Question as to the possession of remedy by the Exchequer in the event of the daily account showing that money had been paid on an exhausted vote, ib. 3571–3575. 3580–3584.

Statement by Sir C. Trevelyan in 1848 that the office of Comptroller-general of the Exchequer by no means increases the security for the due appropriation of the public money, App. p. 508——Also that the control of the Exchequer is nugatory as regards payments, both at home and abroad, ib. 509——Also as to the very rare instances of the exercise of control on the part of the Exchequer, ib. 509, 510.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson. on Lord Monteagle's memorandum on the Exchequer in 1854, App. p. 553–561.

Impracticability of Exchequer control contended for by Mr. Anderson, ib. 556. 560—— Remarks by Mr. Anderson as to a revision of the Exchequer Act being necessary, ib. 560.

5. Advantage if the Control were Transferred to the Treasury:

A concurrent audit and the Treasury check afford adequate security without the Exchequer control, Anderson 1020. 1048 et seq. 1113–1116. 2071–2082. 4159 et seq.; Hoffay 2727–2733——Opinion that the Exchequer might safely and advantageously be dispensed with altogether, and that the Treasury might issue the money directly from an account in its name at the Bank, Anderson 1309–1316. 1349–1353. 1361–1363. 1836. 1402–1406——With regard to the Exchequer check upon issues, some substitute might doubtless be found, if considered necessary, ib. 1367–1372——Unnecessary expense as well as embarrassment through the system of the Exchequer issues, ib. 1386.

Further evidence in favour of the issues and payments being made by the Treasury and Pay-office without the intervention of the Exchequer, Anderson 1683–1690. 1950 et seq.——Disadvantage at present through the necessity of anticipating by a day the period for supplying the Paymaster with funds; this would not be necessary if the Treasury made the issues directly, ib. 1683–1690.

Propriety of dispensing with the Exchequer if the whole of the Civil Services be brought under a well-organised system of audit, Hoffay 2563. 2567. 2588–2708. 2727–2733——Further evidence in favour of dispensing with the Exchequer, and of substituting a more perfect Parliamentary control through the medium of a concurrent audit, Anderson 4159 et seq.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan in 1848, as to the uselessness, practically, of the Exchequer, and the saving of public time by the abolition of the office, App. p. 508–510.

6. False Principle of Account; Interference with the Treasury and Pay office:

Definition of the functions of the Exchequer; the custody and issue of the public monies is simply a matter of account with the Bank, Anderson 990–997. 1030–1046. 1171, 1172——Objectionable principle in the 24th clause of the Exchequer Regulation Act, that the Treasury accounts of expenditure shall be founded upon Exchequer credits, and not upon actual payments, ib. 1402——The system whereby Exchequer credits are considered by the Exchequer as final issues or payments, though not actually such, is very faulty, ib. 1551–1553. 1603——Defective principle of the 24th clause of the Act further adverted to with reference to Exchequer credits, ib. 1553–1555. 1603.

Report, 1856—continued.

EXCHEQUER—continued.

6. False Principle of Account, &c.—continued.

Illustration of the expediency of altering the system of making up the public accounts from credits instead of from actual payments, Anderson 1603——False principle upon which, notwithstanding recent improvements, the Treasury accounts are obliged to be formed on account of the necessity of adherence to the Exchequer system of account, ib. 1800 et seq.——The whole system of double entry cannot be properly adopted, on account of the necessity of adhering to the Exchequer basis of accounts, ib. 1801, 1802.

Further evidence to the effect that the Exchequer system of treating as a payment every credit or transfer to the account of the Paymaster-general is decidedly objectionable, and leads to much misrepresentation, Anderson 1807-1841——Confusion of accounts shown by the Exchequer issue and expenditure of 1,400,000 l. at the end of March, whereas the expenditure really took place in the following quarter; how this might be amended, ib. 1824-1827. 1833, 1834. 1440-1851——Uselessness to the Treasury in making up the annual accounts of the accounts furnished by the Exchequer; pending inquiry in the matter, ib. 2238.

The specific credit system necessitates the keeping of two distinct sets of accounts at the Pay-office, one to show how the vote is going in credit, and the other to show how it is going in expenditure, Hoffay 2583, 2584; Anderson 3518-3526——Inconvenience and uselessness of the system in the Pay-office of splitting up the cash account in order to square exactly with the Exchequer system of credits for specific heads of service, Anderson 3516-3528.

7. Evidence in Defence of the System of Accounts:

Adherence to the principle of appropriation far outweighs the advantages of a greater simplicity of accounts, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3285, 3286——Impression that Mr. Anderson does not complain that the Exchequer system of accounts is imperfect, but that it clashes with the different system of the Pay-office, ib. 3287, 3288——Perfect system of double entry pursued at the Exchequer, ib. 3287——Impracticability of keeping the Exchequer accounts on a different system, or of treating the issues other than as payments, ib. 3288, 3289. 3297-3300——Illustration for the purpose of showing that the Exchequer credits are practically payments, ib. 3288, 3289. 3297-3300.

Opinion that the Exchequer system of accounts does not necessarily prevent the Paymaster from keeping his accounts in the form most approved by him, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3289-3296.

8. Objection to an Audit by the Exchequer of the Pay-office Accounts:

Inexpediency of constituting the Comptroller an auditor of the expenditure of the Paymaster-general, Anderson 1364, 1365. 1704 et seq.——An Exchequer clerk in the Pay-office could merely see that the accounts were properly prepared, but could not exercise any practical audit upon expenditure, ib. 2007. 2026. 2033-2037. 2043. 2061-2066——Undue assumption of functions which properly belong to the Audit Board if the Exchequer were to interfere with the detailed expenditure, ib. 2,008 et seq.——If the Comptroller were empowered to interfere after issue he would in fact be lord over the whole of the public departments, ib. 2022-2025——Absence of advantage, as regards information to Parliament, if an Audit or Exchequer clerk had had some control in the Pay-office in the matter of the issue for the Duke of Wellington's funeral, or of the advance by the Turkish Government, ib. 2048-2066.

9. Expediency of subjecting the Exchequer Accounts to the Audit Board:

Objection to the non-audit of the Exchequer accounts, the same being sent to the Board of Audit for that purpose, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 448——Additional check placed by witness in the power of the Board of Audit in the matter of Exchequer warrants, ib. 3122.

Expediency of the accounts of the Comptroller-general being subject to the audit, Romilly 4277-4282——Remarks by Mr. Romilly in 1850 as to the necessity of an examination of the Exchequer accounts, App. p. 563.

10. Suggested Parliamentary Inspection, or Annual Report to Parliament:

Importance of a recommendation in the Report of 1831 that there be an inspection of, and annual report upon, the Comptroller-general's account by a Parliamentary Commission, independent of the Crown, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2852, 2853——A mere annual report to Parliament by the Comptroller-general would have the effect of rendering his control more efficient, ib. 2852.

11. Limited Amount of Office Business, and unduly large Establishment and Salaries:

The Exchequer communicates only with the Treasury and the Bank of England, Andeson 1777——The business of the Exchequer is so small that, irrespectively of the

Report, 1856—continued.

EXCHEQUER—continued.

11. Limited Amount of Office Business, &c.—continued.

the issue of Exchequer bills and the custody of weights and measures, one, or at the outside two clerks might do it all, Anderson 1778-1781. 1796.

The Comptroller-general has a salary of 2,000 l. a year fixed on the Consolidated Fund by the Exchequer Act, Anderson 1792-1794——The Assistant Comptroller has 1,000 l. a year fixed on the votes, ib. 1794, 1795——Salaries of the clerks, ib. 1795——In salaries alone the establishment costs more than 7,000 l. a year, ib. 1795——There are also the usual incidental expenses of a separate building, ib. 1797.

Opinion further expressed as to the adequacy of two clerks to transact the main portion of the duties of the Exchequer, Anderson 1876–1880. 1887——Explanation as to the Treasury not having taken steps to reduce the Exchequer establishment within proper limits, ib. 1881–1895——Intention to revise the establishment now that the war is at an end, and the Treasury has more leisure, ib. 1886——The war and the pressure of business consequent thereon have alone deferred the inquiry, ib. 1886. 2256, 2257. 2261——Ever since Lord Monteagle issued his memorandum an inquiry into the Exchequer has been contemplated, ib. 1886. 2256-2262.

12. Evidence in correction of the foregoing Statement:

Explanation of the duties and labour connected with the Exchequer Bill Department, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 3151, 3152. 3178-3185——Evidence showing the inaccuracy of Mr. Anderson's assumption that two clerks could perform all the business of the Exchequer office, excepting the duties of the Department of Weights and Measures, ib. 3160-3169. 3174——Probable cause of Mr. Anderson's misapprehension as to the extent of the business devolving on the Exchequer, ib. 3160, 3161. 3174——Several revisions of the Exchequer establishment adverted to as showing it has never been considered unduly large, ib. 3162-3166.

Explanatory statement relative to the salaries; in some instances witness has thought it necessary to recommend an increase, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3163——The salaries are now below those in other departments, ib.

Circumstance of the Treasury having never till recently questioned the strength of the establishment as being extravagant, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3167——Particulars as to the amount of business devolving on the establishment, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3167-3169. 3174-3176. 3178-3185 and App. p. 782. 787, 788——During part of the year more business might be done without inconvenience, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3167, 3168——Considerable labour in the matter of the Consolidated Fund warrants, as controlled by the Exchequer, ib. 3174.

Statement that the Exchequer communicates with nine departments in England and three in Ireland instead of with only the Treasury and the Bank of England, as stated by Mr. Anderson, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3174——Miscellaneous correspondence also with private individuals, ib. 3176.

13. Statement as to a Transfer of the Weights and Measures Department:

The small department in the Exchequer with reference to weights and measures might more properly be transferred to the Mint, Anderson 1790, 1791.

Statement by Lord Monteagle, that he had recommended the transfer to be made, but that the Mint had reported strongly against it, Ev. p. 338 (Note to Q. 3160).

14. Papers and Returns relative to the Business, Establishment, and Salaries:

Sundry papers relating to the establishment of the Exchequer, and the business transacted, App. p. 774 et seq.——Extract from Sixth Report of Commissioners of Public Accounts, dated 9 February 1782, remarking on the functions of the Exchequer in connexion with a revision of the establishment, ib. 774——Extract from Report of Committee on Miscellaneous Expenditure in 1848, stating that they do not find "any extravagant amount of persons or payment," ib.——Letter from the Comptroller to Treasury, dated 17 March 1848, with revised estimate for the Exchequer establishment, ib. 775.

Account of the number of Exchequer bills, credits, acquittances, Irish transfers and Irish acquittances signed by the Comptroller-general and by the Assistant Comptroller from 1 January 1845 to 15 June 1847, App. p. 776-778——Account of the number and amount of Royal orders and Treasury warrants examined and controlled by the Comptroller-general and Assistant Comptroller, from 1 January 1845 to 15 June 1847, ib. 779.

Letter from the Comptroller to Treasury, dated 1 January 1850, on economical reductions in the Exchequer, App. p. 781——Extract from letter from the Comptroller to the Treasury, on 17 September 1850, recommending reduction of one clerk, ib.——Letter from Treasury to the Comptroller, dated 1st October 1850, in approval thereof, ib.——Letter from Comptroller of Exchequer to the Treasury, 14 February 1854, as to sparing a junior clerk to the latter, ib. 782——Letter from Mr. Otley to the Comptroller, dated 14 February 1854, enclosed in the preceding letter, ib.

Report, 1856—continued.

EXCHEQUER—continued.

14. Papers and Returns relative to the Business, &c.—continued.

Particulars of the several officers, clerks, &c., with the amount of salaries in the several years 1832, 1847 and 1856, App. p. 782.

Copy of petition of Exchequer clerks, dated 5 March 1856, to the House of Commons on the Superannuation Bill, showing salaries, &c., and contrasted with other public departments, App. p. 783–786.

Copy of Return to the House of Lords of Exchequer business transacted in the year 1841, App. p. 786——Statement of accounts made out periodically in the office of the Comptroller-general, ib. 787——Accounts of Exchequer business transacted in the years 1842 to 1856, ib.

List of the several books used in the offices of the Exchequer, App. p. 788–791.

15. Recommendations by the Public Accounts Commissioners in 1831 :

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, as to the ancient forms of the Exchequer being open to much improvement ; suggestions in detail for effecting such improvement, App. p. 455 et seq.——Statement in the report, that by abolishing certain useless operations in the Exchequer, much delay and inconvenience would be avoided, ib. 461——Also that the various forms used in the Exchequer require revision, ib.——Also that the Exchequer at present is in itself a pay-office, ib. 464.

Recommendation in the report that both a journal and a ledger be henceforth used, App. p. 464——Also that the whole proceeds of the taxes and all monies paid into the Exchequer should form one fund, ib. 465——Definition of the future functions of the new Exchequer recommended in the report, ib.——Recommendation in the report, that all payments be transferred from the Exchequer, &c. to the Treasury, ib.——Also that accounts of all credits given by the Exchequer be made up and sent to the Audit-office quarterly, ib. 466.

Recommendation in the report as to the system of records and account suitable for the new arrangements of the Exchequer, App. p. 466——Recommendation that the system of double entry be introduced for keeping the accounts, ib.——Also that the Exchequer periodically make up accounts and send the same to the Treasury, ib.——Also that the Exchequer ledger should be balanced monthly, ib.——Also that annual accounts be made up by the Exchequer, of all revenues received, all monies paid into the Bank of England, &c., and to what services the expenditure has been applied, ib.

Recommendation in the report, that the credit given to the Exchequer for different years, should, to prevent obscurity, be kept separately, App. p. 466——Also that all credits for expenditure given to the Exchequer be cancelled after nine months, if not applied for, ib.

Statement in the report that the present system of the Exchequer tends to increase both the amount of business and the expenditure, App. p. 467, 468——Also that the Exchequer has retained ancient practices, which are no longer applicable, ib. 469——Reference in the report to the present establishment of the Exchequer, number of officers employed, amount of salaries &c., ib. 470——Proposed new establishment of the Exchequer, ib.

Recommendation in the report, that a commission, independent of the Crown, be annually appointed by the House of Commons to examine and report upon the accounts of the Exchequer before the budget is voted, App. p. 470——Economy that will be effected in the Exchequer, when the new system recommended is in operation, ib.——The Commissioners state in conclusion, that the ancient practices of the Exchequer have not yielded to modern improvements, ib. 471.

16. Recommendations by the late Mr. Brooksbank :

Letter from Mr. Brooksbank, chief clerk of the financial division of the Treasury, to Mr. Litchfield, senior clerk, relative to uniting the Pay-office to the Exchequer, or the Exchequer to the Pay-office, and objecting to the Exchequer system of credits and accounts, App. p. 832, 833.

See also Acquittance (Exchequer). Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15. Appropriation. Balances. Bank of England. Civil Contingencies. Collection of Revenue. Consolidated Fund. Consolidated Fund Bills. Consolidated Fund Warrants. Control. Co-operation. Custody of Public Monies. Deficiency Bills. Exchequer Bills. Forms and Documents. Foreign Expenditure. France. Gross Revenue. Instrument of Appointment. Ireland. Issues (Exchequer). Kensington Gore Estate. Legality. Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Premium on Exchequer Bills. Receipts (Exchequer). Redemption of Pensions. Repayments to Exchequer. Royal Orders. Transfers (Exchequer). Treasury. Unexpended Balances. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses). Woods and Forests, Office of, 1. Works, Office of.

Report, 1856—continued.

EXCHEQUER BILLS:

1. Generally, as to the present System of Preparation, Issue, &c.:
2. As to the Issue being undertaken by the Treasury:

1. Generally, as to the present System of Preparation, Issue &c.:

Explanation as to the refusal of witness to accept the receipt of the Assistant-Paymaster in the case of the supply Exchequer Bills, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 528–530. 533, 534——Practice in regard to the issue of Exchequer Bills by the Comptroller to the Paymaster for ways and means purposes, ib. 614, 615——Authority of the Treasury under Act of Parliament to issue Exchequer Bills for ways and means purposes, ib. 627–631.

Improvement upon the present practice if the proceeds of Exchequer Bills were paid into the Consolidated Fund, and credits were issued thence according to the legal demands of the public service, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 667——Signature of Exchequer Bills by the Comptroller or the Assistant Comptroller, ib. 695——Effectual checks adopted of late years, mainly by witness, for the prevention of forgery and fraud in regard to Exchequer Bills, ib. 696, 697——Practice in the event of an issue of Exchequer Bills by the Treasury through the Paymaster-general, ib. 700–702——Practice in regard to the issue by witness of Exchequer Bills for ordinary supply services; when issued to the Bank of England, the proceeds should in the first instance always go to the Exchequer account, ib. 703, 704——Practice in regard to the preparation of the bills, Anderson 1781–1783.

Further reference to the efficient precautions now adopted against a forgery of Exchequer Bills, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3151——When the bills are being prepared, witness and the Assistant Comptroller each signs about 750 daily, ib. 3183, 3184.

With reference to Mr. Masterman's suggestions in 1853, as to the annual presentation of Exchequer Bills, and the payment of the interest, witness refers to the comments of Mr. Anderson thereon, and to his own report on the views of Mr. Masterman and of Mr. Anderson, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3177 and App. p. 792–794——Letter from Mr. Gladstone to Lord Monteagle dated 21 May 1853, with reference to his report on Mr. Masterman's suggestions &c., App. p. 794——Letter in reply from Lord Monteagle, dated 23 May 1853, ib.

Correspondence in 1841 and 1842, between the Comptroller of the Exchequer, the Paymaster, and the Treasury, relative to a sum of 25,000 l., stated by the Paymaster as over-due outstanding Exchequer Bills, App. 665–673.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury in 1853–1854, with respect to Exchequer Bills issued for supply services not passing through the Exchequer accounts at the Bank of England, App. 712–722.

Account of all Exchequer Bills signed by the Comptroller-general and by the Assistant Comptroller, from 1 January 1845 to 15 June 1847, App. p. 776–779.

2. As to the Issue being undertaken by the Treasury:

If the Exchequer were abolished, the preparation and issue of Exchequer Bills should rest with the Treasury, as recommended by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, Anderson 1431–1433——Improvement under any circumstances, if the Exchequer Bills were prepared by the Treasury, or rather by the Bank of England, ib. 1784–1789.

Though the Commissioners of 1831 recommended that the preparation of Exchequer Bills be vested in the Treasury, they also recommended the continuance of Exchequer control in the matter, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3149-3151. 3189. 3200–3207—— This recommendation involved an operose and complicated plan, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3151. 3204-3207——Labour in making out the bills adverted to, as showing the impossibility of the Treasury undertaking the matter without an increase of staff, ib. 3151, 3152. 3178–3185.

Reasons for the conclusion that on constitutional grounds, the preparation, signing, and issue of Exchequer Bills by the Treasury would be most dangerous and inexpedient, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3153-3159. 3186–3292——Refusal of witness in 1854 to make an issue of Exchequer Bills as being illegal, adverted to as an argument against the issue resting with the Treasury, ib. 3154——Doubt as to any effectual Audit check upon an undue issue of Exchequer Bills if the issue rested with the Treasury, ib. 3155–3159.

Absence of analogy between the issue of bank notes by the Bank of England, and of Exchequer Bills by the Treasury, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3186–3192——Recommendation of the Commission of 1831, in regard to the issue &c. of Exchequer Bills further adverted to as less desirable than the present mode of issue, ib. 3200–3207.

Recommendation in the first Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, that the Treasury prepare and issue Exchequer Bills, App. p. 465.

Explanatory statements and recommendations in the Treasury Minute of 22d December 1848, with reference to Exchequer Bills, App. p. 522–525.

See also Creation of Debt. Premiums on Exchequer Bills.

Report, 1856—continued.

Exchequer Bonds. Correspondence between the Exchequer and Treasury, in 1853, relative to the form of Exchequer bonds, App. p. 708–711.

Exchequer Fees. Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, in 1831, that Exchequer fees be abolished, App. p. 465.

Excise. See Inland Revenue.

Executive, The. See Parliamentary Control. Treasury.

Expenditure. See Accounts. Appropriation. Army. Audit. Balances. Collection of Revenue. Commissariat. Commissariat Chest Account. Control. Departments. Excess of Grants. Exchequer. Finance Accounts. Imprests, &c. Navy. Ordnance. Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Treasury. Woods and Forests, Office of, 2. 3.

Expense of Collection. See Collection of Revenue. Drawbacks.

Extraordinary Expenses. See Army, III. 2. Commissariat Chest Account. Unappropriated Votes.

Eyre, Mr. See Redemption of Pensions.

F.

Fairfax, Colonel (Redemption of Pension). See Redemption of Pensions, 3.

Fees. See Fines and Fees. Surplus Fees (Public Offices).

Finance Accounts:

1. Great Disadvantage in the late Presentation of the Accounts.
2. Discrepancies consequent on the New Mode of Preparation by the Treasury.
3. Improvement if the Accounts were made up to January.
4. Question as to the expediency of a Preliminary Account for Nine Months.
5. Statement on the part of the Treasury.

1. Great Disadvantage in the late Presentation of the Accounts:

Uselessness of the finance accounts for the proceedings of the year on account of their not being presented early in the Session, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 162–168. 177, 178. 210——Arrangement formerly in regard to the dates of making up and presenting these accounts; advantages thereof over the present practice as commenced under the Act of 1854, ib. 162, 163. 170–180. 235 et seq.——With regard to the finance accounts for the year 1854–55, though ordered to be printed on 6 July, they were not in the hands of Members till 6 October, ib. 231.

If not presented before the end of the Session, the accounts are, for practical purposes, useless, or nearly so, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 231–233. 270——Important detailed information as to expenditure, as well as revenue, contained in the finance accounts, ib. 264, 265——Special disadvantage of any system whereby the accounts are delivered late in the Session, as must be the case, notwithstanding any improvement, whilst the accounts are made up to April, ib. 270–276. 281. 287–290. 317–321—— Circumstance of the finance accounts for the year 1855–56 not yet being issued, ib. 2982–2984.

2. Discrepancies consequent on the New Mode of Preparation by the Treasury:

Incorrectness of the new accounts, more especially in the variation of the headings, as shown by those relating to the Exchequer, through the want of proper time and care in their preparation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 237, 238. 258. 276. 286. 322 et seq. ——Inexpediency of the recent system of the Treasury making up the finance accounts without due reference to the several departments, ib. 237. 258. 322 et seq.——The greater the despatch made in order to remedy the evil, the greater the risk of inaccuracy, ib. 237. 276. 328, 329. 332, 333.

Absence of means of comparison between the expenditure for the years 1854-55 with the expenditure previously, on account of the alteration since 1854 in the heads of the finance accounts as presented to Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 286. 322 et seq.——Importance of relative information adverted to, ib. 286. 291——Variation in the last finance accounts of the heads of Account of Imprest Money, &c., as relating to the Exchequer, ib. 286. 323–327——Decided objection to the system whereby two accounts representing precisely the same transactions, may and do differ very much, ib. 322. 328–339.

Particulars showing the actual discrepancies between the Exchequer accounts prepared by witness and the same accounts as prepared by the Treasury for appearance in the finance accounts, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 322 et seq.——Further statement as to the existence of errors in the finance accounts in consequence of the late period of making making up such accounts involving undue dispatch in their preparation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 328, 329. 332–334——The form of account adopted by witness was, in the first instance, regulated by the Treasury, ib. 335, 336.

Report, 1856—continued.

FINANCE ACCOUNTS—continued.

2. Discrepancies consequent on the New Mode of Preparation, &c.—continued.

Papers showing discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the finance accounts, between those accounts and the Exchequer books, App. p. 759–769.

3. Improvement if the Accounts were made up to January:

Evidence intended to show that the change in 1854 in making up the accounts to April instead of to January, in order to agree with the financial year, is on the whole disadvantageous, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 162, 163, 170–180. 235 et seq.——Statement as to Lord Althorpe having, in 1832, altered the commencement of the financial year from January to April, without any alteration of the finance accounts; views expressed by witness at the time, ib. 236. 239. 247–252——Suggestion that the accounts be made up to January, notwithstanding that they would not tally with the financial year, ib. 241–246. 266 et seq.

How far the system of quarterly audit, by the Audit Office Board, and the comparison of the expenditure of the revenue departments with the votes of Parliament, may argue in favour of the finance accounts being made up to April, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 253–263——Means, as successfully adopted in the years 1832–54, for instituting an approximately correct comparison between the estimated and the actual annual expenditure, when the finance accounts do not tally with the financial year, ib. 266–269, 291, 292. 297.

Facility for substituting accounts to January for those to April, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 275——Approval of such substitution, notwithstanding that thereby the uniformity of series would again be broken, ib. 276——As a matter of account, it would be well if the financial accounts corresponded with the estimates, but in practice it is not desirable, ib. 297, 298——Though of late years the accounts, if made up to January, would not have been in time for the financial statement of the year, still they would have been very useful as compared with delivery towards the end of the Session, ib. 309–321.

4. Question as to the Expediency of a Preliminary Account for Nine Months:

Advantage if, as preliminary to the annual finance accounts, there were a system of nine months' accounts (as suggested by Sir J. Graham), Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 277–279. 282–285. 287. 291, 292——Though a nine months' account to January would be better than the new accounts, witness would, on the whole, prefer a return to the old practice, ib. 280. 282. 291–296.

5. Statement on the part of the Treasury:

Combined system of quarterly and annual accounts, as in the case of the supply services, Anderson 961, 962——Foundation of the Treasury balance-sheet upon the entries made in the books from the audited accounts, ib. 2217——Accidental circumstance which led to the delay in the presentation of the finance accounts in the year 1854-55, ib. 2227.

Necessary dependence of the Treasury upon the departments for the completion of the accounts, Anderson 2228——Recommendation that the account be broken up, and that its main features be presented at the earliest possible period of the Session, ib. 2228–2233——All charges upon the Consolidated Fund, and the payment of the debt, &c., might be included in an account to be ready before the financial statement, ib. 2230–2233.

See also Accounts. Redemption of Pensions, 4. Statistical Account.

Finance System. Definition of the objects of the finance system as the security of the public money, the utmost simplicity of management, and the greatest economy in the employment of the public balances, Anderson 939.

Financial Year. Approval of the change of the financial year from January to April, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 239, 240. 297.

Direction in Treasury Minute of 2 March 1855, that the revenue year be assimilated to the financial year from 31 March 1855, App. p. 584.

Fines and Fees. Confusion of Exchequer account through the payment in one sum of fines and fees by the paymaster, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 610.

Fireworks (Celebration of Peace). With regard to Ordnance payments for fireworks, such as payments for wages or colouring materials, they would not be checked by the audit inspector of accounts with reference to the particular purpose for which made, Vine 3310–3317——Respects in which the Audit Board would exercise control in the matter of the wages or materials for the manufacture of fireworks by the Ordnance, ib. 3683–3690.

Report, 1856—continued.

Foreign Expenditure. Necessary irregularity frequently in the mode of exhaustion of grants, by reason of the foreign expenditure, Anderson 1047. 1051——Impracticability of a strict system of appropriation in the case of foreign payments through the Commissariat Chest Fund, ib. 1286–1288. 1317–1319——Practice in regard to payments out of the Commissariat Chest Fund for services abroad further adverted to, as showing that nothing is known of the detailed appropriation at the time of issue from the Pay-office, ib. 1735. 1743–1750.

On account of advances and payments abroad, the Pay-office not only cannot show the real state of the expenditure between the various votes of the same department, but cannot show the real expenditure of the several departments in the aggregate, Vine 4085–4106.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, as to the peculiarly nugatory control of the Exchequer as regards payments abroad, App. p. 509.

Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts for certain foreign services are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

See also Commissariat Chest Account.

Forms and Documents. Consideration of the documents and forms that might be dispensed with, as stated by Sir C. Trevelyan in his paper of 1848, and of the saving of public time and money thereby, supposing the Exchequer to be abolished, Anderson 1649–1683.

Forms, as approved by the Treasury in 1834, of the several warrants, specification papers, &c. used in carrying out the Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15, App. p. 475. 478–484.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, as to the forms to be gone through in dealing with the Exchequer, and the great saving of public time which would be effected by their abolition, App p. 510.

See also Acquittance (Exchequer). Consolidated Fund Warrant. Daily Application to Exchequer. Pay Office, I. 1. 2. II. 1. 2. Royal Orders. Treasury, 3. Specification Paper.

France. Explanation and approval of the system in France whereby the finance department manages the whole system of payments, just as the Treasury might manage it in this country, Anderson 1402–1407——Nature of the distinction in France between the receivers and payers of public money, ib. 1489, 1490. 1493.

System of revenue collection and payment further adverted to, as showing, from Dr. Bowring's reports, the employment of collectors as payers, Anderson 3263——Circumstance of the French having found it necessary at a very early period of their reforms to lay down the principle of payments and not credits as the basis of their accounts, ib. 4162.

Lapse of three years under the French system before the public expenditure is finally checked and accounted for, Romilly 4430.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that in France no public money is applied without previous parliamentary sanction, App. p. 456.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in 1854, as to the French system of Exchequer credit being misunderstood, App. p. 560.

Fraud. Instances of fraud in former years through the inefficient system of navy accounts, Anderson 1301——Greater facility and inducement to commit fraud if, instead of the present comparatively small balance, the Pay-office were entrusted with a very large amount in order to carry out Lord Monteagle's principle of appropriation, ib. 2171–2185——Security against fraud under the existing checks of the Pay-office, ib. 2172–2176. 2184.——See also Accounts. Audit. Exchequer Bills, 1. Pay Office, II. 10.

Funeral of Duke of Wellington. See Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses).

G.

Grafton, Duke of (Redemption of Pension). See Redemption of Pensions.

Gross Revenue. Adoption in Mr. Gladstone's Act in 1854 of the principle laid down in the report of the Exchequer Commission in 1831, that the gross revenue should be paid into the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 15, 16. 33. 35——Impracticability of fully carrying out the recommendations of the Report of 1831, in regard to gross and net receipts, ib. 15 et seq.——Explanation of the present system of payment into the Exchequer, showing that as far as possible the gross revenue is received, ib.——Strong approval of the abstract principle that no portion of the public revenue be arrested on its way to the Exchequer, ib. 36, 37.

Reference to the views of Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, as being in the main main in accordance with those of witness, in regard to the gross and net principle, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 38–40——The present system cannot be considered as fully realising the gross and net principle, ib. 40——The Act of 1854 has had circuitously the effect of the payment of the gross revenue into the Exchequer, ib. 52–59——Main principle of the Act, that those things only should be paid out of gross revenue which could not conveniently be otherwise paid, ib. 146–149.

Report, 1856—continued.

Gross Revenue—continued.

Explanation to the effect that the gross revenue does practically come into the Exchequer, though the charges of collection are previously locally defrayed, Anderson 1098–1106——The gross revenue being in the main paid into the Exchequer, does not afford a practical check upon expenditure, ib. 1442, 1443.

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that all monies should be paid in full into the Exchequer, App. p. 456.

Remarks by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, in 1853, in favour of the principles advocated by the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, App. p. 566–570——Comment by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson on Lord Monteagle's imaginary difficulties and inconveniences attendant on the question of the payment of the gross revenues into the Exchequer, ib. 567–569——Remarks by Sir C. Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson as to the necessity of a revision of services charged on the gross revenue, ib. 570.

See also Collection of Revenue. Redemption of Pensions. Superannuations and Pensions.

H.

Heads of Account. See Audit.

Hereditary Pensions. See Redemption of Pensions.

Hereditary Revenues. Mode of payment of the hereditary revenues into the Exchequer, Right hon. Lord Monteagle 495.

Hewett, General, Audit of Accounts of. See Audit, 14.

Hoffay, Ernest Albert. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Has been assistant Paymaster-general since March 1854; 2265, 2266——Had previously been, since April 1846, audit-inspector in charge of the naval and military accounts, 2267–2269——Was in former years employed in the Commissariat, 2270.

Explanation of the several steps taken with regard to the repayment of old naval stores, 2272 et seq. 2378–2385——In the first instance the navy send an order to the Pay-office, upon their imprest account for the amount, 2272——The Pay-office then apply to the Treasury for a credit, if the navy balance in hand be insufficient, 2273. 2276–2283——All naval charges which cannot be finally appropriated are made to the imprest account, 2273–2275——The local proceeds of old stores are collected into an order to the Paymaster-general to pay the amount to the Exchequer, which is done quarterly, 2273.

Practice of the Pay-office in dealing with the Exchequer credit in the matter of old stores; approval of the course adopted and of the mode of repayment to the Exchequer, 2284–2304. 2382–2385——Check through means of the Board of Audit, upon due payment by the Paymaster-general to the Exchequer, as directed by the Admiralty, 2304–2333. 2386–2403——Check of the Audit Board on the event of the Treasury directing the payment of naval money into Civil Contingencies or any other fund; probability of the Audit Board opposing undue Treasury orders adverted to hereon, 2312, 2313. 2322–2333. 2386–2398. 2423–2426.

In the event of an order from the Treasury to apply naval monies to other purposes, the Paymaster-general would doubtless remonstrate, and communicate with the Admiralty before doing so, but would hardly refuse to obey the concurrent order of the Treasury and Admiralty, 2314–2320. 2398–2400. 2420–2435——Similar practice at present, as previously to the Minute of 1848, in regard to the repayment to the Ordnance for work done for another department, 2334–2338.

Payment of naval prize-money to the general account of the paymaster at the Bank of England, 2339, 2340. 2345–2350——The naval prize account is now 67,226 l.; 2341——The army prize account is kept similarly to that for the navy, and amounts to 4,767 l.; 2342——Amount invested in the funds on account of army prize-money, 2343, 2344——Reference to various miscellaneous funds as deposits in the hands of the paymaster for a time, 2351–2354——Regulations laid down by the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 19, over and above those of the Act of 1848, for the management of naval prize-money; advantages thereof, 2355–2377. 2404–2409.

Mode in which the receipt for old stores finds its way to the Exchequer further adverted to as showing that the transfer through the Admiralty and paymaster is made without the least least risk or chance of mistake, 2378, et seq.——There is but one Exchequer account at the Bank to which the paymaster pays money, 2392, 2393——The paymaster has four accounts at the Bank, 2396——A full account is furnished monthly by the Pay-office to the Audit Board, 2397.

Report, 1856—continued.

Hoffay, Ernest Albert. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Support generally of the Audit Board by the Treasury in the event of a dispute with any department, 2401–2403. 2410, 2411——Instance of the Treasury having decided with the Audit Board against the Admiralty, and of the latter refusing to obey the Treasury, 2411–2419——General responsibility of the Paymaster-general, notwithstanding that his duties are almost all deputed, 2427–2431.

Common practice of the Pay-office to make payments for services for which no Exchequer warrant to the Bank of England has issued directing a credit to the Paymaster for that particular service, 2437–2439. 2459. 2578. 2589——How far the practice of the paymaster to make advances for services not voted or sanctioned by statute, or for which no means had been provided, 2440–2450——Instance, in 1855, of the army grants having been drawn upon to carry on the ordnance service, 2451–2454. 2564.

Any excess of payment over the daily Exchequer credit is always set right at the end of the month, but is not adjusted on the following day unless the sum in excess be material, 2456–2467——There would be no difficulty in adjusting within a day or two any issue in excess of a particular credit, 2472–2476——Varying daily amount of the cash account at the Bank; varying items composing it, 2477–2482. 2574–2577——Practice to exhaust the cash account before drawing on the Exchequer credit account, 2483–2486.

When overdrawn, the account might always be adjusted the next day, but when underdrawn, not until further orders for payment come in, 2488–2492——The present system comprises the most economical use of the public monies without exceeding the vote of Parliament, 2493–2507——Undue accumulation of balances if Lord Monteagle's mistaken principle of appropriation were carried out, 2498. 2502–2507——Impossibility of accurately estimating the amount that may be required on the following day in regard to certain charges on the Consolidated Fund, 2502–2506. 2581.

Rule of the Pay-office, when they know any vote to be exhausted, not to make further payments, 2508–2512. 2562–2564. 2568–2573——Impossibility of checking at the Pay-office any excess of the votes for the great services, 2512–2520——Excess of expenditure over the votes for the great services in 1848; 2514. 2566, 2567——Check, through the Audit Board, upon excessive amounts being drawn on the great service votes, 2513. 2516–2518——Payment by the Paymaster-general merely as bankers so long as anything remains to the credit of any vote, 2516. 2519–2532. 2538.

Impracticability of any control by the paymaster in regard to the expenditure under the separate heads of any vote, like that for the navy, 2516. 2519–2522. 2559–2561. 2565——Effectual check by the Treasury upon the issues under any vote, and upon any excess thereof, 2533–2558——The paymaster is made acquainted, as quickly and correctly as possible, with the daily amount of the cash balance, 2574–2577——Practice not to allow the variation between the credit and the expenditure to extend to any very considerable amount, 2579–2581——Mode of recording the payments, where no special Exchequer credit has been taken, as final payments, 2582–2585.

Rule never to pay for a service which has not a credit in the Exchequer, or in the books of the Pay-office, 2586–2589——Consideration of a proposition that the repayments to the cash account be transferred at once to the Exchequer, instead of to the paymaster's drawing and bill accounts; objections thereto, 2590–2620. 2633, 2634——In the event of the vote, as for the navy, exceeding the expenditure, the balance is surrendered to the Exchequer, and appears in the finance accounts, 2621–2628——The fact of the vote being reported is considered by the Pay-office in the same light as an appropriation Act, 2629–2632.

Recommendation that the system of appropriation audit be extended to the whole of the civil service and to the transactions at the Treasury, 2635, 2636. 2653 et seq.——Suggestions with a view to the accounts, as now laid before Parliament, under the Act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, being rendered in a detailed form, instead of in their present concise shape, 2636–2638. 2648–2651——Sufficiency of the powers of the Audit Board as a check upon expenditure by the departments, 2640, 2641. 2652——Power of the auditor to see that no expenditure which should appear in the account for the year is postponed, 2641–2647.

Propriety of dispensing with the Exchequer, if the whole of the civil services be brought under a well-organised system of audit, 2653. 2667. 2688–2708. 2727–2733——Advantage if an audit of the miscellaneous services were conducted by the Audit Board at the Treasury, 2653 et seq.——Expediency of relieving the Paymaster-general of the duty of checking the expenditure of the Miscellaneous votes, 2653. 2666–2668——The Pay-office, in fact, should not have to keep an account of credits under each separate vote, but should receive one cash credit for all the service, in accordance with a daily estimate to the Treasury, 2668 et seq.

Means

Report, 1856—continued.

Hoffay, Ernest Albert. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Means of checking misappropriation by the Treasury considered; it might be rendered imperative upon them to present to Parliament special reports by the Audit Board, 2676–2678. 2686–2688. 2700–2707. 2714–2722——Considerable lapse of time before any misappropriation of the Army or Navy vote would, as now accounted for, appear before Parliament, 2678–2685——Sufficiency of the check of the Audit-office upon the Treasury as regards issues by the latter, 2697–2707. 2713–2722. 2728–2733——Inoperativeness of the Exchequer control save in special cases, 2707, 2708——Power of the departments to evade the audit check by a system of diminution of stores; how this might be controlled, 2723–2726.

Hollings, John. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Is clerk of the first class in the War department, 4581, 4582——The army accounts at the foreign stations are closed one month after each quarter, 4583, 4584——As a rule, the accounts from abroad up to 31 March arrive at the War-office by the end of October, 4585–4588. 4590——During the war the home and foreign accounts were of a very heavy character, and have not been received till an unusually late period, 4589——The accounts occupy about seven months in transmission to the War department, and six months in their preparation before they are sent to the Audit Board, 4591–4593. 4614–4616.

Evidence to the effect that without a largely increased staff the complete examination and preparation of the accounts in the War-office cannot be accomplished in less than six months, 4594 et seq.——Efforts made to complete the examination at the earliest possible period, 4594. 4597. 4608——Reference to a peculiarly heavy account for the London recruiting district; this account was not received in the War-office till twelve months after its date, 4599. 4618–4622.

Care taken by the Audit Board officer attached to the War department that there is full evidence of a complete examination by the officers of the department, 4601. 4640. 4645–4647——Power of the independent audit officer to inspect vouchers; as a rule he does not, and, in fact, could not do so, 4601, 4602——Comparatively inexperienced examiners at present in the War department, 4606. 4613——Arrear in the examination consequent on the war, 4606. 4613. 4616——Number of clerks now engaged as examiners at the Horse Guards and Pall-mall, 4617.

The examiner would not consider it his duty to refuse to pass any payment ordered by the Secretary-at-War even though inconsistent with the Treasury regulations, 4627–4629. 4632——There is no direct Treasury check upon irregular payments being made on the sanction of the War Minister, 4630–4633——Check upon such payments through the intervention of the auditor and inspector from the Audit Board, 4634–4637——Statement to the effect that the auditor is bound to notice any departure from the terms of the Appropriation Act, 4635, 4636.

Steps taken before any item questioned by the auditor is referred to the Audit Board, 4637——Harmonious working of the War-office and Audit-office, 4638, 4639——Illustration of the minute examination to which accounts are subjected by the auditors of the department, 4640–4644——There is but one Audit-office clerk permanently attached to the department; the audit inspector pays only occasional visits, 4646.

Home Department. Circumstance of the account of the department having been overdrawn by the paymaster in April 1852, in advance of the Exchequer credit, Anderson 3459, 3460.

Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Houses of Parliament. Paper showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

I.

Illegality. See Appropriation. Exchequer. Pay-office. Treasury.

Imprests, &c. Payment to the Exchequer of imprests and repayments mainly by the Paymaster-general, Right hon. Lord Monteagle 495, 508. 511——Analogy between the Commissariat Chest account and the Civil Contingencies vote, as regards advances and repayments, ib. 766.

Impossibility of a separate account of Exchequer credits, and of strict appropriation in the case of imprest bills drawn by the navy or ordnance, Anderson 1286——Explanation of the sums issued in advance by the Paymaster-general, under the general term of "Imprest," ib. 1444——Advances are made to all the imprest accounts at home as well as abroad, during peace as well as war, ib. 1745.

The imprest to the several subordinate paymasters ultimately becomes chargeable to the vote of the service for which issued, Anderson 1745–1749——Practice of the Pay-office in regard to imprest payments on the army and navy, ib. 2213. 2215——The army services, as paid on Royal Warrant, consist partly of final payments, but principally of imprests, ib. 2213——Uniform system in all the departments with reference to the mode in which they are brought to account for imprest, ib. 2216

Report, 1856—continued.

Imprests, &c.—continued.

Care taken by the Audit officer of naval accounts that any so-termed payment is not imprest, or an advance for which a future account is to be rendered, Vine 3305——Mode of final audit in the case of imprests to public accountants, Romilly 4223. 4235.

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that the half-yearly imprest rolls should be abolished, App. p. 465.

Regulations in Treasury Minutes of 9 May 1837 (relative to the Exchequer, Ireland) and 19 August 1836, with respect to imprests, App. p. 488. 492.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in 1854, as to the large sum paid under the head of "Imprests," and the impracticability of Exchequer control in such case, App. p. 556.

Account of all imprest monies repaid by public accountants, and the public monies paid into the Exchequer in the year ended 31 March 1855, made out at Exchequer as Accounts of Receipts (Great Britain) in which discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the Finance Accounts, appear, App. p. 766, 767.

See also Commissariat Chest Account. Foreign Expenditure. Navy, 4. 6. Repayments (Exchequer). Transfers between Departments. Unappropriated Votes.

Income. Recommendation by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, in 1853, that income alone, after deducting deposit, drawbacks, &c., should be accounted for to the Exchequer, App. p. 569——Clear distinction drawn between receipt and income, ib.

Income Tax. Return showing the gross income of the Income and Property Tax, distinguishing the total sums received, the sum paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purpose for which paid, and the net sum paid into the Exchequer, for the years 1854-5 and 1855-6, App. p. 624, 625.

Income Tax (Her Majesty). Explanation of the course adopted by witness in 1843, as opposed to the views of the Treasury, with respect to the voluntary contribution by the Queen of her proportion of the income tax, Right hon. Lord Monteagle 859——Absence of power in witness to have deducted the income tax, unless an Act of Parliament had been passed, ib.——Concurrence of Sir R. Peel in the views expressed by witness, ib.

Indian Department (Canada). Reference to a vote in 1849, for the Indian department in Canada, upon which the last issue by the Paymaster-general was in 1854, Right hon. Lord Monteagle 740.

Individual Control. Best attainment of the objects of the finance system by placing the finances under one individual control and responsibility, Anderson 940.

Inland Revenue. According to Sir J. Graham's Bill for the navy, the audited accounts of the Excise do not come before Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 445, 446——Means other than that proposed by Sir J. Graham for securing that no service should be charged under a wrong vote, ib. 449——Payment to the Exchequer of certain duties upon pensions and offices by the Inland Revenue department, ib. 492.

Return showing the gross income of the Excise, distinguishing the total sums received, the sum paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purpose for which paid, and the authority for such payment, and the net sums paid into the Exchequer for the years 1854-5 and 1855-6, App. p. 624, 625.

Return showing the amount of each vote for the years ending 31 March 1855 and 1856, the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and the date when drawn by the accountants from the Exchequer account; showing also the payment of certain consequent amounts into the Exchequer account under the same heads of revenue; App. p. 631, 632.

See also Collection of Revenue. Drawbacks. Gross Revenue. Redemption of Pensions.

Instrument of Appointment. Requirement by witness before issuing the payment of salaries that the instrument of appointment be furnished to him, Right hon. Lord Monteagle 2985-2987. 2989-3000——Importance of this instrument being furnished to witness; illustration of this; *ib.*2985, 2986. 2994-3000——Refusal of the Treasury a year or two ago to continue the invariable practice of furnishing the Exchequer with the instrument of appointment; pressure under which they yielded to witness's views; ib. 2985, 2986. 2989-3000——Withdrawal of the instrument of appointment specially adverted to as an irregularity attempted in recent years, ib. 3079.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury in 1854-55, with reference to the withholding of the instrument of appointment in the case of Mr. Romilly and generally, App. p. 741-756——Letter from the Comptroller, dated 31 October 1854, adducing sundry arguments in support of his requirement for the production of patents, warrants, &c., before he sanctions issues for salaries or pensions, ib. 742-747——Statement, in concluding this letter, that the transmission to the Exchequer of the instruments of appointment, &c. is indispensable, and cannot be set aside save by the authority of Parliament, ib. 747.

See also Queen Dowager's Annuity.

Report, 1856—continued.

Ionian Government. Letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to the Treasury, dated 3 September 1853, with respect to payments for the Ionian Government not having been made according to direction; reply thereto; App. p. 711, 712.

Ireland. In Ireland the mode of payment to the Exchequer is, essentially, the same as in England, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 27.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, in 1831, as to the complex arrangements of the English Exchequer being dispensed with in Ireland, App. p. 458, 459——Statement in the Report of the Public Income or Revenues of Ireland, all of which are paid into the Bank of Ireland, ib. 459.

Minute of the Lords of the Treasury, prescribing regulations and orders for the government of the Exchequer in Dublin, issued under the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 83, 9 May 1837, App. p. 485-491.

Regulations in Treasury Minute of May 1837, in regard to the establishment in Ireland for discharging the duties of the office of Paymaster of Civil Services, App. p. 490, 491.

Minute by the Comptroller-general, in July 1840, as to the inadequate balance in Ireland to meet quarterly charge, App. p. 650.

Letter from the Assistant Comptroller of the Exchequer to the Treasury, dated 21 October 1850, requesting notice from the Treasury that certain payments into the Irish Exchequer have the sanction of the Treasury, App. p. 685.

Issues (Exchequer). Plain duty of witness not to issue, or sanction the issue, of more than Parliament has granted, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 603. 606. 617-619. 631 et seq.—— In Exchequer language every credit is an issue, though not of money, ib. 2791——As regards the mode of issue of Exchequer credits there has been no deviation from the law, ib. 2888. 3081. 3084——Reference to the issue upon Royal Orders in 1852, as the only instance of deviation from the law in regard to Exchequer practice, ib. 3081.

Duty of the Comptroller-general to see that the issues for Consolidated Fund services, and supply services, do not exceed the amount voted, Anderson 998-1000. 1007—— Form of proceeding, through means of a Royal Order and Treasury Warrant, in regard to the issue by the Exchequer for supply services, ib. 1001-1006——Advantage if the Treasury or the Exchequer issued from a common fund, and only charged the votes with the sums actually supplied, ib. 1308. 3532 et seq.——Reference to the Treasury Minute of December 1848, as directing a check upon issues, which witness maintains has as far as possible been carried out, ib. 1729 et seq.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, in 1831, as to the forms by which certain issues from the Exchequer are regulated, App. p. 462—— Statement in the Report as to the manner in which money is issued from the Exchequer for the army, navy, and ordnance services, ib. 462, 463——Suggestions in the Report for supplying the issues of money, ib. 463.

Statement by Lord Monteagle, in his Memorandum of 1854, as to the several steps which are required by law to be taken to justify any issue of public money, App. p. 537.

See also Appropriation. Audit. Balances. Control. Exchequer. Legality. Pay-office. Royal Orders. Treasury.

J.

Judges' Salaries. Misappropriation and illegality in the payment of the salaries of the judges without an Exchequer warrant, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2796-2798——Necessity of the patent or instrument of appointment being furnished to the Exchequer in the case of judicial officers as well as generally, ib. 2980-2997.——See also Law and Justice.

K.

Kaffir War. Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury, in 1852, as to irregular issue of Royal Orders with respect to the Kaffir war, &c., App. p. 699-703.

Kensington Gore Estate. Explanation as to the issue by witness of 150,000 l., at the pressing solicitation of the Treasury, towards the purchase of land at Kensington Gore, before the period at which the money was legally applicable, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 806-808 ——Indemnity required by witness in regard to this issue, ib. 807—— Very great inconvenience if the money had not been advanced before the regulated time, ib.

Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 24 March 1853, explaining the conditions under which he will issue 150,000 l. as requested, such issue being stated to be irregular, App. p. 707.

Letter in reply to the foregoing, dated 5 April 1853, referring to the general question between the Exchequer and Treasury in regard to issue and appropriation, App. p. 708.

Report, 1856—continued.

L.

Labouchere Drainage (Ireland). Statement of sums due, paid, and outstanding, from 10 October 1848 up to 10 October 1855, in respect of the Labouchere drainage, App. p. 621.

Labuan. Explanation relative to the advance of 1,564 l. for Labuan, in 1854-55, after the discontinuance of the vote; understanding that it will be repaid out of colonial monies, Anderson 2124-2135.

Expenditure, as in the case of Labuan, without Parliamentary sanction would not be noticed by the Audit Board, Romilly 4273-4275.

Land and Assessed Taxes. Return showing the gross income of land and assessed taxes, distinguishing the total sums received, the sum paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purpose for which paid, and the net sum paid into the Exchequer, for the years 1854-55 and 1855-56, App. p. 624, 625.

Land Revenue. See Redemption of Pensions, 2. Woods and Forests.

Landed Property Improvement (Ireland). Statement of sums due, paid, and outstanding, from 5 April 1848 to 10 October 1855, under this head, App. p. 620.

Law and Justice. Non-interference, practically, of the Treasury with the expenditure on account of law and justice, Anderson 2154——Under the head of courts of justice, the first payment from the Consolidated Fund charges for 1852 was on 7 April, and the Exchequer audit was not till the 28th April, ib. 3439, 3440——Statement as to the account of law charges, Scotland, having been overdrawn by the paymaster for a short time in June 1852, ib. 3467-3469.

Statement in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, as to the authority for the payments under the heading of Courts of Justice, App. p. 521.

Letter from the Comptroller of the Exchequer to the Treasury, dated 31 July 1846, as to the consolidation of four votes for law charges in one Royal Order, App. p. 682—— Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury, dated in 1851 and 1852, as to issue of salaries for courts of justice, Ireland, ib. 693-698.

Papers delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts for certain expenditure connected with law and justice are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Legality. The exceptions taken by witness to the present practice of appropriation (or, rather, of misappropriation) as illegal, have not been replied to, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 849, 850——Expediency of the Treasury or the Exchequer abandoning their opinions before those of the law officers of the Crown, ib. 852——Propriety of the individual judgment of the Comptroller being satisfied of the legality of each issue made by him, ib. 852. 854, 855——Willingness of witness to refer the questions in dispute between him and the Treasury to the law officers of the Crown, and to abide by the result, ib. 2778. 2820, 2821——Strictly legal manner in which all Exchequer issues are made, ib. 2888. 3081. 3084.

Statement as to the opinions of the law officers of the Crown not having been taken, as requested by Lord Monteagle, upon the questions at variance between him and the Treasury, Anderson 1636-1638. 1738——Compliance of the Comptroller-general, and, as witness considers, of the Treasury, with the terms of the Regulation Act, ib. 1639-1643. 1647. 1727-1735——The legal question raised by the Comptroller-general had reference entirely to the practice of the Pay-office in dealing with their floating balance, and not to the practice of the Treasury, ib. 2165-2168. 2254-2256.

See also Appropriation. Exchequer. Pay-office. Treasury.

Loans. Interposition of Parliamentary control in the case of loans as contracted for by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3238-3240. 3259-3263.

See also Repayment of Loans.

Local Expenditure. See Collection of Revenue.

London Bridge. Necessary payment to the Board of Works, or their bankers, instead of to the Exchequer, of the sums received on account of the London Bridge Approaches Fund, Anderson 1531-1533.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Chamberlain of London, in May & June 1856, with respect to discrepancy in payments on account of London Bridge, and to the non-furnishing by the Comptroller of the usual form of acquittance or receipt, Ev. p. 64, and App. p. 757, 758.

Lord Chancellor's Salary. Letter from the Comptroller-general of the Exchequer to the Treasury, dated 11 February 1853, with respect to an overcharge for the Lord Chancellor's salary, App. p. 704.

Report, 1856—continued.

M.

Macaulay, Charles (Analysis of his Evidence). See Romilly, Edward, &c.

Mahony, P. K. (the late). Remarks upon the case of Mr. Mahony, late Accountant-general of the Exchequer, Ireland; the Treasury wished to continue him on the warrant after his decease, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2798–2802——Further evidence with reference to the case of Mr. Mahony, and to the irregularity of the Treasury practice in the matter, ib. 2922–2935.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury, in 1851, relative to the salary of Mr. Mahony, App. p. 687–689.

Manners, Lord, Pension of. Reference to issue of a warrant by the Treasury for Lord Manners' pension, although it was known to witness that he was dead, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2925. 2988.

Correspondence in 1842 between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury relative to a suspended issue for the pension of Lord Manners, in consequence of his death, App. p. 674–677.

Marescalchi, M. de. Copy of a letter from Monsieur de Marescalchi to Viscount Palmerston, dated 7 March 1851, with reference to the composition and functions of the Board of Audit, App. p. 833.

Masterman, Mr. Copy of Mr. Masterman's suggestions for altering the system of exchanging Exchequer bills, of Mr. Anderson's observations thereon, and of Comptroller-general's report, App. p. 792–794.

Melbourne, Lord (Redemption of Pension). See Redemption of Pensions, 2.

Mercantile Marine Fund. Account containing particulars as to the receipts by the Paymaster-general in 1855–56, the amount not being payable to Exchequer, App. p. 825–828.

Militia. Transfer in 1855–56 to the Army Services of a vote of 3,813,000 l. for the embodied militia, Anderson 3639——Explanation as to a considerable portion, or more than half a million, of this vote not having been drawn from the Exchequer or expended at the close of the financial year, ib. 3640–3644. 3648–3651.

The vote of 3,813,333 l. for the militia in 1855–56 has been audited so far as it is recorded in the books of the army, Vine 3983, 3984——Until the whole of the accounts come in, the final audit cannot take place, nor can the amount unexpended be ascertained, ib. 3985–3987.

Ministerial Responsibility. See Parliamentary Control. Treasury.

Mint, The. Two accounts kept by the Mint at the Bank of England, one for bullion the other for the establishment, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 491. 511.

Misappropriation. See Appropriation.

Miscellaneous Receipts. Account of "Miscellaneous Receipts," paid into the Exchequer in the year ended 31 March 1855, in which discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the finance accounts, appear, App. p. 760–764.

Miscellaneous Services. Difficulty as to the time of presentation of the Miscellaneous Estimates, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 386——Decided advantage if there were an audit of the Miscellaneous Services, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 819 et seq.; Hoffay 2635, 2636. 2653 et seq.; Romilly 4394–4399——It is not at present considered the duty of the Audit Board to look to the appropriation of the Miscellaneous votes, Anderson 1017, 1018. 1020. 3385–3387——Expediency of an appropriation audit as regards the Miscellaneous Services; suggestions hereon, ib. 1132–1134. 1389–1393. 1396. 1408–1410. 1419–1430. 2067–2081. 2084.

Necessary alteration in the practice of Parliament in regard to the period of voting the Miscellaneous Estimates before Government can prepare a general account of the Miscellaneous Services, as of the Army and Navy Services, Anderson 1397–1401. 1409. 1419–1427——The voting of the Miscellaneous Estimates before Easter would admit of a system of appropriation within the year, as in the case of the army, navy, &c.; difficulties hereon, ib. 1419–1430. 1445–1448——Advantage if there were a consolidation of the Miscellaneous votes, consistently with the fullest information being given to The House, ib. 1427–1430. 1434–1438. 1449–1455.

With respect to the Paymaster's accounts, the issues for the various services are written into the drawing account on the days on which applied for, Anderson 1591, 1592——On 31 March last the sum remaining on hand of Miscellaneous votes amounted to 4,177,000 l., ib. 1998——Extent to which, as regards the Miscellaneous Estimates, the Treasury is a department of expenditure, ib. 2154–2164——With regard to the Miscellaneous laneous Services in Class VII., most of the grants are specific, and the Treasury only pay within the limits of the grants, ib. 2154.

Report, 1856—continued.

Miscellaneous Services—continued.

Expediency of relieving the Paymaster-general of the duty of checking the expenditure of the Miscellaneous votes, Hoffay 2563. 2566–2568. 2668 et seq.——Separate account kept at the Pay-office of each of the Miscellaneous votes, Anderson 3448——Doubt as any practical difficulty in carrying out an arrangement for voting the miscellaneous payments within the year, and closing the account yearly, Romilly 4394, 4395. 4406–4420.

Statement by Sir Charles Trevelyan, in 1848, as to the importance of furnishing annually to Parliament a report of the miscellaneous expenditure, App. p. 509.

Statement in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, as to the authorities for the payments under the several heads of the Miscellaneous Estimates, App. p. 522.

Paragraphs proposed to form part of the Pay-office Minute of 22 December 1848, relative to the appropriation of the grants for Miscellaneous Services, but not adopted, App. p. 563-565.

Return of the votes under the head of Miscellaneous Estimates, specifying each, since 1841–42, on which there is a surplus of money voted, App. p. 810–813.

Enumeration of services included in the Estimates for Miscellaneous Civil Services for 1855–56, which are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843, 844.

See also Audit, 6. Consolidated Fund. Estimates. Unexpended Balances.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Was appointed Comptroller-general of the Exchequer at the close of the year 1839, under the Bill of 1834, 1–3——The Act of 1834 may be considered the governing statute which now regulates the Exchequer, 4, 5——The duties formerly vested in the Auditors of the Exchequer and Clerk of the Pells, were by the Act continued, provisionally, and transferred to the office of Comptroller, 5.

General definition of the duties of control vested in the Comptroller-general, in regard to the receipt and issue of public monies, 6–8. 157. 207–209——Sundry revenues paid directly into the Exchequer, or indirectly through the Paymaster-general, 9–11——Direct payment by the Office of Woods and Forests adverted to, 11——Indirect payment by the Office of Works, ib.——Objection at first by witness to receive the payments of the Office of Works through the Paymaster-general; how this objection was overcome, ib.

Practice previously to 1834, whereby money was paid into the Bank of England for the Exchequer, through what was termed a specification paper, 12–14——Form of acquittance given by the Exchequer previously to 1834, 13, 14——Simplified and improved regulations under the Act of 1834, in regard to receipts, 14——Disadvantage, however, under the present system in the acquittance being dispensed with, ib.

Adoption in Mr. Gladstone's Act, in 1854, of the principle laid down in the Report of the Exchequer Commission in 1831, that the gross revenue should be paid into the Exchequer, 15, 16. 33. 35——Impracticability of fully carrying out the recommendations of the Report of 1831, in regard to gross and net revenue, 15 et seq.——Explanation of the present system of payment into the Exchequer, showing that as far as possible the gross revenue is received, ib.

Under the new system a vote is taken for the expense of collection, and the payment out of the gross revenue is in the nature of an advance, 16–18. 39——This arrangement takes place by transfer, and not by actual issue of money, 16——Inconvenience and expense of local remittances to London, and then of remittances back again to cover the local expenditure, 16. 32–40.

The system now adopted, though a complicated one, and involving three operations instead of one, comes very near the result of paying the gross amount into the Exchequer and paying out by vote, 16, 17. 39——Paper delivered in relative to votes for revenue departments in 1855 and 1856, showing the amount of each vote, the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and the date when drawn by the accountants from the Exchequer account; also the date and amount of repayment immediately succeeding the issue, Ev. p. 5, 6.

Control by Parliamentary vote in regard to the payment of expenses of collection, 18. 39. 191–205——Absence of check by witness with respect to payments out of revenue before it is paid into the Exchequer; he has, in fact, no cognisance of such payments, 19–26. 30, 31. 154–159. 190–209——Money is not actually paid in or out of the Exchequer, the whole being done by account at the Bank of England, 20——Reference to an issue of 213,000 l. in 1856, for the redemption of hereditary pensions as not having been made by the Exchequer, and as being an issue to which witness would have objected, 22–26. 44. 48.

Practice in regard to payment by the receivers-general into the Bank of England, the amount amount left in their hands being regulated by the Treasury, 27-29——In Ireland the mode of payment to the Exchequer is in essence the same as in England, 27——Strong approval of the abstract principle that no portion of the public revenue should be arrested on its way to the Exchequer, 36, 37——Also of the principle that the expenses of the revenue be the subject of estimate and of Parliamentary control, 37. 40.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Reference to the views of Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson as being in the main in accordance with those of witness in regard to the gross and net principle, 38-40——The system of local payments would seem, under the Act of 1854, to be dispensed with, but such is not the case, nor was such the intention of the Act, 39. 52-54——The present system cannot be considered as fully realising the gross and net principle, 40.

Further evidence relative to the payment of 213,000 l. out of gross revenue for the redemption of hereditary pensions; the same having been accomplished without a vote of Parliament or the cognisance of the Exchequer, shows that the Act of 1854 is in its present form defective, 41 et seq.——Redemption in 1825 of a pension payable to the first Lord Melbourne adverted to as having been effected without Parliamentary sanction, 45-49. 51. 82-90——Redemption, on the other hand, of sundry pensions on which the principle of Parliamentary sanction was, most properly, required, 48 et seq. 132, 133——Parliamentary sanction required by Lord Grey and witness when, as Secretary to the Treasury, witness was entrusted with the commutation of some small claims, 48, 49. 65-72. 140.

Particulars as to the redemption, by Parliamentary vote, of the perpetual annuities paid to the heirs of Colonel Fairfax and the heirs of Nicholas Yates, such pensions having been chargeable on the Land Revenues of the Crown, 49. 66-72——Also as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the tax paid to the Duke of Grafton on the prizage and butlerage of wines, 49. 73-81——Also as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the annuity to Lord Ormond, also paid as prizage and butlerage of wines, 49. 81, 82——Also as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the coal-tax termed the Richmond Shilling, payable to the Duke of Richmond, 49. 82-84.

Parliamentary sanction given in 1853, in the case of the extinction, by the Treasury, of certain small charges upon the Land Revenue, 50. 63-65——Reference to the statement by Mr. Gladstone in introducing the Act as bearing upon the question of the redemptions in 1856; 52, 53. 97. 98——The Act of 1854 had, circuitously, the effect of the payment of the gross revenue into the Exchequer, 52-59——Evident object of the Act that all expenditure, save in exceptional cases, should come under the cognisance of Parliament, 53-56. 102 et seq.——Legality, so to speak, of payments out of gross revenue, without Parliamentary sanction, in cases not included in the schedules of the Act, 60, 61. 98-110.

Power, without Parliamentary sanction, to make purchases out of the capital of the Land Revenue, 73. 94, 95——Redemption in 1853, out of gross revenue, of the pension of Earl Cowper, chargeable on the Excise and on the Land Revenues, 91-95——Limit to the power of expenditure by the Treasury since the Act of 1854; 103-106——Illegality of payments out of the Exchequer, unless made by a direct vote of Parliament, or charged by Act of Parliament upon the Consolidated Fund, 108, 109.

Evidence relative to a large amount of superannuation allowances still left chargeable on the gross revenue; how far desirable to interpose Parliamentary sanction in these cases, 111-131——Want of due particulars which led The House of Lords to report against the provision in the first Bill of 1854, placing certain superannuation allowances upon the Supply votes, 113-131——Disapproval of any large expenditure by the Treasury, whether in commutations or otherwise, without the sanction of Parliament, or the cognisance of the Exchequer, 134-153——Undue precedent in 1826 for the transaction in 1856, without the knowledge of Parliament, 142-145. 151-153.

Main principle of the Act of 1854, that those things only should be paid out of gross revenue which could not conveniently be otherwise paid, 146-149——Desire generally of the Treasury, more especially since 1830, to include in the Parliamentary estimate all expenditure capable of estimate, 150——Direct control of witness as regards all monies, when once paid into the Exchequer, 154-157. 207-209——He has no cognisance whatever of what has previously been deducted or paid out of gross revenue, 154-159. 190-209.

Practice in regard to the date of presentation of the Finance Accounts to Parliament adverted to as showing the time at which the transaction involving the payment of 213,000 l. would have been made known, 160-180——Uselessness of the Finance Accounts for the proceedings of the year, on account of their not being presented early in the Session, 162-168. 177, 178. 210——Arrangement formerly in regard to the dates of making up and presenting these accounts; advantages thereof over the present practice, as commenced under the Act of 1854; 162, 163. 170-180.

The account of balances in the Exchequer, stating the payment of 213,000 l. as an issue out of the Exchequer, produces a false impression, inasmuch as the money was not paid into or out of the Exchequer at all, 180-186. 188, 189——Check exercised by the

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Treasury upon any excess of the payments out of gross revenue over the sum voted by Parliament for expense of collection, 190–206.

[Second Examination.]—Further evidence relative to the statement by Mr. Gladstone in 1854, with respect to the purchase of certain outstanding pensions; nothing was said or inferred as to the mode in which the purchase was to be made, 211–224——Concurrence in Mr. Gladstone's views as to the expediency of redeeming these pensions, 215, 216——Distinction as regards the authorised mode of purchase between Earl Cowper's pension, purchased in 1853, and the pension purchased in 1856; 217–224——Further statement as to the undue lapse of time before the communication to Parliament of the purchase of 1856; 225–229.

Account in illustration of the practice, since 1830, of adding to the vote of Parliament, as much as is susceptible of estimate, and of diminishing the appropriated sums, 229—— Confirmation of former statement as to the Lords' Committee having objected to transfer certain pensions and superannuations to the Annual Vote through the want of particulars concerning them, 229–231.

With regard to the Finance Accounts for the last year, though ordered to be printed on 6 July, they were not in the hands of Members till 6 October, 231 ——If not presented long before the end of the Session, the accounts are, for practical purposes, useless, or nearly so, 231–233——The paper called the Statistical Account, and the paper called Mr. Cardwell's Account, though very useful documents, by no means supply the place of the Finance Accounts, 234. 299, 300.

Further evidence, intended to show that the change in 1854 in making up the Finance Accounts to April, instead of to January, in order to agree with the financial year, is, on the whole, a disadvantage, 235 et seq. ——Statement as to Lord Althorpe having, in 1832, altered the commencement of the financial year from January to April, without any alteration of the Finance Accounts; views expressed by witness at the time, 236. 239. 247–252——Incorrectness of the new accounts, more especially in the variation of the headings, as shown by those relating to the Exchequer, through the want of proper time and care in their preparation, 237, 238. 258. 276. 286. 322 et seq.

Inexpediency of the recent system of the Treasury in making up the Finance Accounts without due reference to the several departments, 237. 258. 322 et seq.—— Approval of the change merely of the financial year from January to April, 239, 240. 297——Suggestion that the Financial Accounts be made up to January, notwithstanding that they would not tally with the financial year, 241–246. 266 et seq.——How far the system of quarterly audit by the Audit Board, and the comparison of the expenditure of the revenue departments with the votes of Parliament, may argue in favour of the Finance Accounts being made up to April, 253–263.

Important detailed information as to expenditure, as well as revenue, contained in the Finance Accounts, 264, 265——Means, as successfully adopted in the years 1832–54, for instituting an approximately correct comparison between the estimated and the actual year expenditure when the Finance Accounts do not tally with the financial year, 266–269. 291, 292. 297——Special disadvantage of any system whereby the accounts are delivered late in the Session, as must be the case, notwithstanding any improvement, whilst the accounts are made up to April, 270–276. 281. 287–290. 317–321.

Facility for substituting accounts to January for those to April, 275——Approval of such substitution, notwithstanding that thereby the uniformity of series would again be broken, 276——Advantage if, as preliminary to the annual Finance Accounts, there were a system of nine months' accounts to January (as suggested by Sir J. Graham), 277–279. 282–285. 287. 291, 292——Though a nine months' account to January would be better than the new accounts, witness would, on the whole, prefer a return to the old practice, 280. 282. 291–296.

Absence of means of comparison between the expenditure for the year 1854–55 with the expenditure previously on account of the alteration since 1854 in the heads of the account, 286. 322 et seq.——Importance of relative information adverted to, 286. 291——Variation in the last Finance Accounts of the heads of account of imprest monies, &c., as relating to the Exchequer, 286. 323–327——As a matter of account it would be well if the financial accounts corresponded with the Estimates, but in practice it is not desirable, 297, 298.

Accident as to date under which, if the Finance Accounts were made up to January, the commutation of pensions in 1856 would not appear in the accounts till 1857; 301–308 —— Reason why the purchase of Lord Cowper's pension has not appeared in the accounts at all, 303——Though of late years the accounts if made up to January would not have been in time for the financial statement of the year, still they would have been very useful as compared with delivery towards the end of the Session, 309–321.

Decided objection to the system whereby two accounts representing precisely the same transactions may, and do, differ very much, 322. 328–339——Particulars showing the

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

the actual discrepancies between the Exchequer accounts as prepared by witness, and the same accounts as prepared by the Treasury for appearance in the Finance Accounts, 322 et seq.——Further statement as to the existence of errors in the Finance Accounts on account of the late period of making up such accounts, involving undue dispatch in their preparation, 328, 329. 332–334——The form of account adopted by witness was in the first instance regulated by the Treasury, 335, 336.

Examination with respect to the relative amount of the balances of the Exchequer account and Exchequer credit account at the Banks of England and Ireland, and of the same balances as given by the Treasury; probable explanation hereon as to discrepancies in the Treasury account, 340–380——Accuracy of the balances in the Exchequer account, the sums being vouched for by the actual certificates of the Bank, 353. 355. 358. 362–366.

Great importance of the Estimates being presented as early as possible after the assembling of Parliament, 381. 386——As a rule the sooner the Estimates are voted the better, 381–386——Inexpediency of requiring the annual financial statement to be made before a Ways and Means Act has been passed or any votes have been taken in Committee of Supply, 382–386——Difficulty as to the time of presentation of the Miscellaneous Estimates, 386.

Belief that the expenditure incidental to the management of the property under the Commissioners of Woods and Forests takes place without Parliamentary vote or sanction, 387. 429–434——Expediency of a Parliamentary vote in the case of the Woods and Forests, if it be possible, to render the expense of management susceptible of estimate, 388. 435——Practical difficulty in carrying out any effectual system of estimate; uncertainty and peculiarity of the items of expenditure by the department adverted to hereon, 388. 397–404. 407–428.

Statement showing that the Woods and Forests form an exception to the practice of payment of all revenues into the Exchequer, 389–396——Check by the Treasury over the expenditure of the Woods and Forests; general adequacy thereof, 394. 402, 403——Objection to the items of expenditure being lumped together in large sums; this, however, has been amended lately, 405, 406——Advantage of the sale of small Crown properties, 407. 436——Absence of check on account of the late period at which the report of the Commissioners is issued, 429–434.

With a proper list of charges of pensions and superannuations upon the Excise, there would be no difficulty in distributing these charges between the Consolidated Fund and the votes of Parliament, 438, 439——Difficulty of estimates in the case of some payments in the shape of drawbacks from the Excise revenue, 440–442——All charges should as a principle be paid by Parliamentary vote, excepting only certain charges in the shape of drawback and repayments, 443, 444.

According to Sir J. Graham's Bill for the navy, the audited accounts of the Excise do not come before Parliament, 445, 446——Propriety of the Audit-office presenting the same accounts in regard to the revenue departments as in regard to the navy, 447, 448——Objection to the non-audit of the Exchequer account, the same being sent to the Board of Audit for the purpose, 448——Means other than that proposed by Sir J. Graham, for securing that no service should be charged under a wrong vote, 449.

Further reference to the circumstance of witness having no cognizance of the actual monies paid to the Receiver-general of Excise, &c. 450, 451——As regards the monies in the hands of the Receivers-general a check might be exercised by witness if he were informed by the Bank of the amount of their several balances, and by the Treasury of the amount which they are limited to hold, 452–462. 467, 468——Question as to the propriety of the principle that the Exchequer should extend its control to the Receiver's balances, 461–467.

Further explanation as to the abolition of the acquittance formerly given by witness to any party paying money into the account of the Exchequer at the Bank of England, 469–471——Examination as to the practical utility of this acquittance, inasmuch as the party paying the money gets a receipt from the Bank; reasons in favour of a direct acquittance from witness, 471–487——Some of the parties paying have complained of being deprived of the acquittance, 484.

[Third Examination.]—Reference to a letter on the part of the corporation of the city of London to witness, dated 29 April 1856, with respect to certain sums paid to the credit of the Exchequer at the Bank of England, and requesting to be furnished with the usual certificates of acquittance, 489.

Particular cases in which the receipts which come into the Exchequer are paid by the Paymaster-general or otherwise than through the revenue departments, 490–509——List of accountants and public accounts as fixed by the Treasury Minute of 1834; 491——Payment of certain duties upon pensions and offices by the Inland Revenue Department, 492. 609——Payment of surplus fees of regulated public offices mainly by by the Paymaster-general, 493, 494.——Mode of payment of the hereditary revenues, 495.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Payment of imprests and repayments mainly by the Paymaster-general, 495. 508. 511——Payment of the produce of old stores, as for the navy, through the Paymaster-general; very objectionable practice herein, involving undue delay and want of control, 496–502. 512–515——Payment of the land revenues of the Crown by the Office of Woods, further adverted to, 503——Payments of the Office of Works through the Paymaster-general further explained, as not having been made till some objections raised by witness were removed, 503, 504——Direct payment in the case of the East India Company, 505, 506——Payment of the unclaimed dividends by the Bank of England, 507——Different modes in England and Ireland of repayment of advances on account of public works, 508, 509. 511.

Tendency of late years to increased payments into the Exchequer through the Paymaster in lieu of the system of payment through individuals and offices, 510, 511——Practice generally in the case of navy payments passing through the Paymaster; delay before the transfer to the Exchequer, 512–517. 548–551——Absence of check by the Exchequer in regard to the accounts of the paymaster in the case of navy Payments to him, 512. 514–517. 522. 526. 531 et seq.——Strong objection to the complex system of paying money received from the public accountants through the Paymaster, not only as delaying the public money in its progress to the Exchequer, but as endangering the obligations of the Appropriation Act, 517–522. 532. 544 et seq.

Objectionable mode formerly in which the receipts for old stores were accounted for, 518, 519. 577——As a general principle the receipts for old stores, &c., should go direct into the Exchequer instead of indirectly through the Paymaster, 520–532. 546. 548. 573. 578–584——In exceptional instances only should the Paymaster be an officer of receipt of money, other than from the Exchequer, 522–527——Explanation as to the refusal of witness to accept the receipt of the Assistant Paymaster in the case of the Supply Exchequer Bills, 528–530. 533, 534.

General legal authority inherent in the Treasury in regard to the issue of minutes and the disposal of public monies, 535–543——Instances of payment through the Paymaster of absolute revenue, independently of the receipts for old stores, rents, &c., 544–547——Want of control over the Paymaster in regard to the transfer of receipts for old stores further adverted to as very inexpedient, 548–551——Different control of the Paymaster over the cash account in his name at the Bank of England, and over the Exchequer credit account which also stands in his name, 552–570.

Importance of a distinct Parliamentary appropriation as compared with what is termed a Treasury control, 554–558. 586–608——High misdemeanor of the Treasury or Paymaster-general, if, after having obtained money from the Exchequer for any one specific purpose, they apply it to another, 558–561. 563. 566–570——Cognizance of witness of operations upon Exchequer credit accounts transferred to the name of the Paymaster-general, though as regards the expenditure thereof he has no control, 562–572——Doubt as to the nature of the audit check upon the Paymaster in regard to the mode of account for receipts for old stores, 571, 572. 600.

Bad effect of the consolidation of the pay offices as resulting in the placing of an unduly large unappropriated balance in the hands and at the control of the Paymaster-general, 574–576. 585, 586. 592–599——Confusion of accounts through the consolidation, 575, 576——Balance of 1,400,000 l. on Exchequer credit accounts in the hands of the Paymaster on 31 March last, 576——Upon constitutional grounds, it is very objectionable that large unappropriated sums, on account of old stores, &c., should remain for any time in the hands of the Paymaster with a power in the Treasury to deal with them as they choose for the time being, 580. 585, 586. 604–608.

The receipts for old stores after reaching the Admiralty should, in fact, at once be transferred to the Exchequer, instead of to the Paymaster, 581–584. 587–589——Belief that the Treasury regulations of late years have not practically resulted in more direct payments into the Exchequer than was the case previously, 592–596. 599. 611–613——Witness has known monies to remain for months and years in the hands of the Paymaster, employed probably for purposes other than were intended, 599. 611–613——Strict Treasury regulations in regard to the disbursements by the Paymaster individually, the impeccability of whose department is, moreover, above all doubt and suspicion, 601, 602.

The application of unappropriated funds is out of the jurisdiction of the Exchequer, 603——The Comptroller-general controls merely the amount of issues as appropriated by Parliament, 603. 606——When money is once transferred from the Exchequer to the Paymaster, witness's functions cease, 605, 606——A question has arisen between witness and the Treasury in regard to his authority with respect to the specific appropriation of monies after they have left his hands, 608.

Confusion of account through the payment in one sum of fines and fees by the Paymaster, 610——Practice in regard to the issue of Exchequer bills by the Comptroller to the the paymaster for ways and means purposes, 614, 615——Particulars as to a question between the Treasury and witness in regard to the payment to the Exchequer of premiums on Exchequer bills issued in 1853, for the purpose of raising a definite sum of money (500,000 l.), 616–620. 627 et seq.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

In the matter of these premiums witness refers to his correspondence with the Treasury in 1853–54, as showing his grounds of argument that the premiums being so much in excess of the vote on the Appropriation Act, should be repaid to the Exchequer account, 616–618. 636–645——Plain duty of witness not to issue, or sanction the issue of, more than Parliament has granted, 617–619. 631 et seq.——Argument put forward by the Treasury that the bills having been computed at par in the Appropriation Act, the Exchequer control applied only to them at par, 619.

Former precedents adverted to of repayments to the Exchequer of premiums on Exchequer bills, 619——Order eventually, in January 1854, for the payment of the premiums in question to witness, 619. 644. 662——Persistence, notwithstanding, of the Treasury in their opinion that the matter of the premiums rested between them and Parliament, 619. 644, 645. 662——Disposal of Exchequer bills to the Bank of England in 1840; return of the premiums in this case to the Exchequer, 620.

Receipt at times by the Exchequer in the shape of loans from the Bank on Deficiency bills, 620——Object of the issue of Deficiency bills, 620, 621——Explanation of the practice of account formerly in settling the amount of Deficiency bills that would be required; joint action of the Exchequer and the Treasury, 621, 622. 676–686——Change of practice in 1854, whereby, contrary to witness's remonstrances, now repeated, his check in regard to the amount of Deficiency bills was entirely withdrawn, and the matter left to the sole arbitrament of the Treasury, 623–626. 676–686——Comment on the act of the Treasury in withholding from witness the information contained in the quarterly warrant for charges on the Consolidated Fund, 624–626. 676–686.

Authority of the Treasury, under Act of Parliament, to issue Exchequer bills for ways and means purposes, 627–631——Absence of authority in the Treasury to apply a larger amount of ways and means than the supply which such ways and means is intended to cover, 631 et seq.——Untenable argument of the Treasury, shown by the opposition that there had been a discount instead of a premium on the bills; witness argues that in such case he would have been perfectly justified in supplying the deficiency, 634, 635. 651–659——The correspondence of the Treasury shows that they contended all through that the premiums should not be accounted for to the Exchequer, 636–645. 662.

Improvement upon the present practice if the proceeds of Exchequer bills were paid into the Consolidated Fund, and credits were issued thence according to the legal demands of the public service, 667——As a general rule, admitting of exceptions, the Treasury should hand over to the Exchequer all profits, if unappropriated, 668–675——Importance of the power of issuing Deficiency bills adverted to in connexion with the withdrawal of the check formerly exercised by witness in regard to the issue warrant, 676——Examination as to the usefulness of the check in question, 678–682——Intention of the Exchequer Act to vest this check in witness, 583–686.

Necessary reliance by witness upon Treasury information in regard to the amount paid by the Bank of England in dividends to the public, 687–694——Signature of Exchequer bills by the Comptroller or the Assistant-comptroller, 695——Effectual checks adopted of late years, mainly by witness, for the prevention of forgery and fraud in regard to Exchequer bills, 696, 697——Practice in the event of an issue of Exchequer bills by the Treasury through the Paymaster-general, 700–702——Practice as regards the issue by witness of Exchequer bills for ordinary supply services; when issued to the Bank the proceeds should, in the first instance, always go to the Exchequer account, 703, 704.

[Fourth Examination.]—Delivers in a copy of the former warrant, before the change made on 5 July 1854, for the issue of Deficiency bills, 705——Also a copy of the new warrant after the change on 10 October 1854; 705——Also an account of the income of, and charge upon, the Consolidated Fund in the quarters ended 31 March 1855 and 31 March 1856; 705, 706—— Comment on the incompleteness of the account now rendered through the change in the Treasury warrant for Deficiency bills, 705, 706.

Partial correction of former evidence (Q. 687–694), in regard to the cognizance of witness in the case of dividend warrants; he does, in fact, exercise a very large check in regard to the dividends, 706—— Further reference to the course to be adopted, if by any chance Exchequer bills used for ways and means were at a discount, 706——Copy of Treasury Minute, dated 26 October 1810, with reference to the issue of Exchequer bills; provision therein that premiums on bills for ways and means purposes should be paid to the Consolidated Fund, or, in other words, to the Exchequer, 706.

Statement of the balances of Exchequer credits at the close of each financial year, from 1850 to 1856, and of the number of heads of accounts to which the balances in each year were applicable, 706——Credit of 1,465,384 l. to the paymaster's account, on 31 March 1856; 706——Reference to the variation of words, as regards the term or period in which the votes for the army, navy, and ordnance are taken; object thereof, 707, 708. 768–775——

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Further objection to the non-payment into the Exchequer of premiums on Exchequer bills, 708.

Examination (on the part of the Treasury) showing how far there may have been special reasons for a very large balance in the hands of the paymaster on 31 March 1856; 709–732——Reference to the Exchequer balances of income on the evening of 31 March, as being entirely applicable to the public dividends, 710–712. 717–723——Unduly large balance in the hands of the paymaster in anterior years as well as in 1856; 712——Amount of paymaster's balances in 1854, 1855, and 1856; 712——Detailed account of the unusually large balance on 31 March 1856; 712.

Explanation required in regard to the transfer, on 28 and 29 March, of 367,384 l. 11 s., from the Exchequer account to the paymaster's account for the convict service, 714. 724–729——How far the practice of the Treasury to keep the paymaster's balance as low as possible on Exchequer credits, 725–727——How far the practice also for the paymaster's drawing account to be fed from day to day from the cash accounts of the Exchequer credit account, 728–732.

Explanation of the mode in which a surplus standing to the Exchequer credit account is dealt with, 733–740——Absence of check by witness in regard to the disposal of savings; such matter resting with the Treasury, 733–739——Reference to suggestions made by witness to the Treasury, and well received by them, in regard to accumulated balances being declared as savings, 737. 739. 740. 763. 802——Defect in there being no regulated examination into unexpended balances in the case of miscellaneous or civil services, 740. 763, 764. 802. 819–834——Several instances of sums transferred from the Exchequer, and remaining for a considerable time in the hands of the paymaster before expenditure or re-transfer to the Exchequer, 740–743. 776, 777.

Particulars relative to the vote of 80,000 l. for the funeral of the Duke of Wellington; complaint as regards an unappropriated balance of 24,886 l. remaining in the hands of the paymaster since April 1853, and applied to other purposes, 744–750. 778–806——Refusal of witness to issue the amount of this vote till the period had arrived for which it was appropriated by Parliament, 744.

Belief that very regularly the whole of the civil contingencies vote has been drawn out of the Exchequer, 751, 752——Considerable reduction of late in the vote for civil contingencies, 751. 761——Doubt as to what has become of the surplus of the vote over the expenditure in recent years; belief that no surplus or balance has been left in the Exchequer, 753–762——If there had been a saving in the vote in any year, the estimate for the following year should be reduced by a similar amount, 755. 760.

Expediency of Parliament being made equally cognizant of outstanding balances in the case of civil service votes as of the great service votes, 763, 764——Doubt as to any necessity of a larger vote for civil contingencies if placed under the supervision of the Audit Board, 765——The civil contingencies vote includes final payments, and is partly made up of advances and repayments, 765–767. 809–815. 821, 822. 841——It is a very convenient and necessary part of the financial service of the country, 765. 812–814. 835–838. 842–845——Analogy between the commissariat chest account and the civil contingencies vote, as regards advances and repayments, 766.

Explanation as to the issue by witness of 150,000 l., at the pressing solicitation of the Treasury, towards the purchase of land at Kensington Gore, before the period in which the money was legally applicable, 806–808——Inexpediency of any large reduction of the civil contingencies vote, 809–817. 835–845——Usefulness of the commissariat chest account, 812–814.

Belief that the civil contingencies account as kept at the Treasury is a very strict and accurate one, 818. 825, 826——Impression that the account is not under the control of the Board of Audit, but is subject entirely to the Treasury, 819–830——Opinion strongly in favour of extending the system of audit to the civil contingencies and miscellaneous services generally, 819–835. 843. 846——Concurrence in Mr. Romilly's views, that there should be an independent audit in the case of the Treasury accounts, and of all votes taken by the Treasury, 828–834——Approval of an augmentation of the contingency vote if necessary for the enforcement of strict appropriation, 846.

Explanation of the origin of the Exchequer memorandum, dated February 1854, laid by witness before Mr. Gladstone, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, 847——Copy of letter, dated 16 February 1854, accompanying this memorandum, and urging the importance of the strictest system of administration and Parliamentary appropriation, 847——Sundry parties to whom witness sent copies of his memorandum, 847——The replies by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson to the statement put forward by witness in 1854, have in no wise shaken his views upon the question of appropriation, 847, 848.

The exceptions taken by witness to the present practice of appropriation as illegal have not been replied to, 849, 850——Sir C. Trevelyan's paper of 1848 was not, for some reason, communicated to the Select Committee of that year, nor was it seen by witness till till very recently, 851——Inaccurate representation in Sir C. Trevelyan's paper of 1848, with respect to the circumstances under which Lord Grenville, when Auditor of the Exchequer, withdrew his objections to the issue of money as interest on the Russian-Dutch loan, 852–858.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Expediency of the Treasury or the Exchequer abandoning their opinions before those of the law officers of the Crown, 852——Propriety of the individual judgment of the Comptroller being satisfied of the legality of each issue made by him, 852. 854, 855——Explanation of the course adopted by witness in 1843, as opposed to the views of the Treasury, with respect to the voluntary contribution by Her Majesty of her proportion of the income tax, 859——Totally erroneous statement in Sir C. Trevelyan's paper of 1848, that the question as to the deduction of the income tax from the Crown was the only instance in which witness, as Comptroller-general, had exercised a practical check over the Treasury, 859 et seq.

Witness produces a long list of specific cases of control over the Treasury, and gives explanations thereon, as showing his exercise of the principle of Parliamentary appropriation, 860 et seq.——Explanatory statement with reference to the strict adherence by witness in 1841 to the intentions of Parliament in dividing the votes for miscellaneous supplies between two appropriations, 861 et seq.——Refusal of witness in this matter to act in accordance with Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants directing an indiscriminate issue without reference to the time, as in the Appropriation Act, 861——Confirmation by the law officers of the Crown of the views adopted by witness, 861——Eventually a governing warrant was prepared, at witness's suggestion, and acted upon, 861. 912–920.

Refusal also of witness, in 1852, to sanction issues, as directed in Royal Warrants, to remedy the errors in which a governing warrant was subsequently passed, 861. 885. 919——Importance of the control exercised by witness in the case which occurred in 1841, though as regards the actual amount of the issue at the disposal of the Treasury the check did not apply, 862 et seq.——Want of ways and means to cover the supply in the mode asked for by the Treasury in 1841; 864. 866. 870, 871. 907–911.

Distinct votes in separate Appropriation Acts in regard to the Army Estimates in 1841 adverted to as clearly calling for a strict adherence to the principle of appropriation; examination in defence of witness's mode of action in the matter, 867 et seq.——Above 200 instances of control are included in the cases alluded to in 1841 and 1852; 888. 928——By an examination of the list produced by witness the Committee can best judge as to the most important instances of control, 889. 921. 927–930.

Principle of appropriation, through the control of witness, in the case of the Duke of Wellington's funeral, further adverted to, 892–896——Explanation as to the Civil List expenditure for the past year having amounted to 396,457 l. 10 s., whereas the amount of the Parliamentary grant is only 385,000 l.; 922–926——Reference to the power of Her Majesty under the Civil List Act to grant pensions every year to the amount of 1,200 l.; 923–925.

[Fifth Examination.]—Explanatory statement (with reference to former evidence, Q. 751) to the effect that at the close of the year 1855–56 there was a sum of 100,000 l. in the Exchequer to the credit of the Civil Contingency Vote, the same being a balance from previous years, 2734, and App. p. 770.

Examination with reference to the sanction of Parliament having been required in the redemption of the pensions of the Duke of Grafton and the Earl of Ormond, as levied upon the prizage and butlerage of wines; admitted want of precise analogy between such redemptions and the redemptions in 1856; 2735–2741——Repetition, however, of former argument that the redemptions in 1856 were not founded on proper precedents, or on constitutional principles, 2740–2754——Explanation that witness does not offer any opinion as to the legality of the redemptions, 2741. 2745, 2746. 2751.

Recognition by Government of the principle contended for by witness relative to the redemption of pensions, 2746. 2754——Further statement as to the information given to Parliament in 1854 by Mr. Gladstone not having pointed to the direct mode of redemption of these pensions, 2755–2761——Lapse of time before Parliament became cognizant, through the finance accounts, of the redemptions in 1825 and 1853; 2762–2765.

Further evidence as to the confirmation by the law officers of the Crown in 1841 of witness's views on the question of appropriation, 2766–2770——Importance, in principle, of the control exercised by witness over the Treasury in the matter of 1841; 2766. 2770——Argument that whatever be the intention of the Appropriation Acts of 1841, it was imperative on witness to administer them in the sense laid down by the law officers, 2767–2770——Repetition of former opinion that the question of time at which any issue may be directed frequently forms the essence of the legality of the act, 2766. 2772. 2860. 2868. 2890.

Witness fully adheres to the general views expressed by him in the memorandum of 1854 with reference to the doctrine of appropriation, 2771, 2772. 2777——Explanation as to the remarks in the memorandum relative to increased Exchequer control with reference to the charges for collection of the revenue, 2773——Nullity, to a certain extent, of the Exchequer, if the practice of the Pay-office be sanctioned by Parliament, 2773. 2833-2841——Very large sum of unappropriated or extraordinary money placed by Parliament in the hands of Government at the commencement of the late war; advantages thereof; 2774-2776——Doubt, however, whether during the war the Appropriation Act was strictly complied with, 2774, 2775——Admission by Sir C. Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson that money belonging to one head of service is habitually used for another service, 2774. 2778. 2783, 2784. 2787. 2789. 2821, 2822. 2897.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Circumstance of witness having been a party to the consolication of the pay-offices, 2776, 2777——Though beneficial in several respects, the consolidation has been disadvantageous with reference to the practice of misappropriation, 2777. 2805. 2842-2846——Further argument that the constitutional and legal principle of appropriation is directly violated by the use of monies issued under one head of service for the purpose of another service, 2778 et seq.——Willingness of witness to submit the question between the Treasury and the Exchequer to the law officers of the Crown, and to abide by the result, 2778. 2820, 2821——Reference to Mr. Hallam, Mr. Black, and others, as far better authorities than Mr. Anderson or witness upon the antiquity of the Exchequer, and of its control over Government, 2779-2781.

Modification of the original Treasury Minute of 1848 adverted to as a most important instance of the control of the Exchequer, 2782——Reference to the 11th and other clauses in the Act 4 Will. 4, as clearly directing the Treasury and the Paymaster to apply the credits issued for the Votes of Parliament to the purposes for which they were issued, and to none other, 2784, 2785. 2814-2817——As an amendment of the present illegal principle, witness suggests that the Paymaster need have but one common balance, provided that the sums drawn from it are appropriated rightly, 2786. 2788. 2793-2795.

Statement showing that the amount of balances of Exchequer credits on 4 July 1835 and 5 April 1836, before the consolidation of the Pay-office, were, respectively, 533,495*l.* and 412,647*l.*; 2786. 2844-2846——Belief that strict appropriation would not involve the necessity of unusually large balances, 2786. 2804-2811. 2844-2846——By the term "misappropriation," witness has never attributed pecuniary corruption or mal-appropriation for private purposes, 2789. 2802. 2819.

Mode of dealing with the issues in the case of the Duke of Wellington's funeral further adverted to, as clearly involving a misappropriation, 2790-2792. 2822-2830——Misappropriation and illegality in the payment of the salaries of the judges without an Exchequer warrant, 2796-2798——Instance of claims by the Treasury upon witness for deceased persons, 2798-2802——Issue of a Treasury warrant for the salary of Mr. Mahony, of the Exchequer-office, Ireland, after it was known to the Treasury that he was dead, 2798-2802——Misappropriation consists in paying without authority, or doing an illegal act to be made legal by a subsequent proceeding, 2803. 2812 et seq.

Facility of the practice of appropriation when there were separate paymasters for the great services, 2804——Separate form of account kept by Mr. Sargent, when paymaster of the Miscellaneous Votes and Civil Contingencies, 2806-2810——The fact of the paymaster not issuing money in excess of the vote is no reason that he does not misappropriate, 2812. 2828.

Departure from the provisions of the Exchequer Act, even though an advance from the navy surplus to meet the army deficiency may always be remedied within a month, and generally within forty-eight hours, 2829-2832——Doubt as to the advances from one service to another being rectified so regularly as stated by Mr. Hoffay, 2830——Less evil of an excess of balance than of misappropriation, 2832. 2842-2846——Equal facility of appropriation under one as under three paymasters, 2833——Question as to the expediency of a law sanctioning transfers from one service to another for a day, or any specified limited period; this, however, would be perfectly consistent with Exchequer control, 2832-2841. 2888, 2889.

Further reference to particular balances in the hands of the paymaster for several years, 2847-2849——Great importance of a periodical surrender to the Exchequer of unexpended balances, 2850, 2851. 2869-2881——Circumstance of a provision to the foregoing effect having been urged in the Exchequer Report of 1831; 2850-2852——Importance also of a recommendation in the report that there be an inspection of and annual report upon the Comptroller-general's account by a Parliamentary commission, independent of the Crown, 2852, 2853——A mere annual report to Parliament by the Comptroller would have the effect of rendering his control more efficient, 2852.

Details as to the alteration by the Treasury in a Queen's sign manual warrant, and as to the refusal of witness to act upon such warrant as illegal, 2854-2868——Precis of correspondence on the foregoing subject between witness and the Treasury, showing his objection in the first instance to act upon four Royal Orders and Treasury Warrants, as being dated anterior to the Ways and Means Act, and his objection subsequently on the errors errors of date being corrected by erasure, 2855. 2865, and App. p. 757——A proper warrant was eventually sent to the Exchequer, and acted upon by witness, 2855. 2862. 2864.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

If the unexpended balance in the case of the Duke of Wellington's funeral had been returned to the Exchequer it would have remained unused until on due authority, and would have lessened the amount which might be wanted for deficiency bills, 2869–2875 ——Expediency of applying the same principle generally in regard to repayments to the Exchequer as that which now exists in the case of the unclaimed dividends, 2876-2881 ——Requirement, in the event of savings, of a new vote for a further issue on account of the services on which the savings have arisen, 2879–2887.

The Exchequer Act is consistent with the due execution of all the functions of a pay-office, 2888, 2889——Strictly legal manner in which all Exchequer issues are made, 2888 ——Further evidence as to the present practice of the Pay-office not only being illegal but a frustration of the check invested by Parliament in the Exchequer, 2888–2894. 2897 ——Belief as to the perfect practicability, consistently with Exchequer control, of the Paymaster keeping a drawing account with a single balance, 2895, 2896——Use interchangeably of army, navy, and ordnance funds adverted to, 2897.

Witness delivers in the papers (App. p. 771, 772) with reference to the Russian-Dutch Loan, as showing that it was to the opinion of the law officers of the Crown that Lord Granville deferred, 2897——Also delivers in a paper (Ev. p. 298) showing the amendments made in the minute of December 1848, in consequence of witness's representations, ib.

[Sixth Examination.]—Avowal by Sir C. Trevelyan, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Hoffay, of the practice of using the funds of the army, navy, and ordnance interchangeably, 2898——Unquestionable departure from the law in the appropriation out of the common balance to the several purposes of the army and navy, 2899. 2907 et seq.—— Further evidence as to the practicability and advantage of a single drawing account provided the monies paid into it are kept under the head of the separate services, and there be no excess of issue in any shape, 2900–2906.

Disadvantage of an increase of balances further adverted to as nothing in comparison with the importance of the maintenance of the principle of appropriation, 2901—— Mode in which imprest accounts or advances from the Commissariat chests might be dealt with; large unappropriated sums should be voted in the event of war or peculiar contingencies, 2902–2906——Judicious measure of Mr. Gladstone in obtaining from Parliament two large unappropriated votes in connexion with the war, 2902. 2904—— The present system is one of unauthorised advances and of rectification of account, 2902. 2907 et seq.——Excess of Parliamentary authority, if not of the Parliamentary vote, in making payments without special Exchequer credits, 2909 et seq.

Illegality in the Civil Services being made applicable to the three great services, or to the payment of charges on the Consolidated Fund, before the payment for such charges has received a legal sanction from the Exchequer, 2915–2920——Expediency of the issuing warrant being submitted to the Exchequer for examination and approval, and the credit issued, before the actual payment takes place, 2917–2921.

Further evidence with reference to the case of Mr. Mahony, and to the irregularity of the Treasury practice in the matter, 2922–2935——Other instances of irregularity, besides that of Mr. Mahony, through public servants not being struck off the schedule on the termination of their salaries by death, 2925. 2988——Advantage of the recommendation made by witness to the Treasury, and adopted by them, with a view to remedying any inconvenience in regard to salaries not issued by reason of the death of the parties, 2925. 2988.

There are many charges on the Consolidated Fund which witness has struck off, or the payment of which he has suspended, 2936, 2937——Question at issue between witness and the Treasury as to his right to suspend the payment of charges, in Treasury warrants, on the Consolidated Fund, 2936——Examination on a statement in witness's memorandum, that "payments may be made for services not voted by Parliament, or sanctioned by statute;" proof of this in the admitted fact that payments are made in anticipation of the votes, 2939–2950.

Confirmation of a statement in the memorandum that "payments may be made for services for which no Ways and Means Acts have passed;" frequent demands upon witness for such payments, 2951–2956——With regard to payments for services respecting which no Royal Order, Treasury Warrant, and issuing letter have ever duly issued, every payment without a special Exchequer credit comes within the category, 2957–2963——The Royal Order and Treasury Warrant are not mere forms, but rather legal and indispensable realities, 2957.

The evils referred to in witness's memorandum as hypothetical, have since arisen, and have been subjected to the check of the Exchequer, 2957——Illustration in confirmation of the statement in the memorandum that payments may be made "for services for which no no Exchequer Warrant to the Bank of England has issued, directing a credit to the Paymaster for this particular service," 2964, 2965——The statement in the memorandum as to the different modes in which payments might be made, clearly had reference to the viciousness of the system and not to the practice, 2966, 2967.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

So long as the Paymaster's drawing account and bill account are fed from any other source than the Exchequer, there is a liability to departure from the principle of appropriation, 2968, 2969——The irregularity greatly depends upon the length of time to which monies are in the hands of the Paymaster, without being strictly appropriated, 2969——The whole effect of witness's evidence is, that there should be Parliamentary control and not merely ministerial responsibility, 2970——His evidence is by no means directed against any particular government, 2970.

Mode in which the expenditure of the extraordinary votes, amounting to 6,000,000*l.* and applicable generally to the purpose of the war, will be accounted for to Parliament, 2971–2974. 2980–2984——Large discretion as to items of expenditure under which these votes were granted, 2972–2979——The application of so large a sum to the war generally was very necessary and judicious, 2972. 2976——Circumstance of the Finance Accounts for the year 1855–56 not yet being issued, 2982–2984.

Requirement by witness, before issuing the payment of salaries, that the instrument of appointment be furnished to him, 2985–2987. 2989–3000——Importance of this instrument being furnished to witness; illustration of this, 2985, 2986. 2994–3000——Refusal of the Treasury, a year or two since, to continue the invariable usage of furnishing the Exchequer with the instrument of appointment; pressure under which they yielded to witness's views, 2985, 2986. 2989–3000.

Statement showing the inaccuracy of Mr. Anderson's evidence (Q. 948. 952) as to the exhaustion of the Consolidated Fund at the end of the quarter; large surplus balances on the fund at the end of thirteen different quarters in the years 1847–53; 3001–3010——Possible injury to the public credit through the statement of Mr. Anderson as to the necessity of provision at the end of the quarter and the alternative otherwise, 3001–3010——Circumstance of Mr. Anderson bearing in his instrument of appointment the title of confidential adviser to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, 3010, 3011.

Further examination upon the question of the denial by the Treasury of witness's right to enforce the payment to the Exchequer of the premiums on Exchequer bills issued in 1853; 3012 et seq.——Instead of the Treasury accounting to the Exchequer for the premiums it was their duty to pay them over at once, 3014–3018. 3027 et seq.——Though the Treasury eventually did transfer the premiums, the concession was limited by a denial of witness's right to enforce such transfer, 3018–3026——Further statement as to the proper mode of proceeding in the event of their having been a loss, instead of a gain, on the Exchequer bills, 3041–3044.

Reiteration of former opinion as to the illegality of the practice of the Pay-office, 3045 et seq.——Belief that the consolidation of the Pay-offices did not by any means entail a change on the previous practice of specific appropriation of the miscellaneous votes, 3047–3058——Circumstances under which witness considered himself justified in issuing indiscriminately to the three great services the amount of their respective votes without inquiring into a specific appropriation of the sub-votes, 3053–3055.

The issues on the civil services have always been kept distinct in the Exchequer, 3056——As a general principle, save out of the civil contingencies or the commissariat chest account, the Paymaster cannot, or ought not, to pay anything on the miscellaneous votes unless from the monies issued specifically for the purpose, 3059–3063——With regard to the cash account, all monies coming into it without special appropriation upon them should at once be transferred to the Exchequer, 3064, 3065——All repayments to the cash accounts should be included in the direction as to the exhaustion of the account, 3065.

Facilities of and from the commissariat chest and the civil contingencies adverted to, as showing that under a strict system of appropriation it would not be necessary for the Paymaster always to keep balances on every separate vote, 3066–3076——Opportunity of the Treasury or Pay-office to obtain Exchequer credits in a few hours, 3066——Exceptions taken to the present practice in regard to the bill account, 3069——Alternative as regards separate balances, if the commissariat chest account were overdrawn; the latter contingency, however, should be guarded against, 3070–3075.

Under the system of separate paymasters the irregularities in regard to misappropriation could not have occurred to the same extent as they now occur, 3076 et seq.——Witness by no means attributes the irregularities exclusively to the abolition of the office of Mr. Sargent, as separate Civil Services paymaster, 3077. 3091——The systematic attempt to escape from the control of the Exchequer Act and the Appropriation Act dates mainly from 1852; instances of this, 3077–3083——As regards the mode of issue of Exchequer credits, there has been no deviation from the law, 3081. 3084.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Consideration of the practice of account adopted by Mr. Sargent; check thereby to misappropriation of the miscellaneous monies, 3085-3089. 3101-3103——Witness does not advocate a recurrence to the system of separate paymasters, 3090——Earnestness and co-operation necessary as a means of preventing misappropriation, ib.——Equal necessity of separate accounts under one as under three paymasters, 3092——Further objections to the system of adjustment and rectification of account, more especially with reference to the possibility thereby of payments in excess of votes, 3093-3100——Legitimacy of advances from the Civil Contingencies for any civil expense if coming within the scope of the Exchequer credit, 3101-3105.

[Seventh Examination.]——Account of the balances in the hands of the paymasters of the three great services on the closing days of the several quarters from 5 July 1835 to 10 October 1836; 3106, 3107——Explanation as to the form of acquittance given till recently by the Exchequer; one of these forms handed in, 3107——Advantage, in case of private payments, of the Exchequer acquittance over that given by the Bank, the former being a more explanatory discharge, 3107-3109. 3114-3119.

The Bank receipt is a full acquittance in the case of revenue payments, and is in such cases an improvement on the Exchequer form, 3107. 3112. 3114——Question as to witness not being still compellable by law to give these acquittances if required, 3107. 3110-3112——Doubt whether the power of the Treasury to make regulations in regard to the Exchequer acquittance would enable them to dispense with the document altogether; by a new law they have the latter power, 3107. 3110-3112.

In a written rather than an oral shape witness could best elucidate his opinions as to the best means of controlling the payment of the public monies, 3120. 3128——Defects of the audit system as comprising the correction rather than the prevention of misapplication, 3121——Practical insufficiency of the audit check on account of the delay before the accounts are rendered to Parliament ib.——Limitation of witness's power to checking the issues further adverted to, 3121. 3123-3126.

Advantage of a check by means of co-operation between the Exchequer and the Audit-office, 3122——Additional check placed by witness in the power of the Board of Audit, ib.——Main importance of co-operation between the Treasury and the Exchequer, 3123——At present witness has no information whatever of what passes in the Pay-office, 3124. 3126——Detailed accounts received by witness from the Bank of England, 3125——Objection made by witness in 1846 against an endeavour of the Bank of England to consolidate the accounts; conformity of the Bank to witness's views, 3125. 3194. 3196, and App. p. 683.

Unwillingness, for the present, of witness to make any suggestions for the control of the Paymaster's drawing account, 3127. 3135-3137——Expediency of the Paymaster furnishing witness with an account of all sums received by him to his cash account, in order that there be no delay in their transfer to the Exchequer, 3127. 3129, 3130——Delays in consequence of transferring to the Pay-office payments which were formerly paid direct to the Exchequer by the accountants; paper giving details hereon, 3130. 3300, and App. p. 795-801——Advantages of direct payment by the Board of Works as compared with payment through the Pay-office, 3131.

Propriety of repayments for old stores not being paid directly to the Exchequer, unless there be some check upon the correctness of the amount, 3132, 3133——Belief that the proceeds of the sale of old stores are very correctly accounted for by the Pay-office, 3133——Limit to the extent of repayments to departments, if appropriation were strictly enforced, 3134——Doubt whether the extension of the audit system to the civil votes would be an effective check, 3136.

Great step towards the attainment of appropriation, if some means could be adopted for getting rid of the Paymaster's cash account, 3138-3140——Doubt as to any increase of the balances in the Pay-office if the practice of repayment to the cash account were abolished, 3141. 3147, 3148——Necessity of alteration in the law in order to provide for repayments being made at once to the Exchequer, 3142-3146.

Though the Commissioners of 1831 recommended that the preparation of Exchequer Bills be vested in the Treasury, they also recommended the continuance of Exchequer control in the matter, 3149-3151. 3189. 3200-3207——This recommendation involved an operose and complicated plan, 3151. 3204. 3207——Further reference to the efficient precautions now adopted against a forgery of Exchequer bills, 3151.

Labour in making out the bills adverted to, as showing the impossibility of the Treasury undertaking the matter without an increase of staff, 3151, 3152——Reasons for the conclusion that, on constitutional grounds, the preparation, signing, and issue of Exchequer bills by the Treasury would be most dangerous and inexpedient, 3153-3159. 3186-3192.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Evidence showing the inaccuracy of Mr. Anderson's assumption that two clerks could perform all the business of the Exchequer-office, excepting the duties of the department of weights and measures, 3160–3169. 3174——Several revisions of the Exchequer establishment adverted to, as showing it has never been considered unduly large, 3162–3166——Circumstance of the Treasury having never till recently questioned the strength of the establishment as being extravagant, 3167——Particulars as to the amount of business devolving on the establishment, 3167–3169. 3174–3176. 3178–3185, and App. p. 782. 787, 788.

Principle and practice of the Treasury, when witness was connected with it, to make due investigation into the Miscellaneous Estimates, and the establishments demanded by the several departments, 3170–3174——Communication formerly between the Treasury and the heads of the army, navy, and ordnance, with respect to the preparation of the estimates of those services, 3171——Responsibility of the Treasury in regard to all revisions of establishments, 3174.

Statement that the Exchequer communicates with nine departments in England, and three in Ireland, instead of with only the Treasury and the Bank of England, as stated by Mr. Anderson, 3174——Miscellaneous correspondence also with private individuals, 3176——With reference to Mr. Masterman's suggestions in 1853 as to the annual presentation of Exchequer bills, and the payment of the interest, witness refers to the comments of Mr. Anderson thereon, and to his own report on the views of Mr. Masterman and Mr. Anderson, 3177, and App. p. 792–794.

Further evidence in explanation of the duties and labour connected with the Exchequer Bill Department, 3178–3185——Absence of analogy between the issue of bank notes by the Bank of England, and of Exchequer bills by the Treasury, 3186–3192——Further reference to the detailed account kept by the Bank in the case of Exchequer credits; justification of the requirements of the Exchequer in this matter, 3193–3199——Recommendations of the Commission of 1831 in regard to the issue, &c., of Exchequer bills further adverted to, as less desirable than the present mode of issue, 3200–3207.

Circumstance of witness signing Deficiency bills, though not cognizant of the state of the quarterly deficiency, 3208–3211——Doubt whether the present mode of issuing Deficiency bills to the Bank is in conformity with the law, 3210——Belief that Parliament or the public would never tolerate an uncontrolled power in the Executive Government to create debt, 3212. 3230. 3237——Consideration of the nature of the check on the part of the Exchequer upon the issue of Ways and Means bills and Consolidated Fund bills by the Treasury, 3213 et seq.——Check upon the issue of Consolidated Fund bills, inasmuch as they constitute charges on the revenue of the quarter next ensuing, 3218–3223. 3243. 3248. 3266, 3267.

Examination in disapproval of the power of creation by Government of a funded debt, by exchanging the Consolidated Fund bills held by the Commissioners of Savings Banks for consols, 3222–3230. 3242 et seq.——Witness, as Comptroller-general, had no authority in this matter, but he has, in common with many others, strongly objected to the practice, 3225–3234. 3242. 3254–3258——The creation of debt by the issue of Consolidated Fund bills should only take place, if at all, under proper restrictions, and in case of exigencies, 3235, 3236. 3278–3283.

Interposition of Parliamentary control in the case of loans as contracted for by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, 3238–3240. 3259–3263——Necessary exemption by Parliament of the Bank from the provisions of the Act of Will. 4, in regard to Loan and Ways and Means Acts, 3241——Further evidence condemnatory of the power of the Government, without the previous sanction of Parliament, to fund Consolidated Fund bills, 3242 et seq.——Less objection to the funding of the ordinary Supply Exchequer bills than of the Consolidated Fund bills, 3246–3249.

Check upon the undue issue of Deficiency bills, inasmuch as they constitute charges on the revenue of the ensuing quarter, 3268——Limit upon the issue of Ways and Means bills, or ordinary Supply bills, 3269——Improvement if in all cases the proceeds of Ways and Means bills, &c., were, in the first instance, paid into the Exchequer, 3270–3274——Improvement also, if the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, s. 50, were amended, so as to limit the power of issuing bills to the issue of ordinary Supply bills, 3275–3278.

Argument that the advantages derivable from Exchequer control far outweigh the advantages that would result from the abolition of the Exchequer, and the simplification of accounts and possible economy consequent thereon, 3284–3286——Impression that Mr. Anderson does not complain that the Exchequer system of accounts is imperfect, but that it clashes with the different system of the Pay-office, 3287, 3288——Perfect system of double entry pursued at the Exchequer, 3287.

Impracticability of keeping the Exchequer accounts on a different system, or of treating the issues other than as payments, 3288, 3289. 3297–3300——Illustration for the purpose of showing that the Exchequer credits are, practically, payments, 3288, 3289. 3297–3300——Opinion that the Exchequer system of account does not necessarily prevent vent the Paymaster from keeping his accounts in the form most approved by him, 3289–3296——With regard to the Treasury accounts, as conducted till recently, witness is surprised at Mr. Anderson's objection to a system carried out for so long a period by so able and trustworthy a public servant as Mr. Brooksbank, 3292.

Report, 1856—continued.

Monteagle of Brandon, Right Hon. Lord. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Monthly Estimates (Departments). Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that each department submit to the Treasury monthly, an estimate of the sum required for the expenditure in the ensuing month, App. p. 464.

Monthly Estimates (Paymaster-general). The monthly estimate of the Paymaster-general would still be necessary if the Exchequer were abolished, Anderson 1666–1669.

N.

NAVY:

1. Excellent System of Naval Accounts.
2. Time taken in their Preparation.
3. System of Audit.
4. Mode of Repayment to the Paymaster-general.
5. Vote for 1855–56.
6. Other Evidence generally.

1. Excellent System of Naval Accounts:

Great efficiency of the accounts during the war in consequence of the improved system of late years, Anderson 1304——Inexpediency of any variation in the form of navy accounts, the system being at present quite perfect, Vine 3826–3848. 3852–3856——Successful conduct and audit of the naval accounts without delay during the war, ib. 3852–3855. 3890——The system of naval accounts is capable of any expansion, ib. 3852. 3910, 3911.

2. Time taken in their Preparation:

Explanation as to the time taken in the preparation and before the presentation of the naval accounts, Anderson 2055–2066. 2085–2087——The navy are allowed eight months for the preparation of their accounts, Anderson 2055–2085; Vine 3666, 3667. 3947——Lapse of about two years before any transaction taking place in June would appear before Parliament in the naval accounts, Anderson 2055–2060——Much greater facilities for getting in the navy accounts than the army accounts, and for getting them ready sooner, Vine 3903, 3904. 3947 et seq.

3. System of Audit:

System of concurrent audits now adopted in the case of the navy accounts, an effective audit being conducted by the Accountant-general, Anderson 1699–1703——Impracticability of improving the present audit, the object being to give security to Parliament that the accounts presented are correct, ib. 2101–2103. 2113, 2114——Strict examination by the officer who checks the navy and military accounts, in order to see that the vouchers are in every respect sufficient to warrant their being carried as final payments on account of the vote, Vine 3305; Macaulay 4513. 4565——Due cognizance taken of each original entry, until it is finally recorded in the annual account laid before Parliament, Vine 3305——Reference to the practice whereby, previously to Sir J. Graham's bill, the naval accounts were audited entirely by their own department, ib. 3331–3333.

Disadvantage on the whole of sending the accounts for audit to the Audit-office, Vine 3715–3718; Romilly 4425. 4429, 4430——Inexpediency of a general detailed audit by the Audit-office, Romilly 4431. 4445–4452. 4456–4462; Macaulay 4568–4575.

Memorandum by Mr. Romilly, dated 24 July, in detailed explanation of the audit, Ev. p. 441–443——Duty of the Accountant-general of the Navy to check anything wrong in the detailed audit, Romilly and Macaulay 4509.

Remarks by Mr. Romilly in 1850, as to the audit of the naval accounts being, under the Bill of 1832, superintended by the Board of Audit, App. p. 562.

4. Mode of Repayment to the Paymaster-general:

Practice generally in the case of navy payments passing through the Paymaster; delay before the transfer to the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 512–517. 548–551——Absence of check by the Exchequer in regard to the accounts of the Paymaster, in the case of navy payments to him, ib. 512. 514–517. 522. 526. 531 et seq.——A payment from the navy, &c. would first go to the Paymaster's cash account; then to the drawing account, and thence be transferred to the Exchequer, ib. 512. 514, 515.

Evidence to the effect that due security is provided against any mistake or risk in the practice of repayments through the Pay-office; explanation of such practice, Anderson 1120–1129. 1494–1496. 1502–1514; Hoffay 2272 et seq. 2378 et seq.

Report, 1856—continued.

NAVY—continued.

5. Vote for 1855-56:

Where there has been an excess of navy expenditure during the war, it has been fed by an additional vote, and not by the vote of credit, Vine 4012. 4026-4028——Control exercised by the Treasury in the matter of the general navy expenditure in 1855-56, Anderson 4176-4178. 4187——The navy will not probably want any part of the vote of credit for 1855-56, ib. 4198.

6. Other Evidence generally:

The Treasury account in regard to the naval and military services is simply a cash account, Anderson 1374——Authority of the Admiralty, as of other departments, to carry out expenditure as voted without the direct interference of the Board of Audit, ib. 2101-2114——There is now no portion of the naval or military expenditure which is authorised bythe Treasury, ib. 2154——Most of the naval payments for effective services are final payments to be charged at once against the votes, ib. 2215——Payment of the navy service according to regulations laid down by Act of Parliament, ib.——Practice in dealing with imprest payments to the Navy, ib.

All naval charges which cannot be finally appropriated are made to the imprest account, Hoffay 2273-2275——Excess of issue on the Navy Vote for 1847-48, ib. 2514——Eight months after the close of the year the naval accounts are closed, and any surplus is transferred to the vote for ensuing year in the shape of a deduction from it, Anderson 3397——Analysis of the navy account in April 1852, showing the extent to which overdrawn, and the period in each case before adjustment, ib. 3609-3616.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, in 1831, of the manner in which the navy grants are issued, App. p. 463.

Directions in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848 as to the authorities for payment of the navy effective and non-effective services, App. p. 518, 519. 526.

See also Appropriation, I. 6. Audit, 1. 2. 7. Estimates. Old Stores (Navy). Pay Office. Prize Money. Stores. Transfers between Departments. Turkish Government (Advance from). Unexpended Balances.

Net Income. The proper interpretation of net income is the income after abating permanent charges and expenses of collection and management, Anderson 1904-1906. 1909.

See also Collection of Revenue. Gross Revenue.

New Zealand. Reference to a balance or deposit in the hands of the Paymaster-general, in respect of which it is considered that the colony of New Zealand has some claim, Anderson 1596-1599

Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 11 August 1845, relative to discrepancy in Royal Order for New Zealand, and reply thereto, App. p. 682.

Unexpended balances in the hands of the Paymaster-general since the year 1851-52, 1852-53, and 1853-54, App. p. 810.

Non-effective Services. Transfer recently to the War Department of the detailed audit of the non-effectives of the Army, Vine 3791-3793; Romilly 4377-4381——Transfer also of the detailed audit of part of Ordnance non-effectives, Vine 3820-3822; Romilly 4383, 4384.

Direction in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848 as to the authorities and mode of payment of the Army, Navy, and Commissariat non-effective services, App. p. 515. 519. 526.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in 1854, as to payment for non-effective services through collectors of the revenue, App. p. 557.

O.

OLD STORES (NAVY):

1. Present Practice of Repayment objected to.
2. Evidence in approval of the Practice.
3. Return for the Years 1848-55.

1. Present Practice of Repayment objected to:

Payment to the Exchequer of the produce of old stores, as for the Navy, through the Paymaster-general; very objectionable practice hereon, involving undue delay and want of control, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 496-502. 512-515——Objectionable mode formerly in which the receipts for old stores were accounted for, ib. 518, 519. 577——As a general principle, the receipts for old stores should go direct into the Exchequer, instead of indirectly through the Paymaster, ib. 520-532. 546-548. 573. 578-584——Want of control over the Paymaster in regard to the transfer of receipts for old stores further adverted to as very inexpedient, ib. 548-451.

Doubt

Report, 1856—continued.

Old Stores (Navy)—continued.

1. Present Practice of Repayment objected to—continued.

Doubt as to the nature of the audit check upon the Paymaster in regard to the mode of account for receipts for old stores, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 571, 572. 600——The receipts for old stores, after reaching the Admiralty, should in fact at once be transferred to the Exchequer instead of to the Treasury, ib. 581–584. 587–589.

Propriety of repayments for old stores not being paid directly to the Exchequer, unless there be some check upon the correctness of the amount, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3132, 3133——Belief that the proceeds of the sales are very correctly accounted for by the Pay-office, ib. 3133.

2. Evidence in approval of the Practice:

Practice in regard to receipts for navy stores; how dealt with respectively by the Admiralty, the Paymaster-general, and the Exchequer, Anderson 1120–1129. 1247. 1253–1256. 1323–1332——Payments quarterly to the Exchequer of the sums as received by the Admiralty, ib. 1494–1496——Sufficiency of the departmental check for securing the due payment by the Paymaster to the Exchequer, ib. 1502–1505——Explanation to the effect that no monies are returned by the department which ought to go to the Exchequer, ib. 1506–1514——Regulations in regard to old stores further adverted to; the term comprises new stores which are not wanted, ib. 1999–2003.

Explanation of the several steps taken with regard to the repayment of old naval stores, Hoffay 2272 et seq. 2378–2385——In the first instance the Navy send an order to the Pay-office upon their imprest account for the amount, ib. 2272——The Pay-office then apply to the Treasury for a credit, if the navy balances in hand be insufficient, ib. 2273. 2276–2283——The local proceeds of old stores are collected, with an order to the Paymaster-general to pay the amount to the Exchequer, which is done quarterly, ib. 2273.

Practice of the Pay-office in dealing with the Exchequer credit in the matter of old stores; approval of the course adopted, and of the mode of repayment to the Exchequer, Hoffay 2284–2304. 2382–2385——Check through means of the Board of Audit upon due payment by the Paymaster-general to the Exchequer, as directed by the Admiralty, ib. 2304–2333. 2386–2403——Mode in which the receipt for old stores finds its way to the Exchequer further adverted to, as showing that the transfer through the Admiralty and Paymaster is made without the least risk or chance of mistake, ib. 2378 et seq.——Local expenditure of the proceeds of old stores, ib. 2379.

Security through the auditors upon the payments into the Exchequer of the money received by the Paymaster, Romilly 4487–4497.

3. Return for the Years 1848–55:

Return showing the sums received for old naval stores, &c., for each year since 1848; with the payments made on such account to the Exchequer, or to the Paymaster-general's office during the same period, App. p. 630——Total of 1,263,413 l. 14 s. 10 d. as paid into the Exchequer, ib.

Ordinary Supply Bills. The ordinary supply bills are issued to the Paymaster; custody of these bills whilst at the Pay-office and previous to their issue from the Exchequer, Anderson 4120–4123.——See also Creation of Debt.

Ordnance. Account showing that the Ordnance Extraordinaries have ceased altogether since 1829, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 229——Similar practice at present as previously to the minute of 1848, in regard to the repayment to the Ordnance for work done for another department, Hoffay 2334–2338—— Instance in 1855 of the Army grants having been drawn upon to carry on the Ordnance Service, ib. 2451–2454. 2564——Excess of issue on the Ordnance Vote for 1847–48, ib. 2514.

In the ordinary course of business an Ordnance transaction occurring in July 1856 would not come before Parliament till June 1858, Vine 2661–2665——Analysis of the Ordnance Account in April 1852, showing the extent to which overdrawn, and the period in each case before adjustment, Anderson 3601–3608——Transfer to the War Department of the detailed audit of part of the Ordnance Non-effectives, Vine 3820–3822; Romilly 4383, 4384—— Advantage of a fusion of the books of the Ordnance at Pall Mall with those of the Army at the Horse Guards, Vine 3860–3888. 3946; Anderson 4151–4154.

Illustration, as shown by the Ordnance Service, of the incorrectness of annual accounts, unless due time be allowed for collection and preparation, Vine 4067–4074——Circumstance of the Ordnance having been forced to take two supplemental estimates last year, in addition to the vote, Anderson 4187. 4190–4194——The Ordnance will probably require a part of the vote of credit, in order to close their accounts for the past year, ib. 4199.

Statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831 of the manner in which money is issued by the Exchequer to the Ordnance Department, App. p. 463.

Report, 1856—continued.

Ordnance—continued.

Approval in Treasury Minute of September 1834 of the suggested consolidation of the votes upon the Ordnance Estimates, App. p. 477.

Directions in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, as to the authorities for payment of the Ordnance Effective and Non-effective Services, App. p. 519——Recommendation in the Minute that the salaries of the establishments at home and abroad be paid by local accountants, ib.——Directions in the Minute as to the Ordnance payments for other departments, ib. 520.

See also Accounts, 1. Army. Estimates. Fireworks (Celebration of Peace). Transfers between Departments.

Ormond, Lord (Redemption of Pension). See Redemption of Pensions, 3.

Outstanding Balances. See Unexpended Balances.

Overdrawn Accounts. See Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office). Appropriation, I. 2; II. 2. 4. Consolidated Fund. Excess of Grants. Law and Justice. Navy, 6. Ordnance.

P.

Parliamentary Control. Evident object of the Act of 1834, that all expenditure, save in exceptional cases, should come under the cognizance of Parliament, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle, 53–58. 102 et seq.——Efficient control is the result of a Parliamentary vote, ib. 439——All charges should, as a principle, be paid by Parliamentary vote, excepting only certain charges in the shape of drawbacks and repayments, ib. 443, 444——Importance of a distinct Parliamentary appropriation, as compared with what is termed a Treasury control, ib. 548–558. 586–608.

Circumstance of the Commission of 1831 having recommended some further restraint on the Crown and the Ministers as to the legal appropriation of the public monies, Anderson 1055–1057. 1084——With the exception of drawbacks, all expenditure by the Revenue department should be voted, and should be duly audited and accounted for to Parliament, ib. 1457–1465——Cognizance of Parliament in regard to the law and practice of appropriation not being in strict conformity, ib. 1729–1732.

The whole effect of witness's evidence is, that there should be Parliamentary control, and not merely ministerial responsibility, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2970——His evidence is by no means directed to any particular Government, ib.

Propriety of constant communication from the Audit Board to Parliament, Anderson 4182——Advantage, if it were imperative on the Audit-office to state annually to Parliament the condition of the business of the office, and the progress made with the audit of the several accounts, Romilly 4546–4550.

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that no public money should be applied without previous Parliamentary sanction, App. p. 456.

Recommendation also, in this Report, that full security for legal appropriation should exist, and that due checks be vested in the Exchequer, App. p. 461.

Copy of the Bill "to alter the mode of providing for certain expenses now charged upon certain branches of the Public and Hereditary Revenues, and upon the Consolidated Fund," with the original Schedules; and the alterations made in the Bill and Schedules previously to the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, which was founded upon it, being passed, App. p. 571–577.

See also Accounts. Appropriation. Audit. Collection of Revenue. Control. Creation of Debt. Exchequer. Exchequer Bills, 2. Finance Accounts. Pay Office. Redemption of Pensions. Superannuations and Pensions. Treasury. Unexpended Balances. Woods and Forests, Office of.

Parnell, Sir Henry. Prominent part taken by Sir Henry Parnell in the consolidation of the Pay-offices, Anderson 1202–1205——Circumstance of Sir Henry Parnell having ultimately admitted that the system of Exchequer credits had not answered his expectations, ib. 2263——Sir Henry Parnell was a great advocate for low balances in the Pay-offices, ib. 3652.

Letter from Sir Henry Parnell to the Treasury, dated 18 November 1837, on the subject of the regulations for the government of the Pay-office, so far as relates to the accounts opened at the Bank of England, App. p. 505, 506.

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE:

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer:

1. Proof of Misappropriation in the Practice of the Office.
2. Illegality and violation of the Constitution, in Departure from the Principle of Appropriation.
3. Exceptions taken to the System of Accounts.
4. Strong Objection to the working of the Cash Account; Amendment suggested.
5. Consolidation of the Pay Offices; Disadvantage in some respects.
6. Exemption of Individuals from any Corrupt Misappropriation.
7. Improved System if there were but one common Balance, strictly administered.

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office:

1. General Practice explained; Impracticability of strict Appropriation.
2. Belief as to the Legality of the Practice.
3. Operation through means of Four distinct Accounts.
4. Defence of the System on which the Accounts are kept.
5. Working of the Cash Account explained; Inexpediency of Alteration.
6. Consolidation of the Pay Offices, and consequent Advantages.
7. System of Audit.
8. Objection to an Audit by the Exchequer.
9. Office of Paymaster-general; Amendment suggested.
10. Checks against Fraud or undue Misappropriation.
11. Suggestions for an improved System generally.

III. Regulations as laid down in Treasury Minutes.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer:

1. Proof of Misappropriation in the Practice of the Office:

Witness has known monies to remain for months and years in the hands of the Paymaster, employed probably for purposes other than were intended, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 599. 611-613——Abandonment by the Treasury, in the early part of 1854, of the constitutional principle of appropriation, ib. 847——Refusal of Witness, in 1841 and 1852, to sanction issues as directed by Royal Warrants, to remedy the errors in which a governing warrant was subsequently passed, ib. 861 et seq. 885. 919, and App. p. 652–663. 699–783.

Reference to the admission, by Sir C. Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, that money issued for and belonging to one service, is habitually used for another service, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2774. 2778. 2783, 2784. 2787. 2821, 2822. 2897.——Witness suggests that the Paymaster's accounts be inquired into by the Committee, ib. 2787. 2941. 2959——The fact of the Paymaster not issuing money in excess of the vote is no proof that he does not misappropriate, ib. 2812. 2828.

Use interchangeable of Army, Navy, and Ordnance funds adverted to, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2897——Avowal by Sir C. Trevelyan, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Offay, of the practice of using the funds of the Army, Navy, and Ordnance interchangeably, ib. 2898——Witness has known payments to be made by the Paymaster in anticipation, ib. 2916.

Examination on a statement in witness's Memorandum, that "payments may be made for services not voted by Parliament, or sanctioned by statute;" proof of this in the admitted fact, that payments are made in anticipation of the vote, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2939–2950——Admission by Mr. Anderson, that payments are made in anticipation of the votes, ib. 2940, 2941. 2946–2950——Remarks upon Mr. Hoffay's evidence as to the question of anticipating payments, ib. 2942, 2943. 2945.

Confirmation of a statement in the Memorandum, that payments may be made for services for which no Ways and Means Acts have passed; frequent demands upon witness for such payments, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2951–2956.——With regard to payments for services respecting which no Royal Order, Treasury Warrant, and issuing letter have ever been duly issued, every payment without a special Exchequer credit comes within the category, ib. 2957–2963——Illustration in confirmation of the statement in the Memorandum, that payments may be made "for services for which no Exchequer Warrant to the Bank of England has issued, directing a credit to the Paymaster for this particular service, ib. 2964, 2965——The statement in the Memorandum as to the different modes in which payments might be made, clearly had reference to the viciousness of the system, and not to the practice, ib. 2966, 2967.

So long as the Paymaster's drawing account and bill accounts are fed from any other source than the Exchequer, there is a liability to departure from the principle of appropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2968, 2969——The irregularity greatly depends upon the length of time for which monies are in the hands of the Paymaster without being appropriated,

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer—continued.

1. Proof of Misappropriation in the Practice of the Office—continued.

appropriated, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2969——The systematic attempt to escape from the control of the Exchequer Act and the Appropriation Act, dates mainly from 1852; instances of this, ib. 3077–3083——At present witness receives no official information whatever of what passes in the Pay-office, ib. 3124. 3126.

Statement of Lord Monteagle, in his Memorandum of 1854, as to the application of the public revenue without due authority, and possibly to purposes wholly unsanctioned by law, App. p. 536 et seq.——Statement in the Memorandum, that the principle of specific appropriation is habitually and systematically endangered, or actually set aside by the Treasury Minute of 22d December 1848, ib. 542.

Sundry instances, as shown in correspondence handed in by the Comptroller-general, of issues or attempted issues, contrary to law and to the views of the Exchequer, App. p. 648 et seq.

2. Illegality and violation of the Constitution in Departure from the Principle of Appropriation:

Illegality of payments out of the Exchequer, unless made by a direct vote of Parliament, or charged by Act of Parliament upon the Consolidated Fund, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 108, 109——High misdemeanor of the Treasury or Paymaster-general, if, after having obtained money from the Exchequer for any one specific purpose, they apply it to another, ib. 558–561. 563. 566–570——Legal question between witness and the Treasury in regard to his authority in respect to the specific appropriation of revenues after they have left his hands, ib. 608.

Ways and means cannot legally be acted upon before the time at which they are placed at the issue or disposal of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 861 et seq.——The question of time at which any issue may be directed, frequently forms the essence of the legality of the act, ib. 2766. 2772. 2860. 2868. 2890——The violation by the Treasury and Pay-office of the principle of appropriation is a violation of the law and of the Constitution of England, ib. 2772. 2777, 2778. 2784.

Further argument that the constitutional and legal principle of appropriation is directly violated by the use of monies, issued under one head of service, for the purpose of another service, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2778 et seq.——Willingness of witness to submit the question between the Treasury and the Exchequer to the law officers of the Crown, and to abide by the result, ib. 2778. 2820, 2821—— Strong confirmation of the principle of appropriation in the amended Treasury Minute of December 1848, ib. 2783.

Reference to the 11th and other clauses of the Act of 4 Will. 4, as clearly directing the Treasury and the Paymaster to apply the credits issued for the votes of Parliament to the purposes for which they were issued, and to none other, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2784, 2785. 2814–2817——Misappropriation consists in paying without authority, or doing an illegal act, to be made legal by a subsequent proceeding, ib. 2803. 2812 et seq.——Departure from the provisions of the Exchequer Act, even though an advance from the Navy supplies to meet the Army deficiency may always be remedied within a month, and generally within 48 hours, ib. 2829–2832.

Further evidence as to the present practice of the Pay-office, not only being illegal, but a frustration of the check invested by Parliament in the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2888–2894. 2897——Unquestionable departure from the law in the appropriation out of the common balances for the several purposes of the Army and Navy, ib. 2899. 2907 et seq.——Excess of Parliamentary authority, if not of the Parliamentary vote, in making payments without special Exchequer Acts, ib. 2909 et seq.—— Necessity of a Royal Order or Treasury Warrant, and an Exchequer issue, before money can be applied to any particular service voted, ib. 2910 et seq.

Illegality in the Civil Service vote being made applicable to the three great services, or to the payments of charges on the Consolidated Fund, before the payments of such charges have received a legal sanction from the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2915–2920——Expediency of the issuing warrant being submitted to the Exchequer for examination and approved, and the credit being issued before the actual payment takes place, ib. 2917–2921——Reiteration of former opinion as to the illegality of the practice of the Pay-office, ib. 3045 et seq.——As a general principle, the Paymaster cannot, or ought not, save out of the Civil Contingencies or the Commissariat Chest Account, to pay anything on the Miscellaneous Votes, unless from the monies issued specially for the purpose, ib. 3059–3063.

Strong opinion expressed by Lord Monteagle in his Memorandum of 1854, that the Treasury Minute of 1848 was irreconcileable with constitutional principle and statute law, App. p. 536 et seq.

3. Exceptions

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer—continued.

3. Exceptions taken to the System of Accounts:

If witness, who strongly objects to the system of accounts in the Pay-office, had gone to the Pay-office to inquire into the system, he would doubtless have been told that it was no business of his, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2776——Exceptions taken to the present system in regard to the bill account, ib. 3069——Unwillingness, for the present, of witness to make any suggestions for the control of the Paymaster's drawing account, ib. 3127. 3135–3137.

Review by Lord Monteagle, in his Memorandum, of the general system of the Exchequer and Pay-office, with suggestions as to the proper mode of keeping the accounts, App. p. 537 et seq.

Statement in the Memorandum that there is a total absence of all conformity between the actual payments and the Exchequer accounts, consequent on following the principle of the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, App. p. 543.

Statement in the Memorandum, as to the errors of account that have arisen through the non-adherence to the principle of appropriation, App. p. 545——Schedule in illustration of this statement, ib. 552.

Appendix to the Memorandum in elucidation of Lord Monteagle's statements thereon, App. p. 547–552.

4. Strong Objection to the working of the Cash Account; Amendment suggested:

Witness strongly objects to the complex system of passing money received from the public accountants through the Paymaster, not only as delaying the public money in its progress to the Exchequer, but as endangering the obligations of the Appropriation Act, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 517–522. 532. 544 et seq.——In exceptional instances only should the Paymaster be an officer of receipt of money other than from the Exchequer, ib. 522–527——Different control of the Paymaster over the cash account in his name at the Bank of England, and over the Exchequer credit which also stands in his name, ib. 552–570——Upon constitutional grounds it is very objectionable that large unappriated sums on account of old stores, &c. should remain for any time in the hands of the Paymaster, with a power in the Treasury to deal with them as they choose for the time being, ib. 580. 585, 586. 604–608.

All monies coming into the cash account without special appropriation upon them, should at once be transferred to the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3064, 3065——All repayments to the cash account should be included in the direction as to the exhaustion of the account, ib. 3065 — Expediency of the Paymaster furnishing witness with an account of all monies received by him to his cash account, in order that there be no delay in their transfer to the Exchequer, ib. 3127. 3129, 3130.

Delays in consequence of transferring to the Pay-office payments which were formerly paid direct to the Exchequer by the accountants; paper giving details thereon, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3130. 3300, and App. p. 795–801——Great step towards the attainment of appropriation if some means could be adopted for getting rid of the Paymaster's cash account, ib. 3138–3140—— Doubt as to any increase of the balances in the Pay-office if the practice of repayment to the cash account were abolished, ib. 3141. 3147, 3148——Necessity of alteration in the law in order to provide for repayments being made at once to the Exchequer, ib. 3142–3146.

Observations on some of the payments included in the sum of 187,445 l. 18 s. 3 d., placed to the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer, at the Bank of England, by the Paymaster-general, on 24 December 1855, App. p. 795–797 —— Particulars of the sum of 207,773 l. 1 s. 1 d. paid over to the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer by the Paymaster-general on 12 March 1856, ib. 797–800——Particulars of the sum of 187,445 l. 18 s. 3 d. paid over by the Paymaster-general to the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer, at the Bank of England, on 24 December 1855, ib. 798, 799.

5. Consolidation of the Pay Offices; Disadvantage in some respects:

The offices of Paymaster-general of the Forces, Treasurer of the Navy, Treasurer of the Ordnance, and Paymaster of Civil Services, were consolidated under the Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, and subsequent enactments, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 511——Bad effect of the consolidation as resulting in the placing of an unduly large unappropriated balance in the hands and at the control of the Paymaster-general, ib. 574–576. 585, 586. 592–599——Confusion of accounts through the consolidation, ib. 575, 576——Circumstance of witness having been a party to the consolidation of the Pay-offices, ib. 2776, 2777.

Though beneficial in several respects, the consolidation has been disadvantageous with reference to the practice of misappropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2777. 2805. 2842–2846——Belief as to there being the same facility of appropriation under one as under three paymasters, ib. 2804. 2833 ——Economy resulting from the consolidation, ib. 2842–2845 —— Belief that the consolidation of the Pay-offices did not by any means entail a change in the previous practice of a specific appropriation of the Miscellaneous Votes, ib. 3047–3058.

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

I. Evidence on the part of the Exchequer—continued.

5. Consolidation of the Pay Offices, &c.—continued.

Under the system of separate paymasters the irregularities in regard to misappropriation could not have occurred to the same extent as they now occur, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3076 et seq.——Witness does not advocate a recurrence to the system of separate paymasters, ib. 3090——Equal necessity of separate accounts under one as under three paymasters, ib. 3092.

Reference by Lord Monteagle, in his Memorandum of 1854, as to the risks and difficulties to be encountered in case of war, under a system of a single pay-office, App. p. 537. 546, 547——Account of the balances in the hands of the Paymasters of the three great services on the closing days of the several quarters, from 5 July 1835 to 10 October 1836, ib. 3106, 3107.

6. Exemption of Individuals from any Corrupt Misappropriation;

Strict Treasury regulations in regard to the disbursements by the Paymaster individually, the impeccability of whose department is moreover above all doubt and suspicion, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 601, 602——By the term "misappropriation," witness has never attributed pecuniary corruption or malappropriation for private purposes, ib. 2787. 2802. 2819.

7. Improved System if there were but one common Balance, strictly administered:

As an amendment to the present illegal principle and practice, witness suggests that the Paymaster need have but one common balance, provided that the sums drawn from it are appropriated rightly; practicability of this plan, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2786. 2788. 2793–2795. 2895, 2896. 2900–2906.

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office:

1. General Practice explained; Impracticability of strict Appropriation:

System of daily application of the money by the Paymaster, Anderson 1068–1076——Difficulty of a correct daily estimate by the Paymaster of the Services or claims to be met on the following day, ib. 1068——Propriety of considering the Exchequer and Pay-office balances as one in the appropriation of the money, ib. 1068, 1069. 1080——Necessary departure from the strict provisions of the Act in regard to the issue from the drawing account of monies for services, for which there is no Exchequer credit, but which were sanctioned by vote, ib. 1069–1080. 1095–1097.

Instances have occurred of issues of public money in anticipation of votes of Parliament, Anderson 1081–1083——Bar to an efficient Exchequer check, on account of the impossibility of appropriation at the time of issue, ib. 1094–1097——Illustration of the impracticability of an issue from the Exchequer for each vote, each issue to be applicable only to the special purpose for which made, ib. 1286–1292. 1317–1319. 1355–1357——Further reference to the necessary payments through the Pay-office of large sums, which are appropriated not to the votes, but to the general account, ib. 1375.

Necessary application of the money issued to the Receiver-general to the special service or department for which issued, Anderson 1484–1488——Obstacle to the whole of the monies in the Exchequer being retained on the general account till the actual payments are made, ib. 1555–1575——Further statement as to the issues when once written into the drawing account being applicable indiscriminately to any services which are called for on that day, ib. 1577–1579. 1586–1590——Practice of the Paymaster not to issue money for any service that has not a credit at the Exchequer, ib. 1606–1611.

Impracticability of fully carrying out the principle of appropriation in the Pay-office further contended, Anderson 1733 et seq.——It would not do to refuse payments because a wrong estimate had been made, ib. 1733. 1994——The Paymaster-general is but one out of about 2,000 paymasters employed by the naval and military departments, ib. 1745——Issues by the Paymaster-general are not final payments, and can only be shown by the departmental appropriation accounts, ib. 1828–1832. 1842–1847.

General practice of the Pay-office in regard to the temporary employment for one purpose of monies drawn for another service, Anderson 1994–1998——Absence of control by the Paymaster over the actual expenditure, ib. 2007. 2026. 2033–2037——The practice of the Pay-office as complained of by Lord Monteagle, really commenced in 1836, ib. 2258–2260.

Common practice of the Pay-office to make payments for services for which no Exchequer warrant to the Bank of England has issued, directing a credit to the Paymaster for that particular service, Hoffay 2437–2439. 2459. 2578. 2589——How far the practice of the Paymaster to make advances for services not voted or sanctioned by statute, or for which no means had been provided, ib. 2440–2450——The present system of the office comprises the most economical use of the public monies, without exceeding the vote of Parliament, ib. 2493–2507——Impossibility of accurately estimating the amount

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office—continued.

1. General Practice explained, &c.—continued.

amount that may be required on the following day, in regard to the certain charges on the Consolidated Fund, Hoffay 2502–2506. 2581.

Rule of the Pay-office when they know any vote to be exhausted, not to make further payments, Hoffay 2508–2512. 2562–2564. 2568–2573 —— Impracticability of any control by the Paymaster in regard to the expenditure under the separate heads of any vote, like that for the navy, ib. 2516. 2519–2522. 2559–2561. 2565——Mode of recording the payments, where no special Exchequer credit has been taken, as final payments, ib. 2582–2585——Rule never to pay for a service which has not a credit in the Exchequer, or in the books of the Pay-office ib. 2586–2589.

Reference to, and examination upon the Paymaster's books, in which the payments are recorded after they are made, Anderson 3368 et seq.——Practice, when a Civil Service credit is once drawn, to keep it for that particular service, though the balance unexpended goes to the general balances, and is lent to other services, ib. 3375–3381. 3391, 3392. 3398. 3412——Claims upon the Pay-office come from all quarters, in different shapes, as well as by personal application, ib. 3530, 3531——Necessary interval at the beginning of each quarter, before the Exchequer is in a position to make issues, ib. 3596. 3609.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in his memorandum in 1854, as to the Paymaster-general's demands being limited to the sums required for his daily payments, and as to the impracticability of strict appropriation, App. p. 555, 556. 558——Remarks as to the misapprehension of the powers of the Treasury and Pay-office, in Lord Monteagle's memorandum of 1854, ib. 555——Statement by Mr. Anderson, that the recommendations in the Exchequer memorandum of 22 December 1854, would lead to an immense increase of the establishment, ib. 559.

Return from 1 April 1854 to 1 April 1856, of advances made for any services not voted by Parliament or sanctioned by statute; date of such advances, purpose, from what funds advanced, and when repaid, App. p. 802.

2. Belief as to the Legality of the Practice:

The system of keeping the cash in the banking accounts, in one common fund, is perfectly consistent with the annual Appropriation Act, though inconsistent with Lord Monteagle's interpretation of the Act of 1834, Anderson 1293–1296——Doubt as to the correctness of Lord Monteagle's opinion that he cannot legally issue money for the service of the year before the 1st of April, ib. 1520——Lord Monteagle considers the practice, with regard to issues and appropriation, to be wrong; but witness considers that the defect is in the law, ib. 1629–1634.

If Lord Monteagle's interpretation of the law be right, the practice of the Pay-office is not legal, Anderson 1638. 1734–1742——The real question in dispute is, whether the practice of the Pay-office follows up the principle of the Act; belief that it does, as far as possible, ib. 1643. 1727–1735——The temporary employment by the Paymaster, of monies drawn for one purpose for other purposes which have credits in the Exchequer, cannot be called a misappropriation, ib. 1993–1995.

The fact of the Vote being reported is considered by the Pay-office in the same light as an Appropriation Act, Hoffay 2629–2632.

3. Operation through means of Four distinct Accounts:

Explanation as to the four distinct accounts upon which the Pay-office operates, for the purpose of carrying on its pecuniary transactions, Anderson 1229 et seq.; Hoffay 2396——Constitution and working of the cash account explained; it comprises all sums which are paid to the Paymaster-general other than through the Exchequer, Anderson 1229. 1247 et seq.; 1317–1332——Working of the Exchequer credit account, as regards the daily credits given by the Exchequer and the supply of the drawing account, ib. 1229. 1236–1246.

The Exchequer credit account and the cash account can only be operated upon by writes-off; practice hereon, Anderson 1229–1233. 1333——The really working accounts are the drawing account and the bill account, ib. 1229——Supply of the drawing account from the credit account of the Assistant Paymaster-general, ib. 1229–1233. 1333. 1342–1348——Supply and operation of the bill account, ib. 1229. 1317–1319——There is, but one Exchequer account at the Bank to which the Paymaster pays money, Hoffay 2392, 2393.

Result of the general system that the whole of the public monies not required for the service of the day remain in the custody of the Exchequer, Anderson 1273–1282.

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office—continued.

4. Defence of the System on which the Accounts are kept:

Very perfect system of accounts in the Pay-office; the most approved form of double entry is applied, Anderson 1260–1269. 1354——Witness has never known a single item go to the wrong account, ib. 1263——Misconception in regard to the practice of the office under which Lord Monteagle wrote the Exchequer memorandum in 1854, ib. 2165. 2258–2260—— During the sixteen years that witness was at the Pay-office, Lord Monteagle never once came there to study the system of account, ib. 2165——Explanation that the branch accounts, as in the Paymaster's books, do not appear in the account at the Bank, and are not controlled by the Exchequer, ib. 3511–3516.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson, in 1854, as to the multiplied risks and increase of labour if the plan proposed in the Exchequer memorandum of 1854 were adopted, App. p. 559——Statement by Mr. Anderson that the errors pointed out in Lord Monteagle's memorandum did not exist in the Pay-office books, ib.

5. Working of the Cash Account explained; Inexpediency of Alteration:

Practice in regard to repayments, through the cash account, on account of navy stores, Anderson 1120–1129. 1247. 1253–1256. 1323–1332; Hoffay 2272 et seq.; 2378 et seq.——Constitution and working of the cash account explained; it comprises all sums which are paid to the Paymaster-general other than through the Exchequer, Anderson 1229. 1247 et seq. 1317–1332——During the last year the unusually large sum of 5,750,000 l. was passed into the cash account; how made up, ib. 1247. 1283——Of this sum about 2,000,000 l. was in the shape of re-imbursements to votes and other accounts, the remainder having been special items not likely to arise again, ib. 1247. 1283——The amount of 300,000 l. is made up of sums of revenue, which pass ultimately into the Exchequer, ib. 1247. 1283, 1284.

None of the payments to the cash account are original issues for services voted by Parliament, Anderson 1248——Distinction as between repayments to the cash account and payments into the Exchequer, ib. 1270–1284——Departmental audits without direct Parliamentary cognizance, in the case of repayments or transfers through the cash account, ib. 1274–1276. 1320. 1376–1384——System of exhaustion of the cash account before the Exchequer credits are drawn upon, ib. 1277–1284.

Varying daily amount of the cash account at the Bank; varying items composing it, Hoffay 2477–2482. 2574–2577——In 1855-56 the cash account amounted to 5,750,000 l., ib. 2481——Practice to exhaust the cash account before drawing on the Exchequer credit account, ib. 2483–2486——The Paymaster is made acquainted as quickly and as correctly as possible with the daily amount of the cash balance, ib. 2574–2577.

Consideration of a proposition that the repayments to the cash accounts be tranferred at once to the Exchequer instead of to the Paymaster's drawing bill accounts; objections thereto, Hoffay 2590–2620. 2633. 2634——Different mode of accounts necessary if the payments to the cash account are at once transferred to the Exchequer, ib. 2596–2609——The repayments of advances, if made into the Exchequer, would falsify the statement of the annual revenue and expenditure, unless new regulations and accounts were introduced, ib. 2596–2598. 2602–2620.

Regulations under which a sum of 53,959 l. payable to the Exchequer has been held over in the Pay-office till the end of the quarter ensuing to that in which received, Anderson 4136–4141——The general mode in which the cash account is dealt with by the Paymaster should not be disturbed, ib. 4160.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in 1854 as to the cash account being exhausted before drawing the Exchequer credit, App. p. 558.

Account of all monies received by the Paymaster-general, except such as were drawn from the Exchequer, or were repayments of monies issued for services from the Exchequer; date of such receipts, and dates of payment into the Exchequer, where so paid, for the year 1855-56, App. p. 816–828——Cash receipts and transfers payable to Exchequer, ib. 816–819——Cash receipts not payable to Exchequer, ib. 820–828.

6. Consolidation of the Pay Offices, and consequent Advantages:

How far the system of several Paymasters in 1831 was any greater security for the appropriation of funds to the particular services than the present system of a Paymaster-general, Anderson 1085–1089——System at the time of the Report of 1831, whereby the public payments were conducted in a great number of offices, ib. 1199——Sundry disadvantages of the old system of paymasters contrasted with the very important improvements effected by the consolidation of the offices, ib. 1200–1228. 1297–1306.

Much greater control and security now than formerly, when the balances were so much scattered about, Anderson 1200, 1201. 1210. 1225–1228. 1300–1304——Undue division of responsibility under the former system, ib. 1201——Considerable public saving through the reduction of establishments consequent on the consolidation,

Anderson

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office—continued.

6. Consolidation of the Pay Offices and consequent Advantages—continued.

Anderson 1209–1213, and App. p. 507——Uniform tendency since the Report of 1831 to the principle of consolidation, Anderson 1202–1206——Since the establishment of the Pay-office in 1836 there has been a saving of nearly half a million in salaries alone, ib. 1210.

Considerable benefits which have resulted during the war from the consolidation of the pay-offices, Anderson 1214–1220. 1304——Beneficial result of the consolidation, as shown by the establishment of the Commissariat Chest account, ib. 1225–1228——Practice previously to 1832, whereby payments for the army, navy, and ordnance were constantly made considerably in advance of the votes of Parliament; amendment since that period, ib. 1413–1418——Issue formerly in gross sums to the Paymaster of the Forces, and to the treasurers of the ordnance and of the navy, the issue in each case being distinct, ib. 1691–1693.

7. System of Audit:

The Paymaster sends his accounts monthly, with all his vouchers, to the Audit-office, Anderson 1373. 3381–3384; Hoffay 2397——Statement showing that the Pay-office is not an office in which a daily concurrent audit could be advantageously introduced, Anderson 1374——There would be no difficulty in extending the audit to the Paymaster's cash account, ib. 4160.

Nature of the audit check upon the transfer to the Exchequer of repayments to the Paymaster's cash account, Romilly 4266–4269——The Paymaster's account now comes monthly, instead of quarterly, ib. 4271, 4272.

8. Objection to an Audit by the Exchequer:

Witness decidedly objects to the proposition that the Exchequer should exercise the functions of audit in the office of the Paymaster-general, Anderson 1364, 1365. 1704 et seq.——Further evidence opposed to the proposition that a clerk from the Exchequer-office should attend in the Pay-office as a check upon the Paymaster, and as a means of Exchequer audit, ib. 2004 et seq.

9. Office of Paymaster-general; Amendment suggested:

Reference to the responsibility of the Paymaster-general, notwithstanding that his duties are mainly performed by deputies, Anderson 1963–1969——The Paymaster-general takes no part in the detailed execution of the duties of the Pay-office, and is only consulted in the event of departure from the settled regulations, ib. 2186–2192, 2209, 2210——When the Paymaster-general comes into office he grants deputations to various officers to act for him, ib. 2186——Nominal responsibility of the Paymaster-general for the proper discharge of the duties of the Pay-office, ib. 2187–2189.

Improvement if the duties of Paymaster-general were vested in some permanent official, such as the Assistant Paymaster-general, Anderson 2193, 2194. 2211, 2212——Casual attendance of the Paymaster-general, he having other important public duties to attend to, ib. 2193, 2194. 2112——As Chairman of the Chelsea Board and as Vice-President of the Board of Trade, the Paymaster-general has but little leisure to devote to the Pay-office, ib. 2194. 2212——He is not a final officer, ib. 2195——Special instances in which the signature of the Paymaster-general is required to documents, ib. 2209, 2210.

General responsibility of the Paymaster-general, notwithstanding that his duties are almost all deputed, Hoffay 2427–2431——There are five different persons to whom the Paymaster deputes his duties, ib. 2430.

10. Checks against Fraud or undue Misappropriation:

Absence of discretion in the Paymaster to pay away the money in his hands otherwise than for the special service for which issued to him, Anderson 1043. 1045——Several and efficient checks against fraud or unauthorised payments out of the drawing account, ib. 1229–1241. 1333–1348——Check afforded by the examination and record of the vouchers upon which payments are made, ib. 1233. 1335——A full account is furnished monthly by the Paymaster to the Audit Board, Anderson 1373; Hoffay 2397.

Doubt as to the Paymaster making an illegal issue at the bidding of the Treasury, Anderson 1613–1619. 1626–1628——Less detailed supervision of account in the Pay-offices formerly than at present in regard to the army or navy expenditure, ib. 1693–1699——The checks in the Pay-office are at present as perfect as they can be, ib. 2027–2032. 2044.

In the event of an order from the Treasury to apply naval monies to other purposes, the Paymaster-general would doubtless remonstrate with the Admiralty before doing so, but would hardly refuse to obey the concurrent order of the Treasury and Admiralty, Hoffay 2314–2320. 2398–2400. 2420–2435——Monthly accounts are rendered by the Pay-office to the Treasury, showing the receipts and payments, and the balances to the credit of the several services, Anderson 3393–3396——The Paymaster's accounts are transmitted quarterly to the War-office, Vine 3950.

 11. Suggestions

Report, 1856—continued.

PAY OFFICE—continued.

II. Evidence on the part of the Pay Office—continued.

11. Suggestions for an Improved System generally:

Approval of the Pay-office receiving not only the small sums of revenue which it now receives, but the revenue generally, Anderson 1984–1987——The Pay-office should not have to keep an account of credits under each separate vote, but should receive one cash credit for all the service, in accordance with a daily estimate to the Treasury, Hoffay 2668 et seq.——The Exchequer issue to the Paymaster should be made for the estimated aggregate amount of the daily payments, and should come out of the general votes, Anderson 3516, 3517. 3532 et seq.——Evidence in favour of a system of aggregate issue and daily concurrent audit, ib. 3532 et seq.——The Paymaster should be dealt with by the Exchequer as an imprest accountant, ib. 3533 et seq.

III. Regulations as laid down in Treasury Minutes:

Direction in Treasury Minute of September 1834, in regard to the cash account and the Exchequer Credit account, App. p. 476, 477.

Regulation in Treasury Minute of 9 May 1837, relative to the accounts of the Paymaster at the Bank of Ireland, App. p. 489.

Sundry regulations in Treasury Minute of 19 August 1836, App. p. 491–499—— Further regulations for the guidance of the office, and for the conduct of the accounts, in Minute of 19 November 1836, ib. 499–504——Regulations in Treasury Minute of 19 November, in regard to the establishment of the office of Paymaster-general, ib. 502–504.

Treasury Minute, dated 27 March 1835, regulating the Paymaster-general's drawing accounts at the Bank; and Sir Henry Parnell's letter, dated 18 November 1827, on which the Minute was founded, App. p. 505, 506.

Treasury Minute, dated 22 December 1848, for the government of the office, App. p. 511–529——Statement in this Minute as to the services to be paid by the Paymaster-general, ib. 511——Direction in the Minute that the cash account be exhausted before drawing upon Exchequer credits, ib. 512.

Directions in Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, as to the authorities to be required by the Paymaster in regard to the issue of money for the several services, App. p. 515 et seq.——Recommendation in the Minute that the whole of the accounts be kept by double entry, ib. 527——Direction in the Minute that the accounts be delivered for audit within six weeks after every month, ib.

Statement in Treasury Minute of December 1848, as to the establishments of the divided offices, App. p. 527——Statement as to the establishment of the consolidated office, and scale of salaries, ib. 528——Statement as to the reduction effected by the consolidation of the offices, ib.

Recommendation in the Treasury Minute of December 1848, as to the hours of attendance of the clerks, App. p. 528——Direction in the Minute that no person employed in the Paymaster-general's office is to hold any private appointment, ib. 529——Direction as to the appointment of clerks on probation, ib.——Direction as to the rule of promotion from class to class, ib.

Letter from Lord Monteagle to the Lords of the Treasury, dated 16 January 1849, on the subject of the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, App. p. 532–534.

Paper showing the alterations made in the Treasury Minute, dated 22 December 1848, in consequence of the preceding letter, App. p. 534–536.

Direction in Treasury Minute of 24 November 1854, that a separate account for the quarter, ended 5 April 1854, be transmitted to the Commissioners of Audit, App. p. 582.

See also Adjustment of Accounts (Pay Office). Appropriation. Army. Balances. Brooksbank, The late Mr. Consolidated Fund. Control. Deposits (Pay Office). Excess of Grants. Exchequer. Imprests, &c. Miscellaneous Services. Navy. Old Stores (Navy). Parliamentary Control. Parnell, Sir Henry. Royal Orders. Sargent, Mr. Transfers between Departments. Treasury. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses).

Paymaster of Civil Services. This office now exists in Ireland only, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 509.

Regulation in Treasury Minute of September 1834, that the accounts of the Paymaster of Civil Services shall be made up quarterly, and transmitted to the Commissioners of Audit, App. p. 478.

Recommendation by Sir Charles Trevelyan in 1848, that the office should be consolidated with that of the Paymaster-general, App. p. 507, 508.

Statements in the Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, as to the payments transferred from the office of the Paymaster of Civil Services, App. p. 520.

See also Pay Office, I. 5.; II. 6.

Report, 1856—continued.

Paymaster of the Forces. See Pay Offices, I. 5.; II. 6.

Payments. See Pay Office.

Pensions. See Redemption of Pensions. Superannuations and Pensions.

Post Office. Payment out of gross revenue in 1826 of above 700,000 l. for the London Post-office adverted to, as a payment which should have had direct Parliamentary sanction, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 142–145. 151–153.

Return showing the gross income of the Post-office, distinguishing the total sums received, the sums paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purposes for which paid, and the authority for such payments, and the net sum paid into the Exchequer for the years 1854–55 and 1855–56, App. p. 626, 627.

Return showing the amount of each vote for the years ending 31 March 1855 and 1856, the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and the date when drawn by the accountants from the Exchequer account; showing also the payment of certain consequent amounts into the Exchequer account under the same heads of revenue, App. p. 631, 632.

See also Redemption of Pensions.

Premiums on Exchequer Bills:

1. Comments on the Course pursued hereon by the Treasury.
2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury.
3. Correspondence between the Treasury and Exchequer.

1. Comments on the Course pursued hereon by the Treasury:

Particulars as to a question between the Treasury and witness in regard to the payment to the Exchequer of premiums on Exchequer Bills issued in 1853, for the purpose of raising a definite sum of money (500,000 l.), Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 616–620. 627 et seq.——In the matter of these premiums, witness refers to his correspondence with the Treasury in 1853–54, as showing his grounds of argument that these premiums, being so much in excess of the Vote on the Appropriation Act, should be repaid to the Exchequer Account, ib. 616–618. 636–645.

Argument put forward by the Treasury that the Bills having been computed at par in the Appropriation Act, the Exchequer control applied to them only at par, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 619——Former precedents adverted to of repayments to the Exchequer of premiums on Exchequer Bills, ib.——Order eventually, in January 1854, for the payment of the premiums in question to witness, ib. 619. 644. 662——Persistence notwithstanding of the Treasury, in their opinion that the matter of the premiums rested between them and Parliament, ib. 619. 644, 645. 662.

Disposal of Exchequer Bills to the Bank of England in 1840; return of the premiums in this case to the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 620——Absence of authority in the Treasury to apply a larger amount of ways and means than the supply which such ways and means is intended to cover, ib. 631 et seq.——Untenable argument of the Treasury shown by the supposition that there had been a discount instead of a premium on the Bills; witness argues that in such case he would have been perfectly justified in supplying the deficiency, ib. 634, 635. 651–659. 706——Witness refers to the words of the statute as corroborating his view of the case, ib. 635. 650. 657.

The correspondence of the Treasury shows that they contended all through that the premiums should not be accounted for to the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 636–645. 662——Copy of Treasury Minute, dated 26 October 1810, with reference to the issue of Exchequer Bills; provision therein that premiums on bills for ways and means purposes should be paid to the Consolidated Fund, or, in other words, to the Exchequer, ib.——Further objection to the nonpayment of the premiums into the Exchequer, ib. 708.

Further examination upon the question of the denial by the Treasury of witness's right to enforce the payment to the Exchequer of the premiums on Exchequer Bills issued in 1853, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3012 et seq.——Instead of the Treasury accounting to the Exchequer for the premiums, it was their duty to pay them over at once, ib. 3014–3018. 3027 et seq.——In the Minute of 1810 a principle was laid down analogous to that contended for by witness, ib. 3017. 3032–3040——Though the Treasury eventually did transfer the premiums, the concession was limited by a denial of witness's right to enforce such transfer, ib. 3018–3026.

Further statement as to the proper mode of proceeding, in the event of their having been a loss instead of a gain on the Exchequer Bills, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3041–3044 ——Clause in the Appropriation Act recited as confirming the views maintained by witness, ib.

2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury:

Explanatory statement of the course taken by the Treasury with reference to the payment to the Exchequer of the premiums on Exchequer Bills; inaccuracy of Lord Monteagle

Report, 1856—continued.

Premiums on Exchequer Bills—continued.

2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury—continued.

Monteagle's evidence hereon, Anderson 2239-2253——The premiums were duly paid to the Exchequer in January 1854, the first correspondence on the subject having been in December previously, ib. 2241. 2247-2250——Lord Monteagle was distinctly told, in the first Treasury letter, that the practice of payment to the Exchequer would not be departed from, ib. 2242-2246.

3. Correspondence between the Treasury and Exchequer:

Statement by the Comptroller-general, on 13 December 1853, as to the expediency of any premium on the bills being paid into the Exchequer, App. p. 713.

Statement on the part of the Treasury, on 11 January 1854, that the Comptroller-general can only deal with the bills at par, and that any consideration of premium or discount is a question between the Board of Treasury and Parliament, App. p. 715.

Arguments adduced by the Comptroller, in letters of 11 and 16 January, in support of his views that the premiums should be accounted for directly to the Exchequer, App. p. 716-718.

Letter from the Treasury to the Comptroller-general, dated 31 January 1854, authorizing the latter to receive certain premiums and interest, and requesting them to be carried to the Consolidated Fund account, App. p. 718.

Letter from the Treasury, dated 5 April 1854, in which it is further maintained that the accounting for the premiums is a matter between the Treasury and Parliament, App. p. 719.

Letter from the Comptroller, dated 7 April 1854, further contending for the principle that the accounting for the premiums is a matter in which the Exchequer is directly concerned, App. p. 720.

Letters from the Comptroller to the Treasury, dated 3 and 24 July 1854, relative to premiums on the issue of 1,750,000 l. Exchequer Bills, for supply services, App. p. 721, 722.

Reply to the foregoing, dated 20 July 1854, explanatory of the course which the Treasury would adopt in the event of premiums accruing, and stating that "any profit would be paid to the credit of the public in conformity with the invariable practice in such cases," App. p. 721.

Letter from the Comptroller-general, dated 8 August 1854, in further reference to the payment to the Exchequer of any premiums on the 1,750,000 l., and expressing himself satisfied with the statement in the Treasury letter of 20 July, App. p. 722.

Prisons' Establishments. Statement as to there having been an unnecessarily large balance in the Paymaster's books to the credit of "Establishments of Prisons at Home," in April 1852, Anderson 3469-3481.

Prisons' Superintendence. Statement as to the Paymaster's account having been overdrawn in April 1852 in respect of "Prisons' Superintendence," Anderson 3469.

Privy Council Office. Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Privy Purse. The first class of the Civil List is generally paid out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund; that is, the privy purse, Anderson 3432, 3433.

Prize Money. Payment of naval prize money to the general account of the Paymaster at the Bank of England, Hoffay 2339, 2340. 2345-2350——The naval prize account is now 67,226 l., ib. 2341——The army prize account is kept similarly to that for the navy, and amounts to 4,767 l., ib. 2342——Amount invested in the funds on account of army prize money, ib. 2343, 2344.

Regulations laid down by the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 19, over and above those of the Act of 1848, for the management of naval prize money; advantages thereof, Hoffay 2355-2377. 2404-2409——The public, instead of the agents, now derive interest on the money, and there is the additional benefit of the money being secure, ib. 2355-2366. 2404-2409

Receipts by the Paymaster in 1855-56 of army and naval prize money (not payable to the Exchequer), App. p. 828.

Profits. See Unexpended Balances.

Public Accounts Commission of 1831. Copy of the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts (on the Exchequer), dated 8 October 1831, App. p. 455-471——Object of the Commission adverted to in the Report, ib. 455.

See also Accounts, V. 1. Acquittance (Exchequer), 3. Act 4 Will. 4, c. 15. Control. Exchequer, 15. Exchequer Bills, 2. Parliamentary Control. Receipts (Exchequer).

Report, 1856—continued.

Public Buildings and Royal Palaces. Amount and date respectively of payment and of Exchequer issue in April 1852, under the head of Public Buildings and Royal Palaces, Anderson 3449, 3450.

Public Walks. Reference to a vote in 1841, for public walks, upon which there was an issue in 1854, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 740, 741. 776, 777——Outstanding balance of 2,400 l. on account of a vote for public walks adverted to, Anderson 1595——Further reference to the circumstance of there being a balance of 2,462 l. out of the vote of 10,000 l. in 1841, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2847–2849.

Public Works (Ireland). Different modes in England and Ireland of repayment to the Exchequer of advances on account of public works, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 508, 509. 511.

Correspondence between the Exchequer and Treasury in November 1841, with respect to an excessive issue for public works, Ireland, App. p. 665.

Publicity. Publicity and responsibility to Parliament form a check far more efficient than any the Comptroller-general could exercise, Anderson 2013–2021. 2071–2081.

Q.

Queen Dowager's Annuity. Saving in the case of the Queen Dowager's annuity adverted to, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 740——A sum of 25,000 l. became a saving to the public in consequence of the interposition of the Exchequer in regard to the instrument of appointment, ib. 2986. 2994.

R.

Receipts (Exchequer). Sundry revenues paid directly into the Exchequer, or indirectly through the Paymaster-general, Right Hon. Lord Moneagle 9–11——The great branches of revenue, such as the duties of customs and inland revenue, are paid directly by their Receivers-general, ib. 10——Illustration in the case of the Excise, of the former and present mode of payments into the Exchequer, ib. 13, 14. 16——Simplified and improved regulations, under the Act of 1834, in regard to receipts, ib. 14.

Particular cases in which the receipts which come into the Exchequer are paid by the Paymaster-general, or otherwise than through the revenue departments, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 490–509——List of accountants and public accounts, as fixed by the Treasury Minute of 1834, ib. 491——Tendency of late years to increased payments into the Exchequer through the Paymaster, in lieu of payment through offices and individuals, ib. 510, 511——Instance of payment to the Exchequer through the paymaster of absolute revenue, independently of the receipts for old stores, rents, &c., ib. 544–547——Belief that the Treasury regulations of late years have not practically resulted in more direct payments into the Exchequer than was the case formerly, ib. 592–596. 599. 611–613.

General enumeration of the branches of public revenue, and of the other receipts, making up the aggregate of the Exchequer, Anderson 941——Fiction previously to 1834 of paying the money into the Exchequer instead of the Bank of England, ib. 983–986——Duplicate account received at the Treasury of payments of revenue into the Bank, ib. 1016——Advice given to the comptroller of revenue payments to his account, he having no check or regard to the correctness of the amount, ib. 1496–1501——Very few payments into the Exchequer by parties not paying through the Paymaster-general, ib. 1521. 1523.

The original receipts by the Paymaster on account of revenue are transferred from the cash account to the Exchequer, Hoffay 2599–2601.

Descriptive statement in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, as to the regulations in regard to Exchequer receipts, App. p. 456 et seq.——Fiction, as stated in the Report, by which payment of taxes to the Exchequer is sustained, ib. 457——Statement in the Report of the various complex arrangements which may be dispensed with in respect of money paid into the Exchequer, ib. 460——Particulars, as given in the Report of Mr. Wilde's evidence, as to checks upon receipt of money in the Exchequer by the teller's clerk, ib. 468, 469.

Review in Treasury Minute of September 1834, of the practice then followed in the different revenue departments of paying monies into the Bank of England, App. p. 472, 473——Regulations laid down in the Minute, as to the mode of transfer from the several receivers' accounts to the account of the Exchequer, ib. 474, 475.

Treasury Minute, dated 2d March 1855, for paying the revenue to the Exchequer accounts daily, App. p. 583–586.

See also Acquittance (Exchequer). Bank of England. Exchequer. Gross Revenue. Income. Miscellaneous Receipts. Old Stores (Navy). Pay Office, I. 4; II. 5. 11. Receivers-General. Woods and Forests, Office of, 1.

Report, 1856—continued.

Receivers-General. Practice in regard to payment by the Receivers-general into the Bank of England, the amount left in their hands being regulated by the Treasury without the cognisance of witness, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 27–29. 450, 451——As regards the monies in the hands of the Receivers-general, a check might be exercised by witness if he were informed by the Bank of amount of their balances, and by the Treasury of the amount which they are limited to hold, ib. 452–462. 467, 468——Question as to the propriety of the principle that the Exchequer should extend its control to the receivers' balances, ib. 461–467.

Regulations laid down in Treasury Minute of September 1834 for the government of the several Receivers-general in their transactions with the Bank, App. p. 473–475.

See also Receipts.

Redemption of Pensions:

1. Strong Objection to the recent Payment of 213,000 l. without the direct Sanction of Parliament.
2. Precedents of Redemption without Parliamentary Authority.
3. Precedents in which Parliamentary Sanction was required.
2. Lapse of Time before the recent Redemptions would come before Parliament.
5. Evidence in Explanation and Approval of the Course adopted by the Treasury.

1. Strong Objection to the recent Payment of 213,000 l. without the direct Sanction of Parliament:

Reference to an issue of 213,000 l. in 1856 for the redemption of hereditary pensions as not having been made by the Exchequer, and as being an issue to which witness would have objected, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 22–26. 44. 48——Further evidence relative to the payment of 213,000 l. out of gross revenue for the redemption of hereditary pensions, the same having been accomplished without a vote of Parliament or the cognizance of the Exchequer, shows that the Act of 1854 is in its present form defective, ib. 41 el seq.——Whether legal or not, the redemption of these pensions without reference to Parliament was highly inexpedient, ib. 42. 99–107. 135. 141. 146, 147. 187.

Reference to the intimation by Mr. Gladstone, in 1854, as to certain outstanding pensions which it might be expedient to buy up, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 52, 53. 97, 98——Legality, so to speak, of payments out of gross revenue without Parliamentary sanction, in cases not included in the schedule of the Act, ib. 60, 61. 98–110——Approval of the principle of extinguishing the pensions by purchase, ib. 141——The account of balances in the Exchequer, stating the payment of 213,000 l. as an issue out of the Exchequer, produces a false impression, inasmuch as the money was not paid in or out of the Exchequer at all, ib. 180–186. 188, 189.

Further evidence relative to the statement by Mr. Gladstone in 1854, with respect to the purchase of certain outstanding pensions; nothing was said or inferred as to the mode in which the purchase was to be made, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 211–224——Understanding that the statement applied to all existing pensions charged on the gross revenue, ib. 213, 214——Concurrence in Mr. Gladstone's views as to the expediency of redeeming these pensions, ib. 215, 216.

Power of the Treasury in regard to the issue of minutes, &c. adverted to in connection with the commutation in question, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 535–543.

Explanation that witness does not offer any opinion as to the legality of the redemptions, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2741. 2745. 2746. 2751——Recognition by Government of the principle contended for by witness, ib. 2746. 2754——Further statement as to the information given to Parliament in 1854 by Mr. Gladstone not having pointed to the direct mode of redemption of the pensions, ib. 2755–2761.

2. Precedents of Redemption without Parliamentary authority:

Redemption in 1825 of a pension payable to the first Lord Melbourne adverted to as having been effected without Parliamentary sanction, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 45–49. 51. 82–90——Power, without Parliamentary sanction, to make purchases out of the capital of the land revenue, ib. 73. 94, 95——Redemption in 1853 out of gross revenue of the pension of Earl Cowper chargeable on the Excise and on the land revenues, ib. 91–95——Undue precedent in 1826 for the transaction in 1856 without the knowledge of Parliament, ib. 142–145. 151–153.

Distinction as regards the authorised mode of purchase between Earl Cowper's pension purchased in 1853 and the pensions purchased in 1856, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 217–224——Reason why the purchase of Lord Cowper's pension has not appeared in the Finance accounts at all, ib. 303.

Repetition of former argument that the redemptions in 1856 were not founded on proper precedents, or on constitutional principles, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2740–2754——The purchase of Earl Cowper's pensions having been made out of the capital of the land revenue is no precedent for the manner of the redemptions in 1856, ib. 2753——The year 1825 was not a period of good precedents, ib. 2753——The precedents in question do not render the course taken in 1856 an eligible course, ib. 2754.

3. Precedents

Report, 1856—continued.

Redemption of Pensions—continued.

3. Precedents in which Parliamentary Sanction was required:

Redemption of sundry pensions in which Parliamentary sanction was most properly required, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 15 et seq. 132, 133——Parliamentary sanction required by Lord Grey and witness when as Secretary to the Treasury witness was entrusted with the commutation of some small pensions, ib. 45-49. 65-72. 140——Particulars as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the perpetual annuities paid to the heirs of Colonel Fairfax and the heirs of Nicholas Yates; such pensions having been chargeable on the land revenues of the Crown, ib. 49. 67-72.

Particulars as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the tax paid to the Duke of Grafton on the prizage and butlerage of wines, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 49. 73-81——Also as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the annuity to Lord Ormond, also paid as prizage and butlerage on wines, ib. 49, 81, 82——Also, as to the redemption by Parliamentary vote of the coal tax termed the Richmond Shilling, payable to the Duke of Richmond, ib. 49. 82-84.

Parliamentary sanction given in 1853 in the case of the extinction by the Treasury of certain small charges upon the land revenue, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 50. 63-65——Parliamentary authority, in the case of one of Lord Cowper's pensions, for making purchases out of the capital of the land revenue on which the pension was charged, ib. 94, 95. 303.

Examination with reference to the sanction of Parliament having been required in the redemption of the pensions of the Duke of Grafton and the Earl of Ormond, as levied upon the prizage and butlerage of wines admitted; want of precise analogy between such redemptions and the redemptions of 1856, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2735-2741——Different circumstances attending the pension of the Duke of Richmond and the pensions commuted in 1856, ib. 2742-2744——Circumstance of witness having required Parliamentary sanction further adverted to, ib. 2747-2750——Further reference to the requirement of Parliamentary sanction in the case of redemption of pensions by the Commissioners of Woods, ib. 2751.

4. Lapse of Time before the recent Redemptions would come before Parliament:

Practice in regard to the dates of presentation of the Finance Accounts to Parliament adverted to, as showing the time at which the transaction involving the payment of 213,000*l.* would have been made known, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 160-180——Further evidence as to the undue lapse of time before the communication to Parliament of the purchase of 1856, ib. 225-229——Accident as to date under which, if the finance accounts were made up to January, the commutation of pensions in 1856 would not appear in the accounts till 1857, ib. 301-308——Lapse of time before Parliament became cognisant, through the finance accounts, of the redemptions respectively of 1825 and 1853, ib. 2762-2765.

5. Evidence in Explanation and Approval of the Course adopted by the Treasury:

Justification, on several grounds, of the payment of 213,000*l.* in redemption of hereditary pensions without the authority of Parliament, Anderson 1015——Positive malversation if the Treasury had directed the payment of a clearly excessive sum in redemption of the pensions commuted in 1856, ib. 1063——Special orders given by the Treasury, under which sufficient sums are kept by the Revenue department, in order to provide the large sums necessary for the redemption of pensions, as effected in 1856, ib. 1469.

The Comptroller-general could not have known anything of the retention of these sums, nor could Parliament, previously to the Treasury return, stating that the transaction had been effected, Anderson 1470-1476——With respect to the payment in 1853, out of the Excise it appeared in the finance accounts for the year which came into the hands of members about June 1854, ib. 1477-1481——Evidence in explanation and defence of the introduction of the sum of 213,000*l.* for the redemption of pensions, into the return of gross revenue of the Excise and Post-office, and of its deduction as expenditure, ib. 1896-1926——On account of the largeness of the amount an exception was made to the general practice, ib. 1901. 1906. 1922-1926.

Further defence of the course adopted by Government commuting these pensions, more especially as Mr. Gladstone gave distinct notice to The House, in introducing the Bill, that negociations for their redemption were in an advanced state, Anderson 1927-1936. 2013-2021——Question as to the expediency of transferring the redemption of pensions to the Consolidated Fund, ib. 1937, 1938——The holders of the pensions were the Duke of Grafton and a Mr. Eyre, ib. 2013——Twenty-six years' purchase and a fraction was granted, ib. 2014.

Repayment of Loans. Treasury and Audit-office papers relative to the repayment of loans, App. p. 614-622——Extract from a letter from the Commissioners of Audit to the Treasury, dated 5 May 1848, ib. 614——Treasury Minute on this letter, dated 15 May 1848, relative to the Irish Relief Works, ib.

Extract from letter of Messrs. Anderson and Kirby, Special Commissioners for the audit of the expenditure connected with the Irish Famine, dated 24 May 1848, App.

Report, 1856—continued.

Repayment of Loans—continued.

p. 614——Treasury Minute on the preceding letter, dated 26 May 1848, App. p. 615——Letter from the Commissioners of Audit to the Treasury, dated 28 September 1849, with copy of Minute of the Commissioners of 19 September 1849, referred to in the above report, and form of statement of sums due to the public, ib. 615, 616——Treasury Minutes on the preceding letters and papers, dated 16 October and 13 November 1849, ib. 617–620.

Repayments to Exchequer. Account of repayment of advances made out of the Consolidated Fund for purchase of bullion, and for local works and improvements in Great Britain and Ireland during the year ended 31st March 1855, in which discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the finance accounts, appear, App. p. 765.

Account of all imprest and other public monies paid into the Exchequer in the year ended 31 March 1855, in which discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of keeping the finance accounts, App. p. 766, 767.

Pay-office return of all cash receipts and transfers in 1855–56, payable to the Exchequer, App. p. 816–819——Also of cash receipts not payable to Exchequer, ib. 820–828.

See also Commissariat Chest Account. Imprests, &c. Navy, 4. Old Stores (Navy). Pay Office, I. 4, II. 5. Premiums on Exchequer Bills. Transfers between Departments. Unexpended Balances.

Reports to Parliament. See Audit. Exchequer, 10.

Responsibility. See Audit. Departments. Exchequer. Individual Control. Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Treasury.

Revenue Departments. Propriety of the Audit-office presenting the same accounts in regard to the revenue departments as in regard to the navy, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 447, 448. 819–835. 843. 846; Anderson 2067–2084; Hoffay 2635, 2636. 2653 et seq.; Romilly 4394–4399.

Recommendation by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, in 1853, that the Revenue departments ought to be brought under the direct control of the Legislature, App. p. 565.

Return of votes for Revenue departments, showing the amount of each vote, the date and amount of each issue from the Exchequer, and the date when drawn by the accountants from the Exchequer account; showing also the payments of certain consequent amounts into the Exchequer account under the same heads of revenue, App. p. 631, 632.

See also Collection of Revenue. Customs. Gross Revenue. Inland Revenue. Post Office. Receipts (Exchequer). Receivers-General.

Re-Votes. Re-votes should be taken for the items not met in the financial year, even though the same should unduly augment the number of votes, Anderson 1440, 1441. 1445–1448. 1450, 1451——Requirement, in the event of savings, of a new vote for a further issue on account of the services in which the savings have arisen, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2879–2887.——See also Unexpended Balances.

Richmond, Duke of (Redemption of Pension). See Redemption of Pensions, 3.

Romilly, Edward, and Charles Macaulay. (Analysis of their Evidence.)—(Mr. Romilly.) Has been Commissioner of Audit since the beginning of 1836, and Chairman of the Board since May 1854; 4200–4202——(Mr. Macaulay.) Has been secretary of the Board since March 1854; 4203.——(Mr. Romilly.) Tenure of the Audit Board during good behaviour, 4204——Appointment of the Board by the Treasury, 4205——Payment of the salaries out of the Consolidated Fund, 4206.

The officers of the Board hold during the usual tenure, and their salaries are voted by Act of Parliament, 4207, 4208——Power of the Board to dismiss any of their officers, 4208, 4209——Direct appointment by the Treasury of the officer who inspects the accounts of the army and navy, 4210–4214. 4398, 4399. 4544——Report by this officer direct to the Audit Board, 4215——Before interfering with the appointment of this inspector, the Board would doubtless feel bound to refer the question to the Treasury, 4216——The officers under the inspector at the Admiralty and War-office are placed there by the Board, and are removable at pleasure, 4217, 4218.

List of accounts not audited by the Audit-office, 4220, and App. p. 843, 844——Under the head of miscellaneous votes, there are somewhat under 100 accounts not audited by the office, 4220, 4221——Out of the Miscellaneous Estimates and the Revenue Estimates for 1855–56, about 9,000,000 l. is finally examined in the Audit-office, and about 2,000,000 l. is not so examined, 4221–4223.

Power of the Treasury to send certain accounts to be audited or reported upon by the Audit Board, 4224——Authority of the Treasury to issue money without account, 4225. 4246——Power of the Treasury to withdraw some accounts from the Audit-office, and to send them to other auditors, 4225-4229——The larger number of accounts and the most important come to the Audit-office under Act of Parliament, 4229, 4230.

to

Report, 1856—continued.

Romilly, Edward, and Charles Macaulay. (Analysis of their Evidence)—continued.

Mention of several departments the accounts of which are not audited by the office, the amount involved is not large, 4231-4233——The Civil Contingencies, as separate accounts, are not audited, 4234. 4276——Course of action of the Audit-office from the commencement of the audit of any account until it is finally closed by being declared before the Chancellor of the Exchequer, 4235-4240.

Power ultimately of the Treasury, on their own responsibility, to allow or disallow items in the accounts, but not to interfere with the mode of audit adopted by the office, 4241-4245——Object of the Treasury covering warrant to authorise the expenditure in a particular list, 4247, 4248——With regard to those of the Miscellaneous Estimates which are examined by the Audit Board, the accounts themselves are audited independently of the Paymaster-general's account, 4251.

Non-inquiry by the Audit department into the issues and expenditure on account of the Duke of Wellington's funeral, with reference to the vote for that service, 4252-4258——Exoneration of the Paymaster by the Audit-office if he proceeded in accordance with the Treasury directions, 4259-4261——Probable interposition of the Audit Board in the event of the Treasury giving orders contrary to law, 4261-4265——Nature of the audit check upon the transfer to the Exchequer of repayments to the Paymaster's cash account, 4266-4269.

The majority of the accounts come monthly to the Audit-office, 4270——Most of the accounts that come by Act of Parliament are sent annually, 4271——The Paymaster's account now comes monthly instead of quarterly, 4271, 4272——Expenditure, as in the case of Labuan, without Parliamentary sanction would not be noticed by the Audit Board, 4273-4275——Expediency of the accounts of the Comptroller-general being subject to the audit, 4277-4282.

(Mr. Romilly and Mr. Macaulay.) Since the Act 10 Geo. 4, c. 50, the accounts of the Woods and Forests and Public Works have been audited in detail, and since the Act 14 & 15 Vict., c. 52, have been subject to the appropriation audit, 4283-4287——(Mr. Romilly.) Period at which the annual accounts of the Woods and Forests are laid before Parliament, 4288-4290——Circumstance of there having been no detailed audit of these accounts since March 1848, in consequence of difficulty in procuring the necessary vouchers and documents, 4291-4293.

Nature of the power vested in the Audit Board in order to compel ordinary accountants to furnish the required information, 4294——Steps taken by the Treasury with a view to the necessary documents being furnished by the Woods and Forests, 4295-4302——Witness refers to Mr. Bathurst as best capable of giving accurate information to the Committee in regard to the accounts in question, 4303. (For evidence of Mr. Bathurst, see Q. 4304-4365.)

[Resumed Examination.]—(Mr. Romilly.) Further statement as to the power of the Audit Board to compel the accountant to give in his information, 4366-4368——Suggestion that the accountants be liable to fines for delay in rendering their accounts, 4369, 4370. 4551——Opinion that a system of reports to Parliament is the best means of ensuring the punctual rendering of the accounts of the great departments, 4371. 4551——As regards the Woods and Forests and Works, the accounts and documents are now supplied to the Audit Board with comparative regularity, 4372, 4373.

Duty of the appropriation audit of the army and navy accounts to see that the sums are posted under the proper heads of the votes, and to report thereon, 4374, 4375——In the case of the Woods and Forests and Works, the Audit Board are auditors of the accounts, as well as reporters upon them, 4375, 4376——Transfer of the detailed audit of the commissariat expenditure from the Audit-office to the War department, 4377, 4378——Similar transfer in regard to the non-effectives of the army, 4379-4381.

Question whether the Board of Audit will pass in the Paymaster's books the expenditure for army effectives and non-effectives on the proposed certificate of the Secretary of State for War, 4381, 4382. 4386, 4387——Transfer to the War department of the detailed audit of part of the effectives of the army, 4382——Also of the ordnance non-effectives, 4383, 4384——The detailed audit of the commissariat service may now be dealt with in the same way as the audit of any other vote taken by the Secretary of State for War, 4385.

Opinion that an independent detailed audit is not necessary with respect to that portion of the army expenditure which depends entirely upon rules emanating from the head of the department, 4388-4390——Expediency, however, of an independent audit in the matter of all expenditure affected by rules emanating from the Treasury or from Parliament, 4389-4393——Impossibility of an adequate check by means merely of an appropriation audit, 4392, 4393.

Decided improvement if the whole of the miscellaneous votes and civil expenditure were subject to the same system of audit as the naval and military expenditure,

Report, 1856—continued.

Romilly, Edward, and Charles Macaulay. (Analysis of their Evidence)—continued.

4394, 4395—— Doubt as to any practical difficulty in carrying out an arrangement for voting the miscellaneous payments within the year, and closing the account yearly, 4394, 4395. 4406–4422——Objection to an examination of the miscellaneous expenditure by placing an officer from the Audit Board at the Treasury for the purpose, 4396–4398——Superior authority of the Treasury in the matter of the audit of the army and navy accounts, 4398–4404.

Circumstance of the audited naval and military accounts being laid before Parliament by the Treasury, instead of by the Audit Board; the report should be made directly by the latter body, 4398–4401——Expediency also of the Audit-office inspector of those accounts being appointed and removable by the Board of Audit, instead of by the Treasury, 4398, 4399——Importance of the audit of the miscellaneous accounts taking place at the Audit-office, 4399.

Danger in placing Audit-office officials at the Treasury, lest they become unduly influenced by that department, 4399——Improvement of the salaries of the subordinate officers of the Audit Board were paid out of the Consolidated Fund, ib.——Main importance of a power in the Board to report directly, and as often as they please, ib.——Though the Treasury have the power of amending the army and navy accounts before presentation, they have hardly ever, if at all, exercised such power, 4400–4404. 4439, 4440.

Explanation as to, and disapproval of the repeal of that portion of Sir J. Graham's Act of 1832, which directed that the navy accounts be laid before Parliament direct by the auditors, 4400, 4401. 4435–4438——Practice in regard to the Audit-office check upon each payment or salary in any of the departments; change of practice hereon, 4405——Further reference to the importance of a check through an independent body in the case of all particular directions laid down by Parliament, 4407. 4431——The detailed audit of the army and navy accounts is at present conducted entirely by the departments, independently of the Audit Board, 4423–4427. 4432–4434. 4504 et seq. 4563. 4576.

More efficient check if the army and navy accounts were sent to the Audit-office, 4428. 4430——This check, however, would involve increased delay and expense, 4429, 4430——Circumstances of there being a lapse of three years, under the French system, before the public expenditure is finally checked and accounted for, 4430——A detailed audit by the Audit-office should extend to such portion only of the naval or military expenditure as may be regulated by the rules of Parliament, or of the Treasury, and not of the Secretary of State for War, 4431. 4452.

Reasons opposed to a detailed audit by the Audit-office of the main portion of the accounts of expenditure of the naval and military departments, 4431. 4445–4452. 4456–4462——The audit of the public accounts is generally infinitely closer than it used to be, 4441–4444——Some accounts seemingly much in arrear of final audit are by no means in arrear of efficient examination, 4443, 4444——(Mr. Macaulay.) As regards the pensions, and half-pay of the military service the detailed audit was till lately conducted at the Audit-office, 4453, 4454——(Mr. Romilly.) The army non-effectives for 1855-56, not subject to a detailed Audit-office check, amount to 1,956,237 l.; 4455.

Until the Act of Sir J. Graham it was not considered that the functions of the Audit-office had anything to do with Parliament, 4457——With regard to the commissariat expenditure, the transfer of the detailed audit to the War department is in accordance with the entire practice of the army audit, 4463–4466——Disposition of the Treasury to support the Audit Board in disputes with departments, 4467——Nature of the Audit-office check that monies passing through the Pay-office on account of any department are duly dealt with without interference by the Treasury, 4468–4497.

Security, through the auditors, upon the payment into the Exchequer of money received by the Paymaster for old stores, 4487–4497——(Mr. Romilly and Mr. Macaulay) Reference to the origin of the change of practice in regard to the mode of paying salaries, 4498, 4499——Means of furnishing information with respect to objections raised by the audit-office examiners of naval and military accounts; no special query book is kept, 4500–4503——Duty of the Accountant-general of the Navy to check anything wrong in the detailed audit, 4509——(Mr. Macaulay.) Nature of the appropriatian audit of the army and navy accounts, 4513. 4565.

(Mr. Romilly.) Respects in which it may be considered that the War-office has as great an interest as the Audit-office in carrying out a correct detailed audit, 4517–4529. 4532——Origin of the Audit Board, in the transfer to it from the Exchequer of the functions of auditors of imprests, 4530. 4531——Further evidence in explanation of the appropriation audit, as carried out at the Admiralty and War-office by the inspector and clerks of the Audit-office, 4533–4539. 4564. 4577–4580——Statement as to the Commissioners of Audit vouching for the correctness of these accounts, though their officers have not inquired into the detailed expenditure, 4531. 4541–4545——Advantage if it were imperative on the Audit-office to state annually to Parliament the condition of the business of the office and the progress made with the audit of the several accounts, 4546–4550.

Further

Report, 1856—continued.

Romilly, Edward, and Charles Macaulay. (Analysis of their Evidence)—continued.

Further evidence and suggestions with a view to the prevention of delay on the part of accountants on sending in their accounts, 4551, 4552——Delay in the business of the Audit-office, partly through the insufficiency of the establishment, 4552, 4553——Delay in consequence of the heavy accounts owing to the war, 4552——It is contemplated by the Audit-office to issue regulations for colonial accountants, 4553, 4554——Considerable quantity of unexpected business sometimes thrown on the Audit-office by the Treasury, 4555——Doubt as to any quicker audit of the commissariat accounts since the transfer to the War department, 4556–4560.

(Mr. Macaulay.) Explanation as to the difficulty in procuring vouchers, &c. which has postponed for several years the final audit of the account of the "Turkish Embassy," 4561——(Mr. Romilly.) Explanatory statement relative to a case in which the Treasury concurred with the auditors against the Admiralty; the latter did not act contrary to any expressed opinion of the Treasury, 4562——(Mr. Macaulay.) Statement in concurrence with that of Mr. Romilly as to the naval and military accounts being certified by the Audit Board, 4564, 4565.

Large increase of staff necessary if a detailed audit of these accounts were undertaken by the Audit-office, 4566. 4568——Inexpediency, generally, of a detailed examination by the Audit-office, instead of by the Naval and Military departments, 4566. 4568——(Mr. Macaulay and Mr. Romilly.) Immense delay before the accounts could be finally completed if there were a second detailed andit, 4569–4575.

Memorandum, added at the request of Mr. Romilly, and dated 24 July 1856, showing distinctly what the duties are which the auditors are called upon to perform, in regard to the army and navy accounts, and the way in which they are performed, Ev. p. 441–443.

Romilly Mr. Memorandum by Mr. Romilly in 1850, relative to the power and practice respectively of the Treasury and the Audit Board, and recommending an increased audit check, App. p. 561–563.

Romilly, Mr., Salary of. Explanatory statement as to witness having suspended the payment of the salary of Mr. Romilly, on the refusal of the Treasury to furnish the instrument of appointment as chief of the Audit Board, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2998–3000.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury in 1854–55, as to the suspension of Mr. Romilly's salary, in consequence of the Comptroller declining to make the issue until the patent, or instrument of appointment was produced, App. p. 741–756.

Royal Orders. Practice with regard to Royal orders and the limitation of the number; approval thereof, Anderson 1001–1006——The Royal order is a very necessary legal form, though it interposes no actual check, ib. 1064–1067——The Royal order would still be necessary if the Exchequer were abolished, ib. 1650, 1651.

Details as to the alteration by the Treasury in the Queen's Sign Manual warrant, and as to the refusal of witness to act upon such warrant as illegal, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2854-2868——Precis of correspondence on the foregoing subjects, between witness and the Treasury, showing his objection in the first instance, to act upon four Royal orders, and Treasury warrants as being dated anterior to the Ways and Means Act, and his objection subsequently on the errors of date being corrected by erasure, ib. 2855. 2865, and App. p. 757——A proper warrant was eventually sent to the Exchequer, and acted upon by witness, ib. 2855. 2862. 2864——The defect as regards the ante-dating of the warrant was a very essential matter, ib. 2860. 2865–2868——The irregularity in regard to the erasure was doubtless committed by some subordinate official, ib. 2861.

The Royal order and Treasury warrant are not mere forms, but rather legal and indispensable realities, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2957——The Royal Sign Manual warrant covers many things which a Treasury warrant could not reach, Macaulay 4247.

Suggestions in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, for the Crown to give authority to the Exchequer for issues by a Royal order, App. p. 463——Regulations suggested in the report in respect of Royal orders, ib. 464.

Form of Royal order as approved by the Treasury in 1834, App. p. 475. 478.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury in 1841 as to the indiscriminate issues of ways and means, and irregularity of Royal orders for second session, dated previously to Ways and Means Acts, App. p. 652–664.

Minute of the Comptroller-general dated 24 March 1845, on the examination and control of Royal orders, App. p. 681.

List of Royal orders and Treasury warrants, dated 12 June 1852, upon which as irregular, the Comptroller-general declined to act, App. p. 701–703.

Return of advances in the years 1854–56, for services for which no Royal order or Treasury warrant has been issued, stating date of such advance, purpose, from which funds advanced, and when repaid, App. p. 802.—— See also Pay Office, I 1. 2. II 1. 2.

Report, 1856—continued.

Royal Parks. Payments and issue in 1852, on account of Royal parks adverted to as showing that the Exchequer credit was overdrawn in April and May, Anderson 3450–3453.

Russian-Dutch Loan. Inaccurate representation in Sir C. Trevelyan's paper of 1848, with respect to the circumstances under which Lord Grenville, when auditor of the Exchequer, withdrew his objection to the issue of money as interest on the Russian-Dutch Loan, Right. Hon Lord Monteagle 852–858——Statement by Sir C. Trevelyan, that Lord Grenville made the issue as directed by Lord Grey, ib. 852——Opinion of the law officers of the Crown, under which alone Lord Grenville consented to the issue, ib. 852. 855–858.

Witness delivers in the papers (App. p. 771, 772) with reference to the Russian-Dutch Loan, as showing that it was to the opinion of the law officers of the Crown that Lord Grenville deferred, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2897.

S.

Salaries and Allowances. No salary can be granted without the authority of the Treasury, Anderson 2154——Eventually, however, the different departments give their orders upon the Paymaster-general direct, without the interference of the Treasury, ib.——Practice of the Treasury in regard to the salaries of the colonial establishments, ib.

Instance of claims by the Treasury upon witness for deceased persons, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2798–2802——Instances of irregularity, through public servants not being struck off the schedule on the termination of their salaries by death, ib. 2922–2935. 2988 Advantage of the recommendation made by witness to the Treasury, and adopted by them with a view to remedying any inconvenience in regard to salaries not issued by reason of the death of the parties, ib. 2925. 2988——It has been arranged that when in consequence of deaths the charges are paid short of the whole amount, there should be a quarterly report and repayment to the Exchequer, ib. 2925. 2988.

Explanation as to the contest between witness and the Treasury in regard to the production of the instrument of appointment before the issue of the required salaries; pressure under which the Treasury yielded to witness's requirements, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2985–3000 and App. p. 741–756.

Amount and date of first payment from the Consolidated Fund under the head of salaries and allowances, in April 1852, as compared with the amount and date of the Exchequer issue, Anderson 3438, 3439.

Practice with regard to the Audit-office; check upon each payment or salary in any of the departments; change of practice as to such mode of payment, Romilly 4405——Reference to the origin of the charge of practice in regard to the mode of paying salaries, Romilly and Macaulay 4498, 4499.

Direction in Treasury Minute of 22 August 1854, that salaries be paid according to the new quarter days from 31 March 1855, App. p. 579——Statement in Minute of 24 November 1854, that salaries and allowances be uniformly calculated for broken periods according to the number of days in the quarter, ib. 582, 583.

See also Instrument of Appointment. Judges' Salaries. Law and Justice. Mahony, P. K. (The late).

Sardinian Loan. Payment to the Exchequer through the Paymaster-general of the interest on the Sardinian loan, Anderson 1521, 1522.

Sargent, Mr. Separate form of account kept by Mr. Sargent when paymaster of the miscellaneous votes and Civil Contingencies, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2806–2810——Witness by no means attributes the irregularities of the Pay-office exclusively to the abolition of the office of Mr. Sargent as separate Civil Service Paymaster, ib. 3077–3091——Consideration of the practice of account adopted by Mr. Sargent; check thereby to the misappropriation of the miscellaneous monies, ib. 3085–3089. 3101–3103.

Savings. See Unexpended Balances.

Secretaries of State for the Home, Foreign, and Colonial Departments. Papers delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the account of these departments are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Shannon, Lord. Charge made by mistake for Lord Shannon upon the Consolidated Fund, for a time after his death, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2925. 2988.

Shaw, Mr. P., Salary of. Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 27 December 1854, with respect to the suspended issue for the salary of Mr. Patrick Shaw, sheriff of Chancery in Scotland; reply of the Treasury, App. p. 756.

Report, 1856—continued.

Specification Paper. Practice previously to 1834, whereby money was paid into the Bank of England for the Exchequer through what was termed a specification paper, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 12–14——Improvement, as regards the great revenue departments, in dispensing with the specification paper, ib. 14. 478.

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that in order to remove all difficulties in respect of payments made into the Bank of England, that specification papers be made use of, App. p. 459, 460.

Form of specification paper, as approved in Treasury Minute of September 1834, App. p. 481.

Statement in Treasury Minute of 2 March 1855, as to the inconvenience of specification papers in reference to the regular transfers made by the revenue departments, App. p. 583.

New regulations in Treasury Minute of 25 September 1855, respecting specification papers, App. p. 587——Statement in the Minute as to the Treasury being empowered by the Act 18 & 19 Vict., c. 96, to regulate specifications and acquittances, ib.

Stamps. Return showing the gross income derivable from stamps, distinguishing the total sums received, the sum paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purpose for which paid, and the net sum paid into the Exchequer, for the years 1854–55 and 1855–56, App. p. 624, 625.

Statistical Account. The paper called the Statistical Account, and the paper called the Cardwell's Account, though very useful documents, by no means supply the place of the finance accounts, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 234. 299, 300.

Statute Law Commission. Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

Stores. Power of the Admiralty, &c. to expend in stores, &c. a sum beyond the grant of Parliament, but not without the knowledge of Parliament, Anderson 2104–2112——Power of the departments to evade the audit check by a system of diminution of stores; how this might be controlled, Hoffay 2723–2726——In the case, especially of store votes, due time is indispensable for adjustment of accounts, Vine 4074–4083.

See also Old Stores (Navy).

Superannuations and Pensions. Evidence relative to the large amount of superannuation allowances still left chargeable on the gross revenue; how far desirable to interpose Parliamentary sanction in these cases, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 111–131——Want of due information which led the House of Lords to report against the provision in the first Bill of 1854, placing certain superannuation allowances upon the supply votes, ib. 116–134.

Confirmation of foregoing statement, as to the Lords' Committee having objected to transfer certain pensions and superannuations to the annual vote through the want of particulars concerning them, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 229–231——With a proper list of charges of pensions and superannuations upon the Excise, there would be no difficulty in distributing those charges between the Consolidated Fund and the votes of Parliament, ib. 438, 439.

Want of information, or mistake, on the part of the House of Lords, which resulted in charges for superannuations and pensions being still left by Mr. Gladstone's Act of 1834 upon the gross revenue, Anderson 1014——Superannuations are granted by the Treasury, under Act of Parliament, ib. 2154——If they relate to the naval and military departments a communication is made from the Treasury to those departments, who authorise the Paymaster to pay, ib.——The pensions are fixed sums in the case of the civil departments, and the Treasury give orders direct to the Paymaster, ib.

Supplemental Estimates. Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that in case of unforeseen pressure in any department supplemental estimates be transmitted to the Treasury, App. p. 464.

Supply. See Deficiency Bills. Ways and Means.

Surplus Fees (Public Offices). Payment to the Exchequer of surplus fees of regulated public offices mainly by the Paymaster-general, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 493, 494. 609.

Account of the sums of money received into the Exchequer in the year ended 31 March 1855, on account of surplus fees of public offices, &c., made out at Exchequer as accounts of receipts (Great Britain), in which discrepancies, resulting from the altered mode of preparing the finance accounts, appear, App. p. 768. 769.

Surpluses. See Civil Contingencies. Civil Services. Miscellaneous Services. Premium on Exchequer Bills. Re-Votes. Unexpended Balances. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses).

Report, 1856—continued.

Sycee Silver. Minute of Comptroller of the Exchequer, dated 14 January 1851, as to an erroneous payment on account of Sycee silver, App. p. 686.

T.

Transfers between Departments. Very large sum passing through the cash account of the Paymaster-general, in the shape of transfers between the services, Anderson 1247–1256. 1261 et seq. 1317–1332——Practice, in the event of the sales of muskets, &c. to a foreign government, with respect to the operation of the Exchequer, ib. 1508–1512——Practice in the event of the use of old materials as part of a contract for repairs or buildings, ib. 1513–1517——Explanation of the mode of account in the event of an advance from one department to another, as from the ordnance to the navy, ib. 1762–1764.

Limit to the extent of re-payments to departments, if appropriation were strictly enforced, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 3134——System of repayment by the navy rather than of imprests to the ordnance, in the event of work done for it by the ordnance, Vine 3319–3327——Notice taken in the balance sheet detailed accounts of any balances due from one department to another on account of work done, ib. 3319——Mode of dealing with repayments from one account to another, under the simplified system of accounts proposed by witness, Anderson 3538–3540.

Directions in Treasury Minute of 22 December 1848, as to the transfers between departments, App. p. 511, 512.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in his memorandum of 1854 as to the transfers between one department and another, App. p. 556, 557.

Transfers (Exchequer). Money is not actually paid in or out of the Exchequer, the whole being done by accounts at the Bank of England, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 20——The whole duty of witness's department is done by transfers and credits, ib. 448.

The Exchequer cannot touch any money, but can merely write off or transfer to other accounts. Anderson 991–997——Since 1834 the Exchequer has ceased to receive any actual money payment, and has become merely an office of account, ib. 2147–2153.

Direction in Treasury Minute of 2 March 1855, that the transfers should be made from the accounts of the Receivers-general to that of the Exchequer at the Bank of England daily, App. p. 583.

See also Collection of Revenue. Exchequer. Issues, (Exchequer).

Transport Service. Impracticablity of ascertaining the expenditure of the transport service till all the accounts have come in, Vine 3893–3900. 3907——Facility for auditing the accounts of the transport service on its partial severance from the navy, ib. 3908–3911.

Treasurer of the Navy. Reference to the salutary amendments suggested by the Commissioners of 1780 in the office of treasurer of the navy (now merged in that of Paymaster-general), Anderson 1299.——See also Pay Office, I., 5. II., 6.

TREASURY:

1. General Powers and Duties.
2. General Practice in authorising Expenditure.
3. Treasury Warrants.
4. Responsibity of the Board.
5. Recommended Audit of Accounts.
6. Importance of Control by Parliament or the Exchequer.
7. Recommended Increase of Power in the Board.

1. General Powers and Duties:

Limit to the power of expenditure by the Treasury since the Act of 1854, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 103–106——General legal authority inherent in the Treasury in regard to the issue of minutes, and the disposal of public monies, ib. 535–543.

The Treasury spends but little itself, but it controls those by whom the public money is spent, Anderson 1021. 1043. 1173–1198. 1387——Legal authority of the Treasury to supply the surplus of one vote to make good the deficiency of another, ib. 1117–1119——Important function of the Treasury to see that means are forthcoming to meet the expenditure of the several departments, ib. 1181–1183. 1195–1198——Duty of the Treasury to exercise a general control in regard to receipts of revenue, ib. 1186–1194——Approval of the objection to the same party authorising payments who holds the money in charge, ib. 1490–1492.

Until the revenue reaches the Exchequer it is undoubtedly under the sole control of the Executive Government, Anderson 1954–1962——Further explanation as to the extent to which the Treasury is at present a department of expenditure, ib. 2154–2164——The great functions of the Treasury are not expenditure, but the control of expenditure, ib. ——Effectual check by the Treasury upon the issues under any vote and upon any excess thereof, Hoffay 2533–2558.

Authority

Report, 1856—continued.

TREASURY—continued.

1. General Powers and Duties—continued.

Authority of the Treasury to issue money without account, Romilly 4225, 4226—— Power of the Treasury to withdraw some accounts from the Audit-office, and to send them to other auditors, ib. 4225-4229——Power ultimately of the Treasury on their own responsibility to allow or disallow items in the accounts, but not to interfere with the mode of audit adopted by the office, ib. 4241-4245——The Treasury may in fact be considered the ultimate auditors of the accounts, ib. 4243, 4244—— Full power of the Treasury to decide upon any disputed points in the accounts, ib. 4398——Superior authority generally of the Treasury in the matter of the army and navy accounts, ib. 4398-4404——Nature of the Audit-office check that monies passing through the Pay-office on account of any department are duly dealt with, without interference by the Treasury, ib. 4468-4497.

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that the Treasury ascertain monthly the state of each grant made by Parliament, App. p. 464.

Statements in Lord Monteagle's Memorandum as to the proper functions of the Treasury, App. p. 537 et seq.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in 1854, as to the real position and functions of the Treasury being overlooked in Lord Monteagle's Memorandum, App. p. 555.

Memorandum by Mr. Edward Romilly, chairman of the Audit Board in 1850, in regard to Treasury issues with or without account, App. p. 561-563.

2. General Practice in authorising Expenditure:

Evidence in proof of the departure by the Treasury from the Parliamentary principle of appropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 22-26. 41 et seq.; 2735 et seq.—— Argument that the practice of the Treasury and Pay-office is illegal, and altogether opposed to the fundamental principle of the constitution, ib. 41 et seq.; 2735 et seq.—— Desire generally of the Treasury, more especially since 1830, to include in the Parliamentary estimates all expenditure capable of estimate, ib. 150——Account in illustration of the practice, since 1830, of adding to the vote of Parliament as much as is susceptible of estimate, and of diminishing the appropriated sums, ib. 229.

It is considered by the Treasury that the monies when in the hands of the Paymaster are applicable to all claims having a credit on the votes, Anderson 1285 et seq.—— Adherence by the Treasury as closely as possible to the provisions of the Exchequer Act, ib. 1635——Explanation as to the opinion of the law officers not having been sought by the Treasury, ib. 1636-1638. 1738——Adherence by the Treasury to the provisions of the Appropriation Act, ib. 1639. 1643. 1727.

Statement as to its having been for some time the determination of the Treasury to refer the whole question between them and Lord Monteagle to a Royal Commission, Anderson 1886. 2256-2262——Exercise of Treasury power in regard to directing certain Admiralty expenditure to be made without account, ib. 2088, 2089——Disposition of the Treasury to support the Audit Board in disputes with departments, Hoffay 2401-2403. 2410, 2411; Romilly 4467.

Willingness of witness to refer the questions in dispute between him and the Treasury to the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, and to abide by the result, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2778. 2820. 2821.

Overdrawal of the Treasury account in the Pay-office for a few days in April 1852, Anderson 3452-3458.

Though the Treasury have the power of amending the army and navy accounts before presentation, they have hardly ever, if at all, exercised such power, Romilly 4400-4404. 4439, 4440.

Remarks by Lord Monteagle in his Memorandum of 1854, as to the substitution of the order of the Treasury for Parliamentry law and the Appropriation Act, App. p. 536 et seq.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury relative to a great number of cases, in which he has opposed the tendency of the latter to put aside the control vested in him by Parliament, App. p. 648 et seq.

3. Treasury Warrants:

Twofold system of Treasury warrants, one to the Exchequer for issue, and one to the Paymaster-general for distribution, in the case of the fixed charges on the Consolidated Fund, Anderson 968-982. 998. 1000——Detail given in each warrant as to the several items of payment, ib. 979-981——The warrants are for the most part printed, ib. 982 ——The Treasury warrant founded on the Royal order might to a great extent be abolished, if the Exchequer were abolished, ib. 1652-1665——Object of the Treasury covering warrant to authorise the expenditure in a particular list, Romilly 4247, 4248.

TREASURY—continued.

3. Treasury Warrants—continued.

Suggestion in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts in 1831, that a Treasury warrant be given annually, and drawn up in the same form, for the total amount granted for the expenditure of each public department, App. p. 463 et seq.——Recommendation in the Report that Treasury warrants be issued to the Exchequer, whereby a credit may be given at the Bank of England to the respective offices or departments for which such issue has been granted, ib. 464.

Form of Treasury warrant, as approved in 1834, authorising the Comptroller to grant credits to defray the charges on the Consolidated Fund, App. p. 479.

4. Responsibility of the Board:

Constitution of the Treasury adverted to, with reference to the parties responsible, Anderson 1956–1962.

5. Recommended Audit of Accounts:

Evidence in favour of an independent audit of the miscellaneous and civil services, and of all Treasury accounts, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 819–835. 843. 846; Anderson 1017–1020. 1028. 2067–2081. 2084; Hoffay 2635, 2636. 2653 et seq.; Romilly 4394–4399——Recommended increased check by the Board of Audit over the Treasury simultaneously with the abolition of the Exchequer, Anderson 1408–1412. 1428–1430——The quarterly account prepared by the Treasury should be verified by the Commissioners of Audit, ib. 1408.

Means of checking misappropriation by the Treasury considered; it might be rendered imperative upon them to present to Parliament special reports by the Audit Board, Hoffay 2676–2678. 2886–2888. 2700–2707. 2714–2722——Sufficiency of the check of the Audit-office upon the Treasury as regards issues by the latter, ib. 2697–2707. 2713–2722. 2728–2733——Danger in placing Audit-office officials at the Treasury, lest they become unduly influenced by that department, Romilly 4399.

Paper delivered in by Mr. Romilly, showing that the accounts are not examined in the Audit-office, App. p. 843.

6. Importance of Control by Parliament or the Exchequer:

Evidence generally in favour of an independent Parliamentary check or control upon the power of the Treasury to deal with the public monies, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 53–58. 102 et seq. 548–558. 586–608. 2970——Disapproval of any large expenditure by the Treasury, whether in commutations or otherwise, without the sanction of Parliament or the cognizance of the Exchequer, ib. 134–153.

Recommendation in the First Report of the Commissioners of Public Accounts, in 1831, that control should be exercised over the Crown and its Ministers in the application of the public money, App. p. 461.

Memorandum by Lord Monteagle in February, reviewing the practice of the Treasury and Pay-office, and strongly insisting on strict adherence to Parliamentary or Exchequer control and the Appropriation Act, App. p. 536–553.

Sundry arguments of Lord Monteagle, in correspondence with the Treasury, as to the expediency of a due check in the Exchequer and Parliament, App. p. 648 et seq.

7. Recommended Increase of Power in the Board:

The Treasury should be the department of check; its control is far more efficient than any which the Exchequer can exercise, Anderson 1021 et seq.; 1171–1198——How far necessary, if the Exchequer be abolished, to provide any check upon undue issues and upon a dissolution of Parliament, in the event of supplies not being voted, ib. 1367–1372——Advantage if Parliament were to strengthen, and place more confidence in the controlling department of Government, ib. 1386.

Further evidence as to the check which would exist upon misappropriation and upon a dissolution of Parliament, in the event of the several supplies not being voted, and of the Exchequer being abolished, Anderson 1604 et seq.——Bar to monies issued for the army being unduly applied to the navy, or any other service, during the dissolution, ib. 1605–1625. 1715, 1716——Question as to the power or probability of the Treasury directing issues not sanctioned by Parliament before dissolution, ib. 1607–1632.

Further evidence in favour of the issues and payments being made by the Treasury and Pay-office, without the intervention of the Exchequer, Anderson 1950 et seq.——Consideration of the power of the Treasury, in regard to control and expenditure, in the event of the Exchequer being abolished, ib. 1952 et seq.

Importance of the Treasury check over expenditure, by the departments being largely increased, Anderson 4165–4187——The Treasury should have a daily return from the Pay-office, of the payments made out of the annual vote, ib. 4167–4170——Manner in which the control of the Treasury should be brought to bear, in the event of the Pay-office returns showing an undue rate of issue to any department, ib. 4170–4178. 4187——At

Report, 1856—continued.

TREASURY—continued.

7. Recommended Increase of Power in the Board—continued.

——At present the Treasury control upon the public expenditure is weak, Anderson 4184. 1487——It should be the object of the Legislature to accumulate control in the Treasury, ib. 4186.

See also Accounts. Acquittance (Exchequer). Appropriation. Audit, 3. 6. Balances. Civil Contingencies. Civil Services. Commissariat. Consolidated Fund. Consolidated Fund Bills. Consolidated Fund Warrant. Control. Co-operation. Creation of Debt. Deficiency Bills. Establishments of Departments. Estimates. Exchequer. Exchequer Bills. Finance Accounts. Instrument of Appointment. Miscellaneous Services. Navy, 5, 6. Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Premiums on Exchequer Bills. Redemption of Pensions. Royal Orders. Salaries and Allowances. Unappropriated Votes. Unexpended Balances. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses). Woods and Forests, Office of. Works, Office of.

Treasury Warrants. See Treasury, 3.

Trevelyan, Sir C. E., K.C.B. The replies by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson to the statement put forward by witness, in 1854, have in nowise shaken his views upon the subject of appropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 847, 848——Sir Charles Trevelyan's paper of 1848 was not, for some reason, communicated to the Select Committee of that year, nor was it seen by witness till very recently, ib. 851——Totally erroneous statement in the paper of 1848, that the question as to the deduction of the income tax from the Crown was the only instance in which witness, as Comptroller-general, had exercised a practical check over the Treasury, ib. 859 et seq.——Further remarks on the circumstance of Sir C. Trevelyan's Memorandum not having appeared before the Committee of 1848, ib. 2778. 2782.

Paper prepared by Sir C. Trevelyan in 1848, for the Select Committee on the Miscellaneous Estimates, on the office of Paymaster of Civil Services, and the Exchequer, App. p. 507–510.

Memorandum by Sir Charles Trevelyan and Mr. Anderson, dated 1 February 1853, on the mode of providing for the expenses of the collection of the revenue, App. p. 565–570.

Memorandum on the Commissariat Chest Fund, from Sir C. Trevelyan's evidence before the Select Committee on Army and Ordnance Expenditure in 1850, App. p. 607, 608.

Memorandum by Sir C. Trevelyan, on the Commissariat Chest Account, dated 5 February 1851, with remarks upon it, dated 14 June 1854, App. p. 609–611.

Turkish Embassy. Explanation as to the difficulty in procuring vouchers, &c., which has postponed for several years the final audit of the "Turkish Embassy" account, Macaulay 4561.

Turkish Government (Advance from.) Reference to a payment in advance of 150,000*l.* by the Turkish Government to the credit of the navy, on account of purchases to be made through the Admiralty, Anderson 1247. 1257–1259——Absence of Parliamentary cognizance in regard to the transaction between the Admiralty and the Turkish Government, ib. 1274–1276. 1376–1384.

Further statement relative to the payment in advance by the Turkish Government, and to the ad interim control exercised over its expenditure, without cognizance of the Exchequer or of Parliament, Anderson 1541–1550. 1710–1716. 1852–1861——Liability of the advanced sum of 150,000*l.* to be drawn temporarily from the Paymaster's drawing account for any service payable from such account, ib. 1545–1548. 1861——The control or disposal of the money rested with the Admiralty rather than the Treasury, ib. 1548, 1549. 1852–1861.

Opinion that, in the case of the advance by the Turkish Government, the House of Commons would, in equity, be responsible for it, in the event of mal-appropriation, Anderson 1713, 1714. 1988–1990——This transaction was quite an exceptional case, consequent on the war, ib. 1716. 1991, 1992.

Due cognizance taken, in the accounts of the Pay-office and the Admiralty, of the receipts from the Turkish Government and of the repayment made through the navy, Vine 3668. 3709. 3711. 3786, 3787——The transaction in question would appear before Parliament, in the detailed accounts of the navy, ib. 3668. 3673, 3674. 3709, 3710——The Audit Board would not be at all likely to notice this advance from the Turkish Government, in their annual report to Parliament; approval of its not being their duty so to do, ib. 3669–3682. 3698–3711——Instances of supplies by the navy to foreign governments; similar system of account as in the case of the advance by the Turkish Government, ib. 3674–3678. 3698–3710.

Report, 1856—continued.

U.

Unappropriated Votes. Very large sum of unappropriated or extraordinary money placed by Parliament in the hands of Government at the commencement of the late war, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2774——Doubt whether, notwithstanding these votes, the Appropriation Act was strictly complied with during the war, ib. 2774, 2775——Wise and judicious measure of Mr. Gladstone in obtaining a vote of unappropriated sums to meet contingencies during the war, thus resorting to the old principle of the army extraordinary vote, ib. 2774. 2776. 2902. 2904.

Mode in which imprest accounts or advances from the Commissariat Chest might be dealt with; large unappropriated sums should be voted in the event of war or peculiar contingencies, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2902–2906——Mode in which the expenditure of the extraordinary votes, amounting to 6,000,000 l., and applicable generally to the purposes of the war, will be accounted for to Parliament, ib. 2971–2974. 2980–2984——Large discretion as to items of expenditure under which these votes were granted, ib. 2972–2979——The application of so large a sum to the war generally was very necessary and judicious, ib. 2972. 2976.

The vote of credit for three millions for 1855–56 was appropriated to any excess of expenditure by the army, navy, or ordnance during the war, Vine 3988–3997——The vote was granted to the Treasury, who would be responsible for its application to the departments, ib. 3988, 3989. 4800–4803. 4036–4038——The Audit Board would accept the votes of Parliament, so far as they went, and the Treasury authority upon the vote of credit, so far as it had been issued for each department, ib. 3998 et seq.——Due notice would be taken in the audit report of any excess of the vote or application to the vote of credit, ib. 3998. 4023–4025——The vote has been entirely applied to the Commissariat Chest abroad, which is not susceptible of estimate, and has been most useful, ib. 4030–4035. 4045–4053.

Explanation as to the application of the vote of credit for 3,000,000 l. in the past year; it chiefly went to the Commissariat Chest Account, Anderson 4188–4199——A separate account of the application of this vote will in due time be prepared by the Audit Board, ib. 4199.

Remarks by Mr. Anderson in 1854 as to extraordinary expenditure occasioned by war or insurrection being provided for by special votes of credit, App. p. 558.

Unclaimed Dividends. Payments of the unclaimed dividends into the Exchequer by the Bank of England, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 507——Expediency of applying the same principle generally in regard to repayments to the Exchequer as that which now exists in the case of the unclaimed dividends, ib. 2876–2881.

Unexpended Balances. As a general rule, admitting of exceptions, the Treasury should hand over to the Exchequer all profits if unappropriated, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 668–675——Absence of check by witness in regard to the disposal of savings, such matter resting with the Treasury, ib. 733–739——Reference to suggestions made by witness to the Treasury, and well received by them in regard to accumulated balances being declared as savings, ib. 737, 739. 740. 763. 802——Defect in their being no regulated examination into unexpended balances in the case of miscellaneous or civil services, ib. 740. 763, 764. 802. 819–834.

Several instances of sums transferred from the Exchequer and remaining for a considerable time in the hands of the Paymaster before expenditure or retransfer to the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 740–743. 776, 777——Expediency of Parliament being made equally cognisant of outstanding balances of the civil service votes as of the great service votes, ib. 763, 764——There should be a strict regulation with a view to repayment to the Exchequer, ib. 763. 802——Explanation of the mode in which a surplus standing to the Exchequer credit account is dealt with, ib. 933–940.

Frequent instances of votes for miscellaneous or civil services being obtained long before the money is paid away, Anderson 1398–1401——Recommendation that all the departments, as well as the army and navy, should return into the Exchequer all sums unexpended at the close of the financial year, ib. 1439–1441——Frequent instances of votes not being expended within the financial year, ib. 1439. 1451——Belief that there are some unexpended miscellaneous votes since 1841, ib. 1452.

Explanation relative to particular outstanding balances in the Pay-office, Anderson 1594–1633——All unexpended balances should annually be brought in detail before Parliament, ib. 2067. 2083, 2084——In the event of the vote, as for the navy, exceeding the expenditure the balance is surrendered to the Exchequer, and appears in the finance accounts, Hoffay 2621–2628.

Great importance of a periodical surrender to the Exchequer of unexpended balances, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2850, 2851. 2869–2881——Circumstance of a provision to the foregoing effect having been urged in the Exchequer Report of 1831, ib. 2850–2852.

Practice

Report, 1856—continued.

Unexpended Balances—continued.

Practice in closing the annual accounts of the naval or military expenditure to return any surplus to the Exchequer by deducting a similar amount from the funds of that service in the Exchequer for the following year, Anderson 3397 et seq.——The surplus is at once available as ways and means, ib. 3397. 3423-3426——In the civil service the balances have hitherto been carried on for many years as running accounts, ib. 3398. 3412——Where there is any undue surplus from civil service votes the Treasury cancel the same, and direct the Exchequer to set it aside, ib. 3398. 3412.

The Exchequer accounts cannot be considered to take cognisance of the surplus sums returned from army or navy services, Anderson 3399-3404. 3413-3419. 3427——Check upon the Treasury drawing out of the Exchequer the balance from a former year, as well as the entire sum voted for the ensuing year, ib. 3405-3411——The unexpended balance acts pro tanto as a reduction of the grant for the ensuing year, but is not considered in the framing of the Parliamentary estimates, ib. 3420, 3421——The surplus cannot be ascertained when the estimate is formed, ib. 3430.

Direction in Treasury Minute of 22 August 1854, that surpluses be rendered to Parliament, App. p. 579.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury in 1851 with respect to unissued balances of Consolidated Fund, App. p. 690–692.

Account of balances of votes unissued from the Exchequer on 31 March 1856, App. p. 807–809.

Return of the votes under the head of Miscellaneous Estimates, specifying each, since 1841–42, on which there is a surplus of money voted, and setting forth the different years in which the accumulation of unexpended but appropriated money has arisen, App. p. 810–813.

See also Appropriation, II. 2. Civil Contingencies. New Zealand. Public Walks. Re-Votes. Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses).

V.

Vine, Charles. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Has been inspector of naval and military accounts under the Commissioners of Audit since March 1854; 3301, 3302——Was previously for twenty-one years book-keeper in the Audit-office, 3303, 3304——Strict examination by the officer who checks the naval and military accounts, in order to see that the vouchers are in every respect sufficient to warrant their being carried to the account as final payments, on account of the vote, 3305——Due cognizance taken of each original entry until it is finally recorded in the annual account laid before Parliament, ib.

It is not part of the duty of the audit officer to question the propriety of the payments of the departments, so long as they are entered under proper heads, 3306–3327——Any payments which did not appear to be properly chargeable against the vote, would be represented to the Audit Board, 3309. 3316—— With regard to Ordnance payments for fireworks, such as payments for wages, or colouring materials, they would not be checked with reference to the particular purpose for which made, 3310–3317——The Audit Board would have no action unless improper payments are represented by their officer, 3318.

System of repayment by the navy rather than of imprests to the ordnance in the event of work done for it by the ordnance, 3319–3327——Notice taken in the balance sheet detailed account of any balances due from one department to another on account of work done, 3319——Equally effective audit of the commissariat accounts at the War-office as when the audit took place at the Audit-office, 3328–3330. 3334–3336——Principle followed in transferring the audit of the commissariat accounts to the War-office, 3330. 3360——Reference to the practice whereby, previously to Sir J. Graham's Bill, the naval accounts were audited entirely by their own department, 3331–3333.

Explanation of the course of examination by the Audit-office with regard to the commissariat Chest Account, 3337–3353. 3359–3367——The Commissariat Chest is merely a banking account, consisting of receipts and payments on account of other services, 3337. 3342——The detailed examination of the cheques drawn for the payment of commissariat service takes place at the War-office instead of at the Audit Board, the latter merely seeing that there is a proper authority for the several payments, 3352–3367.

[Second Examination.]—In the ordinary course of business, an ordnance transaction occurring in July 1856, would not come before Parliament till June 1858; 3661–3665 ——The army, ordnance, and commissariat accounts occupy altogether thirteen months in their collection and preparation before they come to the Audit Board, 3662, 3663. 3931. 3947——The navy accounts are collected and prepared in eight months, 3666, 3667. 3947.

Report, 1856—continued.

Vine, Charles. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Due cognizance taken, in the accounts of the Pay-office and the Admiralty, of the receipts from the Turkish Government, and of the repayment made through the navy, 3668. 3709. 3711. 3786, 3787——The transaction in question would appear before Parliament in the navy detailed account, 3668. 3673, 3674. 3709, 3710——The Audit Board would not be at all likely to notice the advance from the Turkish Government in their annual report to Parliament; approval of its not being considered their duty to do so, 3669-3682. 3698-3711.

Instances of supplies by the navy to foreign governments; similar system of account as in the case of the advance by the Turkish Government, 3674-3678. 3698-3710—— Argument that it is not the duty of the Audit Board to interfere with the expenditure of the departments, other than so long as the services are provided for in the estimates, and are accounted for under proper heads, 3679-3690——Respect in which the Audit Board would exercise control in the matter of the wages or materials for the manufacture of fireworks by the ordnance, 3683-3690.

Efficient check through the Audit Board and the Treasury upon irregularity in the application of money in any department, 3691-3694——Practice of the Audit Board to report irregularities to the Treasury unless they are at once corrected by the department, 3691. 3695-3697. 3772-3777——The Treasury have always supported the Audit in their views of their Parliamentary duty and responsibility, 3693.

Further explanation of the detailed system adopted by the Audit-office in their examination of the army accounts, 3712 et seq.——Monthly report made to the Audit Board by their inspector at the War-office, 3714. 3734——Inconvenience and delay if the army accounts were audited at the Audit-office, 3715-3718——Check upon incorrect entries being made in the books, and ticked off as correct by the officers of the department, 3719-3728. 3764-3768.

The objections raised by the audit officers are generally against the entry of charges under wrong heads, and are always made in writing, 3729-3733——Nature of the record or check which shows that the accounts of the departments have been audited up to a given point and date, and by particular officers, 3734-3755——Dependence necessarily on the good faith of the officer deputed by the Board to audit the departmental accounts, 3756-3763.

The detailed audit of the departments is conducted by officers of the establishment, and the appropriation audit by the officers of audit, 3769-3771——Until the final accounts are made out, the auditors cannot say or report whether any particular vote for the army is exceeded, 3778-3785——Particulars as to the accounts for the commissariat and other services having been transferred by recent arrangement from the detailed audit at the Audit-office to that at the War-office, 3788-3822——Doubt as to there having been any inconvenience through the previous audit at the Audit-office, 3805-3808.

Advantage in some respects if there were a more searching appropriation audit at the War-office; on the whole however a change is not desirable, 3823-3825. 3857, 3858—— With regard to the variation in the form of the abstract books of the army accounts, the same has rendered the audit more difficult, though not less accurate, 3826-3848——Any imperfection in the departmental form of accounts does not come within the interference of the Audit Board, 3849, 3850——Inexpediency of any variation in the form of navy accounts, the system being at present quite perfect, 3852-3856.

Concurrence in objections to separate books and accounts for the army at the Horse Guards, and the ordnance at Pall Mall; importance of an immediate fusion of accounts under one roof, 3860-3888——Considerable extent to which the army and navy accounts for 1855-56 have been audited, though the finally audited account cannot be ascertained till all the accounts from foreign stations, &c. are rendered, 3889-3902——Impracticability of ascertaining the expenditure of the transport service till all the accounts have come in, 3893-3900. 3907.

Reasons why the army accounts cannot be laid before Parliament till thirteen months after the close of the year, though the navy accounts are presented after a lapse of eight months, 3903, 3904. 3947-3982——Inexpediency of making up the army accounts for Parliament at the end of the financial year, or within the same period as the navy account, inasmuch as the accuracy and value of the account would be destroyed, 3904-3906. 3912-3919. 3941-3943. 4067-4081——Facility for auditing the accounts of the transport service on its partial severance from the navy, 3908-3911.

Efficient check, through means of the detailed accounts laid before Parliament, upon the due appropriation of any large sums voted for army clothing, stores, &c., 3920-3930 ——The detailed account, accompanied by a balance sheet, is presented about a month later than the abstract account, 3930——The army account for the year 1854-55 has not yet (10 July) been sent to the Audit-office, but will be ready in a few days; this is an exceptional delay, 3931-3936. 3944——In ordinary years the army accounts are always laid before Parliament, some time before the 1st of June, or about thirteen months and a half after the termination of the service, 3936-3940.

Until

Report, 1856—continued.

Vine, Charles. (Analysis of his Evidence)—continued.

Until 1856–57 separate accounts will be rendered of the army, ordnance, and commissariat, 3944, 3945——In the year 1856–57 a consolidation of the books of the army and ordnance is peculiarly desirable, as the consolidation of the departments then commences, 3946——The army accounts not only comprise very few final payments, but are considerably more numerous than the navy accounts, 3949. 3970–3980——The Paymasters' accounts are transmitted quarterly to the War-office, 3950.

The vote of 3,813,333 l. for the Militia in 1855–56 has been audited so far as it is recorded in the books of the army, 3983, 3984——Until the whole of the accounts come in the final audit cannot take place, nor can the amount unexpended be ascertained, 3985–3987——The vote of credit for three millions was applicable to any excess of expenditure by the army, navy, or ordnance during the war, 3988–3997——The vote of credit was granted to the Treasury, who would be responsible for its application to the departments, 3988, 3989. 4000–4003. 4026–4038.

The Audit Board would accept the votes of Parliament, so far as they went, as to the department, and the Treasury authority, upon the vote of credit, so far as it had been used for each department, 3998 et seq.——Due notice would be taken in the audit report of any excess of the vote, or application to the vote of credit, 3998. 4023–4025——Where there has been an excess of navy expenditure during the war it has been fed by an additional vote, and not by the vote of credit, 4012. 4026–4028.

Any additional expenditure is incurred on the responsibility of the department, 4021, 4022. 4036–4038——Question as to the propriety of a supplemental vote for the army as well as for the navy, instead of the former being fed by the vote of credit, 4026. 4039–4056——The vote of credit has been entirely applied to the commissariat chests abroad, which is not susceptible of estimate, and has been most useful, 4030–4035. 4045–4053.

Further evidence explanatory of the removal of the detailed audit of certain accounts from the Audit-office to the War-office, 4057–4066——Illustration, as shown by the ordnance service, of the incorrectness of annual accounts, unless due time be allowed for collection and preparation, 4067–4074——In the case especially of store votes, due time is indispensable for adjustment of accounts, 4074–4083.

Necessity of the Paymaster resorting to Exchequer credits for an ensuing year, in order to meet excess of expenditure, as for the navy, during the current or past year, 4082–4106——On account of advances and payments abroad the Pay-office not only cannot show the real state of the expenditure between the various votes of the same department but cannot show the real expenditure of the several departments in the aggregate, 4085–4106——With regard to the army services the Appropriation Act states, in the first place, that there shall be so much granted, and then subdivides the amount under the different votes, 4107.

Violation of the Law. See Appropriation. Pay Office. Treasury.

Votes of Credit. See Unappropriated Votes.

Votes (of Parliament.) As a general rule, the sooner the Estimates are voted the better, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 381. 386——Inexpediency of requiring the annual financial statement to be made before a Ways and Means Act has been passed, or any votes have been taken in Committee of Supply, ib. 382–386——Reference to the variation of words as regards the term or period in which the votes for the army, navy, and ordnance are taken; object thereof, ib. 707, 708. 768–775.

See also Appropriation. Exchequer. Parliamentary Control. Pay Office. Treasury.

Vouchers. See Audit.

W.

War, The. See Army, I. 1, II. 1, III. 4. Commissariat Chest Account. Unappropriated Votes.

War Department. See Army.

Ways and Means. Ways and means cannot legally be acted upon before the time at which they are placed at the issue or disposal of the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 861 et seq.; 2766. 2772. 2860. 2868. 2890.

Issue of money for the supply services from the Consolidated Fund, through the medium of Ways and Means Acts, Anderson 942–945. 958. 964, 965——In the Appropriation Act the votes of supply are set out in detail, and the ways and means made applicable to the votes, ib. 943–946——The supply charges, as regulated by the Ways and Means Acts, vary from year to year, ib. 964, 965. 967——Special duty of the Treasury to move all votes of ways and means, ib. 1195–1198.

Report, 1856—continued.

Ways and Means—continued.

Exhaustion, during Lord Derby's Government, of ways and means for the great services, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2952–2955——Control exercised by witness, in not making an issue, as requested by Government, for other services for which there were no ways and means, ib. 2952–2956.

Return of advances, in the years 1854–56, for services for which no ways and means have been provided, stating date of such advance, purpose, from what funds advanced, and when repaid, App. p. 802.

See also Appropriation. Consolidated Fund. Deficiency Bills. Exchequer. Pay Office. Treasury. Ways and Means Bills.

Ways and Means Bills. Improvement if, in all cases, the proceeds of Ways and Means Bills, &c. were, in the first instance, paid into the Exchequer, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2270–2274——Limit upon the issue, by the Treasury, of Ways and Means Bills, or ordinary supply bills, ib. 3213, 3214. 3246, 3247. 3269——Ways and Means Bills are issued direct to the Bank from the Exchequer, Anderson 4117–4119.

Weights and Measures Department. See Exchequer, 13.

Wellington, Duke of (Funeral Expenses):

1. Statement and Complaint hereon by the Comptroller-general.
2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury.
3. Nature of the Audit of the Expenditure.

1. Statement and Complaint hereon by the Comptroller-general:

Particulars relative to the vote of 80,000 l. for the funeral of the Duke of Wellington; complaint as regards an unappropriated balance of 24,886 l. remaining in the hands of the Paymaster since April 1853, and applied to other purposes, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 744–750. 778–806——Refusal of witness to issue the amount of this vote till the period had arrived for which it was appropriated by Parliament, ib. 744——There is nothing illegal in the detention of the surplus, if required for outstanding expenses of the funeral, ib. 777. 780.

Illegality, if any portion of the amount has been applied otherwise than for the purpose of the funeral, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 779, 780. 803. 806——Surprise that the Treasury have not declared a saving, ib. 792——Inexpediency of any of the bills being allowed to outstand since April 1853, ib. 793–796——Principle of appropriation through the control of witness, in the case of the Duke of Wellington's funeral, further adverted to, ib. 892–896.

Mode of dealing with the issues further adverted to, as clearly involving a misappropriation, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 2790–2792. 2822–2830——If the unexpended balance had been returned to the Exchequer, it would have remained unissued until on due authority, and would have lessened the amount which might have been wanted for deficiency bills, ib. 2869–2875.

Correspondence between the Comptroller-general and the Treasury, in March 1853; reasons adduced by the Comptroller for declining to issue, in accordance with a Royal order and Treasury warrant, dated 21 February, 10,000 l., as part of the charge of 80,000 l. voted for the year 1853–54, App. p. 704–706.

2. Explanation on the part of the Treasury:

Evidence in explanation of the issue from the Exchequer; admission that the credit was issued on wrong information and at an earlier period than was required, Anderson 1580–1590——The balance unexpended on the Paymaster's books was applicable to any payments on account of services voted by Parliament, ib. 1580. 1586–1590——Exceptional circumstances which have led to the claims having been unsettled for so long a period, ib. 1583. 1590——The money was issued by the Treasury to the Paymaster, without the application of the latter, ib. 1583, 1584——Not a sixpence has been applied in a final sense to other services, though temporally it was so applied, ib. 2046–2049.

Further evidence relative to the issue of 80,000 l., and the course adopted with reference to the unexpended balance of 24,000 l., Anderson 3369–3390——The balance still remains to the credit of the service, though the money has been put into the general balances, and employed for other purposes, ib. 3375–3380. 3389. 3390.

3. Nature of the Audit of the Expenditure:

The Paymaster's accounts, as in this case, are sent monthly to the Audit-office, Anderson 3381–3384——The Audit-office would not take any cognizance of the appropriation of the vote, ib. 3385–3388. 3412.

Non-inquiry by the Audit department into the issues and expenditure on account of the funeral of the Duke of Wellington, with reference to the vote for that service, Romilly 4252–4258.

Report, 1856—continued.

Woods and Forests, Office of:

1. Mode of Payment to the Exchequer; Amount paid.
2. General Conduct of the Department; Nature of the Check upon Expenditure.
3. Expediency, if practicable, of Estimates of Expenditure.
4. Audit of Accounts; considerable Arrear hereon.

1. Mode of Payment to the Exchequer; Amount paid:

Direct payment to the Exchequer of the land revenues of the Crown by the Office of Woods, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 11. 503——Statement showing that the Woods and Forests form an exception to the practice of payment of all revenues into the Exchequer; considerable sums being paid away without the cognizance of witness, ib. 389-397——The Woods and Forests pay directly, as they have an independent account at the Bank, Anderson 1537, 1538——All the charges for collection and management, are taken out of the gross revenue, and the net revenue only is paid into the Exchequer, ib. 1869, 1870.

Return showing the gross income of the Crown lands, distinguishing the total sums received, the sum paid in its progress to the Exchequer, the purpose for which paid, and the authority for such payment, and the net sum paid into the Exchequer, for the years ending 1854-55, and 1855-56, App. p. 628, 629.

2. General Conduct of the Department; Nature of the Check upon Expenditure:

Belief that the expenditure incidental to the management of the property takes place without Parliamentary vote or sanction, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 387. 429-434——Check of the Treasury over the expenditure; general adequacy thereof, ib. 394. 402, 403——Payment of 106,000 l. by the department in 1855, independently of the cost of collection, ib. 391——In the same year 272,571 l. 16 s. 8 d. was paid into the Exchequer, ib. 395.

Objection to the items of expenditure being lumped together in large sums; this, however, has been amended lately, Right. Hon Lord Monteagle 405, 406——Advantage of the sale of small Crown properties, ib. 407. 436——Apparently large expense of management, the same amounting to 94,000 l., or about one-fourth of the revenue, ib. 409. 414——Absence of check on account of the late period at which the Report of the Commissioners is issued, ib. 429-434.

Constitution and application of the capital account of the Woods and Forests, Anderson 1539, 1540——There is no vote for the charges of collection and management, ib. 1869, 1870——Control of the Treasury over the capital fund, ib. 1875.

3. Expediency, if practicable, of Estimates of Expenditure:

Importance of a Parliamentary vote in the case of the Woods and Forests, if it be possible to render the expense of management susceptible of estimate, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 388. 435——Practical difficulty in carrying out any effectual system of estimate; uncertainty and peculiarity of the items of expenditure by the department adverted to hereon, ib. 388. 397-404. 407-428——How far any difference, as regard the formation of estimates, between the Crown estates and private estates, ib. 409 418. 426. 428——By care in taking the averages of past years an accurate or approximate estimate might be given, ib. 412. 424-428.

Reference to the estimates of the Woods and Forests to the effect that they should include the gross revenue and the gross expenditure, Anderson 1869-1874.

4. Audit of Accounts; considerable Arrear hereon:

Since the Act Geo. 4, c. 50, the accounts of the Woods and Forests, and Public Works have been audited in detail, and since the Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, have been subject to the appropriation audit, Romilly & Macaulay 4283-4287——Period at which the annual accounts of the Woods and Forests are laid before Parliament, Romilly 4288-4290——Circumstance of there having been no detailed audit of these accounts since 1848 in consequence of difficulty in procuring the vouchers and documents, ib. 4291-4293——Steps taken by the Treasury with a view to the necessary documents being furnished, ib. 4295-4302.

Witness inspects the accounts of the departments of Woods and Forests, and of Works and Public Buildings, on behalf of the Board of Audit, Bathurst 4304——There has been much difficulty in procuring the necessary information on which to base an audit of these accounts, ib. 4305——The last year in which the Woods and Forests account was finally audited was the year ending 31 March 1848, ib. 4317-4326. 4343——The accounts for each year have been subjected to examination in detail though not to a final audit, ib. 4318. 4320. 4347. 4353-4358——There has been no difficulty with respect to the audit of the charges upon the land revenue, ib. 4323, 4324. 4330, 4331.

The want of vouchers refers more especially to the period between 1848 and 1851, Bathurst 4325. 4328, 4329. 4339. 4363-4365——The authority for payments is the Treasury warrant or letter sanctioning certain expenditure; this authority is not questioned tioned by the Audit Board, but its production is deemed necessary, Bathurst 4327. 4337–4342——The vouchers previously to 1851 are likely for the most part to be produced, ib. 4344–4346——The delay in not finally auditing the accounts for late years is a consequence of the earlier accounts not being audited, and of the balances not being brought forward, ib. 4347–4349. 4359. 4363–4365.

Report, 1856—continued.

Woods and Forests, Office of—continued.

4. Audit of Accounts; considerable Arrear hereon—continued.

As regards the Woods and Forests, and Works, the accounts and documents are now supplied to the Audit Board with comparative regularity, Romilly 4372, 4373——The Audit Board are auditors of the accounts as well as reporters upon them, ib. 4375, 4376.

Workhouses, Ireland. Letter from the Comptroller-general to the Treasury, dated 28 August 1848, respecting irregular issue for loans for workhouses, Ireland, and reply thereto, App. p. 684.

Works, Office of. Indirect payments to the Exchequer by the Office of Works, Right Hon. Lord Monteagle 11——Objection at first by witness to receive the payments of the Office of Works through the Paymaster-general; how this objection was removed, ib. 11. 503, 504——Advantages of direct payment as compared with payment through the Pay-office, ib. 3131.

Explanation as to the Board paying their receipts to the Paymaster-general instead of direct to the Exchequer, Anderson 1531–1536——The Board used to pay to the Exchequer when they had an account at the Bank, but now the Paymaster is their banker, ib. 1531. 1535, 1536——The Treasury do not manage the expenditure connected with public works and buildings in England or Ireland, the Board of Works in each country having the management in the matter, ib. 2154. 2160.

Delay and difficulty in regard to the audit by the Audit Board, Romilly 4291–4293; Bathurst 4305——The information required in the case of the Board of Works consists of the want of authorities for expenditure, and of the vouchers or bills of particulars and receipts, Bathurst 4306–4316. 4327–4332. 4359–4362——The Treasury consider that an audit inspection was unnecessary in the case of certain works carried out by and already examined in the department of Works since 1851, ib. 4309–4316. 4336. 4351. 4352——Since 1851 the Board of Works has been a separate department, and it is for this department only, and not for the Office of Woods and Forests that certain bills of particulars are wanted, ib. 4327–4329. 4361, 4362——The accounts are now being supplied to the Audit Board with tolerable regularity, Romilly 4372, 4373.

Y.

Yates, Nicholas (Redemption of Pension). See Redemption of Pensions, 3.

INDEX

TO REPORT

FROM THE

SELECT COMMITTEE

ON

PUBLIC MONIES.

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed,
21 July 1856.

[Price 1 s. 2 d.]

375—I.

Under 20 d